He was affectionately called "Chuck" by his family and friends.

Following his graduation from high school he entered the service June 15, 1943. He trained in field artillery at Fort Sill, Oklahoma and in November 1943 he entered the paratrooper training school at Fort Benning, Georgia. From there he was sent to Camp McCall, North Carolina, and then to Fort Meade, Maryland.

A rosebud was plucked from our garden so fair,
One that was loved and cherished so dear.
But we know she is with the Angels,
And free from all pain,
And our love will live on,
As the years pass away.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The reason for the great demand for tires and other rubber products for military motor equipment is evident when it is realized that today's infantry divisions require 3,500 ordnance vehicles of 160 different varieties. The same size outfit in World War I was equipped with 4,400 horses and 153 ordnance motor vehicles.

Because of the poor condition of tires and other parts, 43 per cent more cars had breakdowns and had to be towed from the tunnels beneath New York's Hudson River in 1943 than in any peacetime year, although traffic was 28 per cent lower than in 1941.

MR. WINKLE GOES TO WAR

By THEODORE PRATT W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Forty-four-year-old Wilbert Winkle, who is the proprietor of a general repair shop in the alley back of his home, is notified by his draft board that he is in I-A. He had thought that the doctor who examined him would not overlook his dyspepsia, his near-sightedness and his caved-in chest. He breaks the bad news to his wife, Amy, and goes to work without kissing her goodbye. The next day a newspaper photographer calls on him at his shop and takes his picture, which appears later on the front page under the caption, "Winkles Front to Fight." The story explains that Winkle was the first married selectee in Springville to be called.

CHAPTER III

"The telephone's been ringing ever since the paper came out," she announced. "People I haven't seen or heard of in years have called. One woman I didn't know at all—I mean, she was a perfect stranger."

"What did she want?" asked Mr. Winkle.

Amy looked baffled. "I don't know," she replied. "She said she just felt she had to call. As if—oh, Wilbert, as if you were dead already."

Mrs. Winkle had often glared at him as if herself wishing him dead,

The Pettigrews were first to arrive. Mrs. Pettigrew was red-eyed from weeping.

and now her concern that he might be killed seemed a little outlandish. Mr. Winkle merely said, "Well, I'm not dead."

"Wilbert, how do you really feel? This morning there wasn't time to find out." Mrs. Winkle gazed at him doubtfully.

Again, at her hesitancy, at this suggestion that the upper hand was being returned to him, Mr. Winkle had an impulse to remind her of certain things. And again he refrained, not thinking the urge was quite decent. But he did protest, "Amy, don't you look at me like that?"

"Like what?" she asked.

"As if I—that mouse-look," he accused. She looked abashed. At first Mr. Winkle could not accept the fact that the expression was on her face.

"I didn't mean to," she replied. She sounded humble.

"I can't help being the way I am," Mr. Winkle stated.

"Of course, dear. No one can." Mr. Winkle was amazed. But still he didn't say anything about the miracle occurring before his very eyes. He didn't care to embarrass Amy.

"I feel," he said in answer to her previous question, "like taking two doses for my dyspepsia." He fumbled in his pocket for his pills and brought them out.

"Some people are coming in tonight," Mrs. Winkle revealed as she bustled to get dinner. "Just the folks on the street."

"What for?"

"Well, they wanted to see you. Especially the Pettigrews. Their boy, Jack, has been called, too. He's twenty, you know. He'll be going off with you."

The evening, when it came around, was something of a combination of a funeral, a wedding, a family reunion, and a celebration for a person about to leave on a dangerous expedition.

The Pettigrews were the first to arrive. Mrs. Pettigrew was red-eyed from weeping, and she burst into new tears when she saw Mr. Winkle. "They probably won't take you," she wept, "but Jack—Jack—they'll take him, and he's only a baby."

Mr. Pettigrew himself said, "This is crazy, Winkle. Here's Jack, hardly over sucking his thumbs. And here's you, old enough to be his father."

Mr. Winkle and Jack eyed each other. The boy was self-conscious, as the young are in the presence of their elders who discuss them. Mr. Winkle, in his position as an adult, felt called upon to say something even though he really had nothing to say.

"Yes, sir," Jack said. He could make no more of Mr. Winkle being drafted along with him than Mr. Winkle could make of Jack being selected along with him. Mr. Winkle wished that the boy wouldn't be quite so respectful.

More people came. They chattered, and gazed curiously at Mrs. Winkle, as if they couldn't believe what their eyes saw nor what their ears heard. Some of them were earnest about Mr. Winkle's predicament, some wondered, and others were amused. Mr. Winkle liked the last least of all. He didn't see why people should laugh at him.

Mr. Wescott, their next-door neighbor, a rather pompous individual, cornered Mr. Winkle and stated, "If you're the kind of soldier we're going to have, God help us." He stared at Mr. Winkle as if to ask him how he ever got himself into this.

Mr. Winkle didn't think this was very patriotic.

Mr. Wescott, who was prone to tell anybody all about how anything was conducted, and who could well afford to inform Mr. Winkle about his future because he was over forty-five and not subject to military duty, went on to say, "Of course, you know they won't use you as a combatant."

"You don't think so?" Mr. Winkle asked hopefully.

"Think it out for yourself, man," Mr. Wescott lectured. "They'll have enough young fellows to do the actual fighting. They want men in their proper places, according to their abilities. That's why they're calling you in the first place, so you can release a fighting man to fight."

Mr. Winkle was encouraged. "They won't waste you as a kill-er," Mr. Wescott assured him.

Mr. Winkle didn't know whether to feel flattered or insulted.

His neighbor looked at him critically, as if gauging him for the first time. "You wouldn't be any good, anyway. They'll use you in some kind of mechanical work."

"Well," said Mr. Winkle, "I could handle that." His courage took hold of him at this talk. "But, understand me, if I thought I was capable of using a gun, I'd do it anywhere they say."

"No, sir," Mr. Wescott went on, "you'll never see active service. I can tell you that. You don't have to worry about that for a minute."

Mr. Winkle ceased to worry, but only for the allowed minute, for Mr. Wescott then looked thoughtful and amended, "Of course, men of your age are being used for combat in all the other armies, and if things get to that stage with us, I suppose you've got to consider that you might have to do a little shooting or bayonet work."

When it was time for their visitors to leave, they shook Mr. Winkle's hand as if bidding him goodbye before he went into action. Mrs. Pettigrew's tears had dried, but her perturbation remained. She pleaded of Mr. Winkle, "You'll look after Jack, won't you?"

Mr. Winkle, despite all his timidity and ineffectual outer character, could appreciate the humor in a situation. "I think," he said, "Jack ought to look after me."

He and Jack glanced at each other, and both smiled. The condemned men had at least that mutual understanding.

It was nearly eleven before the last of the guests left. Penelope came out from the corner where she had sulked all evening at the invasion of her own peaceful life. Mr. Winkle, out of habit, took her to the back yard.

When he came in again he started for the radio, to turn it on for the nightly war news broadcast he usually favored. Then he stopped and didn't go near it, but turned toward the stairs.

"Aren't you going to listen to the war news?" Mrs. Winkle asked.

"I don't think I will tonight." "But why—?" Mrs. Winkle began to speak as if she were the same person as of before this morning. But she caught herself and then said merely, "Oh."

Mr. Winkle felt like pinching himself to be sure he was awake and that this was Amy showing such tact and consideration. He smiled a little, but not so she could see him, and he decided that it was very nice indeed to have her this way.

They went upstairs and there, while they prepared themselves for the night, Mrs. Winkle commented in a small voice that seemed to indicate she had other things to say but couldn't say them, "It was a nice party, wasn't it?"

"Except," said Mr. Winkle, "I don't see exactly why it was held."

Mr. Winkle found his imagination running away with itself until his mind was possessed of a nightmare.

He saw himself packed into a troop transport. He had seen pictures of how it was done. The bunks, one on top of another in many tiers, with only a narrow aisle between, made the men look like sardines. Across the ocean the ship throbbed. And then in the night there was a dull, jarring thud. The ship shuddered. It began to list. Its engines stopped. Flames rose and men pushed and fell and screamed and struck and jumped. Mr. Winkle was in the water, which was covered thickly with oil. The oil caught fire and the flames raced toward him. He tried to blot out this picture. But it came again, and made him cold all over. He was bathed in perspiration. He began to shake slightly and found he couldn't control it, no matter how much he tried.

At that he learned how far Amy's reformation had gone, and how real it was, and that she was good-hearted all along as he always knew, and that now he was to become a soldier, she was willing to express her feelings about it, even if only silently.

Without a word, Mrs. Winkle turned in the bed beside him. She slipped a soft warm arm under his neck and put the other over his chest, and held him tightly. She seemed to understand.

Mr. Winkle was ashamed that she did, but greatly comforted, too.

The President of the United States, To Wilbert George Winkle,

Greeting: Having submitted yourself to a local board composed of your neighbors for the purpose of determining your availability for training and service in the armed forces of the United States, you are hereby notified that you have now been selected for training and service in the Army.

Mr. Winkle had never before received a communication from the President.

Following his prominent newspaper appearance and the gathering of the people of Maple Avenue, he would look very foolish indeed if he were turned down and returned home after being sent to the Induction Center.

He understood that, even though accepted, he had the privilege of returning home for a week to put his affairs in order before leaving again for good. But his fellow draftees had all announced their intention of waiving the week's furlough, and now he followed suit. He had heard the jokes to the effect that if you could breathe or were warm, the Army would accept you, and though he didn't like to believe them, he prepared for going away and staying away.

As a precaution against a drastic circumstance, Mr. Winkle made his will, a ceremony that not even Penelope regarded as a happy one.

He finished the few jobs he had in the shop and would take no more. He packed away his tools in grease and oil, and tacked up heavy paper over the windows. He took in his sign and placed it on the floor with its face against the wall. In its place, over the doors, he placed a small sign saying, "Closed."

He reflected that people who didn't know his establishment wouldn't know what was closed because he had taken in the other sign, but finally decided that this didn't matter in the least.

He was ready to leave. The evening before his departure he investigated the bag Amy had packed for him and brought downstairs. In it she had put those few articles listed in a pamphlet Mr. Winkle had purchased at a newsstand for guidance.

"Travel light, Mr. Selectee," this advised. "Don't load up with baggage because you won't have any use for it. The Army is going to clothe you, Mr. Selectee, complete to underwear, socks and handkerchiefs."

Only on one point had Mrs. Winkle deviated from the instructions. Upon examining her packing, Mr. Winkle found that she had included his rubbers. He now took them out, firmly, showing a spark of her old spirit, Mrs. Winkle put them back again, rewrapping them in the tissue paper he stripped away. "With the rubber shortage," she said, "the Army may not have a pair for every man."

"I don't think they have rubbers in the Army," Mr. Winkle protested. "They won't let me wear them."

THE PRIEST IN THE LIFE OF ISRAEL

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 2:27-30, 35; 4:18, 19. GOLDEN TEXT—For every high priest taken from among men is ordained for men in things pertaining to God.—Hebrews 5:1.

Failure to observe God's law inevitably brings disaster. That is true in the family, and in the nation. It follows even though the man who sins is in a high and favored position in God's service.

Our lesson which brings before us the work of the priest in Israel also reminds us of the sacred relationship of father and son. These are important matters inviting our careful study.

I. A Holy Calling: (2:27, 28).

Eli was the high priest in Israel, an office ordained of God, and by Him established in the household of Aaron. The priest was to stand between God and man, there to seek His forgiveness for the sins of the people, and His grace and mercy upon them. He was to teach them the law of God and to seek for them divine guidance. He was subject to special laws, and had great privileges of service.

Such a man must not only be holy himself, but unusually diligent about properly rearing his sons who would follow him in this office, which was by God's ordinance an hereditary one. He had to be both a good minister and a good father. Eli was the former, but he failed as a father.

In the New Testament, Christ becomes our High Priest (Heb. 7:26; 9:11), and those who minister for Him are to bring men to Him—the "one Mediator between God and Man" (I Tim. 2:5; Heb. 9:15). In this new covenant the minister has a high and holy calling, but it also is made clear that all believers have the liberty to come boldly to the throne of grace (Heb. 4:16); hence they too are called "a holy priesthood" (I Pet. 2:5).

II. A High Responsibility (2:29, 30, 35).

As already suggested, Eli was evidently a man of personal piety and integrity in office. We honor him for that, but we regret his failure to properly rear his sons who were to succeed him.

It is not enough to meet one phase of our responsibility before God and then, because of our faithfulness there to seek to justify weakness elsewhere. One sometimes hears the expression, "But he is such a good man," as an excuse for failure, but it just will not do.

Eli did reiterate with his boys, but he waited until it was too late—or did it in such a way and at such a time as to be ineffective. His failure at this point is declared (v. 29) to be a placing of his sons above God in his thinking.

What a solemn warning to indulgent parents! "Not to rule and restrain our children, to give them their own way, is to honor them more than God. Ere we think it, weakness becomes wickedness in ourselves and in our children too." God has "made every parent . . . a king in his home, that he may . . . command his children in the way of the Lord" (Andrew Murray).

God will not permit such sin and failure to pass unnoticed. He will set aside those who fail Him (v. 30) and bring them into judgment. He has others who are willing to serve Him (v. 35). Evidently young Samuel was the one in mind here.

It is both significant and encouraging to note that in the midst of the wicked and immoral surroundings created by Eli's sons, God had the tender vine of His own planting—the life of the boy Samuel, growing up in the temple. He was already hearing God's voice and learning to obey the call.

III. A Heavy Judgment (4:12-18). The Israelites went out to battle against the Philistines. Meeting defeat, they thought to gain victory by bringing the ark of the covenant into battle, and who had the effrontery to appear as "priests" with the ark but the wicked sons of Eli.

Swift and awful was the judgment of God. Not only was there defeat, but the ark was lost to the heathen Philistines, and the two sons of Eli were killed. When Eli heard the news of what had taken place, he too fell and died. Here was the tragic end of a life that had begun with promise, and all because of weakness, failure and sin.

There is a pointed lesson here for us. The people of Israel depended on the ark itself, an outward symbol of godliness, when there was no spiritual life in the heart—and they went down to failure. Will we go through the motions of religious exercises, talk easily of prayer, appoint men who please our itching ears (II Tim. 4:3) to preach to us, and then go on our careless, worldly, indifferent way, supposing that our formal religion will save us? Paul tells us in II Timothy 3:1-5 that "having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof" is a sign of the "last days," of "perilous times" which have come upon us. May God save us!

Embroidery for Your Towels Bassinet for That Darling Baby

Sailor Boy Tea Towels. If you've new tea towels to work on, try doing these sailor boy figures on them. They're engaging and gay. Four colors are used—red, green, yellow and blue. Each of the six figures is about six inches high and all are done in the simplest outline stitch. If you are raising money for your local canteen service, these towels will sell exceptionally well.

They range from fifty to well over a hundred dollars! So make your own! It's easily done. A large-sized market basket is covered with unbleached muslin, then padded with soft rayon or lovely pink or blue rayon crepe or satin. Lace, net, organdie or dotted scrim makes the frounces. An ordinary bed pillow is baby's mattress. To obtain complete instructions for the Baby Bassinet (Pattern No. 5748) various finishing and decorating details, send 16 cents, your name, address and the pattern number. Household Hints. When you have an old clock that refuses to run any more, it can be used in a sick room to tell when it is time for the next dose of medicine by moving the hands to the time it is to be taken. This makes it easy to remember.

With the use of a hand spray or even the garden hose, starched clothes may be sprinkled right on the line. Roll them up as they are taken from the line.

A little paraffin on a sticky window cord will be found helpful.

To keep cookies fresh longer, add a tablespoon of jam or jelly to the dough.

A handy receptacle for sundry tacks, nails and screws that will be polite to your fingers, is a large cork kept in the kitchen cutlery drawer for convenience.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—the risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become overtaxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

EVERY CORD OF PEELED PULPWOOD COUNTS

WE know you've done a lot to help win the war. We know this is your busy season and you are busy every minute.

But everybody else is in just the same shape as you are. Pulpwood isn't coming in as fast as it should and we need every single cord you can cut now.

Peeled Pulpwood Needed

The many war uses of pulpwood have caused a serious shortage. This mill is doing all it can to help meet the country's demands but we cannot turn out the pulp unless we get the wood.

This is the
PEELING SEASON
Another reason for cutting all the pulpwood you can now is that this is the season when wood can be peeled.
It will pay you to peel your wood because peeled wood brings a better price, is easier to handle and lighter to haul.

How U. S. Troops Went Ashore on Normandy Beach

Signal Corps Photographs Reveal Invasion Tactics.

Washington, D. C. NAZI PEACE FEELERS
Reports that the German generals revolted against Hitler only after peace negotiations with Russia failed, have caused Washington diplomatic sources to reveal that, on two previous occasions, German peace feelers were extended to Russia.

In fact, there was a very deep fear in U. S. army-navy circles that Russia might be tempted by these earlier offers, especially during the days when no second front had been started and when Stalin was bitter against the Allies for not starting it. Nazi peace offer number 1 was made several months after Stalingrad, during the early winter of 1943. The peace proposal was made by the Japanese ambassador in Moscow, who, being neutral, was in a position to lay the matter before Foreign Commissar Molotoff. Just what was in the Nazi olive branch is not definitely known, though Hitler was reported ready to give back to the Russians all of their pre-1939 territory except the Ukraine.

Molotoff is reported to have torn up the offer and thrown it into the waste-basket.

Nazi peace offer number 2 was made in the summer of 1943 in a villa on the outskirts of Stockholm. It was made by Hans Thomsen, German ambassador to Sweden and former charge d'affaires in Washington. Thomsen, who speaks perfect English, was born of a Norwegian father, and married a Hungarian who was openly bitter against Hitler and constantly damned him at Washington dinner parties. Washington hostesses never knew whether Frau Thomsen really hated Hitler or was putting on an act to show that there could be freedom of expression among Germans.

At any rate, Hitler later gave her husband a position of great trust as his own personal interpreter, then sent him to Sweden, where Thomsen handled the peace discussion with the Russians.

The Stockholm olive branch also was rebuffed by the Russians, though they didn't hesitate to let the Allies know that something like this was being talked about—even intimating that, if the second front wasn't opened before long, the next olive branch might be more acceptable.

Churchill never took any stock in these intimations, claimed the Russians were bluffing and would never make a separate peace with the Nazis. His thesis was that Stalin would be thrown out of Russia if he did. This was one reason why Churchill kept pulling back from starting a second front.

Roosevelt, however, felt that (1) it was only fair to the Russians to carry out what we had promised them and the world as early as 1942; that (2) a second front was the one way to keep Germany busy on two fronts and end the war in a hurry.

DESTRUCTION OF THE ROBOT

Authentic London reports are not too encouraging regarding destruction of the robot bomb. Greatest success has been in knocking it out in the air with fighter planes. However, it takes a robot just 3½ minutes to cross the channel, so the fighters have to work with terrific speed. (Total time from the bomb's launching until the time it hits London is estimated at 10 minutes.)

If they knock the bomb down over London, it explodes with just as much damage as if they had let it alone, so there is only one place to go after it—over the channel.

Once a robot escapes the fighters and passes over London, anti-aircraft fire is stopped and the only thing to do is to let the bomb take its course and explode wherever it hits.

Furthermore, it is not easy to knock down a robot over the channel. Gunfire must strike its nose in order to explode it. A cannon ball in the body of the robot plane, however, will usually knock it out. Some intrepid fighters have flown up very close—the robot cannot fire back—and tipped up its wing with the wing of the fighter.

NOTE—The Germans recently have perfected a clock which goes off inside the robot about ten minutes after it leaves France, or about the time it is over London. This clock turns the robot's tail rudder so that it makes an eerie, graceful curve as if someone were inside piloting it, or as if it were radio-controlled. This sudden turn is calculated by the Germans to send it in a different direction from that in which the British are preparing to receive it.

ROBOT BOMBS IN LONDON

The uncensored diplomatic pouch from London reports that the proportion of Americans being killed by Hitler's robot bombs is greater than the proportion of British. This is because Americans in London haven't learned to adjust themselves to living in a city where death lurks at every corner.

Because Americans aren't trained in watching for means of protection in the street, they lose that split second's time necessary to get out of the way of flying glass and bricks.

On D-day Capt. Herman Wall of the army signal corps was sent with assault units to get some close-up photographs of the Normandy invasion and with quiet confidence he promised to deliver.

Captain Wall got some pictures of the landings which he thought were good, and then he was hit by shell-fire. He came to in a pre-operative tent. His left leg was gone. He had suffered bad wounds in his right thigh and in his left shoulder and forearm. He was mildly shell-shocked, too, and was on the "critical list." An army surgeon was working on him, working against time to save his life. "I've got a secret package," said Wall to the surgeon as soon as he could speak. "It's pictures—and important!" The surgeon tried to silence his patient for he was "between two worlds" and could go in either direction.

"Look Doc," and Wall roused himself to speak earnestly. "These pictures have got to get through. Headquarters is counting on them. Call them up, please—now," and he cleared his head to give the necessary telephone numbers. The medical officer saw that the most effective first aid he could administer was to relieve his patient of the load of obligation he carried, so he summoned a lieutenant and had him put through the phone calls immediately.

The men at headquarters considered the pictures so important that they sent a special plane for them to the airport nearest the hospital tent in which Wall lay. An army doctor had them ready at the airport when the plane came in, and in record time they were taken to headquarters and developed.

In the words of Maj. Martin J. McEvilly, signal corps, head of the still cameramen, "They proved to be honeys—typical of Wall—our first and only pictures for two days."

By a merciful "break" Captain Wall did not die as a result of putting the pictures ahead of his own life. He has been removed to northern England and is now off the "critical list."

Captain Wall lives at 424 North Kings Road, Hollywood, Calif. He was a professional photographer before the war and has been an instructor in photography in several California schools. He was born in Milwaukee, Wis., and is a graduate of Milwaukee high school.

American infantrymen loaded with equipment and weapons leap from the landing craft and dash ashore through the surf. Half-tracks, "ducks" and other vehicles are clambering up the beach on the Norman coast on D-day.

Express Air Routes, Branch Lines Need of Future, Says Expert

America's skyways, like America's highways, must be straightened and modernized at a cost of millions of dollars if they are to bear this nation's expanded postwar air traffic safely and economically.

David E. Postle, Civil Aeronautics board member, says in the July issue of Flying magazine that the simplest solution is to replace our present fixed, jagged and indirect air lanes with great two-way "boulevards." These long-distance "express" routes would be fed by "local" or stub airways, connecting bypassed cities with the fast aerial arteries.

Postle says the two greatest weaknesses in our present system are the indirect, city-to-city hops which are uneconomical, and the lack of adequate traffic control over all aircraft, both private and commercial. As an indication of the problems facing the CAA, some 300 applications are now on file for commercial feeder and cargo airlines to more than 4,000 cities. Others are arriving daily and indications are that every city of any size will demand some form of air service.

Coupled with this prospective hopeless overlapping and intersecting is the probability that 500,000 private aircraft will be in the air by 1950. To control these unknown, unplotted flights that often infringe upon the air-highway space, our present system of traffic control, already at the breaking point, must be modernized at fantastic cost.

Manual operation of flight progress boards must give way to electrically operated boards, a system that can be enlarged constantly in direct proportion to the increase in air traffic.

"We can achieve freedom and efficiency of flight, simplicity of regulation and reduction of air traffic control to the essential degree only by the elimination of our present civil airways," he summarized.

'Hound Dog' Rescued

Jake Light fondles his "hound dog," Old Drive, who was rescued after being trapped for 10 days in a cave near Monterey, Mo. Forty men and boys cut a tunnel through a limestone cliff to reach the animal, considered the "best durn coon dog in Reynolds county." Old Drive was fed during his imprisonment by grease-soaked rags which were thrust into the hole on the end of a long pole.

What to Do

Hog Cholera Can Be Properly Treated

Vaccination and Care Essential

Hog cholera is a serious contagious swine disease caused by a virus, which is a substance so small that it cannot be seen through a microscope. It costs a loss of $12,500,000 annually to swine growers, according to a report issued by Clemson Agricultural college.

The symptoms of hog cholera are loss of appetite, high fever, and either constipation or diarrhea. The affected animals usually remain in the bed, but when forced to move, walk with a wobbling gait. The sick pigs usually die within six to ten days but may linger three to four weeks before they die.

The virus which causes hog cholera is present in the body tissues, fluids and excretions of hogs affected with hog cholera. Therefore, feed, water, bedding, and soil become contaminated very quickly with bladder and bowel eliminations.

If this infected material gets into the digestive tract of susceptible swine, these animals will develop hog cholera in a few days.

Hog cholera is usually spread by moving sick hogs, by moving unvaccinated hogs in contaminated trucks, Saugus, Calif., "blue blood," tested and ready to be shipped east to aid in strain improvement. Barbara Williams, 3½, whose father raised the boar, gives it a farewell feeding.

by dogs, buzzards and other animals, by mud and manure carried from infected to noninfected farms on the shoes of individuals, on wheels of farm vehicles, by careless handling of hog cholera virus, by feeding table scraps and garbage which contain hog bones and uncooked pork trimmings and by improper disposal of the carcasses of hogs which have died of hog cholera.

Hog cholera can be prevented by vaccinating healthy animals with adequate amounts of hog cholera serum and virus produced by a reputable laboratory. They should be vaccinated when six to seven weeks old.

Francis Powers, Chicago sports writer, points out that Col. Arnold Strobe Jackson, English Olympic champion in 1912, calculated that the four-minute mile will be reached only if a runner can pace himself to 58, 62, 61 and 59 seconds. That is a punishing schedule. It demands a terrific start, a breathing spell during the second quarter with a gradual pickup during the third and speed enough for a slamming finish.

A Comparison

Andersson bettered Jackson's standard for the first quarter and was 2.7 ahead of time at the half. He fell 1.1 back of schedule on the third, but was still eight-tenths of a second to the good for the three-quarters. The final lap was his undoing—he went 2.4 off the Jackson pace.

Andersson indicated earlier in the season that he would have come to the United States but for previous running commitments in Sweden. Hagg, too, has announced that he will return to the United States at "the earliest possible convenience."

His appearance here would furnish grand entertainment, but the competition we could provide during the summer would make an early trip to this country rather futile.

It would be better if the two Swedes would come for our winter season. They could meet America's milers when they were in top form. It is also doubtful if Andersson and Hagg, during the warm months, could approach the time they made in their homeland, where they can run late in the evening when it is cool and there is no bothersome humidity.

The extraction of edible oil, chemically similar to soybean oil, is the only one of the new uses to which this weed has been put as a war measure.

In Canada, the milkweed has proven a good source of rubber. The leaves from one acre will yield from 200 to 300 pounds of rubber gum.

The floss of milkweed can be converted into a substitute for kapok which is in much demand for life preservers and linings for flying suits. This floss should be picked in early September after the seeds turn brown and before the pods open up.

Plans for Wintering

Satisfactory wintering of beef cows on forest ranges of the south-east is possible if they are given a daily supplemental feed of two pounds of soybean or cottonseed meal per head. This type of feed has been found to stimulate appetite and make for better use of native forage. Although meal feeds are on the scarce list, it is pointed out that the supply required is small in proportion to the quantity of beef produced.

IT REMAINED for Arne Andersson, Swedish schoolteacher, to prove to the world that talk of a four-minute mile was more than wishful thinking.

In the greatest mile race of all time, Andersson toured the distance in 4:01.6. Running against the famed Gunder Hagg, Andersson came the closest to achieving the goal of some 70 years. He has definitely proved his superiority over Hagg, and has removed any doubt that there is anyone in his class. And it should be noted that Hagg knocked off the mile in 4:02, better than any previously recorded time before their duel.

1943 Record

Andersson's 4:01.6 mile was the latest development in the running of the event that has become a monopoly for him and Hagg. They have broken the record four times in the past two years, shaving nearly five seconds from the 4:06.4 chalked up by Sidney Wooderson of England in 1937.

In 1943 Andersson established a world record of 4:02.6. At 28, the flying Swede cut a full second from that mark. For the first three quarters of his race with Hagg, Arne actually was eight-tenths of a second ahead of the four-minute pace. He ran the first quarter in 56.8 for the fastest lap ever made in a mile race, with 60.5 for the quarter, he was hitting pretty much the pace of a good middle-distance man. He made the third quarter in 62.9 and the last in 61.4.

In running 4:02.6 last year Andersson ran his quarters in 58.5, 62.5, 61.8 and 59.8. Comparison of the two races shows that he was 1.7 faster on the first quarter than last summer and two full seconds on the second lap. This gave him a total advantage of 3.9 seconds for the half. He began to lag and ran the third quarter 1.9 slower and then lost 2.4 in the final. It is obvious that he has improved over the first half mile. But he will have to develop a stronger finish to clock the four-minute mile.

Francis Powers, Chicago sports writer, points out that Col. Arnold Strobe Jackson, English Olympic champion in 1912, calculated that the four-minute mile will be reached only if a runner can pace himself to 58, 62, 61 and 59 seconds. That is a punishing schedule. It demands a terrific start, a breathing spell during the second quarter with a gradual pickup during the third and speed enough for a slamming finish.

Andersson bettered Jackson's standard for the first quarter and was 2.7 ahead of time at the half. He fell 1.1 back of schedule on the third, but was still eight-tenths of a second to the good for the three-quarters. The final lap was his undoing—he went 2.4 off the Jackson pace.

Andersson indicated earlier in the season that he would have come to the United States but for previous running commitments in Sweden. Hagg, too, has announced that he will return to the United States at "the earliest possible convenience."

His appearance here would furnish grand entertainment, but the competition we could provide during the summer would make an early trip to this country rather futile.

It would be better if the two Swedes would come for our winter season. They could meet America's milers when they were in top form. It is also doubtful if Andersson and Hagg, during the warm months, could approach the time they made in their homeland, where they can run late in the evening when it is cool and there is no bothersome humidity.

Champion Forgetter

NEW YORK.—One of the world's champion forgetters hailed a cab near Pennsylvania station, rode to Fifth avenue and 59th street and walked away, leaving on the seat $27,200 in 100 dollar bills. The taxi driver discovered the money and turned it over to police. Under local law it is his unless claimed within six months.

Thinks Salesman Must Have Had an Honest Wife

TULSA, OKLA.—Many years ago Mrs. Lillian Roth decided to invest $2,000 in stock certificates. A salesman took her $2,000 and disappeared. Mrs. Roth said she thought the salesman must have had an honest wife in talking of the belated return of her money.

Latest Fabrics Are Hand-Painted, Or Are Printed to Look That Way

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

HAND-PAINTED fabrics and printed fabrics with a hand-painted look are making exciting style news this summer in daytime, sports and evening wear alike. This delightful new idea is especially timely this season when limitations on yardage puts an extra premium on fabric interest. Classic shirts, simple little casual frocks and modish close-sleeved dinner gowns become glamorous stars of one's wardrobe, thanks to the colorful and exotic painted designs or prints that look hand-painted which make each garment an arresting work of art.

Fabrics used for these distinguished fashions as herewith illustrated are fine rayons of both crisp and soft textures. Some costumes combine two kinds of fabrics very effectively, one being hand-painted and the other in solid color for contrast. For example, a stunning slacks costume for informal dinner wear or for lounging at home, teams tapered slacks of deep green rayon faille with a white rayon crepe shirt which is gorgeously painted as shown upper right in the group. Banana, palm and other tropical leaves inspired the design of the hand-painted panels and the sleeves of this beautiful blouse, the painting done in many shades of green to tune to the color of the slacks.

Butterflies, flowers and leaves are painted on soft rayon jersey to make the cap-sleeved blouse of the attractive costume at upper left in the picture. The bateau neckline is cut high at the front, low at back. The street-length skirt of deep blue spun rayon completes a costume that is equally suitable for dinner, at home or for vacation strolling. What a chorus of "ohs" and "ahs" of admiration will greet you as you meet friends along the way!

Patternings of the hand-painted styles are highly original, ranging from exotic florals which trail colorful blossoms and leafy vines all over the fabric background to amusing and daring stylized cockfight scenes and symbols, monkeys gamboling through jungle glades and giant single flowers painted on in corsage fashion, embellished with sequin-embroidered stamens.

The striking blouse shown in the foreground is a notable example of the new-style fantastically humorous patterning. Cockfight scenes and symbols are painted on fine white rayon crepe to make this distinctive blouse. Colored sequins are embroidered on amusingly to highlight the cock's bright comb and feathers. The classic shirt is a favorite medium for this new and sensational hand-painting vogue, because of the uncluttered simplicity of its lines.

Very interesting and more expensive than the hand-painted fabrics are those printed in patternings and colors with a hand-painted look. These prints are applied to the same fabrics used for hand-painting and are used in the same way except that, because of the more moderate cost, they appear more frequently than the hand-painted fabrics and one-piece dinner styles.

One of the most attractive prints of this type is a spaced design of giant morning glories and leaves, in subtle shades of pink, purple and blue trailing over pastel backgrounds, on linen-textured spun rayon fabric. This material is wrinkle-resistant, drapes beautifully and tailors crisply. Being so versatile, this stunning fabric is being used this season for draped pareo swim suits, spectator frocks, blouses, separate skirts and dinner gowns, serving all fields equally well. The charming frock to the left is fashioned of this very lovely print with a hand-painted look. In order to distinguish the real hand-painted fabric from the printed type that has a hand-painted appearance, the trick is to look for the artist's brush marks, which, of course, do not appear on the printed fabric nor on those which are painted by airbrush.

Drapery Chintz

Time was when one went to the dress material section for dress materials, but now you buy any fabric that strikes your fancy, be it a damask tablecloth or a chintz drapery. You take it home and make an adorable frock from it. The designer of the charming bare midriff suit, here pictured, did just that, selecting a white drapery chintz with a border of sweet violets and thus again cotton scores a new triumph in the dress fabric world. The short-sleeved bolero that plays up to this flowery sunsuit, fits below the violet-strewn bra in front so that it just covers the bare spaces, making the costume dressed up enough to wear to lunch, tea, dining or dates.

Wide Shoulderline Is New Trend in Blouses

One of the most significant trends in fashion is the new shoulder that goes straight out with military precision. This innovation calls for sleeves with little or no fullness at the top. A new type shoulder pad is needed for the correct effect and already they can be obtained in the notions departments of leading stores. The tendency of the new shoulder treatment is to give the impression of width which is greatly to be desired, for, being wide at the top, a blouse or bodice looks smaller at the waistline by way of contrast. Another element that enters into dress styling this year is the use of yokes. Many of the smartest black wools are coming in styled with black satin yokes. The new yokes take on versatile shapes. An effect sponsored this season is the deep horizontal band in contrast fabric that extends across the front from shoulder to shoulder giving a yoke effect.

Dinner, Afternoon Gowns Are Made of Gleaming Satin

Gleaming satin is making a sensational entry in the fabric world. It gleams forth from every nook and crook of the fashion picture. Smart restaurant suits are made of handsome slipper satin. Dinner and afternoon gowns in slim, svelte lines accented with a huge hip bow at one side, are made of rich looking satin, not only in black or brown or navy but in such lush colors as deep fuchsia or purple, and a few very exclusive models are in gray satin.

American Troops Land at Harbors on Guam

Guam, first American possession to fall to the Japs, is back under control of the military authorities. After the U. S. naval task forces subjected Jap installations to intermittent bombardment, the marines and army troops established beachheads. The Yanks drove northward and southward on the west coast, captured airports destroyed during the bombardment, killed hundreds of Japanese, destroyed tanks and installations and took possession of all major objectives.

"80.6% of sufferers showed CLINICAL IMPROVEMENT after only 10-day treatment

with SORETONE

Foster D. Snell, Inc., well-known consulting chemists, have just completed a test with a group of men and women suffering from Athlete's Foot. These people were told to use Soretone. At the end of only a ten-day test period, their feet were examined by a physician. We quote from the report:

"After the use of Soretone according to the directions on the label for a period of only ten days, 80.6% of the cases showed clinical improvement of an infection which is most stubborn to control."

Improvements were shown in the symptoms of Athlete's Foot—the itching, burning, redness, etc. The report says:

"In our opinion Soretone is of very definite benefit in the treatment of this disease, which is commonly known as 'Athlete's Foot'."

So if Athlete's Foot troubles you, don't temporize! Get Soretone! McKesson & Robbins, Inc., Bridgeport, Connecticut.
