Editor Buchholz Makes Clare County Cleaver Ad Get Results

"Advertising in the Clare County Cleaver gets results, even if the editor has to go out and produce them, says Emil Buchholz, editor of the cleaver and former Tawas City boy.

Spikehorn Meyer of Clare advertised in the Cleaver for someone to move a mother bear and two cubs from a den which they had occupied all winter, offering a $25.00 War Bond for the job. No one answered the ad and when Emil called at the establishment for payment, Spikehorn depreciated the Cleaver as an advertising medium. After some deep deliberation, Emil decided that he couldn't afford to have his paper let down that way, so he applied for the job himself. What followed successfully proved that the Cleaver is good advertising medium, and that Emil knows his stuff when it comes to bear snatching.

This is his own story of how he accomplished the feat:

"After racking our brain, which is limited, we finally decided that the best way to do the job would be to rout the mother from her den, and as soon as her rear end left the den, grab the cubs and run like hell, and that is the way the job was done."

"Old bruin hardly had time to realize what was going on before we were running off with the cubs in nothing flat. Believe us, when we say that the fastest man could not have won that race against us, and there comes a time in every man's life when he appreciates the way he was created, and to us we were glad we were created with long legs and knew something about base running and how to slide.

"At one time we felt that we could feel the breath of the mother at the seat of our pants, but it was only imagination, because even a bear could not have beat us in that heat.

"Anyhow, the job was done and we collected the $25.00 with no damage to our physique. But Spike played the role of a good sport and did no grumbling when he was forced to pay the shot.

"The next day we called at the den and found mother bear and cubs as peaceful as little lambs, and it was interesting to note that she was teaching her babies to nurse by holding them to her breast just like a human being."

Growers, Retailers, Consumers Unite for Better Distribution

The month of May has been designated by proclamation of Gov. Harry F. Kelly, as "More Michigan Food Month."

The purpose of the campaign is to focus public attention on the battle of production to be fought by growers and producers this year, and to emphasize the importance of retailer and consumer co-operation in utilizing this production to the greatest possible extent.

(This campaign, sponsored by the Michigan Food Council and the Michigan Press Association, follows a series of conferences over the state at which retailers, both chain and independent; wholesalers, growers and processors met to plan increased food-industry efficiency this year and to set up the framework of cooperation in post war problems.

These conferences were held the latter part of April in Grand Rapids, Bay City, Flint and Lansing.

"Public realization of the importance of Michigan's role as a wartime food producer, and public cooperation in enabling the food industry to enact this role efficiently is of utmost importance in this year of crisis," the Food Council announces.

More Michigan Food Month, as designated by Food Council, Press Association and State Department of Agriculture leaders, has three major purposes:

QUEENS DIE PROUDLY

By W. L. White W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurtz, pilot of a Flying Fortress, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Eight of his men were killed fleeing for shelter and Old 99, with many other Fortresses, was demolished before it could get off the ground. After escaping to Australia, what is left of the squadron flies to Java where they go out on many missions over the Philippines. Six Fortresses go on a mission over Macassar Strait where there is a huge concentration of Jap ships. They make their bomb runs and on the return trip Major Robinson's plane goes into a dive and crashes into the sea. U. S. planes circle over the dead Queen.

CHAPTER XIII

"I now watched this last four falling through what was practically a striped fog made by Jap pom-poms coming up at us. We could see the Japs crowding the rails, trying to jump overboard as the bombs gathered speed. The first bomb plunked into the water alongside, but the other three went smack! smack! smack! right down what had been her promenade deck, and it looked like she was coughing up into the sky a kind of confetti made up of planking splinters and Jap infantry. My right wing man, who was releasing his bombs synchronized with me, scored four hits across the back of this ship.

"You ought to hear Beardshear, our tail gunner, tell about it. Not having any Zeros to keep him busy, he was enjoying the scenery and playing 'Yankee Doodle' on the deck planking with his .50-calibers. He says we passed over so close that he looked down the funnels, and he called to us over the interphones that he could see what they were going to have for chow—rice and fish heads. Then we made our turn, and went on back to Batavia, which was crowded with refugees from Singapore.

"About this time," said Frank Kurtz, "I got word from the Colonel that at last some American P-40 fighters were on their way up from Australia, equipped with belly tanks so they could take it in hops, landing for fuel at Kupang airdrome on Timor Island. It was part of my liaison job to get them settled with the Dutch fighters at their airdrome at Gnorro. It was another beautifully hidden field. The Dutch had to lead them to it with an escort plane.

"When they landed I found there were nine, led by my old friend Major Bud Sprague, whom I hadn't seen since the Philippines. I asked him where Buzz Wagner was, and he said Buzz just hadn't been lucky. They'd told them in Australia that one of them had to stay behind and give the newly arriving fighter pilots a little extra training, while the other would lead the squadron in Java. Buzz and Bud had tossed an Australian shilling to decide it, and Buzz had lost; he was stuck with that training job.

"The Dutch fighter pilots, who are just as prancy as ours, were all excited and doing their stuff. They'd led Bud in formation, and now they were putting on a show for him. They'd dive into the field in an attack string, and just before they hit, they turned almost straight up in the air and then, a few thousand feet up, that string opened out in all directions like the petals of a rose.

"Bud had to admit the Dutch were good. But he said he had to take one of his planes up for a test that afternoon and show 'em how to fly.

"Bud hit it off with them right away. He praised the camouflage on their field. When he came back next day, I heard him take his own youngsters in hand. Of course it was the old hokey, but he gave them one serious warning.

"This is the best-camouflaged field we'll ever operate on," he told them, "so remember—I don't want anyone to cross this field with a Zero on his tail. Bail out, beach it, but don't come back here with company." As a result, the Japanese didn't find Gnorro Field until two days before the end.

"Not long after they came, I rang Bud up with a queer assignment for the boys. We were doing everything possible to stop the Japs from swarming over onto Sumatra from Malaya. The Forts were out pasting their landing barges morning and night. We were using them practically as heavy pursuit—skimming down under the weather to chase landing barges going up the rivers.

"So we asked Bud to deliver a little strafing, and off they went, carrying belly tanks to get them there and stopping off at Andir. They went to work with 30-pound fragmentation bombs and their machine guns, and when they got back Bud reported the P-40's had had Japs diving off those barges in full field equipment. He sank quite a few and drowned hundreds of Japs, and every P-40 got back to Java.

"But they were closing in on us from still another direction. We could no longer operate from those advance fields at Kendari and Samarinda across the Java Sea. The Japs had moved into Borneo and the Celebes. So we waited for what we knew was coming. They must be stacking Jap bombers onto what had been our own fields there—within easy range of Java.

"We didn't have to wait long. One morning I was at the KNILM Airfield at Surabaya, checking on a transport plane which was supposed to be bringing in ground crews for Bud Sprague's fighters, when at Operations they reported in great excitement that a Jap bomber force was over Java itself, headed down the island.

(Abbreviation for "Kaninklijke Nederlandsch-Indische Luchtvaart Maatschappij," meaning Royal Dutch Indies Airplane Company.)

"I was panic-stricken for fear they might branch off at Malang and catch our Forts on the ground there. Luckily the pass was bottled up with fog, so they came on down toward us at Surabaya.

"At almost exactly eleven o'clock we could hear them hitting the city off in the distance. We knew they wouldn't miss us. I'll never forget poor old Baalerts, the head of that KNILM Field. He'd never been bombed before, and asked me what to do. He had already crawled into his car. I told him that was the worst thing he could do, that we should run for the concrete slit trenches at the edge of the field.

"As we ran, we could hear the second wave coming in over the harbor next to our airdrome—hear the hollow echo as the bombs crashed into the oil storage base. They practically leveled Moro Kambangem, the Dutch naval base there, coming in out of the sun—it was really a beautiful job from the professional standpoint. It's second in size only to Singapore. The docks were left a shambles. Our American Navy's PBV's of Patrol Wing 10 were anchored there. One or two were burned on the ways, but the rest managed to take off, although the

He had been anxious that his wife know that he was all right. He died at three in the morning.

Japs strafed a dingy full of sailors rowing out to them. They also scored a direct hit on the barracks there, so for the second time those poor guys of Patrol Wing 10 lost all they had—the first had been at Cavite in the Philippines.

"Now came the third wave, headed right for our airdrome. Echoing around in the cement of our slit trenches, the sound of the crashes was terrific. Poor old Baalerts was down there lying on the concrete floor, his white bridal suit soaking up half an inch of dirty rain water. We were all thankful when we heard that bomb pattern moving away. They'd laid a nice strip across the field, but only one bomb happened to hit the macadam strip.

"It was just hoisting out of the trench what was left of our bridegroom—there had been a lot of noise and I'm afraid his condition was pretty grave—when the Zeros hit, so we got Baalerts back down again.

"All the Dutch had to meet them were twelve export-model Curtiss pursuits. They had little motors and were hardly better than advanced trainers. The Dutch had come to America in 1939 with nice shiny new gold in their hands, begging to buy fighters. But this was all we could spare them, and it was the entire Dutch fighter force, except for another dozen which finally got back from Samarinda. Well, this brave dozen was up to do what it could against about ten Zeros.

"We watched one Dutchman coming in for fuel when two Zeros crossed his tail, their guns going full-blast, hammering tracers into his tail—watched his plane roll over and dive into the red dust at the edge of the field.

"Now another Dutch pilot comes in, with a Zero streaking for his tail, the Dutchman dodging all the way to the ground. Fifty feet from the ground he slips to the right to avoid that stream of tracers, but it's too late. Flames come gushing out, yet he manages to land and jump out of the burning plane. It's a terrific fight overhead; we can hear the faraway rattles as they clear their guns—the brave Dutch kids are fighting for their homeland, and seven planes were lost that morning of the twelve which had been Java's only defending Dutch fighter force.

"As I climbed out I realized the picture was darkening fast. We were depending on our Fortresses to keep the Jap transports away from Java, but we had to have fighters to defend our flying fields.

"But it wasn't until later in the day that I found out the Zeros had got Major Straubel, one of our own squadron commanders. He'd been piloting a B-18 we used for transportation, and was coming from Malang to Surabaya to talk with General Brett. The Zeros hit, and from the ground they saw him go over the hill on fire.

"They brought him into Surabaya hospital, and of course I went right out. It was in confusion because of the raid, but tiptoeing down those dim corridors, I finally found Straubel's room. He was burned black, and there was no hope, but they'd given him morphine to put him to sleep, and he was groaning in his sleep. But until then, when he'd been conscious, he hadn't let out a groan—had just been anxious that the nurse let his wife know he was all right. He died at three in the morning.

"While the liaison work lasted I was quartered at the big hotel in Surabaya, and the whole thing didn't feel right. You weren't sure of these natives as you had been of the Filipinos. That night a few were shot who were caught flashing lights into the air. And at the hotel the barefooted waiters, who slipped silently between tables and in and out of the high-ceilinged rooms, began to disappear.

"My own boy turned up a couple of days later, however—with tears in his eyes. Said he was back and to stay. He wasn't sure what this war was about, but he'd taken his mother and sister to the country, and was back for the rest of the war.

"Jap Intelligence must have been very good, because one bomber had peeled off the formation and made a direct run on the newly completing Dutch Army-Navy building (they had just moved in), scoring a near-miss.

"Meanwhile there was something else to straighten out. The Dutch fighters alone had been defending Surabaya—where had our P-40's been? Well, it turned out that at that Dutch fighter-control room they hadn't been able to speak English clearly enough for our boys to understand over the radio, so they'd been off in another corner of the sky. Getting someone in there who could talk with an American accent was another job for me.

"The Forts of course had been pounding away at the Japs, and had come back with ominous news—they'd spotted a Jap carrier out in the Java Sea and sent it away limping. If they'd had more strength and could have laid down a denser bomb pattern, they'd have sunk the damned thing. The Navy's PBV flying boats of Patrol Wing 10 were doing a wonderful reconnaissance job finding targets for us—every morning or so you might wake up to find a Jap carrier at almost any corner of the island. The PBV's would sight a little task force in the evening, but by the time I got word to our Forts to be out there next morning, often it had slipped away.

"Most important of all, ten more fighters presently arrived—hopping up from Australia via our stepping-stones of Timor and Bali. They were led in by Captain Will Connolly, a commercial pilot, who flew a Beechcraft and did the navigating for the fighters—that isn't part of their training. He reported they'd only lost one, which cracked up in landing at Timor Field.

"But they'd had plenty of excitement. Just as they were approaching Timor the boys had engaged and shot down a Jap fighter. It made Connolly plenty jittery. He was an old hand at flying, but his little Beechcraft had no guns, and wouldn't have lasted a minute in combat. So he hurried on out of there to land at Bali for lunch. But en route he sighted what was either a twin-tailed Messerschmitt 110 or a twin-engined Mitsubishi bomber, on patrol, which altered course and was coming toward them.

"Will Connolly had no radio in his Beechcraft to warn the ten P-40's in the formation he was leading, so he started going up and down frantically to signal them. Sure enough, the kids got the idea, and the two fighters on his wing peeled off and headed for the Jap. The first one put out his port engine, but the Jap feathered it and kept on going. But then he was hit by the second P-40, which, in spite of the fact that only two of its six guns were working, knocked out the starboard motor. And just to make sure of him, a third P-40, which by now had arrived, dived in to chew his wing off.

"You should have heard those American kids when they got in. Most of them were just out of flying school, and had never before flown a P-40 except for the three-hour practice Buzz Wagner had been able to give them as they passed through Brisbane. But now they had drawn first blood, and they were excited and yipping like a bunch of fox terrier pups chasing their first rabbit.

Sun and Suds-Proof Fabrics Put Stress on Checks, Plaids and Dots

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

To say glibly that checks and plaids are in fashion does not do justice to the situation as it is this spring, and as it will continue the whole summer through. Fact is, there is a regular epidemic of checks, little, medium, and big, sweeping across the fashion horizon this season. In the cotton realm the vogue for checks, plaids and polka dots rages on and on.

It gives a new importance and meaning to tub fabrics that nowadays they can be absolutely relied on, if they carry the proper guarantee label, to be both sun and suds-proof, due to their everfast processing. It is also noteworthy of the new cottons and other washable weaves that they are receiving the same meticulous styling that in years gone by was reserved for fine wools and silks and such. Which all leads to the present new order of events, that cottons and rayon weaves tub to perfection and go everywhere with high style acclaim these days.

It is washables such as herewith pictured that are riding the crest of the wave in point of high-fashion importance. The attractive dress shown to the right is made of poplin plaid in pink and black, which has been ever-fast processed, so that no matter how many times it is laundered it will come out bright and lovely as ever. Its absolutely fast colors will refuse to give way no matter if an inexperienced little bride tubs it or it has had to pass the test of a boom-town laundry. This stunning dress in pink and black, a color combination especially outstanding this spring, will be equally chic going about town, or stopping to linger at the club or to play a game of bridge. The self-pleating that trims the bodice front and the pockets is a favored fashion gesture. Self-ruffles and pleatings adorn most of the simple daytime frocks, imparting a youthful air that is most pleasing.

The designer of the smart ever-fast gingham, shown to the left, carries out the new and popular idea of trimming with self-pleating. The handling of the plaid so as to form designful points down the center front of the skirt is also an interesting feature. Dresses of this type will prove smart suburban and town mainstays this summer. They wash prettily, iron quickly and go perfectly with either colored or white accessories.

Polka dots are as popular as ever. They share style prestige equally with checks, plaids and stripes. The winsome frock centered in the picture makes appeal because of its exquisite simplicity and because of the attractiveness of the polka dot material of which it is fashioned. This charming model was one of many lovely wash frocks shown at a style revue recently staged by the Chicago National Wash Apparel association. The spun rayon weave is in powder blue with large white polka dots. The row on row of white machine stitching which trims this gown is handled most effectively. This is the sort of dress you will treasure, for it has a ladylike charm which every woman covets.

If you are going in for smart cottons this summer, and of course you are, for "everybody's doing it," don't miss the joy of owning a little bolero two-piece, either skirt and bolero or sun-back one-piece dress and bolero made of brightly colored plaid gingham. If you choose the skirt-and-bolero type, you will find it very practical as it looks so positively smart and pretty worn with frilly white sheer blouses or with dark monochrome types that have a lot of snowy sheer frou-frou about neckline and sleeves.

Hat Matches Blouse

Red and white rayon crepe are used in this striking blouse and half-hat ensemble. It is a stunning two-piece suitable for town or country. Worn with odd skirts or with a suit it carries style distinction wherever it goes.

Mode Swings Back to 1920s

In Long Scarfs and Cloches
The shoulder scarf, the long scarf that we wear about the throat and swinging in the breeze, the stole in fur, these are further additions to the "back to the '20s" vogue. Combine a sweater dress or one with the long torso effect with a cloche, and simple slip-on gloves to keep the arms slender and uncluttered. You'll find that the effect hangs sharply back to that time, though the details and colors are different.

Wearing Flowers Is 'The Style' This Year

The custom of wearing artificial flowers has been revived with utmost enthusiasm. So make your heart feel young and joyous and your appearance subtract years by wearing flowers on everything, your lapel, your bag, on the cuffs of your gloves, at your waistline and most of all, indulge in several of the provocative little flower-laden chapeaux that everybody loves. Your simple little black dinner gown will vamp all eyes if you place a single or a couple of giant roses at your waistline. Flowers worn ear-muff fashion are ever so flattering. Your snoods and your scarfs should be prettified with single blossoms or petals strewn all over them. Collar and cuff sets are made of pasted flower petals. Some of these sets have little flower pockets to match.

Simpler Hairdos Lend a

Look of Suave Elegance
A look of suave elegance is what best dressed women are coveting these days in hairdress. The general request is for hair shortened in front so that it can be brushed from the temples and brought up into softly arranged curls at the top and sides with no suggestion of a pompadour. The new idea is apparently to keep hair fairly long at the back so that it can be arranged in versatile ways.

Exciting New Silhouette

Young, modern and ever so slenderizing is the verdict rendered in regard to the new long-torso dresses sans belts, the same being fashion's move to create a new silhouette. It's the long-torso dress and the tunic blouse which is bringing about a vogue for smooth waistlines.

75¢ WORTH OF NITRAGIN PAID $3.90 IN MY CLOVER FIELD

One farmer writes that he spent 75c to inoculate half of 30 acres of red clover with NITRAGIN and got $390.00 worth of seed extra from the 15 acres he inoculated.

Inoculate all Legumes with NITRAGIN

With clover seed at 25¢ and alfalfa 50¢ or more per pound, you can't afford not to inoculate every pound of seed you plant with NITRAGIN. For a few cents an acre, NITRAGIN makes up to 50% bigger yields of richer feed and helps build fertility. Tests show it pays to inoculate all legumes regardless of previous cropping. NITRAGIN is the oldest, most widely used inoculation. It costs only a few cents an acre... produced in the most modern laboratory of its kind. Be sure you get NITRAGIN for soybeans, alfalfa, clover, other legumes. Get it where you buy seed.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strains on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up at night, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Mother'll Understand

if you don't call her on Long Distance this Sunday

Mothers are understanding and patriotic. They know that under the steadily increasing burden of war-created calls, Long Distance telephone equipment is seriously overloaded.

Of course, they'd like to talk with you on Mother's Day, but they'd rather be sure the lines are kept clear for vital war messages.

This year, send your love in a letter. And if you'd like to give your mother a present, she'd truly appreciate a United States War Bond—a gift of fighting dollars to back our boys and girls overseas.

Please make only really urgent Long Distance calls this Mother's Day.

We Met the Challenge...

"We are the food army of Michigan. There are nearly 200,000 of us—each with our family, our bit of soil, our hopes, our ambitions. Ours is a never-ending battle—sometimes against drought or rain, against cold or heat, against pests and disease, against shortages or surpluses, and always against time.

"No state in the union grows a greater variety of products. Proud as you must be of Michigan's industrial contribution to ever-approaching Victory, proud, too, you should be of her agricultural greatness. For Michigan, last year, was asked to produce a record-breaking tonnage of food—food to feed our own people, food for our fighting men around the world, food for our allies, food for the starving in China, in Africa, in Italy.

"It was a challenge to the farmers of our state. And we accepted it, though there were many who said it couldn't be done.

"We won the battle of food. We won it in spite of the help we didn't have, the equipment we couldn't obtain. We won it in spite of a jesting Nature that washed out our early plantings, bogged down our tractors, destroyed precious days and weeks. We harvested nearly 500 millions of dollars' worth of vitally-needed food, an all-time record.

"We met the challenge as you have met the challenge in your work—as your food retailer and wholesaler from the smallest independent to the largest chain store operator met it without complaint. They were beset with problems, too—ration stamps, ceiling prices, countless Government reports, increased operating costs, inadequate help and often shortages of merchandise.

"They made it possible for the food we produced to provide you with the energy to do a fighting job on the home front.

"They brought you our luscious berries, cherries, melons, peaches, pears, plums and apples from our fruit areas... sugar from our beets, millions of gallons of health-building milk, cream and other dairy products for your children and war workers, golden honey, top-grade potatoes in abundance, poultry, eggs and meats from our farms... fresh vegetables in never-ending streams and much more packed in our canneries... peas and beans and tomatoes and body-building, vitamin-enriched root vegetables... carrots, turnips, beets... all from Michigan farms and orchards and processing plants.

"The cooperation of your food merchants made our victory possible. Michigan working together has overcome almost impossible odds. That is the bright hope of the future as we enter upon a new season... we who till the soil of Michigan and distribute its food."

Demand for Fish Swells Ranks Of Anglers Throughout U. S. A.

Addicts of Rod and Reel Save Their Red Points While Having Fun.

Washington, D. C. BLOCKED ARMY PROMOTIONS—The army is pulling all sorts of wires backstage in the senate to break the log-jam against permanent wartime promotions—especially those of General Somervell and General Patton.

The senate military affairs committee some time ago proposed a policy against rushing through permanent promotions in wartime, arguing that temporary promotions were sufficient and that permanent promotions could come after the war when the senate and the public could survey all of an officer's record.

Some senators still remember the manner in which General Pershing was jumped from the rank of captain to brigadier general after he married the daughter of Sen. Francis E. Warren, then chairman of the military affairs committee; and they recall also the resentment thus caused in the army.

However, the policy of blocking permanent wartime promotions is being opposed by the army's efficient lobby on Capitol Hill; and recently, a new move was made to put through promotions for Generals Patton and Somervell.

Their names had been before a subcommittee which was adamant against promotion. Patton is now only colonel though holding the temporary rank of lieutenant general. Somervell's rank is similar.

So Chairman Bob Reynolds of the military affairs committee put their names before a subcommittee including himself, Elbert Thomas of Utah, and Warren Austin of Vermont. Significantly sandwiched in between Patton's and Somervell's names is that of General Wainwright, now a prisoner in Japan, whom every senator is anxious to promote. So it will be difficult for the subcommittee to promote one without the other two.

GRILLING GENERAL HERSHEY

Draft director Lewis B. Hershey and manpower boss Paul McNutt came in for some rough handling regarding the bungled draft situation at a closed-door meeting of the house military affairs committee the other day. Members took their hair down and said a lot of things that have been ranking in their bosoms about conflicting draft orders which have promoted confusion.

After the meeting adjourned, the committee announced that it had refused to approve a labor draft bill. Inside fact, however, is that formal action against the labor draft was taken only after the committee had heard a furious grenaading against the Hershey-McNutt team, including a demand that both be fired and replaced by a single draft czar.

Chairman Andrew J. May of Kentucky, Rep. Walter G. Andrews of New York, ranking committee Republican, and Reps. Ewing Thomas of California, Leslie Arends of Illinois and Forest Harness of Indiana all got in some forthright licks against the fumbling of the manpower and draft program.

The assault was led by Texas' two-fisted Thomason, who declared that one man should be put in complete charge of both military and industrial manpower with the nation at war.

MYSTERIOUS HOSPITAL

There is something awfully mysterious about the war department's determination to get rid of the Breakers hotel in Palm Beach as an army hospital, and the extent to which Attorney General Biddle seems anxious to cooperate.

In order to unravel the mystery, the Truman committee called upon Biddle for the Breakers hotel report prepared by his two-fisted young Assistant Attorney General Norman Littell. Littell, who is in charge of lands acquisition, had pointed to the foolishness of spending a lot of money making a hotel into a hospital and then turning it back to the Florida East Coast railroad just when we are on the verge of a second front and do not know what our casualties will be.

But when Biddle received the Truman committee's request, he got in touch with Rudolph Halley, its acting chief investigator, and asked him to withdraw the request. Halley diplomatically complied.

But next day, when members of the Truman committee heard about it, they called up the justice department and subpoenaed the Littell report.

Whereupon Biddle promptly surrendered. He asked that the subpoena be withdrawn and he finally sent the Littell report to the committee. Meanwhile, the army is holding up its plans to evacuate the Breakers.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer, U. S. aide to Lord Louis Mountbatten, complains that he has been sitting in New Delhi with nothing to do but read Sandburg's "Life of Lincoln." Wedemeyer is one of the top strategists in the U. S. army, spent six years in Germany, where he knew General Yodel and other Nazi field marshals. But instead of being put in a place where he could advise on strategy against Germany, he was sent to India, a country about which he knows little.

The housewife who in other years wasn't always eager to see her husband "go fishing" too frequently, has a different slant on it these days. Now she is quite anxious to see hubby haul out the fishing equipment and sally forth in hope of making a sucker of the finny tribe. In fact they encourage the man of the house to undertake such expeditions.

One doesn't have to look any further than the ration book to discover the reason. With meat scarce housewives who have to stretch the family points have depended greatly on fish to provide a major portion of the household table fare.

Thus fish has become a favorite American food. And Americans in greater numbers have flocked to become disciples of the art of Isaac Walton . . . and better fishermen.

The demand for fish—all kinds of fish—is so great that the professional fleets in the fishing industry cannot keep up with it. The professional fisherman cannot catch all the fish the public demands. As a result, thousands of Americans are going fishing themselves, not just as a sporting adventure, but for the very practical purpose of putting fresh food on their tables during these days of meat shortages.

Fishing, of course, is still fun. But the amateur fisherman takes it seriously nowadays. He is more interested in catching big, edible fish than in matching wits with the small "sporty" varieties. Most people who go fishing today are primarily interested in food.

Consequently, our amateur fishermen are paying close attention to the tricks of the trade. They study magazines and read books to learn what fishing equipment to buy and how to use it. And they learn rapidly where the different kinds of fish are biting and the best kind of bait to use. And also the different ways fish can be cooked once they are caught.

A rather striking note in the increasing ranks of fishermen is that the people of inland America are getting to be better fish connoisseurs than residents of the salt-water coasts. In great fishing ports like Boston and New York tradition has a firm hold. In those places the conviction runs that the old standbys like cod, haddock and mackerel are the only fish worth eating.

But in the Middle West, where there has been a sharp scarcity of fish of all kinds until now, consumers have an open mind about fish. They are just as eager to try a new kind as they are the old. This furnishes a great "experimental" market for the fisheries.

And the fish has been glamorized, too. Canned and frozen fish are being promoted by chain groceries throughout the nation. People sam-

Men are doing a great deal more fishing than in the days when there were no ration books. But the gals are in there too and seem to be doing better than all right. Florence Ann Clark of Weldon, N. C., is shown here with a fine string of the edible variety of the finny tribe. Could you blame a fish for hooking right onto the line of this attractive angler?

ple them out of curiosity and to save ration points. And recent polls have indicated that "new" varieties are an excellent substitute for meat. Careful conservation and scientific stocking of streams by the department of the interior during the past years is now paying dividends. And wives have a major household problem solved for them when hubby takes tackle and goes out to bring home the bacon, or fish.

BEAT THE DRUM—You can make a miniature drum out of an empty spool by cutting discs of red cotton fabric or felt just a little bigger than the top and bottom of the spool. Cover each end with these discs and sew with red thread from top to bottom to give the effect of the crossed cords on a drum. Paint two tooth picks with red nail polish and stick through the stitches. Mount on a pin and wear anywhere that you have room for a gadget gem.

RISE RIOT—Cut a two-inch circle in cardboard or plywood. Cover with glue and sprinkle with uncooked rice that has been colored with paint, food coloring, or nail polish. Apply several layers of the rice in different colors with fresh glue between each layer. Coat with shellac or colorless nail polish for a glossy finish. Mount on a pin in back and wear it on your sweaters. How about making several of these Rise Riots in two-color combinations that repeat your favorite sweater and skirt contrasts?

SPOOL JOOLS—You can make a darling Chinese gadget face out of an empty spool. Here's what you do. Paint the spool yellow with black rims around top and bottom. Draw in a Chinese face with black ink. Make a black yarn queue and stick it into the hole on top of the spool. Mount a pin on the back with adhesive tape. You can make an Indian face, too, by painting the spool red and sticking little feathers in the top hole.

The Kid and the Cat

She was a tousled little kid,
With cornsilk hair that never did
Stay right in place, her face half hid
And charm that went right through you.

A sassy little implish grin
That spoke of mischief deep within,
A roguishness as bright as sin
In face that looked up to you.
And underneath protecting arm
She lugged a cat, kept it from harm,
It looked up with no slight alarm

And eyes not one bit daggy.
We said, "What is this pussy's name?
By what has it been known to fame?"
And quick as light the answer came,
"My name for him is 'Baggy!'"
We caught ourselves a'wondering
Just how 'twould be when this young thing
Grew up and wore a wedding ring,
The thought was rather staggy'ry.
Just what would she her youngsters call,
When they were helpless, weak and small—
Before they grow up, straight and tall—
Would it be names like "Baggy?"

Then and Now

"I often think," said Uncle Ben,
"Of ways of people now and then.
I mind, when I was young, forsooth,
Back in those palmy days of youth
When people came to call and see
The balance of the family.
They sat around in serried row
Afraid lest mirth and joy should show.

They sat upon their dignity,
And talked with solemn gravity.
They spoke with air conventional—
Sepulchral and funereal.
They dared not let their faces slack,
For fear a smile might split and crack,
While if I made the slightest noise,
In manner of such little boys,
They put me in my place so quick—
The very thought now makes me sick.
But in these times, I'm glad to state,
They do not sit up stiff and straight,
But loll in comfort and in ease,
And talk like gay and merry breeze.
Forgotten is their dignity—
They laugh with genial jollity.
For happiness they make their bids,
Just like a lot of grown-up kids.
Though people praise the good old day,
I'd rather have the modern way!"

Hybrid Corn Yields 95 Bushels to Acre

By Planting Thicker, 104 Bushels Resulted

Hybrid corn's ability to produce more bushels per acre than open-pollinated varieties was compared to the "superiority of a well-bred dairy cow over a scrub animal" by Prof. D. F. Beard, extension agronomist of the agricultural extension service of Ohio State university.

"In hybrid corn, we have a better bred strain of plants capable of converting raw materials such as nitrogen, phosphorus, potash, water, carbon dioxide and other elements into corn at more efficient rates than the old scrub open-pollinated varieties. On the same land and with the same 'feed' provided, good hybrids will yield 10 to 12 bushels more corn per acre than open-pollinated varieties. Moreover, the hybrid plants are sturdier and show less tendency to lodge."

In the case of both hybrid corn and pedigreed dairy stock, the matter of ample feed and a well-balanced ration are essential if maximum production is to be achieved. With hybrid corn, this means providing the soil with sufficient plant foods in the proper balance, via the fertilizer bag.

Four Plants Per Hill.

Professor Beard emphasized that in addition to the use of more fertilizer, farmers could profitably adopt the practice of planting hybrid corn thicker to obtain greater yields.

"At the Ohio agricultural experiment station," he said, "good corn hybrids yielded 95 bushels to the acre as a two-year average, and open-pollinated corn 80 bushels, when both were thinned to three plants per hill. With four plants per hill, however, the hybrids yielded 104.3 bushels per acre and the open-pollinated varieties 84.1."

The difference in favor of hybrids increased from 15 bushels to 20.2 bushels per acre for the extra plant per hill. This principle was borne out last summer, in a southern Ohio location, with later maturing hybrids, where stands of three plants per hill produced average yields of 92.8 bushels per acre and stands averaging 3½ plants per hill gave yields of 101.9 bushels per acre.

"Unless heavier fertilization and thicker planting go along with good corn hybrids, users of hybrid seed fail to cash in on all the advantages of hybrids."

"You know, pop, we ought to do some repair work on this barn."

Hens With Paralysis

Should Be Culled Out

When culling hens, look them in the eye, says Dr. W. C. Thompson of Rutgers university.

One of the telltale signs of fowl paralysis—it has several forms—is a gray eye with an irregular pupil. That is, the iris, the colored part of a normal eye, is gray, and the pupil is irregular in outline when a bird is diseased, instead of being evenly oval or well rounded. In addition, the eye may be "fishy" or bulging.

Any bird with this eye condition should be removed from the flock. Lame birds that show no foot injuries to account for the lameness should be removed too as suspected carriers of fowl paralysis. The diseased birds may lay for a while, but eventually they lose weight and go out of production. If left in the flock, they endanger the other birds.

The majority of fowl paralysis cases occur in birds from 4 to 12 months old, the poultry specialist says, although older birds frequently contract the disease. Since the disease effects many birds just as they begin to lay and repay the expense of their raising, fowl paralysis is costly to the poultrymen.

Hatching Eggs Should

Be Carefully Selected

Best results in hatching are obtained from eggs that run about 24 ounces per dozen. Eggs should be well formed, of good shell texture, and of the color which is proper for the breed you are growing. Eggs which are small, round, short or thin-shelled should not be saved for hatching. During the cold weather they should be carefully stored to prevent chilling and other dangers which may make them infertile.

PEAKING OF SPORTS

By Bob McShane
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Although predictions as to the final outcome of the American league race should be made on a day-to-day basis, this department strings along with the many observers who look for the New York Yankees to win the 1944 pennant.

The American league has a tough, interesting race ahead of it. There are no clubs as outstanding as the Cardinals in the National. And that makes the race all the more interesting. We look for New York to nose out Washington and Chicago. We might as well get it over with and list them in the order they might possibly finish:

- New York
- Washington
- Chicago
- Cleveland
- St. Louis
- Detroit
- Boston
- Philadelphia

Manager Joe McCarthy's Yankees obviously do not have as good a ball club as the 1943 model. But they still are good enough to top the circuit if the pitching staff isn't torn asunder by the draft. They need Spud Chandler and Tiny Bonham on the mound. The opening game against the Red Sox was some slight evidence that the clutch punch is still there, even though it doesn't have the same old force.

Joe McCarthy

Washington's Outlook

Washington, too, has a great pitching staff, judged by current standards. The club has a weak-hitting infield, a bad gap at third base, dependable catching and a powerful outfield. The Senators also have a 43-night home stand, which should aid and abet such knuckleballers like Emil Leonard, John Niggeling, Mickey Heafner and Roger Wolf. The outfield includes George Case, Stan Spence and Robert Ortiz.

It wasn't long ago that Lou Boudreau, manager of the Indians, picked the White Sox as the team to beat. So far they haven't impressed many observers, but they certainly will be battling with more experienced help than many another club possesses. Selection of the White Sox for third place is predicated to quite an extent on the large number of 4-Fs on the payroll, together with the fact that other clubs are likely to suffer more losses to the armed forces.

The Cleveland situation is baffling—even to the Indians. An infield with Boudreau, Ken Keltner, Mickey Rocco and Russ Peters would be one of the best in the league. But Keltner, Boudreau and Peters are subject to the draft—as are many of the remaining top-notchers. The club is well supplied with bush leaguers, but most of them wouldn't get far in big league circles during normal times.

4-F Infield

Luke Sewell, manager of the St. Louis Browns, is blessed with a 4-F infield—Vern Stephens at short, Don Gutteridge at second, George McQuinn at first and Ellis Clary at third. The Browns are inexperienced, weak in the outfield and pitching departments, but have a fair catching department. They have lost at least 19 men to the military services.

The Tigers may be a strong early-season team, but they are marked for the second division. Sparked by Paul Trout, a 20-game winner last year, Detroit has a good pitching staff. But the club is weak in too many departments to be a serious threat.

Boston and Philadelphia should fight it out for last place. The Athletics looked good at the start, but that is customary in Philadelphia. Boston's case appears to be without hope. The Red Sox have been rocked by losses of key players.

At this early date New York, Washington and Chicago are the class of the junior league. In normal times it would work out this way. But these are far from normal times.

More recent draft regulations hold a few rays of hope for managers. If draft quotas are filled with men under 26, or even 28, the game won't suffer too much from manpower losses.

1,058,000 Discharged

From Army Since 1941

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The army reported that 1,058,000 enlisted men were discharged from December 1, 1941, to January 31 of this year. Of the total, 844,000 were given honorable discharges, exclusive of discharges to accept commissions. It included 196,000 men discharged because they were over 38 years of age. The majority of honorable discharges, the army said, were for physical and mental disability.

Social Security Plan For Farmers Calls for Careful Consideration

By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—

Farmers throughout the land today are being asked to give thoughtful consideration to a proposal that, if adopted, would spell better health for them and their families, and protection against many of the hazards and discomforts of old age—but for which they would have to pay a price.

Proposed amendments to the Social Security act incorporated in the Wagner-Murray Dingell Bill would bring benefits to some 12 million people working in American agriculture, and about 3 million small business men, self-employed professional workers and domestic servants.

The monetary price to the farmer for a comprehensive system of social insurance would be equal contribution rates for employees and employers amounting to 6 per cent on all wages up to the first $3,000 a year, a 7 per cent contribution rate for self-employed persons, with provision for Government contributions to the system, presumably in 10 to 15 years, when current receipts become insufficient to meet disbursements. Taxation, which cannot be determined now, would provide the Government contribution.

Farm Groups Accept

The intangible price would be the extension of a system which made the central government still more responsible for the welfare of individuals, and placed state governments in a position where Federal authorities might examine their administration of social security funds, and withhold funds if abuses were discovered.

Some acceptance of the program already has been gained from leading farm organizations. Last November, Albert S. Goss, National Master of the Grange, told members in annual session at Grand Rapids, Mich., that lack of social security coverage for farming is one of the handicaps in holding good workers on the farm.

For the last two years the National Farmers union has supported extension of social security to the farm. At its 1942 convention in Oklahoma City a resolution was adopted which called for medical care in addition to benefits under old-age and survivors' insurance. Last fall the state conventions of the Farmers union in Montana, North Dakota, Colorado, Iowa, Wisconsin, Kansas and Oklahoma adopted resolutions favoring the principles of the Wagner-Murray-Dingell Bill.

The American farm bureau federation's general counsel, Donald Kirkpatrick, is studying the question of endorsement of coverage of farmers and farm labor.

At present there is no general program in effect to meet the risks of illness, accident, disability, old age and premature death for America's 6 million farm operators. The proportion of them who carry comparable private insurance is small. There are few indeed among the 3 1/2 to 4 1/2 million paid farm workers, and 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 million family helpers, who are adequately covered by private insurance. For the most part, when the principal breadwinner of a farm family is stricken by long illness, old age or death, the family has only its own resources to command, and too often these are inadequate.

Unlike his grandfather, the farmer of today operates with all of the risks which go with commercialized and mechanized farming. His land values are much higher and fluctuate more than they did 50 years ago. He must sell a great deal more produce to cover his operating costs, and he is subject to much greater price and market hazards than his pioneering forefathers.

Farm Health Declines

There is another phase of country life that comparatively few people realize. Surveys of the health of farm families show that their health is not as good as that of city families. Farm children suffer from preventable and correctable defects of teeth, sight and hearing more frequently than city children. Farm women have twice as many children as city women, and the highest death rates in maternity cases are found in farming areas. Farmer selectees for the armed services have been rejected because of physical defects in considerably larger proportions than city men.

One bit of evidence: data on selective service draftees between 18 and 19 years of age show the highest rate of rejections for farmers at 41.1 per cent, the lowest for craftsmen at 20.4 per cent.

Proposed legislation calls for a Federal system of medical and hospitalization insurance for all persons covered under old-age and survivors' insurance and for their dependents. The Surgeon General of the United States would administer the technical and professional aspects of the program and the Social Security board, the financial phases.

PAUL IN THESSALONICA

LESSON TEXT: Acts 17:1-4; 1 Thessalonians 2:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT: Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks.—1 Thessalonians 5:16-18.

Strong, active, missionary-minded churches do not just "happen." They are the result of the preaching of a true and powerful message by a faithful and sacrificial messenger. Other factors enter in, but these are the fundamentals.

Paul's ministry at Thessalonica, which is described in Acts 17 and explained in 1 Thessalonians 2, reveals what should be preached and what kind of a preacher is needed. Perhaps some dead or unsuccessful church may learn the secret today and come to new life for Christ.

I. The Message—Christ the Saviour (Acts 17:1-4).

Paul had already met the varying lot of both persecution and acceptance, and had now come to Thessalonica, a large and important city in Macedonia, where he had a lengthy ministry and established a strong church.

What was the message which so signally succeeded in this great strategic center? Well, it was not (as some modern preachers in large cities would seem to think) a series of social, political, or literary discourses. Paul preached Christ. He reasoned with them and presented the Saviour (v. 3) as One who was—

1. Dead for our sin. These people were like us in that they needed a solution for their sin problem. There were doubtless other questions which Paul might have discussed, but he wisely went to the root of their difficulty and showed them "that Christ must needs have suffered."

Without the death of Christ there is no salvation for any man. Only through the shedding of blood can there be remission of sin (Heb. 9:22). Paul had no part in the folly of a "bloodless gospel"—as though there were any such gospel.

2. Raised for our justification. It was not enough that Jesus died, marvelous as that is in our sight. For many a man has died for his convictions, but none has risen from the dead. Christ could not be holden of the grave. He arose the victorious Redeemer.

3. Declared to be the Christ. He is more than a man, more than a great leader and an earnest teacher. He is God's anointed One, Himself divine—and our Lord.

Thus Paul presented to the Jews their Messiah, "the Man of Sorrows" (Isa. 53), whose resurrection declared Him to be the Son of God with power (Rom. 1:4), their Redeemer and Lord. Blessed results followed such preaching (v. 4).

II. The Messenger—Approved of God (1. Thess. 2:1-12).

Sometimes a man with a true message largely nullifies its value by the manner in which he presents it, or by his manner of life in the community.

1. He was faithful (vv. 1-6). One of the great temptations facing the one who is a preacher or teacher of God's Word is to let his fear of men cause him to adjust his message, to use a bit of flattery, to please men.

Paul was "bold in our God" (v. 2), not trying to deceive or mislead anyone (v. 3), seeking only God's approval (v. 4), not trying to make money for himself or gain standing with men by smooth words (v. 5), and not claiming a high position or authority over men (v. 6).

2. He was affectionate (vv. 7-9). How often those who are faithful and bold in preaching the truth ruin the effect of their work by being harsh and unkind. Here is a lesson many of us need to learn.

To be gentle (v. 7) a man must be strong. The cardinal quality of a strong Christian should be that he is a gentleman, or she a gentlewoman. If not, there is not real strength in the life.

Paul gave not only a message, he gave himself—his very soul (v. 8). The people to whom he ministered were "dear" to him. The pastor who looks down at his congregation with hardness, and perhaps hatred for some individual, needs to read this passage and find Paul's secret of success.

He labored with his hands to support himself (v. 9), lest anyone think he was a burden to them. Let no one think that this means that a preacher is not worthy of support. Christ Himself declares that the laborer is worthy of his hire (Luke 10:7). But it does show Paul's fine spirit of devotion and sacrifice.

3. He was unblamable (vv. 10-12). Holy in his life before God, Paul was ready to live righteously before men, and thus to stand unblamable before them and before his Lord. This indeed is a life worthy in the sight of God (v. 12).

In other words, the preacher was able to say to his listeners, "My life shows you what I mean by my preaching." The true preacher of the gospel will never be satisfied to be a signpost, pointing a way in which he does not walk.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Christopher Columbus is credited with bringing first reports of rubber to the civilized world, but rubber relics found among Maya ruins lead some scientists to believe that rubber items were in use in the eleventh century.

Rubber, both wild and plantation, grows best in an area 10 degrees either side of the equator.

The production of one complete large bomber tire takes as much time as does the making of several truck tires, or up to 60 passenger car tires of the most popular size. The demand for large tires is severely straining the production facilities of the industry.

1. To stimulate the grower to make the greatest possible effort to boost production, both in fields and victory gardens, and to call public attention to the pressing needs for farm labor and for machinery parts and repairs.

2. To encourage Michigan retailers to display and sell more quality foods, and to call public attention to the importance of supporting the state's producers.

3. To acquaint Michigan consumers with the state's diversified food products, and to encourage increased use of Michigan foods.

Food council leaders point out that unity of purpose and public cooperation in such a program must be stressed now, at the beginning of the growing season, instead of this fall at harvest time if practical results are to be achieved.

The council points out that government estimates place the share of all foods earmarked for lend-lease and military uses at 27 per cent. It cites figures showing that the nation's railroads have 600,000 fewer freight cars now than were available in World War I, and that they are operating with 100,000 fewer men than present schedules would normally employ.

"This situation calls for consumption of food as near as possible to the point of production," declares W. G. Armstrong, vice president of the Food Council and master of the Michigan State Grange.

Health benefits especially valuable in wartime are derived also, he added, from use of fruits and vegetables moved quickly from farm to table so as to preserve 'garden freshness.'

Observance of More Michigan Food Month, which will continue throughout May, is being implemented by means of advertising and publicity in newspapers throughout the state.

Proclamation

The Congress of the United States by public resolution approved May 3, 1940, has designated the third Sunday of May each year as Citizens Day for the observance and commemoration of American citizenship.

This year the third Sunday of May is the 21st. The day is set aside for the public recognition of all persons who, by becoming of age or through naturalization, have attained United States citizenship.

During the past year our state has strengthened through the voluntary association with us by naturalization of many men and women from other lands, and through our youth who, by becoming of age, have attained full citizenship.

Now that the nation is undergoing the trials and sacrifices of war it seems especially important that we seize every opportunity for strengthening national unity. "I Am an American Day" is a propitious occasion for re-kindling the spirit of true American citizenship.

Therefore, I, Harry F. Kelly, Governor of Michigan, hereby proclaim that Sunday, May 21st, 1944, shall be designated as "I Am an American Day." I call upon local officials, and patriotic, civic and educational organizations to take part on this day in exercises designated to assist our citizens, both native born and naturalized, to understand more fully the duties and opportunities of citizenship and its special responsibilities in a nation at war.

HARRY F. KELLY,
Governor of Michigan.
