IN the SERVICE

Many of our young men and women from Iosco county, who have been serving their country in the war, are now returning from the European and Pacific Areas. Some will be discharged for long service, others will be re-assigned for further duty in our war with Japan.

To all of these young people—The Tawas Herald wishes to congratulate you on a fine and heroic accomplishment of a hard task. From buck private to general, we are proud of you.

Sgt. Robert Scholtz, overseas for the past three years, arrived in the States Monday by plane. He has served in Africa, Italy France and Germany.

Norman VanWormer, Seaman 2nd Class, of Hale serves aboard the U. S. S. Birmingham in the Pacific. His ship has had 121,500 miles of fighting the Axis from the invasion of Sicily to the battle of Okinawa. Wake Island, Tarawa, Bougainville, Saipan, Tinian, Guam and Mindanao were invasions in which this ship participated.

Cpl. Reginald B. Bublitz of this city has arrived on Luzon by plane from New Caledonia. He says he enjoyed the trip very much. He has been at Guadalcanal, New Guinea, and Dutch East Indies.

Ensign Harold Ross, who has been attending school in Boston, is home on a 10-day leave.

Sgt. and Mrs. Vernon Blust of Camp LeJeune are spending a few days with relatives here and at Detroit. Sgt. Blust expects to be assigned to duty in the Pacific Area.

Major Arland E. Bigelow has been promoted to lieutenant colonel. He is stationed in the Philippines. Col. Bigelow is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bigelow.

Pfc. William Baumgartner is here for a week's visit with friends. He recently returned from the European War Theatre. He will report for Pacific duty.

Cpl. Ernest Wegner has received the Bronze Star at Luzon in the Philippines. He recently sent pictures of the bombed city of Luzon which is the summer capital of the Philippines.

Nazi Headquarters Scene of Rites Making Iosco Boy a U. S. Citizen

In a building which two months ago housed the regional headquarters of the Nazi Party, fifteen soldiers of the Tenth Armored Division became citizens of the United States in this Bavarian town. Among those who received their citizenship the hard way was Sgt. Norman Hogaboam, son of Mrs. Hazel Hogaboam of this city. Combat veterans of the Tiger Division's drive from Metz to Austria, the new citizens received their papers from Cyrus B. Follmer, special naturalization officer assigned to the European Theatre of Operations by the Department of Justice.

Speaking to the men who had come from seven nations to live and fight for America, Follmer declared: "I was told in Washington that the naturalization ceremony should be an impressive one. There is nothing that I can do or say to make this ceremony more impressive. You are the ones who make it impressive to us who are assisting in the ceremony—by the uniform you are wearing and by your military records. I can only administer the oath. Personally, I say to you that I hope and pray that all get safely home to enjoy these privileges and to carry on as good citizens and keep America a happy America. You have done your part for the Victory."

The Tenth Armored Tigers gained early fame as the first iron defenders of the Bastogne, the stumbling block of the desperate German counter-offensive into the Ardennes. More first followed. The division was the first in the Third Army to invade Germany and the first to capture a major German city (Trier). They were the first on the Western front to smash into the National Redoubt, Hitler's vaunted inner mountain fortress, and the first division in the Seventh Army to enter Austria. Operating under an identification black-out in four different armies in four widely separated sectors of the front, the Tenth Armored Division was called the "Ghost Division" by the bewildered German 82nd Corps.

Former Herald Publisher Retires

W. N. Miller Establishes Herald in 1884

William N. Miller, who established The Tawas Herald in 1884, has retired from a career he began 75 years ago. The Leslie Republican which Miller and his daughter, Frances, have been publishing for the past 16 years, has been sold to Eugene Egnow of Fort Wayne. Miller began printing at Mt. Clemens while still attending school. Since that time he has been associated in various capacities with newspapers at Mt. Clemens, Marine City, here at Tawas City, Blissfield, New London, Iowa, and Farmington, where he sold the Enterprise to retire. In 1929 he was back in the harness with the purchase of a print shop at Leslie.

Mr. Miller and daughter will remain at Leslie.

A HERALD AD WILL SELL IT.

2500 Legal Trout Planted This Week

Twenty-five hundred legal size brook trout were distributed to the streams of the county Thursday. It is one of several similar distributions made this season.

The trout are from the Harrisville Hatchery, and the distribution was made by Ralph Sloan and Gordon Chamberlain of the Fish Division, Department of Conservation, and Conservation Officers Arthur Lietz and Bert MacGregor.

Veteran LST Here One Hour Saturday Noon

Chance to See What Our Boys Use in Pacific

Tomorrow noon (Saturday) Iosco county people will have a chance to understand how their sons have been landing on the Pacific Islands in the war with Japan. The veteran warship, LST 512 will be at the East Tawas State Park one hour for exhibition.

The battle-scarred warship is manned by a crew of 200 Navy men, Coast Guardsmen and Marines. They are veteran fighting men from every theatre of the war except Okinawa.

Ramp-nosed, LST 512 is 328 feet long, and in most respects resembles the many other LST's being used in the Pacific. For that reason it has been chosen for exhibition purposes.

Damaged almost beyond repair at the invasion of Normandy, it could now be readied for battle within a few hours.

Announcement of the LST's coming here came through a telegram from H. N. Butler.

Culham Family Hold Reunion

Sixty-Six were in attendance at the 9th Annual Reunion of the Culham family held Sunday at the State Park, Bay City. A picnic dinner, games, swimming and visiting featured the event.

(Those in attendance were from Bay City, Mason, Milford, Whittemore, Lansing, Detroit, Saginaw, Gaylord, Tawas City and California.)

Archie McCordell of Hazel Park was named as president for the coming year, and Mrs. Margaret McLean of Saginaw, secretary. The reunion will be held at the Bay City State Park again next year.

12 Iosco Boys and Girls Go to 4-H Club Camp

Win Trip With Fine Projects Completed

Mrs. Cecil Ruckle of Burleigh and twelve 4-H Club members attended the 19th Annual Northern Michigan 4-H Club camp at Gaylord as delegates from Iosco county.

The camp which officially opened Monday afternoon of this week, and closes this afternoon (Friday), brings together delegates totalling nearly 600 from 27 counties in the northern part of lower Michigan.

The delegates won themselves this honorary trip to club camp by carefully completing all of their required 4-H Club work in clothing, food preparation, handicraft and summer projects such as gardening, canning, poultry, crops and dairying. The delegates were selected from those who most carefully completed their summer projects a year ago and those from the handicraft and clothing projects completed last April.

The camp is under the direct supervision of State Club Leader A. G. Kuttunen. The educational and recreational staff include Assistant State 4-H Leaders Lola Belle Green, Laura Davis, Corrine White, V. A. Freeman, Louis Webb, P. G. Lundin, Lester Bell, Don Phillips, L. S. Klaasse and M. H. Avery, all of Michigan State College. Other assistants include M. J. Nichol of the National Safety Council, Theodore T. Glass, magical entertainer, and District 4-H Club agents.

The campers educational program included class room instruction, judging contests, field trips and demonstrations in the various 4-H projects.

(The Iosco delegates included Ida Bentley, Taft; Ruth Webb, Hale; and Pearl Edwards, Burleigh, representing the local clothing clubs. Bud Riek, Oscoda and Ernest Nash, Burleigh, representing handicraft. Harold Smith, Taft; Wilfred Rapp, Vine and Marilyn Pfahl, Greenwood, representing summer projects. Anna Nash, Burleigh, foods judging. Gertrude Smith, Taft, canning judging. Wilma O'Farrell and Ona Lee Bellen, both of Burleigh, represented the foods clubs by conducting a demonstration on the "Preparation of Muffins.")

James Monroe Dies at Midland

Former Hale Resident 25 Years With Dow Co.

Death came July 21 to James Monroe, former Hale resident and well known in this city. He had been with Dow Chemical Company at Midland for the past 25 years. He was freight and traffic manager for the plant. He was buried from the Nazarene church at Midland Rev. F. A. Bronson officiated.

James Monroe was born at Ludington, February 21, 1895. When a small boy his father died, leaving the widow and two small children, James and his sister, Margaret. In 1901 they came to Hale, and his mother was married to Jay Graves of that place.

Saginaw Bay Fishing Boundaries Marked

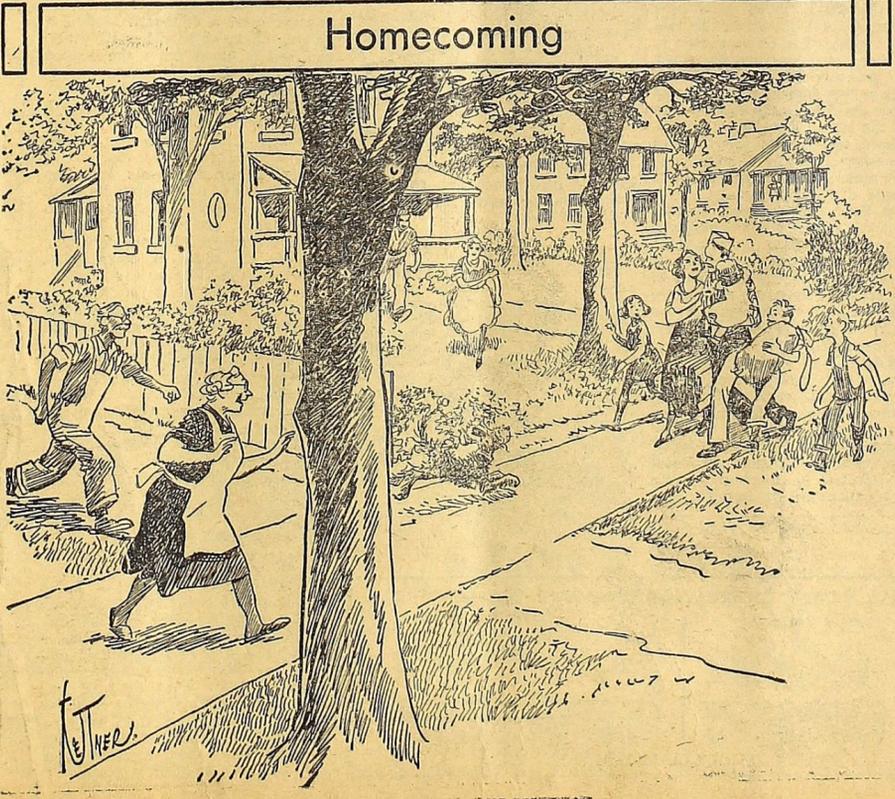

Conservation department representatives this week marked locations of permanent monuments to be erected on the shores of Saginaw Bay that will control commercial fishing activity. The 1945 legislature amended the commercial fishing act to define the Bay's boundaries within which nets may be used as provided by law with certain defined exceptions. Outer boundary will be a line running from Tawas Point light, house in Iosco county to a monument to be erected on Oak Point in Huron county and including the waters of Tawas Bay. Inside the boundary certain areas are closed to fishing with nets, including one channel approximately two miles wide which will be kept open for the free passage of fish.

R-2 Tire Certificates Invalidated Aug. 16

Persons who now have the old type R-2 tire purchase certificates must use them before August 16, John F. Kessel, District OPA Director, announced today. He said the new amendment to the tire ration order invalidates R-2 old type certificates in dealers possession on that date and hands of consumers on August 31.

Partners are expected to forward Parts B to suppliers before Sept. 1. "The action," Kessel said, "is designed to protect the nation's limited tire supply from the black market. The easily counterfeited old R-2 form is being retired from the rationing system."

TRUMAN COMMITTEE CARRIES ON

Senators Kilgore of West Virginia (Dem.) and Brewster of Maine (Rep.) had an interesting experience while probing conditions in Germany for the Truman committee, formerly the Mead committee. Calling at the headquarters of Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch, they were received courteously by the general himself, who talked with them for ten minutes, then went off to keep an appointment.

The two senators then proceeded with their usual investigation. Settling down in one of the U. S. military offices, they called in witnesses, and cross-examined them with a stenographer taking down everything that was said.

This continued for nearly three hours. Unlike most visitors, Senators Kilgore and Brewster seemed intent on really finding out what was happening in that part of occupied Germany. Finally, Gen. Arthur White, chief of staff to General Patch, appeared nervously in the background.

"Gentlemen," he said, "ahem . . . this procedure . . . it's a little unusual. I'm not sure that we can permit you to continue."

"It's the same procedure we've always followed," replied Senator Brewster.

"Yes," continued Kilgore, "it's the same procedure followed by this committee under former Chairman Truman."

"You probably recall him," added Brewster, "he's now President of the United States."

Next day General Patch himself invited the two senators to dine with him at the villa which he had taken over from a German princess.

JUDICIAL EXIT

There was a day when everyone in and around the Roosevelt administration wanted to be a judge. This ambition was largely precipitated by the Supreme court fight and the fact that the courts in those days had put several obstructive decisions squarely across the path of the New Deal.

But now it is just the opposite. There is a growing exit from the courts. Judge Schwellenbach has just resigned from the bench to be secretary of labor. Judge Sherman Minton is itching to get off the circuit court of appeals in Chicago. And there will soon be four vacancies on the court of appeals of the District of Columbia, considered one of the most important courts in the country.

Judges Vinson and Thurman Arnold have already made two vacancies on this court. Two other vacancies will occur when Chief Justice Duncan Groner and Judge Justin Miller resign.

It may keep the White House busy looking for good men to take their places.

ITALIAN UNDERGROUND

It is not often that anyone can get a first hand report on the results of psychological warfare direct from his own family in an enemy country. However, Ugo Carusi, director of immigration and naturalization, has had that experience.

Carusi came to this country as a small boy from the marble quarries of northern Italy, went to work in the marble quarries of Vermont, and got to know Harlan F. Stone, who brought him to the justice department when Stone became attorney general under Coolidge.

And during the war, Carusi has been broadcasting to the Italian people urging them to surrender. With the end of the war, Carusi has received letters from his relatives in Italy telling how his broadcasts helped inspire the battle against the Nazis.

"Ugo," wrote a cousin, "you can really be proud of your relatives here in Italy. From the oldest down to that little, charming young lady (Carusi's 10-year-old niece) you were always so happy to hold in your lap while in Carrara, they have proven themselves to be great patriots."

"One of your cousins, the brother of Enrico, was the colonel who led a Partigiani band in the capture of Carrara from the Germans last November. From that time on, the Partigiani controlled all the public offices in the town. The caves with which you are familiar were used to good advantage by the Partigiani, and the Nazis refrained from re-entering the city."

Grass Seed Turns Waste Land Into Green Pastures

The need for beef and beef products is so great these days that all available feed must be utilized. And one feed is grass. Grass is meat—for our fighting men, for civilians and for lend-lease.

Native grass seed stands well to the forefront of the feed picture. Native grasses are handy, economical and highly palatable. They supply about 65 per cent of the forage and feed for livestock in the western range states.

As a result of the plant explorations of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service among native species growing here in America, specifically to find better soil-conserving and range forage plants, a number of grasses not previously cultivated have been brought into use.

The seed of a number of native grasses could not be purchased anywhere a few years ago. The SCS personally had to collect all the seed needed for its land rehabilitation projects. But, since then, the agency has carried on an educational campaign for the harvesting, processing and planting of the seed. Interest in the importance of the seed was spurred. Prices went up. The seed of a number of native grasses is now being sold on an important scale by seedsmen. The establishment of a new farm industry—collection of wild grass seeds—has been the result. The SCS can now buy most of its seed from farmers and ranchers.

Just what are the native grasses? Some of the principal ones are buffalo grass, blue grama grass, side-oats grama, various bluestem grasses, switchgrass, sand dune grass, tobosa grass, western wheatgrass, galleta, Indian grass, and various wild-rye grasses.

Some of these native grasses took quite a beating from expanded dryland farming in the latter part of the 19th century. Farmers kicked up more dust than the thundering herd. Subsequent droughts and severe winter storms didn't help matters any. The "dust bowl" was inevitable.

Much of the range area is eroding to a certain degree. On most farms in the Great Plains and western states there are fields that should be revegetated, and the native grasses of the region, together with a few adapted introduced grasses, have proved most suitable for the purpose.

Although farmers have come to the rescue of the land by providing grass cover for more than 75 per cent of the former dust bowl, still more native grass seed is needed. It is needed for producing meat, for curing "sick" land, and for healing unsightly gullies.

In considering the particular use to which a grass known to be excellent in erosion control can be put, it is necessary first to know where this grass will grow. If a grass that protects and enriches the soil grows on many different types of soils and under a wide range of climatic conditions it will rank high among the grasses used in conservation plantings.

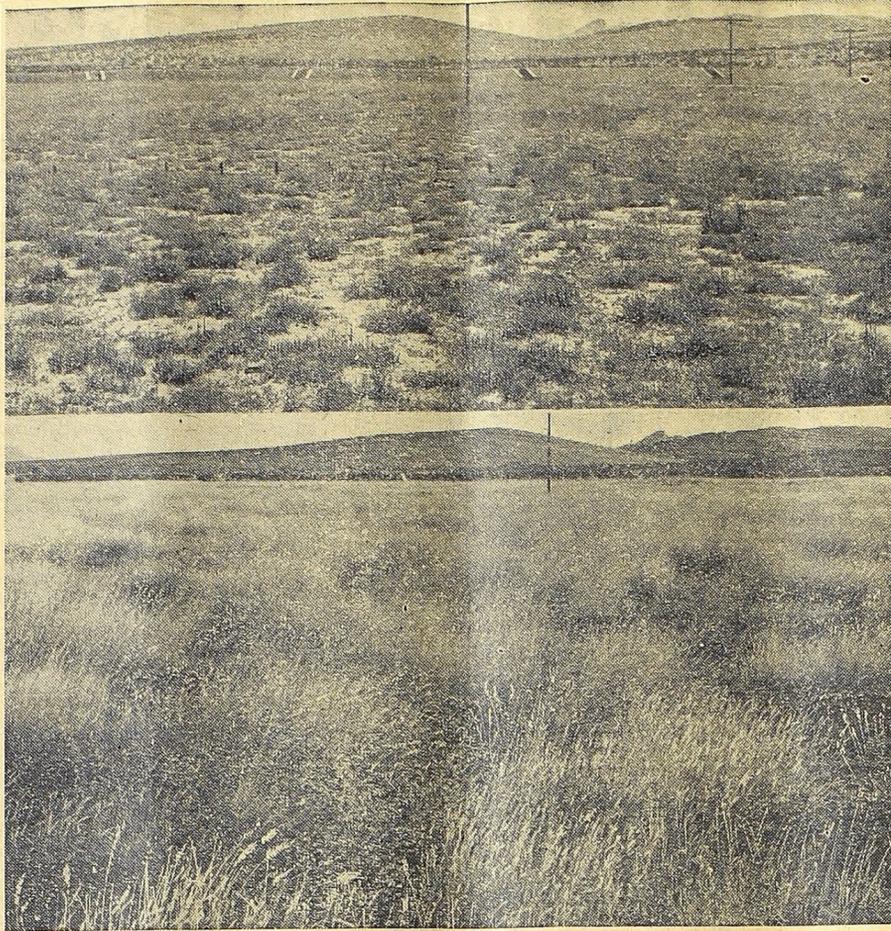

Since artificial revegetation requires planting, the seeding habits of grasses must be studied. Some grasses shatter their seed soon after it ripens, some are not reliable seed producers, and some grow only in scattered stands or in locations inaccessible to harvesting machinery. Other native stands produce seed of Scattered tufts of coarse grass was all that grew on this desert land near Lordsburg, N. M., before the Soil Conservation service began work, (upper picture).

Below shows the same section three years later. Tobosa grass has been planted, and it has flourished. The floodwaters of the rainy season have been utilized to irrigate the land instead of eroding it. Earth dikes and wire spreaders slow up the flow of the water, and allow it to sink in and soak the soil. The grass not only prevents further erosion, but provides abundant food for livestock.

good quality that can be readily harvested.

Improvements have been made in the methods and machinery used in the collection of seed of native grasses. As a result, unit costs have been reduced and the harvesting of certain species formerly considered economically prohibitive have been undertaken. Direct purchase of seed from farmers and ranchers has been on the increase.

The processing of seed of native grasses has developed rapidly. Many of our native grasses have awns or appendages that require special drills. Since seed of different species vary in amount of processing required to give a product of standard quality, processing schedules giving duration of treatment and mill speed have been determined by various types of mills. Milling costs are very low considering the improvement obtained in the quality of the seed.

NEW RULES FOR JOOLS

Any square (a gal who doesn't know her way around) can wear her jewelry "straight"—but it takes a Cruisin' Susan (a gal who does get around) to learn all the new rules for jools. We've tracked down some of them with the aid of our own soda fountain FBI. You can take it from there.

Coquettish Cameos—Ask mother for that old cameo pin she has tucked away somewhere; or dawdle down to the dime store and buy yourself one. Pin it to a black ribbon dog-collar or at the base of the low neckline of your new date dress. Nothing like it for Gone-With-the-Wind glamour.

Bar Maids—Lots of girls are flaunting those little silver lieutenant bar pins. The newest way to wear them is to pin one on either side of your sweater neckline. Take a black velvet ribbon, put it around your neck and slip each end through one of the bars. Then draw the ribbon down together to the front of your sweater and tie it in a bow. Do we make ourself clear or must we draw a picture?

Shoot Your Arrow—Dress up that fringed kiltie skirt by removing the huge safety pin that fastens it at one side and substitute a rhinestone or silver arrow pin. Then a pair of arrow earrings to match and you're all set for a date—except for the boy. You'll have to work that part out for yourself.

Idea for I.D.s—With a needle and thread, tack your Identification bracelet to your velvet hair band, with the name plate directly at center front.

Loafer Lure—Everybody's wearing pennies in the slots of loafer shoes. Just to be different, wear a pair of silver lieutenant bars on yours. In case you'd like to know, lots of girls are doing it in Pittsburgh, Pa.

RODDY RUMORS

Are you a Roddy McDowell fan? Since he grew up, he's become a teen-age droll—and swoon boy. Van Johnson isn't the only one who has fan clubs! We spent an afternoon recently visiting Roddy and we thought you'd like the low-down on this high-up star.

Roddy's favorite topic of conversation is "my sister, Virginia." Virginia, who's a beauty, is 17 and she's Roddy's favorite gal, at the mo.

Roddy's favorite comic is "Prince Valiant." Says he really doesn't go in for funnies, but he likes the Valiant drawings. High-brow stuff!

Roddy and his mother (and his sister, Virginia) entertain G.I. Joes for dinner every Sunday—usually six at a time.

Roddy cleans and dusts his own room, now that there's a servant problem up in Beverly Hills. His mother says he's pretty thorough.

Roddy's favorite actress (or one of them) is Tallulah Bankhead and one of his favorite friends in Hollywood is genial Sam Marx, producer of "Lassie Come Home."

Roddy's favorite subject in school (studio school, of course) is civics.

P.S. No, Roddy really doesn't go out with girls much yet—so there's a chance for you—and you—and you!

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS—

Late hours are bad for one—and even worse for two. You complain when your parents lay down a curfew law. Comes train time and you feel like Cinderella. You'd like to stay-on-and-on-and-on. Well, whether it's hard to do or not, it's always better to leave a party when you're still having a whirl. It's always smarter to say goodnight to your date when you still have plenty to say to each other. After all, that Prince wouldn't have run after Cinderella unless she had disappeared just when he was getting interested. Try to end your evenings when you're still wishing they would last forever. More-and-shorter-dates, that's your motto.

Steamy Borneo Really Is a 'Story Book' Land

Allied invasion of Borneo has reopened the world's third largest island, after Greenland and New Guinea. It is a "story book" territory lying between the Japanese homeland and the main nerve centers of the Netherlands Indies, says the National Geographic Society.

Borneo, straddled by the equator, is the typical tropical land dreamed about by stay-at-home readers of travel stories, fictional and true. In many sections rankly growing vines lace trees together from ground to top. Rare and beautiful orchids thrive in the shadows. Spikelike thorns tear at clothing and flesh, and paths can be kept open only by continual hacking with heavy swordlike knives. The steaming heat is oppressive. Twenty-foot pythons glide along the ground and among the branches; shrieking, agile little gibbons and lumbering orangutans swing through the trees; crocodiles infest streams.

Flying Frogs, Midget Deer. Numerous other wild animals include tiny, foot-high mouse deer, honey bears, wild pigs, rhinos, and elephants. Among Borneo's queer creatures are the flying foxes—which are bats—and the flying frogs, which have webbed feet of extreme width that serve as parachutes when they make mighty leaps.

Borneo's air is filled with the shrill ear-piercing sounds of myriads of insects. Mute butterflies show their vivid colors against the varied greens of the jungle. Scorpions and "sting flies" make life unhappy for the island's residents, who must also face the ravages of wood-devouring termites. Many a European wife has removed a cupboard to find it had no back, or seen her beds and chairs fall apart from the hidden invasions of these ant pests.

Headhunting in Jungles. It is estimated that Borneo has a population of around three million, of whom—before the war—only about 3,500 were Europeans. Native peoples known as Dyaks make up the majority of the inhabitants, with additional groups of Javanese, Chinese, Arabs, and so-called Malays, the latter comprising not only true Malays, but those of other races professing the Mohammedan faith.

An interesting feature of native life in Borneo is the community dwelling, or "long house," built on stilts and often decorated with human skulls. Under one roof, a whole village, with dozens of families, may be accommodated. Deep in the interior, tattooed and much ornamented savages, recalling the circus advertisements of the "Wild Man of Borneo," still practice headhunting and strange rites and feasts in honor of the dead.

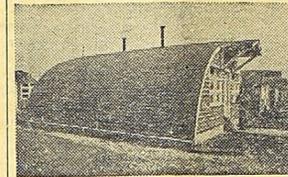

New Development in Poultry Buildings

Asbestos and Mineral Wool Used Effectively

Something new and modern in poultry house construction can be found on the Tenderex farms at Middletown, Ky.

The farm was planned with the co-operation of the Stoker Poultry company. The decision to build durable buildings having long life with low maintenance, led to exhaustive and careful study and experimentation. The results found are of interest to farmers generally. Using Gothic-type house, prefabricated arch construction, with the framing for the roof and wall combined in one unit, not only was a saving made in original costs, but considerable saving was effected in future heating costs.

The 33 houses on the Tenderex farms are all 24 by 30 feet, with the continuous arches anchored to a concrete foundation. Sheathing is of tongue and groove covered with thick butt asphalt shingles. These type shingles are easily moulded to the contour of any roof. Their gray tone offers harmonious contrast with the red hollow tile used in the end walls.

Mineral wool was selected to insulate the interior wall, which is lined with asbestos board.

To eliminate dampness, the floor consists of cinder fill and four inches of hollow tile, topped with 2½ inches of concrete.

An important factor in selecting asphalt shingles, concrete, hollow tile, mineral wool and asbestos board was the fire-resistant construction these materials provide.

Postwar Machinery Pickup Baler

This is an automatic self-feeding, self-tying baler with bale separation making it a one man operation job. Neatly formed and firm bales of sliced hay weighing 40 to 65 pounds can be turned out at the rate of three to five bales per minute.

It is designed primarily for wind-row pickup baling. The construction saves leaves and assures that all the hay is carried into the bale chamber. It is a McCormick-Deering postwar improvement.

Danger! Sheep Scab May Be on Way Back

Will sheep scab stage another comeback—once more causing millions of dollars in losses, as it did a few years ago?

Dr. Floyd Cross of the American Veterinary Medical association and government authorities report such a possibility. "The condition is present to an alarming extent in the Midwest," Dr. Cross reports.

If sheep show loss of wool, formation of scabs on the skin, or a tendency to rub against fences and pens, the condition should be called to the attention of a veterinarian. Through greatly diminished wool production, loss in body weight, general unthriftiness and death, scabies play their toll.

The scab is caused by a small mite, barely visible to the unaided eye, but can be brought under effective control.

The only effective treatment is the external application of some medicinal agent that will kill the scab mites. This can be best accomplished by dipping, followed by isolation. The dips recommended by the USDA are made from lime-sulfur or nicotine.

Fumigation Practices

Carbon disulphide is the most common fumigant used on the farm. It is a liquid that quickly evaporates into a heavier-than-air gas. Operators should avoid inhaling the vapors or spilling the liquid on clothing. Extreme caution must be taken against fire.

Do not fumigate when the temperature is below 60 degrees. It is best to start late in the afternoon when the air is calm. It will take 24 hours.

1945 RESTAURANT INTERLUDE

Customer—May I see a menu? Waiter (lazily) — Yesterday's, today's, or tomorrow's?

Customer—Today's, I think. Waiter—Yesterday's will be just as useful. And tomorrow's will do you as much good.

Customer—I still think I'll take my chances on today's.

Waiter—Oh, be a sport and take yesterday's.

Customer — What makes ordering from yesterday's menu more sporting than from today's?

Waiter—You go back further for what you can't get.

Customer — Gimme today's! And I want one with the scratches! (The waiter hands him a menu, through which pencil has been heavily drawn.)

Customer (reading the scratches) —Hamburger . . . lamb chop . . . chicken with noodles . . . broiled mackerel . . . ham and eggs . . . corned beef and cabbage . . . frankfurters and beans! Hmmm! Well, I'll try some hash.

Waiter—That's not running today either.

Customer—It's still listed. Waiter—Yeah. That's a post-time scratch.

Customer (after further study) — How is the liver?

Waiter (surprised) — Is that on there? The chef told me we didn't have it.

Customer—Why wasn't it marked out?

Waiter—It was coupled with the ham and eggs and I guess the boss thought that when you scratched one you scratched the other.

Customer — I'll try the codfish cakes and beans. Waiter (returning after 10 minutes)—No codfish and beans.

Customer—Well, just bring me the codfish and forget the beans.

Waiter—It's the codfish we ain't got; the beans are still an outside possibility.

Customer—How's the chicken salad?

Waiter—It's O.K. if you like celery and lettuce leaves. Maybe you would like griddle cakes and sausage, if we have any sausage.

Customer — Personally I prefer sausage in cases where you haven't any griddle cakes.

Waiter (impatiently) — How about honeycomb tripe?

Customer—Can I get that today?

Waiter—I can put you on our waiting list.

("The famous Nuremberg stadium, where Adolf Hitler used to make his most boastful speeches before tens of thousands of goose-stepping Nazis, is now being used as a baseball field by G.I. Joes."—News item.)

What, oh, what is that cry rising Where the Nazis used to strut . . . "Germany gives solemn warning," "I will lick the world!"? Tut! Tut! From the Nuremberg inclosure Comes no Fuehrer's frenzied call; Just a roar from grinning doughboys And the stirring yell, "Play ball!"

Once "Der Fatherland is marching To new glories" filled the air, With "I promise greater triumphs" And "With me the world you'll share!" . . .

Now a corporal from Bronxville Sits where Adolf loved to pose And yells "Pickle one for popper! Sock that next one on the nose!"

Gone are all the smart goose-steppers

And where once the "Master Race" Stood to hear their leader praise 'em There's "a close one at third base"; And if Adolf's dead he's writhing In his grave as echoes come Of a cry to him quite painful, "He struck out, the great big bum!"

A meadow in majestic green Spreads out before my gaze; Delightful rolling hills recede Into the distant haze.

WAR NOTES

Despite the heavy bombing of the Schweinfurt ball-bearing plant, inside sources reveal that it is in reasonably good condition and within one month could be producing 50 per cent of its wartime schedule. . . . The Nazis had removed a lot of Schweinfurt's intricate machinery before the air raids, and hidden it. The manager of the plant told U. S. officials that within three or four months he could be turning out 20 per cent more ball-bearings than during the war.

40 American Hospitals In United Kingdom Close

LONDON, ENGLAND. — Forty United States army hospitals in the United Kingdom have been officially closed since Germany's surrender halted the flow of battle casualties, the army reported recently. Most of them were of 1,000 bed capacity. The majority of wounded and ill soldiers in Britain have recovered and returned to their units, or have been flown to hospitalization areas in the United States.

The Private Papers
Of a Newspaperman:

This is a personal message to a few irresponsible American women, who do not realize the headaches they are causing some of our Commanding Officers—by causing heart-aches to our fighting men. . . . This message was suggested by Government and war leaders who apparently are concerned about a certain matter—and here it is.

A fighting man is only as good as his fighting heart. . . . And inside his heart he carries the woman he loves. . . . Anybody in the armed services—from the hard-boiled top sergeants to the understanding chaplains—will tell you that a fighter can best protect our country when the woman he loves is protecting his heart. . . . It is the source of a soldier's greatest strength—and it is also the possible source of his greatest trouble.

This means that a certain, thoughtless, small percentage of American women must do their duty to their country—by giving their absent fighting men more consideration. . . . It is an extremely sad occurrence when a telegram arrives in some American home—with the news that an American fighting man is a casualty. . . . It is also sad when an American fighting man—on a firing line—receives a letter telling him that his affection for the woman he loves is a casualty back home. . . . Think that over.

A Washington paper, reporting that Joe Kamp and Ed Rumely were trying to have Congressional indictments against them dismissed, quoted their counsellors as saying the indictments should be thrown out "on grounds that the subpoenas were addressed to the House sergeant at arms and not the defendants."

Oh, don't change the subject!

Many soldiers are writing this reporter because they do not understand the GI Bill of Rights. . . . The U. S. Gov't owes its fighting forces the same thorough education in their civilian rights that it insisted upon—in their military duties. . . . The American people expect each fighting man to get as much assistance under the GI Bill of Rights as that fighting man gave service under the articles of war. . . . This Gov't owes it to each fighting man to bring as much attention to his return to civil life as it put forth to bring him as a civilian into the armed services. . . . If the Gov't is able to seek out a deserter to punish him—it ought to be able to seek out its heroes to reward them. . . . Each fighting man is entitled to expert advice at Gov't expense. . . . This is more than simple justice. It is sound national policy.

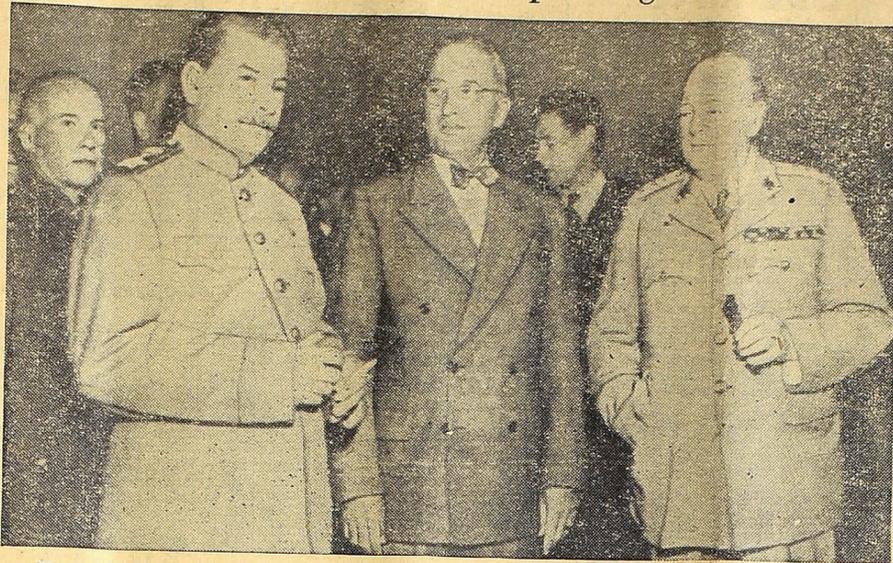

It is easy to understand why the officials (responsible for the transportation of our returned men) had them ride in coaches while prisoners of war rode in Pullmans. . . . This excerpt from a soldier reveals that higher-ups give more consideration to prisoners. Look: "Gallbach, Austria: Yesterday I saw something that burned me up. I went for a ride along the Alps and saw German soldiers who had surrendered (120,000 in all), who had never been put in a prisoner's cage. Instead, they were living in the best hotels, swimming, sun-bathing, riding vehicles and probably got their gas from us men; they had all the American ciggies and food they wanted. They also carried small arms, such as pistols, rifles and machine gats. Can you imagine that? This through the courtesy of the American 7th Army. Maybe I'm on the wrong side!"

This is a short and ugly story about a war hero. His name is Cpl. Edward Majeski of Hastings, Minn. He was the first soldier from the 1st ward of that community to leave for combat duty. He served 4 years in uniform—most of that time in actual combat overseas—18 months of which he suffered in a Nazi prison camp. . . . He was wounded. . . . When he returned to Hastings there was no crowd at the station, no cheering, no bands, no paper or confetti shower, no flags. No nuttin'. . . . Only this "greeting" from a storekeeper, who had the police hand Majeski a summons and complaint. . . . Corporal Majeski was fined $10 and court costs for riding a bike on a Hastings sidewalk. . . . Whew!

Second Thoughts on Some Second Raters:

Hitler, according to the Moscow mighties, is a suicide, the first victim of his killings people can be glad about. But the tragic part of it all is we could have had him dead by his own dirty hand a decade ago. Had one nation—France, Britain, anybody—pulled a gun on him when he marched into the Ruhr, Hitler, by compact with the High Command, was pledged to blow his looney top off.

Stalin, Truman, Churchill Open Big Three Meet

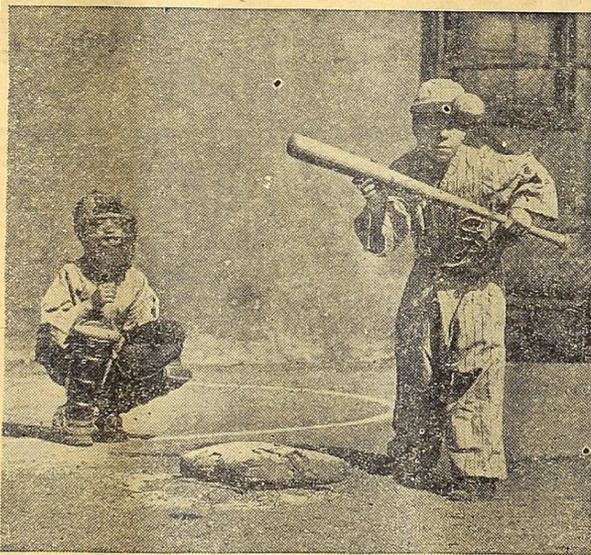

The much awaited Big Three conference formally opened at Berlin. The scene took place in an attractive room of a modern country estate in the Potsdam area. Photographed together for the first time are Stalin, President Truman and Churchill, just before the opening of the conference. While the conference got off to a fast start, it is still unknown just how long it will take to complete all issues to be considered.

Rationing No Drawback to North Carolina Farmer

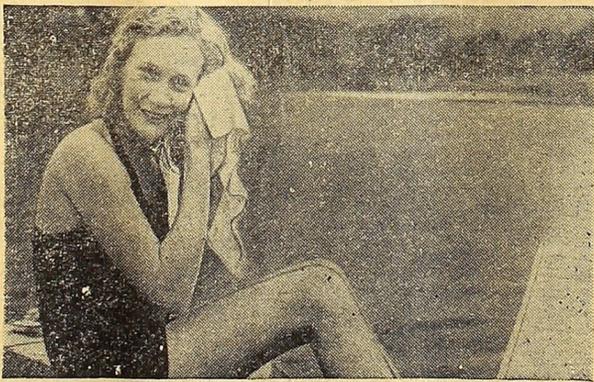

He ain't worried—no gas, no oil, no tires impede this Appalachian in the pursuit of his weekly grocery buying chore. He hooks his steer to his sled with wooden runners, picks up a smidgen of something to eat, and pulls it back to his craggy home. It may be a mite slow, but he doesn't have to argue with the OPA about it. The North Carolina steer can go wherever a shod animal could climb, and the narrow sled, self-braking, will shame the most prudent wagon on steep slopes.

Until His Big Brother Returns

In another split second, the batter is going to lay this one down on the line and hope he doesn't trip over those trouser legs on his way towards first. At the rate the war is going, his big brother may be back to reclaim that baseball suit before Babe grows into it. At any rate he will make good use of it for a few more weeks.

WHEN Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves passed Rogers Hornsby's consecutive hitting record of 33 games, the time seemed to be about right for your correspondent to look up a few notable records that might last for generations.

One of these is Joe DiMaggio's consecutive hitting record for both leagues that totaled 56 contests. This took place in 1941. DiMaggio began collecting base hits on May 15 and finally ceased firing on the 16th of July.

Any record can be beaten, but this will be a tough one to crack. There are two other almost phantom targets that may never be surpassed. One is Lou Gehrig's consecutive game record that carried on for a matter of 14 years and more than 2,000 contests. It will take a stronger combination of steel and concrete than we have ever seen so far in one human system to pass Lou Gehrig's mark. This must stand among the incredible features of sport.

Lou began his long march in 1925 and finally came to the end of his career in 1939. The second untouchable mark belongs to Babe Ruth and his count of 60 home runs, piled up in 1927.

There is another pretty fair ball player by the name of Tyrus Raymond Cobb who has to his credit a different set of figures that no one now living will ever see equaled. This record includes a lifetime total of 2,244 runs and 4,191 hits.

Jimmy Foxx and Hank Greenberg almost caught up with Ruth's home run accumulation of 60 in a season, but no other ball player has even come close to Cobb's double mark. This same record also includes 892 stolen bases, well beyond Eddie Collins' turn of 744.

Cobb, Ruth and Gehrig, all American Leaguers, complete the trio that offers the toughest targets on the batting side of the game. And when you mention the two greatest ball players of all time, Cobb and Ruth draw most of the votes although Hans Wagner still has a stout following that refuses to be shaken loose. Mel Ott is the most redoubtable of the National League record holders at bat—and Mel is still under-way and increasing his lead. Mel sets a record of some sort every time he gets another hit or steps into another home run—insofar as the National League is concerned.

Stand-Out Pitchers

Walter Johnson, another American Leaguer, is the pitcher that stands out as the main all-time target to knock over. But for all that even Old Barney isn't so far in front of Cy Young. In fact, looking a trifle deeper into the matter, Young's mark may outlive all others. It consists largely of these figures—games pitched—906, games won—510. When you figure that Walter Johnson is in second place, 37 winning games away at 413, you get a better idea of Cy's miraculous contribution to the art of piling up victories.

One of Johnson's top marks is the count of 56 consecutive scoreless innings, compiled in 1913. That means something better than six straight shutouts. For a career run Johnson also sets up two other targets with 3,497 strikeouts and 113 shutouts, 23 beyond Grover Alexander's total.

But Old Pete must be drawn into this select society with the pitching he offered in 1916. That season, working in Philadelphia's bandbox ball park, where a looping fly was usually a homer, Alexander turned in 16 shutouts—more shutouts in one season than most pitchers can call winning games.

The two marks of 19 consecutive victories established by Tim Lincecum and Rube Marquard of the Giants, form another elusive target that many have fired at through the years in vain.

There was no record ever set that can't be broken. But those referred to in these brief dispatches are something more than records. They are landmarks. Even peering into the future, what batter is there to pile up 4,191 base hits? Or what pitcher can ever hope to win 510 games? Or what iron man can outlast Gehrig's 14 seasons of consecutive play? These are the three toughest of them all to shatter or drive away from the record pages. For all three call not only for extreme skill but also for the amazing stamina that few ever possess.

RUBBER

Tires which were introduced to the public eighteen months before Pearl Harbor, to waken the nation to the necessity of mass production of synthetic rubber, were created after fourteen years of intensive research in synthetic rubber by B. F. Goodrich.

The Japs are reported to have reversed the process for making rubber out of oil and are making gasoline and oil out of natural rubber.

One of the largest tire repair shops overseas, operated by the Ordnance Tire Repair Company in Italy, turns out 534 repaired and recapped tires per day.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Len J. Patterson, editor of The Tawas Herald until 1913, spent last week in the city with friends. While here he sat down to the old desk and wrote up this week's "40 Years Ago."

The Editor of the Herald handed us a copy of the paper of 40 years ago and asked us to write his "Looking Backward" column for him this week. After looking it over we have decided that "time changes all things."

Of the men who carried advertising in that issue, we know of only three who are still in the land of the living, viz; W. B. Murray, L. G. McKay and L. L. Johnson.

The news items show about the same ratio. This leads us to believe that 40 years is a long time.

Among the local items we note that Rev. A. Brown, L. H. Braddock and Carl Taylor had gone to Grayling for a trip down the AuSable river. This was a vacation enjoyed by many in those days.

L. H. DuFraw was offering his household goods for sale preparatory to leaving for California.

The Annual Tawas Beach Yacht Races were scheduled for August 8 to 12, and the Byron Shore Sunday School picnic was to be held at the Beach, August 11. The Woodmen of America had their outing set for August 31.

The Thorne Electrical Co. of Bay City had commenced installing electric lights in Tawas City. The plant was installed in the Schlechte Flour Mill.

In the Whittemore news appears the report of a "Jubilee" held there. Tawas City ball team played two games, winning the morning contest by a score of 13 to 5. The Tawas City battery was Nordstrom and Wugazer. Belknap brothers for Whittemore. The afternoon game went to Tawas 6 to 2. Harvey of Maple Ridge was in the box for Whittemore and Luedtke for Tawas City.

Out on the Hemlock Mr. Burt had raised a new barn and Everett Latham was building a new residence.

Will Ruel of Laidlawville had just enlisted in the Navy or a four year hitch.

Jap Outcasts

When Shintoism rose in Japan its teachings prohibited the eating of the meat of animals. Groups that continued eating animal meat or handling animal hides were declared "unclean." Called Etori or butchers, the prejudice against them became widespread. Today, as always, the outcasts are permitted to do only the lowest type of work — chiefly the jobs of butchers and tanners.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

W. N. U. FEATURES

THE STORY THUS FAR: The American troops arrived at Adano, with Major Joppolo, the Amgot officer in charge. Sergeant Borth was in charge of security. The Major was determined to replace the town bell stolen by the Nazis. He arranged with the navy to permit the fishermen to return to the waters. Despite orders issued by General Marvin, barking carts from the city, Major Joppolo recalled the order to permit food and water to enter the town. Tomasio, the chief fisherman, invited the major to his home for dinner. When he arrived he found Captain Purvis and the two daughters of Tomasio. Captain Purvis got drunk and the Major took him home early.

CHAPTER XII

"I thought at first perhaps you were from Northern Italy," the Major said politely.

Tina laughed. "Tell me some more about yourself," she said.

"There's not much to tell," he said.

"Did you go to one of those American colleges? I've seen them in the movies at Vicinamare."

"No, not exactly. I went to school until I was sixteen. Then I lied about my age, I said I was eighteen so that I could get a driver's license and take a job. I worked as a truck driver until I was twenty, then I had an accident, from lifting things which were too heavy."

"What kind of an accident, Mister Major?"

"It was a rupture. After the accident I had no job for two months. It is not very exciting to be unemployed in the United States. Finally I got a job as a clerk in a grocery store at twelve dollars a week."

"How much is that?"

"Twelve hundred lira."

"Twelve hundred lira! You must have been rich."

"No, Tina, twelve hundred lira is all right for Adano."

"All right! I should say it is all right. Six hundred is high pay. My father used to think six hundred was a very good week—and he hasn't been out for a long time," she added sadly.

"But that's not so much in the States."

"You mean everyone is rich in the Bronx?"

"No, I wouldn't say so, Tina. It's just that our standard of living is higher than yours."

"What does that mean?"

"Well, that's hard to explain, too. It's just that everyone has a little more than they have here. They mostly have automobiles, in peace-time, that is. The food is a little better, everyone gets orange juice and milk and things like that. They get paid a little more. They have to pay more for what they get, though."

"In other words, it's just what I said. Everyone is rich in the Bronx."

"Well, have it your own way. Anyway, I think fate has had a lot to do with my life, because one night a friend of mine told me that they were about to have examinations for jobs in the City Government."

"The City of the Bronx?"

"No, Tina, New York City. He told me I ought to take them. I said I hadn't had enough education, but he said I ought to go ahead and try. So I did and I came out number 177 out of 1,100. That made me feel pretty good, as if I knew something after all. They gave me a job as a clerk in the Department of Taxation and Finance."

"Did this make you rich again?"

"No, being a tax collector did not make you rich in New York. I was earning twenty dollars a week. That's two thousand lira."

"Two thousand, richer than ever."

"I did all right, too, only then they elected a man named LaGuardia, and since he was a different party from the previous man, a lot of people got thrown out, and I was one. I borrowed some money from my mother-in-law."

"Your mother-in-law? Were you married?"

"Yes, Tina, I'll tell you about that some time. I borrowed this money and bought a grocery store in the Bronx, and it was all mine. Only then about two years later things went badly, we had hard times, and I had to sell out before it was too late. I went back to the City to see if they'd have me back, because they had sent me a couple of notices while I had the grocery store, saying they wanted me. They said: 'Why didn't you answer the notices?' I said: 'I never got them, I must have been in Florida when you sent them to me.'"

"Where is Florida?"

"It's in the south, I wasn't there at all. That was the second time I lied to get a job. Since then I've tried never to lie, the truth is much better and much safer. So they gave me a job in the Sanitation Department. Later I took my examinations for advancement to Third Class Clerk, and afterwards I got to be a Second Class Clerk. I was earning forty-two dollars a week when I went into the Army."

Major Joppolo was getting a little boastful about his non-existent riches. "That was four thousand two hundred lira a week."

Tina said: "The wife, is she pretty?"

Major Joppolo said: "Yes, she is very pretty, at least she seems so to me. I miss her very much. She has a mole on the left side of her chin, but otherwise she is very pretty. She is of Italian parentage, so she has dark skin like yours. In some ways you remind me of her."

Tina had been looking up at the stars. But now she suddenly looked down into the dark valley of the street and said: "Let's go in and dance." And she opened up the shutter doors and went inside. Major Joppolo went in after her.

Captain Purvis had gone to work on Tomasio's wine, and he was making a decided nuisance of himself, so Major Joppolo persuaded him to go home. He and Giuseppe led the Captain home.

When he got back to his own villa, and was undressed and in bed, Major Joppolo felt miserable. It wasn't until nearly three o'clock that he realized why. Giuseppe was right. It made a man feel very unhappy to be as far from home as the Bronx, New York, is from Adano, Italy.

The next morning Captain Purvis sat with his feet up on his desk. He was in a bad humor.

Sergeant Trapani was out of the office. The Captain spoke to Corporal Chuck Schultz, who was on guard. "That Major Joppolo," he said, "I was beginning to like him, but he's a wet blanket. I was just getting a wonderful buzz on last night, and he descended on me, sober as a whitefish, and he made me go home."

Corporal Schultz said: "Was you getting buzzed on that Dago red?"

The Captain said: "Yeah, there's an old fish-hound down here. Giuseppe took me to his house because

Major Joppolo asked his interpreter and usher to step outside.

"I have received a secret message from the Mafia," the old man said, still whispering loudly. "I have the military secrets of where are the German troops. You must send your soldiers, Mister Major."

Major Joppolo said: "I have no soldiers, I'm just the administrator of Adano."

Cacopardo said: "I got to go to the General. I am ready."

"I will send you to the General, Mister Cacopardo," he said, "but I want to warn you. The General is a very impatient man. If your dope isn't straight, he'll be very angry. I don't know what he'll do to you, but it won't be nice. Also, old man, I've got to ask you not to get me in trouble with him. I'm already in Dutch with General Marvin. Promise me that you will be careful, will you?"

"I will be careful," Cacopardo said, "but the informations is important."

Major Joppolo made out a pass for Cacopardo and sent for a jeep from the motor pool.

Cacopardo stepped back, and raised his hand in a Fascist salute. Then, as his aged memory functioned, the hand wavered over to his forehead, and the salute became military. And he said: "Cacopardo is sulphur and sulphur is Cacopardo." He turned on his heel, as militarily as he could, and marched out.

Between the Palazzo in Adano and the headquarters of the Forty-Ninth Division, in a villa beyond Vicinamare, old Cacopardo did not say a word to the jeep driver. He sat leaning forward against the wind, his goggles down over his eyes and his parasol straining over his head. The jeep's windshield was down on the hood, with the canvas cover over it, as all jeep windshields should be where there is possibility of enemy strafing attacks, and so the wind was very strong. After a while old Cacopardo decided that sun was preferable to wind, and he moved the parasol down and held it in front of him, to fend off the wind.

The villa in which the Forty-Ninth Division was dug in for the time being had belonged to a friend of Cacopardo's. Cacopardo and this friend had shared an interest in Italian furniture, and the old man knew the value of the things in this villa. The friend was dead now, but Cacopardo had a hard time remembering which of his friends had died and which were still living; he therefore thought of them all as living. It was easier that way.

Because he was entering the villa of his friend, whom he considered to be living, Cacopardo approached the gate in the spirit of a cordial visit, and he expected to be received cordially. He was in for a surprise.

Anyone who has never tried to see a general could not possibly know what Cacopardo's reception was like.

A sentry stopped him at the gate. "Good morning," said Cacopardo, as if addressing a butler at his friend's door, "is my friend Saliello here?"

The sentry said: "Ain't nobody here of that name as I know of. What is he, an M.P.?"

"Military Police, indeed. He is prefect of Vicinamare and a collector of wooden curiosities. He is my friend. This is his house. Is he here?"

"No," Buck shouted back. "No one round here with a name like of that."

"No one here that name," the sentry repeated.

Cacopardo said: "Then where is General Marvin?"

M.P.'s are trained to be mysterious with strangers. "Jeez, I can't tell you that, Bud," the sentry said. "I have a paper to see General Marvin," Cacopardo said, pulling out his pass.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

"Hey, Schultz," he said. "Where's Trapani?"

he's got a couple of nice quail, he gave me some red stuff."

Corporal Schultz said: "That vino's bad stuff, sir, you don't want to get mixed up with that vino no more'n you can help. Had some myself last night."

Captain Purvis said: "I'm still sore at that Major."

He leaned back in his chair, and put his feet up on his desk again. As he did so, he knocked some papers on the floor.

"I suppose I might as well clean up my desk. Got to do it sooner or later."

He reached down on the floor and picked up the stray papers. He began to sort and arrange papers in piles, and he threw some away, and he got up and put some away in his files. He read some of them aloud to Corporal Schultz, who was not in the least interested.

In due course he picked up a purple slip, and he said: "What's this?" And he read: "On July 19, orders were received from General Marvin, Forty-Ninth Division, to keep all mule carts out of the town of Adano. Guards were posted at bridge over Rosso River and at Cacopardo Sulphur Refinery. Order carried out. On July 20, guards were removed on order of Major Victor Joppolo. . . ."

Captain Purvis banged the flat of a hand down on the table.

"Hey, Schultz," he said. "Where's Trapani?"

"Said he was just stepping out for a couple of minutes, sir, said he'd be right back. Anything I can do, sir?"

"No. Wait till I get that Trapani. Trapani came in in a few minutes."

"Hey, you, come over here," Captain Purvis said as soon as he arrived.

"Yes, sir," Trapani said.

"What's this?" the Captain said, and he held out the purple slip.

Trapani took it and looked at it. "That's the report on the mule cart situation, sir," Trapani said coolly. "You told me to make out a report, remember?"

"You're right I remember, and where did I tell you to send it?"

Major Joppolo said: "Yes, she is very pretty, at least she seems so to me. I miss her very much. She has a mole on the left side of her chin, but otherwise she is very pretty. She is of Italian parentage, so she has dark skin like yours. In some ways you remind me of her."

Tina had been looking up at the stars. But now she suddenly looked down into the dark valley of the street and said: "Let's go in and dance." And she opened up the shutter doors and went inside. Major Joppolo went in after her.

Captain Purvis had gone to work on Tomasio's wine, and he was making a decided nuisance of himself, so Major Joppolo persuaded him to go home. He and Giuseppe led the Captain home.

The next morning Captain Purvis sat with his feet up on his desk. He was in a bad humor.

"It was to go to G-one of the Division, sir."

"Well, why didn't you send it?"

"I put it on your desk for approval, sir."

Captain Purvis huffed and puffed. He knew very well he didn't pay as much attention to his desk as he ought to. "Well, let's send it out of here. I want to personally see you put that thing in the pouch for Division."

Sergeant Trapani sat right down and addressed an envelope, and put the slip in it, and put the envelope in the pouch which was to leave the next afternoon by courier for Division headquarters. He addressed the envelope to the wrong person at Division, but then, Captain Purvis didn't notice that.

A perspiring courier brought a note to Major Joppolo's office.

It said in English: "I got to see you in the immediate." And it was signed M. Cacopardo.

Not five minutes behind the courier, Cacopardo himself showed up, all dressed for traveling. He had leather gauntlets on, and goggles up on his forehead, and he carried a green parasol in his right hand.

The eighty-two-year-old man trotted the length of Major Joppolo's office, leaned forward over his desk, looked over his shoulder at Giuseppe and Zito, then looked at the Major and said in a loud whisper: "I got to talk alone."

Major Joppolo asked his interpreter and usher to step outside.

"I have received a secret message from the Mafia," the old man said, still whispering loudly. "I have the military secrets of where are the German troops. You must send your soldiers, Mister Major."

Major Joppolo said: "I have no soldiers, I'm just the administrator of Adano."

Promise me that you will be careful, will you?"

"I will be careful," Cacopardo said, "but the informations is important."

Major Joppolo made out a pass for Cacopardo and sent for a jeep from the motor pool.

Cacopardo stepped back, and raised his hand in a Fascist salute. Then, as his aged memory functioned, the hand wavered over to his forehead, and the salute became military. And he said: "Cacopardo is sulphur and sulphur is Cacopardo." He turned on his heel, as militarily as he could, and marched out.

Between the Palazzo in Adano and the headquarters of the Forty-Ninth Division, in a villa beyond Vicinamare, old Cacopardo did not say a word to the jeep driver. He sat leaning forward against the wind, his goggles down over his eyes and his parasol straining over his head. The jeep's windshield was down on the hood, with the canvas cover over it, as all jeep windshields should be where there is possibility of enemy strafing attacks, and so the wind was very strong. After a while old Cacopardo decided that sun was preferable to wind, and he moved the parasol down and held it in front of him, to fend off the wind.

The villa in which the Forty-Ninth Division was dug in for the time being had belonged to a friend of Cacopardo's. Cacopardo and this friend had shared an interest in Italian furniture, and the old man knew the value of the things in this villa. The friend was dead now, but Cacopardo had a hard time remembering which of his friends had died and which were still living; he therefore thought of them all as living. It was easier that way.

Because he was entering the villa of his friend, whom he considered to be living, Cacopardo approached the gate in the spirit of a cordial visit, and he expected to be received cordially. He was in for a surprise.

Anyone who has never tried to see a general could not possibly know what Cacopardo's reception was like.

A sentry stopped him at the gate. "Good morning," said Cacopardo, as if addressing a butler at his friend's door, "is my friend Saliello here?"

The sentry said: "Ain't nobody here of that name as I know of. What is he, an M.P.?"

"Military Police, indeed. He is prefect of Vicinamare and a collector of wooden curiosities. He is my friend. This is his house. Is he here?"

"No," Buck shouted back. "No one round here with a name like of that."

"No one here that name," the sentry repeated.

Cacopardo said: "Then where is General Marvin?"

M.P.'s are trained to be mysterious with strangers. "Jeez, I can't tell you that, Bud," the sentry said. "I have a paper to see General Marvin," Cacopardo said, pulling out his pass.

Dirndl Skirt and Peasant Blouse

Costume Delights Teen-Agers

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

OF ALL the smart fashions for young girls, nothing can eclipse the endearing charms, the witchery and the flattery of the picturesque dirndl-skirt and peasant blouse costumes which teen-agers take such delight in wearing. All through summer and midseason and on into the fall these gay little twosomes will stand at the top as the fashion-ideal for girls.

It seems as if these quaint peasant costumes are prettier and more eye-thrilling than ever before. The skirts give play to unfettered imagination, for no matter how daring their colorfulness or their fabric, they have eye-appeal plus. The more they go a la Mexicano or ballerino style the better.

The blouses worn with them are of the lovely sweet-simplicity type that simply fascinate with their refreshingly naive and ingenu look. They have everything about them that makes a pretty girl look her prettiest. The lingerie types made of dainty white sheers with their low cut drawstring necklines, or with ribbon-threaded beading about the neck and the sprightly short puff sleeves, fascinate with their cunning ways. Often the peasant look is accented with trimmings of gay embroidered banding. Others of the sheerer type are exquisitely but very daintily lace trimmed.

An adorable peasant skirt and blouse by Ballerino of California is shown to the left in the illustration. High artistry is seen in the beautifully styled black skirt with its brilliant band trimming, formed of braid together with tiny white fringe. Double rows of Irish lace add to the witchery of this dainty sheer and lovely fine batiste blouse. One of the many charms of this exquisite model is that it can be worn either in the exciting off-the-shoulder effect or be adjusted at will to a more conservative neckline.

To make you look as cool as an ice-cream soda top your flower-fresh print skirt with a white voile, cap-sleeve, U-neck blouse cut along the lines of a simplicity pattern, for the glory of these winsome peasant blouses is their dramatic simplicity. With her pretty-pretty dirndl and peasant blouse costume, the dancing girl to the right wears that which is latest in footwear—authentic ballet slippers. To further carry out the ballerino spirit, draw your hair to the top of your head either tying a ribbon about your coronet of curls or encircling it with a wreath of flowers, or a single large flower according to preference.

In the twosome centered in the trio the order has been reversed, in that blouse is of print worn with a black skirt. However, the simplicity theme holds good, for the charm of these winsome blouses is that they be made as simply as possible. This fashion-wise maiden is also wearing ballet slippers which she finds are available at the stores in either black or bright red.

Girls who know their fashions are having lots of fun making their own peasant-inspired dirndls and simple blouses. Just the fact that it requires so little material and so little time to run up the seams, turn up a hem and add a belt and presto! another dirndl, has caused these becoming little twosomes to become the mainstay among girls whose clothes budget is limited. These smart lassies buy up the most attractive remnants imaginable of permanent glaze chintz or gay flower print or spun rayon or any likable material and they run up a dirndl in a jiffy. These enterprising amateur sewers find too it's a good idea to lay in a quantity of bright ricrac, for it makes the perfect trimming for dirndl-and-blouse play clothes.

For Beach and Swim

Now is the big moment for beach dresses and swim suits. Here is a beauty in way of a swim and beach ensemble. The material used is an everfast pre-shrunk waffle pique printed in horseshoe pattern. The bra and skirt are prettily ruffled for self-fabric ruffling is considered one of the smartest trimming features this season. For the swim suit as shown in the inset the printed pique has to be elasticized to be ready for water and sun.

Pastel Cottons for Back-to-School Wear

Women who are fashion-wise have come to know that pretty pastel cottons are just as practical and as much-to-be-desired for little girls' back-to-school clothes as they were at the springtime of the year. Who wants to go to school on a hot September day in other than a cool and refreshing wash frock. If it be a bit cool in the morning children are wearing the cutest little toppers imaginable tailored of pastel wools. This year there's a definite movement on in favor of pastel cottons for back-to-school wear. Even the beloved plaid gingham has gone pastel, and they're ever so smart and pretty for little girls' frocks. The new light-colored cottons for school wear include pastel-ground plaids, also checks and clean-cut white stripes on pink or blue chambray.

Color Parade for Fall

Among the new colors we'll be seeing much of in the near future comes a deep dark plum tone. A soft ruby red is also noted as one of the new colors of the year. White wine, the shade which got such a good start for spring, is featured again in the new collections. Gray continues to carry on with style prestige. Royal blue is a novelty shade that still appears in many top collections, usually contrasted with black. Chutney brown is a rich lively brown that is given an important place in the mode. Beige is a quality color that has a big future. It looks like the autumn will be richly colorful.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

ISAAC'S HERITAGE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 24:10, 15-20, 34:61-67
GOLDEN TEXT—I have a goodly heritage.—Psalm 16:6.

The ordinary things of life become extraordinary when we recognize in them the outworking of the plan of God. Our lesson presents one of history's sweetest love stories. It would be worth reading just for that reason, but it is also the account of God's hand in the carrying forward of His promised blessing on the seed of Abraham.

For a long time it seemed that there could be no fulfillment at all, for Sarah and Abraham had no child. Then by a miracle, God gave them a beloved son.

Isaac's remarkable deliverance in the hour when it looked as though he might be taken from his father (Gen. 22:10-12) was like bringing back one who was dead (Heb. 11:18, 19).

He grew into manhood, and Abraham, good father and faithful servant of the Lord, determined that his son must have a godly wife. So in accordance with Oriental custom he sent a most trusted servant back to their homeland to choose a bride from their own kindred.

The altogether charming story unfolds in our lesson as we see

I. A Faithful Servant (v. 10).

Full instructions from Abraham and an oath that he would not take a bride for Isaac from among the Canaanites, prepared the servant for his journey. Taking with him a goodly caravan and rich presents from his master, he set out on his journey.

There is much to learn here about the need of parental concern, and their interested action in helping young people to find the right mate. We see the importance of avoiding "mixed" marriages, especially those between a believer and an unbeliever.

We see the need of constant dependence on God, for only He has the wisdom and the knowledge of human hearts which can properly join two lives together. In our day when marriage is so carelessly and casually contracted, these matters need special emphasis.

II. A Fair Damsel (vv. 15-20).

To be good to look upon is certainly a desirable thing in a woman, but it has been far too much exploited in our day. Notice that while Rebekah was very fair, she also had those qualities of character and of experience which prepared her to be a good wife for Isaac.

She was kind and willing to serve; not only did she offer water to the servant of Abraham, but promptly watered his camels. Such an attitude of heart and mind is a great asset to a woman in marriage.

She was instructed in the domestic arts. The fact that she had come to draw water indicated that, and her ability to draw the water showed that she had experienced the duties of woman in the household.

Here is wise counsel for the young man who is interested in marriage, and for his parents as they guide him. Let him look for the girl with the fair countenance if he will, but let him be sure that there is something really worthwhile behind the pretty face.

No woman, no matter how extensive her culture or how rich her family, is ready for marriage until she knows something of the responsibilities of family life and has a will to do what she can for the care and comfort of others.

III. An Honorable Proposal (vv. 24-26).

Abraham's trusted man, perceiving that God had led him to the one of His choice, at once stated his errand. There was no trickery, no smooth double-talk. This was a straight-out proposal that Rebekah come with him to be the bride of Isaac.

Notice that he made known his master's financial position, and made clear the place Rebekah would occupy as the wife of Isaac. That is as it should be. There is a contractual basis for marriage which calls for complete candor and honest dealing.

But there was more here, for Rebekah ultimately responded to the dictates of her own heart when she said, "I will go" (see v. 28). It was

IV. A Love Marriage (vv. 61-67).

Isaac, meditating in the twilight, presents a fine picture of a man spiritually ready to be a good husband. He had more to offer than riches. Let other young men follow his example.

The tender scene of their meeting, and of the love which welled up in their hearts at first sight of one another, needs no comment.

We do need to say that unless America gets back to real love marriages, our nation is destined for disaster. Matrimony based on physical attraction, improper emphasis on sex, or on convenience, will never be able to meet the stress of modern life. Love can and will do it, especially where those who thus love one another first love God.

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

The World, the Peace and Andy Gribbin.

An important thing about Andy Gribbin's education is that his whole early life is spent in learning the essential business of co-operation, of getting along with fellow-beings.

First, he has to learn how to fit into his immediate family, learn the give-and-take necessary to get along with brothers, sisters, elders.

Then, after a few years, his world enlarges, he is sent to school. Pretty soon he learns how to spell C-A-T. But about this same time he learns something much more valuable, which is that he mustn't pull the cat's tail because a cat is a being, and therefore entitled to certain inalienable rights.

He also learns that 1 plus 1 equals 2. But much more useful is learning that 48 equals 1, that 48 states make 1 nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

As Andy grows up his world will continually expand. At church, at school, in business. And through it all will run the theme of cooperation, of getting along with people of different religious, political and economic beliefs; with people some of whom he doesn't even like.

But—the tragedy of world history is that the Andy Gribbins have not learned that in a constantly shrinking world, co-operation must extend beyond the borders of the country; that just as it is necessary to get along with neighbors and neighbor states, so it is necessary to get along with neighbor nations.

And today, with no spot on earth more than sixty hours away by plane, with oceans shrunk to the width of rivers, with the age of rocket-travel upon us, all nations are neighbor nations.

There are hopeful signs that finally we are awake to this.

Even so, a lack of determination, of responsibility, of effort could again ruin the peace and set the stage for World War 3.

What can you do to help make sure that war will never come? You can...

First, get and keep yourself informed about the specific proposals for peace and international cooperation which are now before us.

Second, interest your friends in these questions. Get them discussed in groups to which you belong.

Third, write what you think to your Congressman and Senators, to your newspaper. Declare yourself.

Meat Slaughtering Regulations Given

The Marketing and Enforcement Division of the Michigan Department of Agriculture is publicizing Regulation No. 519 governing slaughter and the handling of meats. The rules are as follows:
Any person or persons leasing, occupying or using any place, room or building wherein cattle, sheep, swine, poultry or any animals are slaughtered, or carcasses stored, which are intended for human food, shall cause such place, room or building and all utensils, used therein in slaughtering or handling, to be kept clean and sanitary condition.

Slaughter houses shall have a water tight floor easily drained and cleaned. Adequate sewage disposal must be provided. Ceiling and side walls shall be kept clean and painted or white washed when necessary. The room in which meat or meat food products are prepared, stored, packed or otherwise handled, shall be free from odors from toilet rooms, catch basins, tank rooms or putrefactive odors from any cause. Flies and other vermin shall be excluded by use of screens and other reasonable methods.

Stock pens in immediate connection with the slaughter house must be kept clean. Swine, except for immediate slaughter, must not be fed or kept within 150 feet of slaughter house. Immediately following each day slaughtering, all offal, bones and other refuse shall be removed from the slaughter house and tanked, or otherwise disposed of, to prevent a nuisance, and all rooms, tables and utensils shall be thoroughly washed and cleaned.

An adequate supply of pure, potable water shall be furnished. When slaughtering animals which have reacted to the tuberculin test, an adequate supply of boiling water must be furnished to sterilize all knives and tools used in slaughtering. Sufficient approved antiseptic shall be provided to prepare a solution of proper strength for disinfection of hands of butchers and other attendants.

All carcasses or parts of carcasses intended for human food, when handled for transportation or delivery, shall be completely wrapped or covered with a clean cloth or other sanitary material to prevent contamination from flies or filth of any kind.

Attention is called to the provisions of Section 467, Act No. 328, P. A. 1931: "Any person who shall feed to animals of ferals the flesh of animals which had become sick, or which has died from such cause, or offal or flesh that is putrid or unwholesome, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor."

For further information see or write George H. Ferguson, Harrisville.

IDAHO LUMBER

Logging and milling for 105 years, the Potlatch Forests, Inc., of Idaho, expects to be operating at least another century. The industry started in 1840 around the first mission of Rev. H. H. Spalding and Marcus Whitman in the Clearwater country. "The largest white pine sawmill in the world" turns out lumber at Lewiston with the help of 800 employees. Lumber in abundance is a great national asset contributing to the Nation's resources that stand behind War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Department

Masonic Lodge
Tawas City Masonic Lodge was organized January 10, 1872, with nine charter members.

TOWN AND FARM WOMEN BEATING CITY FOLKS AT FAT SAVING

Our government knows that city women have done an outstanding job saving used fats—but, now that you town and farm women have rolled up your sleeves, you are providing more used fats per kitchen than any other group in the U. S. Keep it up! 100,000,000 more pounds of used fats are needed this year to help make vital war supplies. Without your record savings, we'll never make that quota. Save every drop! Remember, it's the small amounts that fill the salvage can faster. Drippings, skimmings, scrapings, and fat scraps melted down. Your butcher will give you 2 red points and up to 4¢ a pound. If you have any difficulty, call your Home Demonstration or County Agent. Approved by WFA and OPA. Paid for by Industry.
