FREE HITTING GAME GOES TO MIKADO

Local Team Will Play at AuGres Next Sunday

The youthful Tawas City baseball team journeyed to Mikado last Sunday where they lost a ten-inning game by the score of 9 to 8. The game was a free hitting affair with Mikado finding the offerings of Peterson for 17 safeties, including five doubles and three triples. The Tawas City boys collected 13 hits off the combined slants of Schrade and McDonald, which included a double by Peterson and a triple by Neil Thornton. A strong wind blowing toward the outfield made the judging of fly balls difficult, which was the chief cause for the large number of extra base hits.

Mikado drew first blood by scoring a run in the third. Tawas took the lead in the fourth by scoring three runs. Mikado tied the count in the sixth. Tawas had big seventh by scoring five runs, and Mikado brought with three of their own to bring the score 8 to 6, and then tied the game up in the ninth after two men had been retired. Tawas blew a chance in the tenth, and Mikado pushed the winning run across the tally station, which ended a long draw out game. Mikado was guilty of four miss-cues, while Tawas played errorless ball.

Next Sunday, July 30, the Tawas City team will play AuGres at the latter's diamond. Why not plan to accompany the team and give them your moral support.

Built by Greene Pack, one of Iosco county's early timber kings in the heyday of Michigan's white pine, the 14-room residence and grounds required eight gardeners, caretakers and workers. # MR. WINKLE GOES TO WAR

By THEODORE PRATT
W.N.U. RELEASE

CHAPTER I

It never in the world ever occurred to Mr. Winkle that he would be drafted and sent off to the wars. War was for young men, not for a settled married man of forty-four.

There was talk of the Army not wanting the older men, but nothing had yet been done about this. The thing being done was what Mr. Winkle received in this morning's mail. When he reached in the mailbox and took out the communication from his draft board, his hands trembled a little. Peering through his metal-rimmed glasses, he read that he was classified 1-A.

He knew what that meant. After ten days' time, he was subject for induction into the United States Army.

He stood there on the front steps of his house, a small man engulfed by a tremendous event that toppled over his world and sent it bowling off into space like a cannon ball. He thought:

Not he, who had been married for twenty years. Not he, a former careful accountant who was now the conservative proprietor of a modest general repair shop located in the alley back of his house. Not he, with his overly active and morbid imagination. Not he, who was no man of action, but was afraid of death of guns or violence of any sort.

Not he, with his stored-up memory of how, as a boy with his 22

Peering through his metal rimmed glasses he read he was classified 1A. He had shot a squirrel. The tiny animal fell from the high branch where he aimed at it, landing with a thud on the hard ground. When he held the warm, fuzzy body in his hand, he was sick at heart at what he had done. In later life, when he stepped on an ant, or squashed a spider, or even swatted a fly, Mr. Winkle felt squeamish at taking life.

Upon being called by his draft board last week for physical examination, Mr. Winkle had thought that the strange doctor appreciated his dyspepsia, his nearsightedness, his caved-in chest, his good beginning on a paunch (even though otherwise he was skinny enough to be underweight), his jumped-up pulse at the slightest exertion, and his general make-up of no great muscularity.

Never before had Mr. Winkle known himself to be such a physical wreck. The doctor pursed his lips at the visual evidences of this close approach to the grave. He frowned in such a manner as to give Mr. Winkle reason for counting on his not being recommended. And though the doctor and the members of the draft board, working their mysterious ways, had not committed themselves on the result, it still hadn't seemed real to Mr. Winkle that he would be seriously considered as a soldier.

The notice couldn't mean him. He looked at it again, to see if, possibly, there had been some mistake. But he saw his name typed out boldly: Wilbert George Winkle.

The thought of going in and telling Mrs. Winkle about it swept over him. The prospect of this was one of both panic and intense interest. Certainly it would take a lot of the strong wind out of her sails.

Mrs. Winkle, during recent years, had developed into a positive individual who was prone to run her husband the way a locomotive engineer kept his hand on the throttle. Mr. Winkle never liked to put this into the actual term of henpecking, but nevertheless that was the true state of affairs.

Now he wondered how Amy would take it. There was little she could do about it. She wouldn't be able to argue with this, nor impose her will in any way upon it. He felt a little sorry for her, for he knew that deep down, in spite of her sharp words and orders, she loved him and he loved her. Beyond his speculation on how she would receive the news, he had a reluctance about telling her.

Yet he didn't see what else he could do. With a sigh, he went into the house.

Mrs. Winkle was already behind her half of the newspaper in the breakfast nook, which was all the dining room their small house possessed. Mr. Winkle, in his mind, could look right through the paper and see her, a well-filled-out lady of exactly his own age. To a person seeing her for the first time, she appeared dainty in spite of her plumpness, quite feminine, and of an eminently good nature. It was a shock, upon second glance, to notice the way her lips pressed themselves together and the perpetual frown that creased the otherwise smooth pink skin between her blue eyes.

Amy paid no attention as Mr. Winkle carefully stepped over Penelope, the third member of the family.

Her sad-eyed spaniel was settled on the floor with her black muzzle resting on her paws. At eight, Penelope in her dog world was approximately Mr. Winkle's comparative age in the human world. She was as amiable and mild as Mr. Winkle himself. Never having been allowed a husband, she had a rather droopy disposition. Now, in her middle age, she had given up hope and no longer pretended to any interest at the sight of a male, but simply sniffed loftily or ignored the meeting altogether.

Penelope, Mr. Winkle thought, was no more prepared for the large, adventurous and dangerous things of life, such as war, than he.

He sat heavily in his place in the breakfast nook. From behind her paper, Mrs. Winkle demanded, "Anything for me?"

"No-o," answered Mr. Winkle.

At his drawing out of the word, Mrs. Winkle put her paper aside and looked at her husband. She didn't see what he had received, for he held it below the table. But from the look of Mr. Winkle and the tone of his voice, she knew at once.

Mrs. Winkle was the first to speak again. Her frown deepened and her lips were tight when she stated disapprovingly, "Wilbert, your notice has come."

Silently, Mr. Winkle handed over the notice to her.

Mrs. Winkle took it in at a single glance. Her face went white. Her frown disappeared and her mouth softened. She looked bewildered, as if props had been knocked out from under her and she had no solid ground to stand on. She said breathlessly, as if caught off guard, "You're going to war."

Mr. Winkle cleared his throat so as to be sure he could control his own voice, trying it out this way without first chancing how it might sound. "It means," he explained, "I'm just being passed on to the Army doctors."

"You're going to war," Mrs. Winkle repeated in a whisper. Now she looked actually frightened, amazed, and hurt.

It had been years since Mr. Winkle had seen such expressions on his wife's face. They affected him deeply. He began, "Now, Amy—"

"You'll be killed!" Mrs. Winkle wailed.

At this excitement, and perhaps at the new, strange tone in Mrs. Winkle's voice, Penelope began to howl.

Mr. Winkle had counted on no such behavior on the part of his wife. He had become so accustomed to her shrewish ways that he hadn't pictured them being punctured so abruptly.

He realized what a blow it was to her. She was threatened with not having him around to order about. To have him removed from her and sent off to war destroyed her defenses and left her bewildered and alone. It revealed the basic affection she had for him. Mr. Winkle reflected that it was taking the greatest war in history to accomplish this.

From the look on her face, Mr. Winkle almost expected Amy to begin weeping. But she didn't. She just sat there staring at him, her eyes bright and wide and dry, and he sat staring at her. They regarded each other awesomely while Penelope continued to howl.

Penelope was interrupted by the shrill ringing of the telephone. Mr. Winkle made a movement to go into the living room to answer it, but Mrs. Winkle, with a rather wild look on her face, started before he did. She appeared to want to do something definite.

Sitting in the breakfast nook, Mr. Winkle heard her voice. "Why, yes. . . I suppose so," she faltered. "Just a minute."

Any hesitancy didn't sound like Amy at all. Rather, it sounded like the Amy of years ago, when Mr. Winkle married her.

Her voice came again, calling in to him, "It's the newspaper—they want to come out and interview you."

Alarmed at this, and at Amy asking his advice about something instead of deciding it herself, Mr. Winkle asked, "Me? Now? Here?"

Mrs. Winkle gave an affirmative answer to each of these questions, her words sounding like strangled chirps.

Mr. Winkle thought, desperately. Suddenly, he wanted to lash out at something. "Certainly not," he said. "I can't wait around here. I've got to get to the shop. And I don't—tell them I don't want to be interviewed."

Mrs. Winkle passed on his views over the telephone. They didn't seem to make much impression, for Mrs. Winkle, after listening to what was said in reply, kept agreeing doubtfully, "Yes. . . yes, but—oh, I can see that's probably right."

She hung up and came back. She appeared to be slightly dazed.

"They said," she told Mr. Winkle, "that you're already something of a celebrity—from being the first married man in the older men's classification to be drafted—and that it's your patriotic duty to set a good example. They're coming out here to take pictures of—of us both."

"I won't do it," he said. "And you shouldn't—"

"But, Wilbert," Mrs. Winkle protested, "it won't look right if we don't."

"I don't care how it looks. Where's my hat?" He was emboldened to be peremptory. "Where's my lunch box?"

He saw them both where they were kept ready for his departure to business. He snatched them up almost savagely, and clamped the hat on his head. He hadn't felt so aroused for many years. He didn't quite know what to make of the way

It wasn't until he had gone some way that it occurred to him he had forgotten to kiss his wife goodby.

he felt, for there was fear mixed in him, too, along with his unaccustomed anger. Mainly, there was the sense of being unmoved by an unsure Amy.

He turned, and marched to the front door. Mrs. Winkle followed him. "Wilbert," she said weakly, "you have to, and you know it."

By the time he reached the steps outside, Mr. Winkle had somewhat calmed. His small storm was nearly over. He blinked, "I suppose," he admitted, "I'll have to do a lot of things I don't feel like doing."

Abruptly, he strode away, down the walk, and then along the street. It wasn't until he had gone some way that it occurred to him he had forgotten to kiss his wife goodby. It was the first time he had neglected this ritual in their whole married life. Ordinarily, he would have been called back and given instructions. But there was no sound from Amy.

Guiltily, he glanced once behind to see her still standing on the steps, her hand at her throat, watching him depart. Penelope was at her feet, staring after him mournfully. It may seem curious that, though Mr. Winkle's place of business was located right in back of his house, he didn't go out through the rear door and across the fifty feet of yard to reach his shop.

To the Winkles this wasn't strange at all. There was a good reason for it.

It originated from Mr. Winkle's career as a public accountant having disappeared during the depression. Secretly, he was just as glad, for he had never cared much for dealing in long rows of someone else's figures. He greatly preferred tinkering with mechanical things, for which he had a decided flair and a delicate touch.

Smartest Summer Dresses Are Stressing the Utmost Simplicity

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN it comes to ace-high smartness in dress this summer, simplicity is the word that tells the story. The idea of lines rather than ornamentation is being played up with most dramatic gesture throughout the current style picture.

There's a new style trend featuring this year, which has developed into a leading vogue, so much so that this season has often been referred to as a "white season" because of the many all-white costumes that are highlighting the mid-summer showings. These lovely frocks and suits, made of most any material just so it is white, place definite emphasis on sophisticated simplicity. The youthful gowns pictured answer sweetly to fashion's call for dramatized simplicity.

As to a white washable that yields to simple treatment most effectively, this season's stark white piques might well be regarded as playing the stellar role. Pique seems to be just everything you want it to be. It is so good-looking that many a bride and her attendants are choosing it for even the smartest weddings, and sweet girl graduates made pique frocks a first choice this year knowing that they would serve all the summer long for party wear.

The pretty frock pictured to the left brings the message that the way to give style distinction to pique is to make it up ever so simply. Fresh as cake frosting is this little pique classic which adopts the new apron technique in its styling. The cleverly designed apron effect in front is outlined with rickrack braid. There is also a hand inset of eyeleted pique, which tunes to the simplicity of the dress. This is one of those gowns that is so beloved by sun-worshippers, since it has a low-cut back, and is sleeveless with a deep square neckline in front.

The teen-age set is all excitement over the neat little princess frocks that are being styled of pique, plain, eyeleted or embroidered and they simply adore the princess models made of linen-textured spun rayon, which tunes to the craze for off-whites that is sweeping all fashionland. The dress centered in the trio is one of the beloved princess types. It is made of a linen-textured spun rayon fabric that has passed washing tests according to the label it bears. By the way, look to the labels if you want to be assured of the reliability of the fabrics that makes the dress. The new square neckline is accented by an effective wide yokelike collar. For a cool summer frock that you can launder easily, choose simple styles like this, which are accounted as the last word in fashions.

The cool, charming and comfortable dress shown to the right can't claim to be strictly all white, but it is a near relation to white in that its delicate stripes are in exquisite tones of moonstone gray, creme de menthe and ice cream pink. Best of all, it makes simplified styling its plea, and that is exactly what the high-fashioned dresses are doing this year. The material is a new worsted-effect Du Pont rayon jersey which is lovely to wear and lovely to behold.

As to the new simplicity which designers are sponsoring these days, look for it in the advance fall fashions which are beginning to come in. Take note of the narrow slim silhouettes which are fabric-saving and figure-flattering.

Enormous Brims

Fickle fashion has had another brainstorm, and right at the very climax of the style-prestige little hat has been enjoying this spring and summer, the style picture is being fairly stamped with just one huge brim after another. No matter how many tiny flower confections in your hat wardrobe (they are still beloved and fashion correct) if you want to keep pace with fashion you'll simply have to acquire at least one wide, wider, widest brim. The two models are typical of the new trend. The model at the top is a stunning affair of black horsehair, with its picturesque brim pleated to fall shoulder depth. Striking for summer days is the large brim model below with its telescope crown in two tones. The brim is of rough white straw.

Autumn Dresses Will Button Up the Back

Here's telling you the latest fashion news. Buttons are going to the back of smart new dresses, blouses and many youthful skirts are being back-buttoned all the way down. One of the joyous reactions to the new back-button technique is that it eliminates the metal slide fastener. The new back-buttoned sleek long torso overblouses are making a big hit with young slender-hipped girls. As to the newer dresses they either button down to the waist at the back or the buttons go way down to the hemline. The buttons, by the way, are self-fabric covered, very flat, often rimmed and so perfectly positioned they look like a very part of the dress itself. The back-button method is already in action and we will be seeing more of it this fall and winter.

'Bigger and Better' Hats Is Fall Millinery Slogan

There's an exciting movement going on in millinery realms. It is that hats are being made to take on a very important look. They will be anything but mere wisps of veiling with splashes of flowers and ribbons. The new order of hats will be more head-fitting, and they will bespeak all that "hatology" can offer in way of expert design as expressed in a very poetry of rich media, together with all good things in way of ribbons and flowers and plumage such as make up "real millinery."

New Lily for Bouquets

Comes a rival to the lovely lilies of the valley, ever a favorite for the bride's bouquet. It is the waxlike tiny lily-type flower called stephanotis. This beautiful little flower works up exquisitely for the bridal headdress, also for the bouquet arranged with long streamer effects.

Gay Little Sun Suit

A BRIEF sun-suit or tiny dress is made twice as gay by means of a bright cherry spray applique. The matching open air bonnet is made perfectly flat and then buttoned together to form a hat. Whole set takes but little material and is a summer joy for any youngster. Pattern includes sizes 2, 3 and 4 years.

Beaver With Direction Made Valuable to Man

Busy little beavers can be destructive, but if their energies are channeled in the right direction they can be most valuable workers for man.

In Idaho, the animals are caught and moved to small canyon streams where they build dams, thus aiding in the conservation of water, the raising of the water table, and the development, thereby, of many small mountain pasture lands covered with lush grasses.

ATHLETE'S FOOT NEWS

"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment with SORETONE"

Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined by a physician. We quote from the report:

"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."

Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:

"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."

So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize! Get Soretone! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.

If YOU like to knit here is a quick way to turn garments into attractive rugs. Cut or tear the rags into strips three-quarter inch wide. Turn in raw edges and use needles three-eighths inch in diameter. Knit the oval center first. Cast on four stitches and increase one at the end of each row until the depth of the work is four inches, then knit evenly for ten inches. Bind off one stitch at the end of each row until you have four stitches left. Bind these off. The diagram gives the dimensions and colors for the bands that are sewn to this center oval. Cast on seven stitches to start each band. For the outside band, start with color three. Knit seven inches, then cut the fabric strip and sew color four to it. Continue. Use a large crochet hook and fabric strips to crochet around the oval and the outside edges of the bands. Sew together with double carpet thread following directions in sketch.

About 153 million tons of agricultural products were moved from farm to market by motor vehicles in 1942, and even a greater amount is expected to be transported by highway this year. Shipments of this volume call for the use of a tremendous number of tires.

Only a small amount of rubber may reach us from the Amazon Valley, but herculean efforts are being made to get it out of the jungles, as is indicated by the report that Brazilian agencies have moved 20,000 workers into the rubber-producing country.

Abnormal Tire Wear
 If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by underinflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.

Illuminated Aisles
Going into the gloom of dark cinema houses, people are likely to stumble, bump into others. Ushers with flashlights are nuisances; small lamps placed near the aisle floors illuminate only small areas. American Cyanamid company announced what it considers a better idea: aisle rugs treated with fluorescent dyes, bathed by invisible ultraviolet radiation from small tubes. Such rugs glow softly all over, interfere with nothing on the screen.

The proudest title in the Army

IT CONSISTS of two simple words.
Yet every soldier who's worth his salt covets it. This title is simply: "Good Soldier."

It isn't just happenstance that so many women in the WAC have earned this title—the proudest in the Army.

For wherever Wacs are working, both here and overseas, there you find a job well done. And done with a spirit so gallant and fine that high Army officers everywhere say of the WAC... "They're soldiers. Good soldiers!"

Washington, D. C. SNARL OVER RECONVERSION

One of the worst legislative snarls awaiting the senate when it returns, is reconversion. It has hardly got started on the tremendous task of putting America back to work at peacetime production.

Difficulty began last February with publication of the widely publicized Baruch-Hancock report. Though this at first was hailed as a blueprint for peacetime conversion, many senators now admit it is woefully inadequate, provides excellent protection for capital and profits, but little protection against unemployment.

Only comprehensive plan so far for real unemployment prevention during the reconversion period is contained in the bill written by Sen. Harley Kilgore of West Virginia.

Kilgore had hoped to see his bill sent to the progressive committee on education and labor, headed by scholarly Sen. Elbert Thomas of Utah. But Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes, Bernie Baruch, and Wall Street's John Hancock, aided by army-navy big business elements, pulled the wires and switched the bill into the military affairs committee. There it comes under reactionary, egotistic Chairman Robert R. Reynolds of North Carolina.

The Kilgore bill is an all-embracing measure designed to insure full production and full employment after the war, all within the framework of private enterprise. Surplus property disposal plans are included; also employment training, coordination among government agencies and—most objectionable to the reactionaries—emergency federal unemployment insurance.

John Hancock, who opposes this, has even stated flatly that he thinks a little unemployment after the war will be a good thing—to depress wage levels.

A deal was made by its enemies to place the Kilgore bill under Montana's Senator Murray, who has been pressured by Senator George, Hancock and Baruch to kill it. Meanwhile, the unhappy Murray has been receiving brickbats on the other side from labor because of his stalling.

Adequate plans for reconversion should have been completed before the congressional recess. But seclude, scholarly, unhappy Senator Murray is still sitting on the eggs.

PIGEONS AND PICTURES

Anxious to insure the speediest possible handling of pictures of the fighting in France, one American public relations officer prepared special cases to hold single rolls of 35-mm. motion picture film. These were to be sent to London from the front by carrier pigeon. A test was made in England, with 20 pigeons sent out one day. Nineteen of them have never since been heard from.

Deciding roles of 5-mm. film were too heavy, the officer then devised a special carrier for single three-by-five-inch negatives. No test was made with this carrier, however because G-2 stepped in and ruled the pigeons out. Too easy for the Nazis to intercept, said G-2, with the possibility that negatives containing valuable military information might fall into enemy hands.

HITLER'S HEALTH

Although intelligence officers aren't saying much about it, Adolf Hitler's health has been attracting considerable attention in Washington lately. Fact is, the Allies have several ways of checking on Hitler's physical condition. Captured newsreels and still pictures are closely compared with previous films for clues. Likewise, recordings of Hitler's latest speeches are compared with earlier talks.

Recently, Hitler made two speeches in one week. Both were broadcast by the German radio. A group of intelligence officers and diplomats who heard him were surprised at the tone of his voice.

"Hitler sounded listless," commented one expert. "He sounded weary, tired and solemn. There was no power in his voice, no fire, only a dispirited tone of dejection. He seemed to be reading his speech. He stumbled and went over words and sentences several times before getting them straight."

Another expert saw the latest newsreels of Hitler last week, was surprised at how paunchy and pale he looked.

"Hitler has taken on weight," this expert said, "and it's not flattering to him. He seems to be letting himself go and apparently isn't getting as much exercise as a lot of his men who are running backward. His eyes also look hollow. The war isn't agreeing with Adolf Hitler."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Howard Costigan, founder of the Washington Commonwealth federation, has started a new movement on the West Coast called the "Party of the Pacific," and stands a chance to win a seat in congress, come November.

Congressman Jennings Randolph of West Virginia is trying out a new wrinkle in campaigning. He is having produced some one-minute films of himself making a campaign speech, for distribution throughout his congressional district.

Byron Nelson

How would the golfers of 20 years ago — Mac Smith, Walter Hagen, Jim Barnes, Jock Hutchison, Johnny Farrell, Gene Sarazen, Tommy Armour, Harry Cooper, Bobby Cruickshank, Willie MacFarlane and others — score if they were playing tournament golf today?

The record books will show you that 20 years ago a golfer could win almost any tournament by shooting par golf. The United States Open at Oakland Hills in 1924 was won by Cyril Walker with scores of 74-74-74-75 — 297. Bobby Jones finished second with a total of 74-73-75-78 — 300.

When the United States Open was again held at Oakland Hills, in 1937, 10 golfers finished under Walker's winning score of 1924. Four others tied it and Ralph Guldahl won the title with 284 strokes.

Modern Golf

The Masters' tournament of 1942 highlighted the near perfection of modern golf. At the halfway mark of 36 holes Ben Hogan was eight strokes behind Byron Nelson. In the old days a man that far off the pace settled for "also-ran money." But not diminutive Ben. He burned up the stretch with phenomenal golf to wind up in a tie with Nelson at 280—eight strokes better than par.

The two men went into the play-off, one of the greatest nerve shatters in sport. Usually athletes in play-offs are expected to crack a bit, to yield to the overwhelming pressure. They tighten up. But Nelson and Hogan reversed the usual form. They played the toughest course in the United States in beautiful totals. Hogan scored a two-under-par 70. Nelson fired a 69 to win the title.

This doesn't mean that Hogan and Nelson were necessarily superior to the golfers of a score of years ago. Today's scores were impossible 20 years ago. The modern golfer benefits from the many improvements that help produce low scores. These advantages include steel-shafted clubs, a longer ball, the dynamiter and infinitely better fairways and greens.

The dynamiter—or blaster—saves the average professional players a few strokes on nearly every round. Good golfers have lost their fear of traps. They lay the ball near the pin from almost any kind of a trapped lie.

One Difference

The old timers putted on hard, unwatered greens. Their speed was no more constant than New England weather. Fairways, after a dry spell, were baked to a hard, rough surface. Today's golfer plays on well-watered, soft greens. Fairways are well kept and smooth. The rough is controlled.

Many of the men who made golf popular in this country would sneer at the suggestion that Jones, Hagen, Sarazen, Mac Smith and the others could not have scored as low as the modern players. They honestly believe that not more than two or three of today's players would have had the ghost of a chance in national competition 20 years ago. Golf, they feel, has been simplified to such an extent that it isn't the test of skill it once was.

We straddle the fence on the entire question. It is our belief that the best of the old timers — if they were at the peak of their form today — would be as good as the best of the modern players. And we also believe that the present-day topnotchers would have been topnotchers 20 years ago.

Golf is more than a matter of clubs, balls and course condition. Two of the qualities most necessary to reach the top are determination and concentration. These were the possessions of many old-timers. The individual still counts most. Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan, Jug McSpaden are the same kind of players as Hagen, Jones and Sarazen.

GIDEON'S FAITHFUL FEW

LESSON TEXT—Judges 7:4-7, 15-21. GOLDEN TEXT—There is no restraint to the Lord to save by many or by few.—I Samuel 14:6.

Man power is said to be the secret of victory. Our nation is concerned about the shortage of man power in critical manufacturing centers. The armed forces are calling for more and more men and women.

That will all make it a little strange to study and teach the lesson for today, for here is the story of a crucial military campaign in which the leader, Gideon, was told by God to cut down his forces. This happened again and again, until he had less than one per cent of his original force, which was none too large, humanly speaking.

What singular thing was going on? God was at work and He did not want Israel to look to the arm of flesh, but to Him.

Three questions are raised and answered in this interesting story:

I. Quantity or Quality? (7:4-7).

The Lord is looking for men to do His work, but He cannot use men who are afraid or careless. This was the lesson Gideon learned, and it applies to our day as well.

When Gideon started out he had 32,000 men (Judg. 7:3). Not willing that they should glory in their own strength and knowing that many of them were cowards at heart, the Lord told Gideon to let those who were afraid, go home. When the mob had left there were only 10,000 left.

How sad it is that so many are "fearful and afraid" (v. 3) when it comes to going into battle for the Lord. They sing cheerily, "Stand up, stand up for Jesus, ye soldiers of the cross; let courage rise with danger," etc.; but when the bombs of Satan begin to fall, or the bugle calls for an advance into the enemy's territory, they have disappeared to places of comfort and safety. What good are such soldiers? The Lord told Gideon to send them home; perhaps the church should do the same.

Then came the second test which appears in our lesson. Those who took the comfortable and easy way to drink (v. 6), were not alert and ready. Down went the number to 300; but these were men who were ready to obey, who were alert and courageous.

The church needs to learn that large numbers are not the answer to her problems. God is interested in numbers, be sure of that, but He is more concerned about quality than quantity. Let us get more people who are truly regenerated into the church, and not just more people.

II. Man's Power or God's Power? (vv. 15-18).

Strange as was the plan for recruiting, the plan of battle was even more unusual. Lights, broken pitchers, and trumpet blasts are hardly the accepted weapons of warfare, nor does the method sound like military strategy.

This was no time for questions, for logical arguments, for the usual organization of war, for now God was about to work. He was ready to show His power quite apart from the ability of man, and He had a right to work as He would.

Wise and blessed is the church which knows that there comes a time when the thing to do is to put plans aside and let the Lord work. No one will question the value of organization and proper church "machinery," but we need to ask ourselves whether we have not become so organized that we impede the work of God.

Observe on the other hand that it was "the sword of the Lord and of Gideon"—not just the sword of the Lord. God is all-powerful. We must not hinder His glorious working. But He works through men, do not forget that! He used Gideon, and He used Gideon's little band.

God's power must accomplish God's work, but that power flows out to the world through yielded and obedient men.

III. Running or Standing? (vv. 19-21).

The enemy "ran and cried and fled." The sword of the Lord and of Gideon had put them to rout. Well may the enemies of God be terror-stricken when He begins to work through His servants.

All this was done "by faith," for we find Gideon's act of turning "to fight the armies of the aliens" listed among the exploits of faith (Heb. 11:34).

Now, see what Gideon's host was doing while the enemy ran (v. 21). "They stood every man in his place." No need for frantic hurry with them, no fear, no excitement.

God works that way. Remember the children of Israel at the Red Sea? The water ahead, and Pharaoh's host to the rear. What to do? "Fear ye not, stand still and see the salvation of the Lord." (Exod. 14:13).

Perhaps the word is coming to us just now—Trust God rather than the power of man! Stand still and see what He will do, for His own glory!

Red Mites Invading Many Prize Orchards

Proper Spraying Will Aid in Control Work

Fruit orchards are being attacked by an invader as deadly as any killer insect that ever flew or crawled. The common name for the pest in the east is the red mite.

The great danger in the case of red mite is that because it is a new comer to many sections, the great majority of growers do not recognize it when evidences of its presence appear on their trees. State entomologists have many instances in their records where the grower was utterly dumfounded when informed his trees were being attacked by red mites.

This is probably true because damage is not immediately apparent. Since the red mite attacks the fruit itself, first indications of the damage appear on the leaves, which turn brown. By midsummer, the infestation has built up to the point where the whole tree has a bronze-like appearance. Once brown, the leaves, which are very essential in growing a healthy fruit crop, remain that way for the remainder of the season, resulting in undersized, poor quality fruit.

The red mite is present in the egg stage during the winter, hatching about the time growth starts. There are several generations during the summer, populations per leaf usually running from 50 to 100 mites, although they have been observed as high as 500 per leaf. The grower, who, upon examination, finds only a few mites on his foliage, should not feel secure, for the red mite has truly amazing reproductive powers. Even though only two mites are present, they may be responsible for an increase into the many thousands in as little as 78 hours.

There are effective, tested controls for red mite. Here is what Ray Hutson, well-known state entomologist, has to say on the subject:

"Meeting the red mite problem in the apple orchard is a proposition of picking out things that will do the most good, for various conditions have a tendency toward working against one another. Certain varieties (e. g. Delicious and Baldwin) are more susceptible. A 3 per cent dormant oil kills all red mite eggs that are hit. Two applications a week apart of a 1 per cent summer oil and foliage applications are effective.

Potato Digging Machine Proves Very Successful

A labor saving attachment that can be adapted to any power take-off potato digger has been developed by the rural engineering department at the Montana agricultural experiment station.

With the attachment the potatoes are dug, rocks and clods sorted out, and the tubers sacked and set off on the ground while the machine is in continual operation. After field tests, F. M. Harrington, head of the horticultural department at the station, estimates that the picking machine with a five-man crew does as much work as an 11-man crew picking by hand.

The station's potato digger was altered to raise the elevator apron and deliver the tubers onto a sorting conveyor instead of dropping them on the ground. As the potatoes travel along the conveyor, clods and rocks are removed.

Potatoes in Feed

Potato drying plants that have been handling low-grade potatoes purchased by the government for the past several months are still in operation, another government report says. Some of these dried potatoes are being used in livestock feeds, according to W. T. Grams of the New York State Agricultural Adjustment administration office. As they contain about 8 per cent protein, little fiber, and much carbohydrate, they have real feed value.

Let's Face Facts

USDA Report Biased Regarding Problem of Freight Equalization

By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.— Under the guise of impartial and balanced analysis, the United States department of agriculture has just issued an extremely biased piece of propaganda, primarily in the interest of the railroads, but incidentally against the interests of the average farmer.

This propaganda is contained in the principal article of the June issue of the monthly release on the marketing and transportation situation, published by the bureau of agricultural economics. The article is devoted to inter-territorial freight rate differences.

This report covers some of the points developed in studies made of freight rate discriminations against the South and West by two governmental bodies—the board of investigation and research and the Tennessee Valley authority.

The review is apparently an attempt to influence farmer opinion, and is in bad taste coming as it does when the Interstate Commerce commission has just completed final hearings in the freight rate equalization cases. It seems to be an attempt to undermine the determination of the South to obtain justice, for it raises broad doubts as to the wisdom of the South's position. In effect, it also casts doubt upon the position taken by President Roosevelt.

Important Data Omitted

Although the piece goes through the motions of weighing carefully all factors involved, its presentation leaves out of consideration the most important and relevant data, namely, portrayal of the conditions which have given the South its tremendous determination to remove the handicaps that have retarded its industrialization, and the importance to southern agriculture that these handicaps be removed.

But not only does the department of agriculture presentation omit important facts, it subtly distorts some of the data which it presents. For instance, it shows that first-class freight rates are 39 per cent higher in the South than in Eastern industrialized territory, and all class rates taken together 33 per cent higher, but then goes on to minimize the significance of these facts. It recites that average revenue per ton-mile in the South is only 5.5 per cent greater than in the East, without making it clear that this is due largely to lower grade freight carried on southern roads. Nor does it anywhere envisage the advantages which would accrue from lower class rates.

This intensely lopsided presentation suggests that the railroads may have influenced the department of agriculture, perhaps through the instrumentality of large agricultural shippers, upon whom they have been working hard to oppose the southern governors' conference.

The truth is that a majority of the people of the South, and many in the West, have come to the realization that without greater industrialization their sections cannot hope to have the same advantages in education and material culture as the people of the East and Middle West. Poverty, illiteracy, bad health, ignorance will continue to oppress a large percentage of the people of the South and West until average income is raised through development of industry. Until then local governments cannot give their people the same advantages as other in other parts of the country.

Other Sections Unhurt

In no way can the industrialization of the South and West hurt the farmers of those areas. By increasing average income, industry will increase the consuming capacity of the South and West for all of the things the farmer grows. It can mean only the development of richer markets nearer to the farms. Industrialization of one region never injures the farmers of another region, but only expands the markets for the things he ships.

Even the big shippers, some of whom have been told that commodity rates might be raised if class rates were equalized, would not be losers, but would gain from increased prosperity anywhere.

True, progress has been made by industry in the South, even under the handicap of a 39 per cent class rate discrimination. Removal of this handicap would support one of the chief hopes we have of maintaining a high level of employment and income after the war.

This Man's Hobby Is Robbing Nests!

It's for the Advancement of Scientific Knowledge.

Time was when little boys who robbed birds' nests were regarded as "bad boys" who would never grow up to be president. For the crime of pillaging the homes of our feathered friends was on a par with taking the pennies from a blind man's cup. But now, it seems, the despoiler of a bird's nest is a scientist. At least his work, or hobby, is credited with having considerable scientific value and is condoned by no less a bird-lover than the Audubon society.

Among the people who go in for nest-robbing in a big way is oologist Karl Squires, a civil engineer of Miami, Fla. When Mr. Squires is not engineering, he is away in pursuit of eggs. At the time of writing, he has a collection of some 10,000 eggs, representing species indigenous to the Atlantic coastal states from the mountains of Maine to the Everglades of Florida. This makes his collection one of the finest in the country.

The hobby of collecting birds' eggs is a highly scientific one and is not without its hazards, too. Mr. Squires has spent many hours through the past 45 years in ornithological research, learning to identify birds, know their habitat, how they behave, what they eat and just about everything else about them, including their love life. With all this knowledge at his fingertips, the expert oologist knows where to look for the nest of any given bird. More important, he knows when to look for it—that is, when it will hold the eggs he wants. The expert takes the eggs soon after they have been laid. He blows out the contents immediately and catalogues his new acquisitions, handling them as carefully as if they were jewels. As indeed they are, to him, fragile jewels that require the delicate touch of the master egg-hunter.

The large egg is that of a sand crane, measuring four inches long. The small one is a house-wren's, which is even tinier than a humming bird's, being only a half inch in length. These represent the limits in size in Squire's collection. The American Ornithologist's union has assigned a number to every species and sub-species of North American bird.

Box Kites Protect U. S. Merchant Ships

Kites are now required equipment on every merchant ship in the U. S. fleet, and U. S. maritime service cadets are required to learn their operation at the kite and barrage balloon school. Kites are used with or without balloons. Kites have a big advantage over the balloons in that they are far less bulky and can also take much more punishment. Both are used to protect merchant ships against enemy dive bombers. They carry cables aloft that serve as a barrier against diving attacks.

These cables are capable of shearing the wings from a plane. However, because of its bulk and the fact that it must be filled with gas to stay aloft, the balloon is very vulnerable. A few bullets in the right place dispose of the balloon. The kite is something else again. This peacetime toy carries to a height of 2,000 feet a length of 15-gauge piano wire that will foul up an enemy propeller or rip wings from a plane as if they were made of paper. And the kite will continue to fly even when perforated with bullet holes.

The kite in use by the U. S. M. S. is the invention of Warrant Officer Hosea C. Sauls, who now instructs cadets in their assembly and use. Carried in a compact package 6 inches in diameter and 10 feet long, the kite can be assembled for action in less than ten minutes.

Here is one of the big barrage kites in position for launching. The kite crews require special training, which is given in the merchant marine schools ashore.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

Special care should be taken these hot days to keep refrigerators spotlessly clean. No one can afford to allow food to spoil, and the best insurance against this is to store food properly in clean places.

When cleaning, everything in the box should be removed, including the shelves, the compartment washed out, rinsed and dried. In regulation boxes the ice compartment should be cleaned once a week, and in electric refrigerators, the box should be defrosted once a week.

While the inside of your box is the most important part, the exterior should never be neglected. If spilled food, fingerprints and dirt are removed immediately, the finish will be saved—and we must save, because there will be no new electric refrigerators until the war is over.

Sweets Lead List of Wants of Servicemen

NEW YORK.—Candy, soft drinks, cigarettes and toilet articles are the four top items in demand by men of the armed services, Brig. Gen. Joseph W. Byron reported at the annual dinner of the National Confectioners' association.

General Byron, who directs the special services division of the army, has toured almost every theater of operations to inspect the army exchanges.

"Scattered all over the world from the howling Aleutians to the coral reefs of the Pacific are thousands of lost and lonely little units nobody ever hears about," he said. "They do dull but important jobs. Scarcely any will ever see action. Life is an endless stretch of deadly monotony for them."

He added that it isn't unusual for these men to buy two or three boxes of candy at a time at a PX.

Abnormal Tire Wear

If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by under inflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition to abnormal up and down motion there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.
