A pretty church wedding was sol-emnized last Saturday morning, January 4th at 9 o'clock when Irene Smyczynski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Smyczynski of Tawas City became the bride of Corporal James Schmidt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schmidt of Tawas City. The ceremony was performed at St. Joseph's church, East Tawas, before an altar decorated with poinsettias, Rev. Cronkit officiating, with the im-mediate families present.

The bride was attired in a winter white street length dress with black accessories and wore a corsage of white roses.

Miss Rosemary Klenow of Detroit acting as bridesmaid was dressed in a pink street length dress and wore orchids and mums. Miss Mary Ellen Benish was the soloist. The groom was attended by Clarence DeLosh of Alabaster. After the ceremony, a reception and family dinner was held at the brides home.

The couple will reside in Philadel-phia, where the groom is convales-cing in a Navy hospital in that city. Out of town guests for the wed-ding were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ruel and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Smy-czinski of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. An estimated crowd of from 1500 to 2000 winter sport fans enjoyed opening day last Sunday at Silver Valley. According to officials of the project, the attendance at the park last Sunday exceeded that of opening day last year.

Excellent skiing and toboggan-ning conditions prevailed, and the day's enjoyment would have been perfect, except for an accident. Three Saginaw boys attempted to run a toboggan down a ski slide. As a re-sult of the accident, Harry Schaper, age 15, suffered severe injuries when his toboggan got out of control and threw him against a tree. DISPLAY HISTORIC DOCUMENTS WASHINGTON .- Attorney General Tom Clark is hatching a unique plan for selling civil liberties to the American people. He will send a special train through the 48 states carrying some of the priceless treasures of American freedom.

It was Clark, working quietly behind the scenes, who had more than anyone else to do with organizing the president's special committee on civil liberties, which will study southern lynchings and race problems.

Accordingly he has evolved the idea of sending a special train across the United States containing the most sacred documents of American history which guarantee our freedom.

At first Clark proposed equipping two special cars with showcases which would display the Bill of Rights, the Declaration of Independence, the Emancipation Proclamation, the Constitution and so on.

However, he found that the Proclamation of Emancipation by which Lincoln freed the slaves was in the hands of Abraham Rosenbach of Philadelphia, famous collector of old manuscripts. Clark, therefore, called Rosenbach to tell him about his plan and ask for the loan of the proclamation.

Rosenbach agreed to cooperate, and suggested an entire train instead of two cars. He offered to help raise the extra money and, as a result, it now is planned to equip an entire special train with showcases in which will be displayed the most cherished documents of American history. Soldiers will guard the train, just as guards stand watch continually over these documents in the Library of Congress. In addition, as the train arrives at each state border, an extra car will be added displaying the historic documents and civil rights mementoes of the state.

Finally, Clark plans to have largesize duplicates of the freedom documents "blown-up" as permanent exhibits to be left behind in the high schools of each city through which the train passes.

Railroad Exhibit Is Visual Record Of Pioneer Days

WNU Features.

OMAHA, NEB.—The roaring, hectic days of the Old West are not dead-they still live in all their flamboyant glory in the Union Pacific's historical muse-um located in the company's headquarters building here.

Fascinating documents, maps, relics, weapons, furniture, books, household articles, farm implements, personal possessions and other mementos of the men and events which carved an empire out of a wilderness comprise a dramatic and graphic visual record of the struggles, tragedies and triumphs of the pioneer West.

Portray Progress.

Interwoven with the faded relics and ghosts of long-dead pioneers and heroes of the West are exhibits portraying the epic record in the building of the Union Pacific, which played an instrumental role in the westward expansion of the empire.

Shunning away from the musty and moldering atmosphere of the typical "museum idea," all the exhibits are designed to preserve all the color and adventure which prevailed in the pioneer days.

Since this valuable historical collection was opened to the public in 1939, approximately 200,000 visitors representing every state in the union and 41 foreign countries have registered at the museum.

NEW WAGE POLICY

A new policy line in preventing strikes was agreed on at a secret meeting of Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach and his top advisers. Hereafter, government mediation machinery will swing into action four to five months before union contracts expire in major industries, instead of waiting until union demands and strike threats are in the air.

It is felt that many serious work stoppages can be avoided if union demands are anticipated and negotiations begun well in advance of contract expirations.

First major industry on which the new policy will be tried will be the maritime, which faces another possible work stoppage in June. At that time, union contracts of seamen of the AFL and CIO on the west and east coasts expire.

TAXES FROM UTILITIES PAY EDUCATIONAL COSTS

From the taxes collected by the states, the counties and the municipalities comes the money that pays for our public school system. I do not have available the figures showing the number of students in the primary public schools of the nation, or the annual cost per student of maintaining those schools. For one state, California, I do have such figures, and one other figure that is of interest when applied to the maintenance of the primary schools of that state.

In California the average daily attendance of students in the primary schools, those embracing up to, and including, the sixth grade, is above 600,000. In 1944 the daily average was 630,648. For the same year the total cost of maintaining those primary schools, including all salaries and materials, but not the cost of construction of school plants, or any interest on bonds, amounting to $66,-859,494. The annual cost per student attending those primary schools was $105.99.

The money to pay those bills in California, as in all other states, comes from taxes, but who pays the taxes? One very large source of tax money is the utilities-the railroads, gas and electric companies, municipal transportation systems and others when they are privately owned. I do not know the total of such taxes collected in California. I do have the total of what the railroads pay as taxes to the state, counties and municipalities in the year 1945. That total was $13,475,805. Railroad taxes in the state, not including any paid to the federal government, was sufficient to provide primary education for one out of each five of the boys and girls attending the primary public schools in the state. If to that could be added the taxes paid by all the other privately owned utilities in the state the total certainly would be above one half the price paid for educating those primary school students.

What is true in California would, on a percentage basis, prove true in all other states. A very large part of the cost of educating our little Mary Jones and Bobby Browns is paid by the privately owned utilities. It is such utilities that a minority of our people are demanding be taken over and operated by the federal government. If that were done the federal government would pay no taxes to any state, county or municipality. We, the individuals of each state, would be forced to dig down into our jeans and provide those many millions for school funds, or compel the little folks to face the problems of life without an education. Taxes paid by the privately owned utilities, including the railroads, can, and very largely do, represent the difference between a literate or an illiterate nation. . . .

Another Christmas has passed into the limbo of years. How different from those of boyhood days in Iowa. Then my one most cherished present was an orange, always in the toe of a Christmas stocking, and the only one I saw during twelve months. Now I spend Christmas in the midst of oranges. They are growing all around me, and are as common as were apples of the long ago years. While they would be spurned as Christmas presents by children who live around my home, there are grandchildren in Minnesota and Canada who appreciate it when old Santa leaves, not one but a box, of the golden yellow fruit. As for my neighbor children, they consider apples as a holiday luxury. It is of such things that markets are made for all America.

There is a difference between a desire to have and an ambition to secure.

Since VE Day we have largely financed the relief extended by UNRRA in Europe. We fed, clothed and, in all probability, helped to rearm Russia and her newly acquired Balkan satellites. For pay we have had insults, bad names and every possible opposition to our plans for the rejuvenation of Europe. Now we have quit. Our state department has decreed no more American dollars for UNRRA. Again we are called "Uncle Shylock," as we were following World War I. It is time to say "no" to future cries for help.

THE STORY THUS FAR: The crew of a small sailing vessel in the Caribbean pick up Dick Jordan, adrift on a raft. He realizes that he is among men little better than pirates. They come upon a drifting schooner with only two people aboard, the de-menied captain and his daughter, Rose. Tucu and his pirates capture the schoon-er and search fruitlessly for the "treasure." Then Tucu goes away, because a storm is brewing. Dick swims to the schooner, arriving just in time to rescue Rose from two of the pirates. Captain Bedford recovers and they sail to an island. Dick discovers that Tucu and his crew are on the other side. They are battling a group of white men.

CHAPTER X

The Caribs were checked again by a volley of stones, and withdrew after that to a safe distance, while Burley and Tucu held a consultation.

Dick struggled to his feet, a little bewildered and uncertain what course to pursue. There were six white men, now that Pettigrew had been killed, and a dozen Caribs attacking them, an even disposition of forces, perhaps if they had been equally equipped for battle-for one white man could ordinarily handle two Caribs-but armed with pistols that their enemies lacked the black men had the advantage. They could pick off their enemies leisurely without running any risk from flying stones, and in the end conquer through their superior weapons.

"Captain Bedford may have pistols or rifles that Tucu overlooked," Dick reasoned. "With two or three we could rout the Caribs."

Animated by this thought, he turned and began scrambling down the rocks, scarring his hands and knees and nearly losing his balance once or twice through careless haste. Rose saw him coming, and waved to him; Dick gave no heed to her until he stood on the deck, hot, flushed, and panting:

"Captain Tucu's gang's on the other side of the island!" he announced abruptly.

Rose recoiled and turned deathly white, but Captain Bedford's face set in hard lines without a trace of fear in it. "Then we must get ready fur them," he said grimly. "Did they see ye?"

"No, but I saw them." The old skipper nodded. "Can ye shoot? "Yes, if I had anything to shoot with. Tucu disarmed me, and took every weapon off the schooner." "Did he?" The skipper's face was wreathed in a crafty smile. "I reckon now," he added a moment later, "he overlooked some of 'em."

Reinforcements Come From the Schooner

Leading the way into the cabin, with Dick and Rose eagerly following, he began prying up a section of the floor. After loosening a few boards he lifted out a small chest hidden underneath, which, when opened, disclosed a treasure more precious to Dick than the gold taken from the submarine. It consist-open stretch of flat sand. To cross this they had to expose their bodies Got away, did ye?"

Further conversation was interrupted by the unexpected barking of a gun far on their right. For a moment they thought a flanking party had crept up behind them; but almost simultaneously with the crash of the report there came a cry from the enemy. They saw a gi-gantic black man leap in the air and tumble face downward. "Black Burley!" exclaimed Dick.

"Who shot him?" asked one of the sailors, uneasily glancing in the direction of the shot. "Captain Bedford," smiled Dick.

"He's trying to flank them." The rest of the Caribs, with Tucu leading, had leaped from cover, and were making a run for their last refuge. "After them!" yelled Dick, springing over the breastwork. "Don't let Tucu escape."

Dick led the assaulting party, but Tucu had a big start. It looked for a time as if he would escape, and Dick hesitated between keeping up the race and stopping to shoot. Perhaps in either case he would have lost if Tucu's vengeful nature hadn't temporarily handicapped him. Hen Pettigrew lay directly in his path, where he had been left by the Caribs for dead; but Hen had as many lives as a cat, and despite the fact that he carried three bullets in his body he was a long way from being dead. He sat up and began struggling feebly to get on his feet. He was not aware of Tucu's presence until the latter stopped suddenly in his steps. The sight of one of his enemies escaping when he could kill him was too much of a strain on Tucu's nature. He decided to linger long enough to put Hen out of the game. With a malevolent glint in his eyes, he leered at the half-dazed man, and said:

"I reckon y'don't need to get up." He could have shot him on the run, but he wanted to make sure this time. He brought his gun close to Hen's head, thrusting it viciously between his eyes so he could stare his fate directly in the face. It was a brutal, bloodthirsty act, and for a moment Hen recoiled. "Damn ye, take that!" grunted

Recent visits to the market have convinced me that most education about meat cookery was forgotten during rationing CHUCK and shortages. ROAST Most of us worked ourselves into a sort of a rut about meats and now find that we need a brushup course on meat cookery. Meat should satisfy and to do so t must be properly prepared. If broiling is what the cut needs, make sure your temperature is high enough to do the job decently. But if it's braising, make sure the heat is slow and steady and the cooking moist. Here are a few of the things you ought to remember when buying meat: First of all, become acquainted with a variety of cuts so that you can better manage your budget and give the family muchneeded menu variety. Ask the market man for advice. He can give you tips on specials and help you get more for your money. If you have meats boned at the market, always ask for the bones to take home. They're wonderful for flavoring soups, sauces and vegetables. When you purchase large cuts, have some steaks or chops removed for another meal. There won't be so many leftovers, and you will be able to get more variety from the large cuts.

A well prepared beef or veal tongue is delightful. Those who have learned to eat it reserve it for special occasions. Long slow cooking such as is received in braising is designated for preparing this delectable dish.

Braised Tongue, Vegetable Gravy. (Serves 12)

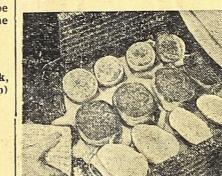

1 4-pound tongue, fresh

2 teaspoons salt 1/2 cup diced onions 1 cup diced carrots 3/4 cup diced celery 3 tablespoons flour 11/2 cups liquid in which tongue was cooked 1 teaspoon salt

1/4 teaspoon pepper

Wash tongue and cover with wa-ter. Add salt, cover and simmer until tender, allowing 4 hours. Trim and remove skin. Slice tongue and place in pan with vegetables. Make a smooth paste of flour and water, adding liquid and seasonings. Pour sauce over tongue and vegetables. Simmer for 1 hour. Serve with potatoes boiled in their jackets.

An interesting variation to the meat course comes in the way of lamb en brochette, pieces of inex-pensive meat placed on skewers. These are broiled and go beautifully with a dinner of baked, whipped potatoes, buttered lima beans, a vegetable salad and fruit whip for dessert.

"We could clean 'em up alone, but mebbe it would be better to get down to the sailors, an' let 'em have some sort of fun. Reckon they'd enjoy it," grinned the captain.

"Yes," nodded Dick, "we must have nearly enough guns for all. We must hurry.

They started up the companion, but when they climbed over the side of the schooner to get ashore Rose suddenly protested.

"Aren't you going to help me ashore, Dick?"

"No," he replied gravely, "you must stay on the Betty. We'll come back to you."

She sniffed and tossed her head in the air. "If Father's going I'm going too," she answered.

Dick started to protest further, but Captain Bedford nudged him. "No use arguin'," he whispered. "I've spoilt her. She always has her way.'

With a smile she acknowledged this doubtful compliment, and climbed down to the mass of wreckage.

When they reached the summit of the cliff, the situation below was not changed. The Caribs were still at a safe distance, shooting occasionally at the breastwork behind which the white men were crouched. Their bullets went wide of the mark, which induced Captain Bedford to remark, "Ye can't never teach a Carib to shoot straight. Tain't born in 'em. Reckon we'll show 'em how to do it."

Dick had been scanning the rocks below with a careful estimate of the danger ahead. The shipwrecked of the beach, and it was possible to get within a hundred feet of them without exposing their bodies by following closely a ridge of outcropping boulders. When he indicated this to Captain Bedford, the old skipper nodded, and waited for him to lead.

Once more Dick urged Rose to remain behind, but she stubbornly shook her head and prepared to fol-

The Automatics

Turn the Tide Dick nodded, and then vaulted the low ridge of rocks, and, crouching low, made a break across the open space. His sudden appearance was the signal for a volley of shots from the Caribs, but in anticipation of this he dodged and ducked so erratically that the bullets buried themselves in the sand at a safe distance on either side. The sailors, forewarned, made no hostile demonstration, but watched him with gaping mouths and wide-open eyes. When he finally landed plump in their midst, they stretched forth arms to receive him. Recovering his breath, Dick said: "Now give them hell! Shoot to kill!"

The sight of the guns he began passing around brought grins of delight to the haggard faces.

"I haven't enough for all," Dick added. "So be careful. Who among you are the best shots?" "I've killed a man at a hundred feet," replied a burly seaman, taking a gun, "an' my mate's nearly as good. Give him one."

The other two were handed to men who declared they were good shots, and were anxious to try their skill on the Caribs. Dick took charge and directed the shooting.

"They're cowards, and will run the moment we shoot," he said. "They don't know we're armed. So make the best of our chance. Sinmen had reached the upper part gle out our men, and shoot together.'

He counted two and then raised a hand as a signal. Four vicious bullets sped toward their marks, and before they were well on their way others were following them. The automatics barked so continuously that half the Caribs were down before the others could duck for shelter. The sailors wanted to break cover and charge, but Dick restrained

Dick had taken advantage of his hesitation and shot at the hand holding the gun to Hen's face, pausing to aim carefully and deliberately to make sure he did not miss. With a snarl and curse, the halfbreed grasped his wounded wrist in his free hand, and seeing that escape was impossible he turned upon Dick like an enraged animal. All the venom of his nature flared up in his eyes.

Dick could have shot easily, but he hesitated. The man was wounded and unarmed, his gun having fallen to the ground. He could not shoot Tucu even when he had him der?" whined the half-breed.

Tucu's shifty eyes seemed to lose their fire, and Dick noticed that the limp arm was bleeding freely. "I'll help you," he added, kicking the man's gun away to a safe distance. "That arm must be broken."

Although in the act of kicking Tucu's gun away, he showed that he didn't trust the outlaw, Dick was careless in another respect. He thrust his own gun in his pocket. The halfbreed noticed the action and almost immediately his whole attitude changed. A murderous gleam flashed in his eyes.

With his left hand he jerked an ugly knife from his belt and made a lunge at Dick. The attack was so sudden and unexpected that there was no time for counter action. Dick had barely time to catch the uplifted arm and save himself from almost instant death. With a growl of rage that his ruse had failed, the half-breed struggled to release his arm for another blow; but Dick flung himself upon the outlaw, grasping the arm with one hand and the knife with the other. Although wounded, and one arm helpless, Tucu, who was a giant in strength, fought ferociously, succeeding finally in hurling his enemy from him through sheer muscular superiority. (TO BE CONTINUES

LYNN SAYS: Cook Meats Correctly For Palatability

If you are making hamburgers, remember that loosely put together patties will be much more tender than those which are patted tightly. If hamburgers contain only beef they may be cooked rare; if they have any pork in them, cook them well done.

Canned meats and ready-to-eat meats are a supper saver. They may be pan-fried or broiled for added relish.

A broiler dinner prepared in few minutes consists of tomatoes, lamb patties and boiled potatoes sprinkled with cheese.

> Lamb en Brochette. (Serves 6)

2 pounds lamb shoulder, cut in 1-inch cubes 1 cup vinegar 1 teaspoon celery salt 1 tablespoon mustard 1 tablespoon brown sugar

1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning Salt and pepper

Cover lamb with vinegar, seasoned with celery salt, mustard, brown sugar and poultry seasoning. Let stand 1 hour. Thread onto skewers and place on a rack in a preheated broiler oven. Brown well on all sides and broil. Season with salt and pepper.

For something a little different, try this stuffed shoulder of lamb:

Fruit-Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb.

1 lamb shoulder, boned 2 cups bread crumbs 6 cooked apricots, diced 6 cooked prunes, diced 1 small orange, chopped 1 beaten egg Salt and pepper

Have butcher remove bone from lamb shoulder and sew it on three sides, leaving the fourth open for dressing. Make a dressing of the bread crumbs, fruits and beaten egg. Pile this into cavity. Skewer or sew the edges together. Place the lamb shoulder on a rack in an open roasting pan and roast in a 300-degree oven, allowing 30 to 35 minutes to the pound.

Never throw away shank ends of ham or bones from the roast. Use these for making soup, a cupful of which is very good for dinner beginners on cool nights. Broth made from these may also be used for gravies and sauces.

Never throw out meat leftovers. They may be combined with gravy bread crumbs, noodles or rice and used for stuffing green peppers.

Bacon leftover from breakfast is too good to discard. Break it into bits and pieces and use for flavoring the dinner vegetable, soup or salad.
