State Veteran's Affairs Men Attend Tuesday Meeting

Iosco County Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, has purchased the Bayvue Apartments and Jack Spratt Grill on Lake Street from Frank Barrett. The transaction was completed at a regular meeting of the post Tuesday evening. The decision to purchase this fine property received the unanimous vote of the members.

Among those in attendance at the meeting Tuesday evening were R. W. Harms of Lansing, field service man of the office of Veterans Affairs and Ira Hart of Odin, Michigan, field service officer of Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"A series of entertainment, will be started in the immediate future to help defray expenses in securing our new home," Harry Morley, commander of the post, stated Thursday.

"The patronage of the people of Iosco county will be appreciated. In the purchase of this property we have secured a very fine home for our post, suitable for the requirements of our large and growing membership.

"A motion was made and carried that a Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars be immediately organized for the post. Further details will be announced next week.

"All veterans eligible to membership in the Veterans of Foreign Wars are urged to join us and help us make this undertaking a success," Commander Morley said. Organized in February of last year, the Iosco County Post now has a membership of over 80 members from all sections of the county. The officers are: Harry Morley, post commander; Ernest Cuny, senior vice commander; Kenneth Schuster, junior vice commander; Donald Gould, quartermaster; Wilbur C. Roach, Jr., adjutant; Al Weisler, chaplain; James Frank, officer of the day.

Reaffirm Road Commissioner Decision

At the January session of the Board of Supervisors which ended last Thursday, the board reaffirmed its decision to appoint members of the Board of County Road Commissioners.

A delegation of citizens appeared before the board and asked for a reconsideration of the matter, but a large majority of the board members maintained that appointment of members of the Board of County Road Commissioners would bring this department in closer relationship with county government. The resolution to appoint road commissioners was adopted at the June session last year.

Compensation for Board of County Road Commission members was raised to $6.00 per day while attending meetings and acting on road commission business.

Supervisors Fred Brabant of Tawas City and Bert Stickney of Oscoda were named delegates to attend a meeting of the State Association of Supervisors which will be held January 28 to 30.

Flint Man Arraigned On Lottery Charges

Frank Craven of Flint was arraigned Monday before Justice H. E. Friedman charged with the distribution and operation of money bearing punch boards. Craven was bound over to circuit court.

The action followed a raid made several weeks ago by Sheriff John Moran in which a number of money punch boards were picked up in several business places in the community. It is alleged that the illegal boards had been placed in at least one business place by Craven.

Elks Defeat Hale in 21 to 20 Game

Tawas City Team Will Play at Oscoda Tonight (Friday)

Before a jam packed gym Friday night the Tawas City Elks defeated Hale, to the tune of 21 to 20 in an exciting photo-finish contest. In the last minute of the game Gingerich, forward for Tawas, sped through the Hale defense and dropped in the basket for two big points. The score before that point had been 20-19, in Hale's favor.

Tawas City's big guns in scoring, Westcott who sank 30 points in the two previous games and Gingerich, Tawas City's other high scorer were held to a minimum, with Westcott collecting five points and Gingerich six. Jim Lansky was the Elks high scorer with seven tallies. Shellenbarger led the Hale squad with eight points.

The first quarter started off as though Coach Defibaugh's team would have a easy time of it with an 8 to 2 lead at the quarter. But then Hale came to life and came within a point of tying the score of 12-11 at the half.

In the third quarter, amid fouls galore, Hale jumped the gun to a 15 to 14 lead. In the last quarter it looked as though Hale had beaten the Elks, but in the last minute of play, Gingerich flipped one through the nets for a one point lead. Hale rushed back down the floor shooting furiously, but to no avail, with the game ending, Elks 21, Eagles 20.

The Elks reserve squad again broke away and defeated Hale 20 to 15. Bruce Myles set the pace for the Elks reserves with eight points, while Streeter and Brandall shared Hale's high scoring honors with four points each.

The second team girls won from the Hale girls 18 to 7, with Elizabeth Westcott taking top scoring honors with nine markers, while Beane collected all of Hale's seven points.

Play at Oscoda Friday
 Tonight (Friday) the team will travel to Oscoda where they will be entertained for three games. Check this date off on your list and make it a point to accompany the team.

Independents Win 3, Lose 1 Over Week-End

Local Team Plays at Harrisville and West Branch Here

In four Independent basketball games over last week-end, the Tawas Indies teams came out on top in three of the contest, one team winning from Harrisville 46 to 30, and from West Branch 46 to 40. The first team didn't fare so well, losing to West Branch 64 to 40 and taking one from Harrisville, 48 to 41.

With only eleven men the Indies journeyed to Harrisville and there, took both ends of a twin bill. Musolf and Dubovsky sharing scoring honors for the Indies with Musolf scoring 15 points in the first and 10 in the second game; while Dubovsky meshed 15 markers in the final game. Cuyler led the Harrisville team with 17 points.

Both games were of the knock-down, drag-out type, with Bejesky, Souci, Dubovsky and Musolf leaving via the foul route. In both games, Tawas came from behind in the last half to win, scoring 19 points in the final quarter of the first game and 18 in the final game.

In Sunday's twin bill at the Tawas City gym, the Tawas Indies nosed out the West Branch squad in the first game 44 to 42, coming from behind in the final stanza to score nine field goals and one foul shot, to West Branch's four field goals and two foul shots. R. Bublitz played another fine game at guard, on defense and also took high scoring honors with 12 points. Doyle, West Branch forward paced the losers with 18 points.

In the main event, the superior height of the West Branch team told, with Tawas coming out on the short end of a 64 to 40 score. Six foot, four inch John Thursty led the Oil City squad with 27 points, followed by Bill Van Vleck with 16 markers. B. Haglund meshed 11 points for the locals.

Tawas Industries to Start Plastic Division

(An assembly line is being arranged in the Case Building for the production of plastic florist boxes, Elmer Werth, manager of Tawas Industries, Inc., announced yesterday.

The company has a contract to produce 100,000 boxes from this new material which is rapidly replacing metals and wood in many articles now manufactured.

Two assembly lines are now in operation at the company's plant in the Case Building producing AC oil filters for the automotive industry. A plant is being established in East Tawas by this organization for the production of plastic parts for industry. The present installation includes a large hydraulic press just completed.

Bronson Garage Damaged by Gas Fire
 The Arnold Bronson Garage in this city was quite badly damaged by fire last Monday afternoon from exploding gasoline fumes.

The accident occurred while Fred Bublitz, a mechanic at the garage was draining a car. He was under the car when the explosion filled the room with flames. Elwood Bronson was also working in the room. Both escaped with only the loss of some hair and eyelashes.

The fire department was quickly on the scene, but owing to the nature of the fire, considerable damage was done to the building and contents before the flames could be extinguished.

IT'S ABOUT TIME

Delays Sometimes Harrowing, But Old Wrongs Finally Healed

WNU Features.

Time heals all wrongs. If you're inclined to doubt that old adage, read these:

Elmer L. Nolte now can call himself officially a graduate of Lewis-town, Pa., high school. Unofficially, he has been a graduate since 1889. The school board finally decided that Nolte should be given the diploma he didn't get when the great June flood of 1889 halted graduation exercises.

The school of agriculture at Pennsylvania State college received a letter from a farmer who requested the second of a series of lessons for which he had enrolled. After a harrowing investigation, extension service workers learned that the student had signed up for the course in 1908.

In 1916 George W. Austin quit high school in Stamford, Conn., and went into business. Recently he decided to obtain his high school diploma. Returning to the school for a week, Austin successfully passed examinations in history, science and social studies, and was awarded the certificate—30 years late.

Smiling sweetly, a 94-year-old woman told Frank McAuliffe, jewelry salesman in a San Francisco store:

"I'd like to pick up that silver gravy boat I left here to be cleaned. My sister said she'd be angry with me if I didn't get it pretty soon."

McAuliffe inquired: "When did you leave it? Several weeks ago?" "Oh, my no—in 1902." McAuliffe found it too—in the basement.

At New Rochelle, N. Y., an elderly woman boarded a New Haven train.

"I didn't buy it today," she told the conductor as she handed him her ticket. He looked at the ticket and blinked. It was dated September, 1898.

The passenger made her trip though. There was no time limit on such tickets back in those days.

George Cain, 77-year-old resident of Brisbane, Australia, recently was awarded a medal which he won fighting for the British army 56 years ago. In September, 1890, Cain was one of the five survivors of an expedition into Rhodesia. It took the London war office 35 years to decide on the award and another 21 years to locate Cain and deliver the decoration to him.

Back in 1930, Charles B. Borell of Champlain, N. Y., then an employee of the U. S. Immigration service, was ordered to proceed from Belfast, Ireland, to New York. He sent his household goods ahead by freighter. It was only a few months ago that congress finally got around to authorizing payment of $163.20 to Borell for the shipping charges. His claim had been held up for 16 years because he failed to route the goods on an American vessel.

SHIFT OF COMMANDERS

WASHINGTON.—Inside fact about the shift of U. S. commanders in Germany is that the stage was set for the change shortly after Lt. Gen. Lucius D. Clay visited the National Association of Manufacturers in New York.

Shortly before that, the senate war investigating committee's chief counsel, George Meader, had come back from Germany with a preliminary report highly critical of what went on in the U. S. occupation zone.

General Clay, then in the United States, was upset by this report and talked to Secretary of State Byrnes about resigning. He felt that Gen. Joseph McNarney, top commander of U. S. troops in Germany, was the man really responsible, although he, Clay, as head of the military government for Germany, got the blame.

On top of the unfavorable Meader report, General Clay addressed a meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers and afterwards sat down at an off-the-record meeting of NAM leaders including some of the top moguls of American industry. Their solution for the future of Germany was simple. They told Clay that they should be permitted to get in touch with their opposite numbers in German industry—the big industrialists who helped build up Hitler's war machine.

If allowed to do business with the German cartels, the U. S. industrialists told Clay, they would have Germany back on its feet in no time.

This shocked General Clay. He said he would retire from the army immediately if any such deal was carried out. He warned that the German people did not believe in or understand free enterprise and that Germany could only continue under strong government controls.

CAPITAL CHAFF

The RFC apparently thinks that the Germans are a better risk than veterans' housing. It will advance about 3 billion dollars to rebuild Germany during the next three years, but was afraid of losing money on Wilson Wyatt's prefabricated housing for veterans. . . . Wyatt, ex-mayor of Louisville, passed out golden keys to the city of Louisville to guests he invited to a farewell party. . . . No wonder John L. Lewis is hard luck for labor. He's the "13th" vice president of the A. F. of L.

AIRLINE DYNAMITE

The dynamite now exploding inside Trans World Airlines between Jack Frye, its president, and Howard Hughes, its chief stockholder, has caused members of the civil aeronautics board to begin some careful probing of the aviation industry. Their probe indicates that things aren't going anywhere nearly as well as the airline ballyhoo indicates.

Among other things, six companies operated in the red during the first nine months of 1946—TWA, Colonial, Chicago and Southern, Northeastern, Pennsylvania-Central and Western.

Furthermore, the airlines have over-ordered new planes to such an extent that they will never be able to use more than a fraction of the planes supposed to be delivered.

PACIFIC MERRY-GO-ROUND

Best way to gain popularity in the Far East today is to take along a supply of Roosevelt dimes. Congressional travelers returned from China and the Pacific islands report that these were the most welcome gifts they could make to native dignitaries. . . . First general election in history of the Truk island group in the Pacific was held in January. Island chieftains and officials for the entire group were chosen. Heretofore these offices have been hereditary. . . . Among the voters were many who have lived under Spanish, German and Japanese control. This was their first election.

SCHOOLS NEED TYPEWRITERS

Schools and colleges may come ahead of veterans in getting surplus war property for educational uses, according to a plan now under consideration at the White House. At present veterans get first crack at typewriters, adding machines and all other types of equipment—and when the vets are through there isn't much left for the states, schools and colleges. This problem recently was placed before the President by ex-Sen. Joseph Rosier of West Virginia.

Arduous Walk Fails To Halt Man of 92

MOBILE, ALA.—Although 92 years old, George (Dad) Howe is still sprightly after completing a two-month, 504-mile walking trip from Savannah, Ga., to Mobile. His eventual goal is Los Angeles, which he hopes to reach on September 21, his next birthday anniversary.

"California Bound" is the legend on the little wagon which Howe pulls. His home is an army pup tent, and he says he has slept under a roof only five times since leaving Savannah.

He also carries equipment to permit cooking his own meals.

Howe has a two-fold purpose in undertaking the long journey to the coast: To see if a man his age can stand the walking and to visit a grand nephew in Los Angeles.

Cowboy Now Rides Herd on Fur Coats

BERWICK, ME.—A former Colorado cowboy now is riding herd to 100 tiny, scampering chinchillas valued at about $1,000 each.

Clifford H. Wilson currently does his branding on the right ear of the little creatures, whose pelts make desirable fur coats.

With a pair of chinchillas imported from South America, Wilson and his wife started their chinchilla ranch here three years ago. By careful breeding methods, they have increased their herd to more than 100 animals. Several pairs have gone to begin other ranches.

The chinchillas thrive on dried grasses, berries and nuts. Goat's milk agrees with them so well that Wilson has bought a dozen goats.

SQUIRTS FOR LITTLE DITTOS . . . Two Chinese youngsters, riding in a wheelbarrow, are sprayed with DDT as the U. S. army sprays an entire village near Shanghai as a means of combating malaria.

Paralyzed Woman Cooks from Bed

RIVERSIDE, R. I.—Although partly paralyzed and bedridden, Mrs. Elizabeth Doyle, 74, runs a house and does all her cooking from her bed.

Part of the secret is strings. They run from her bed to the door latches, the fan plugs and radio dial. A small electric stove is at her side while a nearby table and cloth bag slung to it contain food and the necessary ingredients for cooking plus all the odds and ends a housewife needs.

Bane Lots of Johnsons In Northwest, By Golly

ST. PAUL, MINN.—The Jones boys are unusual in the Northwest, Veterans' administration officials decided after finding only 1,600 of that clan listed on their records.

They are far outclassed by 9,680 Johnsons and 5,600 Andersons. The Petersons and Smiths number 3,300 each.

'Stuffed' Owl Hoots And Empties Tavern

CHICAGO.—To give a little life to the collection of stuffed birds which adorn the walls of James Kromar's tavern, a regular customer presented the proprietor a live owl.

Kromar placed the bird atop the cash register, the owl sitting almost motionless among the specimens of the taxidermist's art. Most of the customers were unaware that the bird was alive. But when the owl began to blink and hoot, many of the patrons made a hurried exit.

People Are Honest, Blind Man Testifies

DENVER.—A man approached Melvin Wasson, blind operator of the news stand in Denver postoffice, and said: "Here, I owe you four dollars." The man explained that he had given Wasson a dollar bill the night before and said it was a five "because I was short and needed the money to tide me over."

Wasson, telling the story, grinned and said: "If you give people credit for being honest the chances are 100-to-1 they will be."

JUST A TRICK . . . The top part of this building isn't in the process of being blown off by a North Dakota windstorm. It's just a photographer's way of showing approximately how venerable Old Main, oldest college building on University of North Dakota campus, looked before top stories of the structure were removed in 1924. A new $365,000 administration building is scheduled to replace Old Main.

Oft Condemned College Building Finally Doomed

GRAND FORKS, N. D.—Oldest college building in North Dakota, Old Main on the University of North Dakota campus probably is going on the last of its cat-like lives.

Condemned by building inspectors and fire marshals repeatedly for the past 25 years, the building has managed to survive through constant patching and face-lifting—mainly because the university has no other place to house its administrative offices.

Upper stories of the venerable structure were removed in 1924, and alumni at homecoming held a "wake" for the structure that year, which they thought would be its last.

"The building is deemed unfit for students, but the faculty will be kept there," the Dakota Student, campus newspaper, wrote at that time.

But now, the end really is in sight. The state board of higher education has approved plans for a $365,000 new administration building and a legislative appropriation for that amount will be sought at this winter's session. The administration building is part of a $1,386,000 special building program sought by the university to meet space needs accelerated by a record 2,683 enrollment at the school this year.

Swallowed Token Accepted as Fare

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—A token in the stomach is as good as one in the fare box, according to a ruling of Dispatcher "Peck" Wurster.

The case of a woman who swallowed her token came before Wurster when she disputed the driver's right to collect another fare. The passenger told Wurster that while boarding a bus she put the token between her lips so she could adjust several packages she was carrying. She said the driver greeted "good morning," and then there was a "gulp."

Wurster ruled: "Positively no additional fare required."

Food Really 'Banked' In Tennessee Store

MEMPHIS, TENN.—A Memphis "food bank" for storage of frozen food is operating like an actual bank under supervision of the Tennessee banking department.

The store, which has signs reading "your food bank," had to comply with state banking regulations in order to use the word "bank." Accordingly, it has bonded "tellers" who receive or disburse the customer's food. Customers aren't admitted to the food vaults, but are given statements of their food balance.

Accounts of each customer's food supply are tabulated the same as in a bank.

Wifely Poke in Eye Improves His Sight

GREENSBORO, N. C.—Charles H. Doggett's wife struck him lightly in the eye during a friendly frolic—and now he can see much better. Doctors told him that the blow displaced a cataract from which he had suffered for five years, causing it to drop into the corner of his eye. Doggett doesn't recommend the treatment, however, averring "it might not work next time."

"Off We Go" AVIATION NOTES

BUG AIR BLITZ While the army and navy air forces are going all-out to prepare for stratospheric warfare, another government department is working this winter for a full scale aerial offensive next summer—against a foe over which the United Nations has no control.

The bureau of entomology and plant quarantine of the department of agriculture is mobilizing its own air force for the greatest attack in its history on such crop and forest destroying insects as the Japanese beetle, gypsy moth, white fringe beetle, pink bollworm, spruce bud work and the lowly but greedy spittle bug.

Damage to crops and woodlands from the insects is estimated by agriculture specialists at between three and five billion dollars annually.

Planes operated in the bug blitz bear scant resemblance to the sleek modern machines of aerial warfare. Some are as old as 15 years, and their worth is measured in terms of their ability to fly slowly and at low altitudes.

The department will put into the air its own air force of at least 15 planes, augmented by any number of planes chartered locally. Practically every private airport of reasonable size in the country is equipping at least one airplane with spray apparatus.

Department experts contend that experiences last year proved that one plane can spray 1,000 acres in one day, while to cover that same area with ground equipment would require 70 men with seven machines five weeks.

INEXPENSIVE LIGHTING

Small airports can be lighted for night flying at a cost of about $2,600, Civil Aeronautics administration reports on the basis of an experimental installation at Lafayette, Ind., now undergoing tests. Results at Aretz airport show that the lights identify the airport for a pilot flying at 1,000 feet from a distance of 15 to 18 miles, and in an exceptional case the lights have been seen from 30 miles away. Operating cost for current averages about 15 cents an hour.

PEOPLE WANT ABOLISHMENT OF USELESS FEDERAL JOBS

IT WAS AN ACCIDENTAL gathering of a small group, all fellow townsmen. The conversation, as usual, turned to politics, the state of the nation and what could be expected from Republican control of the legislative branch of the government.

"What congress should do first is cut government expenses," said a merchant. "Fire a million or more bureaucrats, and give us a chance to get going again."

"Right you are, up to a point," said a local politician. "We should turn the bureaucrats out, but not abolish the jobs. We will need those jobs as rewards for party workers if we are to build and maintain an effective political organization. We cannot expect party workers to give their time and effort without some sort of compensation, and that means jobs for those who want jobs, or for their relatives and friends. With more than 200,000 federal jobs in this state filled by Republicans, we could reward practically all the party workers, and have a party organization that would insure our continued success. Yes, turn the bureaucrats out, but do not abolish the jobs. Fill them with men and women who have demonstrated their party loyalty."

It is of such ideas that political machines, either Republican or Democratic, are made. The uproar on the part of that small group of local townsmen at the bald statement of a local politician was evidence that such methods are not approved by the majority of American citizens. They were, aside from the politician, a unit for abolishing every needless job as well as firing the bureaucrats. There was no sentiment for keeping the jobs as a pay-off for party workers.

The Republican party has men capable of real leadership and statesmanship. It also has a full share of "peanuts." If the "peanuts" are a majority and dominate party policies, rather than providing the statesmanship that will get us out of the muddle we are in, the party will lose the opportunity the voters have given it.

It is statesmanship, not partisan politics, not the paying of political debts, that the majority of the American people, who voted the Republican party into power, are demanding in payment for their votes. That little impromptu town session represented a fair cross-section of the nation, as much as would a Gallup poll.

IN FULL PRODUCTION FOR QUIZ PROGRAMS

"How now?" we asked the Man Who Built a Better Mousetrap. "What's the situation?" "Everything's going good," he replied. "We're in full production."

"Stuff getting through to the American homes at last, eh?" we said.

"Oh, no," said the Man Who Built a Better Mousetrap. "Nothing's getting through to the American home. Nothing at all."

"Where is the stuff going?" we asked.

"Radio programs," said the M. W. B. A. B. M. "We're just like most industries, we don't expect to get much through to the customers for a couple of years. The radio programs take everything we can turn out."

"Don't tell me that mousetraps, too, are among the prizes on radio programs."

"Why not? The radio people don't tell the winners they're mousetraps necessarily. They say they're a new ash tray imported from France, or a novelty air purifier or an electric lighter or Swiss book ends. Of course, if a master of ceremonies on a radio program sees a contestant who doesn't look very bright he may admit it's just a mousetrap but tells the radio audience it can be applied to a stiff shoulder as a poultice."

"The quiz program has been a great thing for industry," we suggested. "In the old days a slump could not be cushioned by merely getting a lot of people into a studio and seeing if they knew the name of the bridge Steve Brodie jumped from."

"It must have been tough," sighed the Mousetrap Builder. "Fancy being in the manufacturing business and not be able to supply prizes for the Queen For a Day program!"

"One thing is not clear," we said. "Isn't there a terrific public demand for most everything manufacturers produce today?"

"Oh yes."

"Then, why do the manufacturers deluge quiz programs with millions of dollars worth of products hourly?"

The Man Who Built a Better Mousetrap regarded us sternly. "So you'd get stuffed to the consumer and not to all those people who turn up on radio programs and tell what Washington's first name was!" he said, abruptly leaving us.

Presidential Campaign And Television

More bad news!

The candidates and orators in the 948 presidential campaign are coming to us by television!

The long-suffering public is going to get not only alarming speeches at alarming faces!

Just as election campaigns were first broadcast in the Hoover era, the first big-time television performance will be put on during the next Presidential campaign.

Candidates should be heard but not screened. Only one in a million has a face that an interior decorator would call essential. Under simple radio, there was always the comforting thought a candidate might not look as bad as he sounded. Under television he can be guilty on both counts.

We predict right now that television will cancel out the women's vote. It took 150 years for them to get the ballot. Under television they may give it back.

The only candidate with a chance may be the fellow who makes the women voters remark not "Sound, isn't he?" but "ah-h-h! What a hunk of man!"

"The situation in the Democratic party is not hopeless if new blood is infused."—Jim Farley. This is the first time anybody has classified its plight so desperate as to call for transfusion.

QUICK MAIL SERVICE BY HELICOPTER . . . Helicopter mail service on an experimental basis is started in Brooklyn as the postoffice department supervises the landing of this helicopter mail service plane called "Hat" in an empty lot. Future plans of the postoffice department call for extensive development and use of helicopter mail service.

REBUILDING GOETHE'S BIRTHPLACE . . . Bombs are no respecters of shrines any more than they are of people, and one of the historic victims of the Allies' bombs was the birthplace of Johann Wolfgang Goethe, Germany's foremost poet and philosopher, at Frankfort on the Main. Photos show the shrine before the bombs fell, and the present condition of Goethe's birthplace as work is being started to rebuild this historical landmark.

YOUNGEST PRODIGY . . . Doris Webster, 6, Fredericksburg, Va., recently gave an amazing performance of Mozart's Concerto in A Major in Washington. There is nothing "prima donna" about her. She regards her genius at the piano in about the same manner as she would superiority at ticktacktoe. She skips rope, plays with dolls and makes errors in arithmetic—and gets her face dirty—a normal girl in every way.

NEW SECRETARY OF STATE . . . Following the resignation of James F. Byrnes, 68, as secretary of state, President Truman nominated General of the Army George C. Marshall, 67, as his successor. JESUS CROSSES RACIAL BOUNDARIES

LESSON TEXT—John 4:4-10, 27-30, 39-42. MEMORY SELECTION—Whoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst.—John 4:14.

Racial and social prejudice divide mankind, although they are really one family by the creation of God. Speaking a thousand or more tongues and countless dialects; living in separated areas; suffering under or priding themselves in (as the case may be) a certain social order, and disagreeing even about the things of God, they manage to build up formidable barriers between their various groups.

The Word of God by both precept and practical example teaches just the opposite.

I. Barriers Broken (vv. 4-9).

Contrast the woman of Samaria with Nicodemus, whose coming to Christ we studied last week. He was rich; she was poor. He was a Jew; she was of the mixed race of Samaritans. He was a man of character and high position; she was immoral and uneducated. He sought Jesus; Jesus sought her.

In doing so, he cut straight across the barriers of race, tradition, social position, education, everything. He was interested in her soul's salvation and nothing could stand in his way. We would do well to follow his example.

Every Christian is by his very calling a soul-winner. We dare not delegate this responsibility to the pastor or missionary. As soul-winners we are vitally interested in our Lord's approach to this woman who was far from God, apparently hopelessly involved in sinful associations, a citizen of a hostile nation and an adherent of another religious faith.

By asking a favor of her, Christ tactfully placed himself (as does any petitioner), for the moment, on her own plane. He was not a distant, learned religious leader deigning to cast a bit of religious philosophy to her. He was a tired, thirsty man asking for a drink of water.

But he was more! He was the gracious Son of God, declaring to her that he was ready to give to her the water of life.

II. Problems Solved (vv. 9, 10, 27-30).

The first problem this poor woman had to face was her sin problem. Is not that true of all of us?

She first tried to avoid it by raising the race problem, and the reply of Jesus told her of the water of life. Her quick desire to escape the drudgery of carrying water, gave him opportunity to face her with her sin. She could never find peace and joy until there was a frank and open facing of sin in her life.

Let us make no mistake at this point, for the moral law of God is the same now as it was on that far-off day when Jesus brought the woman of Samaria face to face with her own sin.

Possibly in an effort to evade her moral problem by theological discussion (a common practice in our day, too!), and partly because of her ignorance of true worship, she asked a question about a controversial matter relating to outward ceremony. Is it not a singular thing how men who know nothing of spiritual life delight in the propagation and defense of organizations and in the conduct of outward religious exercises?

True worship is revealed (v. 23) as being first "in spirit." We do not cast aside all external helps to worship, but real worship goes through and beyond both place and symbol to real soul communion with God, second, "in truth."

The disciples were wise enough not to interfere with what Jesus was doing (personal workers take note!), and it was not long before the woman saw Jesus as the Christ! Observe how quickly she went to tell others.

III. Salvation Declared (vv. 39-42).

Jesus honors this poor fallen woman by making to her his first declaration of himself as the Messiah (vv. 26, 27). He is the high and exalted One, but he is at the same time the friend of sinners. To Nicodemus, the learned ruler of the Jews, he spoke of the new birth. To the poor woman of Samaria he declared his Messiahship. He is no respecter of persons, and neither are those who truly follow him.

Those whom the woman brought to Jesus saw and heard for themselves, and many of them believed. Personal testimony is a wonderful thing, but the ultimate purpose of such witness is to get men to come by faith into the presence of the Lord Jesus himself.

A personal experience with Christ leads to real assurance; without which there can be no spiritual growth or usefulness.

May many who read these words, and who have so often heard and read about Jesus, come to him today so that they may say: "Now we believe . . . for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world!" (v. 42).

Honored Weaver

Few artists have been honored during their lifetime as was Norway's celebrated weaver, Frida Hansen (1853-1927). After her tapestries had won awards at nine international exhibitions and become museum pieces, the Norwegian government, fearing all her work might be purchased abroad, passed a law forbidding export of any more.

Royal Jupiter, Grand Champion, 1946 International Livestock Exposition, was purchased by Firestone to be exhibited to the farmers of America on a 22,000-mile educational tour.

Two Firestone CHAMPIONS

ROYAL JUPITER, Grand Champion steer at the 1946 International Livestock Exposition, best shows today's demand in beef cattle. And on American farms, the New Firestone Champion Ground Grip is the Champion among tractor tires.

As the Champion, this new tractor tire cleans up to 100% more effectively . . . pulls up to 62% more at the drawbar . . . lasts up to 91% longer . . . and rides smoother on the highway.

There are sound reasons for this. The curved traction bars flare outward from the center, making a wider opening at the shoulder from which mud and trash fall easily. The connected bars take a powerful "center bite" in the heart of the traction zone. The extra-deep, pyramid-like curved traction bars cut sharply into the ground with a cleaving action. The extra height, plus buttressing at the base and Triple-Bracing near the center, give the bars greater strength and stability. Continuous bars give the Champion smoother contact with the highway . . . lengthen tire life.

When you order tractor tires, or a tractor, ask your Implement Dealer, Firestone Dealer Store, or Firestone Dealer to specify Firestone Champion Ground Grips.

My, how she's grown!

This is the snow-suit that fitted Sally so well only two years ago. It was a little snug last winter, but still wearable. Now it's outgrown. Sally needs a new outfit—fast!

A lot of businesses are in the same spot as Sally. Their facilities are outgrown too. During the tight war years, they nursed old equipment along, patiently waiting for new materials and machines. And all the time they, too, kept on growing. But a lot of things they've been needing still aren't available.

That's why so many businesses—our own included—are like Sally, straining at the seams, waiting for the new outfits we need.

This is a friendly apology to those folks who've asked to be added to our crowded lines. Though we haven't gotten around to you, we haven't forgotten. We appreciate your patience, and want you to know that—as soon as materials are available—we'll be happy to bring cheap, dependable electric service to you, too.

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

CHAPTER I

The heat in town had been intense, and Julia McFarlane rolled the station-wagon under the ivy covered porte-cochere gratefully.

The big old house would be cool. It was always cool, the solid brick walls built over a century since shutting out the sun with aloof dignity. Julia jerked off her hat before she opened the door and slid out of the coat of her smart gray suit. She dropped the hat and coat on a chair and was pushing the heavy, moist auburn hair off her forehead when a yell came down the curving staircase. A young yell.

"Dooley, is that you?" Julia sighed. She was so tired. It was five o'clock, and she had had no lunch. She had spent hours in an airless office, growing more furious by the moment, and then she had argued for another hour with a young government representative who quoted regulations, almost smacking his lips over them. To her desperate plea that there had to be more wiring for power and pumping on Buzzard's Hill, that there had to be more fence if they were to raise hams and bacon for the army, he had smiled a maddeningly superior smile.

To his smug vision all this had spelled wire—copper wire, steel wire—and wire was not to be surrendered, even to a handsome woman in a stylish hat. So Julia had come back to the farm, wrung out and exasperated, and now here was Jill yelling from upstairs.

"Dooley, come up here right away!"

Julia went up the stairs slowly. In the bright little room at the end of the hall Jill was standing on a stool before a looking-glass, her slim legs hidden in folds of white jersey, her face full of woe.

"It's all crooked!" she wailed. "They stretched it when they cleaned it, and it's all in scallops. It looks like the devil. What am I going to do?"

Julia dropped on the bed and looked at her child. Jill's hair was lighter than her own, taffy and sunlight and wild curling mischief, where Julia's had darkened to the hue of old cherry wood and lay back sleekly under a brush. Jill's eyes were darker, too, almost black under striking, arrogant brows; direct, demanding eyes, impatient, with little compromise in them.

"What do you want to do, Jill? Cut the hem off and even it?"

"I haven't got time. It's yards around the bottom, though it does hang so straight. Would it look awful, Dooley, if we cut off the worst places and hemmed it? It has to be right, it simply has to."

"What cooks? Something terribly special?" "Frightfully special." Jill jerked angrily at the stubborn folds. "It's Spang. And the club dance. He has a three-day pass. He's coming on the bus."

"Do I know Spang? He sounds like some kind of canned dog-ration."

Julia Worries About Her Son

Would Spang be outraged by an uneven hemline?"

"Don't make gags, Dooley, you're not the type. Handsome dignity is your line. No, you don't know Spang. He's a turret instructor right now, down at Ric's Field. I met him when I went down last week to see Ric. He's a lieutenant and a fier, but right now he's T.S.—technical to you, Dooley."

"But he wasn't christened Spang, surely—the font would have fallen down."

"Dooley, I ask you! His name is Spencer, and he hates it because he doesn't like some uncle or other. He won't look at my dress, but all the females on the prow will cut their eyes down, and I'll get an inferiority complex. And this is important!"

"Is it?" Julia was gentle. "All right, turn around. But I refuse to guarantee results. Remember, I'm a pig-woman, not a couturiere. Is Ric coming with your Spang?"

Jill puckered her brow. "Mother, Ric's a private. Just a plain Joe, and a casual at that. He couldn't get a pass home unless he bought one from somebody, and he says they've hiked the price now till it isn't worth it."

"But—do you mean that he came home last time on some other man's pass?" Julia spoke between her teeth, sharply.

"Of course. Unless it was an emergency he wouldn't rate a pass. They might want to ship him out any minute."

"But that was a foolish and risky thing to do when he's trying to get into officer's school?" "Oh, they organize things, Ric says—get some other Joe to answer for them at roll-call or something." Jill turned slowly on her toes.

"I don't like it," Julia said sternly. "I won't have Ric jeopardizing his chances. You should have told me before."

"Oh, Mother, you know how much attention Ric pays to maternal admonition! You only had one dutiful child—me."

"Stand still, or I'll never get this right." She was so tired that her legs quivered and her eyes blurred. And now worry was spinning like a dentist's drill in her brain. For now she was beginning to know what before had been only a nagging fear, a motherly apprehension. Now she knew that the thing she hated had not died, had not removed itself from her life. It was going on. Richard, her son, born in loneliness and torment—Richard was going on being another mad and reckless McFarlane, irresponsible, not to be believed.

You could have spared me this, God, she was thinking. I've had so much and I've tried to be patient, I've tried to do my best.

Aloud she said, "That gets it, I think. But it will probably sag somewhere else. That heavy stuff does."

Jill pulled the dress over her head and dropped on the stool, her naked arms round and virginal and sweet.

"Will you tack it up for me, Dooley? I've got to do my nails and press my suit, and there's a spot on the toe of one of my sandals where somebody stepped on me. Oh, I forgot to tell you, I asked Spang to stay here. He hasn't any family at all. I fixed the bed because Mamie was pouty. I could only find one hemstitched sheet, so I put a plain one under."

"Will Spang be here to dinner? If he will, you'll have to set the table. I'll fix your dress, but then I have to talk over some things with Foster and your grandfather."

"John I. rode up to mark posts in the woodlot," Jill said. "Foster had to help him on the horse, and that made him furious. He's bound to break a hip some day, and then you and I will have a lovely life."

"But he'll die if he stops wanting to do things for himself. He really doesn't believe that he's eighty. He thinks that's something somebody made up."

"You're a pet to fix the dress, Dooley my love. But Spang is worth it, he is definitely. Maybe he's the one. About time! Here I am, crowding twenty-seven and already getting a maiden look around the chin."

"Don't be ridiculous. You look about eighteen. Don't forget about the table. Mamie's been busy all day."

Jill Mustn't Be An Army Wife

"Oh, Spang's bus won't be here till eight. I'll give him sandwiches and beer. Anyway, Mamie likes soldiers, and all the boys want is a soft chair to sprawl in and a hot tub. They stand up all day, or sit on a hot curb, and they can't even lie down on their cots till night, Ric told me."

In her own room, dim and cool and serene, with the branches of the huge old trees rustling close to the windows, Julia shed the regimentals of a career woman, relaxed in the tub, and put on soft cotton slacks. Later she'd have to get into the denim and boots that were her farm uniform; she'd have to tell Foster, who ran the place, that there would be no more copper wire and no more fence till the government gave her a priority, and heaven only knew when that would be.

She would have to tell her father-in-law, too, old John I. McFarlane, and he would fume angrily and impatiently for hours, to any one who would listen.

Working on Jill's dress, she hoped this young lieutenant would not be a disappointment, but all the while she nursed the secret wish that he would prove to be only another passing fancy, moving on as so many other lads had moved on, out of Jill's life.

To be an army wife—she did not want that for Jill. She wanted to save her child from that heartburning, that dreary waiting, the endless nights, the torturing silences that she herself remembered. And for her the wretchedness had never ended. There had been no finale, no period, no yellow telegram, no shock of grief—there had been nothing. Now, after twenty-five years, there was still nothing.

But in these days, with all the young men in service, a girl, even as pretty and desirable a girl as Jill, had little choice. The world was swiftly turning to a confused and dismal place.

She had told herself so many times, when Jill and young Richard were small and everything was very grim for her, that no child of hers should ever live through what she herself was living through. She had worked so hard: she had even done rough work with her own hands to build up this old farm. She had fought drought and animal epidemics and insects and discouragement, to make a richer, kinder life for Ric and Jill. And she had succeeded. She looked through the window at the lush green of the fields of Buzzard's Hill, and she knew that she had succeeded.

Her father-in-law had helped. She gave him his due in all loyalty. He had been a rock to lean upon, he had been a pillar—a fiery pillar, but steadfast. Through all the strange years when no word had come from Richard, her husband, when there had been only silence as baffling as the hollow sky, as deep as the sea, old John I. had stood by her—through the grim times and good times. She had lived through it, but she would fight to save Jill from a life like that.

She heard the clump of John I.'s boots presently, heard him yelling something into the telephone. All the McFarlanes yelled, even Jill. There was so much in them that they were alive and in a ferment. Patience had been left out of them. It was as if they had a yeast brew instead of blood in their veins.

Richard, whom she had married, had yelled, too. Up three flights in that little walk-up flat in Washington—why must she think of that just now? Why couldn't she make herself forget, finally and forever? Last year she had determined to forget, and the year before. It irritated her that she, a strong woman, was not strong enough to conquer this thing that haunted her.

The dress finished, she laid it carefully across Jill's bed and got into the faded shirt, the rough clothes that went with being a pig-woman. She tied her hair up in a bandana and went downstairs.

A Sow Shows Its Teeth

John I. McFarlane—thin, mustached, with small hands and feet, and bright, hot, black eyes—was sitting on the side porch cutting tobacco into a newspaper spread across his knees. He looked up as alertly as a robin, and said, "Hello, you back?"

"An hour ago," Julia sat down. The old man snapped his knife shut, slid the tobacco into a red tin and put the tin in his hip pocket. "Bet you forgot my bottle of bit-ter?"

"I did not. It's in the kitchen with the groceries." "I'd better rescue it, then, before Mamie rubs it on her rheumatism. Last time you brought me some she used it to kill mites on a duck. Well, I marked about two hundred posts."

"No use, John I. They won't give us priority for any more fence." He drew his white brows together angrily. "What do they expect us to do? Teach hogs not to cross a chalk line?"

"No more wire, no more copper, no more steel. It's war, John I. But it makes it tough for the pig business. Would you be interested in growing cucumbers or peanuts or something?"

"I would not! Pickles give me the hives, and what good are peanuts when there aren't any more county fairs or circuses?"

"They use the oil for something. I forget what. Did you tell Foster to shut up your prize sow?" She ought to bring a good litter."

"I shut her up myself. She's a cagy female. She bit me, and I hit her with the pitchfork before I thought, but she wasn't hurt any. What's wrong with you, Dooley? You look shot, and you've got circles under your eyes."

Woman's World Glamorize Ugly Duckling Beds With Slipcovered Headboards

By Ertta Haley

Sewing Trick

Makeshift sleeping set-ups such as studio couches and family hand-me-downs can be transformed thriftily into decorative assets with applied or quilted slipcovers for headboards.

sign of any reasonable size, assuring a uniform pattern. After the guide is set, stitch as you would any straight seam.

Floral Printed Remnants Easy to Use for Appliques

For an appliqued slip cover, cut out designs from a floral printed remnant and then applique to the plain fabric slip cover, using a zig-zagger attachment. Both of these headboard effects can be enhanced with matching bedspreads, the quilting and applique work being done in much the same fashion as for the headboard.

Frilly ruffles that complement headboard drama can be stitched for bedspreads with the ruffler attachment. This gadget ruffles and stitches all in one operation.

If you're a career girl and housekeeper combination, then select the bedspread with care. You'll want one that fits perfectly without too much fussing—one that you can swiftly maneuver into place in the morning and snap off quickly in the evening.

A simple quilted bedspread or a cotton applique one will lay nicely on the bed, and will be simple as far as care is concerned.

Of course, if you want more glamour, you can go in for the frilly, ruffled types made of sheer materials like organdie and dotted swiss, but this is something strictly feminine, and you don't want to subject your brand new husband to too many fancy frills.

A gathered skirt also is acceptable if you want something feminine but tailored. This can be effectively worked out with a floral print spread and a plain colored gather. This motif also can be carried out in draperies and dressing table skirt.

Tucks and Stitches

Remember that in planning a new dress or re-styling an old one, it is important to recognize the relationship between your pattern and the fabric you select. Moreover, the fabric may suit the pattern design perfectly, but you also must bear in mind that there is just as much relationship between the fabric and your figure. Sewing center experts guide you in differentiating between these two important factors, and at the same time recommend fabric designs that will assure figure flattery. For example, if yours is a short, stout figure, you should stay away from bold stripes and loud plaids that will tend to make you look shorter and stockier, and choose rather plain fabrics in becoming muted colors.

The dress that suddenly has become short-waisted and uncomfortable is still a "remake" possibility. The sewing center in your locality will show you how easy it is to put this dress back into circulation. All you need for this problem is a mid-riff insert strip of printed or striped fabric, if the dress is a solid color. The reverse is true if the dress is made of a print fabric. Sever bodice from skirt, determine the exact width with darts back and front. Attach to the bottom of bodice and top of skirt on wrong side. Finish off with pinked edges.

Fashion Flashes

Many new shades have come into being as designers and planners play with colors. Keep your eyes open for those most flattering to you. You may see plenty of fashions that hark back to other days and older times, but they all have that streamlined modern look and easy wearing quality that we like and so admire.

If you're dainty and demure, you'll like the portrait gowns done in pale pink or blue satin with a strapless decolletage and finished with billowing black lace.

Your evening gowns may reflect any period or mood you desire but they should be chosen to fit you. Choose a white jersey, sleek and well fitted, if you are the type.

THE general attitude toward umpires is, in our opinion, one of the greatest crimes in sport. Ball players in large numbers have been convicted in the past of selling and throwing games. Players and managers have been indicted on other counts, outside of baseball. But no umpire that I can recall has ever been connected with a scandal of any sort. They have been the backbone of baseball—the foundation of base-

CHILLS

What has been their reward? The age old cry of "Kill the umpire." They have been hated and assaulted and scorned by the mob. They have been stormed at, cursed, insulted by players and managers who in the main were using these umpires as alibis for their own mistakes—for their defeats.

I can go back a long way in umpires—Tim Hurst, Silk O'Loughlin, Tommy Connelly, Billy Evans, Bill Klem (and what a guy), Cy Wrigler, Hank O'Day, Bill Dineen, Lord Byron, Arlie Latham, Charlie Moran, on and on and on.

A great bunch. Dead honest. Dead game, these Big Boys in Blue. You couldn't buy one of them at any price. You couldn't scare 'em.

No one can bluff any of them. Once in a while they may get to be overly tough, overly officious. But after all they are supposed to run the game—and when they don't the game will be a farce. A complete joke.

Honest and Tough

I've known umpires for over 40 years. Among the top ones, I've never known anyone who wasn't honest and fearless—and tough when he had to be. Honest, fearless and tough. For the umpire knows how the managers and the ball players use him in an attempt to cover up their mistakes.

Umpires make many mistakes. But Ty Cobb only batted .367 and Babe Ruth wasn't even close to this mark. That means mistakes for the ball player over two-thirds of the time. Who is perfect or close to being perfect in the world's most imperfect period of time?

What is the umpire's reward for the job he turns in? An outcast, as a general rule. Sure the hours are good, as Tim Hurst once said, but no better than the hours a ball player or a manager knows.

Not only a social outcast, but also the subject of vile abuse from managers and players—and from the crowd if the umpire doesn't happen to call the play in favor of the home club.

What can the crowd in the stands see? The angles on strikes—stands at the bases—nothing at all. They don't know that slight angles can make a difference of many feet. These crowds haven't the slightest idea of what actually happened. They can miss a strike or a ball by over a foot. So can any manager sitting on the bench. He also is all out of line. He is only guessing his own way where on a general average he is completely wrong.

A vital part of an aggressive ball team, including manager and player, always concerns attacking and riding the umpire. This is supposed to mean a fighting, hustling team. Why was it, then, that Walter Johnson never protested an umpire's decision? Why was it that you rarely saw Joe McCarthy or Billy Southworth, certainly two of the best, storming from the dugout in some protest? These two let the umpires run the game.

Riding the Umpire

John McGraw, a great manager, came up in a different era. McGraw always faced two opponents—the other team and the umpire. You couldn't give McGraw enough opponents, including hostile stands. All Mac wanted was a fight with anybody.

But the game has changed in later years. And now we have too many managers and ball players trying to copy McGraw. They are using umpires for their mistakes—as alibis. The point I'd like to make is this—here we have a group who should be at the top of sport. And yet their reward is abuse from the crowds—abuse from the ball players—abuse from the managers. About 95 per cent abuse. In the main these umpires are picked from the best of the ball players. From the smartest and the most courageous. The wonder is that any sane citizen would ever want to be an umpire.

The Middleweights

The middleweights, always among the best in the ring, still dominate all divisions by a wide margin. The middleweights mean quality as well as quantity.

Some while ago we figured five top middleweights running the show. They were Zale the champion, Graziano, LaMotta, Cerdan and Abrams. The verdict was that either Cerdan or Abrams had to be eliminated. But the Cerdan-Abrams party was too close to be decisive.
