Vitaminizing On the Farm YOUR LITTLE PILL LAND SAKES! I NEVER FIND TIME TO DO AN MAYBEI'LL TAKE YOU TO

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurtz, pilot of a Flying Fortress, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Eight of his men were killed while fleeing for shel-ser, and Old 99, with many other Forts, was demolished on the ground. After escaping to Australia, what is left of their squadron flies to Java, where they go on many missions over the Philippines, and finally defend Java itself. Java falls to the Japs and the U. S. fliers evacuate to Australia to carry on the war from there. They land on Broome field, which is wrecked by Japs shortly after, but escape to Melbourne. Kurtz becomes pilot of "The Swoose," the air force general's plane.

CHAPTER XXI

"In Australia, the Air Force had to build from the ground up. Before General MacArthur arrived from the Philippines we had located and were building our advance and supply bases all over North Australia from Darwin to Townsville. American engineers were pouring in, and General Brett put them to work. We were also improving Moresby, our problem child, and the Air Force staff had laid down its strategical plan for clearing Australia's northeast shoulder of the threat of Jap air power so that when we had the necessary men and equipment, we could head back into the Philippines.

"The old 19th Bombardment Group was back in business now in North Australia, and beginning in April of that year we were pounding the Jap base at Rabaul in New Britain several times a week.

"Meanwhile the Philippines were tottering. Bataan had fallen; Corregidor seemed about to go; and we were working feverishly to rescue desperately needed Air Force personnel from Del Monte Field on Mindanao. Al Mueller, who was now flying a transport, told me of his last trip in. He said the place looked so shaky he was scared even to be looking that way now. It was a seventeen - hundred - mile flight, and there was a chance that there might not be enough gas left at Del Monte to get him back to Australia. But the pilots, navigators, and ground crews still on Mindanao were worth their weight in gold to us, so Al start-

"He got right over Del Monte Field. Things looked quiet on the ground, and he was circling, waiting for the signal to come on in, which for some reason seemed de-layed. Circling, Al couldn't understand this until from Australia, seventeen hundred miles away, crackles a radio message telling him under no circumstances to land. Corregidor and Mindanao had surrendered to the Japanese while he had been en route.

"There he was, eight hours from home base and with only a few hours' gas left. But luckily he'd provided against this before he left. He'd told the Navy that if the Philippines caved while he was in the air and he couldn't refuel at Mindanao, he'd beach his plane on a little jungle island, and he showed it to them on the map, so they could pick him up if they could get through.

"Now he headed for this island, looked its beach over, and set her down in the surf. The rocks in a few seconds made junk of his big four-motored Liberator.

"Then, according to Al, the days seemed like years, although only five of them passed before a submarine periscope popped up in the cove and carefully scanned the horizon for Jap planes before the craft surfaced to take him and his crew

"During March the hot spot was Darwin, which the Aussies called the Coventry of Australia because the Japanese had come over on February nineteenth and not only flattened its little town of four thousand but on the airfield wiped out an American fighter group en route to the Java war.

"At that time it was only a little Australian field with almost no antiaircraft. The RAAF boys were good | The battery was operated by an old lads, trying hard but getting nowhere, lacking both training and equipment.

The American fighter group perched on that field, which 'Slugger' Pell was leading toward Java, had no warning until they heard the sound of the Jap motors. Slugger wanted to save his planes if he could, so instead of diving for the foxholes (the Japs were already strafing) he tried desperately to get his boys off.

"Slugger was shot down at 50 feet while his landing gear was still retracting, and before he'd had time to drop his belly tank. He tried to bail out, but of course he was too low. A previous squadron had actually managed to get into the air, but Slugger's were all either shot down on the take-off or killed in their cockpits before they cleared the runway, or else strafed and set afire while they were taxiing into position. It had been a field day for the "Word now came through that a force of ten Jap bombers and three fighters was on its way to Darwin. It was what Squeeze had been waiting for. He hit them far out at sea. Squeeze has a clever tactical detail. But as the Japs approached gas long before they got to the tar- reason for returning. their target, our patrols pulled the get.

rest of the American fighter strength | off the ground. While one of our flights chased off the accompanying Zeros, the rest of the boys were picking off Jap bombers, which were sliding out of formation and going down trailing smoke. They all had to turn off before reaching the target, dump their bombs in the sea, and head back for their base at Kupang on Timor Island-one of the steppingstones to Java they'd taken away from us. But Squeeze and his gang followed them out to sea, and shot down every one of the ten bombers. Our boys returned without a man wounded or a plane scratched.

"'You know,' said Squeeze, 'if we don't look out, we're going to make the air a safe place for Americans!'

"And after all those months of defeat, we were almost afraid to believe it. But two days later the Japs came back from Kupang with a real force—thirty-three bombers protected by eleven fighters. Again we were ready. It was a beautiful day, the sky clear as a bell, and again Squeeze tore into the whole Jap V formation far at sea. He attacked in elements, and each time he hit, another Mitsubishi would go spinning down in smoke, or else would sag below the V with engine trouble, lagging so that the next American element could pick him off. We found Jap bombers are lightly constructed, and can't soak up much punishment from our heavy .50-caliber guns-can't take the pounding our Forts can. Meanwhile the second American flight was taking care of the eleven escorting Zeros. The boys had paired off and were whirling over and over in their squirrel cages, a Jap and an American to each cage, while the first flight kept up the heavy cleaver work-chopping into that bomber V from behind, or sometimes going out ahead of it to turn and come in for a bust on its nose. They were forcing it lower-when they'd peel off and come in for a pass, it was fun watching both motors light up.

"A good many Jap bombers got over the target, but you couldn't call it a bomb run. Most of their bombs went wild, as always happens in a disrupted attack, and many others salvoed their bombs in the desert so they could run away. But those which did get over Darwin ran into Bofors ack-ack fire. Crete gang of Aussies-the toughest hombres in the business-and the American P-40's had pushed the Jap bombers so low that the ack-ack could really rip into them. They were between that cleaver in the air and a buzz saw on the ground. Two or three Jap bombers dribbled right down onto the field, whole wings shot off or else blown into confetti. The Japs tried to use their chutes from the burning bomberswhich should explode the fairy tale that Japs are too fanatical to use chutes-yet even they caught fire.

"Most of the first Jap bomber flight got over Darwin, but only part of the second, while the third jettisoned its bombs and ran like hell for Kupang.

"You see the estimated range of a Zero using belly tanks is about twelve hundred miles. It's five hundred and ten miles from Kupang to Darwin, and to go and return is a thousand and twenty miles. That antiaircraft fire. leaves a tiny safety margin that is more than used up if the Zero has to do any fighting en route. "Also by first hitting the Japs far out at sea, Squeeze forced them to drop their belly tanks-they can't fight while carrying them-and beidea which I shouldn't describe in gin using their precious wing-tank it down twice, but now he had a

"All through the Australian war our fighters must have knocked off hundreds of Zeros which we've never claimed. We fight them until their gas is almost gone, and when they finally break away and start for home, they slide quietly into the sea with dry tanks. "Those fighters at Darwin are a great gang of kids, and they've invented their own service uniform, which might not pass parade inspection back here. It consists of a long duck-billed hunter's cap, usually red, plus a pair of white cotton shorts and nothing much else. They don't like clothes because of the fire hazard-cloth soaks up spurting gasoline, which will drop off naked flesh. They won't wear ordinary shoes. This started when one of them had to bail out in the desert back of Darwin and when his chute cracked open, the jerk flipped his shoes off. He had to walk barefoot for days over the Australian desert. Now they wear tennis shoes or cowboy boots, which won't flip off. This costume includes a belt, to which is attached a jungle kit on one side and a .45 on the other. The .45 they keep covered with cellophane candy-bar wrappers so it won't rust. They look more like pirates than pilots, and so did the ones at Mores-

"When General Brett put Buzz in charge of the Moresby-Townsville fighters, he didn't issue an order for Buzz to stay on the ground at his desk in Pursuit Interceptor Command Headquarters at Townsville, but in a nice way he unofficially re-

"But Buzz was itching at the paper work. He was a fighter, not a desk man. And at Moresby he had new youngsters just in from the States. Their morale was low. They'd been having an awful time with the weather, and also the Japs had been coming in and sheeting up the place, catching these kids in the air and picking off too many. They needed someone to show them how to handle a P-39 Airacobra against the Zero-both planes have their

"So one day when he's up 'inspecting' Moresby-he spent most of his time there-without any formallty Buzz steps into a P-39 and leads them. They were all agog. They've heard of the Great Wagner, but they aren't sure the stories of what he'd done in the Philippines mightn't be

"He led twelve of them out above New Guinea, over the Owen Stanley range, on a mission in the direction of the big Jap base at Lae, from which they were returning over the ocean when they ran into a Japa-

"The Japs had a flight of Zeros circling a spot which our boys must pass on their homeward leg. Buzz said it was partly his fault for not having told his gang of twelve to refrain from combat on this homeward leg, because they needed all near-by base.

"But when the two end men the flight saw the Japs, they peeled off, and Buzz saw he'd have trouble holding the rest, so he gave the signal over the phones to go on in. Buzz said it was a lovely battlethe whole argument rolled thirty miles up the beach and then thirty miles back again, like a big tumbleweed on the prairie. Buzz shot down three Japs himself, and his wing men two-a total of five Japs for the day. We gave three planes to get them (one was forced down gasless), but we didn't lose a pilot on that flight.

"That did the business for those green, scared kids. When they saw Buzz's gunsights trained on a Zero, watched his .50-caliber chewing it up right in front of them, they realized it could be done, and, more important, they saw they had a leader -which was all they needed to put them back in business.

"That night, sitting with me under the mosquito-netting canopy we'd thrown over the wing of the Swoose. was the first time I saw Buzz really worried. Because when General Brett found out about this, what would he say? Buzz was worried that the General would not only request him to stay on the ground, he'd make it an order in writing, and then the fun would be over.

"Buzz was twenty-six years old, and he hadn't gone up just to hang three more on his record, but because he really loved it. But he said in the future he thought rather than risk an order grounding him, he'd stay out of combat with Zeros and confine his activities to developing mast - high bombing attacks against transports. He thought his kids should all be trained to do it, and he'd done a lot himself. You come in low and horizontal in a pursuit, and just before you're on her you release your little wing bomb so that it slaps right against the transport's side at the water line. Then quick you pull up out of the

Sun or Sea Will Not Harm These Bright Dressmaker Swim Suits

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

OT FOR many a season have swim suits been so diversified in matter of both fabric and styling. The news-important this year-is that of color-bright prints for dressmaker-styled bathing and beach suits, together with the reassuring message that the colors will remain gay and lovely regardless of exposure to sun or waves or repeated subjection to suds.

The flower-bright pique is just about the smartest thing going in the swimming realm this summer. See it, as pictured here, made up in a stunning suit and parasol ensemble. It certainly is good news to be assured that the lovely pique print that fashions this charming twosome will hold good as new through every test of sea-wave and

The pretty parasol deserves a paragraph all its own, for the latest news is that of matching parasols teamed with play frocks, afternoon prints, and blouses. Sometimes handbag and parasol are made of identical print.

It's the dependable wearableness that counts in swim suits. If you buy a suit made of everfast processed their gas to get back, while the gingham such as fashions the cun-Japs were freshly fueled from a ning model centered in the picture, you can do so with every confidence, for in these days of miracle prints that do not fade, you know from their labelling that they will take the sun and sea with bravado. The elements will do no harm to the proud plaid colors. Such beach clothes as these are wearable season after season as well as dip

The pert little bare-midriff suit to the right is one of the reasons why cotton gingham is destined to be the belle of the beach this summer. The skirt is pleated onto a wide hip band. It conceals shorts of red jer-

The secret of the pleasing coolness to the skin for which this season's swim and beach suits are noted, is told in terms of a wide variety of rayon weaves, which go to make up so many of the short and sweet little dressmaker types so popular just now.

To mention a few of the rayon weaves favored for chic bathing suits, perhaps the most important standby is the lovely soft rayon jersey that is radiantly printed in splashy florals or colorful paisley, or in glamorous Mexican design. The border jersey prints are truly spectacular in color and motif. You'll surely appreciate the flattery of the new flower-printed rayon jersey that everybody's calling for this season.

A two-piecer which is very effective is the solid color shorts-andbra suit in sleek rayon slipper satin, and if there is one material more figure-flattering than another, it is rayon slipper satin. Choose it in either black or dazzling white, either of which supplies a perfect foil to your carefully cultivated suntan. The shorts are snug and brief, nicely shaped with seamings and darts and frequently laced-up to adjust to your body lines so that they fit like wallpaper. The halter bodice tops leave the back completely bare for even tanning, and may have the lacing detail at the front as a complementary note

Included in the rayon list are many firm weaves such as bengalines, failles, broadcloths, poplins and linen textures, which make the perkiest of little circular skirts, with self-ruffle trim. Rayon seersuckers in small cross-barred or striped weaves are good style also. Spun rayons in solid colors are also in high favor, some of which are fashioned in cunning princess lines.

Flowers Printed on Black a New Trend

gives them untold beauty. Among the prints that go to make up perfectly stunning gowns, you will find gorgeous rose motifs, petunias, daisies, pansies, carnations and gardenias. These handsome prints are in cotton weaves as well as silk. They are made up with sophisticated simplicity, the high note being sounded in dramatic necklines, some of which are garlanded with wreathlike necklaces formed of florals cut from the print.

Halters of Cotton Print

Indispensable for summer playtime and sports wear are the bright cotton print halters now selling in the stores. Each halter fashion makes a different sports costume in that there is such a vast color range in the prints that make them. Wear them with your shorts, slacks, cotton shirts or separate skirts and they serve smartly as dickeys with your linen suits.

Tuck-Back Long Gloves

Fashion has revived the extra long mousquetaire glove for tea and dancing that unbuttons to let the hand free and then tucks back just as ladies of fashion wore them in the long, long ago.

LT. GOVERNOR 2nd TERM REPUBLICAN The Machine Can't Keep A Good Man Down

Washington, D. C. LETTER TO A LONELY MOTHER To a lonely mother with a son on the beachhead in Normandy and another in the Aleutians: Dear Mrs. R.: I have your letter wondering why you should sacrifice the sons you so carefully taught not to hate or to hurt, on a bloody beachhead where every minute they must hate and hurt in order to survive.

You say that you write and tell your sons that, after it's over, life will be the same and we'll all be happy, but that, deep in your heart, you know it won't be, for there will be more wars and more bloodshed all over again.

Naturally you would expect a hard-boiled and cynical newspaper man, trained to look under rocks for all the seamy side of official life, to agree with you that we will have more wars and that your boy on the Normandy beachhead is making his sacrifice in vain. But somehow or other, I don't agree. Somehow or other, I have a sneaking suspicion that things are not going to be so bad, and that we may be able to prevent your son's son from doing what his father had to do in Normandy.

Maybe I am too much of an optimist, but it seems to me, looking back, that we made a lot of progress toward, permanent peace between the last war and this. In the end, we failed. But there are a lot of things you do that fail the first time, or even several times, before you finally make the grade.

Kellogg's Dream of Peace. One of these tries which failed was the Kellogg Treaty to outlaw war. Old Frank B. Kellogg, who wrote that treaty, was just an ordinary American citizen from Minnesota, not much different from the rest of us He was Coolidge's secretary of state, and not a very brilliant one. But he had one great dream-to out-

And he kept pecking away at it, and hammering the idea home on the unwilling governments of Europe, until the people of Europe were too strong for their governments, and they just had to sign the Kellogg Pact.

I was with Kellogg when he sailed to Europe to sign his pact, stood with him in the Quai d'Orsay in Paris when, with a great gold pen given him by the people of Le Havre (a city now under bombardment), he scratched his signature to the document which carried the hopes and prayers of millions.

Of course, many of the diplomats who also used that golden pen on that hot August afternoon in 1928 had no sympathy with the hopes and ideals of the people they represented—among them, Count Uchida, whose imperturbable face gave no hint that four years later he, as foreign minister of Japan, would be snapping his fingers at the treaty he had signed.

Cynical newsmen watching the ceremony remarked that this would be another case of the League of Nations-an instrument of peace devised by the United States but which the United States would abandon. There, however, they were wrong.

Frank B. Kellogg, of course, was ahead of his time. But so were most of our great leaders-Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln. The history of progress is a constant succession of men who are ahead of their time.

Stimson's Fight Against War. However, it did not fail until it had been used-and almost successfully-by another man also ahead of his time, the man who succeeded

Henry L. Stimson, secretary of state under Hoover, was one of the few men in high position who then saw clearly signs of approaching wars, and who figured that, if the world could head off the minor wars in the Chaco between Paraguay and Bolivia, in Siberia between Russia and China, and in Manchuria between Japan and China, then we could build up a machinery of peace strong enough to head off the major war which he knew was coming on the continent of Europe.

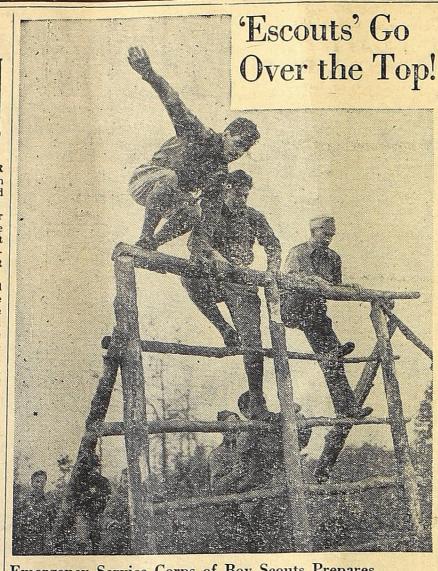

His greatest effort was to mobilize the peace machinery of the world against Japan in Manchuria. And he almost made it.

That he failed was due to an isolationist revolt inside his own Hoover cabinet, plus the undercutting of British imperialists who put their own selfish empire ahead of world peace.

I was with Mr. Stimson during part of that trying time. I know how heroically he labored. Three times in all, he went to Europe determined to hew out new machinery for peace.

The training of the Emergency Service corps scouts, or "Escouts" as they are conveniently called, is rigorous and takes about seven months. It teaches scouts to work efficiently, under organized governmental or Red Cross supervision, in floods, fires, storms or other public emergency. Above all, it makes the youngsters self-reliant and competent to deal with emergency problems that stump many of us who lack such training. Several all-day expeditions into the woods are a required part of the Escout training. Comparison of acreage and total production figures shows that while total acreage in 1937-43 was about 8 per cent smaller than the 1923-32 average, total agricultural output increased 14.5 per cent. The increased yields since 1937, due primarily to the employment of conservation practices, have been responsible for this high output figure from a smaller acreage.

The 1944 AAA conservation program, emphasizing practices that will immediately increase yields, seeks expansion of the use of lime, phosphate and other fertilizers, promotion of legume, hay and grass seed harvest, continuance of erosion control and water conservation measures and expansion of range and pasture practices.

With increased needs for food and fiber expected in 1945, when most of this year's crop will be consumed, U. S. farmers are looking to the Agricultural Conservation program to maintain the land's productivity for the current crop while pro-tecting its fertility for future plantings.

"It also keeps reminding me to meet my production goals.'

Fertilizing Tomatoes

Nearly Doubles Crop Two research men of the soils de partment at the University of Wis consin, found that tomatoes need a lot of fertilizer and pay a big profit on it, even on land that already is quite fertile.

They report that compared with unfertilized tomatoes the best treatment increased yields enough to net $244 extra to the acre above fertilizer cost. This was on the basis of the 1943 cannery price; actually these tomatoes were sold on the Milwaukee market at a higher price and greater return for the fertilizer.

Most profitable of the fertilizer programs tested was a broadcast application of 500 pounds 6-6-20 to the acre 500 pounds 3-12-12 at the side of the row. At a fertilizer cost of $20.80 to the acre, this treatment increased yields by 69 per cent.
Row applications alone were not able to bring out top yields and were less profitable on the acre basis.

The 6-6-20 fertilizer which was broadcast gave just as good results as more expensive formulas containing larger amounts of either nitrogen or phosphorus.

These results were secured on a Miami silt loam soil which contains medium to high amounts of phosphorus, a fair amount of potassium, plenty of boron and has a reaction ranging from just below neutral to slightly alkaline.

The variety of tomatoes grown was a rather late one named J. T. D. Berger and Truog think it is possible that an earlier variety would have paid off even better on fertilizer, since about one-third of this crop was caught by frost before it ripened.

same kind of mistakes again. Year after year following the last war, we had been piling up a larger and larger surplus of wheat, and the domestic price as well as the world market had declined to a point where you could almost count on one hand the number of wheat farmers operating at a profit. Still, we seemed to be unable to reduce our wheat acreage. It was much the same story in every important wheat-growing nation on earth, except China and Russia.

By 1931 Russia had made enough progress with its Five-Year plan to permit wheat export again. Once Russia had been the "bread basket of Europe." In 1931 Russia desperately needed foreign exchange with which to purchase machinery abroad. Our own government did all it could to discourage Russia's industrial development, although it was that nation's mighty effort then to gird for war that enabled it to drive back the Nazi armies 11 years later while we prepared to do our

International Problem

In May, 1931, we sent to London delegation of the federal farm board to meet representatives of other great wheat growing nations. It was hoped that they might work out an agreement to control the movement and price of wheat in international trade, and thereby take the first constructive step to lift the wheat farmers of the world from the very depths of despondency. At that time wheat was selling in Chicago at 83 cents per bushel and for much less on the farm. In Winnipeg wheat brought 49 cents and in Liverpool 72 cents. Samuel R. McKelvie headed our delegation. At that time I wrote in an article entitled "The Wheat Chaos-Pool or Ruin?" which appeared in the Nation:

"There are three courses the farm board might pursue. It could lock up its wheat holdings, as some of the western senators have demanded, but it has refused to accept this suggestion and has decided to unload as rapidly as it can. It could sell in an open market in competition with the huge carry-over stores of the Argentine, Canada and Australia and with the splendid crops that in a few months will be ready to flood world markets with even more unwanted grain; but to do that would inevitably depress prices still further. Finally, the farm board could cooperate with the rest of the world on the problem of wheat.

The London conference did not set-tle the matter. Argentine, which had introduced farming machinery on a considerable scale and probably was then the cheapest producer of wheat, felt that it was not necessary for it to limit its output, since it could undersell anyoneat least anyone but Russia. Russia had been successful in forcing her wheat into any market where machinery was to be purchased.

'Other' Control Measures

But eventually measures of control were brought into the world picture, and after a time international depression was absorbed in productive energy-and the world moved along toward the next war, which burst upon it only seven years after the London wheat conference.

What might have happened, if the great nations of the world had been able to cooperate promptly and intelligently to improve the economic condition of wheat farmersand the producers of other agricultural commodities that entered into world trade-no one can tell.

As to wheat production controlthe world never did get very far with that one, mainly because Argentina would not play ball.

The world of tomorrow is for us to make, however, and it is fortunate that thoughtful men already are giving consideration to plans, which may assure farmers of the future steadier incomes.

There are a number of elements in the present world situation which presage a very different economic and political outlook than after the last war. The most important of these is the rise of Russia, now powerful in the economic, military and diplomatic spheres. Since Russia's economy is based on production for use, rather than for profit, it may take some time for us to adjust ourselves to bargaining with that country. But Russia, nevertheless, is anxious to obtain all it can from the rest of the world in exchange for her exports.

It cost the gov't just $50, the price of a gold medal, to have the White House designed . . . Congress sponsored a national contest for the design. Hoban won it . . . The prize was either the $50 medal or $500 in cash. Hoban patriotically chose the medal . . . In his 42 years of subsequent work in Washington, Hoban never designed another building.

No one today can tell where the cornerstone of the White House is placed. Successive layers of white paint, from which the mansion gets its name, have effectively concealed it from sight and knowledge Part of the money for building it came from lotteries.

George Washington, who helped supervise the construction of the White House until the week of his death, always referred to it as the Federal Palace or Mansion With typical modesty, which should be a lesson to some of the politicians of our day, he never called the city of Washington by that name . . . To him, whether in public or private, Washington was always the Federal

The sit-down strike is neither new nor novel . . . It was tried way back in 1800 by the crews working on the White House. They were ordered to move out of the shacks on the White House grounds in which many lived with their families, so these unsightly structures could be razed They refused because they had nowhere to move and staged the first "itdown strike in protest.

Diplomats now consider Washington the prize post . . . It wasn't so in the old days. Washington and particularly the site of the White House were considered so unhealthy the British gov't decreed its representatives should be awarded additional pay for serving there . . . It did not become the White House officially until Theodore Roosevelt moved in. He ordered that simple name engraved on his official letterheads after it had been almost completely rebuilt.

The White House staff has never been known to betray an important secret . . . Woodrow Wilson, whose life is being dramatized on the screen by Darryl F. Zanuck under the title, "Wilson," inadvertently made known his decision to declare war on Germany to at least two members of the White House staff, but not a word leaked out in advance of the official declaration . . . Some members of the staff also knew of his plans to wed Edith Bolling Galt well in advance of the event but kept the Gruff old Andrew Carnegie during his lifetime saw to it that the White House had plenty of Scotch, no matter who was President . . . He'd order it in kegs from Scotland and have it sent directly to Washington and the Chief Executive with his compliments . . . President Wilson, however, refused to accept the Scotch, and Carnegie discontinued the practice.

Andrew Jackson, for sentimental reasons, turned the White House around by putting the formal entrance on the north side, facing Pennsylvania Avenue. He wanted to save his good friend, E: P. Blair, some steps. Blair had built his house on the opposte side of the avenue to be near the President, and Jackson reciprocated by putting the entrance that much closer for his boon friend.

The busiest phone in the White House is not the President's . . . The chief usher gets many more calls because of the innumerable duties and functions which fall to him . . . Petty pilferings are higher at the White House than in any other official building in the world . . . Individuals high in public life have been known to filch knives, spoons and forks for souvenirs . . . Lesser fry will grab anything for the same purpose, even to snipping off tassels from draperies or cutting out pieces of tapestry from chairs.

All packages and gifts sent to the White House go automatically to the White House garage 8 block away to be meticulously and scier tifically examined against any at tempt on the Chief Executive's life

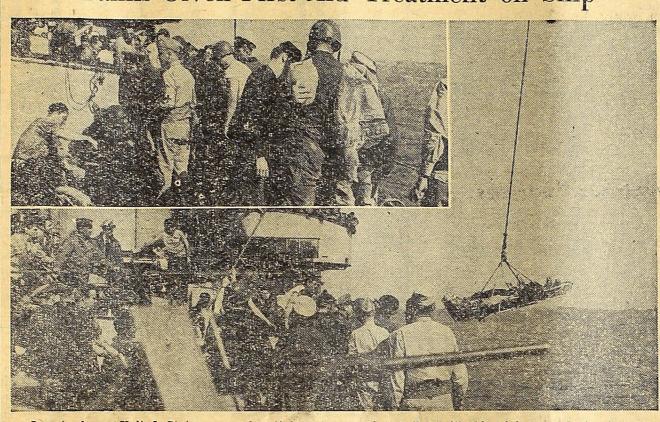

. . . The White House has undergone innumerable changes and modifications and has been completely rebuilt twice. Tradition and circumstances have given the White House practically a living personality. It is constantly being quoted in the newspapers as "the White House

Grandstand View of Normandy Beachhead

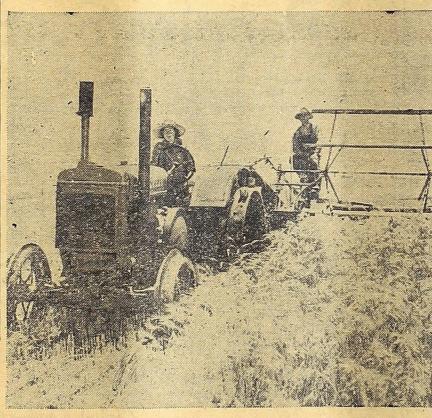

This is how the American section of the Normandy beachhead looks, viewed from a bluff where Cerman gunners once had a position. As far as the eye can see there are invasion crafts, ferrying fighting Yanks and other Allied soldiers as well as munitions and equipment to the beach. Barrage balloons swing above the transports like lazy cows to protect them against possible dive bombing attack. All is quiet on this strip of beach now, but in the first hours of the invasion death and terror ran rampant here.

Yanks Given First-Aid Treatment on Ship

Insert shows United States navy hospital corpsmen aboard the battleship giving speedy treatment to wounded Yank army rangers, casualties of the fierce battle for the beachheads that marked the first few days of the Allied invasion of Normandy. In lower photo the casualties are being brought aboard. Wounded in France, the rangers were carefully hoisted aboard the battleship U. S. S. Texas after a speedy trip out from the embattled shoreline in one of the latest landing crafts.

Family Starts 1944 Harvest

With sons and farm hands in the armed services and defense plants, 1944 harvest begins to look like a "ma" and "pa" job. In many parts of Kansas the farmers are pooling their work in order to get the harvest done. Prisoners of war as well as a large number of school children and city people on vacation will be doing their part.

Romans Arrest Fascist Leaders

Armed anti-Fascistic civilians help a Roman policeman escort an ex "big shot" of the Fascists to the jail where he will be held until tried for crimes committed under the Mussolini regime. The civilians, soon after the fall of Rome to Allies, armed themselves and began an open hunt, until Allied authorities took over the job.

Morte Pour La France

"Morte Pour La France," translated means, "Died For France." The French civilians made this grave for a Yank who died in action. He was one of the first to land on the Normandy beachhead during the initial landing stages of the invasion operations.

First Invasion Nurse

Second Lieut. Margaret Stanfill of Hayti, Mo., first American nurse to land on the invasion beachhead in France, is shown as she unpacked medical supplies.

TAKING POSSESSION OF CANAAN

LESSON TEXT-Joshua 14:6-14; Judges :20, 21, GOLDEN TEXT—Thou hast wholly fol-

Companions in battle usually means friends and comrades for life. Joshua, of whom we studied last week, had such a friend in Caleb. Together they had faced the crises of life.

Caleb is one of the characters about whom the Bible does not say much, but in every case the word is one revealing high and noble character. Consider such passages as Numbers 13:6, 30, 14:7-9, 24, 30; 26:65, as well as our lesson for

The background for our study is the story of Caleb's courageous stand with Joshua when the spies returned from their visit to Canaan, which is related in Numbers 13. Note first of all Caleb's

I. Perfect Obedience (Josh. 14:

6-8):
"I wholly followed the Lord my God." Such a testimony from a man like Caleb is no idle boast, no effort to parade his faith and piety before others. In saying it he was repeating what God and Moses had both said about him. In his heart he knew it to be true.

It is God's will for each of His children that they should come to such a place of simple trust and complete obedience that in every circumstance of life they need to know only one thing-God's will, and then in faith to go and do it. It is a life beautiful in its transparent simplicity and powerful in the strength of God Himself.

II. Promised Inheritance (v. 9). "Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance." Such was the promise of God through Moses. Forty-five long years had elapsed, but down through this period of wilderness wanderings and the conflict in subduing Canaan the promise had lived in Caleb's heart. He knew it would be fulfilled, and he waited serenely for God's time.

Such also are the promises of God which keep the heart singing in our hours of trial and sorrow, which light up the dark ways, which strengthen the heart of His children. Learn God's promises, cherish them in your heart, expect God to fulfill

III. Preserved Strength (vv. 10,

"The Lord hath kept me alive . . and I am . . . strong." Here was a man kept of God, in full vigor in his eighty-fifth year, "like a rock in a changeful sea, like a snow-capped peak in a change of cloud and storm and sun" (Meyer). No doubt there was here what our forefathers liked to call "the longevity of the antediluvians"; but even apart from that, let us recognize that life and strength come from God, and that those who walk with God in holy living may count on Him for the renewed strength of Psalm 103:5.

An incidental but extremely important lesson we should learn is that God has no age deadline. The church has frequently sinned against Him and against His faithful serv-ants by "shelving them" for younger men, when they would have brought blessing if the church had encouraged and used them. The writer of these lines is a young man, but he would speak here a word of loving admonition regarding his honored brethren who have gone on before to bear the brunt of the battle.

IV. Powerful Assurance (vv. 12-15; Judg. 1:20-21).

. the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able." Caleb asked for no easy task. He was ready to go up against the giants of Hebron. Read Deuteronomy 3:11, and you will find that there were men in those days who needed thirteen-foot beds. But Caleb was not afraid. He counted not on his own strength, but on the power of God.

It is significant that, while the other sections of Canaan were only partially conquered, Caleb brought his formidable adversaries entirely under control, so that "the land had rest from war" (v. 15). The verses in Judges 1 indicate that Caleb was as good as his word. He was a doughty, God-fearing 85-year-old. His faith is here contrasted with the shameful unbelief and failure of Is-The spiritual application to our day is evident and appropriate. There are giants in the land. Corruption - social and individual raises its brazen head. Drunkenness and vice leer at us with the impudent suggestion that we cannot control them.

There are giants "within us greed, selfishness, love of ease, lust, passion, cruelty" (Blaikie).

Are we to do nothing about them? If we are to meet them in the strength of the flesh, we might almost as well do nothing. But in the power of God, we are like Calebable. In His name we may do something about it! For His glory.
