THANK YOU VOTERS OF 10SCO COUNTY

I wish it were possible to shake the hands of all the voters of Iosco county for the splendid vote given me in the county. Owing to the gas and tire rationing it was impossible to make my usual campaign throughout the district, but it is indeed gratifying to know that you remembered me when you went to the polls. I hope that I will be able to see you soon, but above all, if there is anything in your county that needs attention in Lansing, please do not hesitate to call on me. Hoping this message will serve as a personal

Iosco Farmers Urged To Harvest Grass Seed

Farmers are urged to harvest all the hayseed they can this year. A serious shortage of legume and grass seeds has developed. Congress has appropriated 12½ million dollars to encourage the harvesting of hay seeds. Farmers can earn 3½ cents a pound for red clover and 21/2 cents a pound for alfalfa and alsike seed they harvest this year. This in addition to the regular soil conservation payments of $3.50 an acre for harvesting approved seeds. There are no limitations on the number of acres for which payments can be

Even if farmers in this area harvested only enough hayseed for their own needs they would help out a critical situation. The amount of seeds they normally buy would then be available to farmers not in position to raise their own seeds.

Home Front Invasion

MR. WINKLE THEODORE GOES TO WAR

year-old Wilbert Winkle, who is the pro-prietor of a modest general repair shop located in the alley back of his home, is notified by his draft board that he is in 1-A.. He is very despondent about it. He had thought that the doctor who examined him would not overlook his dyspepsia, his near-sightedness and his caved-in chest. He believes there must be some mistake. Anyway, he breaks the bad news to his wife, Amy, who has always domineered him. It is quite a blow to her, too, for she is threatened with not having Wilbert around to order about. Winkle leaves the house to get busy with the day's work, but forgets to kiss his wife goodby.

CHAPTER II

Mrs. Winkle, upon learning that her husband planned to open a general repair shop practically in their living room, decried it bitterly. She felt that being the wife of what she termed a handy man lowered her social standing. She declared she would have nothing whatsoever to do with the enterprise and would stand despite the fact that she had a modest income from a small estate left by her parents and that on this account she and Mr. Winkle could have managed, though their stand-ard of living would have been sharply curtailed.

At that time Mr. Winkle still wore one leg of the trousers in his house, so he proceeded on the basis that it was more respectable for him to provide, and more reasonable to eat well, than to have a social standing. He took his wife at her word and built his shop across the rear of their property without an entrance or even a window on the house side. Mrs. Winkle had never risited him, even when she found it more comfortable not to starve. And from then on she developed into what he preferred to think of her instead of by any other word; a

Each morning Mr. Winkle marched out the front door quite as if he were going downtown to business. He walked up the block, around the corner, and then to the alley. Along this he went to his shop, where he worked until dinner time, and then retraced his steps.

The alley in which he had his shop was not a depressing thoroughfare, but quite an attractive one. It was a dirt lane lined with trees and a number of private garages. Mr. Winkle's shop was no eyesore, but a substantial frame building painted a cheery blue, with wide double doors to permit the entrance of automobiles needing his attention. and tall windows. Above the doors was a sign announcing:

THE FIXIT SHOP We Repair Anything

Mr. Winkle had worried a little about the wording of this. Making his promise in the plural was more impressive, as if there existed a large staff of workers. The fact that there was no one except himself was perhaps deceptive. But he felt all right about it when he considered that he and the shop itself could be counted as two.

He lived up to the boast on his sign. He was adept at finding out what the trouble was with any mechanical gadget and, what is more, at putting it right. People from all over his section of town, and many from farther away, brought him their difficulties or called him in. He accepted-with one exception-any work that came along.

The only thing with which he would have nothing to do was fire-

This morning, as Mr. Winkle walked a little over a block along his circuitous route to get the fifty feet away from where he started, he was a thoughtful man.

He opened his shop methodically, throwing wide the doors and letting in the sun. Usually, every morning he looked at his place of work with pride while he changed his clothes, peeling all the way down before donning his working outfit. He admired his own neatness, the spickand-span concrete floor, the shining | mentarily and made him slightly lathes and other power tools, the clean benches with every screw- must be agreeable. "I expect I driver in its proper place, and the work in hand left and waiting in good order from the day before.

Mr. Winkle and the other men of his age had assured each other that they would never be used as soldiers. They were of that lost generation between rounds of the world war, too young for the first session, and too old for the second.

Even after the draft registration for them, they had said the same things. "We couldn't stand the life," they proposed. "Marching all night and crawling on your stomach in a ditch is for the young fellows."

Yet Mr. Winkle had wondered. If there wasn't some plan for using them, why were they registered?

There followed a period of listening to every scrap of further information to be found in the papers, over the radio and in the magazines. Most of this was conflicting, with no one able to make up his mind. rather starve than to so much as glance at it. She took this decided plain, at least in relation to Mr. Winkle's draft board in the town of Springville. It began to call older men. Right now it had reached those married without children, but with wives who had independent incomes of their own.

Mr. Winkle met the first requirement. Mrs. Winkle lived up to the second regulation. Her small income, together with the fifty dollars a month allotment paid to the wives of soldiers, would be enough for her to support herself.

Sitting there in his shop, Mr. Winkle thought of his fighting background. It had not been much. Up until the time he was ten, he was known in his neighborhood for having won several fights. There was a certain group of boys he could bully and bluff, or lick, if it came right down to it.

Then that prowess had come to a quick end. His teeth, growing in crookedly, were being straightened by that ignominious process of having wire bands put around them to draw them into place. Returning home from school one day with among them as to whether or not he could lick one of them.

During the experiment of proving he could not, the inside of his mouth was cut to ribbons by the copper bands—the main contributing cause of his humiliating and painful de-

From then on Mr. Winkle, boy and man, ceased to be a warrior.

That was the extent of Mr. Winkle's fighting history. Now, belated-ly, at forty-four—the moment made him think of his age as being only six years until he was fifty—it seemed as if it were to have a future.
Why, he thought, this is impossi-

It's really incredible. Mr. Winkle wasn't in the least sure about how he would fight. It would be different if he were younger, or happened to be a great big strapping sort of fellow.

He wanted to uphold his country. try's calling upon him to do it. But he felt doubtful of what kind of soldier he would make.

He hoped there was no question about this matter in the mind of anyone who detected in him signs of not looking forward to going to war.

Mr. Winkle roused himself and began to work on a bicycle. The representative from the newspaper arrived in the middle of the morning. He was a tall, brash-looking young man with a wild mop of hair who introduced himself, "I'm Onward, the reportographer."

"The what?" asked Mr. Winkle, staring at him with assurance that he was not going to like Mr. Onward any more than he cared for being interviewed.

Mr. Onward set down the camera he carried and explained with broad patience, "Reportographer. It's a contraction of reporter and photographer. Technically, I'm only the last part. But with so many reporters gone off to war, I got to be both. I made up the name myself.

"Listen," he said as he opened his camera, "I got one divorced wife, two kids. I got one married wife, three kids. I haven't taken a vaca- made no comment, and in passing tion the last two years because I couldn't stand being home all day. I tried to enlist to get away from have too much to support."

The reasons why men went to war, Mr. Winkle thought, were varied. Mr. Onward regarded Mr. Winkle with some amusement. He seemed to think it a little funny that he was being drafted. When Mr. Winkle protested that his activity was somewhat premature, and that he anxious to defend the four freedoms, might not be accepted by the Army, Mr. Onward grinned and began ordering him to stand at different places about the shop. He proceeded to take a series of flashlight pictures, meanwhile asking questions in an indifferent, offhand manner.

"How do you feel about being a

Mr. Winkle blinked as a flash went off in his face. "Why," he stam-mered, "I guess I feel all right."

"Do you regard it as a privilege to be the first of your classification to be called on to defend the four freedoms?"

"Privilege?" Mr. Winkle repeated. The flashlight had blinded him mo-

Mr. Winkle spread his lips and exposed his teeth. He looked straight at the camera, holding his head a little high as previously instructed so that his glasses wouldn't reflect

Another flash went off.

Mr. Winkle blinked and coughed unhappily. "Of course," he said. "Yes. Certainly."

Mr. Onward gazed at him and then shrugged his shoulders, as if telling himself that nothing more could be done with this quizzical subject.

Quite suddenly he went away. Mr. Winkle worked on a bicycle, then on the motor of a washing machine. He ate his lunch, listened to the radio, and attacked the motor again. All the while he felt queasy about the visit of Mr. Onward, the reportographer, but at the same time wondered what he had concoct-

He learned sooner than he expected. Early in the afternoon he heard the newsboy calling his wares from afar and then down at the end of the alley. Evidently the paper was cashing in on the hot news in Mr. Winkle's vicinity.

The boy appeared in the entrance of the shop, announcing excitedly, 'Your picture's in the paper, Mr. Winkle! Right on the front page!"

Mr. Winkle could not overcome his resolve to wait until he went home to see in the delivered paper there just what the Evening Standard had to say about him. And after all, it wasn't every day that you got your picture in the newspaper, especially on the front page.

He purchased a copy and, after the boy left, he looked at it. It wasn't as big as what the Russians were doing in Russia, or what the United Nations were doing around the Mediterranean, or what the U.S. two other boys, a discussion rose Navy was doing in the South Pacific, but it was the next most important thing to those large events.

There was a picture of Mrs. Winkle standing outside their house, just as he had seen her last that morning, with Penelope at her feet. There was a picture of himself, the one where he smiled. The smile looked rather ghastly, and set and stiff, but to anyone who didn't know him very well it might have been taken for happiness. Most of all, above this exhibit, there was a sizable black headline which said:

WINKLE PROUD TO FIGHT

Mr. Winkle felt not only conspicuous, but misrepresented. He was glad to learn that Mrs. Winkle had

Fashions for Outdoor Play Are A Pet Theme With the Designers

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Now is the time of year when the call to come and play in the great outdoors is resounding through the air, and designers are working their imaginations overtime in conjuring fashions that look the part of carefree abandon to the joys

The grand thing about clothes as now styled for sports and other outdoor activities is that, with all their air of joy and frivolity, there's an undercurrent of genuine practicality and dependable many-purpose wear about them.

There are cunning swim suits, for instance, that are so obviously dressmaker styled and so cleverly designed that they do double duty as sun suits or for Victory gardening or even for wearing about the home during the round of household duties. Often they are that functional they have an extra skirt or an extra jacket or both that gives them a town-air equal to most any casual daytime occasion.

Fashion's followers are mightily pleased over this season's turnout of playclothes and swim suits and such that are so easy wearing and comfortable, so utilitarian, and so high-styled, with eye-appeal adding infinitely to the summer scene. They especially gloat over the interesting materials employed in fashioning this season's play outfits, expressing particular fancy for the various rayon weaves which are so blessedly cool and smooth in feeling. The list of rayon fabrics is full-up and bubbling over with varied and most interesting weaves, such as rayon with a butcher linen finish, also rayon poplin, broadcloth and even rayon seersucker. In the dressier rayons there are taffetas, bengalines and failles, also elegant-looking sleek satin, which is the "newest out" for play and swim suits It is gleaming black rayon taffeta that makes the body of the beautifully slenderizing princess-line suit shown to the left in the foreground of the illustration. The same taffeta also fashions the lattice-work top of this handsome suit, which is so striking its wearer might easily be voted the belle of the beach. This type suit is equally effective when styled of the now-so-voguish sleek black satin, which is the new rage on the beach this summer.

Brown and white cross-barred rayon seersucker is the crisp and cool fabric chosen for the attractive dressmaker suit in the foreground to the right. It has a cross-strap sun-inviting back. Pleated scal-loped edging outlines the top of the nicely fitted bodice. Soft rayon jer-sey is a tremendous and a good flat beach this summer, and a gay flatterer it is with its grace and gorgeous coloring. A pretty bowknot print on soft-draping rayon jersey adds to the interest of the becoming dressmaker suit shown above to

And now for a real thrill in the way of a new-type bathing suit that is making its bow this summer. See it illustrated above to the right. This exotic swim suit is the season's darling among the slim-hipped younger set, who can wear to advantage its brief wrapped skirt. These are liked both in the Javanese type which wraps to one side and the Hindu style which wraps to tie at the front. Linen textured spun rayon in a multi-color tropical flower print in shades of rose, fuchsia, blue and green against an aqua background makes this delightful little suit which invites you to go native. The print itself is deftly executed to give a hand-painted effect.

Gala Over-Blouses An Important Trend

A dress formula that will be dramatized to the limit in the immediate future is that of the simple narrow skirt, topped with a gorgeous gala sleek long-torso blouse made of rich fabric, often with striking bead embroidery accent or perhaps artfully hand-painted. One de luxe blouse in promise is a model of white crepe with a tunic flare, beaded in a Chinese manner in red, gold, lime and green about the

When King Died in India. Elephant Chose New Ruler

The importance of elephants in Indian history dates from the Vedic period, when they were India's king-makers. They were supposed to be gifted with an unerring instinct to spot the real scion of the royal blood. Whenever a king died childless, the royal elephant was called upon to solve the difficulty.

He was gaily caparisoned and give a garland to put around the nack of whomsoever he chose in his rambles for the quest of a successor. Wandering through the hills and dales, the elephant would come upon the rightful ruler of his choice, and put the garland around his neck. Thus, sometimes a beggar's bowl was exchanged for a kingly crown.

Abnormal Tire Wear

If tires show abnormal wear the trouble may be caused by underinflation or misaligned wheels, according to the California State Automobile association. Another cause of uneven tire wear is unbalanced wheels. At high speed a wheel only slightly out of balance develops a powerful centrifugal force. This force jerks the wheel up and down as it rotates. In addition to abnormal up and down motion there also may be side motion as the heavy spot moves fore and aft. Unbalanced wheels frequently cause shimmy, abnormal wear in steering mechanism, as well as cupped spots in the tire tread.

Washington, D. C. ELECTORAL COLLEGE SQUABBLE

Those who have carefully dug into the history of the electoral college admit privately that Jim Farley's legal counsellors, who hatched the idea of electors disregarding the popular vote, did some smart thinking, not from the viewpoint of a fair election but in regard to historic

Most famous case in which the electors flouted the majority of voters was in the election of 1876 between Hayes and Tilden. But there have been other interesting and more recent cases, though they didn't upset a national election or attract much attention. For in-

In the Teddy Roosevelt-Alton B Parker election of 1904, Maryland cast seven electoral votes for Parker and only one for Roosevelt though Roosevelt had the majority of the popular vote by the very slight margin of 109,497 to 109,446. In the Taft-Bryan contest of 1908, Maryland electors again ig-nored the will of the people by voting 6 to 2 for Bryan, though Taft got a slight edge of the popular vote by 116,513 to 115,908. . . . California electors split their vote in the 1912 Wilson-Taft-Roosevelt fight by a 2 to 11 vote in the electoral college for no particular reason. Wilson ran second in the popular vote, with Roosevelt first, but two electors dis-regarded this and voted for Wilson

History is dotted with isolated cases where a few electors bolted the wishes of the people of their state and voted as they pleased. This, it must be admitted, was what the Constitution specified, though general custom has ruled otherwise.

In the McKinley-Bryan contest of 1896, one California elector plumped for Bryan, though the people of the state voted for McKinley. One Kentuckian did the same thing in the same election. . . . Michigan in 1892 saw only 9 of its electors vote for Benjamin Harrison and 5 for Grover Cleveland, though Harrison got the popular vote. . . Ohio cast one electoral vote for Cleveland in the same election, though Harrison carried the state by a slender margin.

All of this background indicates why FDR's politicoes, though not admitting it publicly, are scrutinizing credentials carefully and are not at all happy about the electoral college threat in the South.

RED 'TIRE-TAPE'

Strange as it seems, American motorists soon will have a chance to buy German and Japanese tires. Behind this is a story of inexcusable government red tape and procras-

Inside fact is that, immediately after Pearl Harbor, U. S. officials began buying up all sorts of tires in South America, accumulating tires imported to Latin America from every part of the world, some of them five to twenty years old. Several hundred old Japanese and German tires were found among Brazilian stocks.

When these tires were originally imported into the United States, they were allocated largely for military use, some for lend-lease, some for government agencies.

Last November, however, synthetic tire manufacture was increasing and it was decided to sell a large number of these imported tires to civilians. Here came the first red-tape hitch. The tires had been purchased by the Rubber Development corporation, an FEA agency. But Rubber Development did not want to sell the tires to Defense Supplies corporation, a Jesse Jones agency, except at the price which it had originally paid in Brazil. This price, in order to get the tires away from Brazilians, had been high.

But Jesse Jones and his Defense Supplies corporation, being shrewd bargainers, didn't want to buy at that high price.

More Red Tape.

Finally, Rubber Director Col. Bradley Dewey stepped in to help cut the red tape. Rubber Development's high price was met. But then, more delays developed.

Finally, on February 28, 1944, Colonel Dewey signed a strongly worded directive demanding once again that the tires be turned over to civilian use. However, it was not until June, four months later, that the transfer to Defense Supplies corporation was finally completed.

Thus, seven whole months were wasted while the tires gathered

A LTHOUGH night baseball has been the most important factor in keeping the game alive during wartime, there are still a few unbelievers in the major league cir-

Ed Barrow, president of the New York Yankees, has little enthusiasm for the vesper version. According to columnist Dan Parker, he cooled off on the proposition almost a half century ago when his Paterson, N. J., club of the Atlantic league, starring one Honus Wagner, took part in the first professional ball game under arc lights at Wilmington, Del.

It was back in 1896, about the first of July. And, according to Parker, "In the flickering blue light of carbon-stick are lamps, the first night game in organized baseball ran into trouble soon after it got under way when the rival pitcher, steamed up by Barrow to play a practical joke on Wagner, substituted a Fourth of July torpedo for the ball the first time bow-legged Honus came up to

"Honus took a toehold for his cut and met the paper-covered bag of the detonator, causing such an explosion that the game broke up in a riot. Ed thought night baseball was a snare and a delusion then and he still sticks to his belief, although he wavered a bit this gunpowder flush on spring when the Yanks slumped both in attendance and in the league standing. He said:

Change of Heart

"'Under certain conditions, I wouldn't be too opposed to night baseball. But what good would it do me to change my mind this year when we couldn't install equipment for night games even if we wanted to?"

It wasn't so long ago that Clark Griffith was a determined opponent of the night game. But the situation has changed. Mr. Griffith is one of the most radical advocates of the electrically-lighted sport.

There's a good reason for Griffith's change of heart. Washington is glutted with federal employes who couldn't take time off for an afternoon game. They did want baseball, but had to have it in the cool of the evening. Logic-and business acumen-dictated the answer to Griffith. Washington now is the night baseball center of the major leagues. Griffith has permission to play as many night games as he desires, except on Sundays or holi-

Many changes have come to pass during the past 12 years. Of the 15 major league clubs, all but 5 have facilities for night baseball. Those 5 helds remaining in the dark are Fenway park and Braves field in Boston, Wrigley field in Chicago, Briggs stadium in Detroit and the Yankee stadium in New York. These parks couldn't install the powerful batteries of lights on their steel towers now if they wanted to, because, even though the ban on such construction was lifted not long ago, the material required isn't likely to be available until after the war.

The Evidence

Not that General Electric will go into rhapsodies, but we're in favor of night ball. Joe Doakes, the boy who helps turn out materials for war, deserves a break. He probably likes baseball. But he can't knock off the job Thursday afternoon to see the Yanks and White Sox battle. Night baseball provides the answer, Joe can see the game. He is happy. And Joe, multiplied a few hundred thousand times, makes the baseball club treasurer happy.

The case of the Southern association is proof of the value of the night game. This fine organization practically owes its existence to Mr. Edison's incandescent lamp. All games except those on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays are played at night in Billy Evans' circuit.

Evans wasn't wild about night baseball when he resigned from the Boston Red Sox and took over the presidency of the association. It didn't take him long to find out that the lights made the difference between black and red in the ledger. Association cities which formerly attracted 300 on week days now draw 3,000 in the hush of the evening. The preponderance of evidence favors night ball. The situation is likely to continue.

POWER THROUGH SELF-DISCI-PLINE (TEMPERANCE LESSON)

LESSON TEXT-Proverbs 1:7-10; Jeremiah 35:5-10; I Corinthians 9:24-27; I Thes-salonians 5:22. GOLDEN TEXT—And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things.—I Corinthians 9:25. Discipline — that word doesn't sound exactly attractive, does it? It makes us think of punishment for wrongdoing, when in reality it is a very helpful word which means teaching. Disciples learn, and thus are disciplined, so that life becomes safer, simpler, and more efficient. When the Morro Castle caught fire, there was time for everyone to escape, but 134 out of the 500 on board perished because they fought each other. When the President Coolidge sank in the South Seas 4,500 soldiers escaped alive. What made but it was enough. There are many kinds of discipline, and all have their important place in preparing men to live well ordered and useful lives. The disciplined life has power to meet trials and temptations. We find in our lesson three kinds of discipline:

the difference? Discipline, that's all,

I. Home Discipline (Prov. 1:7-10) The training received by the child early in life from its parents is of the utmost importance in forming character. Children should learn the true standards of life, and be held to obedience to them if they are later to walk in the right way.

It is here that they most effectively learn the danger of the use of intoxicants and the importance of keeping their bodies clean and strong for the service of God and

Some parents (possibly misled by attractive, but false theories of education) think that the correction or punishment of a child is not to be permitted. They assume that they are being kind to a child by not limiting his development, or trying to direct it. These are the people who "curse their children with kindness," which is in fact the greatest of unkindness.

Only a fool (v. 7) will despise the instruction of his parents, and only a fool of a parent will fail to give that training which is like "an ornament of grace" (v. 9) in the life of the young man or woman.

But the discipline of the home needs the support of

II. Social Discipline (Jer. 35 5-10) The social order, which concerns our relation to our fellow men, disciplines each of us. It makes many and what sometimes seem burdensome demands of us in order that we, as well as those around us, may have the privilege of living ordered and useful lives.

Wise is the man or woman who draws from his fellowship with others that helpful training which gives him stability and grace.

The Rechabites had made a vow that they would not drink intoxicants, and as a tribe they stood by that vow even when tested by Jeremiah. (Note that we say tested, not tempted. He knew they would stand.)

Fine family traditions have great value in guiding and controlling young people. We should, like the good man Jonadab (v. 6), establish a tradition of abstinence from intoxicants which will make all of our descendants say, "No one in our family ever drinks."

The training of home and of society has one great goal and that

III. Self-Discipline (I Cor. 9:24-27; Thess. 5:22)

In the life of every one of us there should be that determined purpose that life shall not be lived in careless disorder, or be permitted to run out at loose ends.

We are all running a race (v. 24), and it is for us so to run that we may achieve success. We cannot run with uncertainty (v. 26), we must know where we are going.

We are fighting a fight, and at times it is a desperate, life-anddeath struggle. We must not beat the air (v. 26), but strike home the telling blows which will bring victory over our enemies, the world, the flesh, and the devil.

To do this calls for training and self-discipline. It means bringing the body and its demands into subjection. The man who runs in a race does not destroy his chances for victory by using intoxicants, or other detrimental things. Surely we who run the race for Christ must be even more determined that self shall be disciplined for God's glory

The standard for the conduct of the Christian is higher than is commonly supposed, for he withdraws himself from "every form of evil."

The disciplined believer knows that sin is sin-that what looks comparatively innocent often wears a false face covering real wickedness, or it is the first step on a downward path. To start on that way is to invite disaster. A striking example of this is the social drink-the fashionable cocktail-the friendly glass. Abstain is the word—"abstain from every form of evil."

Adequate Water for Stock Is Essential

Improvement Seen As Production Aid

Full utilization of grazing areas, with an attendant production of more and better meat and dairy products requires adequate water for livestock on range and pasture.

No matter how palatable and plentiful the forage, if sufficient water at regular intervals is not available, livestock will not reach a good livestock will not reach a good marketable condition.

Development of enough wells and springs and ponds to supply the necessary water is not the only requirement, WFA points out. Proper distribution of the water in relation to available forage is essential to efficient grazing as full utilization cannot be realized if an adequate supply is not accessible to livestock on any part of the pasture or range

Stock-water developments are important on farm pastures in humid areas as well as on the ranges in semi-arid and arid states, according government authorities. While the greatest need is in the latter areas, inadequate facilities prevent the fullest use of good pasture on many farms because the owner is not aware that a lack is possible in the more humid section where he is raising stock. Also, he may not realize how influential stock-water supplies can be in improving the quality and quantity of range and pasture feed.

In many states, farmers may receive assistance in carrying out stock-water developments under the conservation program administered by the agricultural adjustment agency.

Conservation of soil and water are aided indirectly by development of necessary pasture and range water-ing facilities. With proper development and distribution of water supplies, grazing can be restricted on overgrazed, eroded or depleted rangeland and the stock rotated over other areas in keeping with their grazing capacity. Adequate water supplies on farm pastures, while encouraging more uniform grazing, will also aid pasture improvement practices, and decrease damage from erosion.

Water facilities are, roughly, of two kinds-natural and constructed. Springs, streams and lakes are in the first group. The second requires drilling, excavation or other construction work to make water available, and includes wells, artificial reservoirs and ponds, ditches, and troughs and storage tanks attached to springs and reservoirs.

Fertilizer Increase

Half Million Tons American farmers this year will use well over 11,000,000 tons of commercial fertilizer-a new all-time high. That's half a million tons more than were used in 1943 and 3,000,000 tons more than in 1940.

Adjustments in analysis of complete fertilizers to be sold in different states have been made to insure the best possible use of the available materials supplying nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash. The nitrogen content of many of the available grades has been increased somewhat, indicated supplies of this important plant food being about 35 per cent greater than last year.

While some fertilizer ingredients are available in somewhat larger amounts this year than last, all of them, including such important nitrogen-carrying materials as ammonium sulfate, sodium nitrate, ammonium nitrate, and fertilizer compounds, are still on allocation by the War Production board.

Large Worm Loss

Experts say the average wormy pig, if it lives, requires one-fifth more feed to reach the same weight as an uninfested one. Since about half of the pigs in the United States are said to be infested, elimination of internal parasites would save great quantities of feed. It would save many hogs, veterinarians estimating that worms kill one pig in ten. By wide experiments and use, phenothiazine has proved to be the only drug that will control nodular worms. It also controls roundworms or Ascarids as effectively as other commonly used anthelmintics. Phenothiazine is usually given with dry feed mixtures to hogs confined in a pen, although individual doses of pellets, tabs or as a drench with a syringe are also used. The drug should be given according to printed directions or under the supervision of a veterinarian.

Hot Controversy Rages Over Food Distribution For Liberated Peoples By BARROW LYONS

-WNU Staff Correspondent-

WASHINGTON, D. C .-

Some pretty warm discussions about whether citizens of liberated territories should be rationed on 2,000 calories of food a day, or 2,600 calories have been going on in Washington behind closed doors. The difference is 30 per cent, and when measured in total dollars, tons or available shipping space, this may be the difference between what is possible and what is impossible of accomplishment.

The army is the only agency in a position to distribute food in liberated territories during the early pancy. It is prepared to preserve civil order and health. Until order is restored sufficiently to permit other agencies of our government to funcmust assume responsibility.

In approaching the nutrition problem the army consulted civilian authorities as to how much food-how many calories of a balanced dietwould provide a minimum for health. In the early stages of liberaa minimum. The effort to beat enemy forces must take precedence over everything else, and at times battle requirements absorb all transportation the army can command.

What is more, we have found food distribution facilities badly disrupted in many areas. In some sections of Italy virtually all shopkeepers, who were Fascists, have disappeared, and untrained persons had to be found to handle distribution of food and supplies.

Some Difficult Problems

Nor have experienced distributors always proved trustworthy. Food entrusted to wholesalers by civilian agencies has not always found its way into normal channels of distribution. In India and North Africa much of the grain and flour sent in was withheld from distribution by wholesalers who profited by the nunger of starving peoples, until their practices were discovered and end-

So the army is not undertaking to deliver more than a minimum diet to the people of France, Italy and other liberated territories. If civilian agencies, when given access, can supplement this, they will be wel-

In determining what constituted a minimum essential diet for the maintenance of health the army shared responsibility with civilian agencies-state department, foreign economic administration and department of agriculture. UNHRA was not invited to participate in the discussions. An interdepartmental committee, including army experts, decided that 2,000 calories a day, with some exceptions, was the mini mum for maintenance of health.

Now, however, FEA nutrition experts disagree. They feel that we should undertake to provide more than 2,000 calories a day-at least 2,600 calories. It is pointed out by them that the average American gets from 3,000 to 3,200 calories a

The army does not object to people in liberated territories getting all the food possible, if it does not interfere with transportation of soldiers and supplies to the fighting fronts-but army officials do not wish to see the development of heavy civilian traffic until the Germans are beaten. It has become evident that slow victory would mean willful destruction by the Nazis in subject countries of millions of people. If we are to save their lives we must use available resources to the limit.

Belgium to Heip

After the Germans are beaten all concerned hope to do much better for liberated peoples. For instance, the Belgian government in exile plans to purchase food for its own people. It has the money and skeleton organization. It will approach undernourishment as an illness. The "sick people" of Belgium are to be fed back to health as rapidly as possible so that they can assume quickly their normal functions.

Our own authorities would approach the problem of feeding similarly. One of the first tasks of the surgeon general's office will be to make surveys to determine exactly what are the food deficiencies of liberated territories, and then see that the right kinds of food are distributed.

It should be noted that the 2,000 calories, which has been set as the nutrition goal, is the basic allowance for the average adult. Extra allowances are provided for those performing heavy labor.

In this connection Dr. Mark A. Graubard, in charge of labor education for the Nutrition Program branch, department of agriculture, points out that the average German worker today gets around 2,100 calories, as compared with 5,500 calories for an American lumberman and 4,500 for a truck driver.

Then follows a ten-day period of 'Breaking in' in the field. After that the boys are ready for work. They are not obligated to work for the Illinois Central. They can seek work on any railroad, but 75 per cent of them stay with ICR. They do not pay for their training, and all their living expenses are paid by the railroad during the course.

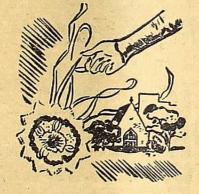

Applicants for the course are carefully selected by the line's district superintendents in cooperation with high school principals. They must have good scholastic standing and be above average in physical endurance. A boy may be permitted to leave school to take the course and then return to school to finish his term before taking a railroad job.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

Men know what they want, and they expect a lot from their new brides. So, it's up to the brides to anticipate their pleasures and run their homes as they like.

Whether your home is a 12 room, all modern mansion, or a room in a boarding house near an army camp, learn first to keep it neat. Don't let useless things accumulate. Weed out things you're through with. File recipes of favorite foods and drinks, so you can find them easily. Keep bills in a separate file.

Keep equipment in running order. Make a "home" for your man. Keep an emergency shelf for last minute suppers and plan menus one week

FBI Bureau Can 'Put Finger' on More Than Ninety Million People

The FBI identification division, universally recognized as the world's largest clearinghouse of fingerprint data and criminal records, observed the 20th anniversary of its establishment on July 1.

Director J. Edgar Hoover disclosed that the more than 90,000,000 fingerprint cards now on file represent a growth of approximately 1,000 per cent over the nucleus of some 800,000 records with which the division set up business in 1924. These starting records were contributed mainly by the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kan. Today, new files pour into the FBI offices in Washington at the rate of tens of thousands a week from police agencies all over the United States and from 47 foreign countries. In addition, millions of new fingerprint records are being contributed by the armed services, civilian agencies of the government and war infingerprint cards received for search and 11,976 fugitives were identified. The average elapsed time for the conduct of a search through the fingerprint files now has been reduced to 36 hours.

Since March, 1943, the FBI identification division has occupied the huge District of Columbia National Guard armory, located in southeast Washington. There, beneath the high arched ceiling of the drill floor are a score of block-long rows of fingerprint files.

Only recently, a man applied for a position with an ordnance depot in Missouri. However, a check of his fingerprints against the FBI files revealed that he had been arrested in 1939 for arson. Another man sought to join the merchant marine, but his fingerprint record indicated a series of arrests dating back to 1930. including a 10-year sentence for robbery. In still another case, a man who tried to get a government job at Pearl Harbor was found to have been arrested in New Jersey for violation of the National Explosives act, for which he was sentenced to a year's imprisonment and fined $100.

A man walked into the FBI headquarters in Washington in 1942 and advised that he had been suffering from amnesia the past 20 years. His fingerprints were checked and his identity was established through an army enlistment in 1912.

Fingerprints have come to be recognized as nature's infallible seal of identity for each individual, Mr. Hoover said. There are countless cases of criminals who have been brought to justice through tell-tale fingerprints unwittingly left behind at the scenes of their crimes.
