Only One County Office Contested

The petition filing deadline Tuesday afternoon disclosed that there were no contests for county offices excepting for county road commissioner. For that office four petitions were filed: Ernest Crego, G. P. Sabin, James McDonell and Frank Brown. For all other of-fices only present incumbents filed petitions.

No Democratic candidate fileed a petition.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurtz, pilot of a Flying Fortress, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Eight of his men were killed fleeing for shelter, and Old 99, with many other Fortresses, was demolished before it could take off. After escaping to Australia, what is left of the squadron flies to Java where they go out on many missions over the Philippines. Nine P-40 fighter planes arrive from Australia a few days before a Jap bomber force is reported over Java. Three waves of Japs come over, and Zeros get Major Straubel, squadron commander. The Forts spot a Jap carrier in the Then more Forts arrive.

CHAPTER XIV

"The Japs by now were stirred up. They came over-obviously off a carrier hidden somewhere near-and strafed hell out of Timor airdrome. Luckily there was nothing on the field just then.

"Now we began to see that it would be only a matter of time until the Japs took that steppingstone field at Timor, which connected us to Australia, and it would all be over-for no more fighters could get through to us under their own power. Jap bombers had already hit Surabaya. If we got no more fighters, how long before they smashed our Forts at Malang? The skies were darkening fast.

"But about this time we did a curious job for the Dutch. I was in their Navy headquarters on business when Kommander van der Straaten came running up. 'You got to help me!' he said. 'Our bravest sub is in trouble—she can't dive.'
Then he explained that she was more than three hundred miles out in the Java Sea, moving slowly toward home base, but that Zeros were circling overhead, and had probably summoned Jap bombers to polish her off. Two Dutch PBY's had been guarding her, but those big flying boats are clumsy as ducks, and the Zeros had already shot one down.

"What they had to have, Van der Straaten explained, was fighters to cover the submarine. But the little Dutch Curtiss fighters didn't have the range to get out and back.

"I got Bud Sprague on the phone, told him I was coming out—urgent Then I wrote down on a piece of paper what Van der Straaten told me of their submarine's course, speed, and hourly position.

"Bud laid it out on a chart and figured fast. It was a long distance. Even with belly tanks, his fighters could barely get out there and spend fifteen minutes patrolling the submarine when they'd have to start

"But he figured he had enough planes to keep two of them over her all the time—in fifteen-minute re-lays—until they'd escorted her back to a point where the little Dutch Curtiss fighters would have the range to take over.

"Bud led the first pair out himself (he's no swivel-chair officer), and the Dutch, in addition to being tearfully grateful, woke up to the fact that maybe liaison was a good idea. Van der Straaten noticed I'd had trouble getting a car getting out to the field—I'd been spending most of my salary on taxis getting Tarakan. Well, we hit it. And of everybody's business done-and the next morning a Dutch staff car with a sergeant at the wheel reported to the door of the hotel. They assigned it to me for the duration of the war.

"But at this point another submarine showed up with a hard-luck story-she was one of ours which had sneaked through the Jap blockade from Corregidor, with a load of fourteen passengers—most of them pilots I knew, who had lost their planes and been left when we had to pull out of the Philippines. "They came roaring into the hotel late. They were sick of fiddling around on Bataan with rifles, and now were itching to get into the air again. In addition to which, they'd been cooped up for days under water in that stinking little tin cigar box.' You can imagine how a pilot would take that. Here they were at last, free in a big luxurious hotel, with lights and girls. They Forts. nearly pulled it to pieces, and danced with all the girls in the place from Malang to strike at the Japs who would take a chance with them on the floor. But in between they had plenty of news.

"I told them they had me in liaison work just now, and they said, hell, if I had talents like that, the I didn't see it. It doesn't happen place for me was on Corregidor. Because the Army had the Navy stuffed into one end of a tunnel while they were stuffed into the other, and relations were so strained that the staffs would only communicate by courier. And now how about a shot of this Daiquiri rum they'd heard so much talk about? "I finally got them quieted down and on the bus for Malang. They were crazy to get back up in the air after all those weeks.

"And then, just as I was about to go to bed, a call from Margo came

"Some friends wanted me to go to Florida with them," said Margo. "The girl's husband had a war job there. I couldn't decide. But Frank said it looked as though he wasn't going to get any vacation, so I climbing—had reached 7,000 feet should take a good long one to do for when we noticed some fighters in a both of us. I must go, and it would be our vacation. I could tell he they were P-40's, but we weren't takwas very tired, and that worried un- ing any chances, because there dertone was in his voice. I had been seemed to be quite a gang of them-

Nobody in the States doubted yet Only when we saw the white points that Java would hold. I told him of our Army Air Force star with I'd call him as soon as I reached the red disk in the middle were Florida. And then he said a curious we relieved. It hadn't occurred to

"'Darling,' he said, 'I'd better Japan and with a few strokes of a warn you that these calls may not last much longer.'

"I didn't ask why, because I knew it must be something the censor would not let him tell me. So because the time was up, I just said good night. Without ever talking it over, we'd always made it our rule never to say goodby. That was too frightening. Always it was good night.'

"I was worried, Margo," said Frank, "because I'd just got word from our Navy's PBY's on patrol that a new Jap invasion fleet was coming down Macassar Strait, apparently headed for Balikpapan on Borneo. It has a fair harbor and is the last base they would need before they took over Java. And I couldn't see how we were going to stop them.

"But next day Colonel Eubank gathered his Forts together and they took off at 3:30 in the morning, so that they would be out over Macassar Strait in time to make their bomb run just at dawn.

"They had to come down below the overcast to see the target, which was two converging lines of Jap ships, heavily escorted-one coming in from the northeast and one from course we do some damage. But it's a big force-the Navy doesn't dare go in. We have only a handful of Forts, so the Japs keep com-

"But we're desperate, and so are the Dutch. Their entire bomber force now consisted of eight old B-10's (a 1934 model Martin twinengine bomber), which were based at Balikpapan. These boys knew if the Japs were ever to be stopped, it had to be now, to give our reinforcements time to get in-if we were going to get any. So that afternoon they made their last desperate stab-damaging that Jap fleet of course, but not stopping it. And just as these Dutch bombers were coming in to land on Balikpapan Field, they were hit by carrierbased Zeros and every plane destroyed. Now the Dutch had nothing, and everything depended on our

"So the next day they put out in Macassar, and if possible sink a carrier. But what happened on that mission should not be my story. For I wasn't there. Two of our Sky often. Plenty of them had come home crippled. Others were beached, like Shorty Wheless' plane. Many others have cracked up when fog shrouded the field. But we'd lost only five by enemy action, and rarely have the Japs seen one fall. Colin crashed through the overcast near Clark Field, so they didn't see him -they saw Adams, but not Major Robinson. Seldom do our own boys ever see the old Queens go down in battle. So you tell it," said Frank, and here he looked at Sergeant Boone, the gunner.

"I saw it," said the Gunner, "and I can tell you how they die. "It began like this. Nine of us had taken off from Malang to Macassar Strait to look for carriers, We had only started, we were about sixty miles off the coast, slowly tight formation. We assumed that glad when he told me he would maybe some reinforcements had ar-

WELL, well, look who's here! Meet little daughter of the household posing right in the very foreground of the illustration. She wants to make sure that you take note of the cunning black pinafore she is wearing, for it's the "latest style" and she has come to tell you

It has been the fashion among our Latin-American neighbors to dress their youngsters in black cotton. We have borrowed the idea this year and now it's quite the fashion-correct thing for little American girls to be wearing black pinafores. However there is nothing somber about these modish black aprons for they are gaily bedecked with bright embroidery, and smartest of all, the new handpainted decor.

For a while she continued on with her chin up, like those pictures you There's an idea for you! Handsee of Marie Antoinette or Mary painted design on black sateen! technique or these appliques, which offer endless possibilities in designful arrangement.

This year, styles for children have come definitely under the Mexican spell. Take note of the dainty dress of cotton muslin shown to the right. It has a band of Mexican-inspired embroidery around the skirt, which brings into the picture vivid color drama.

There's just no end to the clever styling given to cottons nowadays. It does not matter how simple a frock or a pinafore, it is sure to take on a clever trimming accent of some sort. A white cotton jersey frock that has a drawstring neckline and waistline tied with yellow ribbons takes on a wide border effect about the skirt hemline worked with an applique of yellow cutout flowers.

Mother-and-daughter fashions are important on the fashion program. They are showing in the shops such clever twosomes as the new black suspender dresses embroidered in hearts and flowers in red, white and green with long-sleeved dimity blouses. Necklines and wrists have lace-edged ruffles and drawstring closing.

Little tots look too cunning for words in the smart blouse-and-skirt dresses. One type has a skirt of red and white checked gingham with a deep border effect worked in red cross-stitch done on the white checks. The blouse is of white sheer, smocked about neckline and sleeves, using red thread. Lots of gay ricktheir own packages with rack is also being used to trim in

Flower Technique

More flowers will be worn during the coming months than have been worn for many a season past. Years ago, it was the fashion to wear flowers at your waistline. The pendulum of fashion has swung back to this charming vogue. The young lady pictured is fashion-wise as to flower technique prescribed for this spring and summer, in that she positions a cluster of pretty spring posies at the waistline of her prettily styled rayon dress. Note that the becoming neckline is finished off with detailing that is matched to that used on the skirt panel and sleeves. Duration kind of wear is assured for the rayon they jumped. Maybe he figured he material used for her chic gown because it bears a label indicating that it has been tested for dry cleanhands were so burned he couldn't ing together with other "good wear" qualities.

Tremendous Demand For White Jewelry

If you want to make the most of your looks, the stunning white jewelry, which is the "last word" for summer, will do just that for you. Wear white jewelry to accent your colorful prints. Frost your black dresses and suits with white plastic costume jewelry. An all-white vogue is on the way for summer and white necklaces, earrings and bracelets with your white costume makes an ideal ensemble. In the collections of white jewelry, you'll find plastic necklaces of lacy flowers that are too flattering for words. These are often matched with ear bobs and bracelets. The craze for summer white is also reflected in corsage sprays with complementary earrings done in the new gardenia white, grape clusters being a favorite motif. White beads, white cordand-plastic combinations are everywhere in evidence in the nowso important displays of glamorous white jewelry.

Tiny Sailors Maintain Their Style Prestige

Speaking in terms of the little hat that still maintains its style prestige although it must now share honors with the enormous brims that are coming into favor, milliners declare that the tiny sailor, tilted jauntily over the front hair arrangement, is proving to be one of the most successful hats brought out this season. The little flower-covered sailors are gay flatterers indeed, and are always bewitchingly veiled, which makes them all the more alluring, Smart too, are the wee sailors covered with check or plaid taffeta especially when they are complemented with gloves made of the same check or plaid.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT

RUBBER Natural rubber is still something of a mystery, even after years of laboratory experi-ments. It has carbon and hydrogen, but there are other qualities which have not as yet been determined. Before the war, 60 per cent of the tires and tubes made each year were used as replacements, and 80 percent of the new motor vehicles sold replaced those annually scrapped.

Brazil rubber selling at $3.06 a pound in 1910 stimulated the development of the Mid-dle East plantations to the extent that 3,000,000 acres were under cultivation in 1915, providing the bulk of the world's supplies.

Washington, D. C. BIG VS. LITTLE FARMERS

Forty years have elapsed between the big-business battles of Teddy Roosevelt and Cousin FDR, but one issue which plagued the former is also plaguing the latter and is now before congress. It is the question whether government irrigation, government water, and government rec-lamation shall benefit the big landowner or the small.

The issue is now one of the hottest fights both in California and in congress, where Secretary of the Interior Ickes has been called to testify liott and Carter of California have skilfully smuggled into the rivers and harbors bill—a rider permitting big landowners in California's central valley to benefit from govern ment low-cost irrigation.

The question in Teddy Roosevelt's day was whether any farmer holding more than 160 acres should benefit from government irrigation. The issue arose when the land kings of the Far West wanted to develop their ranches and speculative holdings through irrigation at government ex-

The West was for it, but the East objected. Eastern states claimed they would be footing the tax bill and that Western irrigation would come out of their pockets. The West replied that the irrigation projects of that day would provide benefits for small Eastern farmers who migrated westward tomorrow.

After a terrific battle, Teddy Roosevelt won out. Congress ruled that government - irrigated land tracts must be limited to 160 acres.

That law still stands. But Republican Congressman Carter of Oakland, Calif., and Democratic Con gressman Elliott of Tulare, Calif., have ganged up to change it with a rider exempting the central valley irrigation project.

Their amendment, already passed by the house, would mean that big ranchers in the central valley could benefit from the new irrigation project no matter how extensive their holdings. Even more important, it would mean that a lot of new land, not extensively cultivated at present, would be subjected to cut-throat

Ickes for Small Farms.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who has supervised the expenditure of $150,000,000 on central valley irrigation, is determined that the benefits shall not go to land speculators and big ranchers, plus some of the big liquor companies which have bought up California wineries.

The issue, according to Secretary Ickes, is whether the U.S.A. is going to become a nation of large landowners hiring Okies and tenant farmers, or whether the nation will feature medium-sized farmers oper ating their own land.

NOTE-Business men in the central valley are split over the issue. Many merchants believe that medium-sized farms rather than poorer farm labor make for better business neighboring towns. The Fresno Chamber of Commerce calls 60 to 80 acres of figs an economic unit for a family, or 80 to 120 acres of alfalfa. The Chamber has sent out booklets urging settlers to take up small land tracts.

FOUR-Fs.

Despite all the army howls for 4-Fs to get into war plants, it remains a fact that physical examination in many plants is so stiff that they can't get in. In fact, the physical in some plants is stiffer than in the army.

Many a patriotic 4-F has worn out shoeleather making the rounds of war plants, only to find that he can't get in. A punctured ear-drum, for instance, is considered just as important in a war plant as in the

In recent weeks, belated steps have been taken to relax some of these physical restrictions, but much still remains to be done. So you can't blame a lot of the 4-F-ers if they aren't in war plants.

Another difficulty which the War Manpower commission might well dig into is the fact that anyone can quit work in a vital war plant but, without a certificate of availability, cannot transfer to another war plant -at least, not until after a 60-day period.

In other words, you can step out of an aircraft factory or a synthetic rubber plant and go to work in a barber shop or at a bootblack stand, or just loaf at home. They are not essential industries. But if you want to switch to a munitions plant, you can't-without a certificate of availability (which you probably can't get), or without waiting the required cooling-off period of 60 days.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

€ Busy as he is, President Roosevelt will soon be called upon to settle the problem of whether a rail worker's vacation week is six days or seven. Railroad workers were granted a week's vacation as part of the wage compromise last year, but the railroad executives now contend that FDR meant the vacation should be six days, not seven. If the railroad workers get seven days, they can stay away Sunday, which is a holiday anyway, plus Monday, or an actual total of eight days.

A LTHOUGH Jimmy Wilson's career as pilot of the Chicago Cubs can't be marked down as a shining success, his voluntary departure from managerial ranks wasn't greeted with demonstrators of frontied in The Limmy Wasn's of frenzied joy. For Jimmy was a well-liked individual.

Quite a few critics point to Wilson's record as a big league manager and insist loudly that he has been a failure. The best answer to those critics is the attitude of the players working for Jim. They voice on a rider which Congressmen El- 100 per cent approval of their former manager.

That approval was summed up quite succinctly by Roy Johnson, named acting coach upon Wilson's withdrawal: "I've been working for a lot of people, but in the short time I've been with Jim Wilson I've enjoyed it more than anything else in my baseball life. He's been swell -and he knows baseball."

The Records

Baseball men and fans aitke were glad to see Wilson return to the Cincinnati Reds after leaving Chicago. He had held that position until taking over as Cub manager in

Here is the record of Cub pilots in recent years:

Under Joe McCarthy, who took command in Chicago in 1926, the Cubs spent 14 years in the first division after finishing eighth in 1925.

The team finished fourth in 1926 and 1927, third in 1928, first in 1929 and second in 1930.

Rogers Hornsby took over in the fall of 1930. The team finished third in 1931 and was six games out of first place on August 1, 1932, when Charley Grimm replaced Hornsby.

Grimm's record stands out as the best of the lot. Under him the Cubs won the flag in 1932, finished third in 1933 and '34, won the 1935 pentive victories by September and was second in 1936 and '37.

Gabby Hartnett replaced Grimm in July, 1938, and the team won the flag that fall with a last-minute drive. The Cubs finished fourth in 1939 and fifth in '40.

In November, 1940, Wilson was named manager to succeed Hartnett. The team was sixth in 1941 and '42 and fifth last year. It was in the National league cellar when Wilson resigned.

An Explanation

Cub executives didn't blame Wilson. Vice President Jim Gallagher merely asked: "What can Wilson do about it? He can't get out there and bat for every guy in the lineup, can he? All of us know that the Cubs are a better team than a last place one. But we're certainly not holding Manager Wilson responsible. . .

Wilson did everything a manager could to shake the Cubs out of their slump. He had 19 players (exclusive of pitchers) on his 1944 squad and he used every one of them except ailing Lou Novikoff in the line-up at one time or another. He juggled the batting order and moved players from one field to another. He did about everything but get owner Phil Wrigley into the lineup. But when he left the club was hit-ting a pallid .188, and that isn't championship hitting.

Wilson has a saving philosophy. He knows that the manager of a winning ball club gets the credit. The winner is always "keen, shrewd, whip-smart," etc., etc. So it is Wilson's view that the manager of a losing club must shoulder the blame. It isn't fair but it does average out in the long run.

He didn't have any trouble with his players, and laughed at suggestions that the boys weren't giving him everything they could. If anything, he said, they were trying too hard. "And I'll say this: I hope the boys get going. I wish them every success. They deserve it. I didn't have much luck. Maybe Roy Johnson will. I hope so. I'm leaving with no hard feelings toward anybody. I have no complaints. I've been treated fine."

Chicago would like to believe he was treated fine, but the facts seem to prove otherwise. -

PAUL IN CORINTH

LESSON TEXT-Acts 18:1-4; I Corinthians 13.

GOLDEN TEXT—But now abide a faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love.—I Corinthians 13:13.

Who is a Christian? One might answer in a number of ways. He is one who has been saved by the redeeming grace of Jesus Christ. He is one who seeks to live a life in accord with the will of God. He is a witness for God, and so on. But the answer that the whole world understands is a life in which the redeeming love of Christ begets a true love for one's fellow man.

I. An Example of Christian Love (Acts 18:1-4).

Teaching and preaching are God's ordained way for presenting the truth. They are effective, but only when done by one whose life exemplifies the truth. In his letter to the Corinthians Paul gives the greatest discussion of love known to the world, but before he wrote it he had lived that truth before them. The Holy Spirit spoke through him of love, because He had already lived the truth out in the preacher.

Two things appear here: Paul

1. Working (vv. 1-3). The world's most distinguished missionary and preacher had arrived in Corinth. Where was the welcoming committee of local dignitaries? There was Whose comfortable home would receive him? None was offered. His was the lot of the pioneer for Christ. He had to hunt up a Jewish fellow craftsman and go to work to earn his bread.

Paul, like every other Jewish boy, had learned a trade, something he could do with his hands. He was a tent and sail maker, and was not ashamed to work at his trade. A more recent follower of Christ put it thus: "My business is to preach the gospel, but I pack meat to pay the expenses."

But notice that Paul did not let this work become the chief thing. As the Lord prospered him he did not decide to "go back into business." No, for his real business was:

2. Witnessing (v. 4). He began, as was his custom, in the synagogue, presenting Christ to Jews and Greeks. The Jews opposed him (see v. 6), and then Paul addressed himself to the Gentiles.

God prospered that ministry and encouraged Paul by a vision, assuring him that the Lord had "much people" (v. 10) in that wicked city. The love of Christ in Paul thus shone forth as a light in the darkness of sin and superstition.

Love was something which the heathen world of Paul's day had so misrepresented and distorted (even as it has today) that it needed def-inition and exposition. So we have—

II. An Explanation of Christian Love (I Cor. 13).

This is one of the outstanding chapters of all Scripture. Its magnificent discussion of the greatest of all themes has drawn forth many choice expositions.

The thought centers around the emptiness of the loveless life, the glory of the life of love, and the eternal unchangeable power of love. We gather it up in three words. 1. Indispensable (vv. 1-3). Without love man's attainments are empty. He may become an orator with a "heavenly" gift of speech, but un-less he truly loves, his elegant and persuasive talk is just a meaningless noise. How true!

One may also have marvelous gifts of prophetic insight and a wonder-working faith, and find that it is all a vain and empty experience without love. Our world leaders could well study that verse just now.

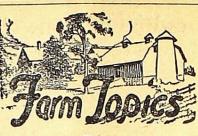

Sacrificial interest in the needs of mankind is a fine trait in man, but it must have the love of Christ in it or it too is profitless. As we think of feeding the hungry nations of the earth, let us not forget to make it worth while by doing it in Christian love.

2. Incomparable (vv. 4-7). The standard for the life of a Christian is a very high one; in fact, it is impossible of attainment apart from the grace and power of Christ. Naturally, we find ourselves to be impatient, proud, suspicious, resentful, etc. The new nature in Christ is just the opposite, for love rules.

Note that phrase "endureth all things." We need that in these days when it is so hard to keep on going, or as someone said, "to keep on keeping on." Love endures all things.

3. Immutable (vv. '8-13). All things in life change and pass away. Love is eternal and unchangeable. Even the spiritual gifts have their fulfillment and pass from view, but love shall endure through all eternity. God, the Eternal One, is love (I John 4:8, 16).

When we shall come to that perfectness of understanding which is to be ours one day, when we shall know even as God now knows us, then we shall see love as the supreme gift, eternal in its power and

Rotenone Destroys Many Insect Pests

New Insecticide Is Harmless to Man

Among the newer insecticides are those containing rotenone. This val-uable product of the roots of species of Derris and Lonchocarpus (commonly called cube or timbo) was imported from the Southwest Pacific and South America, respectively, before the war. After supplies from Malaya and the East Indies were cut off, the development of derris culture in Central and South America was given impetus.

Rotenone is an organic compound toxic to many insects and poisonous to fish, but is not considered harmful to man in dilutions sufficient to kill insects. This makes possible the use of the ground derris or cube root on leafy vegetables. The roots are usually ground sufficiently fine so that most of the powder will pass through a 200-mesh screen, and it is used in diluted form. Ground rotenone-bearing roots, however, may irritate tender skin and the mucous membranes. Both the spray and dust methods are used in treating infested plants.

The most important uses of rotenone root powder are on vegetables, fruits and flowers to control the Mexican bean beetle, cabbage caterpillars, cucumber beetles, the pea aphis, the pea weevil, the asparagus beetle, flea beetles, the cherry fruitfly, the currant worm, rose slugs, the Japanese beetle, spittle bugs on strawberries, and the iris thrips.

In combination with pyrethrum extract and sulfonated castor oil rotenone is also effective against red spiders, thrips (except the gladiolus thrips), aphids, cucumber beetles, tarnished plant bugs, certain species of leaf rollers, and leaf tiers.

The department of agriculture reports that properly packaged and stored ground roots containing rotenone do not deteriorate appreciably for several years. Deterioration was also not found when the ground roots were diluted with inert carriers like pyrophyllite, neutral talc, or powdered plant products and placed in closed containers in a dark, dry room.

Imports of rotenone-bearing roots into the United States had reached a total of eight million pounds in 1941, showing a rapid increase over the preceding five-year period. With the extension of the use of rotenone insecticides through experiments by entomologists, a further upward movement in demand may be anticipated. Already, development of the rotenone industry in the Latin American countries has reached such proportions that the southern nations are establishing their own experiment stations for the further study of these root crops.

Better Grade Chicks Sell

Quickly, Say Experts Poultrymen who make up their minds early to buy good chicks are the ones who get the birds with the ability to lay eggs, says Prof. L. E. Weaver of the New York State college of agriculture. Though the chick market is not as crowded as last year, the better chicks are selling fast, and late buyers have to take whatever is offered.

While chick buying is somewhat a gamble, the grower who buys from a hatchery that has given him good birds before, has a good chance to get good stock.

Other pointers on buying are to purchase only from hatcheries that follow an effective pullorum control program to reduce chick losses; and buy only from dealers whose chicks do not produce birds with heavy losses from big livers, fowl paralysis, or blindness. Chicks from flocks that show little of these diseases are usually more resistant.

Rabbiteye Blueberries

Rapidly Gaining Favor Harvesting blueberries from a step-ladder is not unusual in Georgia and Florida. The tall and prolific "rabbiteye" blueberries, rapidly coming into favor, are responsible. Yields of 2,000 quarts of berries per acre are not exceptional, and the variety grows faster as well as higher than other species, say the horticulturists. One-year shoots 60 inches high are common in well-fertilized fields, it is reported, and mature bushes often reach 15 feet. Valuable for home and market fruit, the rabbiteye blueberry also helps control erosion by means of its many fine, fibrous roots close to the ground surface which help anchor the soil.

New Variety of Pumpkin

Is Being Developed

A small-fruited, bush-type pumpkin suitable for small gardens has been developed by plant breeders of the U.S. department of agriculture. Seed will be available for general planting in 1945, according to present plans. This is the first bush pumpkin adapted to the usual pumpkin uses, and resembles the small sugar pumpkin. It is called Cheyenne, from the field station at Cheyenne, Wyo.

Army Fliers Take 25,000 Pictures to Chart Vast Territory.

Geological Survey Maps North

Northern Alaska, last American frontier and possible postwar bonanza of untold mineral resources, is beginning to yield up some of its enigmatic secrets to the modern flying map makers of the army air forces and the geological Vast stretches of Arctic Alaskan territory, much of it hitherto unobserved by the human eye since the beginning of time, soon will be revealed on a map showing topographic data similar to those published of Virginia or Texas, but in smaller scale. It will show nameless rivers that have been meandering toward the Arctic ocean for untold centuries. It will reveal possible sites for airports, when that part of the world becomes the logical air coute between the United States and Moscow or Asiatic cities. It will disclose apparent tundra - covered wastes that may provide a tip-off to tomorrow's prospectors.

The northern Alaska mapping job, now nearing completion, constitutes the largest area ever mapped and fixed in geographic position as a single unit. It is a part of the joint photographic Tri-Metrogon aerial napping program of the army air forces and the geological survey which was initiated in 1941. Since then this modern counterpart of the Lewis and Clark expedition has napped over 5,000,000 square miles of the earth's surface in various parts of the world for war purposes. But instead of trudging laboriously through primeval forests and over lesert wastes, these present-day aerial map makers have done their field work by thundering over their objectives in Flying Fortresses and Liberator bombers. The crew of one of these planes can photograph 20,000 square miles in three hours.

The northern Alaska map covers approximately 292,000 square miles of territory, four-fifths of which previously had been virtually unmapped. This is as much as the combined areas of all the New Engand states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, plus New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee. It includes the area extending from the mouth of the Mackenzie river, in Canada, westward to the Arctic waters separating Alaska and Siberia, southward to Fairbanks and northward to Point Barrow.

To provide the survey's map-making experts with the necessary "raw materials" the army air force fliers, using planes specially equipped with Tri-Metrogon cameras, took approximately 25,000 photographs from over 8,000 exposure stations.

Ginger Came to Americas From Asia in 16th Century

As early as the 16th century, the ginger plant was brought to the western hemisphere and its root exported to Europe in large quantities. Brought from the Far East that supplied most of our spice needs before Pearl Harbor, this plant readily adapted itself to the soils and climate of the Central American countries. Easily cultivated, it yields 700 to 1,500 pounds of dried spice per acre in one year.

Others of the spice family-cinnamon, capsicum, cardamon, nutmeg, mace, clove, pepper, allspice-probably can also be transplanted to Central America, which has soil similar to that of the Far East.

This portion of an unnamed 50-mile-long glacier in the interior of Northern Alaska was snapped by an army air force photographer working in conjunction with the U.S. geological survey as part of the aerial mapping of an area of 292,000 square miles. Three cameras are used, pointed to cover everything from horizon to horizon in one synchronized shot. Two cameras are set oblique right and left, while the center one is exactly vertical. The photo shown was taken by the left camera. The glacier runs toward the Arctic ocean.

Laid edge to edge, the photographs | poses are taken with three widethemselves would extend over a quarter of an acre of ground. The map, according to Embry Wrather, director of the survey, has just passed the "laydown" stage, which means that the key points shown on the photographs have been transferred in proper geographic relationship by means of a series of intricate calculations with mechanical appliances, to a cellulose acetate base. To this base the delineations of streams, topographical and cultural features of landscape are transferred and the names of known places added. The photographic points are fixed on the acetate base by the use of metal templets, which are used to obtain a mechanical simultaneous adjustment of the key points in the whole unit area so they in proper relationship to the few points of known latitude and longitude which fix the laydown.

Tri-Metrogon mapping from aerial photographs is a highly intricate and scientific process. It provides maps of adequate detail with many times the speed required by previously available methods. While the old and slower method can provide a greater amount of detail, the Tri-Metrogon system affords many advantages.

From taking the original photographs to the final product there are several stages, each requiring the most exacting and painstaking application of scientific instruments in the hands of experienced technicians. Some of these instruments have had to be originated and developed by scientists of the geological survey and the AAF before the job could be done.

FIRESTONE traction bars are built into the tread of a farm tractor tire to serve just one purpose. That purpose is to give traction.

Because the traction bar is the source of pulling power of tractor tires, it is obvious that greater traction bar length gives greater traction. By the same token, a shortened traction bar design, such as the broken center, gives less traction.

Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tires provide up to 215 extra inches of traction bar length per tractor at no extra cost. And the bars are joined in the center to form a powerful, triplebraced, leakproof traction unit.
