Lieut. Cecil, a bombardier flying from a 15th Army Air Force base in Italy, bailed out February 25, 1944, with six other crew members near Klegenfurt, Austria, when their badly damaged ship had to be materially lightened to permit the three crew members to fly it back to the base.

Pfc. Robert Soderquist is home from Percy Jones Hospital for a couple of weeks.

Cpl. Ernest Wegner, with a heavy weapons company of the 33rd Division's 136th Infantry, had a recent experience which was annoying, at least. Wegner, with T.- Sgt. Herbert Bingham of Alpena and Sgt. George Schlosky of Detroit, were ordered to leave their dugout and fill a gap in a portion of the perimeter that was a Jap attack was expected that night. The Japs attacked.

Infiltrating through the position, several Japs threw grenades into the dugout the men had vacated, then entered the dugout, ransacked the men's packs, ripped them to shreds with bayonets, took cigarettes and rations, squeezed tooth paste all over the place, tore up their playing cards and generally acted like very bad children on Hallowe'en. As compensation, they left three turnips, lined up where the rations had been. Then they left.

Then add to their annoyances in the attack, a Jap slug ripped open the water jacket of the gun the three men were firing from their new position, and to their disgust, the machine gun, without water, became overheated. The corporal and his two companions have sworn vengeance.

'The True Story of Baseball'

By GRANTLAND RICE
Dean of Sports Writers

BASEBALL is known as our national game. But how many know anything about the real story of baseball, including its origin? Very few among the millions who follow it today.

So I am bringing to you one of baseball's greatest historians, Will Irwin—who also happens to be one of the best writers and one of the top reporters this country has ever known. To me, this is the true story of baseball:

"Dear Grant: This year is the hundredth anniversary of New York's Knickerbocker Baseball club, and I understand that there is to be some kind of celebration this summer. But judging from preliminary notices, we seem likely to celebrate the right event in the wrong way. The Knickerbocker was not the second edition, probably issued in 1829. The text notes that this is the name of the game in western England, but that Londoners call it 'feeder,' and goes on to describe it—a feeder or pitcher, two catchers, the second to chase what the first had missed, four bases arranged diamond-form, the home base and the plate beside which the batsman stands being identical, 'three strikes and out,' 'a ball caught on the fly is out,' 'a point scored whenever a man safely circles the bases.'

"But—here comes the all-important point—when a batsman hit a fair grounder or a runner was caught between bases, the fielder put him out by HITTING HIM WITH A THROWN BALL. A missile like our modern baseball would have caused the players to commit mayhem or involuntary homicide at every game. So they had to use a ball of yarn, not wound too tight, or, later, the standard hollow, air-inflated rubber ball.

"Following the cheerfully unmoral practice of the time, a Boston publisher pirated that book, verbatim, in the early 1830s. In 1835, a pirate of Providence, R. I., republished it as 'The Boys and Girls' Book of Sports.' He had probably played the game here, for he revised the rules slightly and changed the chapter-heading from 'Rounders' to 'Base, or Goal Ball.' That was four years before Doubleday's alleged stroke of genius at Cooperstown.

"Both Lady Hervey and Jane Austen spent most of their lives in southern England. And the greater part of our English immigrants came in Colonial times from that district. It seems probable that the boys of Sussex and Hampshire and Dorset called it 'baseball,' as those of west England called it 'rounders' and of London, 'feeder' and that along with the game they brought the name to America.

"That game, then at least a century old, is what Abner Doubleday taught the boys of Cooperstown in 1839—if he taught them anything. Even that is doubtful. In 1839, he was a cadet at West Point and it was not the year of his leave. The main testimony in his favor came from a very old man named Abner Graves. And a commission, working not to establish the truth but to prove that no English hand had ever sullied our national game, made a fatal slip when it let him testify that in the game revealed to Cooperstown, the fielder put a runner out by hitting him with the ball!

"There is evidence to show that this form of the game—some times called 'Town ball'—became popular in and about Boston during the 1820s and 1830s. Then, in the early 1840s, the modern game made a dramatic appearance in New York City. An early tradition of the old-time baseball players tells the story about as follows: In that period, Madison Square was a pleasant, level field at the edge of town. There the adolescent boys and the young men used to kick footballs or play such games as 'crack the whip.' Then one day in the early 1840s Alexander Cartwright said to some of them:

"'Fellows, I've got a new game to show you. Help me lay it out.' At his direction, they laid out a diamond with bases at the corner, of about the dimensions of our modern infield. He produced a round bat and a hard but elastic, leather-covered ball, and taught them rounders, town-ball or early-day baseball or whatever you wish to call it, with one great, vital exception. The fielder put out a runner between bases not by 'burning him' with a thrown ball but by HOLDING THE BALL IN HIS OWN HAND AND TOUCHING HIM WITH IT. The variation of this play, in the case of a batsman making for first base or of a force play, came later. That was the stroke which transformed baseball. Henceforth, the players could use a hard ball. The boys liked it. The slap and sting on their hands was a challenge to their fortitude, and the smack of the bat on this solid but elastic ball a most satisfactory sensation. Further they could throw it with the speed of a bullet. The game had grown up, become one of the 'manly' sports.

Alexander Cartwright, first president of New York's Knickerbocker Baseball club is credited with being the real originator of modern baseball. He introduced one revolutionary change—the putout by tagging with the ball. Previously the batsman threw the ball at the runner. Cartwright's innovation permitted the use of the hard ball.

"And even if this story about Cartwright be only false tradition, the fact is that by 1845, when those same boys founded the Knickerbocker Baseball club, the boys of New York City and the nearby New Jersey towns were playing the game in the new way. Here, let me mention two links with the parent game. At that time, the modern method of scoring—nine innings, with the team making the most runs the winner—had not yet come in. The first team making 21 runs won the game, as in handball. And this, I found by correspondence in 1912, was the time-honored rule in English rounders. The pitcher, in 1845 and for some years afterward, had to throw underhand without bending his elbow. And the pictures in the old books cited above show the pitcher or 'feeder' doing exactly that.

"New York Game' was Rugged. "The game spread to upstate New York and to Pennsylvania. New England, however, continued to play baseball in the old way. By the time of the Civil War the newspapers and certain rudimentary sporting weeklies were publishing items about it, including scores of the important matches. Always they distinguished, a little contemptuously in New York, between the 'Boston game' where no one took chances with damaging his pretty hands and the 'New York game' where knotty fingers were scars of glorious wounds—for it was a point of honor not to wear gloves. During the war, the New York regiments played it in camp and taught it to men of other states, even to Confederate prisoners on parole. These novices carried it home; and the Boston game went back to the

A tense moment in the "Grant Match for the Championship" between the Knickerbockers and the New York Nine played in Hoboken, N. J. in 1846, is captured in this Currier and Ives print. The quaint uniforms, underhand pitching, awkward stances of batter, catcher, basemen and fielders seem laughable today.

DO AND DYE

What's your favorite color? You'll find it in a package of dye and you can spread it through your wardrobe just by following the directions on the box. We've seen lots of keen teens lately dressed all in one color from head to foot and we've been wondering. Now, the mystery's solved. One of our soda fountain sleuths reports that it all comes out of a package of dye.

Skirt and Sweater Harmonies—You're burnt to a crisp if you have a sweater and skirt that exactly match. Take any old sweater and dye it to pair up with the skirt. Monotone—but not monotonous.

Hot Feet —Dye your Robert socks any color to match sweaters or complete outfits. It's easy.

Colored Coats—Even the boys are dyeing! Have you seen those T.D. & G's with two tone corduroy-slacks? They dye one leg red, the other green. Perish forbid is what we always say in a case like this.

Singin' in the Rain—That's what you'll be doing if you dye your old tan raincoat a bright color. Don't envy those slick chicks with their new purple, green or what-have-you rain coats. Just do and dye.

Fugitives

We slink around the corner,
We rush into the show;
We're praying that we don't meet
Anyone we know.

What are we girls ashamed of?
Oh, anyone can see children, who are playing it yet. "The Baseball museum and Hall of Fame is a worthy institution. But it is in the wrong place. It should stand on Madison Square, New York. Most of the pioneer baseball players whom I knew in the early 1910s revered that spot as the cradle of the game. Whenever Sam Crane passed it, he took off his hat and said, 'There was planted the little acorn from which the great oak grew.'"

Pasture Practices Increase Returns

Experiments Show Value to Farmers

RESEEDING of pastures, application of fertilizer and weed control are three better farming practices which may be expected to have a favorable effect on milk production and feed values, according to the War Food Administration.

Experiments carried on by USDA scientists during the last three years offer proof that increased grazing returns result from seeding pastures to proper mixtures, giving them appropriate fertilizer treatment and keeping weeds down by orderly mowing. They pay off, says WFA, in an increased milk and butterfat yield, indicating that careful pasture has a dollars and cents value just as does any cash crop such as cotton, corn or tobacco.

It is pointed out that when returns in milk production per acre can be increased as much as $95 by reseeding pastures to suitable mixtures and applying fertilizers, more dairymen should be making use of such practices.

At Lewisburg, Tenn., 12 pasture plots containing more than two acres each were seeded to various combinations of grasses and clovers, including lespedeza, white clover, hop clover, crimson clover, orchard grass and ladino clover. In most plots, the seeding was done on a prepared seedbed but in some plots it was sown on bluegrass sod. Manure and commercial fertilizer were used in various combinations.

A plot that had been limed and fertilized was seeded to a mixture of orchard grass and ladino clover. It produced grazing at the rate of 166 cow-days per acre, with a production of 5,996 pounds of milk per acre, containing 244 pounds of butterfat, and valued at $171. Grain was consumed at the rate of 964 pounds per acre. After $24 was deducted for the cost of the grain, and $5 for the cost of mowing weeds and the fertilizer used, the net value of the milk was $142 per acre, the highest return for any of the plots. The next highest return was furnished by a plot seeded to orchard grass and white clover, which also received lime and manure. The return above feed and management costs was $130 per acre.

Bark Beetle Damage

Bark beetles cause greater yearly damage to certain types of forests than do forest fires. At present, a bark beetle outbreak is devastating the spruce forests of the Central Rocky mountain region. More than 250 million board feet of high value spruce timber has been killed during the past two years. This means that bark beetles have destroyed in this region alone enough wood to build more than 2,000 homes of average size.

DISTRIBUTION IS IMPORTANT IN OUR ECONOMIC SYSTEM

IF WE ARE TO ATTAIN and retain full employment, a minimum of 60 million jobs, in the postwar years, we must have distribution. To plan a production by 60 million workers without first providing for distribution of what they are to produce is putting the cart before the horse with the foreordained assurance the plan will not work.

No system, whether it be free enterprise or government operation, can long continue to produce without disposing of what it produces. No system can pay a big price for production and sell the product at a small price. If the world is to have jobs at high wages there must be markets for world production at high prices.

America has learned, or should have learned, in recent prewar years that limiting production does not produce high prices and general prosperity. Any attempt to limit one line of production has an immediate effect on other, on all, lines. When the world attempts to limit production on any or all lines it but reduces the number of jobs, or the wage income of workers, and so reduces buying power and demand. When we reduce American farm production, though the people of other nations are starving, we may temporarily increase the prices of farm products, but not for long. The higher prices reduce demand, and down come the prices again, while the people of other nations continue to starve.

The world does not, and never has, produced more than the people of the world can, and will, consume if the opportunity to consume is provided. America, alone, cannot establish full employment on a permanent basis. It is a world job, and the foundation on which it can be built is world distribution. The Bretton Woods conference made a small start in that direction. The proposed fund through which to stabilize world currencies could also be used in connection with an international RFC that could provide the long-term credits needed in arriving at world distribution. It could help the now helpless to help themselves.

COST OF MANAGEMENT IN GOVERNMENT

THE COST OF MANAGEMENT in government operations is notoriously high. In every business enterprise in which government has engaged the cost of management has been a major item of expense. In private business, operating under the free enterprise system, management cost is a minor item. International Harvester represents a fair average example. In that company, for 1944, management cost, the executive salaries, represented but 14 hundredths of 1 per cent of the company's total revenue. The same company spent 55.93 per cent of its revenue for materials; paid to government as taxes 5.48 per cent; paid to its stockholders, those who had provided the plants and tools, 2.87 per cent; put back into the business to pay for expansion, 1.07 per cent, and paid to labor, as its dividend, 34.51 per cent of all the receipts. The amount paid to labor was 70 per cent of all revenue after paying for the "must" items of materials and taxes. I can not imagine government making that kind of a showing.

COUNTRY PRESS AND NATIONAL POLITICS

ONE OF THE THINGS that contributed materially to the defeat of Herbert Hoover in 1932 was a statement attributed to Henry Allen of Kansas. Following the convention of that year Governor Allen had been named as publicity director of the Republican campaign. In an interview with a New York Times reporter he was reported as saying: "The Republican party will not seek, and does not care for, the support of the country press." The result was that Hoover did not have the country press support, and lost the agricultural states. Mr. Hoover did not know of that statement until near the close of the campaign, and was greatly agitated when he learned of it. He had, at all times, believed the country newspaper wielded the greatest influence in the nation. He knew what they had accomplished in connection with the campaign for food production during World War I, and what they had done for him in his first campaign for the presidency. That statement attributed to Governor Allen cost him any possibility he might have had for a place in the administration had Mr. Hoover been elected.

WITH POLAND AND RUSSIA taking over East Prussia; with the estates of the Prussian War Lords confiscated, the breeders of wars will be so busy hustling for daily bread they will have no time for concocting World War III. Their estates and their occupation will both be gone, with nothing left for them but a role of unskilled labor. Russia might give them a job with pick and shovel in the rebuilding of Russian cities and towns. That would be just retribution which we could all applaud.

Washington, D. C.

STRATEGY AGAINST JAPAN
Back in 1937-38, Adm. William Leahy, now chief of staff to the White House, devised a strategy against Japan, which, if put into effect, might have prevented Pearl Harbor and even World War II.

Today, the old Leahy strategy is being dusted off, especially on Capitol Hill, as the best means of finishing the war with Japan. It would save thousands of American lives, its proponents claim, and would serve as an example of how wars can be won—or prevented—by naval blockade.

The proposals made by Admiral Leahy constitute one of the most important and unwritten chapters in the history of what happened shortly before the war began. Leahy, then chief of naval operations and one of the best strategists the navy has seen in years, saw all too clearly what was coming both in Europe and Asia. At that time, 1937, Japan had just begun her full-scale invasion of China, and it was Leahy's idea to make an example of Nippon which would show Hitler and Mussolini — then feeling their oats — that the United States meant business and would stand four-square behind the peace machinery of the world.

Therefore, he proposed to Roosevelt a naval blockade of Japan in cooperation with the British fleet, using the peace machinery of the League of Nations and the nine-power pact which guarantees the sovereignty of China.

Leahy argued that by keeping the U. S. Navy in the Philippines and the British fleet at Singapore, we could cut off all oil, scrap iron, copper, cotton and other war materials from Japan. Without these, he argued, the Japanese war machine would be powerless and would fold up in six months. Leahy figured that the United States would lose its gunboats on the Yangtze river, but that aside from this the main U. S. fleet would not have to fire a single shot.

British Start Blockade.

President Roosevelt agreed. So did the British. And in the late summer of 1937, the British actually detailed 6 battleships, 12 cruisers and 20 destroyers to leave British home waters for Singapore. Just at that moment, however, the axis capitals apparently got wind of what was happening, and Mussolini started his unofficial submarine campaign off the coast of Spain which detained the British fleet at Gibraltar.

The Panay Incident.

At any rate, the plan to blockade Japan, following the failure of the Brussels conference in October, 1937, was dropped. But Admiral Leahy revived it again a year later, when, in December, 1938, the Japs sank the U. S. Gunboat Panay and the British Gunboat Ladybird.

Leahy recognized this for what it was, a deliberate attempt by the Jap war lords to test out how much insult the United States would take, and to make Britain and the USA lose face with the Chinese. Accordingly he rushed to the state department and all one Sunday afternoon, December 13, 1938, one day after the sinking of the Panay, he urged Cordell Hull to seize this psychological moment to put the blockade of Japan into effect.

The British were also willing to cooperate. And, Leahy pointed out, in another year, war, inevitably breaking out in Europe, would tie up the British fleet and they could not possibly help us in the Pacific. Russia, he also pointed out, had 60 submarines at Vladivostok, ready to help us cut off all scrap iron, all oil, all cotton and copper from Japan. Without these, he argued, the Japanese war machine would be paralyzed.

Pacing the floor of Hull's office with Leahy was Hugh Wilson, ex-ambassador to Germany and one of the state department's foremost speakers. He opposed Leahy at every turn, finally convinced cautious Cordell Hull that Leahy was too vigorous, that it was best to appease Japan.

Less than one year later, Hitler had invaded Poland, the British fleet was desperately needed to defend British home waters, and the fat was in the fire. From that point on there was no possible way the United States could blockade Japan—though many people have never understood why we went to the opposite extreme and increased our shipments of oil and scrap iron to Japan so that she laid in tremendous reserves before Pearl Harbor.

Japan Can Be Starved.

But beginning with V-E Day, the possibility of blockading Japan for the first time since 1939 was completely reversed. Since V-E Day, the British fleet is entirely free to operate in the Pacific. So are Russian submarines. So is the whole might of the U. S. Navy, now no longer needed to watch for submarines in the Caribbean or the Atlantic.

Today it is possible to throw up such a naval blockade around the main Jap islands, augmented by air patrols, that hardly a ton of raw materials could reach Jap factories.

Henry Chadwick devised the first boxscore and compiled the first official baseball rules book, which was printed in 1857. His efforts did much to promote uniformity of play throughout the country. Some writers call Chadwick "The Father of Baseball" on this account.

first baseball club in the United States, but it was nevertheless the founder of the modern game. And Alexander Cartwright, its first president, may have been the young genius who by one simple improvement transformed a venerable English game, now called 'rounders,' from a children's sport to a game for hardy young athletes and a national institution. As for Gen. Abner Doubleday, the notices seem to endorse the carefully fostered myth that he invented the game at Cooperstown, N. Y., in 1839; whereas he has no valid claim whatever either as inventor or improver of baseball.

Old Game Called 'Rounders.'

"About 1912, and while many players who went back to baseball's early days were still alive, I investigated the origins of the game for a national weekly and published the conclusions stated above. At that time, Abner Doubleday passed only as a hero of Gettysburg—the myth of Cooperstown had not yet gained its adherents. Then in 1939, Robert W. Henderson, of the New York Public Library, after painstaking research in the old books of that great collection, published a pamphlet which knocked the Doubleday legend higher than one of Babe Ruth's pop fouls. By document evidence, he proved that a game called baseball was played in England in the days of Abner Doubleday's great-grandfathers, that it was known in America before the Revolution, that it was identical with what the English have for the last century called 'rounders' and that with a number of minor changes and one major one, it was the game which our big leagues are playing today. I will begin with his data, supplemented by my own.

"One of the earliest known references occurs in the lively letters of Mary Lepell, Lady Hervey. Under date of November 18, 1748, she takes a fling at the frivolous habits of the Prince of Wales and his court, who waste whole days playing 'baseball, a play all who are, or have been, schoolboys, are acquainted with.' Then comes Jane Austen. In the first chapter of 'Northanger Abbey,' composed in 1798 but not published until 1818, she wrote: 'It was not very wonderful that Catherine . . . should prefer cricket, base ball, riding on horseback, and running about the country at the age of 14, to books.'

Used Soft Ball.

"But the clincher is 'The Boy's Own Book,' which was published in London in 1828 and ran through seven British editions by 1849, a description of 'Rounders' appears in

BETWEEN THE TESTAMENTS

LESSON TEXT—Malachi 3:1-3, 16, 17; Luke 1:68, 2, 77, 78; Galatians 4:4, 5. GOLDEN TEXT—I am the way, the truth, and the life.—John 14:6.

Four hundred silent years—such is the period between the Old and the New Testaments. There was no voice from God during those years, and spiritual darkness prevailed largely in the land. But there were those who kept their lamp of faith in God brightly shining even in the darkness.

The political history of Israel during this time is partially known from secular sources. Palestine was successively under the rule of the Gentile powers until at the time of Jesus' birth they were under Roman domination.

Spiritually that age may well be described by the words used in II Timothy 3:5, "having the form of godliness but denying the power thereof," referring to the last days. There is much here that fits our day's decadent churchliness.

I. Looking for the Lord (Mal. 3:1-3).

Although they had reached the state of spiritual pride and self-sufficiency where they talked back to God (see the "whereins" of 1:6, 7; 2:14, 17, etc.) Israel still talked about looking for the Lord to come. They knew from their prophets that He would one day come to judge their enemies, and they longed for that day; but they failed to see that it would be a day of judgment for them (vv. 2, 3).

How much like those of our day who like to talk about the love of God, His mercy and His long-suffering, but who minimize or forget that He hates sin and demands holiness of life from His people.

The forerunner of Christ, John the Baptist, is in mind in verse 1, but the "messenger of the covenant" is doubtless the "angel of Jehovah," one of the Old Testament names for our Lord Jesus (see John 8:56).

Christ is coming! Such is the message to Israel, and He will come as a refiner's fire. Christ has come! That is our message to men now, and He has come as a divider of men, a cleanser and refiner of hearts, that we, too, may be ready for that day of judgment which is to come when He appears again in all His glory.

II. Living for the Lord (Mal. 3:16, 17).

When others forgot or misrepresented the Lord, when they were content with a formal worship without the power of godly living, there were a faithful group who "spoke one to another" about the Lord. How exceedingly precious!

Notice that the Lord "hearkened and heard." He knows when His people so much as talk to one another about Him, and He notes it in His book of remembrance. When men are forgetting Him, He is remembering those who are true to Him. They are His precious jewels!

How vitally important Christian fellowship is in a dark and troubled day. Do not miss the joy and strength which will come into your life as you join others in God's house to speak of Him and to think "on His name." He may be all we have (that was true in Israel), but He is always and eternally enough.

III. Light from the Lord (Luke 1:68, 72, 77, 78).

The silence of the 400 years was broken, and the spiritual darkness which beclouded the land was pushed back. God, who had in the past spoken through the prophets, now spoke through the coming of His Son (Heb. 1:1-3). Being the Light of the world (John 8:12; 9:5; He shone forth with the "brightness of His glory.")

Little wonder that godly Zacharias, the father of the forerunner John, sings, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people" (v. 68).

He of whom all the prophets give witness, to whom every one of the sacrifices pointed forward, the Saviour and Redeemer, has come to show forth God's mercy and to give, not only to Israel, but to all men, "the knowledge of salvation" and the remission of their sins.

The "dayspring" is at hand; a Light has shined forth into the darkness of men's hearts. Jesus the Christ, the Saviour, has come!

IV. Liberty in the Lord (Gal. 4:4, 5).

Men who had been servants under the law became sons of God in Jesus Christ. Redemption sets a person free from the bondage of the law and brings him into the family of God as His child (Rom. 8:14-17).

How does one become a child of God? By accepting God's only way of cleansing from sin (Heb. 9:11-14, 22)—the shed blood of Christ. Believing in Him and making confession of Him before the world (Rom. 10:9, 10), we are saved and have the right to call ourselves the sons of God (John 1:12, 13).

That blessed liberty in Christ is for you who read these lines, if you will but turn to Christ now! Will you do it?

Ground raw potato can be added to meat balls and hamburgers to make a little meat go a long way.

After using a scrubbing brush, rinse it in cold water and then turn the bristles downward. The water will run out and the brush will dry quickly. If allowed to dry on its back the water will soak into the wood and thus loosen the bristles.

Old doors which have settled until they scrape the floor, can be improved by pulling out the hinge bolts and setting a small washer between the halves. The door will be raised the thickness of the washer.

When food has been oversalted, the pot may be covered with a damp cloth and the food steamed for a few minutes.

A little paint or shellac will turn coffee, baking powder and cracker tins into excellent kitchen containers.

Chinese Wives

So many soldiers' wives in China are in desperate circumstances or have not heard from or about their husbands for such a long time that the national government recently passed a law to keep them from seeking another mate, says Collier's.

The penalties are six months' imprisonment or a $1,000 fine for a spurious betrothal; three years' imprisonment or a $5,000 fine for an adulterous; and seven years' imprisonment or a $5,000 fine for a bigamous marriage.

German hopes appear to have been knocked higher than a Keitel.

It struck us that it was somewhat of a boost for democracy that the surrender of Germany was signed for our side by an American named Smith. Walter Smith. And the name sounds pretty good up against all the German Vons-This-and-Vons-Thats.

After the war in Europe and Japan there is still a job to do. This country still has the job of making peace with John L. Lewis.

THE GOOD OLD DAYS Clarence Smedley Thompson, who died the other day at his Irving Place home in New York, was our first boss. He gave us our first job as a cub reporter back home—and beyond that gave us the benefit of his patient training, sage advice and warm friendship. We still treasure a faded note which gave us a never-to-be-forgotten thrill. It said that "without solicitation on your part I am glad to increase your pay from $3 a week to $5, effective this week." Three a week was the starting wage in those days and it seemed a lot of money. Five dollars was something that made one feel in the upper brackets.

Timely Watering
Losses of young plants can be avoided by timely watering and by shading them for a few days after they are transplanted. The gardener who wants to make permanent shading frames instead of using newspaper or other makeshift can stretch burlap, cheesecloth or other fabric over laths or other light lumber. Legs 12 to 18 inches long make the shades easy to handle.

Marshall, King
Pledge Victory
to 'Bond Front'

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Army has overcome what in the past would have seemed to have been insurmountable obstacles and the Navy has promised full unconditional surrender, Chief of Staff General George C. Marshall and Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King said today, in commenting on the Mighty Seventh War Loan.
General Marshall said:
"We in the past would have seemed to have been insurmountable obstacles. So have you. That is where the enemy miscalculated—for to Americans, nothing has ever been impossible. Yours is a hard task—a heavy responsibility. But we of the Army have confidence that you will again achieve the impossible."
Admiral King said:
"We have had two wars to wage. One of those wars is just beginning. That means that your own labors, far from over, are also just beginning. The Navy, like the Army, has one objective. The unconditional surrender of the enemy. We will attain that objective because of people of good faith. People who have demonstrated their patriotism and their willingness to undertake the most gigantic financial task ever undertaken by a free people."

Time for Cutting Trees
The best time for cutting trees is in the spring after the sprouts have started and the tree is in full leaf. The death and decay of some species can be hastened by introducing poison into the circulatory sap system of the living tree.
Better Paint Job
While modern enamels and paints have high hiding power, good undercoatings, especially in the case of enamels, will improve the job. Manufacturers of enamels usually also make undercoatings which are carried in stock by the dealers who sell the enamels.

Is Your Crankcase Full of MUD?
THIS is the crankcase pan from an automobile. Its owner stuck to peacetime rules and had his oil changed regularly every 1,000 miles. But look what happened! Black, mud-like sludge by the handful almost ruined his motor by clogging oil screens and oil lines, cutting off the oil flow.
Sludge forms fast these days because with lower wartime speeds and shorter trips motors don't heat up enough to drive off impurities. Fight wartime sludge and save your motor by following new wartime recommendations.
Have your Sinclair Dealer—
(1) Drain used oil at recommended intervals, while motor is hot.
(2) Flush parts clean with flushing oil.
(3) Refill with fresh, clean Sinclair motor oil.

Morgenthau Cites Types of Issues Issued to Public

A grateful Nation has girded itself for the Mighty Seventh War Loan for 14 billions of dollars, half of which has been assigned as the individual sales quota. According to reports from state chairmen reaching Ted R. Gamble, national director of the War Finance Division of the Treasury in Washington, the Nation is ready for the huge task.

Mr. Gamble was enthusiastic about results. He said "We're prepared to do the best job in the 7th War Loan." Mr. Gamble said that "not only is there more money available than ever before in each state, but individual income will be higher in the period of the 7th War Loan than in any previous War Loan period."

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau said seven billions of dollars has been assigned as the quota for individual investors and that the major emphasis throughout the drive will be placed on the quota for individuals.

The individual quota is the highest established in any of the previous drives, the secretary said. The E Bond quota alone is 4 billion. The 7th War Loan seeks nearly as much in the one drive as was asked in the first two drives of last year which were held up to this time. The two drives of this year, therefore, will seek nearly as much as was sought in the three drives of 1944.

The Secretary stated that there is every evidence that Federal expenditures are going to remain at a high level for some time to come, and that the Seventh War Loan program was designed to obtain maximum funds necessary to prosecute the War from non-bank investors.

The securities, which will be sold under the direction of the State War Finance Committees, are as follows: Series E, F and G Savings Bonds, Series C Savings Notes, 2 1/2% Bonds, 2 1/4% Bonds, 1 1/2% Bonds, 7/8% Certificates of Indebtedness. The 1 1/2% Bonds will not be offered in the Drive to corporations.

The Drive for individuals will extend from May 14 to June 30. However, an intensification of activities in the sale of Series E bonds began April 9, when millions of persons on payroll savings plans throughout the country were asked to enlarge their participation as a part of the Seventh War Loan. All Series E, F and G Savings Bonds and Series C Savings Notes processed through the Federal Reserve Banks between April 9 and July 7 will be credited to the Drive.

During the final phase of the Drive which will cover the period from June 18 through June 30, subscriptions will be received from all other non-bank investors for the 2 1/4% and 2 1/2% marketable bonds and the certificates of indebtedness.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived at Adano, a seaport in Italy, with Major Victor Joppolo, the Amgot officer in charge. Sergeant Leonard Borth, an M.P., was to be in charge of security. The Major set out immediately to win the friendship of the citizens, and to improve their living conditions. The first duties of the Major, after posting the civil instructions, was to find out what the citizens needed the most. He soon determined to replace their bell, which the Germans had taken. Major Joppolo found that the bell was the very symbol of their private and civic life in Adano. He determined to secure a bell satisfactory to the people.

CHAPTER III

Craxi said: "I needed no bell. I was on the beach to welcome the Americans. My woman was with me, the formidable Margherita, and my seven children. We were on the beach in spite of the shooting, to greet the Americans. But what did my children shout? They did not shout: 'We miss the tinkling of the bell.' They shouted: 'Caramelle! Caramelle!' They were hungry. They wanted candy. I myself, who had had enough to eat as it happens, shouted for cigarettes, not for the pealing of a bell."

Borth and the usher Zito came back. Borth said: "It's nifty, Major. All the records are intact. They tell everything. There are lists of anti-Fascists and lists of those who were enthusiastic and the others who were lukewarm. There's a dossier on each important person. It's perfect. Who are these guys?"

Cacopardo said: "Cacopardo is my name, at your service, sir. Cacopardo is sulphur and sulphur is Cacopardo."

Borth said: "I remember that name. In the records it says Cacopardo's crazy."

Craxi said: "That is true. He thinks that bells are more important than food."

Borth turned on Craxi in mock anger. "And who is this?"

Craxi was apologetic again: "I am anti-Fascist. Craxi. I believe in food for the moment."

Major Joppolo said: "They are arguing which is more important, food or restoring the bell. Since we obviously can't do anything about the bell just now, food is our concern."

Craxi looked very proud of himself, but Cacopardo turned to Zito and said: "We will leave this matter to the son of Rosa who was the wife of Zito. What do you say, small Zito, do you consider the food or the bell more important?"

Surprisingly Zito said: "I think the bell."

Major Joppolo was interested by this. He leaned forward and said: "Why, Zito?"

Zito said: "Because the tone of the bell was so satisfactory."

"No," said Cacopardo, "it is because of the history of the bell. When the bell spoke, our fathers and their fathers far back spoke to us."

Even Craxi was swept into this argument. "No," he said, "it was because the bell rang the times of day. It told us when to do things, such as eating. It told us when to have the morning egg and when to have pasta and rabbit and when to drink wine in the evening."

Zito said: "I think it was the tone which mattered. It soothed all the people of this town. It chided those who were angry, it cheered the unhappy ones, it even laughed with those who were drunk. It was a tone for everybody."

Giuseppe came in bringing the priest. Father Pensovecchio was gray-haired and cheerful, and as he approached the group around the Major's desk he made a motion with his right hand which might have been interpreted either as a blessing or as a Fascist salute.

After the introductions, Major Joppolo said to the priest: "Father, we are speaking of the old bell which was taken away."

Father Pensovecchio said: "That is the disgrace of this town. I have in my church a bell which is just as loud as the one which was taken away, though not so sweet and much younger and altogether meaningless as a bell. Any other bell would have done as well in my belfry. I wanted to send my bell. But the Monsignor would not permit it. The Monsignor is the uncle of the Mayor. He has reasons for doing the things he does—" Father Pensovecchio crossed himself, indicating that the things which the Monsignor did were somewhat ugly; "—but in this case I believe he was wrong."

Borth said: "It's ridiculous. There are lots of things more important than this bell. Get them some food and don't forget that alleyway."

Major Joppolo said: "All the same, the bell is important to them." And he said then in Italian: "Thank you for telling me about the bell. I promise you that I will do all I can to get another bell which will have some meaning as a bell and will have a good tone and its history will be that it was given to you by the Americans to take the place of the one which was taken away by the Fascists to make gun barrels."

Cacopardo said: "You are kind. Craxi said: 'I thank you, Mister Major, and I kiss your hand.'"

Major Joppolo said: "You what?"

Cacopardo the historian said: "He meant no offense. It is an old custom here. Once the important people make us kiss their hands, and later when the actual kissing became too much of a bother, it became the habit merely to mention the kissing, as if it had been done."

Craxi said: "I meant no offense, Mister Major. I am anti-Fascist."

Major Joppolo said: "It appears that everyone in this town is anti-Fascist. Well, we will see about the bell. Now I wish to speak alone with the priest. Zito, you may stay. You are my usher. Giuseppe, you may stay. You are my interpreter."

Craxi said: "Mister Major, the telegram."

Major Joppolo said: "I will try to send it."

Craxi mentioned the kissing again, and turned to go.

When the others had gone, Major Joppolo said to Father Pensovecchio: "Father, I wish to tell you that the Americans want to bring only good to this town. As in every nation, there are some bad men in America. It is possible that some Americans who come here will do bad things. If they do, I can assure you that most of the Americans will be just as ashamed of those things as you are annoyed by them."

Father Pensovecchio said: "I think we will understand weakness in your men just as we try to understand it in our own."

Major Joppolo said: "Thank you, Father. I have been told that you are the best priest in Adano."

The priest said with quite honest modesty: "I am here to do my duty."

Major Joppolo said: "Therefore I should like to ask a favor of you."

Blood and wind rushed into his throat and his throat roared.

You must feel perfectly free to refuse me if you wish. I should like to ask you to say a few words before your mass tomorrow morning about the Americans. I shall leave it to you to say what you wish, if you will merely add that there are certain proclamations which the Americans have posted which ought to be read."

Father Pensovecchio said: "That I can easily do."

Major Joppolo said: "I myself am a Catholic. If you will have me, I should like to attend your mass."

The priest said: "It will be a pleasure to have you." Major Joppolo was glad that he did not say it would be an honor.

Major Joppolo said: "I shall see you tomorrow then."

Father Pensovecchio said, just to make sure: "At the Church of San Angelo. It is by the Piazza of that name. At seven in the morning. Until then, son."

When the priest had left, Giuseppe said in his brand of English: "You doing okay, a boss. All you got a do now is fix a food."

"Yes," said Major Joppolo, "food. We'll go to the bakeries. But first, do you have a crier here?"

Giuseppe said to Zito in Italian: "What is the name of the crier? Did he run into the hills with the others?"

Zito said: "No, he is here. Mercurio Salvatore. He is here. Only, Mister Major, he is not always say exactly what you tell him to say. He will say the general meaning of what you wish, but he will change it some. Even if you write it down, he will change it some."

Major Joppolo said: "Will you get him, please, Zito? I want to send him out to tell the people to read the proclamations."

Zito went. Major Joppolo said to Giuseppe: "We will go to the bakeries, then we will post the proclamations."

Giuseppe said: "Okay, a boss." Major Joppolo looked down at his desk and saw Craxi's telegram. He undid the safety pin and unfolded the paper and read:

"To Franklin D. Roosevelt, Capitol Building, Washington, D. C. Fremente di gioia per la liberta da molto tempo attesa che i vostri valorosi soldati anno dato alla citta d'Adano stop vi prego accettare i sentimenti sinceri della mia gratitudine e riconoscenza. Antifascista Giovanni La Concetta fu Craxi."

"Giuseppe," the Major said, "let's see how good you are as an interpreter. Now, this is for President Roosevelt. You must make it as eloquent as you can. What does it say?"

"To Franklin D. Roosevelt and a so forth," said Giuseppe. "Crazy with joy because of a liberty so long time awaited which your brave a soldier have a give to a town of Adano. What's a stop?"

"That's just the end of a sentence, Giuseppe."

"End a sentence. I beg a you accept a sincere sentiments of my gratitude and a recognition. Signed a this Craxi. You going to deliver it, a boss?"

"Sure," the Major said, "the President will be glad to hear."

Mercurio Salvatore, crier of the town of Adano, took a little time to show up, because he had to get into his uniform. His face was happy when he did arrive, because he had thought that his crying days were over. Having been a voice of Fascism for seventeen years, he thought that the newcomers would not want his loud shouts. He had taken his uniform off and hidden it in the house of Carmelina the wife of Fatta. He had then awkwardly paraded himself in civilian clothes and the people, having seen him in uniform for seventeen years, laughed at him.

"Where is the crier?" they asked each other in his presence.

"He has disappeared into the clothes of Fatta which do not fit him," they shouted, and laughed.

Therefore Mercurio Salvatore was happy and grateful when he presented himself to Major Joppolo. "I am glad to be able to serve you and I kiss your hand," he said in his husky voice. Indoors he had learned to speak in a kind of whisper, because he knew the strength of his throat.

If Major Joppolo had been any other American officer, he would have laughed outright at Mercurio Salvatore.

He said: "Crier, I have a job for you. I must explain this to you: the Americans are different from the Fascists. They are different in many ways. For this reason there will be quite a few changes in Adano. I hope that they will be changes for the better."

Mercurio Salvatore said: "Yes, Mister Major," to show that he would remember every word of it.

The Major said: "In order to explain some of these changes, I am going to post at various prominent places around the town a number of proclamations, which will make everything clear. All I want you to do is to tell the people to read these proclamations. Impress on them that the penalties for not obeying the proclamations will be severe. That is all."

Mercurio Salvatore looked disappointed. "That is not much to shout," he said.

Major Joppolo said: "Shall I name a new crier?"

Mercurio Salvatore said quickly: "Oh no, Mister Major, I will make something beautiful of what you have said."

Major Joppolo said: "The proclamations will be posted before five o'clock this afternoon."

Mercurio Salvatore said: "Yes, Mister Major," and left.

He picked up his drum where he had left it outside the Major's office. Ordinarily he had made his first cry in the Piazza Progresso, right in front of the Palazzo, but this time he was self-conscious, and wanted to have a few tries before crying within earshot of the Major. Therefore he went first to the park opposite the Cathedral.

He rolled his drum long and sharply.

He took a deep breath. Blood and wind rushed into his throat, and his throat roared: "Well, you laughed. But you can see that Mercurio Salvatore is still your crier. The Americans are friends of Mercurio Salvatore. The Americans wish to be your friends, too. You have been expecting the Americans for some time, but did you expect the changes which would come after the Americans? Did you know that they were going to change many things after they came? Did you know that they were going to change practically everything except the crier? Well, your crier is here to tell you this."

Now Mercurio Salvatore filled his lungs and belted: "Opposite me I see Carmelina the wife of Fatta in front of her house. I also see the lazy Fatta leaning against the wall of his wife's house. The crier wishes to thank Carmelina for storage of his uniform during the difficult time of the invasion. He wishes also to address a few words to her lazy husband. It is unfortunately, lazy Fatta, that you never learned to read. It is too bad that you were too slothful to memorize the letters of the alphabet. This afternoon you would have had a chance to read of the changes which our friends the Americans intend to bring about here in Adano.

White Background Lends Class To Modish Prints for Summer

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AMONG the most attractive prints shown in the summer displays are those that feature white backgrounds. These very new and voguish white background prints are indeed something worth talking about in that they are so refreshingly dainty and summery and away from the ordinary looking.

You can get them as modest and unostentatious as you want, such as small polka dots, and other conservative motifs. If your fancy turns to the dramatic in prints, you will delight in the wide-spaced, huge florals done in flamboyant color on white.

Outstanding in the new blouse collections and a "best seller" is a model fashioned of an almost all-white sheer, were it not for the tiny polka dots that star the snowy background. This print comes in black, navy, brown, red or yellow dots on white. The blouse is styled with the new full length sleeves with fullness gathered into the wristband and it has the fashionable large soft bowtie at the throat.

Much ado is being made over black-on-white prints for smart daytime wear. These are made up in stunning jacket-and-skirt two-piece suits, either cardigan or bolero type. Wear your frillest white lingerie blouse with this choice suit and you will rate a hundred per cent in swank. White hat, gloves, bag and footwear worn with this costume contribute handsomely to the immaculate appearance of this ensemble. If you feel an urge for color, wear a bright flower hat, the gloves repeating the flower tone.

Simple little frocks made of black-and-white print are top fashion for summer. One of the most striking prints in black and white is the new "Dalmatian print" such as you see worn by the young modern centered in the group who is leading two thoroughbred Dalmatians for proof positive as to the source of inspiration. The dress is styled sans any furbelows whatever, so as to show off the print itself to best advantage. The new long sleeves and the soft bowtie fastening at the neckline are high style details.

The dress to the left is made of a print that stresses color galore silhouetted against a white background. An Indian war-bonnet is the motif of this California print done in brilliant authentic colors. It makes a gorgeous summer gown that registers a sophisticated simplicity such as is characteristic of the better dresses for summer.

The charming print dress shown to the right is a summer girl's dream come true. It is made of a very lovely sheer print that strews flowers spaced in a graceful all-over patterning on a white ground. It has "style" because of a cleverly cut peplum that dips low in the back and at the sides and front in points, the cape-like sleeves repeating the point technique. If you plan to make your own print dress be sure to buy a pattern with a peplum, for the newer styled summer prints take on not only peplums but artfully manipulated side drapes and other intricacies that get away from the usual regulation skirt. Note the huge black hat which this winsome lassie carries in her hand. These enormous black straws are the latest to wear with your gay summer prints.

A story of white background prints would not be complete without mention of the dramatic types that pattern florals in wide-spaced arrangement of voluptuous roses and poppies on a snowy crepe background. You'll be especially intrigued with the stunning pique prints with their spectacular flower motifs done in flamboyant colors.

New Millinery Trend

Most exciting things are happening in the millinery realm nowadays, the latest of which is summer hats created of sheers that are so airy-fairy and frothy they look like delicate mists of loveliness atop milady's prettily coiffed head. For the hat pictured exquisitely sheer white horsehair braid is pleated en masse to achieve a millinery confection of ethereal beauty. A single La France rose in the center adds a master touch of color.

Evening Fantasies

A Spanish comb brilliantly refined in your hair, on your feet sandals of black rayon satin with straps crossed high above the ankles, a stole scarf of filmy black starred all over with wee rhinestones, the scarf trailing in grace from one shoulder—for memorable evenings at the dance.

New Knit Lingerie Is Luxury Styled

Interesting things are being done with rayon-knit slips, gowns and boudoir robes and bed-jackets. Whereas they have been for the most part on the tailored order, this season they are being styled with frills, embroidery and lattice-work insets in intriguing ways. A nightgown in black rayon knit has a director's top seamed to a graceful skirt. The bodice top has short puff sleeves and a low decollette neckline, which are finished off with a box-pleated ruche of self jersey knit, which is edged with a bright colored piping of self material. One of the outstanding ensembles is a rayon-knit gown with fancy stitching and applique at the midriff. With this gown comes a loose peignoir-type coat with deep-banded armholes. In the more tailored models, the feminine theme is accentuated in trimmings of self-rayon knit loop fringe. Lace, ribbon and frilly ruffles of the matching rayon knit all contribute to the decorative theme.

Black and Pink Combine

For Feminine Loveliness

The more you see the lovely ways in which designers are working out black and pink combinations the more you marvel at the subtle beauty of this color alliance. And now that the vogue is in full swing, one is increasingly impressed with the exquisite refinement and feminine loveliness that this color scheme never fails to achieve. A charming interpretation of the black with pink idea is seen in a two-piece costume of black lace made up over sheer pink. Another way of looking charming in pink and black costume is to wear a pink wool mandarin jacket with your simple daytime black dress together with a swank little felt hat.

Crude Rope Bridges

Bridges consisting of a single rope are still in use at points along the rivers of western China where only men and horses travel. SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

The Flemish word for auto tire is "Snelpaardeloos-zonderspoorwepgetrolistug."

The 1945 government expansion program for increased production of military truck and bus tires is geared to turn out 21,300 additional tires a day, or 6,000,000 a year. This expansion plus previous expansions should result in the production in 1945 of more than twice as many truck and bus tires as were produced in 1941, and in 1945 about 2 1/2 times the 1941 figure.

A vehicle driven at 50 m.p.h. on average roads wears away 41 per cent more rubber than if it were driven at a steady 30 m.p.h.

The Best Golf Swing

Craig Wood reopened a hot argument a few days back:

"The biggest improvement in golf, one of the reasons the leaders give you those record scores is this—they use the squared-face on the backswing and keep the squared-face working through the downswing." "This means less pivot, less body turn. It means more hand control. You should take the club head away squarely from the ball and keep it in this position so you can bring it back squarely to the ball."

"I seldom see my husband. When he isn't away on a fishing trip he's down in the basement tying feathers and things on fishhooks."

"I can't hear a thing you say, Sarge. My girl sent me a set of ear-plugs for my birthday!"

WHAT game is played more throughout the world than any other? This is one of the queries you get from servicemen billeted in Europe and the South Pacific. And then they lead you on to a comparison of tennis and golf. This includes courses, courts and all other ingredients that make up an argument. I put this debate up to one of our leading tennis statisticians and here are the facts:

"Why compare tennis with golf? Why not compare tennis with any other national or international sport? You won't find any other game even close, in an international way."

"Here's something that may shock national and international sport followers. In 1939, just before the recent world war broke out, the International Lawn Tennis association had a membership of 59 nations, headed for the Davis cup. No other sport has even come close to this mark."

"This entry list embraced every continent and every civilized country from the U. S. to Kenya and China. And each of these 59 nations has a tennis governing body."

"Without any argument, the most famous international sporting trophy is the Davis cup, donated in 1900 by Dwight Davis from St. Louis. No other international cup is in the same class."

"Fifty-nine nations — what other sport can equal that? Or even come close, including soccer, golf, basketball, or track and field?"

"Strangely enough the two most famous cups — the Davis cup for tennis and the Walker cup for golf came from two famous St. Louis sportsmen — Dwight Davis and George Herbert Walker. Dwight Davis and Bert Walker, both from inland St. Louis, were main factors in putting tennis and golf on the international sporting map."

"There may have been two finer sportsmen, but I can't recall their names. Their international appeal reached to more than millions — it moved close to the billion mark."

Grantland Rice

15,000 Tennis Courts

Our tennis expert then began to get eloquent. "As you may know," he said, "there are about 5,000 golf courses in the country. But don't forget there are 14,800 municipal tennis courts in 983 towns and cities of the U. S. There are 2,300 municipal courts located in as few as 10 cities, and New York isn't one of them. There are 706 tennis clubs, members of U.S.L.T.A., and 777 others not members. And this doesn't include the enormous number of tennis courts at private homes."

"Golf claims around 3,000,000 players in the U. S. We happen to know that tennis can claim around 5,000,000 players — possibly more. After all, golf requires from 100 to 130 acres for a course. Tennis requires far less."

The main point is that tennis and golf belong largely to competitors, not to spectators. And that's the way it should be. We have had entirely too many spectators in this country and far too few actual players or competitors. This goes especially for football, baseball and boxing. These are largely spectator games. But these conditions may also change later on. Millions of spectators only mean box office receipts. They mean nothing in the way of physical condition."

Now back to tennis. Our expert continues—"Tennis is the only sport played in countries all over the world under the same rules and regulations. Tennis is an international matter, not a local affair. We figure there are something like 40,000,000 tennis players in the world, men and women. No other sport can even approach this mark. Before the war we had something like 800,000 tennis rackets turned out each year. This will be doubled after the war. Tennis will be one of our greatest games. It takes up far less space and gives far more action than golf."

To forestall any wild squawks from bowlers, softball players and basketball players, we'd like to step aside on this part of the argument. The bowlers and the basketball players claim around 20,000,000. The softball players over 30,000,000. We'll let them fight this out. But people don't read so much about their stars or their teams. The four major reading sports in the United States are baseball, football, boxing and racing—with golf next.

Home Economics
 A wise person budgets his time and money and plans his work later evaluating the results. As we look at our accomplishments for the year we find we still have a lot to learn in the field of homemaking. For the past nine and one half months we have concentrated on ourselves and studied ways of being good homemakers and proud citizens. Next year we want to study Home Management. Our plans for the summer months include activities to improve our selves and to grow food to help feed the nation.
 Each one has had his turn as treasure and our book shows encouraging results of hard work in planning and buying carefully. We have saved almost $23.00, which we will spend for a set of dinner dishes for our home-making room. Labeling shelves, storing foods in glass jars and tin cans, wrapping curtains and slip covers in fresh papers and storing books in closed cupboards are all part of closing our home making department for the summer months. Our desks, stoves, cupboards and linens, fresh and clean, will await our return in the fall after a busy happy prosperous summer vacation.

The school's sale of War Bonds amounted to $6,025.00. This is well over its assigned quota, and so we have done our part towards the state quota for schools; that is $50,000.

Roy M. Green Tells a Farm Story

By President Roy M. Green
 Colorado A & M College
 Fort Collins, Colorado

Big crops and good prices left a wheat farmer not long ago with $30,000 cash in the bank. Said he: "If I don't invest this in inflated land values, what can I do with it to earn anything?" I said to him, "Did you ever think of using part of it to insure yourself a steadier farm income after the war? For $150 a month, or $1,800 a year in War Bonds, you can begin to collect ten years after the war $200 a month. As you will be getting older by that time, wouldn't that be a better supplement to what income the farm then produces than having to turn again to the cream can and what your wife can make out of chickens? Wouldn't it be a nice retirement fund for a father that is now 55 years old? Wouldn't you like to have had $200 a month cash coming in last time?" In addition, if you can put in War Bonds a lump-sum as reserve for operations in bad years, for deferred purchases of equipment, for repairs, for up-keep, for new household equipment; and then whatever the postwar adjustment, you would have an easier time of it than you had last time.
 You wouldn't have to wait on somebody's extra special plan; you would have already completed one of your own.
 If you are proud of the independence of your occupation, and jealous of preserving as much of it as possible, don't grate and speculate—order WAR BONDS!

HYBRIDS IDEAL FOR SWEET CORN

The many improved hybrid varieties are making it possible to plant more sweet corn in the home garden without using too much space and with the probability of a good crop.
 Hybrids with yellow kernels are the only kind that should be considered. They retain the highly delicious flavor of Golden Bantam and are vigorous and more productive. Also, they can be planted closer with good results than the "old fashioned" varieties.
 The short, early hybrids can be planted in rows 2 feet apart and the single stalks left 8 inches apart. The more productive later hybrids should be planted in rows 2 1/2 feet apart and the single stalks left 1 foot apart.
 One of the most generally distributed early hybrids is Narcross. Carmel Cross, Bancross and Lincoln, although not so generally distributed, are all good midseason varieties, with Golden Cross Bantam the universally grown main crop hybrid.
 Hybrids mature all their ears at the same time, so if continuous pickings are desired, it is necessary to have more plantings than with open pollinated varieties.
 No value results in removing suckers. Some may produce ears.
