In the first quarter for Tawas Ogden made two field goals and two foul shots, Landon made two field goals and a foul shot, Bublitz and Anderson each made a field goal, Herriman made a foul shot.

County Bang's Test Starts Next Week

It was announced this week that the Bureau of Animal Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture will start a county-wide test of all cattle over six months of age for Bang's Disease, about February 1, 1945.

Blood samples will be drawn from each individual animal and later tested in the modern tracer laboratory which will be stationed at the Court House in Tawas City. Any cattle which prove to be reactors to this disease must be moved to market within fifteen days after they are branded. The farmer who has cattle which react to the Bang's Disease test will receive indemnity to partly cover the loss of these animals from his herd.

The state law provides that the amount of state payment upon any cattle reacting to the test for Bang's Disease shall not be more than two-thirds of the difference between the appraised value of the animal and the net proceeds from the sale for slaughter. The state law further stipulates that the amount paid upon any grade animal shall not exceed $125.00 and upon any registered purebred animal not more than $250.00, plus the market value of the animal. The Federal government will pay a like amount as that paid by the state on any animal that is found to be a reactor. The total amount of indemnity upon any grade animal will therefore not be more than $250.00 and not more than $500.00 upon any registered purebred animal.

The bureau has advised that any cattle that are found to be reactors should be handled with caution and should be marketed at an early date. The milk from these reacting cattle should be pasteurized if it is to be used for human food.

It has been estimated that some ten thousand cattle in Isosco county will be subjected to this test within the next two or three months and all reactor cattle will be eliminated as rapidly as possible. The disease is known to be expensive to the dairy farmer and its elimination should render better incomes to farmers and eliminate some of the

Mrs. John Rapp received a letter from Pvt. Harold Blust somewhere in the Pacific Area, in which he says, "I suppose you will be surprised to hear that Gerald (Rapp) and I have met up again. I was so surprised to meet him. He looks good and he is really getting fat. We sat around half the night talking about things back home. Gerald's camp is just across the road from mine.

Going to the movies tonight together. Next Sunday we are going to look up Joe Ori and Cliff Anschuetz. He said he was going aboard ship for 45 days and will stop at Pearl Harbor for a week. Clarence Michalski is on that island not so far from here. One of these days Gerald and I will run into him. It seems like home with Gerald here."

COUNTY FAIR ANNUAL MEET HELD AT HALE

Association Names 1945 Board of Directors; Reports Given

The 2nd annual meeting of the Isosco County Agricultural Association, the reorganized county fair, was held at the Plainfield township Hall, Monday evening, January 15.

President of the association, Mrs. T. G. Scofield briefly outlined the progress of the organization for the past year, and stated that plans for the 1945 fair include an enlarged premium list with greater emphasis to be placed on the exhibits made by our boys and girls. She stated that already plans are going forward for a three-day fair, rather than two days as was held last year. She also mentioned that, if and when, the organization is able to purchase a new fair grounds, several people in the county have offered to contribute some ten thousand feet of lumber that might be used in the construction of livestock display pens and sheds. "This all indicates," said Mrs. Scofield, "that the people were well pleased with our past fair, and it is up to each and everyone in the county to help make future exhibits of even more interest than those of the past."

The annual report of the secretary, H. F. Black, revealed that 143 people made exhibits at the past fair, and were awarded premiums amounting to $399.98.

Mrs. Mable Scarlett, treasurer, mentioned in her report that all bills of the past year had now been approved for payment and when paid would leave a substantial balance upon the books of the association. This successful financial program will enable the association to enlarge the 1945 premium list, and plans are already started for issuing a printed 1945 fair book early in the summer.

During each of the past two years, the fair association has awarded a free trip to Farmers Week at Michigan State College to the boy and girl who received the highest to-a-score upon all exhibits which they made at the fair. The 1945 trip goes to Marilyn Pfahl of the Greenwood 4-H Club and Eldon Streeter of Hale.

At the meeting Monday evening the articles of association were amended to provide for a board of directors of twelve members, four to serve for a period of two years and four for a period of one year. The previous board consisted of ten members to be elected annually.

The directors elected Monday include: For One Year Term—Harry Cross of Wilber, Leonard Morris of Osceola, Chelsea McIvor of Sherman and Nelson Ostrander of Burleigh. For the Two Year Term—Alex Robinson of Reno, John O. Johnson of Hale, Mrs. Mable Scarlett of Grant and Waldo Curry of Tawas. For the Three Year Term—Mrs. Addie Scofield of Plainfield, H. F. Black and Karl Benschon of Reno and W. L. Finley of Tawas.

A Board of Directors meeting will be held early in February at which officers for the year 1945 will be elected.

Hog Producers Asked To Increase Program

The War Food Administration has asked hog producers having adequate supplies to keep additional sows suitable for farrowing next spring, to help meet the goal for spring pigs, and announces extension of the present support price of $12.50 per hundredweight, Chicago basis, for good choice butcher hogs weighing 200 to 270 pounds, to March 31, 1936, according to Harry Goodale, chairman of the Isosco County AAA.

In order to reach the goal hog producers would need to increase the number of sows farrowing next spring by about 11 per cent over the number planned, as indicated by the December pig report.

Mr. Goodale said the deadline for receiving alfalfa and red clover seed weight slips is February 15 and they should be in before that time.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Technical men say that about three gallons of alcohol are used to produce sufficient butadiene to make an average-size synthetic tire.

Use of synthetics and alternate materials, particularly in field wire and telephone cable, resulted in the conservation by the Signal Corps of the U. S. Army of more than 12 million pounds of crude rubber in the first 4 months of 1944.

The importance of rubber tires to the economy of Michigan is indicated by the fact that 65.2 per cent of all inbound and 69 per cent of all outbound freight in that state is carried by motor truck.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point as a second lieutenant Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field and takes up pursuit flying. When the war breaks out he is an instructor in California and told he is too old for combat flying. He appeals to several Generals for a chance to fly a combat plane, and finally the opportunity comes. He flies a bomber to India, where he becomes a ferry pilot, which does not appeal to him. He visits General Chennault and is promised a Kittyhawk, and soon is flying the skies over Burma in a shining Kittyhawk. He gets his first Jap bomber and goes out on many lone missions over enemy territory.

CHAPTER XIV

But I had seen enough. Even though this bridge was being built of bamboo, they were making it very strong, for the abutments were of heavier lumber and of stone. The Japanese were evidently planning to transport trucks, tanks, or some other heavier equipment North. I went right back to Dinjan and had Sergeant Bonner strap on a nice 500-pound bomb with a delayed action fuse. At any rate the armament men told him it was a ten-second delay fuse. This type of target had to be hit exactly, and if I were to glide in for a dead shot I'd surely get shot down by all the anti-aircraft. So I made up my mind long before I got there to turn it loose just as low as I could fly. Even if I missed the bridge by only fifty yards, which is close for dive-bombing in ships not made for that type of work, I'd knock a lot of leaves off the trees, make a big noise, and maybe kill some gunners. But the abutments of the bridge had to be hit just about dead center if I was to make the Japs stop work.

I came in to the target from the West, with the sun right at my back. I flew so low that I was afraid the little windmill on the nose of the bomb would get knocked off by the bushes. And then, as I saw the bridge, I let the bomb go.

All hell broke loose.

When I got back home I looked at "Old Exterminator" and I couldn't see why it hadn't spun in right there over the N'umup. There were holes as big as footballs in the fabric flippers and in the metal stabilizers of the tail section. There was a hole in the fuselage and five holes in the wing. But I guess the hill just East of the target had saved me.

As the June days passed, Colonel Haynes was moved to China to head the Bomber Command under General Chennault, and I was left alone as Commanding Officer of the Ferrying Command. On the day the cheerful Haynes left, I felt as if I had lost my best and last friend. For this meant that I'd have to stay on the ground more, and work the administration as well as the operations of the ABC, which was getting tougher and tougher with all the rice we were having to drop and the passengers we were having to haul.

On the one day that I stayed on the ground, it seemed to me that every time I looked up from the desk that I was "flying," some long, lanky tea planter would be standing there in the door in sun-helmet and shorts. With his bony knees sticking out, he'd ask me in cold clipped accents: "I say old chap—do you have transportation for Calcutta?"

From over near Sadiya, we had gotten eight elephants, tame ones, and were working them to move some heavy timbers to be used on the warehouses of the new field. There was an old Southern sergeant who took good care of the pachyderms. He must have been a muleskinner in either the first World War or the border war with Mexico, for he did everything in his power to keep the eight elephants dry and well-fed and content. Even when he tied the chains to their legs at night, he would wrap the links with cloth to keep them from chafing the thick skin of the big beasts.

Another sergeant, from about the same section of the country that the old elephant caretaker hailed from, came by one day and looked the stalls over with a quizzical eye.

"Say, Micky," he called back as he left, "you're taking too good care of those elephants. You're going to get 'em so comfortable that the Yankees will come down here and free 'em."

Bob Layher, one of the AVG pilots, came over for several days, and we drank good Scotch whiskey at night and flew our planes across into Burma in the day—when I didn't have to get passengers on the freight ships. I learned a lot, flying on his wing. We'd go over for a look at Myitkyina, and it would amaze me how effortlessly, without apparent forethought, Bob would get our ships into the sun before we came within sight of the field we were to observe. I picked up little things like that as I flew with him, and they helped me later.

On the twentieth of June, members of the Army Board that had been appointed to induct the AVG passed through Assam, and my hopes faded of ever getting over to work under General Chennault. I knew that out of those Colonels, the powers-that-be had surely picked some lucky one to get the greatest job in the world. This was of course that of commanding the AVG after it came into the Army, with its nucleus of old AVG personnel and the new pilots as replacements from home in the States. General Chen-nault was to be the Task Force Commander and was to be over the Fighter Group and the Bomber Force.

If the Scotch hadn't given out, I would have got drunk that night. But instead I went on another strafing raid in the late afternoon, and had to land after dark.

So I took it out in action. I bombed Homalin and the railroad yards at Mogaung the next day, and strafed the field at Myitkyina coming back. During the ensuing days until the 26th of June, I carried out attacks on barges near Bhamo, and on one trip went to Shwebo and almost to Mandalay, making a round trip of nearly nine hundred miles. I strafed the field at Maymyo, caught a train on the railroad North of town, and set it on fire. It was anything for action—and the engine of "Old Exterminator" got pretty rough at times, for by then I had three hundred and sixty hours on it and my mechanics had had little experience with Allison's.

That night, when I got home from my trip into Burma, I was handed a radiogram that saved my life. As Sergeant LaRue of the 23rd Fighter Group. Everything has happened fast in this war, and the organization of the 23rd Fighter Group was no exception. There was no holiday, even if it was activated on the Fourth of July.

I read it my face must have turned white; I knew that tears came to my eyes, for I felt them burn. But I didn't care. I was ordered to report in Kunming, China, to General Chennault, as Commanding Officer of the 23rd Fighter Group which was to be activated from the AVG on July 4, 1942. I wiped the tears from my eyes and looked out on an improving world. I could hear the birds singing again, and people were laughing; I knew I was the luckiest man in all the world.

I carefully folded the radiogram to show my grandchildren when the war was over and went out to look at my ship. For I had something else on my mind too. I was going to go into Burma the next day on four of the damnest strafing and bombing raids the Japs had ever seen. It would be my swan-song from Assam and I had to celebrate in some way or another.

I told my crew to load a 500-pound HE on "Old Exterminator," and I walked around looking the old ship over. Somehow I figured that Kittyhawk had had a lot to do with getting me the greatest job in the war. It's not every man who finally gets what he has always wanted in the Army—after being pulled out of fighters for being too old, after being an instructor for four years, after being shanghaied into being a Burma-roadster, important as the job had been. Well, I had got what I wanted and I felt as though I could jump over the moon. I patted the leering shark's mouth on old 41-1456, and caressed the prop that had taken me in and out of many messes. Then I left, while they pulled the belly tank and put the big, fat, yellow bomb under the belly, and tightened the sway braces. The sight of that bomb made me feel pretty good.

Next morning before dawn I was in the air, my course set for Homalin. As I climbed out above the clouds I began to recite poetry in rhythm with the engine. To the verses of "Gunga Din" I dropped my first bomb of the day on the docks of Homalin. Then I flew back home with the words of the "Galley Slave" going out over the radio in a private broadcast to the world. On my next trip I dropped a five-hundred-pounder on a barge at Bhamo and came back and strafed the much-abused Myitkyina. My third attack was on the railroad station at Mogaung and I strafed the empty freight-cars in the yard. I had to use a belly tank on the fourth trip, and so I couldn't take a big bomb. But I loaded on six eighteen-pound frags and set sail for Lashio. I remembered to drop the belly tank before I went down into the anti-aircraft, and I dropped the six little frags in two of the big green warehouses by the railroad tracks. I shot up the field but saw no planes, and I finished my ammunition by strafing the main street of the town. I saw two plate-glass windows spatter across the street like artificial snow from a Christmas tree, and I laughed hysterically as two figures ran from a pagoda.

That day I landed back home tired and happy. More orders had come for me: I was to go to Delhi before I went to China. I went there the next morning with "Long Johnny" Payne.

When I had received my official instructions from headquarters in Delhi, and had been wine and dined by good friends—war correspondents like Berrigan, Magoffin, and Briggs—I came on back to pack my things in Assam. I tried to take the old fighter ship with me, but my crew had chiselled a new Allison engine from somewhere—had probably stolen it from some ship, but I didn't know where. So I went on over in a transport, expecting to come back later and ferry "Old Exterminator" to his new home.

As we came down into the rain over the lake South of Kunming, I never have felt so good. This was another step to the East, towards Japan, and when I got out and saw all those sleek-looking fighting ships that the Sloop was going to receive from the AVG in five days, my spirits soared another mile in the air. I was through with all that lonesome "one-man war" stuff. From now on we'd be fighting as a team, with bombers escorted by fighter ships in a proper force to represent America.

I had already met most of the members of the First American Volunteer Group, but it was an even greater pleasure to meet them now. Some of them were men who were going to stay with the 23rd Fighter Group and fight under me. Of all the honors that I ever have received or ever will receive, the greatest to me will always be the honor of being given command of that great group of sky fighters under the Command of Gen. Claire L. Chennault.

During the four days that followed I took over the military equipment of the Group from the Commander of the squadron that was based at Kunming, and I got my headquarters staff organized. In this Army, Master Sergeants showing officers what to do have always been the backbone of a fighting force, and I will never forget Master Sergeant McNeven. I was certainly expecting to lead the group in its fights against the Japanese, and the administrative work that the Sergeant Major of the 23rd Fighter Group accomplished so efficiently made it possible for me to fly and have the paper-work go on at the same time.

Later in the week I heard that "Old Exterminator" was ready with a new engine. But with the report came another that some other Group was moving into Assam, and that the engineering officer had stated he knew nothing about that ship 41-1456 belonging to the Chinese Government. It would stay in India, he said. I went on and flew back to India in one of the P-40E's that we had just received from the factory that repairs them in China.

Landing at my old base, I waited until dark, and then had the numbers on the ship that I had flown in exchanged with those of my old fighter. For morale purposes alone, we had to have that ship in the 23rd Group. All this change involved was a stenciling operation to put 41-1456 on the ship that I had flown from China, and another to put on "Old Exterminator" the serial number of the fighter that I was leaving in India.

So, early the next morning, July 3, 1942, "me and the old Kittyhawk" wended our happy way across the hills and jungles of Burma to Kunming and more adventures together. From that moment, we left the Air Corps number 41-1456 on that insignificant ship in India, and for all practical purposes the old P-40E that I had used for sixty-three days over Burma became another number, but it would always be "Old Exterminator" to me. In those two months we'd flown together 371 hours over enemy territory and we were more than friends. That is somewhat over eighty thousand miles, and in combat that's a long, long way.

Everything has happened fast in this war, and the organization of the 23rd Fighter Group was no exception. There was no holiday, even if it was activated on the Fourth of July. There was no time for celebration. Radio Tokyo started right off with a bang, and we definitely knew hard work was ahead. On the night of July 3, Radio Tokyo—the one program we could ever hear in China—warned the new American fighter group that they would quickly annihilate them, for it was common knowledge that the experienced AVG personnel were leaving for America. But Tokyo had reckoned without the strategic brain of the General, or the loyalty of those great pilots of the First American Volunteer Group.

The General was expecting an attack on Independence Day anyway, for the Japs had always shown an affinity for raids on our holidays. When the Japs arrived over Kweilin, expecting to find green and inexperienced fighter pilots, they found many American boys who for weeks had been flying with the AVG.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

LOYALTY TO THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 6:33; 7:12, 16-29. GOLDEN TEXT—Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matthew 6:33.

In the kingdom of Christ there must be unquestioned loyalty. If then He is the King of our lives, we as Christian men and women will want to live in accordance with His blessed will.

Loyalty to Christ leads to the best kind of living. It surpasses any experience of loyalty to a cause or a human personality. Instead of hindering or limiting our development, it opens wide the grand vistas of a life altogether worth-while. It is a life:

I. Well Ordered (6:33).

Much of the distress in which men and women find themselves is caused by the fact that their lives are not well ordered. They live in a constant flurry of uncertainty, indecision and disorder. They have no proper center for their lives, and consequently they are lopsided and lacking in real usefulness.

See how delightfully right is the experience and activity of a follower of Christ. He is the center. The interests of His kingdom are the first in thought. His righteousness is the rule of life. Other things? Well, all that is necessary, God adds day by day.

When the center of life is right, everything else is right—when that is wrong, all is wrong. Is your life centered in Christ?

II. Kind (7:12).

Spiritual principles apply to daily living, to our attitude toward our fellow men. Here we have the so-called Golden Rule. It is not the way of salvation; it is a summary of the teaching of the law and prophets. But it does provide us with a splendid principle of daily conduct.

Our active concern each day and in every touch with others is to be, "How would I like them to deal with me? Let me do thus to them." That is a higher standard than you think until you really try it. Only Christ can enable you to do it.

III. Fruitful (7:16-20).

Two fruit trees or vines may look almost alike until the fruit appears, and then we learn the true character of each—whether good or bad.

Every life brings forth some kind of fruit, and in its outward manifestation the life speaks of the inward condition of the life. Unclean and profane speech, hatred, dishonesty and trickery—these come out of an evil heart. Righteousness, pure and kindly speech, thoughtful actions, honest and straightforward dealings—these speak of the good heart.

The one whose life is centered in Christ (see above) is a vine after God's own planting. His roots strike deep down into the grace and mercy of God, and his fruit is the Christ-like grace of Christian character (see Gal. 5:22, 23).

IV. Genuine (7:21-23).

Lip service will not do (v. 21). Even an imitation of the real service of God's people, but rendered without the backing of a life of faith, will result only in disappointment and our Lord's own disavowal (vv. 22, 23).

The opposite of that is equally true. The real child of God works for Christ; he speaks of his Lord, and calls on—His name. But in and through it all there is the evident ring of sincerity and genuineness which marks it as the real thing.

One does not hear much mention these days of hypocrites in the church. Perhaps we are too polite to speak of them, or it may be that we think them too obvious to need pointing out. But they are there, going through the motions of a Christian life, talking the language, and imitating the works, but completely dead spiritually.

V. Well Grounded (7:24-29).

The figure of speech changes. Instead of being likened to fruit trees, men's lives are said to be like houses, with their various kinds of foundations and superstructures.

The figure is an interesting and instructive one. There is only one foundation upon which one can build a Christian life. "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (I Cor. 3:11).

Therein lies the folly of the modernist or liberal. He has denied and rejected the only foundation—and yet tries to build a house of Christian character. When the real problems of life strike, he goes down in ruin.

On the other hand, let no Christian who has laid a foundation on the rock fail to go on and build upon it. Thus grounded, his house of faith will stand through the wind and rain and floods of life seek to tear it down. Of that kind of house we read that "it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock" (v. 25).

This lesson will afford many professed Christians a chance to test their lives and their loyalties by God's standards.

Mechanical Defects
 Mechanical defects in some cases are the direct cause of accidents and a contributing factor in others. The safety section of the bureau of motor carriers, Interstate Commerce commission, found that 6.9 per cent of the accidents reported to it in 1942 were classed as "mechanical defect" accidents.

Chimney Repair

Ask yourself these questions when you're examining heating equipment: Have chimneys been cleaned within a year? Are they in good repair? Are smokepipes too close to burnable material, causing charred spots from radiated heat? Are smokepipes rusted or broken, with holes that sparks can pass through? Are walls, ceilings and partitions protected from overheating of stoves and furnaces? And are stoves and furnaces in good repair?

Distinction Difficult
 Animals younger than four months will not resist Brucellosis and those older than eight months will retain the positive reaction to the blood test for an undesirable length of time. The bred cows and heifers may abort because of the vaccination, and the majority of them will always react positively to the blood test. In this situation the owner can never be sure which animal has Brucellosis and which one is reacting to the vaccination.

Storing Eggs
 Eggs can be packed in a water-glass solution in earthen jars, wooden or galvanized pails or wooden tubs. Sterilize the containers with boiling water, then mix the water-glass solution according to directions and carefully insert the clean fresh eggs so the solution covers them. A 6-gallon container will hold 15 dozen eggs. Most drug stores sell water-glass in liquid form ready to mix with water, at a price of about 25 cents a quart.

Jap Outcasts
 When Shintoism rose in Japan its teachings prohibited the eating of the meat of animals. Groups that continued eating animal meat or handling animal hides were declared "unclean." Called Etori or butchers, the prejudice against them became widespread. Today, as always, the outcasts are permitted to do only the lowest type of work — chiefly the jobs of butchers and tanners.

FEEDING ITALY

Chief issue in the long series of backstage arguments over feeding Italy has been President Roosevelt's desire (1) to get the Italian people to play a greater part in the war; and (2) avoid a repetition of Greece. Already there have been rumblings of food rioting, and should Allied tanks and guns be turned against the people of Rome as in Athens, the repercussions would be tragic.

Theoretically, the British have agreed with Roosevelt. When it comes to putting the policy into effect, however, it is different. Following some disagreements last August and September, F.D.R. thought he had the whole matter ironed out at the Quebec conference with Prime Minister Churchill, only to find that in late October nothing had been done.

Finally, on October 31, he took the unprecedented step of giving a direct order as commander-in-chief to the secretary of war. He wrote: "I have had before me the shipping difficulties in getting supplies to the civilian population of Italy and I note that we have been building up some reserves for use when northern Italy collapses."

"In the meantime, it seems to me that the situation is so acute, from the point of view particularly of food in southern Italy, that some risks must be taken regarding supplies at the time of the collapse in northern Italy. That collapse may well not come until Germany itself collapses, in which case the shipping situation will be much less acute."

"Under the circumstances, I have determined to assume the responsibility for asking General Wilson to increase the ration to 300 grams throughout all of Italy that our forces occupy."

Despite this categorical position by the President of the United States, Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, referred to above, did nothing. Last week, Secretary Stettinius emphasized shipping as the reason why increased feeding had not been given Italy. But he did not give the whole story. Actually, as pointed out by the President, there has been accumulating a stock pile of food for unliberated northern Italy.

POORLY PAID CONGRESSMEN

The struggle experienced by many congressmen to make both ends meet in Washington, and also the steady retirement of A-1 officials from public life because they cannot take the financial sacrifice, has an interesting parallel in the early days of the nation.

Some of the founding fathers, being honest men and without private fortunes, found it impossible to live on their government salaries and were threatened with imprisonment.

For instance, the great revolutionary war hero, Gen. William Moultrie was imprisoned for debt. Also, the first associate justice of the U. S. Supreme court, James Wilson, had to flee Pennsylvania to escape his creditors and was about to be served with extradition papers in Edenton, N. C., when he died.

Also, John Rutledge of South Carolina, one of the chief drafters of the constitution, was threatened with imprisonment for debt and only remained out of jail through the sufficiency of his creditors.

Today, U. S. congressmen, cabinet members, and federal judges remain relatively among the poorest paid public servants in the world. A U. S. ambassador to London is paid $17,500, while the British ambassador to the United States is paid $80,000.

A U. S. Supreme court justice gets $20,000, while a New York state Supreme court justice gets $25,000.

PERSUADING NAZI PRISONERS

Recently the army's shrewd psychological warfare branch installed sound equipment at the edge of a Nazi-held port behind the Allied lines in France and offered the Germans a novel "Trial Surrender." The message broadcast to the Germans went something like this: "Try it out for three days. If you don't enjoy being a prisoner with us, you can return to your units."

As a result of the offer, eight Nazis surrendered. At the end of the three days, four agreed to stay; the other four asked to go back. The army let them go. To their surprise, however, the four came back a few hours later bringing more than 50 of their tired Nazi comrades to join them in the comparatively luxurious prison camp surroundings.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Students of lend-lease will find at an American neuropsychiatric rest home at Shugborough park, in England, a rather undistinguished flagpole about 15 feet high bearing the stars and stripes. At its base is a sign: "This flagpole loaned the American forces at Shugborough park by the Earl of Litchfield." The Hollywood post office has made a special rubber stamp to re-address mail to Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas, who once lived in Hollywood.

Conservation Practices Maintain Soil's Productivity

Prevention of Erosion,
Replacement of Minerals
Chief Effort in Program

What will the American farmer do after the war? Will he be able to grow and market the huge record crops of wartime? Will his land stand up under the stress of huge crops year after year?

Early surveys indicate that the sturdy sons of the soil were already thinking out these problems in the midst of completing another amazing record harvest of food and fiber last year, according to the War Food administration.

Problems of volume of crops and adequate markets must await post-war developments, but both the American farmer and Uncle Sam are prepared to make necessary adjustments that will retain for the farmer the stability he has enjoyed during the war.

First on the list of rural postwar planning to maintain production are rest and rehabilitation of the nation's soil, reports show. Despite care to preserve the land better than in World War I, continuous years of record production have taken their toll. But WFA points out that farming for war has clearly demonstrated the value of conservation practices as protection for the soil, as well as an aid to increased yield and higher quality crops.

Acre yield in 1943 was 23 per cent greater than in 1935, the year before the government's conservation programs began to receive special emphasis. The 1944 harvest indicates a probable acre yield 6 per cent more than last year, or about 29 per cent higher than the 1935 figure.

More than half the entire land area of the United States is in farms, a total of 1,060,852,000 acres. This includes cropland, rangeland and woodland. About 530,131,000 acres are available for crops.

More and more farmers have learned to protect their land from erosion by strip-cropping, contouring and terracing. They are replacing minerals and other soil nutrients depleted by constant cropping, and are using soil rebuilding crops and other conservation practices to protect and enrich the land.

Boost Yield in Idaho

Out in Idaho, for example, on five acres of land where sweet clover was turned under, the per acre harvest of potatoes last year was 5,991 pounds greater than on the rest of the field where no green manure was used. Similarly, contour farming with intertilled crops in the north central states raised the corn yield 5.3 to 12 bushels per acre, and in the southern states increased cotton yield 29 pounds per acre. In addition, this practice was reported to have resulted in a national saving of soil ranging from 1.5 tons to 126 tons per acre per year.

Emphasis, during the war, of necessity has been on such better farming methods as would give immediate results in increased yield and be simple to put into effect, WFA points out. Postwar farming will turn its attention to the longer-range practices, the more complex measures that may take additional labor and money, and a longer time to complete, but which bring more lasting returns and make for a better balance of land and use.

Expansion of irrigation is expected to be one of the important larger conservation practices which will receive additional emphasis, particularly in the far west states. So important is planned irrigation to the productivity of western farming, says WFA, that the irrigated area, which includes only about 3 per cent of the land in farms and 11 per cent of the cropland, produces some 30 per cent of the crop income.

Flag Raised Over Japan

In '53 May Return There
PHILADELPHIA, PA. — The first American flag to fly over Japan—a banner raised in 1853 by Commodore Matthew Perry—may make a return visit with Gen. Douglas MacArthur. The board of trustees of the Atwater Kent museum, where the tattered relic is now on display, are considering a proposal that it be sent to MacArthur to accompany him on his invasion of "the land of the rising sun."

One benefit of a well-planned and executed conservation program on a farm is that fewer acres need to be planted to produce the same size harvest taken on land farmed without conservation practices. This means that a farmer, by using the right practices for his land, can rest one acreage while producing on another, yet get the same amount of a crop that in "pre-conservation" years required planting of the entire acreage. In this way, all his soil will be kept in tip-top condition, he will get the crops he needs, and they will be of a higher quality and better nutritional value.

Summer Fallow

Most successful farm plans in areas such as the Pacific Northwest and the western portion of the Great Plains include summer fallow as a regular part of the year's program, according to WFA. Experimental results in Oregon and Idaho show increases of 19.3 bushels and 19.1 bushels of wheat per acre, respectively, on fallow, compared to the return from land under continuous cropping.

A group of West Virginia farmers reported that forage production increased 57 per cent on their farms from the application of a ton of ground limestone and 180 pounds of triple superphosphate per acre. At the same time, the protein content of the forage increased more than 40 per cent.

Some 3,650,000 farms last year carried out one or more practices under the Agricultural Conservation program administered by AAA. A considerably larger number is estimated as participating in 1944. The success of these practices, as wartime measures, can be expected to influence not only these men but their neighbors as well in carrying out a postwar conservation program.

Raising Okra for Oil Seed
May Be New Southern Crop

Okra is emerging as something more than a vegetable of debatable merit, and is making a bid as a major oil crop for the south. This plant belongs to the cotton family. Its fruit is a pod, 6 to 10 inches long. Usually the pod is picked when green, before the seeds have set their oil. In dry okra pods, however, Dr. Julian C. Miller, Louisiana State university's noted plant geneticist, discovered seeds which produced abundant oil, equal in food quality and wholesomeness to cottonseed oil, and suitable also for use as a drier in paint.

In addition, the okra fiber is long and tough, many have a place in making cordage. Both the fiber and the pithy material surrounding the seeds may prove a source of cellulose similar to peanut hulls.

Dr. Miller promptly began breeding new varieties of okra, to be harvested for seed, rather than to be used as vegetables, has come up with an okra which yields 1,000 to 2,000 pounds of seed per acre with the seed having an oil content of 18 to 22 per cent. This means okra may produce 180 to 440 pounds of oil per acre, against a production of 50 to 80 pounds of oil per acre from cottonseed.

HOLD STEADY

Even though the manpower shortage is acute in high schools all over the country, we're still getting reports on steady stuff from the hearts-and-flowers department. They come under the heading of vital statistics, of course.

Tag Days—Everybody's wearing those little leather edged luggage tags with the cellophane centers.

If she wears a boy's picture in her tag you know she's going steady. If there's nothing in the tag but cellophane, she's an Orphan Annie. Boys wear them, too, carrying out the same idea in reverse.

Ticker Tape—One stripe of adhesive tape on a boy's jacket or sweater sleeve means he's a wolf on the prowl, two stripes mean he's going steady, three stripes mean he's engaged. Is that the same as saying, "Three Strikes and He's Out."

Half 'n Half—When a boy gives his steady one of those handclasp friendship rings, he breaks it apart and keeps one half; she keeps the other. They wear them on their watch chains or ribbons.

Little Boy—Mother, is it true that an apple a day keeps the doctor away?
Mother—Yes, son.

Little Boy—Well, give me an apple, mother. I just threw a ball through the doctor's window.

What to Do

By PHYLLIS BELMONT

The Rambling Rhymster

By LES PLETTNER

We went into an artist's show,
With sister Emmeline;
The finer things of life to know,
Ere passing to decline.
We saw all kinds of so-called art,
In shapes distorted—strange—
And some would make the eyeballs smart,

While some would cure the mange.
But finally we came to one—
It was a simple thing—
A simple canvas deftly done—
With verve and dash and swing.
It showed a cowboy on cayuse,
Before a pasture bars.
He'd stopped to light a fag—limbs loose—

By light of western stars.
We said, "By golly, this is great,"
It struck us right and pat.
It went to our aorta straight—
Hit us where we were at.
Our sister looked exceeding smart—
Superior—calm and cool.
She said, "Old top, it is not art,
Of past or modern school.
It is a mere photography,
Unworthy of serious thought,
So don't stand there—come on with me.
And look at what you ought!"
We humbly, dutifully obeyed,
As always we have done,
But in our mental gallery stayed
That one . . . and only one!

Another Angle

"Here's another angle," Eddie Eagan offered. "The crowd only sees the few survivors who get to the top or near the top. It rarely sees the wreckage of all the thousands who started out, to finish punch drunk or walking on their heels. Few of these have ever learned how to protect themselves. Too many are rushed forward too quickly."

"I recall talking with Gene Tunney in his earlier years about this angle."

"I'd made up my mind to do three things," Tunney told me. "The first is to learn how to defend myself, to protect myself. I don't want to find myself punch drunk about the time I have a chance to get somewhere."

"The second is that I am going to take my time. I know this requires a lot of patience. But I am not going to be crowded into any ring fight I am not ready for."

"The next item was the matter of condition—hard work—hard training. 'After that,' Tunney said, 'I will be ready to take up the matter of offense—of learning not only how but also where to punch.'

"You must admit that Gene followed this program faithfully," said Eagan. "He made himself into a good defensive boxer. And he took his time on the way to Dempsey. From the day Gene won the light-heavyweight championship of the AEF in France he used up seven years before he thought he was ready for a shot at the big title. Seven years of long, hard training is a long time to wait. Few would ever have waited half that long. Gene was always a fellow of tremendous patience. In those seven years Tunney never broke training."

"I recall later the time and thought Tunney spent on increasing his punching power. Also the time he spent on locating the spots where a punch would hurt most. And don't ever forget that while Gene was no killing puncher, he could hurt you a lot. Ask Jack Dempsey—Jack'll tell you. I know. I've boxed with him a lot. Gene never threw wild punches. There are certain nerve centers which he knew all about—and he was accurate enough to land just there."

"There are many, many types of volunteer war work for young girls, and every girl should do something to help win the war—roll bandages, spot airplanes, donate blood, work in any of the volunteer agencies or be hostess at the service clubs."

Stock of Truck Tires
Drops to New Level

CHICAGO. — The supply of heavy truck tires available for civilian use in the first quarter of 1945 will be smaller than in any three months since the start of the war, and the number of passenger car tires will be too limited to provide for "A" card and less essential "B" card drivers, tire industry sources announced.

THERE was a driving, winter rain beating down, blown by a wind from the barren lands or "somewhere north of 53." Stepping into a half-guarding niche, who should we run into but Eddie Eagan, probably the best light-heavyweight college boxer of all time. At least, wearing the color of heavyweights fighters as Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey and hold his own. He was also good enough to bring an offer from Tex Rickard of $25,000 to fight in the semi-final of one of the Dempsey-Tunney fights, which is pretty fair pay for a semi-finalist.

Eagan, who is now a successful New York lawyer, began talking about a recent story I'd written concerning the inability of college fighters and other athletes to make good in pro boxing heavyweight ranks. I have always believed that Eddie Eagan, a first-class boxer, smart and game, a good puncher on the side, could have traveled quite a way in the professional game. He was smart enough to pick another career.

"This matter of the college boxer in the pro arena is a hard thing to explain," he said.

"It isn't a matter of the social side of life, social equality, etc., in which I have never been too much interested. But it does mean a matter of dropping down into a pretty tough racket where you are suddenly surrounded by a group of people you'd just as soon keep away from. The lower sector of the fight game is something few people know about. But I can tell you it is pretty low. It is packed with rackets, double crossers, chiselers, etc. and you must work your way up through this group. It is a tough road up. Ask Tunney or Dempsey."

"This reminds me," I suggested, of George Phair's famous lines "Hail! the conquering hero comes—Surrounded by a bunch of bums!"

Eagan laughed. "That's about the way it is. And that's one reason a lot of good college boxers or college athletes don't care to enter the fight game as a profession."

"Another Angle," Eddie Eagan offered. "The crowd only sees the few survivors who get to the top or near the top. It rarely sees the wreckage of all the thousands who started out, to finish punch drunk or walking on their heels. Few of these have ever learned how to protect themselves. Too many are rushed forward too quickly."

Golfer an Athlete?

Several people have brought up the point that a golfer isn't really an athlete. I wonder how many know what an athlete really is? By the old Grecian standards, and it was Greece that originated the word, an athlete is one who trains for war.

Golf happens to be a game that demands the top in concentration on the job. This is a vital part of any competitive sport. Golf is also a game that requires coordination in the way of mind and muscle.

Farming Took Most Wood From Forests

Era of Agricultural Expansion Cut Volume

THE demands of agriculture have played the largest role in reducing forest acreage in the United States, a survey by American Forest Products industries discloses. Almost twice as much timber has been removed as existed when the original settlers arrived, although sizable stands of commercial forest yet remain. The apparent paradox of removing more timber than we had in the beginning, without exhausting the forests, is explained by the natural tendency of trees to reproduce themselves, when harvested properly.

Nearly 60 per cent of our original forest and its subsequent growth has served no economic purpose. More than 4 1/2 trillion board feet died from disease, insects, windthrow and other natural causes. Fire killed almost 1 3/4 trillion board feet, and more than 2 trillion board feet was cut to clear land for farming. Wood waste in industrial operations accounted for only about 1/4 trillion feet.

Thus, wood which disappeared from the national stockpile in 300 years, but which did not find useful occupations, totaled 8 trillion, 715 billion board feet—more than there was when Columbus first landed in the New World.

Of the 45 per cent removed for fuel, the survey discloses, the greatest single drain has been caused by the farmer, who cut for fuel, or otherwise destroyed, more than 2 trillion, 100 billion board feet of merchantable timber.

Homemade Candler

An electric light and a tin can with removable or stationary top makes a cheap and easily constructed egg candler.

Easy to make
When being candled, the eggs are held in a slanting position with the large end against the hole through which the light passes. The egg is grasped by the small end, and while held between the thumb and the tips of the first two fingers it is given one or two quick turns on its long axis. This causes the contents of the egg to move and throws the yolk nearer the shell, allowing its condition to be more carefully observed. The fresher the eggs, the smaller the air space. Blood spots or other foreign matter can also be easily detected as can watery whites and yolks.

Light Color Top and Dark Skirt Is Latest Theme of Designers

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A NEW and promising fashion is in the making! It is the costume that teams a light color jacket or topcoat with a dark skirt or one-piece dress. Already designers are turning their time and effort to promoting this interesting trend for spring.

It is well worthwhile to watch this new style gesture as it develops into an outstanding vogue during the coming weeks. Illustrated herewith are three smart advance models that interpret the light-top-and-dark-skirt movement in versatile mood.

Hounds tooth checked wool is definitely high style for city suits. It adds to the interest of the new spring checks that they come in such out-of-the-ordinary colors. The suit pictured to the left, a Sophie original, is in peacock blue and black. The all-wool black skirt is topped with a swank jacket tailored of peacock blue and black check. It is attractively styled with cuffed pockets set diagonally across the hips. All signs point to a season wherein the big play will be made on the styling of pockets in unique ways.

The light tunic coat centered in the group is good style because it is a tunic. There's nothing smarter than tunic effects for dresses and blouses, jackets and coats. This model is one of the latest short-fitted types, and is in aqua wool, an especially smart pastel. Worn with a dark weskit-type suit, it makes a three-piece ensemble. It is big news as to that which is to be the mode this spring.

A characteristic feature of incoming fashions for the new season is their soft feminine styling. The charming costume to the right not only emphasizes the new soft styling technique, but it stresses the idea of a light jacket and a matching topcoat worn with a dark skirt. Pink for the coat and jacket with black for the skirt is a first-class color combination for spring, although the three-piece is refreshingly springlike in any of the pastel colors with black.

The glory of a spring costume will depend more than ever this year on the accessories worn with it. Which is why we are showing below to the left a group of the "little things" that are newly designed to dress up the spring costume to ultra charm and style distinction.

A flick of a gay and flirtatious "hanky," the flash of a jewel, the dash of a new handbag, a gay belt of unusual design, these are the tricks that dispel winter ennui as much as the arrival of the first robin. See in the inset below several of these gay little flatterers that will add glamour touches to many a midseason or early spring costume.

Draped petals on a handbag of crushed goatskin is Jenny's interpretation of the now-so-fashionable softer look. This bag is designed with the thought in mind that it carry all your feminine paraphernalia tidily so as to be easily available at all times.

In designing the belt, Criterion follows the direction of the current fashion trend by placing emphasis on side treatments. With its swirls of stitching on a unique side-slung wing, this belt sends your spirits soaring in that it foretells greater versatility in belt styling. The handkerchief by Burmel offers you a prelude to spring with a beautiful bouquet printed on really and truly pure Irish linen.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This Syrup, at Home

No Cooking. No Work. Real Saving.

Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it. It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Now put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This makes a full pint of truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

And you'll say it's really amazing, for quick action. You can feel it take hold promptly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Thus it eases breathing, and lets you sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

Evening Sweater

This practically sleeveless dress-up sweater of lightweight white wool and cotton yarn is lovely for evening wear now, and later on in the summer it can be worn for either day or night gala occasion. The shoulders are laced with ribbon that can be changed at will to tune with the color scheme of one's costume. The low oval neckline is a flattering detail.

Bright Embroidery

Trims Formal Wraps

Formality in evening wraps is as necessary this season as formality in the evening gown. Most popular are the bright wool three-quarter length rippled toppers with glitter shoulder trimmings. The most dazzling embroidery imaginable is lavished on the shoulders and the linings add brilliant color. These styles are particular favorites with women, but young girls find them flattering too. Newer than these gorgeous toppers and of infinite appeal to the young set are the capes, for the most part hip length, though the full-length cape is a very smart number, too. The distinguishing thing about these capes, as well as the toppers, is the gorgeous embroidery and beadwork that animates the shoulders. Best-liked model is of white wool, lined with scarlet, and gold-embroidered at the shoulders, sometimes in deep yoke fashion, or as some prefer, military epaulette fashion.

Swish-Back Dresses Are

New Trend in Designing

A new trend in dress design is to place dramatic style features at the back. The newest dinner gowns in modish black stress this smart trend in various ways. A slender black lace with knee flare hemline achieves style prestige via three butterfly bows of starched lace. One is placed at the back waistline, another midway between flare-flounce and waist, the other where the flounce is seamed to the skirt at the back. The swish-back effect is seen in Cascade draperies that extend from waist to hemline, bustle-back bows and sashes that tie at the back in big loops and long streamers.

We have lost two senior boys into the army during the first half year. Richard Burch was called first and then Olen Herriman, who went into the merchant marines. We are sorry to lose these boys. We all miss them and send best wishes.

Mr. Cochran, vice president of the Bay City Business College, visited at school Tuesday and interviewed the seniors. Many of our graduates have attended this college and we are always pleased to have a visit from their representative.

Sgt. Zollweg has received the Air Medal with one oak leaf cluster.

Walter writes, "Have seen most places of interest over here and some good country from the air. The people wave and like to see our planes. It makes you proud to be flying for them after all their days of tyranny. I looked up Bill DeGrow from East Texas. He is a P-47 fighter pilot and has been flying right next to me covering us on strikes. Those fighters sure are swell to have along, and they really tear into the Japs."
