COAL CONSUMERS MUST FILE FUEL DECLARATION

Tawas and Isosco county consumers of coal or other solid fuels must file a declaration with their retail coal dealer before May 15 if they wish to assure themselves of coal deliveries during the coming year.

No dealer may deliver solid fuel to a consumer who has not filed a Consumer Declaration with him, according to recent regulations imposed by the Solid Fuels Administration.

The declaration, which is available from all dealers, is a simplified form of certificate that each consumer must fill out. The form asks for the following information:

Information Required

1. Name of applicant and building or residence to be served.
2. Number of rooms to be heated.
3. Amount of coal or solid fuel you ordinarily burn during the year.
4. If you burn more than 25 tons, the amount of fuel you had on hand April 1, 1945.
5. Name of dealer with whom you will file declaration.
6. Amount of coal you want to order for coming year (not more than 80 percent of your normal requirements).

Place Order Early

The Solid Fuels Administration has emphasized the importance of placing orders for coal early this year. Dealers will not be required to deliver solid fuels to any consumer who does not place his order at the time of filing his declaration.

Consumers are warned by the SPAW that there will not be nearly enough solid fuel to give them as much as they ordinarily use during a normal heating season. Dealers are prohibited from delivering, and a consumer is prohibited from receiving during the period April 1, 1945, to March 31, 1946, more than 80 percent of the consumers normal annual requirements.

Some one hundred fifty dairymen from Arenac, Ogemaw and Isosco counties assembled at the county garage at Prescott Tuesday evening to further develop plans for a cooperative marketing organization. C. W. Hardin, also of Michigan State College Economics Department offered suggestions to the group regarding price schedules which exist in this state and Wisconsin on milk that is being manufactured into dry dairy products.

A board of directors, who will also serve as the incorporators for this newly formed organization, include Fred Shepard of West Branch, representing the present patronage route A; Harry Whiteside, representing route B; Dale Fasch of Rose City, representing route C; Edwin Miller of Prescott, route D; Henry Smith of Sterling, route E; Ed. Lentner of Prescott, route F; Robert Winters of West Branch, route G; Nelson Ostrander of Whittemore, route I; Willard Dunn of Aiger, route K; Robert Hilbrecht of East Tawas, route L; Eldon Pray of West Branch, representing the self-haulers; and Charles T. A quorum for transaction of business meetings of the membership shall consist of not less than twenty per cent of the qualified members of the association who are qualified to vote at the time the particular meeting is held. The association is being formed as a non-profit cooperative marketing association whose principal business address will be located at West Branch.

Lions or Timekeeper, Benchley Tamed 'Em!

At one time Robert Benchley wrote for a magazine which employed a timekeeper whose duty it was to dispatch nasty notes requesting explanations from employees who were absent or tardy.

"It's true I was five minutes late this morning," said Benchley, "but it was unavoidable. In passing the circus, on my way to work, I was brutally attacked by a dozen escaped lions. Summoning every ounce of strength in my body I fought the angry beasts off single-handed!"

The timekeeper discontinued his practice of sending sharp notes.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The contented cow will be more so after the war, when B. F. Goodrich research men expect low-cost rubber will make possible rubber mattress or floor covering for stables.

War-born synthetic represented 80 per cent of the nation's rubber consumption in 1944, reports John L. Collier, President of The B. F. Goodrich Company. In 1941 man-made rubber was less than one per cent of our consumption.

The destruction of some 5,000 tires a day on the American battlefronts is the understandable reason for subordination of civilian tire needs to those of the military.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT Col. Robert L. Scott W.N.U. RELEASE

The story thus far: After graduating from West Point, Robert Scott wins his wings at Kelly Field, Texas, and takes up combat flying. He has been an instructor for four years when the war breaks out, and is told he is now too old for combat.

We made the attack from three directions simultaneously. Lieutenant Couch led his ship on a stern flank that I did not see, for I was diving on the course of the bombers from the flank where the low sun was. I was going in for a full sun.

I commanded the necessary transportation on Yecheing field and placed it ready for the instant movement of pilots to their dispersed fighters, which were scattered to all parts of the airfield.

It looked as if we'd get the chance very soon, too, for the field in western Yunnan had been selected by the newly formed Air Transport Command, which was superseding the Ferry Command, as the Eastern terminus of the route to China.

For the purpose of security in future operations, I will not name our base in western Yunnan. But there was a big turquoise-blue lake less than ten miles away which the General and I called Yecheing.

Next morning I went out on Lake Yecheing, and from the bow of a native sampan I soon shot eighteen of the biggest geese I had ever seen. Even if we were remote from the loved ones at home, we'd have meat for Christmas dinner that was filled with the vitamins we needed.

I had hurried back to the field before taking off for Kunming with my report on the efficiency of the warning net, and was taking pictures of some little mongol-appearing Miaows who were holding my geese aloft—when we had an air raid alert.

As I saw the second Jap in front of me—the left wing man of the leader—I realized I'd have to dive under the enemy very soon or I'd run into them. Things hit my ship now, and with noise like a wing coming off, the side glass of my windshield was shot out.

At two o'clock I sent all planes into the sky except mine. I sat in that on the ground, listening for Harry Pike's expected report from his patrol to the Mekong River.

Christmas night, while we were enjoying the geese, George Hazelett came in with his Squadron to report that the Japs had bombed our base near Lake Yecheing with eighteen ships on that afternoon of Christmas Day.

The General had been correct as usual—the Japs were keeping the end of the ferry route under close surveillance.

The General had been sick with a cold over Christmas and had a fever that night, when he told me what he had to do at Yecheing.

As I flew West towards Yecheing, 145 miles away, in the half light I saw the coolies carrying drums of gasoline on wheelbarrows up the Burma Road.

As I flew West towards Yecheing, 145 miles away, in the half light I saw the coolies carrying drums of gasoline on wheelbarrows up the Burma Road.

I called for the attack, in order to get the enemy before he could bomb the field. As I dove for the attack that I had always longed for, I saw one P-40 take the lone Zero head-on and shoot it down.

We made the attack from three directions simultaneously. Lieutenant Couch led his ship on a stern flank that I did not see, for I was diving on the course of the bombers from the flank where the low sun was.

I had to dive from 20,000 feet to 17,000 feet to get on the level with the enemy formation, and when I got there I had plenty of excess speed over the Japs.

As I saw the second Jap in front of me—the left wing man of the leader—I realized I'd have to dive under the enemy very soon or I'd run into them.

There was only smoke above, and the formation had broken, for I knew the bomber had exploded—the bombs had been detonated by the fifty-calibre fire.

When Pike called in, as I got the engine started, I heard that the Japs were at seventeen thousand, and I called to him to take the fighters, for I hoped by that move to make the bombers come in unescorted.

There were no more bombers to be seen, but I saw seven P-40's. Clinger came over and got on my wing; as I recognized his ship I slid my hatch-cover back and waved at him.

I took some of the planes up top-cover while we landed those that were shot up or low on fuel.

HOW RUSSIA WILL COMPETE WITH U. S.

Russia is bidding for, and planning to take care of, largely increased postwar world markets for manufactured products.

To me the difference the two methods of compensation make in production was illustrated as I watched two men working at a job just across the street from me.

People passed along the street and some would stop to talk. The piece price worker talked but he worked while he talked.

That was a simple demonstration of why Russia will win in the competition for world trade. She uses, in her government-controlled plants, a piece price compensation system that pays a premium for production.

In Russia the workers must accept the system a one man government prescribes. Each Russian worker is paid in accordance with what he produces.

DEFICIT FINANCING IN POSTWAR ERA

WHILE WE ARE CONSIDERING the problem of the world future, what about the problems America must face in the immediate years ahead?

The budget submitted to congress covering the fiscal year from July 1, 1945, to June 30, 1946, would indicate an expectation of continued deficit financing following the end of the war.

It would seem the time is ripe for a careful study of our problems of the immediate future years. It will take something more than wishes or guesses to pull us through without a serious collapse.

To devise such a policy is something more than a few days' or a few weeks' job. It will take time, a long time, and the time to start is now.

Storing Eggs
Eggs can be packed in a water-glass solution in earthen jars, wooden or galvanized pails or wooden tubs. Sterilize the containers with boiling water, then mix the water-glass solution according to directions and carefully insert the clean fresh eggs so the solution covers them. A 6-gallon container will hold 15 dozen eggs. Most drug stores sell water-glass in liquid form ready to mix with water, at a price of about 25 cents a quart.

Salute to American Mothers

They are the unsung heroines of this War. True it takes all kinds of people to win a war, soldiers and sailors and businessmen, farmers, laborers, wives and sweethearts . . . and MOTHERS. Mothers because they are part of the force behind the fighting force . . . because they wait for the peace that will send their sons home to them . . . and because while they wait, they work. Theirs is the important job of morale . . . of keeping intact the American home. For today, as in other wars, the home remains the port of happiness and safety to which men turn first when the War is won.

Delicious Flavor
Although the baked potato can't be yellow with butter, it can be given delicious flavor by using drippings from steak, hamburger or meat loaf, bits of hot crisp fried salt pork, gravy and other table fats.

Clothes Moths
If the house becomes badly infested with clothes moths, to a point where overstuffed furniture and rugs are damaged, it will be best to have a commercial exterminator called in. Fumigation of the entire house with cyanide gas is a sure and effective way of eliminating clothes moths but it must be done by an experienced person, since the gas is dangerous.

Draining Soils
On poorly drained or slow-draining soils sow alsike and Ladino clovers with timothy and redtop, agronomists say. Some red clover and alfalfa may be used on well-drained spots. On soils that become very dry in summer mammoth clover should improve yields.

Bruceffosis Infectious
The most common method of spread of Bruceffosis is through the mouth and the digestive system. Cattle usually get the disease by licking an aborting cow or diseased afterbirth; also by eating infected feed, grazing on infected pastures and drinking infected water (streams and permanent troughs)

Garden Equipment
A few simple, sturdy garden tools, well cared for, are all that most gardeners require to do good work. Tools used for hand preparation of the soil are a square-nosed spade or spading fork and a steel-toothed rake. These and other metal tools, such as wheel hoe, pruning shears and knife, lawn mower, and wheelbarrow, should be cleaned of dirt, and the working parts wiped with an oily rag after use. Tools should be kept in a dry place, such as a garage or tool shed.

More Money Than Ever Before Needed for 7th

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Announcing plans for the 7th War Loan Payroll Savings Drive. Ralph G. Englesman, Director of Payroll Savings for the War Finance Division of the Treasury Dept., said today: "The Seventh War Loan will be one of the two great War Loans planned for 1945. More payroll money will have to be raised from individuals in this War Loan than ever before.
"That money is needed first, of course, to help pay for the War. Just as important, however, is the fact that with incomes up, employment high, and consumer goods scarce, it is vital that we get every possible dollar over rock bottom expenses into War Bonds—NOW.
"More money than ever before is in the hands of the men and women who work in the plants, offices, and shipyards of the country. It is the plan of the Seventh War Loan to pay particular attention to the sale of E-Bonds to workers through the medium of the Payroll Savings Plan. This advance drive will start early in April and all payroll allotments plus extra cash or increased allotment sales made in the months of April, May and June and processed between April 9th and July 7th will count in the Seventh War Loan totals.
"Each company has been asked to accept a Seventh War Loan quota for sales to employees. This quota is based on the average wage scale of a company and represents its share of the overall national objective.
"This advance Seventh War Loan drive which starts in the plants, offices and shipyards in April is a crucial test. Management and labor must urge every worker throughout the country to buy Bonds with the last possible cent he or she has available.
"Only in this way can we reach the great quotas which have been assigned.

A HERALD AD WILL SELL IT.

Fires still burned hotly in Berlin as U. S., French and Russian forces beat down Adolf Hitler's vaunted Alpine fortress to smash that last mountain redoubt where Nazism was expected to put up its dying stand.

Coming as other U. S. and Russian forces reportedly joined hands in a historic junction on the Elbe river below Berlin, the steady reduction of the German capital and the drive on the Alpine retreat signalled the fall of the great empire the once Austrian paperhanger built up only to lose as the U. S., for the second time in the 20th century, tipped the scales of victory.

Some of the fiercest fighting of the whole war raged in rubble Berlin where the Germans, obeying Gauleiter Goebbels' order to resist to the end, offered a fanatical block to block, house to house defense. With the capital reduced to an inferno by massed Soviet artillery and airplane bombardment, Germans reportedly fought from house tops, from rooms and from basements in a desperate effort to stem the advance of over a million Russian troops.

Even in Berlin's dying hours, the Germans, reputedly led by Hitler himself, poured reinforcements into the city as the 1st White Russian and 1st Ukrainian armies gradually forged a ring of steel around the capital. Signifying the totality of the war between the two countries, the opposing armies employed women in auxiliary front line services.

No less than 350,000 U. S. and French troops were engaged in the drive on the Germans' last Alpine fortress, with Lt. Gen. Patton's 3rd army closing in on the northeast, Lt. Gen. Patch's 7th from the north and the French from the west. Birthplace of Nazism, Munich lay in the path of the advancing Allied forces as they moved on the foothills of the rugged mountains enclosing the enemy redoubt.

To the east, Russian forces drove on the redoubt from Austria, while farther north, U. S. and Red troops also joined in a fight to clamp a pincer on the Germans' last great arsenal of Czechoslovakia.

While fighting raged to the north, German forces made a desperate scramble to withdraw northward from the Po valley in Italy, with rearwards seeking to slow up U. S. and British efforts to overtake the main body of enemy troops and cut them to ribbons.

PACIFIC:

Clever Foe

Having first displayed his ingenuity at constructing defensive fortifications at Iwo Jima, the Japs gave another demonstration of their ability on Okinawa, where U. S. forces encountered bitter opposition in their drive to clean up this stepping-stone, 325 miles from Tokyo.

Making use of the hilly terrain of Okinawa in much the same fashion as on Iwo Jima, the Japs built strong entrenchments in the slopes, with connecting tunnels permitting the transfer of troops to endangered sites. Concealing themselves in these caves, the enemy frequently burst out after Yanks had moved past to attack them from the rear.

With the Japs strongly holed up in the rolling countryside, big guns from the U. S. fleet were brought into play to help artillery and airplanes pound the hilly defensive network and allow the foot soldiers to pick their way forward through the battered foe.

PUBLIC PAYROLL:
Big Increase

The total public payroll—federal, state and municipal — and the total number of public employees, has more than doubled in 12 years, the National Civil Service league claims.

Since Pearl Harbor, the league states, the federal service has increased by 153 per cent and its payroll by 233 per cent, while employment of state and municipal workers has decreased 3 1/2 per cent, with payrolls up 10 per cent.

With the end of hostilities, the

EMPLOYMENT:
Readjustment

Laid off from high-paying war jobs, discharged workers should realize that a tapering off of the war program necessitates their return to lower-paying civilian industries, with early shifting spelling a quicker restoration of the peace time economy.

Deprived of manpower in favor of the metal and armament industries early in the war effort, the logging and lumber and textile industries are in need of 250,000 workers, the War Production board said, with the government seeking to channel people back into these trades.

In concentrating on the return of workers to these fields, WPB said that reemployment was necessary to assure the smooth operation of other civilian industries in the postwar period, with automobile production, for instance, dependent upon textile supplies, and construction and output of paper and packaging materials related to the lumber business.

LEND-LEASE:
Soviet Pact

The extent of lend-lease assistance to Russia may well depend upon Moscow's course in the war against Japan, it was indicated, as the U. S., Britain and Canada signed their fourth mutual aid agreement with the Reds for the year ending next July.

In keeping lend-lease restricted to wartime supplies, the new agreement excluded long-range heavy-duty goods for which the Russians might pay later, as provided in pacts between the U. S. and British and French. With Russian participation in the Pacific war, however, necessitating the use of heavy-duty goods, a similar understanding might be reached with Moscow.

The decisive factor in Russia's great comeback against Germany after Nazi armies had swept deep into the country to cripple agricultural and industrial production, U. S. lend-lease assistance to the Reds totaled 7 1/2 billion dollars by the end of 1944.

U. S. Nest-Egg Grows

With total deposits of businesses and individuals amounting to 66 billion dollars at the end of the year, and with heavy holdings of government bonds, America faces the immediate postwar period with a strong financial structure.

Of the 66 billion dollars in deposits, businesses owned 40 1/2 billions, individuals 21 1/2 billions, trust funds 1 1/2 billions, non-profit associations 2 billions, and foreign concerns 800 millions. Recent trends, however, have seen bigger businesses investing more in U. S. securities, while smaller enterprises and individuals have been building up their bank balances.

Exceeding all other records for a similar period, deposits increased almost 6 billion dollars during the last half of 1944, the Federal Reserve board reported, with farmers contributing 700 million dollars of the total amount.

MEAT:

New Program

Acting shortly after congressional hearings on the tight meat situation, the Office of Economic Stabilization, working with the Office of Price Administration, the War Food Administration and the war department, devised a new program to bring about a more even distribution of meat throughout the country and give packers relief from close price policies.

Also as part of the program, the government agencies mapped an all-out drive on black markets, with OPA enlarging its investigative staff by 500 and intensifying its court action for triple damages on overcharges, revocation of slaughtering permits and withholding of subsidies.

In attempting to obtain a more equitable distribution of meat, the government seeks (1) to divert more cattle from local slaughtering houses to federally inspected plants which can ship across state lines, and (2) persuade more local packers to apply for federal inspection and sell to the army, taking the load off present suppliers, who have had to cut their deliveries to civilians accordingly.

To assure packers of more profitable operations, the new program increases subsidies to slaughterers when live prices reach within the peak of market ceilings; retains the present additional 50 cent payment on all grades, and boosts the maximum charges on army beef. In addition, the government promised to pay the difference between packers' losses and costs to assure their continued existence.

POSTWAR AIR:
Big Future

Speaking before the Bond club in Chicago, Assistant Secretary of Commerce William M. Burden predicted the growth of civil aviation into a $2,000,000,000 industry employing 400,000 people 10 years after the war. Because of the development of the airplane, air lines will have attracted most of the first-class passenger traffic both for domestic and trans-Atlantic flight, Burden forecasts.

Harry Truman's Life Story Proves Again 'Cabin-to-White House' Road Is Still Open

President Advanced From County Offices To Head of Nation

By Elliott Pine

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Forty years ago Harry Truman was plowing behind a mule on a Missouri farm. Today he is in the White House, in many ways the most powerful man in the world.

The new president was born in Lamar, Mo., May 8, 1884. Four years later his parents, John Anderson and Martha Young Truman, returned to Jackson county, 125 miles north, which was the ancestral home of both. Harry grew up on the 600-acre family farm in Jackson county near Grandview. His mother, still alive at 92, remarked reminiscently last fall when he was elected to the vice presidency:

"That boy could plow the straightest row of corn in the county. He could sow wheat so there wouldn't be a bare spot in the whole field. He was a farmer who could do anything there was to do—just a little bit better than anyone else."

During his grade and high school days Harry distinguished himself by his scholarship. He was an omnivorous reader, an earnest student of everything. When he graduated in 1901, he hoped to go to college, but, although his father was known as the "best horse and mule trader in the county," family finances would not permit any more education for the eager youth. He won an appointment to West Point, but was rejected for weak eyesight.

Harry decided to make his fortune in nearby Kansas City. After a few years at small jobs—drug clerk, bundle wrapper on the Kansas City Star, bank clerk, timekeeper on a railroad gang—he went back to the family farm at his grandmother's invitation.

Went to War.

For the next few years working the big farm took all Harry's time. Then in 1917, he volunteered for the army, and soon became a lieutenant of field artillery. While in training camp he organized a canteen for the men, and took care of them in many other ways. Later he rose to a captaincy, and led his company in hard fighting in Saint Mihiel and the Argonne campaigns. On the boat home Harry was commissioned a major.

Soon after returning to Missouri, he married his childhood sweetheart, Elizabeth (Bess) Wallace, granddaughter of the first mayor of Independence, Mo. The ceremony took place in the Episcopal church, Mrs. Truman's sect.

In 1919 Truman decided to go into business, so he entered partnership with a man whom he met in army life, and established a haberdashery store in Kansas City. Harry invested his entire fortune, amounting to about $15,000. At first the business prospered but the sharp recession of 1921 brought disaster. Truman did not go into bankruptcy, but chose to pay off his debts as well as he could. In 1934, when elected to the U. S. senate, he was still meeting old bills.

Somewhat accidentally, he got into politics. An army acquaintance who was a nephew of Thomas Pendergast, then Democratic leader in Kansas City, suggested Harry Truman for some small position. The astute Pendergast, discovering that Truman was well known and liked, had the backing of the American Legion, and was anxious for a new career, appointed him a road supervisor. In return Harry made occa-

New 'First Lady' Doesn't Like the Spotlight

The new First Lady, Bess Wallace Truman, has a retiring disposition, although she has been associated with her husband in public life for more than 20 years. Much of this time she has been his secretary and adviser, listening to his speeches, answering his mail, and doing other important duties. Nevertheless, she has no personal desire to make any speeches, or to take any active part in politics.

When she was married 25 years

sional speeches and assisted in party organization work.

The young man's integrity and energy were effective and he was placed on the ticket for county judge in Jackson county. Truman won, and discharged his duties well during his two-year term, 1922-24. He was defeated in his try for reelection, however, the only political setback in his career. (The office of county judge in Missouri corresponds to county superintendent in other states.)

Truman studied law at night during his term of office, and gained admittance to the bar. Then in 1926 he was elected presiding judge of Jackson county which includes Kansas City, and environs.

Handled 60 Million Dollars.

"I had charge of the spending of $60,000,000 for highways and public buildings," Truman said later. "Nobody ever found anything wrong with that, and it wasn't because they didn't look, either. We built more miles of paved roads in Jackson county than in any other county in the country, with only two exceptions."

Truman was repeatedly reelected to this office until 1934. He had sought the nomination for governor in 1930, and for county collector in 1932, but party heads advised him to wait a little longer. Then in 1934 came the big chance. Pendergast put Truman on the ticket for the U. S. senate. This was not such a favor as it might seem, for Pendergast did not expect victory in that year. By a peculiar stroke of luck, however, the opposition was divided between two strong candidates, and Truman's own popularity sufficed to win him a seat in the august upper house. During his first term Truman remained somewhat obscure, making few speeches, and in general following the lead of Missouri's senior senator, Bennett Clark.

With few exceptions, Senator Truman supported the party program. He voted for the original agricultural adjustment act, the Wagner labor act, social security, the Tennessee valley authority, and the joining of the World court. In his second year he voted for the Florida Ship canal and Passamaquoddy dam project. The only measure he opposed was the President's veto of the bonus payments.

In 1938 and '39 he supported preparedness appropriations and lend-lease. He was chairman of a subcommittee that investigated railroad finance, leading to the Transportation Act of 1940. His work in drafting the Civil Aeronautics authority was outstanding for thoroughness and practicality.

In 1940, after squeaking through the Democratic nomination battle with only 7,000 votes to spare, he won the election by a wide margin. Soon after resuming his seat he became interested in reports of extravagance in construction of army camps. Truman requested funds to set up an investigating committee, with himself as chairman. Within a few months the committee uncovered widespread waste, excessive purchasing, profiteering and inefficiency in military contracts. In the first report the committee attacked "needless waste" amounting to $100,000,000 in the army's cantonment construction program.

Plenty to Investigate.

Complaints poured into the committee's headquarters. One concerned inferior steel plate in naval construction—an investigation disclosed a serious situation, which was corrected. The committee brought about a reversal of policy when housewives complained about a shortage of sugar for canning. Thirty-one reports were issued—all unanimous on the part of the six Democratic and four Republican members. The committee was instrumental in consolidating the various and conflicting war agencies into the War Production board. It helped to end bottlenecks in synthetic rubber and aluminum production. It advocated subcontracting to small war plants.

"The thing to do is dig this stuff up now and correct it," Truman declared. "If we run this war program efficiently there won't be any opportunity for some one to undertake a lot of investigations after the war and cause a wave of revulsion that will start this country on the downhill road to unpreparedness, and put us in another war in 20 years."

These famous investigations put the "Truman committee" in the headlines time and again. Senator Truman grew into a national figure. President Roosevelt took increasing interest in him. So did Robert Hannegan, national Democratic chairman, who knew Truman in Kansas City. When the dust settled at the convention in Chicago last summer, Harry S. Truman found himself nominated as vice president. Victory at the polls in November thrust him into the second highest office in the land.

As vice president Truman had less opportunity to act independently than while in the senate, since as presiding officer of the upper house he could not take sides, as often he wished to do. Unlike his predecessor, Wallace, he did not travel abroad on any special missions for the President, but remained in Washington close to affairs of state.

Shrewd, Practical Man.

The new President is considered a shrewd and practical man, a middle-of-the-road liberal, with an ability to get along with conflicting factions and to compromise when necessary. Capital observers think he will rise to the demands of the enormous task ahead as have other vice presidents suddenly called to vast responsibilities.

Personally, the new President is a modest-looking man of almost 61. He stands 5 feet, 10 inches tall, weighs about 170 pounds, and is trim and well proportioned. Until they entered the White House, he and Mrs. Truman lived in a five-room apartment. They had no house-servants, as Mrs. Truman, who has been her husband's secretary for years, also preferred to take care of the apartment herself. The Truman's only child, Mary Margaret, is studying at George Washington university. She is 21, and a junior. Her hopes are for a career in music.

All his life President Truman has been a "joiner." Even as a child he often attended the Presbyterian Sunday school, although he is a Baptist. In youth he enlisted in the National Guard, and stayed in service for a dozen years until 1917. His fraternal connections include the Elks, the Masons (he was state Grand Master for Missouri in 1940-41) and the Anah Templars.

Mary Margaret Truman, new "princess" of Washington, is tall, blonde, 21, and a junior at George Washington U. She is a popular member of Pi Beta Phi sorority, and is active in college musical organizations. Her soprano voice has been heard in summer productions of the Denver Opera company. She is majoring in voice, and hopes for a concert career. It's more than possible that Margaret may be the first White House bride since Woodrow Wilson's day.

Rabbit Boom

Demand for food brought about by the war, and shortages of beef, pork, mutton and poultry for civilian consumption has resulted in an increase in the production of domestic rabbits of from 200 to 300 per cent.

The tender, white-meated flesh of the domestic rabbit has grown so in popularity that in southern California 13,000,000 pounds were produced in 1944.

'Five Freedoms' Designed To Spur World Air Travel

Differences Between American Traditions of Free Flight and European Concepts of Regulation Composed at Parley.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building,
Washington, D. C.

(This is the second of a series of articles on the "Freedom of the Air," first of which appeared in this column last week.)

In a previous column I set forth the achievements of the conference on international aviation, implementation of which it is hoped will be reached by a second gathering in May, probably before the United Nations deliberations at San Francisco have been concluded. I set forth certain views on the accomplishments of the first aviation gathering, as expressed by Lt. Col. William Mitchell of the army air force, which, although they were his own and not the official opinions of the government, were known to represent the attitude of a number of high air force officials.

I think that the satisfaction expressed by Colonel Mitchell, in what has already been accomplished toward establishing the "freedom of the air," reflects the general feelings of the industry. Although the point was not expressly brought out in the comment in military circles, I believe the one thing which pleased the industry was the fact that a conference, supervised as it was by a government official (then Assistant Secretary of State Adolph Berle), had built a framework within which private enterprise and business and technical ingenuity could be rewarded and not "fenced in" by restrictive bureaucratic regulation.

Freedoms Essential To U. S. Flight

You will recall that the delegates recognized the fact that "freedom of the air" was not as simple a thing as "freedom of the seas," because vessels stop at frontiers since ship lanes lead only from harbor to harbor, while aircraft crosses borders and passes over the sovereign territory of foreign nations.

Thus it was necessary to divide the perquisites of the airways into five freedoms. The first two are the right of innocent passage—right to fly over a country, and the right to land for non-traffic purposes—that is to stop at a foreign airport for refueling or other facilities. These two are essential to America since our aerial ambitions encircle the globe, and that can't be done, either from a practical or a profitable standpoint, in one jump.

Because of complications which I will mention later, involved in the other freedoms, the first two were grouped in one form of multilateral agreement drawn up in Chicago.

The other three freedoms, embraced in the second agreement, were described as follows: the right to disembark passengers, mail and freight from the country of origin of the aircraft; the right to embark passengers, mail and freight destined for the country of origin of the aircraft; and, in addition, at the suggestion of Canada, a fifth freedom was added in the form of certain provisions of right of entry and technical regulations.

Of course, Russia's last-minute refusal to attend the Chicago conference was a great disappointment to all concerned, but the reconciliation of what appeared at first to be a sharp difference between the United Kingdom and the United States, finally reconciled through the "honest broker" efforts of Canada, was considered a great achievement.

Hope exists that a successful outcome of the United Nations negotiations will bring the Soviets into the fold.

The clash between the British and the American viewpoints is described this way by one of the American observers at the conference who has been working steadily for the consummation of the Chicago plans:

"In the United States," he said, "we have always looked upon air transport primarily as an instrument of trade. We are still a young country with an expanding and highly competitive economy and with no bitter memories of recent bombings of our homeland. The British viewpoint, which was shared to some degree by many European countries, reflected a mature and stabilized economy, to be parcelled out among those participating in it, plus a fear of explosive international rivalries. Canada's position possibly reflected British desires, plus a fear of being crowded out by its more powerful neighbor under a system of unrestricted competition.

"The United States was seeking an opportunity for free commercial intercourse between nations, with resulting benefits to all of them; the other two countries (Britain and Canada) were seeking protection against cut-throat competition and international mistrust."

Reducing these different points of view to specific operational plans, boiled down largely to whether or not a global authority would be set up which would govern the location of international routes, regulate the "frequencies" (number of flights or stops, which is where the competition comes in) and rates. In fact this central authority as the British viewed it would have even more authority over internal air activity than our own Civil Aeronautics board, which cannot limit frequencies at home. In our domestic services a line may make as many flights as it can get a pay-load for.

The United States on the other hand wanted everything except transit and non-traffic stops worked out separately between the countries concerned.

In other words, the United States felt that if an airplane company could offer more to a patron, regardless of where he wanted to get aboard or get off, that company ought to have the right to try to show to the country where the getting on and off would take place, that it was mutually advantageous to let that particular line have the business.

Agreements Reached On Technical Norms

There were other questions concerning technical standards and the future admission of devastated countries unable to furnish facilities for airports, that were settled, and the mooted points mentioned, all of which were met with what might be called substantial agreement. Both forms of agreement (one with the first two freedoms, the other—all five) provided that the country whose territory is involved may designate the routes and airports used; but charges for use of airports may not be greater than those imposed on its own airports engaged in similar international services.

In addition to these agreements the diagram for the international organization was laid down in the form of a treaty which must be approved by the various countries. This organization is composed of an assembly, on which each nation would have one vote, and a council of 15 members, 2 from the British Commonwealth, 2 from the Soviet Union, 2 from the United States, 1 each from Brazil, Chile and France, and the remaining 6 to be elected on a regional basis. The council would act as a clearing house for information and would provide minimum uniform technical standards but would have no power over commercial matters. An interim council was also proposed, to function until the permanent organization is created, but not more than three years.

America has a great stake in the outcome of the San Francisco conference. It has a great stake in international aviation, too. "We have learned and must not forget," said General Arnold in speaking of the air transport service, "from now on air transport is an essential of air power, in fact of all national power."

Better job opportunities elsewhere, either in general or in their chosen fields of work, is the main reason for leaving, according to the student voters.

Kathleen Norris Says:

The Women We Need

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"When Pete was five years old he was killed by a car driven across the sidewalk."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

MY WIFE is so darned cheerful," writes a man from Butte, Mont., "that you can't help loving her!"

It seems to me that no sweeter or more sincere tribute was ever paid a woman. There was a soundness and fineness about this man's letter that struck a heartening note in these days of broken homes and easy divorces.

"We've had 14 years of joys and sorrows," his letter goes on, "and when the smoke blows over, just one person is carrying on, sensibly and quietly and bravely, and that's Molly. When we were married I was making $200 a month, and three years later, with a second baby coming, I was laid up with muscular rheumatism for almost a year. Molly carried on, had her baby, worked, borrowed, managed somehow—and always was cheerful!"

"Financially we got straightened out again, paid bills, began to buy a home, and our third child, our first boy, was born. Those were good years. But when Pete was five years old, he was killed by a car driven straight across the sidewalk and into the garden where he was playing with his sisters. Molly carried on. Our third girl was born a few months later.

"Then came the war, and the importing firm for which I worked went to the wall; no job, no savings, and my mother, widowed and an invalid, came to live with us. We rented our house, moved into town, shortened sail everywhere. This was before the big defense plants and the big salaries got started.

"Never Failed Us Once."

"The joy and hope Molly put into our lives then will never be forgotten by me. She never failed us once. Her life had been shattered; motherhood had brought her anguish, I had contributed months of sickness, helplessness, unemployment. But wherever she was, the little girls were laughing, and she was laughing with them; hospitality wasn't ended, nor good home meals, home fires, home talk. Her affectionate appreciation of my mother's help—for mother, with mending and watching the children, did all she could, made my mother love her like a true daughter.

"This is my tribute to the most gallant wife any man ever had. We have no money troubles now, and we have three lovely little girls to go on into better times with us. But whatever is ahead, I can never be afraid while this woman is beside me."

Could a letter be pleasanter reading? I don't know how. But about one thing you are wrong, Walter. This is not mere "Cheerfulness." Cheerfulness is a more or less natural quality; it can come from perfect health, from youthful optimism and high spirits, even from shallowness and selfishness. What Molly has is something much finer than that. She has the rare fineness of a soul and mind tried and purified by fire. To be comforting, hopeful, with a sick husband and dependent babies is not mere "cheerfulness." It is true

'BEYOND CALL OF DUTY'

We seldom read about the wives and mothers who are quiet, doing their part without fanfare, in good times and bad, in happiness and in sorrow. The selfish, the unfaithful, the undutiful wives get in the news, but the great majority, who are doing all that can be expected of them, seldom get a line of commendation.

Then there are some women whose courage, energy and unalterable cheerfulness is so extraordinary, that they seem almost to be superhuman. They are daily giving the best that is in them—and far more than anyone has a right to demand.

Such a wife is described in this article—one who carried on in poverty and sorrow with a buoyant heart. On the other hand, she was not changed by a touch of prosperity—she did not ask for luxuries to compensate for her endurance of difficulties.

saintliness. Cheerfulness will not carry a woman over the dark abyss that opens before her feet when an only son is torn from her by the cruel carelessness of an irresponsible driver. Cheerfulness does not face illness, weariness, doubt, anxiety and change with a head held high and colors flying.

"Others Come First." With Molly, fundamentally, and first of all, comes thought for others. She will not let them see that she is hurt. Nobody must feel any worse because Molly is stricken. Selfish grief will not bring little Pete back; and if the others see her serene and busy, interested in their welfare, their interests, just as she always was, it will go far to make life seem good to them again.

We are going to need many women like this in the years immediately ahead of us. Women will look at the conditions of their lives and say to themselves; "this is just what I have said I couldn't bear—and here it is." Women will find the men who come back from war are almost strangers; women must care for a crippled husband or son, a blind husband or son, all the rest of their lives. Women who have been financially independent, will find now that they must go back to the status of housekeeper, or else sacrifice marriage itself. Women must meet every mental and psychopathic problem in those they love; depression, despair, distaste for work of any kind, cynicism as regards the future, bitter disillusionment.

Brace your soul for this postwar ordeal. It won't last; things do adjust themselves; conditions that seem insufferable have a way of smoothing out. Normal home life is a great tonic for bruised nerves and spirits, and even the blind—once the first shock is over, are not necessarily unhappy people.

One woman like Molly in every home would solve the whole world's problem in the approaching days of reconstruction. Be that woman in your household.

Blockng Hand-Knit Garments. To "block" a new or newly-washed hand-knit garment, here is an easy method. Sprinkle two heavy bath towels slightly and spread the garment between them, pulling to desired measurements and pinning to shape. (Before washing it is handy to lay garment on paper or cloth and draw outline to use in reshaping.) Cover with a board or other firm, flat surface. Weight this down and leave until the garment is dry. A light steam-pressing, without washing, also gives a finished look.

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

HOW evil can you get? The answer seems to be—go as far as you like. Look at the cinematic cads who have become idols of millions, all because they gave out with that certain schmaltz when they smiled and got tough.

Squish a grapefruit in a lady's pan and become an international idol. Fight the frails, fool 'em, kick 'em in the teeth. That's right, boys, be a gold plated heel. There's fame in being infamous; success in being snide; luxury in being a louse.

Alan Ladd, who hauls home more fan mail than the rest of the Paramount boys, collected his claque through rugged, hair-on-the-chest snarls and being quick on the draw. He was an overnight sensation in the role of the Raven. "This Gun for Hire" put Ladd in the top money class.

"Mask of Dimitrios" brought immediate celebrity to Zachary Scott, who played the most baleful bum possible. He wasn't even nice to his mother.

"Evil appeals to the romantic," said Scott, who's right back being s w i n i s h in "Strange Honeymoon," since he's finished "Hold Autumn in Your Hand."

"It's human nature to want to kick over the traces and be unconventional. Don't ask me why. But so few people have the nerve. Cases of wishful thinking are universal. Evil somehow is regarded as colorful and evildoers are thought to have intestinal fortitude for daring to be what they are.

"The public seems to find escapism in pictures about evil, and the sinners themselves are looked upon as fascinating because they're dangerous, and danger appeals to the multitude because it offers respite from routine," says the new devil hero, Scott.

Evil Lingers On

Although "Public Enemy" was produced years ago, that touching sequence wherein James Cagney wallops Mae Clarke with a grapefruit is still recalled but lovingly by the baddies.

That performance definitely established Cagney in motion pictures. Today he's starring in independent productions produced by his brother Bill, and has just finished a new rugged portrayal in "Blood on the Sun."

Clark Gable owes his start to dirty doings in a sagebrush thriller, "The Painted Desert."

Gable hadn't even been heard of before when he was hired for that job. But with the release of "The Painted Desert" all worries ceased for Gable. He snagged an M-G-M contract and everlasting fame.

From Pasadena Playhouse obscurity to a dynamic bit as a downed Nazi aviator who provided Greer Garson a few horrible minutes in "Mrs. Miniver" is the tale of Helmut Dantine.

His name was on every casting director's lips once his nasty Nazi interpretation was seen. Warners cornered the newcomer's signature on a term deal and he's been causing the heroines panic ever since. All of which hasn't affected Dantine with the girls of the world. They think he's just divine.

List Keeps Growing

As a menace in "Ship Ahoy"—a Red Skelton conglomeration of nonsense—John Hodiak arose from the multitude of contractees. That he man quality brought him "Lifeboat" opposite Tallulah Bankhead. The rest has been gravy for Master Hodiak, whose M-G-M future is really bright.

Gene Kelly realizes the value of being a heel. From being a personable no-good in "Pal Joey," a Broadway musical, Kelly attracted Hollywood's eye. His introduction to the camera was as a guy you loved hating in "For Me and My Gal." What a dirty life he gave Judy Garland!

The champion nasty character of them all is George Sanders, who saunters back and forth between the devil and the angels. George's hateful dandy, in "Lloyds of London" brought him to our notice. It was his first big splash. He's been splashing ever since, and I don't mean in a bathtub, either.

Yes, it pays to be bad.

Any actor, aspiring for fame, should not make heaven his destination, as far as film roles are concerned, but arm himself with a pitchfork and horns and charm the multitude.

Answer to Her Prayer

R.K.O. has signed Maureen O'Hara for "The Fabulous Invalid." This play is taken from the Broadway hit by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman. It's a drama of the American theater, told through the career of a famous actress, and will be done in technicolor. The role will give her a chance to do some real acting as well as look beautiful. . . . Dinah Shore serenaded sailors on a warship at San Pedro the other morning. At sunrise she sang "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning."

The flaws boys played exceptionally good baseball, having but three errors and the infield throwing out 14 runners out of 16, while the outfield didn't have many chances, they made most of them count. The team has lost only one game this season, to Pinconning, while winning twice from Sterling, and Hale, Standish and Rose City, one game each.

Order Your Coal for Next Winter Now

Coal Will be Scarce Next Winter

I would like to urge all who will need coal or coke to keep warm next winter to file their declaration, place their order and buy now. We have the coal now. Our storage bins are full, and more cars are on the way.

Under Regulation No. 27 coal producers are required to ship dealers no less than the minimum percentage and no more than the maximum percentage of this year's quota, for the periods indicated in the following table:

Time of Shipments	Minimum	Maximum
April and May	12 1/2%	20%
June and July	12 1/2%	15%
August and September	12 1/2%	15%
October and November	12 1/2%	20%

During the full year the dealer will receive only 80 per cent, but it means that we will receive coal regularly in uniform monthly amounts. It must be moved or your dealer may be forced to cancel some shipments, and these will not be replaced. Help your dealer get all the coal he is entitled.
