5th 'Invasion' Bond Campaign Now On

"With the Invasion for Victory now on, more money is needed than ever before in the history of our country," said H. E. Friedman, chairman of the Iosco County War Finance Committee, in a statement announcing the immediate start of the Fifth War Loan Drive. The drive was scheduled to start Monday, July 12, but with "D Day" here the county organization went into immediate action.

Iosco county's quota of the Fifth War Loan is $207,000.00. This includes $133,000.00 to individuals and $74,000.00 to corporations. The present drive for 16 million dollars. All bonds sold and cleared by the Federal reserve during June and July will be counted against the quota.

Mr. Friedman said, "Buy more bonds now than you ever anticipated. With the invasion of Europe now on, our boys must be equipped and protected, and the least we can do is to buy bonds. Let us show our loyalty to our country, and our boys in France, in Italy, in the Pacific Area, and wherever our boys are, which duty to their country has taken them."

Chelsea Hayes, brother of the groom and Michael Gashey, brother of bride, attended the groom. The bride was given away by her father, John Gashey, of Detroit.

The wedding march was played by Mrs. A. W. Colby, and Miss Patricia Braddock sang, "I Love You Truly." After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to the immediate families at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hayes, with a large wedding cake centering the table.

Friday night a miscellaneous shower was given to the young couple at the Grant town hall, where they received many useful gifts. Their many friends wish them a long happy married life.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurtz, pilot of a Flying Fortress, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Eight of his men were killed while fleeing for shelter, and Old 99, with many other Forts, was demolished on the ground. After escaping to Australia, what is left of the squadron flies to Java, where they go on many missions over the Philippines and the Java sea. The Japs learn the weakness of the E model Fortress, but the boys stick a 50-caliber gun in the navigator's compartment. Kurtz senses he is being watched in Java and one night awakens at the glare of a flashlight. The hand that held it also held a dagger. The would-be assassin gets away.

CHAPTER XVII

"We dreamed and prayed for this. And as a matter of fact the Navy did make an attempt. An aircraft tender was loaded with P-40's and started out from Australia. But what happened was just what was feared. Those P-40's were in crates stacked high on her decks, so she had to come clear in—through skies the Jap bombers ruled. She went down with her entire crew and those crated P-40's forty miles off the southwest coast of Java—but I'm sure the Navy was doing the best it could for us with what they had.

"Of course it gave our morale a kick in the belly. Late the next afternoon young Jack Dale (he'd won his spurs in the Philippines with the 17th Pursuit) came in from Gnorro on a personal mission from Major Bud Sprague. When he'd finished it he strayed a few minutes.

"The next night a Navy man who had just got in from our little fleet told me what had happened to the Marblehead and the Houston, those two beautiful cruisers which had been the nucleus of our Asiatic Fleet—helping the Dutch and Australians defend Java. With the rest of the fleet they'd been out in the Java-Sea. When they sighted a Jap recon plane overhead about noon, they knew they were in for trouble. They had no carrier, of course, which could send a fighter up to shoot it down. He said the Jap bombers presently came over them from their bases in Borneo and the Celebes (our bases they had captured) in three waves, spaced about half an hour apart. By skillful maneuvering they dodged the bombs of the first two waves. But the third, which crippled them, caught them just at sundown, and chewed their superstructures into steel spaghetti.

"In the darkness, they were able to crawl away out of range, and the Marblehead eventually got back to the States."

"But troubles of our own were looming ahead. The boys in Navy Patrol Wing 10 came in with the report that their planes on reconnaissance had sighted a force of six Jap transports and five warships headed toward Bali Strait, which divides Java from Bali. They were after the Den Passar airdrome on Bali—our last stepping-stone—having already occupied the airfield at Timor. This was, as maybe you now begin to see, a war of airdromes—Clark, Del Monte, Kendari, Samarinda, Kupang, all of them lost pearls in the United Nations' defenses, and now Den Passar. Next it could only be Malang, KNILM, Gnorro, and Madiun—all we had left on the strand. Seldom in this war did the Japs make a brutal assault; always it was the skillful surgeon's technique—isolate and occupy the airdromes and then you have the country. It was a game we knew well too, but you've got to buy chips before they will deal you a hand, and we didn't have the equipment.

"All I can say is the Dutch and Americans were ready to defend Bali with what we had. Our little surface navies moved in that night to clip them a glancing blow on the run, as they'd done at Macassar Strait, and our submarines did a grand job in the moonlight. The Colonel sent his Fortresses out and down to 5,000, to paste them from the air. We left two transports burning in the moonlight, and a crippled cruiser.

"Next morning it was up to the Air Force alone, because the Navy was too tiny to venture out by day. The Forts went over, of course—in fact everything we had, to smash at those Jap transports as they poured thirty thousand troops onto the beach at Bali. The P-40's were led by Bud Sprague himself. That morning he got his commission as a lieutenant colonel. He paused just before the take-off to scrawl his signature on his papers, but he didn't take time to pretty himself up in his new silver leaves; I guess he was satisfied to die in his old gold ones. Because what they desperately needed was dive bombers, and about all they had was P-40's—a fighter plane which was never built as a stable platform to launch an egg from. But all right, there the job was to do, and so Bud climbed into the cockpit.

"How many passes at the target are we going to make?" someone asked.

"Depends on how many wild hairs I'm sprouting when we get over her," says Bud with a grin, and they were off.

"He led them cold pigeon into that Jap barrage over the Bali beach—Hell!—back here, the people don't know that boy ever did a thing out there—and the other boys saw him go down in on his run—and never come up again. Yet his boys—what are left of them—still like to hope maybe he succeeded in landing on that Bali beach, which looks so nice in the travel folders, and will turn up grinning some day, telling them what a social success he was with the natives.

"But it was pitiful. We lost almost all our dive bombers there, and about half our P-40 fighters. Of course Bud and his gang made the Japs pay ten to one for taking that airfield—but the Japs had it to pay.

"With the Japs holding that Bali field, they could send bombers and fighters into every corner of Java, and we knew it was almost over. But anyway the Forts could now bomb our own field the Japs had taken from us—very convenient, because we knew exactly where everything was.

"When I got back late to the hotel there was that beautiful Dutch girl, the one with the black hair and the pale face which was so wistfully sad in repose. Only there were no sudden little smiles lighting it up now. She was at the table where she and John Robertson usually sat, alone. When she saw me she jumped up and came running across the room. Had I seen John? she wanted to know, in her pretty broken English.

"Out in the lobby they had told me John was missing. He'd been out on reconnaissance patrol in that lumbering slow old Navy flying boat, and there had been two messages from him: 'Many Zeros sighted,' and then about a minute later a final one: 'Zeros closing in.' That left only three of the ones I knew in gallant Patrol Wing 10, Commander Peterson, Bill Hardy, and Duke Campbell. None of them had been able to tell her, and when I looked at her face I found I couldn't either. Because it was the face of someone frozen with fear in a nightmare—so frozen you knew she daren't move to accept the truth if you told her, so I too was afraid.

"In all the evenings that were left (there were not to be many) I avoided that lobby, because it was haunted by a ghost—a pretty, pale, fear-frozen face that came running up to you and asked, with hope forced into a frightened smile, if you had seen John. To me the most frightening ghost of all—the ghost of a dead love which will not die.

"But there's something else that should be told, only I must go back in the story a little. The Army had sent a high ground officer to Surabaya on a special mission of great importance, and with about a million dollars deposited to his credit in the Javische Bank. With this he was to buy and equip with supplies three blockade runners which would carry to Corregidor ammunition, medical supplies, and food for those poor devils on Bataan who were still fighting on. Two of the ships had already left. A third was almost ready to go.

"This officer left Java the twenty-sixth of February. The day after he left, his assistant, a young second lieutenant, called me up in considerable anxiety. His chief, he explained, had paid him the compliment of leaving him in Surabaya in entire charge of completing the arrangements.

"Nothing remained to be done except the most important thing of all: the officer before leaving had been unable to find a radio operator for this last ship. Without one they could not start, because unless they gave a prearranged radio signal when they approached Corregidor, the Rock's guns would blow them to pieces. Could the Air Force possibly let them have a radio operator? Since the mission was a dangerous one, the assistant said he would pay a man who volunteered a bonus out of the money his chief had left in the bank.

"Now asking our Colonel for a radio operator was like asking him for his right arm. But Java was caving in, the situation was tense. Our Colonel hesitated, and then said that while he couldn't order anyone on so dangerous a mission, he thought, even after we explained clearly what it was, we could get a volunteer.

"And we did. We told the men the mission was most dangerous but of the greatest possible service to our country. And out of the line stepped a clean-cut, alert-looking kid called Sergeant Warrenfeltz. Only after this did I tell him of the five-thousand-dollar bonus. We let Warrenfeltz go down and look over the ship, loaded with surgical equipment, food, drugs, and three hundred thousand rounds of .30-caliber ammunition, so that she was practically a floating bomb. He talked to the captain (a Swede) and looked over the Negro and Chinese crew. There were two—one for topside dressed like Javanese natives so the Japs might mistake her for a fishing trawler. Then Warrenfeltz came to me with written orders from the bomber command and I told him the ports of call. They were to slip out at night, down the north coast of Java, through Lombok Strait, then along the Netherlands East Indies, then cut up east of the Celebes, running the Jap blockade into the Philippines till they came to Manila Bay entrance, where they would be challenged by the Rock. And he was to answer on the radio with the proper signal.

"Then he asked what were the other ports of call. So I told him (it makes me creep to repeat it) they were then to run the blockade through the Jap-mandated islands past Guam (now held by the Japs) to Honolulu.

"What else?" asked Warrenfeltz, grinning. He was game for anything. And I told him his third and last port of call would be New York. And then what? he wanted to know. I told him if he got that far, he was to have himself some fun, and I was sitting down now to write him out an order for thirty days' leave.

"He knew what he was getting into. We'd been flying over those waters for months; he knew just how thick the Jap surface ships were, and also that they had hardly a fifty per cent chance of escaping being blown up by a Jap mine just outside the breakwater. Why did he do it? To help those poor devils in the infantry, dying on Bataan. He'd seen the cargo. And then the money—he told me exactly what to do with that, and the message I must send, but we'll come to it later. Of course it was all pretty irregular, paying a man for heroism. Maybe when peace comes, somebody in a swivel chair in Washington will start writing us letters asking us why we did it, and I don't know what we'll say. And then it all ended happily for us, because the money Warrenfeltz was supposed to receive for trying to do what he did was never paid. But that comes later.

"Meanwhile we had other things to worry about. The Japs had put a little landing force ashore on a tiny island sixty miles north of Surabaya, and taken over its radio station.

"They hadn't told us yet," said the Bombardier, "but we smelled it. Rumors were running all over the place that we might evacuate any time now. Madiun, where I was based, was being bombed every day now—we'd go out on a mission and always come back to find craters in our runways. When we'd land, immediately there'd be another alarm and we'd have to hop off the field without servicing the planes or loading more bombs.

"Also, instead of going out to targets in formations, we now were going singly. As soon as we'd get one ship on the ground long enough to get it gassed and bombed up, we'd take off by our little lonesome, dodging Zeros to pick just any target from the countless transports that were swarming off Java. In the last week I got a light cruiser and a transport—blew the end off the transport.

"Mostly we were flying in a mental fog. Rumors! Every day they'd say no, we weren't going to evacuate, because more reinforcements were going to land on the field any day now—even our own maintenance crews were about to land by boat. Then we'd hear their boat had been sunk (it really went on past us to India) and that we were pulling out. Nothing was sure, except the fact that all those Jap ships moving toward Java weren't pleasure yachts, and that we didn't have any reception committee to meet them. On what turned out to be my last day I got my plane loaded with bombs and took off, headed for a huge convoy we'd heard was coming down toward us from Borneo. We met it halfway—the plane ahead of us was already pasting it when we arrived. We came in at 28,000 watching this first ship plunking direct hits on two parallel strings of transports—seventeen in each string, thirty-four in all, with fifteen or twenty naval craft circling them.

PAUL PLEADS FOR A RUN-AWAY SLAVE

LESSON TEXT—Philemon 4-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you.—Ephesians 4:32.

Brotherhood is one of those fine qualities or impulses of the soul of which men like to speak when all is fair and prosperous, and promptly forget in times of distress and struggle. That is just where Christianity shows forth at its best, for it is in the hour of need, sorrow, or affliction that real Christian brotherhood shows its depth and durability.

Paul was in prison when he wrote to Philemon. The one of whom he wrote, Onesimus, was a slave who had deserted his master and probably defrauded him (v. 18). He had been converted, and now was being sent back to his master. So we have three Christian men dealing with a very delicate matter, and providing us a picture of brotherhood in action. We learn that it is—

I. Courteous (vv. 4-9).
After a fine spiritual salutation, Paul enters upon an appeal to Philemon which is a model of tact and courtesy. One could wish that those who think that being faithful to the Lord and true to His Word means being blunt and unkind, would learn of Paul.

First he lets Philemon know of his prayerful interest in him. Paul had been praying for him, that's why he could say such a helpful word. Praying for our fellow man prepares us for genuine brotherly love.

Then he recognizes Philemon's goodness, and his effective testimony for Christ. This is an excellent approach to the making of a request, but be sure that it was not empty or hypocritical flattery. We do well to recognize the fine qualities of our Christian brother, and we could profitably speak of them more than we do.

Then Paul was ready to make his request. See how nicely he does it. He skillfully reminds Philemon that he might make some demands, and especially in view of his age and his imprisonment. But he will not do so, rather he says, "I beseech thee." There is fine Christian courtesy.

II. Considerate (vv. 10-16).
Paul, the aged prisoner, had found in his new convert, Onesimus, a real helper. He would have liked to keep him. In fact, says he to Philemon, Onesimus could do for me the things you would want to do if you were here (v. 13).

Undoubtedly Paul could have been sure of the willingness of Philemon. He could have assumed that the request would be granted. And in any case, Philemon did not even know where Onesimus was, so why not keep him?

True Christian consideration respects the personal rights and the property rights of another. We must not assume, or demand, or put pressure on anyone (v. 14) to get what they have or to draw out their service.

Another expression of consideration is found in verses 15 and 16. Philemon had lost a heathen slave, now he is receiving back a Christian brother. No worker will give less in service, and no master will demand more, because the two are both Christians. We need to recognize that fact, for all too often men presume on their relationship as brethren. But the fact that they are Christians should make a great difference in their attitude toward one another.

III. Cooperative (vv. 17-21).
Partners share the benefits and the burdens of their joint enterprise. Partners in the gospel, like Paul and Philemon, shared not only spiritual blessings, but also the responsibilities. Paul was presenting such an item to Philemon in the return of Onesimus. Something had to be done about the debt of Onesimus, his failure as a servant. Paul says, "Charge it to me, your partner."

It has been pointed out that there is here a blessed example of the important doctrine of imputation, which is the "act of God whereby He accounts righteousness to the believer in Christ," because He "has borne the believer's sins in vindication of the law." So we note that verses 17 and 18 perfectly illustrate imputation.

Paul's promise "I will repay it" (v. 19) was the legal phraseology of a promissory note in his day. It was a bona fide partnership transaction, yet it was coupled with a reminder of indebtedness. Everything Philemon had and was he owed to Paul; but, says the latter, "I will not speak of that now." Consideration again, but opening the door wide for Philemon's cooperation.

No right thinking person is content always to be on the receiving hand. The humblest recipient of favor or the smallest child who feels the love of another wants to respond. The considerate friend will, therefore, not always insist on giving, but will graciously (like Paul) open the way for cooperation, for partnership.

And Then—
Leaning out of his cabin, the burly lorry-driver abused the young man in the stalled car. The fair passenger in the car stood it as long as she could. Then she asked:
"I say, Jack, surely you're going to say something to that lout?"
"You bet I am!" replied the boy friend. "Just wait till I get this blinking car started!"

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Maintenance of our synthetic rubber plants after the war as "a rubber insurance policy" is advocated by leading rubber authorities. They hold that the U. S. cannot be adequately prepared at all times to defend its national interest unless it is free from the threat of a rubber shortage, a feeling subscribed to by most thinking Americans.

World capacities for producing natural and synthetic rubber after the war will aggregate nearly 2,800,000 tons yearly, predicts John L. Collyer, president of B. F. Goodrich. This is more than twice as much as the world has ever used in any one year.

4 GOOD REASONS

FOR THE TELEPHONE SHORTAGE

THIS is the inside of a Navy Patrol Bomber. All four men are using telephone equipment. Consider that this country is building over 100,000 planes of all types every year, and you get some idea of wartime telephone needs in the air alone.

Land and sea forces use far greater quantities of communications equipment... must have more and more as time goes on.

Naturally, it has become increasingly difficult to fill telephone service requests here at home. In supplying a quarter of a million more telephones since the beginning of the Defense program, our reserve facilities have been about used up. Orders for telephones essential to the war effort are filled promptly. Other requests for new service are handled under a definite procedure as present users give up service. But there is a long and growing waiting list.

We are confident you want war needs to be met ahead of all else. If you are inconvenienced, we trust you will understand.

Orchard 'Alarm Clock' Rescues Cherry Crop

Remembering he suffered an 85 per cent loss of his crop last year, due to late frost, E. Lee Goldsborough rigged his cherry orchard with a Friez thermostat which sounds an alarm in his bedroom the moment the mercury falls to 30 degrees. Thus with a two-degree margin—an entire crop can be lost an hour after the temperature reaches 28—Goldsborough is able to rouse his orchard workers to light some 400 heater or "smudge" pots to meet the frost threat. Goldsborough worked out his frost problem with engineers of the Friez Instrument division of the Bendix Aviation corporation of Baltimore, Md., who suggested a specially calibrated thermostat, similar to those used in homes.

Every spring day while his trees are in bloom, Goldsborough goes out and checks his thermostat, making sure that it is set to warn him at the first signs of freezing weather.

When the bell in his bedroom is rung by the thermostat, Goldsborough knows it is time for action. Dressing quickly, he calls his helpers, and goes to the orchard.

Before the frost has a chance to do any damage, Goldsborough and his men have lighted 400 smudge pots in the orchard. These give off enough heat to prevent freezing of the delicate cherry blossoms unless the cold snap is extremely severe.

HOW DO YOU FEEL ABOUT FELT?

We feel pretty keen about the tricks that teens are doing with odd bits of felt. So-o salvage those old hats and work some of these felt fancies out for yourself. And, while we're on the subject, you can now buy bits of felt all packaged and ready to sew on your duds in dreamy designs. Where? At your favorite dime or department store.

BUTTERFLY BOOM—It's easy to cut butterfly shapes out of odd bits of felt. Decorate them with beads or buttons; use pieces of pipe cleaners for the "feelers." Wear them in your hair or on your lapel.

ON YOUR TOES—Now that you can no longer buy little leather flowers or bows for your shoes (a WPB conservation measure), why not make your own toe trimmers out of felt in the shape of flower clusters? Clip or paste 'em on for twinkling toes.

PRETTY PATCHES—Is your sweater torn in the elbow? Are your jeans weak in the knees? Patch them with felt cut in amusing shapes. They will be as good as new—only better.

PURSE POCKET—Make a pocket shaped purse out of felt and pin it to your belt or lapel. Handy for carrying primp-stuff and carfare. Embroider your name or initials on it. Cute idea for gifts, too.

VICTORY WARSAGE—Instead of making a lapel corsage of flowers, cut vegetable shapes out of felt and wear them as a Victory Garden "Warsage." (Lots of girls are wearing real vegetables on their lapels these days, too. Carrots and peas would look Dee-Vine on your new green and white T shirt.)

Daily Doilies

That's a silly title, isn't it? But who ever said we made much sense? Who'd like us if we did? We're talking about the tricks you can work out with those lacy paper doilies—the kind Mother puts on the cake plate under the cake. (If it's chocolate, we'll take a slice, please.)

PAINT JOB—Lots of girls are glamorizing paper doilies by painting them in vari-color effect before they use them as hair bows on bobby pins. A pastel melange is luscious looking.

NOSEGAY NEWS—You can make a dainty nosegay—very Gone-With-the-Wind—with a paper doily and a flower. Just shirr the doily into a ruffy effect. Wear in your hair or on your lapel—or both places. Use the small size doily for this.

DECORATE WITH DOILIES—Paste photos of your friends (or favorite band singers and such) on paper doilies so that the lacy parts form frames. Then tack on your bed room walls. How about cutting doilies in half and pasting them around your bureau mirror for a lacy scallop border?

Hair-Do's

Lots of girls write us about experimenting with new hair-do's when they go to "slumber parties" (you know, the all-girl gatherings that spend the night at one girl's house to do everything but slumber). Here are a few to try on yourself and your chums the next time you get together.

LACED UP THE BACK—Make two rows of pin curls down the back of your head to look like eyelets. Then take a long piece of narrow ribbon and fasten it to each pin curl to look like lacing. Tie a bow at the bottom.

Roots

The trees have their roots in the friendly soil. From which they draw sustenance. The grain has its roots

Where the workers toil, In the field with its rich expanse. The plants have their roots In the soft brown earth, In the fertile and kindly loam. Their roots are in places That gave them birth— But man has his roots in home. The flowers have roots In the garden green— In the plottings along the path; All hidden away from the harsh and mean. Secure from the storm king's wrath. The lilacs have roots By the porch's side, From which they draw lovely chrome. And there in calm peace They would fain abide, Like man, with his roots in home. All things have their roots In something sure, Below, under heaven's dome; The trees and the bushes On fen and moor— But man has his roots in home.

Leatherneck's Bath

The scoop of a dragline shovel serves as a shower tank for Lieut. Arthur Carter on sticky New Britain. Lieutenant Carter is a photographer who made front line movies of the marine invasion of Cape Gloucester.

Naval 'Atlas'

Imitating Atlas, Lloyd C. Russell balances the big pushball used in the physical fitness classes at the naval training station at Farragut, Idaho. He is serving his second enlistment in the navy as he was a ship's cook in 1918. Nine of his nephews are in service.

Even in Victory Gardens

Rotation Is Wise Rule

Annual rotation of the garden site for crops of the same plant family will prevent much of the trouble with the many common plant diseases that live through the winter in the garden soil or in the remains of last year's crops.

Cabbage, tomatoes, peas and melons are among the common garden crops that should be planted in a different part of the garden each year. As crops of the same plant family are usually susceptible to the same diseases, all crops of one family may well be planted together each year. Cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, and brussels sprouts are all susceptible to club root. Little would be gained by planting cabbage where broccoli grew last season. Tomatoes, eggplant, and peppers have common pests, so eggplant might not do well if planted in last year's tomato patch.

Seed must also be free of disease. As several different seed treatments for seed-borne diseases are needed for different crops, the gardener usually finds it best to buy treated seed.

Gardeners who have their crops in the back yard usually find room about the yard and grounds for perennial as well as annual flowers. The victory gardener who has part of a community plot, or rents a vacant lot, naturally wants no perennials. But he may find that a few annual flowers in the garden take little time and return much in enjoyment and in cut flowers for the home.

A few rows of annual flowers in the garden are as easy to take care of as vegetables.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

Think about the kind of weather you'll meet when you follow your husband to his army post or navy base. Take enough things with you to tide you over a change of season. The real veterans of this sort of "camp following" have found out duffel bags are good things to own. They are easy to pack and cheap to ship. They also advise that you shop at the commissary to save money on your groceries. Keep a small hoard of travelers' checks for emergency use.

Efficient Feeding Gets Better Results

Careful Management Needed to Meet Goals

Increased efficiency can solve part of the 1944 livestock and poultry feeding problem, according to War Food administration officials.

During 1942-43, about 28 per cent more feed concentrates was employed than during 1941-42, but output of livestock products increased by only 13 per cent.

Officials point out that if the rate of feeding can be held midway between the two-thirds of a ton of concentrates per livestock unit fed during 1941-42 and the three-fourths of a ton fed during 1942-43, production goals of 1944 should be achieved with use of only 140.7 million tons of feed concentrates. This would be about 7 million tons less than last year's feeding.

Suggestions made by department of agriculture officials with regard to feeding efficiency include: Light hogs can be produced with less feed per pound than heavy hogs; more eggs can be produced with less feed by culling out more of the non-layers and keeping a larger percentage of pullets; beef cattle should be fed shorter and lighter; and more dependence should be placed on roughage for cattle and sheep.

Experts urge elimination of crowded farm conditions wherever possible. With many farmers raising more corn and soybeans, for example, less pasture is available and resulting crowded conditions contribute to disease and to death loss among animals and poultry.

Farmers in feed surplus areas have been urged to produce the commodities they can produce best and to adjust their livestock operations to a level that will enable the shipment of some surplus feed to the farmers in deficit-feed areas.

"Have you noticed a difference in this clover since the boss started using phosphates and lime?"

Yearling Heifers Thrive

On Plenty of Roughage

Heifers, like older cows, are capable of utilizing large amounts of roughage. Dr. George E. Taylor, extension dairyman at Rutgers U., says that feeding heifers all the roughage they will eat is a grain-saving practice worth considering.

"Yearling heifers can be successfully raised on roughage alone from one year of age to two months prior to freshening," Dr. Taylor reports. "During summer, heifers must be provided abundant pasture in order to make good gains on pasture alone. This can best be done by a system of rotation grazing. A large group of Holstein and Guernsey heifers at the New Jersey Dairy Research farm, Sussex county, averaged a gain of one and a fifth pounds per day on pasture alone. Holsteins gained an average of one and a half pounds and Guernseys one pound."

"In winter, the same group of heifers on hay and silage alone gained from a fifth of a pound to one pound a day. During the entire period, the heifers were normal and carried plenty of flesh."

Heifers under one year of age must be fed some grain to grow normally. The required amount depends upon the quality of roughage fed. However, baby calves can be raised on a minimum amount of milk and changed to dry feed at five to six weeks of age, resulting in a saving of both milk and grain.

"Some dairymen may be tempted to discontinue raising heifers in order to conserve grain," Dr. Taylor says, "but this would be a short-sighted program from the standpoint of the future dairy industry. However, do not waste feed by raising poor heifers. Select only the best heifers for replacements."

Farm Notes

The best way of turning a cow dry is to reduce the amount of feed and, when necessary, limit the amount of water and simply stop milking.

Enough butter has been allocated by the War Food administration to give civilians during 1944 slightly more than a pound a month per capita, a total of 76 pounds out of every 100 pounds of creamery and farm butter available.

Gene Sarazen, one of the few professional golfers known for his ability and willingness to express himself, is emphatic in the belief that golf is due for some of the greatest changes ever known to a sport.

He made his feelings quite clear recently upon the completion of a tour of army camps.

"They're using golf now as a main feature of a program for the rehabilitation of the soldier, and that means we'll have thousands of new golfers around the landscape. With the influx of new players, the great change is bound to come."

Specifically, Sarazen stated that the days of swanky country clubs, with costly initiation fees and stiff dues, will be a thing of the past within a few years after the war is over. Only a comparative few country clubs will be left. Golf will be brought to the little fellow, and the few remaining private clubs will have to encourage public courses to provide "feeders" for membership roles.

We string along with Sarazen in this matter. Quite a few of the ultra-ultra courses are almost devoid of players and only a few miles away the public fee courses are crowded.

This is not a criticism of private courses. There is no reason to criticize them. But the handwriting is on the wall—the public course is coming into its own. The private course has seen its best days. The reason, as usual, is financial. During the past few decades golf has been an expensive game. The laborer and the white collar worker haven't, for the most part, been able to afford to play.

The most serious blow to expensive golf layouts came with the depression. The rich failed to get richer and the treasures of all too many clubs were exhausted. Memberships declined and were slow to pick up again. The demand for daily fee courses continued to grow.

Another change is due—the cost of playing the game will be reduced. Sarazen has his own ideas on that score:

"There is no reason why a set of clubs for the average golfer should cost more than $30. They don't have to be hickory-headed clubs. What's wrong with glass heads, plastics and things like that? The price of balls will have to be cut. The new crop of golfers will demand these things—and get them."

About Leo Diegel

Sarazen's reference to golf's role in the rehabilitation of the soldier brings to mind the case of Leo Diegel, another well known professional.

Diegel has suggested a plan for the rehabilitation of the wounded and the mentally ill to the PGA, the paid golfers' union. His plan came from the British, who have found that golf has a psychological and therapeutic value that does not exist in any other sport.

"It won't be long before we'll have our share of these cases," reasoned Diegel, "so why not be prepared for the inevitable?"

The result is that the first golf course designed for convalescents is now nearing completion. It is a nine-hole course on the grounds of the Valley Forge General hospital, just outside of Philadelphia. The hospital is government owned, but the government supplied only the land. Benefit golf competitions were held to raise money and it wasn't long before Diegel and his helpers had raised enough funds to build the course.

Diegel is the sparkplug of the PGA's efforts to nationalize the idea. The plan is simple. The PGA would serve as the planning unit—the clearing house—and local groups would take over, just as in Philadelphia. Once the units were completed they would become a government operation.

Very little thought has been given to sports as a healing agency. The emphasis has been on sports for morale. The government is beginning to realize the value of athletics as a rehabilitation agent and several programs have been put into effect.

But it wasn't until Leo Diegel got underway that golf got any official attention.

SPORTS SHORTS

☛ Nashville's ball park is named Sulphur Dell.

☛ Roger Downs, former Northwestern university tennis star who won the Big Ten singles championship in 1943, has been commissioned an ensign in the navy air station at Richmond, Fla.

☛ A golfer named Chester Lestman once holed out successive tee shots on the 151-yard first and 235-yard second holes of Detroit's Fair Hills course. He scored 34 for the first nine.

SEVEN-COME-ELEVEN

Maybe war leaders are superstitious or maybe there is something to the old seven-come-eleven system for shaking the dice. Anyway, Stanley Arnold of Cleveland has worked out a calendar of the war showing that every significant event has happened on either the seventh or eleventh of the month. Here is the calendar:

- Pearl HarborDec. 7, 1941
- Declaration of war on Germany and Italy.....Dec. 11, 1941
- Fall of Guam.....Dec. 11, 1941
- Fall of Wake.....Dec. 11, 1941
- Invasion of Singapore.....Feb. 11, 1942
- Fall of Corregidor.....May 7, 1942
- Invasion of Kiska.....June 7, 1942
- Invasion of Guadalcanal.....Aug. 7, 1942
- Invasion of No. Africa.....Nov. 7, 1942
- Invasion of unoccupied France.....Nov. 11, 1942
- Retaking of Tunis and Bizerte.....May 7, 1943
- Retaking of Attu.....May 11, 1943
- Fall of Pantelleria.....June 11, 1943

Finally Mr. Arnold points out that the recent renewed attack on Italy started May 11 at 11 p. m.

BREWSTER AXED

The navy has decided that the controversial Brewster Aeronautical corporation will be the first to feel the axe of discontinued war production.

This is good news for the country in that it means that war losses of airplanes are less than expected and that the navy will not need so many replacements. Actually our losses in the Pacific have been about 50 per cent less than estimated.

Also, the news is extremely significant for the airplane industry, because Brewster will be the first big plane company to be turned loose on its own to manufacture commercial planes—if it can get priorities. If it can't get them, it will have to fold.

The Chance Vought company, also making Corsairs (the same type of plane as Brewster), will continue operation, largely because they were the chief pioneers of Corsairs. Also, the Goodyear company will continue, they being about to start on a big new navy plane.

But the Brewster company will now have to fight either for new war contracts or else for priorities for commercial planes. It will be an uphill fight.

NOTE—The Brewster plant near Philadelphia, built with U. S. government funds, will be taken over by the navy and will work on "modification"—in other words, planes that need minor changes. The other Brewster plants around New York will finish up what they are working on and then fold.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

☛ Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Ohio senator, complained that her husband's inside coat pocket bulged out with too many papers. So Burton now has his tailor put an inside pocket on both sides, to distribute the burden.

☛ It never leaked out at the time but, on December 7, 1943, the army was worried over a possible token attack on Pearl Harbor as an anniversary raid. The whole island was alerted for fear the Japs would repeat their original performance.

Eyelet Pique's the Big News For Those Graduation Dresses

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

GRADUATION dresses are very important in the lives of the young and the fair. Never before in the history of fashion has so much emphasis been placed on high-style cottons for both the graduation dress and for bridesmaids' gowns as well, and most brides will be wearing lovely cottons this year.

Nearly every designer of any importance in the country has made sophisticated looking cottons the most eye-compelling feature of her or his collections. The play being made on handsome eyelet embroidered pique for the bride's attendants and for graduation day wear is tremendous.

It is not only that eyelet pique is lovely to the eye—it's wearing and laundering qualities are simply ideal. Then, too, it makes up so easily, requiring no extra trimming details, for the more classically simple its styling, the more attractive it is, in that it is so prettily patterned in itself.

The long dress of eyelet pique herewith illustrated is just such as any fair graduate might covet. It can double as an evening gown too, or a wedding dress, and for a bridesmaid it's adorable. The young graduate pictured shows her loyalty to her alma mater by wearing a sash in her class colors. This prettily bow-knotted sash together with a lovely rose corsage adds just that dash of color which tunes into the joyousness of youth with its rose-colored dreams and ambitions for the future.

There has been much discussion as to whether graduation frocks should be short or floor-length. The answer is that it depends upon the formality of the occasion. The simple little frock shown to the left, made of eyelet lightweight pique (would be pretty in any embroidered sheer cotton) is very appropriate for a simple school affair. This gown demonstrates that embroidered cottons are so interesting in themselves they need very little dressing up with furbelows. It's just careful cutting and fitting and subtle details that is needed to give them the charm that adds to a young girl's "looks." The exquisitely simple styling of this naive shirt-waist model bespeaks youth in its collar ruffle around the U-neck and its pearl studs and various little accents that mean so much to a young girl graduate.

You'll love a dress made of heavy waffle pique that in the longer skirts has a "stand alone" way about it that is most imposing. At an especially smart wedding the bride's attendants wore floor-length gowns of waffle pique that were so outstandingly good-looking you could just tell from the murmur of admiration that swept through the fashionable gathering that a new vogue was in the making. The piece de resistance of these distinguished gowns of primly starched waffle pique were their simulated yoke tops (there were no actual set-in yokes as the quaint fitted bodices were cut in one piece) but the eyeleted embroidery was worked in yoke effect which together with the tiny brief embroidered sleeves was too attractive for words. The skirts fell in straight lines being slightly full in portrait fashion. What adorable party frocks these gowns will make this summer!

If you are making your own graduating frock be sure to save every little leftover scrap. You can make corsage flowers of these tidbits, you can make lace-edged bows (in sets of three) to wear down the front of your blouse and scraps of eyelet embroidery can be used as insets for gingham pinafore dresses and such.

Navy and White

About one of the most likable fashions ever devised is that of the navy bolero suit that takes on white or colorful accessories. This year a navy-with-white bolero costume stands at the top of the list as to what's what to wear during the active about-town hours of the day. The suit pictured was shown at a recent "Cover-Girl" luncheon fashion revue. The blouse worn with this bolero suit of navy blue sheer wool, is of white pique embroidered in blue. The belt is of red patent leather combined with navy suede.

Wardrobe of Denims For Home Gardeners

Victory gardeners are buying regular wardrobes all of denim. They learned from experience last season that it takes sturdy denim to see you through all the wear and tear that clothes must take when subjected to wind and weather and working the soil. The list includes overalls, shorts, slacks, pinafores and tool-pocket aprons, jackets and skirts. A winning dress of the season is made of denim cut in the new cleveless manner and buttoning down each side from under the arm to the hem with spanking white flat, round buttons. The new models have enough decorative features to avoid any suggestion of oldtime denims. They are designed to please and to flatter as well as give service. A real "find" in the newer denim collections is a boxy fingertip-length coat, which can be paired with dresses, skirts, shorts and overalls, and it will also serve admirably as a beach coat.

Dainty Batiste 'Nightsies' With Eyelet Embroidery

Interest in lingerie of exquisitely fine cotton batiste is now being revived. The new showings of lovely nightgowns made of fine batiste fascinate women who love the daintiness of exquisite cottons trimmed with eyelet embroidery and dainty lace with a lavishness of fine hand-sewn tucks and ribbon-threaded beading and all the little accents that are so prettily feminine. You can get very attractive gowns moderately priced, or as much as you want to pay for the handmade types.

THERE is a shortage of metal curtain rods, yet for two generations we have not seen such elaborate window treatments. The formal swags, cascades and jabots so dear to our grandmothers seem to be exactly right with the Victorian furniture that is gaining in popularity all the time.

Household Hints

Since dishes must be done three times a day, why not do it the most efficient way? Stacking the dishes on the right, so the work goes from right to left, means greater efficiency for the right-handed housewife. Of course a left-handed worker would reverse this procedure for quicker work.

A small pillow or pad between the knees of a sick patient as he lies on his side can give great relief.

The best way to wash walls or woodwork is to begin at the bottom and work to the top. This avoids streaking where the dirty water would run down and prevents a difficult job of removing such streaks.

Clean children's teddy bears and like toys by rubbing them with corn starch.

Those who wear glasses or goggles know how distressing it is to have the lenses become cloudy and blurred. If they are cleaned every morning with soap and hot water they will seldom need cleaning during the day. Rinse them well and dry with tissue paper or a soft clean absorbent cloth.

When washing baby's bonnet, dry it over an inverted mixing bowl of the proper size. The lacy skull caps of the teen-agers can be reshaped the same way. A plate is good for reshaping the beret style.

American Storks Observe Etiquette When Feasting

American storks (wood ibis) are efficient and polite. When a flock descends on a shallow pond, these birds do a sort of dance to rile the water and force tadpoles and small fish to the surface. As these rise to the top, they are killed by the nearest birds. But only when enough food is floating on the water for the entire flock do the birds begin to feast.

To the People of this Community

The next time you write to your fighting man or fighting woman tell him or her what you have done about the Fifth War Loan. You can take the word of General Eisenhower that your man or woman in uniform will be deeply interested.

Your War Bond buying is a good tip-off to them about the state of affairs in your home. The headlines in this newspaper on the progress of the drive, the items about participating individuals, the character of the Fifth War Loan special events—all these things reflect the morale back home.

Do you like to read a sorry headline about the invasion fronts? Our fighting forces, made up of individuals with the same reactions to good and bad as you, will not be heartened to read: "Fifth War Loan Lags."

Your silence in your letter about your part in the Fifth War Loan will mean non-interest, perhaps non-participation to the recipients. It's up to you to make your letters cheerful. Write today. Write often. Write about your war work, your war support. Double your best previous War Bond buying record and then shout it to the house tops—just to that special service man.
