Alabaster Boy in Famous Airborne Invasion Regiment

Pvt. Harold A. DeLosh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude DeLosh of Alabaster, is a member of the parachute infantry regiment of 82nd Airborne Division which covered itself with glory in the invasion of Normandy.

This is the story of the parachute regiment which captured Ste. Mere Eglise in Normandy three hours before Allied Landing Forces touched the beachhead on D-Day.

This regiment played an outstanding part in carrying out the mission of the airborne troops, which was to prevent the Germans from throwing powerful forces from the west and south against the beach head.

The men of this regiment had a particular reason to be proud when they took Ste. Mere Eglise. It was the important junction town through which the Germans were expected to move up reinforcements. It was they who also took St. Sauveur le Vicomte opening the way for mobile forces to drive on to the sea and thus cut off the peninsula from Cherbourg.

Men of the regiment landed mostly around Ste. Mere Eglise. Many met enemy machine-gun fire as they hit the ground. There was enemy mortar fire as well. Snipers were all about. Almost every man found himself forced to fight the enemy immediately.

It was close country, made up of small fields bordered by hedgerows ages old. These gave the Germans excellent cover. The count favored defense.

Having overcome initial resistance, various elements of the regiment got together soon after landing, taking up strategic points in the area. One force took up a position at the bridge across the Morderot outside of Ste. Mere. This bridge was held despite heavy counter attacks from German tanks.

The mayor of Ste. Mere Eglise, in describing the action, states, "For 48 hours these men, their strength reduced already by losses during the night, always alert for combat, separated from the sea by eight kilometers of hostile country, having on their right flank the village of Fauville, towards Carentan, strong detachments of enemy infantry and anti-aircraft units, on their left flank at Neuville au Plain two battalions of the German Division, 1050 Hermann Infantry, composed largely of guns and tanks, and finally on their west facing the sea, two companies of fanatical Georgians who would fight to the last man—these American soldiers resisted alone with their sub-machine guns, two machine guns and two small cannons taken from gliders."

"These men I observed in battle. They spoke little, one might say they maneuvered. They went along, cigarette between their lips, hugging the walls, yet going along uprightly and quietly, under the shelling from batteries at Azeville and Saint Martin."

The mayor concludes, "Forty eight hours" after their arrival, the magnificent work was accomplished, by them alone. Two battalions had been cut to pieces in the north, two battalions in the south, several anti-aircraft units, in the west two companies of Georgians whose remnants barricaded themselves in a chateau at Beuzeville au Plain. They had destroyed eight tanks, some cannon and had taken 364 prisoners."

WHITTEMORE MAN KILLED IN NORMANDY

William Goupil Had Been Overseas Since April

The first Whittemore war casualty was reported here Sunday when word came that William Goupil was killed in action in France on July 29.

His brother, Basil, had received a letter from him dated July 23, six days before his death. He said in the letter that they were in the thickest, and did not know the outcome.

He had spent several months at Camp Wallace, Texas, after being inducted in the army, and had been sent overseas some time in April.

He leaves a wife and two year old son who reside in Detroit; two sisters, Mrs. Frank Ranger and Mrs. Arthur Ranger, both of Flint, and two brothers, Basil and Wallace, both of Whittemore, and a half brother, George Goupil, of Flint.

William was born at Whittemore and attended the public schools there. He always took part in all sports, especially baseball, and was a favorite with the young folks.

He had gone to Detroit where he had employment about a year before going to the army.

The deepest sympathy of the community is extended to the bereaved sisters and brothers, and family.

Where Party Lines Are Not Important

Cabin Cruiser Goes Aground at Tawas City Park; Tossed on Beach

The "Pollywog," a 38-foot cabin cruiser, owned by A. F. Matthews of Saginaw ran on a sandbar Saturday a short distance off the Tawas city park dock. Planning to enter Tawas river, Matthews said their motor failed, and they became confused in the wind and darkness. With Matthews was a party of seven other Saginaw men.

After anchoring the stranded boat, the party waded ashore. A Coast Guard crew was called to the scene. Efforts to remove the boat from the bar were postponed until the next morning. During the night the wind increased in strength and tossed the boat sideways on the beach.

With some men and a team of horses, Peter Vallier of this city had the boat afloat after about two hours of work Monday. Removing the sand which had washed around the boat during the night with the team and scraper, the boat was turned toward the lake, and M. T. Coyle then towed it to deep water with a fish tug.

Washington, D. C.
U. S.-BRITISH OIL ACCORD
 This column, it should be noted in advance, is likely to be dull. But if you are interested in keeping your son or husband out of another war, it should be important.

The United States and Great Britain are just concluding the first agreement aimed to remove the danger of war—an agreement on oil. Oil is one of the most ticklish economic subjects in the world. Oil is what makes a nation's battleships move, runs the automobiles, sends the planes into the air—in fact, spells the difference between a nation of strength or a nation which must bow to the whims of others. The present oil agreement seeks to settle the battle for oil; eliminate one important cause of war.

The last war was scarcely over when Great Britain began maneuvering to corner the oil supplies of the world. British leaders were quite frank about it.

United States Protests.
 Finding itself in this position, the United States government jumped into the battle for oil with vigor. The secretary of state, Charles Evans Hughes, wrote a series of blunt, bare-faced notes to the British, wanting to know why they barred American oil companies from Palestine, since Palestine was not British but merely mandated to the British by the League.

Meanwhile, the British, though barring the U. S. from their areas of interest, quietly invaded ours. They turned up with concessions in Colombia, not far from the Panama Canal. Even in Panama proper, a British gold-mining company staked out a huge and suspicious claim in an area where no gold was known to exist.

History Begins to Repeat.
 In World War II, history at first began to repeat. The five senators who toured the world war fronts came back with the story of how the U.S.A. was rapidly depleting her oil reserves while the British were hoarding theirs. They told how the British were trying to keep us from further developing oil resources in Arabia; how the British had a refinery on the Gulf of Persia, 50 per cent idle, while we shipped oil clear across the Atlantic to British armies in the Near East.

Yes, it looked as if history would repeat.

On last April 29, however, representatives of the British and American governments negotiated an informal understanding aimed to eliminate the oil battles of the future. It was an excellent, far-sighted agreement. And during the last two weeks by Washington, Lord Beaverbrook and his associates have been negotiating with Secretaries Ickes and Hull to make this informal oil agreement formal and binding. This time, the British have been far more cooperative and far-sighted than in 1919—with one possible exception.

After U. S.-British experts laid their excellent April 29 ground work, Lord Beaverbrook kicked over the traces at some things, and he seems to be keeping a more watchful eye on the interests of the empire than on a fair future peace. For instance, he has been insisting that Britain have the right to ban the sale of U. S. oil in England, despite the fact that British Shell sells in this country. However, the basic agreement is truly encouraging when it comes to future peace.

Provisions of Agreement.
 It provides, first: "That petroleum shall be available in international trade to the nationals of all peace-loving countries in adequate volume, at fair prices and on an equitable and non-discriminatory basis."

This means that, if the U.S.A. runs out of oil or vice versa, it is up to Britain to help supply us unless, for example, one or the other attempts to conquer Ethiopia as Mussolini did, and the world peace-machinery countries attempt to cut off their oil as the League tried to do to Italy but, because of pressure from the big companies, could not do.

The agreement also gives "equal opportunity" for "acquisition," "development," etc., in areas under concession. This eliminates cutthroat rivalry for new fields. Each nation is to respect the valid concessions of the other and its citizens.

Finally, and very important, "exploration, development, operation of refineries and distribution should not be hampered by restrictions imposed by either government or its nationals."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Cautious Mr. Turk—If you want the real low-down on why the Turks finally broke with Germany, it was because Hitler had moved troops out of Bulgaria just opposite Turkey. After that, the Turks weren't afraid of being attacked. . . . With Sweden and Switzerland both closed to Hitler for escape, his few remaining havens are Japan—which won't last long—and Argentina. . . . It has long been rumored that the Nazi top men were building up cash reserves in Argentina.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.
 Two of the nation's most widely heralded civilian heavyweights were on display at Wrigley field in Chicago a couple of weeks ago and proved one thing—there is no need for Sgt. Joe Louis, current custodian of the world's championship, to go into serious training for the defense of his title.

The Chicago debacle saw Joe Baksi, a big, tough hulk, make his way to a 10-round decision over Lee Savold, Paterson, N. J., heavyweight. The victory carried with it recognition of the Illinois Athletic commission as "duration" heavyweight championship. That means until Louis, Conn, Pastor and the rest return.

We had figured Savold to win. Not that we were particularly interested, but after all it was a fight supposedly of some consequence in the current heavyweight picture. Incidentally, that picture is dark, forbidding and not very interesting to see.

Fighting Machine

It wasn't so long ago that Savold, the loser, looked like a fine fighting machine. But the machine appears to be quite well worn out. He had two good rounds against Baksi the fourth and fifth—but he wasn't the same fighter who scored previous successes in Chicago against Nate Bolden, Lem Franklin (twice) and Lou Nova.

Baksi is no graceful gazelle. He plods ahead with his pointed jaw stuck out belligerently and his huge hands flopping. But that jaw is fashioned of granite and is impervious to blows that would wilt a man of lesser stamina.

Savold was in bad shape much of the time, having been mauled in close about the head and kidneys. Baksi slammed lefts to the body and whacked short, right uppercuts across the chin. From the sixth round on the big Pole kept pressing his advantage, until, at the finish, Lee's nose was bleeding and the left side of his body was the color of a boiled lobster.

Even Hymie Wiseman, Savold's manager, couldn't think of a thing to say in defense of his boy. "He looked like a preliminary boy. There can be no excuse except that he didn't—or couldn't—untrack himself. I swear that on his gym showing he looked unbeatable. He never was better."

Great Hearted

He had one thing that reminded onlookers of the Savold of yesterday. He had the same heart that he did when he disposed of Bolden, Franklin and Nova. When the last gong sounded there were many who insisted that he had gone over the crest, and that from now on his fights would continue to grow less effective. Perhaps the pace Lee has always maintained finally caught up with him, depriving his legs of speed and his fists of punch.

Savold made no excuses. "I was in shape," he said in his dressing room, "but the maritime service took some zip out of me. I can't concentrate too much on my ring wars, especially when I'm training for a bigger battle."

The fight wasn't a howling financial success, luring a $43,355 gross gate, which probably means the show was promoted at a deficit since the headliners took 60 per cent of the net. It also proved a bit boring to the assembled 16,135 spectators, 7,500 of them being uniformed servicemen and women, who were Promoter Jack Kearns' guests.

To be truthful, the customers, probably including Kearns' nonpaying guests, began to boo the action about the time of the seventh round and didn't stop until the bout reached its somewhat inglorious end.

Louis and Conn
 Perhaps we're too critical, but there are only two contemporary heavyweights we'd travel any distance to see—Champion Joe Louis and Contender Billy Conn. Both men are real fighters. Both have the heart for it, the ability to fight and are capable of putting up a real show every time they step into the ring. In our book, Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis are the two greatest heavyweights of all time. Both men were dangerous from the start.

Tractors on Tinian Excursion

A long line of marine and army amphibious tractors, coming into the beach at Tinian island, looks like a holiday excursion train, one after another as they near the shore. It was just another stop on the road to Tokyo and when the island fell it proved the GIs and Leathernecks were more than a match for the best that Tokyo could give.

Arlene Saved by Hand Pump

When the electric power failed in a mechanical respirator, Arlene Kveton, 11, of Chicago, was saved when a manual pump was attached to the iron lung. The Cook County hospital staff worked incessantly for eight hours with the pump. Dr. John P. Waitkus, left, stands ready to relieve Dr. H. Bernstein as Nurse Marlies Stern gives aid.

Five Hungry Children Deserted

When their dad failed to return home with his pay check, their mother left them and started out to look for their father. The result was five hungry children, Ronald, 2; Francis, 3 (rear); Bobby, 7; Geraldine, 6; and Wayne Strader, 5. They were given a home by their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dombrose of Chicago.

And This Little Pig Cried

Bemoaning their fate are three little pigs, the prized captives of these three marines on Guam island. The Leathernecks are holding on tight and there is little hope of escape for the porkers. Left to right the marines are: Pfc. Ed D. Davidson, Portland, Ore.; Pfc. Jack L. Mathieu, Bridgman, Mich.; and Pfc. Clyde A. Morrison of Paxton, Ill.

Old Glory at Guam

The Stars and Stripes are raised over the marine barracks on Orote peninsula, Guam, after more than 2½ years. Col. Merlin F. Schneider, of Clatskanie, Ore., commanding officer, salutes the flag raising. Leathernecks look forward to the capture of the Philippines soon.

ISRAEL'S FIRST KING

LESSON TEXT—I Samuel 9:15-21; 10:25-27; 11:12-15.
 GOLDEN TEXT—Honor all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honor the king.—1 Peter 2:17.

"Well begun is half done," says the old proverb, reminding us of the importance of a good beginning. While it does not guarantee success (see next week's lesson), it is eminently desirable, and truly helpful. Israel had foolishly tired of being a God-ruled nation and had begun to demand a king.

Samuel was directed of God to the man of His choice, Saul, in a very remarkable way. He entered upon his service as king as an obedient and earnest ruler. (Would God that he had continued in that way!)

We note a number of favorable elements which indicated the possibility of a successful reign. He was—

I. Wanted by the People (9:15, 16).

A ruler forced upon a nation is sure of opposition, but here the people were clamoring for a king to rule over them. The way was wide open to the interest and the affection of their hearts. Saul was just the type to please them. Physically he was head and shoulders above the people—a desired thing in a ruler (see 10:23). He was mentally fitted (10:25)—humble (9:21), spiritually right (10:6-9), tolerant and kindly (11:13), and a good military leader. (ch. 11).

II. Chosen by God (9:17).

All these qualities commended Saul to God as well as to the people. In fact, he was God's choice. A man could not enter upon high office with any more auspicious token for good.

Observe that what looked like a purely chance visit to Samuel, when Saul was on business for his father, was the occasion for the making known of God's choice. Out of a simple experience in daily life came an event which changed his entire destiny.

III. Anointed by the Prophet (9:18-20).

The man of God's choice had met God's man, Samuel, who proceeded to instruct him, and to privately anoint him as king. It was a tender scene. The aged prophet, rejected by the people as God's ruler over them, quietly and sweetly obeyed God's command to anoint the young man to be king.

Public recognition, which came later, was important, but, with Saul as with every servant of the Lord, the personal anointing of God, in the hidden place of communion with Him, was the matter of highest importance.

IV. Humble in Attitude (9:21).

That pride, which was ultimately to be Saul's downfall, was beautifully absent at the beginning of his reign. Although of good family, and well-equipped, he saw himself as poor and insignificant, not ready for such an honor.

That is the right attitude for one who is to serve God. Pride and self-assurance do not befit the man who stands in the presence of the Almighty.

V. Guided by Principle (10:25).

Saul did not enter upon his office, new as it was to both him and to Israel, without a Constitution, that is, without principles of action. Samuel, the Lord's prophet, wrote down "the manner of the kingdom" in a book. How interesting, and how important.

Rulers who imagine themselves so wise that they need no controlling laws, and so powerful that the law may not question their decisions, are certainly not rulers after God's plan. Knowing the heart of man, his weakness and pride, God has provided true principles by which the ruler is to be guided, yes and controlled.

VI. Forgiving in Spirit (10:26-27; 11:12, 13).

Some "worthless fellows" despised Saul and would not recognize him as king. The urge of the flesh was to destroy them, and especially did that seem proper because of their worthless nature. But Saul, in true kingly spirit, said that there was to be no revenge, just rejoicing.

To be of the right spirit toward one's enemies is the hall mark of Christian character.

VII. Established in Office (11:14, 15).

While there is the secret whisper of God in the heart, and the personal anointing by the Lord's servant, there should be the public recognition which establishes the Lord's servant in the eyes of all people. Saul had this at Gilgal. It placed him among the kings of the earth, and prepared the way for his dealing with other nations as well as with his own people.

Applying that truth to those who serve Christ, we say that there is upon the church the obligation to recognize God's call and anointing by giving that official recognition which sets the testimony and service of the individual free to exercise itself among men in general.

Cover Crop Seed Increase Sought

Supplies Needed to Maintain Acreage

Growing of legumes and cover crops—with particular emphasis on seed production—is receiving more attention than usual from Uncle Sam this year.

The nation's farmers for many years have relied upon legumes and cover crops to protect their soil from erosion, preserve valuable moisture, and gather life-giving nitrogen from the air. In most cases, these crops are plowed under as green manure to make room for more profitable row crops, such as cotton, corn, or tobacco.

Heavy wartime demands for more food and fiber crops from each acre under the plow have increased the need for seeding legumes and cover crops. Records show that growing these crops in winter will bring about a substantial increase in per acre yields of subsequent crops. The urgent need for more feed crops to support added numbers of livestock also has a place in the picture, WFA says. These crops provide excellent pasture for several weeks before turning under, thus supplementing dwindling supplies of concentrated protein feeds.

Principal emphasis is being placed on harvesting of seed from 1944 crops of legumes and grasses because supplies now are at dangerously low levels. Adequate supplies of these seeds are essential for providing winter feeds, protecting land during the winter months, and maintaining soil productivity at high levels.

Increases in production of legume and grass seeds must be made in 1944 if there are to be sufficient new seedlings this fall for hay and pasture production and for sod acreage in regular crop rotations. Nations liberated from Nazi domination will need seed quickly to help reestablish themselves by restoring their devastated farmlands. Shipping seed abroad is an economical way of exporting food and lessens the drain on our own food supplies.

Harvesting of legume and cover crop seed will be encouraged under provisions of the 1944 conservation program of the Agricultural Adjustment agency. Substantial payments will be allowed for each acre harvested, up to a maximum of 25 acres per farm. Prices of seed will be supported at levels designed to give the farmer a fair return. Crops eligible for AAA payments and support prices include most principal legumes and grasses.

In addition to the profit realized, farmers are being urged by the WFA to produce adequate supplies of seed for two principal reasons. First, WFA says, if farmers are to maintain their record production levels, every effort must be made to keep the nation's farmlands in top productive condition. Any effort to draw upon soil fertility without replacing it is a dangerous gamble which may result in declining production in later years. In the second place, many of the crops now being produced in record quantities to meet urgent needs are soil depleting. Continued production of these crops makes it imperative that productivity be preserved by every means possible.

Here is how the situation sums up:

1. Red clover—Reserves at 40 per cent of 1940 level.
2. Alsike clover—Carryover reduced one-half by two short crops.
3. Sweet clover—1943 crop small since 1922. Carryover July 1 expected to be 40 per cent of 1939-1943 average.

Cattle Liver Flukes

Liver flukes, long a serious menace to cattle production in parts of Texas and other western states, are now being fought with a new chemical treatment, according to the War Food Administration. The drug "hexachlorethane" is combined with bentonite in water to make a smooth emulsion that is easily given as a drench. Liver flukes, difficult to reach by medication, are small, flat, leaf-shaped parasites.

Movie Children Play Bit Parts, Aim at Stardom

Kindergarten for the Gables and Grables of tomorrow is the Screen Children's Guild of Hollywood. This is the official clearing house for talented and photogenic youngsters of the movie colony, many of whom are only biding their time as star-dust until they are suddenly "discovered" and thereafter appear in the film firmament as full-blown stars.

Movie directors call on the Screen Children's Guild for children needed as "extras" as well as those chosen for juvenile leads. The Guild can supply almost any type at a moment's notice. Its roster includes youngsters between the ages of six months and 14 years in assorted sizes, colors and types.

The Guild also acts as clearing house for photographers' models, radio and television actors. Many children have won more success in modeling than on the screen and have made more money that way. Pay for child extras runs from a minimum of $5.50 a day up. Earnings average around $10.50 a day. Where lines are spoken the daily rate starts at $25. Weekly contracts start at $55 and the average in week-to-week contracts is about $125. These figures do not apply to the stipend of those with star rating.

The Screen Children's Guild is proud of those alumni who have made good. Among them are Margaret O'Brien, whom you saw in

Scandinavian Lass

Her plain and wholesome appearance gets Barbara Scott plenty of bit and extra parts. She is Hollywood's idea of the typical Scandinavian child. Children are "typed" just like adult players. A director can obtain a "Fauntleroy" or a "Dead End Kid" at an hour's notice.

"Journey For Margaret," and Lon McCallister, who scored in "Stage Door Canteen."

There are some 1,285 members of the Screen Children's Guild listed currently, every single one of them confident of getting to the top some day.

The Rambling Rhymster

By LES PLETTNER

A Dream

He dreamed that in light of another day

A different world would be
When people as a whole
Would have their say,

That answered would be their plea.

That the hates and the greeds
Of a selfish few
Forever would be dispelled;

That reason and sense and a logic true
Would rule and be e'er upheld.

That men would be ruled not

By zealots crazed,
Impelled by ambition mad,
And neither by those with a mind dull,
Dazed . . . and stupid . . . 'twas just as bad.

He dreamed of the day when
The wise and good
Would sit in the mighty's seat
And the tanks and the guns
And the cannons would
In plowshares be made and beat.
Only a dream . . . said the scoffers smart

And not a bit practical
It never could be when gauged by chart

Of those who are really dull.
Yet all that we have
That is good today,
The wonders that 'round us teem,
Have come to us in the self-same way—
Have come from a thought and dream.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

Now that our cooks have forsaken us, and our children are home for the summer—let them play "cook" for a day.

Every girl has the desire to cook born in her. Let her experiment with easy recipes—and finally—when she suggests it, allow her full authority in the kitchen for a day.

You'll be surprised at the definite ideas she has of meals—and her menus will probably be well balanced.

Screen Kids Like School—If It's Make-Believe

Screen Guild children don't like school much better than ordinary children do, but they turned on all their charm for this class. It is a schoolroom scene for a television show. The photograph was snapped during the actual presentation. Look at those bright, eager little faces!

OUT OF THE RIBBON BOX

All of you teens cherish your ribbon collections. Some of you have special ribbon boxes, others keep ribbons wound on empty spools to prevent them from creasing. Lots of girls keep their ribbons fresh and shiny by ironing them under a piece of wax paper. (Try this wax paper treatment as a ribbon restorer. It works.) Here are some brand new tricks from our ribbon reporters.

Ankle Lure—Giddy girls are trying a band of ribbon, decorated with little felt petals or artificial flowers, around one ankle instead of wearing socks. Definitely NOT for cold weather.

Ribbon Romance—For that Southern charm (remember Dorothy Lamour in "Dixie"?), tie narrow velvet ribbons around your wrists—one ribbon to match your sweater; the other to match your skirt. Or, as some girls are doing for dates, tie a narrow piece of ribbon around your neck (tight, but not TOO tight, please), with a bow in front. Simply swoony.

Streaming Streamers—Attach little yarn dolls to the long streamers of your hair bow. Wear the bow in the back, of course, with the streamers hanging down to your shoulders.

Cardigan Camouflage—Want to dress up your old cardigans? Buy different colored satin or grosgrain ribbons and make buttonholes down them to fit the buttons of your cardigans. Then, every day that you put on a cardigan, button on a different color ribbon down the front.

D'YOU DIG YOUR DRAPES? Or, as we would say in pre-Jabberwocky English—"Do you know your fashions?" Here are some of the fads and fashions approved by the sleeker chicks. Get hep to them while they're still hot off the griddle.

Waist Lines—Wear a wide or narrow leather belt around your waist when you're skirt-and-shirting. Or just attach two dog collars to make a belt.

In the Bag—Have you a shoulder strap bag? If you want to be burnt to a crisp, you'll have to get one. Any shade is smart, as long as it's red. The felt ones are fine.

Shirt Tale—Big excitement over blouses with high round collarless necklines to wear with suits. They're much newer than the convertible collar shirts. If you don't find them in the teen department of your favorite store, you'll probably find them in the regular blouse department. Haven't you noticed how many sharks (female wolves) are wearing them?

Can You Tie That?—We're referring to the bright colored shoelaces that so many Jills are wearing in their oxfords or saddles. They come in plain high shades or plaids and it's considered extra-smooth to lace them down, rather than up, with the bow tied at the lowest eyelets.

Hanky Doodles—All the girls are collecting tricky handkerchiefs—not for blowing, but for showing. They wear them sticking well out of their jacket or shirt pockets. Some Fever Fraus use them instead of hair bows.

Minute Make-Ups

By GABRIELLE

That magic symbol, L-85, denotes the Wartime Silhouette, straight and slim! It will take more than a minute to slim down to fit this new fashion, but you can do it. A few waist bendings (even for a minute) night and morning will help!

THE PRIVATE PAPERS OF PRIVATE PURKEY

Dear Harriet:

Well, I just seen that list of magazines what has been approved by the army for GIs and I feel better now knowing what it is okay for me to be pretending I am reading. The list is twenty to one comics and this is the first time I ever knew there was so many published. Movie magazines is a bad second and I am glad to find National Geographic and House and Garden on the list on account of I do not want to laugh all the time.

Right between something called Blue Beetle and Big Shot Comics what do you think I find? Better Homes and Gardens! If that ain't a running broad jump in any library at home or at the front what have you? I think at first maybe Better Homes and Gardens has put in a funny supplement but it ain't.

Sandwiched in between a magazine called Gags which the army thinks we should read and Human Torch which Washington has a idea GIs can see without being done no harm is Good Housekeeping, which looks funny in that location. Well, I would like to see a GI concentrating on Good Housekeeping over here and get caught by his top sergeant.

Right in between Click, Captain Midnight and Dare Devil comics is Country Gentleman and I never seen no magazine looking so uncomfortable. Harper's is listed surrounded by Flash Comics, Funny Animals and Laff. The Saturday Evening Post is sandwiched in between Radio Hit Songs and the Scientific American which I started once but did not finish on account of there is not much sex interest.

You could knock me over with a V-mail postscript when I find Outdoor Life on the list. That is a fine magazine but if there is one thing a soldier does not need to look up it is the facts about living outdoors. Physical Culture is there, too. I guess in case I do not know what to do for exercise.

I see Field and Stream surrounded by Downbeat, Flash Comics and Famous Funnies but I forgot to bring my fishing rod to the war and I don't get much time off to dig bait. Fortune is listed in between Front Page Detective and Funny Animals.

But what mixes me up is that I find Ladies Home Journal and the Woman's Home Companion on the list sent to me. Maybe it is just a gag. I have been shifted around a lot in this war but I have not been made a WAC yet.

Well, I hope you are fine and you ain't no sorer than me that the bomb missed Hitler.

All my love,
Oscar

P. S. — Send me copies of Wow Comics, Colliers, the American Medical Journal, Ten Story Western, Nifty and Harper's Bazaar I want a all around library.

Imaginary Dialogues

Shimada—Going my way?
Tojo—And how!

Shimada—What have we done?
Tojo—Almost nothing; that's the trouble. As a naval chief you're pretty bad.

Shimada—Nobody seems to rate you much higher as a military leader. I notice.

Tojo—It isn't so much a question of blame. Didn't you listen to the radio? The cabinet is merely being renovated.

Shimada—I like that word renovated; it makes me feel less embarrassed.

Tojo—Yes, but being renovated with an ax isn't so comfortable.

Shimada—I wonder if we could have been wrong about those decadent Americans.

Tojo—I've been wondering for months. We are away behind schedule with what we were going to do to them.

Shimada—Weren't we to have been making peace in the White House by this time?

Tojo—Why bring that up? It only makes me feel worse.

Shimada—And it all looked so easy at Pearl Harbor!

Tojo—Didn't it!

Shimada—What we did to their fleet there!

Tojo—And what their fleet there has since done to us!

Scouts from Bretton Woods monetary conference informed us that at no convention in years did so many delegates have trouble adding up checks and counting the change.

Origin of Pulp Paper

When a young German paper maker, Gottfried Keller, kicked a wasp's nest on a walk through the woods in the 19th century, he was impressed by the nest's texture, which was similar to rag paper produced at the mill where he worked.

He showed it to a chemist friend, and the two concluded wasps made it from spruce tree fiber. They succeeded in making paper from wood, and thus the pulp paper industry was born.

Prolific Field Mice

As field mice are matured at 25 days and capable of producing a litter of from two to nine young every 21 days, one pair are the potential progenitors of a million animals a year. Fortunately, the mice are eaten by other animals at about the same rate at which they breed.

Sharks, Other Salt Water Fish

Abound in Nicaraguan Lake

Lake Nicaragua in the Central American country of the same name is the only place where sharks are found in fresh water, so far as science knows. Sawfish, tarpon and other big salt-water species also live in this oval, 100-mile-long lake, 105 feet above the level of the nearby Pacific. Geologists believe it was a bay of the Pacific until an earthquake heaved up land to lock out the sea. Streams and springs in this region of very heavy rainfall gradually turned the lake water fresh.

Luis Marden, National Geographic Magazine staff writer, caught three specimens of the shark for the U. S. National museum by the time-tested method of the region. First, he took a silvery, five-pound machaca on a fly rod.

Then, fishing in 11 feet of water from an anchored canoe, within sight of the San Carlos docks, he baited a heavy, chain-leathered shark hook with a large chunk of the machaca, and cast his stout, sashcord fishing line into the water.

Within five minutes the fisherman from the north had a strike. In a few more minutes he had subdued a 153-pound shark, too large for the alcohol drum in which the specimens were to be shipped to the museum. But strikes came easily, every five to ten minutes. Three sharks were caught for the museum, weighing 98, 76 and 48 pounds. They are the first complete specimens of Nicaragua's fresh-water sharks in any scientific institution.

Lone Egg Nearly Tempts

Soldiers to Their Doom

SOUTHEAST OF BAYEUX, FRANCE.—British soldiers rationed to one egg a month came upon an egg in a nest alongside the lane—and almost rushed over to snatch it up.

A sixth sense warned them. They stopped and eyed the egg.

A mine detection device was brought up and revealed that the nest was the latest thing in German booby traps.

Timely Watering
Losses of young plants can be avoided by timely watering and by shading them for a few days after they are transplanted. The gardener who wants to make permanent shading frames instead of using newspaper or other makeshift can stretch burlap, cheesecloth or other fabric over laths or other light lumber. Legs 12 to 18 inches long make the shades easy to handle.

Artificial Eyes

Germany, through her "Reichsverband," controlled the export of artificial eyes and the glass for making them. Her monopoly was comparable to that of the Venetians who kept their glass-making artisans virtually imprisoned on the island of Murano in the 16th and 17th centuries. Until the war, practically all artificial eyes were blown from a special glass with a velvety texture that could be made only in one place in the world — the little town of Lauscha in Thuringen, Germany.

Soup Mixes

Soup mixes consisting of soya flour or grits, other legume powders, dry skim milk and seasonings may include up to 40 per cent soya, says the USDA bureau of human nutrition and home economics. With cereals like corn meal, cracked wheat, oat meal, hominy grits, rolled oats or granular wheat cereal, 15 to 20 per cent of soya grits or flakes may be used with good results. In quick breads and yeast breads there may be from 15 to 20 per cent soya flour.

Worker Trend
John D. Durand, population expert of the U. S. census bureau, predicts that by 1950 over three million women who never worked before will have joined the labor force; this group, he says, will include an alarming number of women over 35 who are "likely to be a serious complication in the postwar employment problem because of the preference of most employers for younger workers."

Seed Potatoes

As treatment of seed potatoes may kill sprouts, it is best to treat the seed when still dormant, or at least three weeks before planting time, to enable new sprouts to grow.

Plant Early

Eggs can be packed in a water-glass solution in earthen jars, wooden or galvanized pails or wooden tubs. Sterilize the containers with boiling water, then mix the water-glass solution according to directions and carefully insert the clean fresh eggs so the solution covers them. A 6-gallon container will hold 15 dozen eggs. Most drug stores sell water-glass in liquid form ready to mix with water, at a price of about 25 cents a quart.

MR. WINKLE GOES TO WAR

By THEODORE PRATT

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Forty-four-year-old Wilbert Winkle, who operates a general repair shop back of his home, is notified by his draft board that he is in I-A. He beats the bad news to his domineering wife, Amy, and tramps off to work without even kissing her goodby. Neighbors call the next night and shake their heads solemnly, and the local paper publishes his picture on the front page. Winkle tacks a CLOSED sign over his shop. Mrs. Winkle confides her worries. She fears he might get interested in other women, but Wilbert says she has nothing to worry about. Winkle leads the draft parade and they march off behind the band. The martial music sends a chill up his spine.

CHAPTER V

Mr. Winkle wasn't sure if this was said in the right spirit. He was glad Amy didn't appear in time to hear it. He had been watching for her, and during the last of the six blocks, he saw her, hurrying along to keep up. Her face was flushed. She waved to him, and Mr. Winkle, wondering if it was the correct thing to do, waved back.

After they arrived at the open-air bus station, there was a quarter of an hour of confusion whose details Mr. Winkle never remembered very well. The selectees left their formation and searched out their respective families. Mr. Winkle found his wife and dog. Penelope was enlivened by the excitement to yap several times. Mrs. Winkle said, "You looked very military."

"I'm the leader," he told her. The horn of the bus honked. Tears welled in Mrs. Winkle's eyes. "I'm not going to cry," she announced. And the tears didn't spill over but remained in her eyes when she blinked them back, fast. He and Amy looked at each other solemnly. They embraced. They held each other very close. They kissed, and kissed again, while the band played, women wept, and handkerchiefs and flags waved.

The next thing Mr. Winkle knew was that he found himself seated in the bus and the vehicle was getting under way. Looking back, he saw Mrs. Winkle holding up Penelope so that she could see him go to war. Penelope wasn't interested, but looked the other way.

Not all of the bus was occupied by the draft contingent. There hadn't been enough of them to charter a vehicle for their sole use. He sat alone, not because he thought himself, as the leader, any better than the others. Nor did he care to be aloof; he would have welcomed somebody to talk with, but none of his charges joined him. Jack Pettigrew sat up beside the driver.

The bus stopped and several more people got on. One of them was a young, blowy blonde. Mr. Winkle watched, fascinated, as Freddie maneuvered the selectee beside him out of his seat and grinned winningly at the blonde. She sat beside Freddie at once, and they began an animated conversation.

This broke the tension the draftees brought with them from their send-off. They laughed, and began to talk and joke, and discuss their voyage in voices just a little too loud to be natural.

At noon the bus stopped at a scheduled station for lunch. Mr. Winkle herded his charges to the counter inside the glass-front roadside restaurant, where he produced the proper paper to obtain meals for them as guests of the Government. Freddie Tindall remained outside, talking to the blonde. She was catching another bus here.

He let Freddie alone until he had ordered his own meal. Then he went out and told Freddie, "If you want to get something to eat, you'd better come in."

"Be right with you, Pop." Mr. Winkle went back to the counter.

Freddie took his time. He waited until the blonde's new bus pulled in. He put her on it and then joined the others. Some of the men looked at him in admiration and envy.

"What would you have done," Freddie inquired of Mr. Winkle, "if I'd gotten on the bus with her and gone away?"

Mr. Winkle regarded him severely. "I wouldn't have done a thing. That would be for others. You wouldn't get very far."

"You mean with the blonde?" Freddie inquired, and received his laugh.

He kept up a horseplay of saying that this was as far as he wanted to go, that he'd had a nice ride, but would now go back home. When this wore thin, he introduced a new subject. "Still proud to fight, Pop?" he inquired.

Mr. Winkle kept his temper. "We all ought to be." "Well, I'm not," Freddie declared. "I'm not going because I want to, and I don't care who knows it. I don't want to be any darned soldier. Lugs, that's all they are. They're going to make me into a lug."

Mr. Winkle looked around. No one except the contingent from Springville seemed to have heard these remarks. The men listened with interest. Some of them looked startled.

"I don't think you ought to say such things," Mr. Winkle advised. "Who says that, Pop? Who says I can't say what I want?" "Well," began Mr. Winkle. "Isn't this a free country, Pop? Can't a man say what he wants? Tell me that, Pop."

When Mr. Winkle didn't reply, Freddie was infuriated, taking out his resentment on him as if holding Mr. Winkle personally responsible for his being drafted. "Tell me that, you old coot, and don't act like we're in the Army already."

Before Mr. Winkle could gather his outraged senses, Jack Pettigrew pushed through the group of men and came up to Freddie. His thin face was white with anger. "Don't talk like that to Mr. Winkle," he ordered.

Freddie turned on the revolving stool to Mr. Winkle, ignoring Jack. "How about that, Pop? Should I talk like that to you?"

Jack made a lunge at Freddie, who whirled, placed his hand on the boy's chest, and shoved him back.

Jack, crying imprecations, returned to the fray with clenched fists. Freddie jumped up to meet him. Mr. Winkle was gripped with dismay. Things were fast getting out of hand. In fact, they were already well out of hand. The proprietor of the place was yelling, a waitress shrieked, and customers called out.

Mr. Winkle heard his own voice crying, "Now look here! Look here! Save that for the Germans! Or the Japs!"

The men laughed. Jack subsided, glaring. Freddie made ironic grimaces.

An armistice had been declared in the premature war. Mr. Winkle breathed with relief. He wasn't certain that he liked the responsibilities of leadership.

He counted the men carefully as they got back on the bus, making sure Freddie was among them. His glance caught that of Jack, whose eyes were hot and who said, "I'm going to get him! I'm going to get him plenty!"

"That's all right," Mr. Winkle calmed him. "I appreciate your standing up for me, but you've done enough."

Another hour's ride got them to their destination, and they descended at a busy station where they were transferred to another bus. This was already half filled with soldiers-elect like themselves.

"Hello, fresh meat," one of these greeted them.

From the highway, three miles out of town, the entrance to the camp was no more than a dirt side road where two armed guards stood and a sign declared this to be a military reservation and that no admittance was allowed.

Having been invited, they were admitted.

After passing through a quarter of a mile of thick woods, they came to a great cleared space in which stood a hidden city. There were many wooden buildings, some of them one story, others of two stories. Dust rose from the passing of their own and other vehicles, and from marching feet.

The bus stopped before a building which had a sign on it saying, "Induction Checking Station." Standing up or sitting on the ground before this were perhaps fifty more selectees. They stared at the newcomers who descended from the bus. No one spoke in the atmosphere of patient waiting and weary anxiety.

Mr. Winkle looked about, somewhat at a loss. He didn't know what to do next.

A tall, thickest Sergeant, holding a sheaf of papers in his hand, came out of the building. He looked at the new arrivals and asked huskily, "Who's the leader?"

Mr. Winkle went forward. The Sergeant gazed down at him. Mr. Winkle saw the mouse-recognition-look come into the man's face, the same way it showed in Amy's. Then the Sergeant took on an expression as if to say he didn't mean to be surprised at anything sent to him. He inquired, "Got 'em all, Johnny?"

Mr. Winkle said he had and turned over the group papers. This relieved him of his command. He was a leader no longer, but just a selectee like any other. Because of this, and because of the mouse-look he had been given, he felt deflated and not in the least like a lion.

The Sergeant went inside. Mr. Winkle waited with the others. Their eyes went frequently to the door. What smiles there were on any faces were nervous ones.

The Sergeant came out again. In a foghorn voice he began calling names. It was nearly an hour, during which other busses arrived, before the Springville men were reached.

Mr. Winkle found himself in a small room passing down a line of soldier clerks sitting at desks. In place of his own papers, an information card was given to him, which he was instructed to hang around his neck by the cord attached. Thus ticketed, he took his place in line down the hall, and finally into an enormous room where many men were in the process of being examined.

Here, Mr. Winkle saw, was where his fate would be decided. He was told to drop his bag by the wall under a clothing hook, and strip.

Shivering, he stood in line clad only in his socks and shoes and information card. It was humiliating when he compared his skinny physique with the more robust bodies about him. Several men glanced at him as if to say he didn't amount to much.

He began to run a gantlet of doctors and medical assistants. Each doctor had one part of the body to examine. Mr. Winkle was accustomed to having his family physician make something of a fuss over him, cajoling him, and treating him like a living, breathing, human being instead of a skeleton within and around which was gathered a certain amount of flesh and certain organs. Now he felt like an automobile being put together on an assembly line in a factory.

His card was taken away from him and in its place there was daubed in iodine a number on his chest. That, he was sure, was the final ignominy. He was questioned, weighed, measured, poked, tapped, and the inner workings of his structure listened to.

He was asked to read a chart without his glasses and with them. He regretted each letter he made out, but he couldn't, as he had half planned, bring himself to cheat. His eyes were good enough to fight a war. Even his pulse was found sufficiently calm after he had been set running in one place for a minute without going anywhere.

Well, he reflected, he hadn't really counted on any of these things to save him. It was his dyspepsia he was banking on.

He was laid on a paper-covered table. His stomach was kneaded

Mr. Winkle went forward; the sergeant gazed down at him.

and he was asked, "What's this on your record about dyspepsia?"

Mr. Winkle detailed and even boasted about his acute intestinal difficulties and the need he had for his pills. He was kneaded some more, as if he were an automobile no longer, but a piece of dough.

The doctor gave a skeptical grunt, a deprecating snort, and wrote something on Mr. Winkle's record sheet.

Mr. Winkle, to his horror, gathered that his dyspepsia had made little impression, that it had let him down completely.

At this, as he was passed on to the next doctor, his heart beat so fast that the doctor, who applied a stethoscope to it, took it away and actually looked at him, saying patiently, "I expect it from the kids, but not from you."

Mr. Winkle was abashed. He accused himself of behaving like a child, like Jack Pettigrew whom he saw standing tensely, on guard, with a strained, taut expression on his boy's face.

And then Mr. Winkle went through an experience he never expected to have.

All during the days leading up to this, and during the first of the examining process, he hoped fervently that he would be rejected. He had even prayed for it. But now he found himself hoping he would be accepted.

Fall Millinery Says 'More Hat' With Trend to Greater Elegance

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NO-END excitement reigns in the millinery realm this season, due to a radical, almost revolutionary change in hat silhouettes, inspired by the new "more hat" movement that seems to be bringing about many new trends in contours for fall. Also, a new era of elegance is being launched of luxurious trimmings, brilliant dramatic color and the use of rich handsome media throughout.

As we all know, hats have been growing smaller and smaller, almost to the vanishing point this last season. Advance millinery showings for fall, however, declare definitely in favor of the "more hat" idea. The new hats coming in take on an air of importance which carries the good news that "real millinery" is returning with great pomp and glory.

This movement toward sizable hats that will stay on without coaxing does not mean that small hats are out of the "picture." Even the so-called small hat, however, refuses to stay really small this season, for there is a new bulkiness being added in thickened berets of the bumper type, and via massive drapes for turbans, or trimming arrangements, some of which just stop short of being top heavy.

It's the hat with the brim that impresses one with the fact that drastic changes are taking place in silhouettes this fall. There's really something to them both as to crown and brim that makes them take on an air of importance. Lavished as many are with rich plumage and color-bright feather fantasies, also precious embroidery, the new "more hat" versions look very new and imposing. As pictures speak louder than words we are illustrating here with a group of advance hats selected from styles shown by Chicago Fashion industries for mid-season and early fall wear.

The hat centered in the group is typically in the new fall 1944 mood. It is made of gleaming black satin, for satin, you know, is the rage for everything this season from dresses and suits to hats and accessories. So here's your cue, buy a satin hat for your fall fashion-first. This model tunes smartly to the "more hat" idea.

Just the thing to wear with your suit and coat dresses is the subtly draped hat above to the left in the group. It comes in a rough textured wool with dangles of flirtatious rings of self-fabric, and a curtain of fringe about the brim.

Centered above is a hat that broadcasts style news of a trend to dramatic side drapes. Interesting stitching is used together with a loop and a swirl of braid.

The ladies will be tipping their hats this fall as you see above to the right in the group. This side-drape beret makes a flourish of a side piece that keeps it secure, finishing it off with braid and a handsome tassel.

For a hat that will win compliments choose the feathered beauty shown below to the left. This little flatterer is designed for gala occasion.

Georgic flowers made all of feathers are blossoming out in full bloom on many of the loveliest fall hats. Feather flowers in lush fuchsia are charmingly arranged on the little black hat as shown below to the right.

More satin! Centered below is a charming little hat that tells you that dashing satin trims will gleam from many a hat this fall, used for drapes and luscious large bows. New, too, are scroll motifs of satin, applied on smart felts.

Button-Up Coat

The blending of many colors makes this coat a gay and charming one. It's a perfect choice for mid-season and fall wear. Made of navy wool, this slim short box coat is lined in water blue. Large poker chip buttons, each a bright hue all its own, march down the front in single file from a slim round neck to the hemline. Buttons are having a big vogue and their popularity will continue right through the fall season. Even milady's hat takes on a trim made up of myriads of tiny multi-colored buttons.

Gloves Harmonized To New Hat Colors

Gloves are being featured both at regular glove counters and in millinery departments and shops that pick up the mood and line and color of the new fall hats in a family-relation way that simplifies the ensemble idea for women who appreciate color and styling harmony. The spotlight is on gay fuchsia, royal blue, turquoise violet, gold, orange and chartreuse. Suede and jerseys are handled in versatile and intricate ways in custom gloves so as to coordinate with hats. Outstanding is the black suede glove that has a deep cuff of jewel-embroidered satin. An excellent example of coordination between glove and hat is shown in a glove that carries out feathered detail on only one deep cuff, following out the one-side treatment of the feathered hat in perfect teamwork.

Neckpieces Are Fashioned Of Satin and Beadwork

Instead of expensive costume jewelry stunning new ideas are being shown in accessory displays that are worked with fabric and beadwork. These "neckers" as they are called are really youthful versions of the dowager dog-collar. Made of gay satin or black if you choose, they are enhanced with elaborate beadwork done in festive colors. Belts that sport long dramatic silk tassels are made to match the neckpiece, repeating the identical fabric and beadwork. These charming accessory fancies are lovely for gala wear and do they work wonders for simple little frocks!

That Bulldog Grip

The proverbial "bulldog grip" of the bulldog does not result from obstinacy or any other quality but from the construction of the animal's mouth. The lower jaw is longer than the upper jaw, and therefore it is physically impossible for the dog to let go while there is any tension on the object being gripped.

Lawn Chair Is Like Mother's and Dad's

HERE is a pint-size lawn chair to delight the children and their young visitors. The seat is 10½ inches high, 13 inches deep and 15 inches wide—a good size for little ones now and roomy enough to be comfortable right up through their early teens. A hammer and saw and screw-driver are all the tools you need to make this chair as well as the larger edition that you see in the sketch. All the pieces are straight cuts of standard widths, yet both of them have seats and backs at comfortable angles. The lines and proportions are good and the backs are removable for winter storage.

NOTE—Pattern 253 gives a complete list of materials, large diagrams for cutting all the pieces of the child's chair and step-by-step directions for assembling. Pattern 269 lists materials with diagrams and directions for the adult-size chair. Patterns are 15 cents each postpaid, or both patterns for 25 cents. Order from:

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Using a combination of natural and synthetic rubber in the post-war period may result in automobile tires that will establish new high marks for longevity, according to a B. F. Goodrich chemical technician. He cites the big mileage returned from Goodrich synthetic tires, made in 1940 and composed of both types of rubber, as the basis for his predictions about post-war tires.

Another reason for tires for essential transportation: At the beginning of last year, 85,168 school buses were in service transporting 4,258,788 children over 1,383,091 miles of one-way route.

Egg Glaze
Another way to work in an extra egg is to put an egg glaze on coffee cake with sliced fruit on top. Beat a whole egg with a fork until slightly foamy. Add three tablespoons sugar. Spread evenly over fruit before baking. The glaze keeps the fruit plump and moist and holds it in place.

City Employees
Milwaukee city employees' average monthly earnings rank fourth among 18 northern cities of 300,000 in population or over, according to the United States census bureau. Milwaukee's average monthly city employee salary of $192 is exceeded only by Detroit ($207), San Francisco ($203) and Chicago ($199).

Dried Brewers' Yeast
Dried brewers' yeast retails for some 72 cents per pound. This apparently high price is really rather low on the basis of its protein content and could probably be lowered if a large demand developed. Dried brewers' yeast contains some 6 per cent water and about 48 per cent protein. Thus yeast protein costs about $1.55 per pound at retail, while in beef, with some 62 per cent water and 19 per cent protein and retailing at 50 cents per pound, a pound of protein costs $2.60.

Income Tax
"A bushel of wheat, a bushel of rye, whose not ready holler I" just won't work next January 15th, when its time for Iosco farmers to file their income tax reports says County Agent W. L. Finley. It becomes more necessary each year that farmers have an accurate account of their farm business if a good income tax report is made. Finley stated today that crops throughout Iosco county are well above average and that farm incomes during 1944 will without question be above the average. This will make it necessary that most farmers throughout Iosco County file income tax reports on or before January 15, 1945.
Although it has not been officially announced that farmers will not have to prepare their estimated income reports on December 15th as they did a year ago, it has been indicated that if they wish to file their final tax returns on or before January 15th, it will not be necessary to file the estimated report as was required a year ago. If this final report can not be prepared by January 15th then farmers will apparently be required to file their estimated income the same as they did last year.
No special type of farm accounts are required by the Collector of Internal Revenue stated Finley, but a good complete set of records is certainly good insurance and should not be neglected at this time of the year. If records during the past half of 1944 are inadequate there should be little excuse for having poorly itemized records from this time of year on. A minute of thought regarding farm expenditures each day may save plenty of grief when that income tax report is prepared this winter.

Administered Cheaply
Michigan county governments, on the whole, are administered most cheaply in the more populous counties, the Michigan public expenditure survey reports. By the same token, the most expensive counties (those with 10,000 population or under) are the least populous. The survey also finds that the larger the county the lower the per capita cost, the high costs in the smaller counties being due, in part, to maintaining a minimum government which could render services to a much larger county at no extra cost. In the smaller counties, roads are responsible for the greatest share of costs.

Food Exports
Even with 33,000,000 more people to feed here at home now than in 1920, our total food exports from 1935 to 1939 varied from 2 to 5 per cent of production. We produced less and ate about 8 per cent less per capita than in the corresponding period just prior to World War I.

Nutritious Food
Protein foods include liver, kidneys, brains and heart. They are rich in protein and nature has stored more iron and minerals in them than in the muscle meats.

One-Celled Plants
The yeasts are predominantly one-celled plants which reproduce rapidly and in their growth form alcohol and carbon dioxide from the sugary materials on which they feed. The precise nature of the products depends on the kind of yeast and the nutrient used; originally the "wild" yeasts floating in the air did man's fermentations, but today carefully cultured strains are used, adapted to the particular application and protected from contamination. Traditionally the two great fields for yeast are the production of alcoholic products and the leavening of bread, where carbon dioxide bubbles from the yeast give a fluffy structure.

Udder Bacteria
In some udders bacteria that cause mastitis may cause no apparent harm. As soon as a cow's resistance is lowered, mastitis producing organisms may become active and produce serious udder damage.

Peach Prospects
Ordinarily a peach tree should not be allowed to bear more than two fruits per foot of branch. Therefore, 60 per cent of the buds can be lost and the tree will still have twice as many fruits as should be allowed to develop.

PULPWOOD NEEDED TO SPEED VICTORY

You have been reading about the wartime need for pulpwood. Today the need is greater than ever before. Our offensives in Europe and the Pacific have greatly increased military requirements for supplies and equipment made of pulpwood or packed in paper or paperboard made of pulpwood. It has become an A-1 war material.

System as an essential occupation.
With a Post-War Future
But pulpwood production is different from most war industries. It will continue on the same scale after the war.
Cut pulpwood today because it is both patriotic and profitable. Your county agent, forester, or mill buyer will tell you about the peak wartime prices being paid for it.
Now's the time to get into a business which will continue to pay good dividends when peace returns.

It's a Wartime Job
Pulpwood cutting has been recognized by the War Manpower Commission and the Selective Service
