Tawas Elks Win From Two Class C Teams

Tawas City Plays Oscoda Teams Here Tonight

The Tawas City Elks added two more Class C victories to their list this week when they defeated the East Tawas Indians for the second time of the season, by the score of 32 to 22, last Friday night and the Sterling Hawks, 32 to 20 Tuesday night, which earned them a split for the two games played with Sterling this year. The Tawas City team was really clicking with their exceptional good passwork and sharp shooting. Both games were fast and furious with the Elks leading most of the way, sometimes by only one or two points, but their opponents were stopped at these times by good defense. Galliker was the leading point maker for the Elks in these two games, garnering 21 points seven in the East Tawas game and 14 against Sterling.

The game last Tuesday night was the typical hard fought game, that is always played when the two teams get on the hardwood together. Both teams played good ball but Tawas City's slight edge in point making gave them the margin of victory.

Things looked bad for East Tawas when Tawas City piled up a 11 to 2 lead over them in the first quarter, but in the next quarter both teams started playing defensively with only one point scored by the Elks and three by East Tawas, making it 12 to 5 at the half. East Tawas came to life in the third quarter, dropping the inflated sphere through the hoop for eight points but the Elks were right on their heels with seven. The quarter score was, Elks 19, East Tawas 13. In the last quarter the Elks ran wild with the ball, scoring 13 points, while East Tawas dropped in nine, with the game ending 32 to 22. Westcott led Tawas City with 14 points while Lixey collected 6 for East Tawas.

Tuesday night's game with Sterling was another "knock um down drag um out" affair, with the Elks lambasting them 32 to 20. With Galliker, center for the Elks and Gingerich forward, collecting 14 and ten points respectively, the Elks gained revenge for their first game of the year in which Sterling trounced them. The game was a tight race and only once did the Sterling team overcome the small lead held by Tawas City. In the first quarter Tawas City took the lead, 6 to 3, and they held a two point margin at the half, 12 to 10. The game was still neck and neck in the third quarter when it ended 18 to 17. In the Sterling game as in the East Tawas affair, the Elks ran wild in the last quarter, scoring fourteen points, just about doubling their third quarter score, with the final score 32 to 20.

The Tawas City Reserves lost to East Tawas 27 to 9 and to Sterling 23 to 22. Hill and Steinhurst led the Tawas City team with four points apiece. Rowley led the East Tawas Reserves with ten points. In Tuesday's contest with Sterling, Myles paced the Tawas team with eleven points.

Girls Win One and Lose One

The Tawas City girls defeated the East Tawas girls last Friday night 28 to 19. Erickson led the Tawas City girls with 14 points with Janet Musolf following with ten. Sterling girls defeated the Tawas City girls by a 28 to 22 score last Tuesday. Erickson led Tawas City with thirteen points.

Reserves Lose Two Games

The Tawas City Reserves lost to East Tawas 27 to 9 and to Sterling 23 to 22. Hill and Steinhurst led the Tawas City team with four points apiece. Rowley led the East Tawas Reserves with ten points. In Tuesday's contest with Sterling, Myles paced the Tawas team with eleven points.

Recreation Bowlers Defeat Detroit Team

Detroit Man Promotes Silver Valley with Bowling Team

In a match game Saturday evening at the Tawas City Recreation, five of Tawas City's best bowlers defeated the Silver Valley Winter Sports team of Detroit 2811 to 2750. The Silver Valley team was sponsored by Walter E. Fetting of Detroit who has a summer home at Sand Lake. He sponsors two teams, both under the name of Silver Valley, one in the Detroit Traveling League and the other in the Motor City League, as well as the teams bowling in several large tournaments around the country, notably the Rich Peterson Classic at Chicago, and his team is entered in the ABC's at Los Angeles. He is very much interested in Silver Valley Winter Sports and does all he can to promote them in the Detroit area. Last week end he brought his two bowling teams and families up for the week-end sports at Silver Valley and match games at the East Tawas and Tawas City alleys.

Dick Prescott, the Rookie, spent a sleepless night before the match with Silver Valley but pulled himself together enough to hold the mighty Fred Breckle, who holds State Doubles Championship with Fred Bujack to a one pin margin. This is a very commendable record for the Rookie as it was his first showing against such tough competition. By his own admission Dick spent most of Saturday forenoon bowling while milking cows and doing other chores. He is now challenging anybody to a five game match!

The Silver Valley team included two name bowlers, Fred Bujack and Fred Breckle, who are state doubles champions and carry averages over 200.

In the first game of the three game match at the Tawas City Recreation the Silver Valley team won 922 to 888. But in the remaining two games the Tawas City team turned the tables, winning on counts of 941 and 981 against the Valley team's 895 and 933, with Tawas City taking total pins 2811 to 2750.

Bujack, Dodson and Sieloff, all hit over 600, with Bujack and Dodson rolling 611 each and E. Sieloff 602.

Dairymen to Promote Better Marketing

Committee Named to Form County Wide Organization

Seventy five Iosco County dairymen assembled at the Grant township hall Friday afternoon of last week to discuss the possibilities of combining their efforts in the selling of their dairy products.

It was the unanimous opinion of the group that some type of united effort among producers would give them security by encouraging a more stable market for their dairy products, it would increase the dairy income here in Iosco county, and products here in Iosco county, and would insure consumer a better quality product throughout the entire year.

A five man board of directors who were instructed by the group, to complete the county wide cooperative organization included Charles Kobs, Tawas township, President; Allen Herriman, Grant township, vice President; Charles Timreck, Baldwin township, Secretary; Ray Cross, Wilber township, Treasurer, and George Prescott III, Tawas township, as director at large.

The high cost of dairy feeds, farm labor, farm machinery and equipment, replacement dairy cows, and farm building maintenance were cited as principal reasons for asking that producers be paid 50 percent of the consumers dollar.

Byron Ruhstorfer, President of the Bay County Milk Producers Association met with the group and explained how dairymen in that county developed a producers association a few years ago that is now of real service to them in the marketing of their dairy products. He stated that by working together, farmers in Iosco county are sure to produce an improved dairy product that will demand a more encouraging price and over a period of years will more nearly meet the actual cost of production.

E. W. Lackie of Bay City, representing the Saginaw Valley Milk Producers Association, served as principal speaker at the Friday afternoon meeting. He pointed out that farmers are by no means unreasonable in asking at least 50 percent of the consumer dollar for their dairy products and further stated that if farmers are to produce a high quality highly perishable product they must have that percentage or more. He stated that the per capita consumption of dairy products in this section of Michigan is less than one pint per person. A high quality product produced at the time of year when year around residents and tourists are in Iosco County and at cost of production prices is sure to improve the health of local people and improve the popularity of Iosco county.

Mr. Lackie encouraged the dairymen to follow the plans and patterns of the Michigan Producers Association. They emphasize the importance of a "milk requirement plan of production." They encourage uniformity in milk prices. They encourage a high quality dairy product from properly housed, healthy cows, and thereby improve the public health in areas where they operate.

"There is no farm product so important to public welfare, public health and rural prosperity, as is milk and it's by-products," stated Mr. Lackie "and to complete an organization as you are discussing here this afternoon will greatly benefit consumers, processors and producers here in Iosco county."

County Agricultural Agent W. L. Finley encouraged dairymen to continue the production of dairy products as dairying fits the agricultural possibilities of Iosco county better than does any other farm enterprise. We can produce dairy products to advantage and during the past five or six years our markets have improved, stated Finley. A market milk outlet has replaced our butterfat market a few years ago and has thereby improved farm incomes. It may be improved still further by working together for an improved product as well as an improved market.

UNEASY OVER FLIGHTS
WASHINGTON.—The splurge of recent air crashes is causing considerable worry to the secret service agents responsible for the life of the President.

The secret service is afraid the day may come when the President's special plane, "The Sacred Cow," also may encounter bad weather or mechanical trouble. They also know something about the President's propensity for taking off, rain or shine, and it keeps them awake at nights thinking about it. When he wants to go some place, he simply goes.

Result is that a quiet campaign is under way inside the secret service to persuade the President to abandon air travel generally. They want him to take the train—as President Roosevelt did on almost all occasions.

FDR enjoyed train travel. It rested him and gave him a chance to get caught up with his correspondence. Truman, however, loves the speed of an airplane. He can get to Kansas City in four hours whereas it would take him two nights and a day by train.

The secret service has never recovered from the scare it received on Christmas, 1945, when Mr. Truman flew home to Independence in weather that had grounded all commercial airlines. However, the President is a hard man to persuade, and his secret service bodyguards are not any too optimistic about the chances of keeping him grounded.

AIR CRASHES
Despite the recent series of air crashes, fact remains that commercial air lines hung up twice as good a safety record in 1946 as in 1945. Although the total number of aircraft fatalities increased, it is important to recall that the airlines flew twice as many passenger miles in '46. This cut the fatality rate in half.

Another factor most people overlook is that the Civil Aeronautics authority, which regulates commercial flying, is operating in the face of a pinch-penny congressional appropriation. Despite the small appropriation, CAA worked out a bad-weather instrument-landing system which has now been adopted by every country, including the Russians.

ARMY EDUCATION
Public opinion expert George Gallup proved to the last decimal point that more men would enlist in the army and navy if military authorities had "a system whereby educational training in the service would count toward high school or college diplomas."

The army's information and education branch was glad to hear that they should educate servicemen, but they want to know one thing: Who's going to educate Dr. Gallup?

What he apparently doesn't know is that the United States Armed Forces institute makes every conceivable type of study course available to any soldier, sailor, marine or coastguardsman who wants it.

More than 1,900,000 men already have acquired schooling via USAFI. Also, they've got credit for it. In the last year alone, 20,000 servicemen received high school diplomas via the army. These diplomas and USAFI's college courses are accepted for credit by almost every school in the country.

Gallup goes on to make the weird statement that army authorities question the idea of the army's going into the business of general education.

Clearly, none of Gallup's scorekeepers asked the secretary of war or power-packed Gen. "Buck" Lamm, head of the army's information and education branch, about this. They not only don't question it, but they do it; sending teachers and books and quizzes and lessons by the thousands all over the world.

BACKSTAGE NAVY LOBBY
White House insiders report that brain trust Clark Clifford is having a tough time drafting an army-navy merger bill for congress that will both carry out the President's ideas and not offend the brass hats.

President Truman wants it clearly stated in the bill that there will be a secretary of national defense, with full cabinet rank, and three under-secretaries with sub-cabinet rank, representing the army, navy and air forces.

The latter, however, is not at all what the brass hats want. They want full cabinet rank for each arm of the service—in other words, three new cabinet members.

CAPITAL CHAFF
Alert Senator Brewster of Maine, giving colleagues an off-the-record report of his Latin American trip, disclosed that British agents are selling British planes all over Latin America and outselling the USA. They are taking orders for delivery on jet planes which will be far ahead of our transports. In two years, Brewster predicts, the British will force Latin Americans to use British-type instruments for landing, making it hard for Americans to operate on the same fields.

ANOTHER 'FIRST'

Washington's Early Ventures Proved Key to Farm Progress

WNU Features.

Remembered as "First in War, First in Peace, First in the Hearts of His Countrymen," George Washington could lay claim to still another honor. He also was "First in Farming."

As America hails the 215th anniversary of his birth, agriculture acknowledges its debt to him. For Washington made contributions to farming's progress that benefit millions of people today.

The "Father of His Country" was a keen student of farming. He pioneered in soil conservation. He championed crop rotation almost before anyone else in the colonies tried it. He was one of the first to carry on experiments with clover as a soil-building crop. He introduced timothy hay to this country and was one of the first Americans to grow alfalfa.

Ahead of Times.
Three-quarters of a century before the science of soil chemistry was discovered, Washington worked to restore exhausted fields with fertilizer materials then available. He led the way in the use of farm machinery. He experimented successfully in livestock breeding and improvement of blood strains. According to his own account, he was the first American to attempt the raising of mules.

As a result of his success with farming, Washington became the richest man in the United States. When he died in 1799, his property included more than 48,000 acres of farm land. That included Mount Vernon as well as acreage in Ohio and elsewhere. Washington's landed estate was valued at $530,000. Other property included additional buildings, equipment, livestock and various investments worth $220,000.

Washington was 27 when he began his serious farming career in 1759. He had inherited Mount Vernon, married Martha Custis and received a handsome dowry in lands and chattels. For the next 16 years he was to devote himself to the land.

No Aid Available.
That was no easy task, however. The land he inherited was worn out by a century of single-crop farming. There had been no attempt at rotation or fertilization. Unlike the farmer of today, Washington could not turn to his county agent or to the research men at the state agricultural experiment station for facts to help him meet farm needs.

As an alternate to tobacco growing, Washington began giving increasing attention to wheat. His progressive attitude toward crop management showed itself in experiments such as steeping his seed in brine and alum to prevent smut.

Washington's wheat growing ventures proved profitable. Washington's farm career was halted for eight years during the Revolutionary war. Peace in 1783 at last brought his release. When he returned to Mount Vernon he was one of the world's most famous men. Happy to be home again, he threw himself once more into his old occupation.

During his career as commander-in-chief of the Continental army he had observed at firsthand how agriculture was practiced in New York, New Jersey and other northern colonies. That broadened his outlook. He was more than ever convinced of the need for pastures and livestock to help conserve the soil. He was more wide-awake to the need for better tools.

Revives Old Soil.
There was plenty to be done at Mount Vernon. One of Washington's chief worries was the rundown condition of the soil, due to the poor methods followed by overseers during his absence.

Washington began to experiment with clover and other grasses as a soil conservation measure. He was prompted to do this by Noah Webster, newspaper writer, editor and compiler of a dictionary.

In his experiments Washington tried every kind of legume known to Virginia farmers, and imported many other kinds of seed from England. Thus he introduced timothy to his countrymen. He found that clover and peas had a soil enriching power.

In an English journal he read about a new legume—alfalfa or Lucerne—which had been brought from Switzerland. He found that alfalfa, too, could enrich the soil.

Imports New Strains.
Washington found some time to keep an eye on his farming operations at Mount Vernon even during his terms as President from 1789 to 1797. He had extensive experiments conducted in grain and livestock breeding. He imported new strains of wheat from South Africa and Siberia. He sent to England for sheep and, by crossing with Virginia breeds, increased the wool clip by two pounds per sheep. He bred fine draft horses and had the best trotting, riding and field animals in Virginia.

Crop rotation occupied a good deal of his attention. One rotation he noted "favors the land very much; inasmuch as there are but three corn crops (i.e. grain crops) taken in seven years from any field, and the first of the wheat crop which is to succeed it; and which by being laid to clover and grass and continued therein three years will afford much mowing and grassing, besides being a restoration to the soil."

Washington was one of the first Americans to use farm machinery. He was especially alert for better methods of threshing grain than the age-old practice of treading and flailing. In 1797, two years before his death, he built a threshing machine evolved by William Bookser, who came to Mount Vernon and directed construction.

Thresher Fails.
The machine failed to live up to Washington's hopes. At first it threshed about 50 bushels a day, then fell to fewer than 25 and finally broke down completely.

The disappointing experience with the threshing machine did not deter Washington from trying other implements. He furnished his farms with every kind of improved tool that might do better work. Among these were a wheat drill, a corn drill, a machine for gathering clover seed and one for raking up wheat.

"As a farmer, Washington was generations ahead of his time," declares Zenas H. Beers, executive secretary of Middle West Soil Improvement committee. "His progress toward scientific farming set an example that any modern farmer might follow with profit. Washington's success in devising good soil management methods mark him as one of America's first conservationists."

During his Presidency, Washington was eager to improve the lot of agriculture. In his last message to congress he recommended establishment of a "board of agriculture to collect and diffuse information, and by premium and small pecuniary aids, to encourage and assist a spirit of discovery and improvement." That recommendation foreshadowed establishment of the U. S. department of agriculture three-quarters of a century later.

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Old Leisure Time Diversions Still Prevail at Farm Parties

The old familiar phrase, "a good time was had by all," is still the best yardstick for a successful party, says W. R. Gordon, extension rural sociologist of Pennsylvania State college, who concludes from observations on 100 extension demonstrations that there is "no lack of enthusiasm among farm people for recreation."

Good times in the country and on the farm suggest "the leisure time experiences of our grandparents—the literary meeting, spelling bee, box social, maple sugar party and barn dance," he says. Most of these diversions have stood the test of time and are still popular. One of them, the spelling bee, staged a lively comeback last year throughout the state under sponsorship of the Pennsylvania State grange with the state-wide finals at its annual meeting in Wilkes-Barre last October.

"Owing to man's inherent weakness for eating," Gordon notes, "the box social has never completely lost its appeal. The barn dance, although it has moved from the barn to the school gymnasium, the fire hall or the community center, attracts young and old, just as it did generations ago."

But, he thinks today's good times in the country have even more recreational variety. In addition to parties and square dancing groups come together to sing and for roller skating. Contests include the traditional horseshoes, corn husking and log sawing, with baseball and softball added. Hay rides and hikes to nearby places for cook-outs, doggie roasts and suppers divide attention with more extended trips, some of them by chartered bus, to places of interest.

One of the best features of rural recreation, as Gordon points out, is that "almost everyone is participant; there are few spectators."

Old Age Pension Provides Funds For Free Library

TULSA, OKLA.—A philanthropist on an old-age pension. That is the unusual position of 80-year-old J. W. Black.

Black doesn't have enough heat in his apartment to keep it cozy and his rooms are devoid of electric lights. But his basement living room is lined with 1,100 books which he has dedicated to the 2,000 children of his suburban Glenwood community, which has no other public library.

By skimming on his pension checks, Black recently managed to buy a new set of children's books. Many of the volumes, however, are gifts from persons who desired to help keep his private philanthropy alive.

"When I'm gone, I figure I will have returned $2 for every $1 I received from the state," Black contends.

Although no cards are kept in this unusual library, Black has missed few books from his shelves, crudely fashioned from apple crates. There is only one rule: "Read and return it to 5244 1/2 Sand Springs Road and thank the dear Father for our library."

The library is a happy place, Black points out, adding that "the little folk fill it with their laughter and they can play games here too if they take the notion."

"You see, I know something about people," Black says, "and one thing I realize is that if we don't take care of these little fellows we will live to regret it."

Observance Sparks Defense Problems

CHICAGO.—With the purpose of focusing attention on national defense problems, the annual observance of National Security week is being revived this year after a lapse during war years. Dates for the observance are from Lincoln's birthday anniversary, February 12, to Washington's birthday anniversary, February 22.

The observance, which has been given official recognition of both the war and navy departments, is being sponsored by the Reserve Officers' association of the United States. The sponsoring agency is a nation-wide organization composed of reserve officers of all the armed forces interested in promotion of national defense. Officers of the association point out that graduates of officer candidate schools comprised 98 per cent of the army's officer strength during World War II.

Money Problem

NEW YORK.—Money problems come in big measure to the Corn Exchange Bank & Trust Co. A directors' report showed the bank handled $45,958,750 in coins during 1946. Total weight was reported at 2,632 tons, enough to fill 133,400 ordinary money bags.

Time Payment

HERRIN, ILL.—Sixteen years after his wrist watch was stolen, Lester Turner received a $20 bill in payment. The money was sent in an anonymous letter which stated "the watch is long gone but here is approximately the value of it."

Parking Meters Net Jack Pot of Coins

NEWBURGH, N. Y.—People will put all sorts of things into parking meters, reports Kenneth D. Jones, city coin collector. In addition to coin of the realm, the parking meter take has included washers, tiddley winks, OPA red points, bingo chips, a Sing Sing penny and a coin from the Konungur islands. The Sing Sing penny bears an inscription: "Do Good—Make Good."

Huge Telescope Is About Ready

Most Powerful Instrument in World to Give Man Better Look Into Universe.

PASADENA, CALIF.—The most powerful telescope in the world, designed to give man his farthest and most comprehensive look into the universe, should be ready for its first test next summer, said Dr. John A. Anderson.

Anderson and his associates at the California Institute of Technology refused to venture a prediction of what they expected to see, but their enthusiasm grows as each day brings nearer the completion of this giant telescope.

The telescope with its 200-inch mirror is expected to permit astronomers to "see" twice as far into space as they do now with a 100-inch telescope.

To Bring Moon Closer.
The instrument will embrace eight times as much space, and reflect four times the amount of light.

It should bring the moon within an arm's length of earth, astronomically speaking.

It may lead to discovery of new planets and stars.

The optical range of this telescope, according to theory, should be about one billion light years. A light year is the distance light travels, at 186,000 miles a second, in a year.

This new range should enable astronomers to make a more accurate estimation of what goes on in the universe of this earth.

The project, financed by Rockefeller foundation, includes work here and at Mt. Palomar 125 miles to the southeast.

At Pasadena, an optical shop, where the 200-inch disc and auxiliary mirrors are being ground, was constructed. Other buildings at Pasadena are the astrophysics instrument shop, where instruments, precision machine parts and optical mechanisms were manufactured, and the astrophysical laboratory, which houses offices, research facilities and a solar tower.

Many Engaged on Work.
The observatory site at Palomar has an altitude of 5,550 feet. In addition to three telescope buildings at the site, other buildings providing for the water, power, machine shop facilities, garages, offices and storage have been constructed.

The new community on Mt. Palomar also includes resident cottages, lodging accommodations, dining halls, water pumping plant and a school house. These have been used by the approximately 80 persons engaged in constructing the buildings.

When the big mirror is completed here, it will be transported to Palomar for a test mounting period, which may be one week or two or three months, depending on results of tests and difficulties encountered.

A small, 12-inch mirror is being prepared for test with the observatory equipment in case there is more delay in completion of the big mirror.

Observation at Palomar is expected to be much clearer than is possible at Mt. Wilson, where observation difficulties have increased because of the growth of the Los Angeles area with its industrial smoke and general city haze.

Cable Under Highway Will Provide Power for Motors

LONDON.—Start of construction on "the world's first high frequency motor road"—on which cars drawing current from a cable under the concrete can run 125 miles an hour—was reported from Moscow by Tass.

The Russian news agency said the idea was conceived by Prof. Georgi Babat, Stalin prize winner, and that construction would cost less than that of a trolley line.

This is how the road works, Tass said: "A cable charged with high frequency electric current, laid under an ordinary motor road, will generate an electromagnetic field within a range of 10 to 13 feet.

"Motor cars will be equipped with special receivers of high frequency current, rectifiers and condensers through which the current will pass into an ordinary motor installed on the car."

Youngster Picks the Right Chaser After Aspirin Binge

CLINTON, N. J.—Rollin F. Michaud, 2½, consumed 30 aspirin tablets, a bottle of cough medicine and a bottle of cod liver oil from the family medicine chest.

He topped his feast off with an appropriate chaser—a bottle of castor oil.

Doctors said his condition was satisfactory.

The Specialist Versus The Old Family Doctor

Dr. Willard C. Rappleye, dean of the Columbia college of physicians, says the day of the general practitioner is gone. What he means is that the era has passed when a sick man could get anybody to listen to him for $2.

The age of the specialist has been sweeping over us at high speed and today the doctor's bill at times brings more pain than the ailment. The old-time family doctor who was no one-line marvel but who could make you feel better without financial complications has about disappeared, as Dr. Rappleye says. And it saddens us.

The old-fashioned doctor was often wrong and frequently stumped but he was always deeply and personally interested. He lacked the specialist's brain, but his heart was in the right place. His greatest virtue was a sense of obligation to any sick call, regardless of money, time or distance.

He lacked plenty of stuff but he would answer a call in the middle of the night and get to a patient through mud up to his buttocks and snow up to his chin.

He would go wherever a man could carry a bag, a stethoscope and a smile.

Even when he wasn't very good as a doctor he cheered you up as a fellow man.

He would see you at the office most any time without preliminary palaverings or negotiations, and there was no pay-as-you-enter system, no portal to portal contacts with outlying secretaries and no impression that you were in luck to gain admittance.

The first words of the old time general practitioner were "Lemme see your tongue." The specialist doesn't want to see it. It oversimplifies the matter and is strictly a two-dollar routine.

The old-fashioned "sawbones" knew you from the cradle to the grave, not from the cradle to the bank. When he felt your pulse you knew he was using his own watch.

And when he applied the stethoscope to your chest he never forgot himself and said "Very good. You are up an eighth since yesterday's closing."

Not that we are belittling the specialist. He is a necessity and often a blessing. He saves a lot of lives by substituting knowledge for guesswork. But we wish family doctors were still easy to find. They didn't make one so skeered of being sick.

Dr. Rappleye makes a fine proposal. Realizing the difficulties many sick people have in getting a specialist he suggests that the specialists in all communities get together in a spirit of group responsibility and coordination. What he means is that they pool their knowledge in a pinch so that the patient won't have to see more than one with the consequent financial entanglements. Second the motion!

President Truman has appealed to all autoists to drive carefully in 1947. He clearly thinks the situation has reached a point where every voter counts.

NEWFOUNDLAND MIGHT VOTE TO BECOME U. S. TERRITORY

THE FISHER FOLK and such other people as constitute the citizenship of Newfoundland are attempting to make a choice of a future form of government. The problem is that of deciding between the present British commission, appointed by the London government; a return to local self government, surrendered early in this century; annexation to the Canadian dominion; or a request to the United States to take the island in as a territory, with statehood possible some time in the future.

Whatever the final decision of the Newfoundland people may be it must have the approval of the British parliament before it can become effective. There is but small chance the people would ask annexation by the United States; that the British government would approve such a decision if made, or that the American government would accept.

I, as one American, would be opposed to our annexation of Newfoundland, but my reason for such opposition is not one that would have any effect on the decision of congress.

I have been across and all around the big island. I went there seeking the opportunity of catching a Newfoundland land-locked salmon, rated as the king of all fresh water game fish. When I arrived at Port au Basse I found it would cost me $30 a try, but I could get no information regarding a good place to try. I decided to wait before spending that $30 until I could find some lake or stream in which someone could assure me definitely that a salmon had been caught. To find that lake or stream I traveled across the island, 540 miles to St. Johns, but without success. Then I sailed around the island, in a bathtub-sized boat, making diligent inquiries at each fishing village at which we stopped.

At no place did I see a salmon or find anyone who would admit having seen one caught. In the interior of the island I did see great herds of caribou, but I am not a hunter; I had no gun; I could not hit the side of a mountain at 50 yards; it was out of season. I was not even tempted to put up the $75 asked for a hunting license. Though I saw the greater part of Newfoundland I did not see a land-locked salmon. I felt the island people had attempted to secure money under false pretenses. It did not work in my case. I saved my $30. Then I went back to an old stamping ground, the Temagami district of Northern Ontario, to fish for bass, and caught one.

Despite Newfoundland's vast store of undeveloped mineral wealth; its great forests of pulp wood, needed by American newspapers; its picturesque fishing villages; its magnificent land-locked harbor at St. Johns, guarded by American built fortifications, manned by American soldiers; its simple, kindly and hospitable people, I would vote "no" on annexation. Those simple fisher folk would have taken my $30 without providing a land-locked salmon.

I did find scattered around Newfoundland on beautifully colored pebble beaches at every fishing village, many thousands of cod fish being dried by the sun. Seeing them, and the conditions under which they were being cured, caused me to forswear salted cod as an article of diet forever.

INFLATION REDUCES VALUE OF INSURANCE

THERE ARE in the United States more than 71 million people who pay for life insurance policies each year, that loved ones may be provided for should the insured pass away. Their policies call for the payment of a specified number of dollars, which the insurance companies will pay, but the question is: What will those dollars buy? The one thousand dollars Mrs. Jones receives will buy today less than half what the same dollars would have bought only a few years ago, and that buying power is going down constantly. There is no definite value back of each dollar Mrs. Jones will receive. It fluctuates as the purchasing power of the dollar goes down or up. It would disappear entirely should the effort to Russinize America be accomplished. The concerted voice of those 71 million policy holders would make an impression on congress.

COMPETENT analysts tell us that because of the refusal to unite our armed services under one national defense department we are wasting about one-third of our army and navy expenditures. The reason for the refusal seems to be that the dignity of a few congressional committee chairmen and a few top rank generals and admirals may be preserved.

MANY of our troubles are of our own making.

Looking Back—
Every farm had its smokehouse. Every smokehouse had its ham. The hams didn't really start to lay until March.
The ham and eggs combination was a spring treat—and never was their greater gustatory delight for hungry farm boys, with mashed potatoes.
The smoke house has gone up in smoke. The fool hens have got so they lay the year around. The ham comes from the meat shop or freezer locker plant. And the ham and eggs has ceased to be a special spring treat.

What's wrong with a one-passenger trolley?

You might praise its comfort and convenience, if you happened to be the passenger. But if others were waiting, we believe you'd agree that sharing the trolley is a more practical plan.
The same principle applies to telephone service. Many people have waited a long time for a telephone, and sharing the lines means more service for more people sooner.
That's why we are making the widest possible use of party-line facilities. When more central office equipment and outside lines can be provided, we'll be able to furnish one-party service to everyone who wants it.

Meanwhile, if you're on a party line, you can help make service better for everyone by following these simple suggestions:
1. When the line is in use, please don't interrupt except in case of emergency.
2. Keep all calls as brief as possible.
3. Avoid making several calls in immediate succession.
4. After every call, hang up carefully. One receiver improperly replaced puts all the telephones on the line out of service.

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

Twenty-five years have elapsed since the disappearance of Richard McFarlane in World War I and his wife, Julia, is beset with fresh worries as the children she has raised with the aid of her father-in-law, John I. McFarlane, become involved in World War II. Ric, who "washed out" in the air corps while Jim, 26, falls in love with Spang Gordon, a young lieutenant. Julia confides her troubles to Dave Patterson, an old family friend who has always secretly loved her. Jill and Spang go to a dance and Jill discovers she is in love but is nettled when Spang apparently doesn't return her feeling. She acts gay, however, to conceal her own love from him.

CHAPTER V

Then abruptly Spang cleared his throat. "I've got something to tell your mother," he said, "and I'm worried whether I should tell her or not. Maybe you'll know what I should do."

"You mean—something about Ric?"

He broke off a head of goldenrod and examined the small sulphur-colored blossoms minutely. "No, not about you. You suit me fine. I've had a grand time, and I hope you'll let me come back again. If I'm not shipped out. No, it's about Ric."

"I suppose he's in some sort of trouble? That happens," she said stiffly.

"Ric and I were pretty good friends at college," Spang went on. "We lived in the same house, and though I finished two years before he did, we wrote now and then and kept in touch. Then this war came along, and I got in early and got my commission, and of course Ric was an enlisted man, so that complicated things. But I've managed to see him occasionally."

"And you don't like what he's doing? Is he ducking out of things, breaking regulations, that sort of thing?"

"I don't know about his service record. But the last time we were in town I saw him with a woman. They were both drinking, and though Ric wasn't tight, exactly, he was talking too loud. He wanted me to meet her."

"Did he salaam properly before the shoulder-bars and the beautiful whip-cord breeches?" Jill spoke more bitterly than she knew because her heart was hurting from disappointment.

Spang laid the gold-spangled leaf on top of her head. "Don't be nasty, gal. Can I help it if this army is all stiffened up with military courtesy and stuff? I still like Ric. That's why I didn't like what I'm seeing. She's older than he is, she's been divorced, her first husband was an officer who got kicked downstairs after Pearl Harbor. She's living there in the hotel, and a sergeant I know pretty well told me that Ric was seeing a lot of her. She's a handsome wench, one of those silver blondes with nice skin and a helpless look—you know the type. I have a feeling your mother wouldn't like it, but still I hate to say anything."

"But surely Ric couldn't get serious about a woman like that?"

Ric Provides a New Worry

"You do know, Spang, more than you're telling me! I don't have to be protected from the truth, even if it isn't pleasant."

"No, I really don't know anything definite, Jill. I'm just worried, that's all, and since I've met your mother and seen the sort of home Ric has, it bothers me. It may be just another episode. Ric had a few when we were together."

"The trouble is," Jill said, "Mother spoiled Ric terribly. My father didn't come back, and I think she needed somebody to lavish all that love upon, somebody to keep her heart from breaking. I was just a good egg, somebody she could talk to, but Ric got her deep affection. And anything he does that's off-color would hurt her frightfully. I'd hate to tell her. I'll decide whether I ought to, after you're gone. You couldn't do anything about it anyway, could you?"

"No, I couldn't do anything about it. Ric's a man, he'd resent any interference from me. He'd have a right to resent it. Of course he may be shipped out, and that will put an end to the affair."

"Then it is an affair?"

"Jill, I've told you all I know. I've heard her discussed in various places and heard the things other men say about her, that's all. I've heard men speak of her when they were talking without inhibitions. And Ric is pretty young—"

"Twenty-seven isn't so young. He's old enough to have a little sense," Jill said angrily.

They walked down the lane, saying little after that.

He isn't going to say anything, maybe he doesn't care at all, Jill was thinking, with the painful knot made of anger and tears growing hard and tight in her throat.

Spang talked of the future, presently, but of a future in which she had no part—or any other woman, if that could be called a comfort. He said, "A month from now I'll be looking back on this week-end, thinking of the wonderful time I've had—"

"And trying," Jill asked, her head tilted a little, "to remember how I look?"

He bent his head, and his eyes moved over her slowly and soberly.

"I won't have to try. Hair like a new five-inch shell and a sassy nose—"

"Disposition like T.N.T.," Jill supplied, keeping to the airy mood, "hair-trigger set. If things don't happen when I want them to, I explode all over the place."

"No," Spang said quietly, "you aren't like that. When you go up against a thing you really want, you wait for it quietly, with considerable determination."

"Grim. Very grim!"

"Have you found anything yet that you really wanted and didn't get? Something you really wanted, I mean—not a whim."

Jill set her teeth. Was he trying her, trying to get past the rigid control of her chin and her careful eyelids? "When I find it I'll get it—some way, some time!"

"Desperate, eh?" Spang laughed a little. But the laugh was shaken, and so was the pressure of his hand on her elbow uncertain. "Your eyes don't give you away as a desperate female, at all."

"How do they look? Inane, I suppose?"

"Oh, sort of sweet—and melting. I think you'll find ways to get what you want without any fight."

So her eyes were melting! But they were melting, they were practically dissolving, and if she talked any more she'd be crying like a fool, because she was in love and men were so unbearably stupid!

She said coolly, "I've trained my eyes to lie very politely. Let's hurry, shall we? I smell the roast, and Mamie gets peevish if dinner waits on Sunday. She belongs to the Holiness Church and they have services in the afternoon."

After that the day wore on, her grandfather telling over again interminably the story of how Buzzard's Hill had been a military hospital in the Civil war, Julia trying to efface herself and maneuver John I. away so that Jill and Spang could be alone. Sweet of Dooley, Jill thought, but all quite useless. Spang wasn't in love with her. How could he be and keep so carefully silent about it?

Thank heaven, when she put him on the bus at dusk, she hadn't let herself go, hadn't been careless enough to let him see how utterly lost she was!

He had held both her hands when he said good-by, and she had promised to come down to the field again as soon as she could, and then he had given her a gay little salute and climbed aboard and been rushed away out of her sight.

A Talk Between Julia and Jill

The heat settled, drowsy and enervating as it pressed upon the world in August, and Jill grew a little wain.

She tried gallantly to fit herself into the quiet life of Buzzard's Hill. She pretended an excited interest in the new pigs, though privately she thought the wriggling, hairless little things revolting, and thought what an amazing thing mother-love must be, that it could believe any new creation lovely.

She even put in a warm morning digging in the garden that was going sadly to weeds since Foster's son had gone off to the army. At noon she went back to the house, soaked in perspiration, a good manure a sad ruin, and every muscle screaming weariness from the unaccustomed activity. After that strenuous adventure she took a hot shower and flung herself on the bed, too utterly tired to go down to lunch.

Julia found her there and looked at her shrewdly. "You're taking this the hard way, Jill. I've brought you some cold milk. Drink it and go to sleep. You're being very gallant, but try to be reasonable about it."

"I have to do something, Dooley. Life has to be for something or about something. Mine isn't. It's just a purposeless existence, just using up days. And there are so many of them, and they're so long!"

Julia dropped into a chair. She wore her heavy jeans, and she was warm and weary, too. "I know. You haven't had to learn yet how long years can be, Jill. I hope you never will."

"How did you bear it, Dooley, that last war? You aren't changed, you aren't old. You haven't any lines in your face."

"I had two children to take care of. And I had hope."

"And I," Jill said sadly, over the rim of the glass, "haven't anything at all!"

"It turned out that way, did it? I didn't want to ask any questions."

"It turned out that I fell in love so deeply I was practically shameless about it. And to all appearances, Spang didn't. He liked my eyes, he thought you were a handsome woman, he said he had a good time, and then he talked about the job he had to do and hoped he'd see me again. If that's love, Dooley, what kind is it?"

"Perhaps the bravest kind of all, Jill. The kind a man keeps to himself because he knows he has nothing to offer a woman, nothing but uncertainty and dread and grief."

"Even those are better than nothing at all! You wouldn't know, Dooley, how awful nothing can be. Emptiness! Time going on. Oh, I know I'm talking like an idiot. I told you I hadn't any shame at all. Dooley, I want to go down to the field pretty soon. I want some new knockout clothes and one of those feather hair cuts and to have my eyebrows touched up. Why did I have to get these ferocious eyebrows, Dooley, when yours are so delicate? You're a McFarlane, too."

"There were dark McFarlanes and red McFarlanes. I got a little from both strains. Your father was almost a blond. His eyes were blue."

"Blue eyes would be horrible with my hair. I could see Ric if I went down to the field, Dooley. That is, if he isn't shipped out somewhere. He won't get a furlough, you know, for ages."

"Do you think you really want to go, Jill? You know there is such a thing as being too eager."

"Oh, Dooley, you buried all that stuff with Augusta J. Evans! A nice girl would stick quietly at home to be wooed and won, but try sticking and see what it gets you, how beautifully you're stuck! I have to see Spang again before they send him off to Africa or some other hideous spot, or I'll curl up and die! And I haven't an inhibition in the world, but I do have sense. Nobody knows what a fool I am but you, Dooley. You've been through this waiting business. You know how it hurts."

Jill Offers

A Suggestion

"Yes, I know." Julia took the empty glass, pushed Jill's damp hair back and patted her casually. "By the way, Dave just telephoned. He has bought a new saddle mare, and he thought you might like to try her out Sunday. He's going to bring her over."

"Did you enlist Dave to divert my mind, Dooley? Don't you know that I bore Dave stiff?"

"Please give me credit for a little sense, Jill. I haven't discussed your personal affairs with Dave. And I don't like riding. I can't risk being lame and stiff, with all I have to do here."

"Why don't you fall in love with Dave?" she asked abruptly. "It would simplify everything."

Julia's face changed, paled and grew taut. "What a ridiculous suggestion!" she said stiffly.

"What's ridiculous about it? Dave's been in love with you for centuries—don't tell me you didn't know it! You must be blind. Even Grandfather suspects it. I observe his sly look whenever Dave comes around. He likes Dave, he'd be terribly pleased, I think."

Julia's frozen expression did not change except that pain crept into her face, darkening her eyes, making her mouth a wan line. "Dave is a gentleman," she said, evenly. "He would not fall in love with another man's wife."

Jill puckered her brows. "But, Dooley—twenty-five years! Just because Grandfather couldn't find any grave when he went over there—maybe my father is the Unknown Soldier. When you took us to Washington I pretended that he was lying there. I felt beautiful about it. It could be true, you know."

"We won't talk about it any more," said Julia, severely. "And please put ideas like that out of your head!"

Several Sets of Accessories Lend Variety to Slim Wardrobe

By Ertta Haley

WHEN well-dressed women give tips on how they manage their wardrobe planning, most of them will tell you that one of the easiest ways to operate on a limited budget is to have several different sets of accessories for well chosen basic clothes.

If your budget this spring permits only one suit or one dress, don't despair. Either of these will do the work for several different occasions, provided the accessories are chosen with care.

It's surprising how many of these clever accessories can be whipped together at home. I've been noticing how many smart hats have been turned out at home during an evening or two, or how hats could be changed from season to season with a bit of fresh veiling, or a sprig of flowers, and how gloves can take on new glamor when some interesting detail is sewed on their cuffs.

Start right now to add little springlike touches to your clothes and see how much fun it is to do. You might begin by adding a pert bow to your hat out of grosgrain ribbon or one of the new prints. Then carry the print theme a little further by making cuffs on your gloves of the same material. Have everything cleaned and pressed perfectly so that you will look starchily and neat, and, of course, spring-like!

If you have some good basic dresses, remove their gold, silver and sequin trimmings. Use in their place some crisp ruffling which may be purchased by the yard, or some dainty lingerie trim.

Blouses and Dickies Add Wear to Suits

As you probably know, there's no limit to what may be done with accessories for suits. First of all, you have a choice of several blouses and dickies to wear with the suit, and I would suggest that you have several colors to use with it. Don't concentrate on white blouses or dickies, for you can add more variety to the wardrobe by several colors.

A navy blue suit, for example, not only will look well with white, but also may be worn effectively with yellow, kelly green or chartreuse and even pink. Blouses and dickies frequently can be made from scraps of material or from dresses that are too worn to serve as such any longer.

If you are making a special blouse or a dickey for your suit, then try to save a few pieces of material that can be worked into a decorative handkerchief or perhaps a bow or trimming for your hat or even your gloves. These little touches tie the outfit together and enhance its appeal.

Touches of white add greatly to a costume, and may be worked into the wardrobe in cuffs and collars, ruffle trimmings and gloves. Keep them well laundered so they will always be fresh.

Use Old Hat Frames For New Hats

If you have purchased hats carefully with an eye to good line, there's no reason why these cannot be used over and over again. Hat frames may be covered with scraps of material from dresses, blouses and suits. Make a purse from the same material to match, and you have a fresh start on accessories.

Some of the large-brimmed picture type hats which are very seasonal will yield their fullest in wear if you keep changing them slightly every season with fresh veiling or flowers. If hats need a stiff brushing or cleaning, this frequently can be accomplished at home. Take lessons from the milliner in draping veils properly, and never make them look skimpy.

If you don't feel quite confident of your own ability to remodel a hat, or if you have a lovely piece of felt which you would like converted into a useful and up-to-date head dress, it will be more economical to take it to a professional milliner than to buy a new hat.

It's often possible to change the way you wear a hat, accompanied by a change in hairdress and have it look new and fresh.

If you have a good basic dress, don't neglect to have several belts with it, selected, of course, to harmonize or contrast with the dress. Belts and peplums made out of scarves are easy to sew together at home and are some of the little touches that add interest and change in a dress.

Handbags, too, frequently may be made at home to harmonize with the costume. Save old frames after their fabric wears, and use these as a basis for a new bag.

All these details may be tied together with costume jewelry, much of which can be made at home after purchasing inexpensive where-with-all from which to make them.

Laundering Aids

If the water for laundering in your vicinity is a little on the hard side and you find it difficult to get suds in your wash tub, try adding a little ammonia or borax to soften it. There are also several good types of water softeners on the market.

Use mild soaps for ordinary laundering and use flake or chip soap for the washing machine.

White cottons and linens can withstand a moderate use of soap without turning yellow. They usually may be boiled without injuring them.

Only gentle soaps should be used on colored cottons and they should never be washed in too hot water. Never hang in sun.

Silks and rayons take mild soap and lukewarm or cool water. Never rub or twist them while washing or you will break the fibers.

Three rinses are necessary for most types of clothing if you really want to remove all the soap from them.

Fashion Forecast

Slim hiplines are being accented with loose swinging jackets, especially effective on the bolero variety.

Jewelry shown with prints needs to be chosen very carefully. It's supposed to add glitter, but must be in good taste, the kind that strikes you in the face. Consider it as a very important part of the costume.

Dull silver is replacing gold in jewelry, it seems. This is particularly effective on the pastel wools, but gold is still the best choice for black.

Bumper hats which can be dressy as required for some occasions such as weddings will have their spree too, so if you're the type for this hat, investigate its possibilities.

Discouraged about your constipation? Then read this sincere, unsolicited letter:

"I tried so many kinds of laxatives for constipation, but after a while they all failed to do their work. I started to eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN some time ago and was surprised to find this wonderful product helped me as many laxatives had failed to do. I eat it every day now and am happy to say I feel like a new man!" Mr. B. Lee Ward, 115 Park Avenue, Edgewood 5, R. I.

Yes, eating ALL-BRAN regularly often brings lasting relief from constipation due to lack of bulk in the diet. For best results, eat it for breakfast every day—and drink plenty of water. ## Taffy in Life Better Than Epitaphy After—Depew

On his eighty-fifth birthday famed orator Chauncey Depew was invited to a gala dinner. All the notables present took turns in making highly complimentary speeches about the guest of honor. Finally there were cries of "Speech! Speech!"

"You have no idea how good it is to hear words of praise while I'm still alive," said Depew. "I'd much rather have the taffy than the epitaphy."

 24 hours every day, 7 days every week, never stopping, the kidneys filter waste matter from the blood.
 If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove surplus fluid, excess acids and other waste matter that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole system is upset when kidneys fail to function properly.
 Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warns that something is wrong. You may suffer nagging back ache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, getting up at night, swelling.

BASEBALL has grown restless. Especially in the spring. This time they will be playing and training as far apart as Hawaii and Cuba. Teams will be shifted all over the spring map.
 The Giants move from Miami to Phoenix and travel as far westward as Hawaii.
 The Cleveland Indians shift from Clearwater, Fla., to Tucson, Ariz. The Yankees tour Cuba and sections of Central and South America before landing at St. Petersburg, Fla. The Dodgers leave Florida for Cuba and other Latin Grantland Rice

The new slogan ought to be—"Join a ball club and see most of the world."
 The Cardinals are firmly set at St. Petersburg, the Red Sox at Sarasota and the Tigers at Lake Wales. The Yankees hit St. Petersburg around March 12. The Reds report back to Tampa, Arizona gets its first big league training test with the Giants at Phoenix and the Indians at Tucson, where a warm, dry sun ought to help.
 But we like the training idea of the Cardinals, Red Sox and Tigers best. They go directly to one spot, from which point they have only a short traveling range to meet high grade competition.

Smart ball players begin working out their legs before spring training starts through golf or hunting. Ball players could use better legs. Watch a pitcher after he hits a triple. He winds up at third, puffing like a volcano and it often takes him an extra inning or two to retain his pitching form.

The Cardinal System
 The St. Louis Cardinals have the best idea of the qualities that go into the making of a good ball player. Their farm system was arranged on the general idea of giving experience to young players who could run and throw. For the past 20 years the average Cardinal could run and he had a good arm. Hard hitters or big hitters who were slow, rarely stayed around. Ball players with bad arms were not wanted, no matter how good they might look otherwise.
 The arms of Terry Moore and Country Slaughter in the past have been as deadly as twin rifles—and both were extremely fast on their feet. When a Cardinal starts from first to third he usually makes it. And when some rival starts from first to third he is quite often cut down short of the bag.
 Branch Rickey and Sam Breadon were the pair who worked out this selective plan and now Rickey is using it for his Dodgers. Experience is a big factor but a brace of young legs and a young throwing arm are also useful.

Dodgers Are Younger
 Eddie Dyer and Durocher are both banking on speed and good arms this season. The Dodgers have this advantage—they are younger. More than one Cardinal star is now deep in the veteran class and speed doesn't increase with the years—not even with a Terry Moore and an Enos Slaughter.

If Robinson makes good at third, or wherever he is used, his addition will increase Dodger speed.
 Teams in the National league hoping to crowd out either Brooklyn or St. Louis will need more speed than they have shown so far. A large number of ball players can get in better condition and stay in better condition than many do. For any daily competition that runs through 154 games demands the best sort of physical condition. This can be obtained much better by sticking as long as possible to one spot, rather than through extensive traveling around.

College and Pro War
 There is now an underground, undeclared war between the colleges and pro football which may break into the open any day or any week.
 The colleges are charging that the pro leagues are taking away star football players, who have from one to two years left for college football—a direct violation of promises not to take any man who is eligible for the college game.
 The pro leagues are charging that college football coaches and college athletic associations are holding players in college, or trying to hold them, long after their classes have graduated.
 This argument or feud of course dates back to the war. I happen to know that when the war came along, many southern coaches were something more than mildly upset over the fact that Army and Navy had taken away their best players.
 Unless he actually wants to finish a college education above everything else, I can see no reason why a man of 25 or 26, especially those with families, should stay on in college to play football. Under these circumstances, I would say that he is entitled to leave college and get the best pro job available.
