OBJECTIVES IN MOSCOW

WASHINGTON. — As a military man, General Marshall planned two great offensives. One was in 1918 when he charted for General Pershing the transfer of one million men from St. Mihiel to the Meuse-Argonne front, plus 40,000 tons of ammunition, 34 hospitals, 93,000 horses, 164 miles of railway and 87 depots-all in a week's time with no enemy aviator discovering it.

The other was in the last war when as chief of staff he planned the historic landing on Normandy.

These two offensives, great as they were, in some respects are not as difficult as the two great peacetime objectives which George Marshall as secretary of state is at-tempting to win at the conference in Moscow. Those two objectives

1. A permanent peace treaty with the nation which has caused every major European war in the past century-Ger-

2. The end of our present suspicious, chip-on-the-shoulder re-lations with Russia and establishment of a permanent friendship with the nation which can be our most disastrous enemy.

Both, obviously are interdependent. And if Marshall can win real friendship with Russia, the treaty with Germany will be much easier to perfect.

LESSON FROM LATIN AMERICA

One of the great lessons learned from our Pan-American relations is the importance of teamwork. Prior to the good-neighbor policy we worked as an individual nation. We landed troops in Haiti, Nicaragua and the Dominican Republic. We banged Mexico over the head with diplomatic threats and mobilized troops on her border. Result: All Latin America disliked us.

Then Sumner Welles sold Roosevelt the idea of being a good neighbor, of sharing responsibility. So when trouble arose in the western hemisphere, the Pan-American nations solved it as a team. Result: Fewer mistakes were made and when they were made Uncle Sam didn't get all the blame.

The British empire hitherto has operated on a unit basis. It didn't worry about teamwork. Result: It is hurriedly liquidating parts of the empire and reaping bitter criticism in Palestine and Greece. Further result: The United States is asked to share the financial responsibilities-and the headaches-in one of those countries without having too much to say about the things that cause the headaches.

If we become the bankers for British headaches, the pain and the blame can extend to Turkey, Italy, North Africa and all over the world. That's why we should take a leaf from the Pan-American good-neighget busy in Greece before it is too

DEFLATED DREAM

Most interesting, though somewhat deflated political figure in the senate today is Robert A. Taft of Ohio, together with the question: Will he achieve his long-cherished dream of following the footsteps of his father up the front steps of the White House as President of the United States?

Not since 1940, when energetic, progressive Wendell Willkie stole the Republican nomination from under Taft's nose, has he forgotten for a minute his ambition to duplicate the father-son presidential success of John Adams and John Quincy Adams.

Viewing the 1940 Philadelphia convention in retrospect-after the trouncing FDR handed Willkie-Taft was not too unhappy about it. In 1944 he realized that FDR could not be stopped, and he was glad to let Tom Dewey and his Ohio GOP colleague John Bricker "take the rap." The big chance for the Republican party, Taft figured, would come after the war.

The results of last November's congressional elections definitely convinced Taft that he was right. The next two years held his big chance for the presidency. After 1948 it might be too late. He has played his cards accordingly.

Taft immediately put himself at the head of the Republican party as far as Capitol Hill was con-cerned. At first, Taft was riding high, wide and handsome. Today, his reins are trailing in the dust. He is scarcely riding at all. And what is especially depressing is that Taft's reverses have come not from Democrats but from his own forces which he assumed to lead.

House Committee Leaders Average 17 Years' Service

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth in a series of articles dealing with new congressional committees and their chairmen.)

By WALTER A. SHEAD

WASHINGTON.-Although Republican legislators were relegated to the background during the past 15 years of Democratic ascendency, the 17 G.O.P. representatives who now head the house committees under the reorganization act have a long record of service in congress.

The 17 committee chairmen, a survey reveals, have served in congress for an average of 17 years. Veteran legislator of the group is Cong. Harold Knutson of Minnesota, who has served in the lower house for 30 years. His service has embraced two wars as he was first elected to congress in 1917. Committee chairman with the least tenure is Cong. Fred Bradley of Michigan, whose service has been limited to eight years.

The list of house committee chairmen continues:

Agriculture

CLIFFORD R. HOPE (KAS.), new chairman of the agriculture committee, promises a bi-rather than a political basis. He advocates an agricultural program for soil conservation, marketing research, rural electrification, farmto - market roads, reduction of farm on an economic tenancy and revision of the farm parity price formula to bring it up to date and to include labor costs. In addition to the more traditional supports for farm prices and markets, Hope emphasizes higher dietary standards brought about by better nutrition education and continuing high industrial employment. Hope, a 53-year-old lawyer, was born in Iowa but has lived in Finney County, Kas., since 1906. He is a member of a Garden City, Kas., law firm. After army service in World War I, Hope was elected to the Kansas house of representatives in 1920 and was made speaker in 1925. He was elected to congress in 1926 and has been re-elected regularly. The fifth Kansas district, which Hope represents, sprawls over 33 counties in the southwestern part of the state. Its 1940 population was 296,118. In the heart of the country's breadbasket, the fifth district is overwhelmingly rural and agricultural.

On non-agricultural matters, Hope generally votes with the majority of his Republican colleagues. On agricultural bills, he voted against the agricultural adjustment act in 1933, for the soil conservation act in 1936, for wheat crop insurance in 1938 and for including farm costs in parity prices in 1942.

Executive Department

Expenditures

CLARE E. HOFFMAN (MICH.), new chairman of the committee on expenditures in the executive departbor book and let the United Nations | ments, is one of six Republicans in the house who voted with the majority of their party 100 per cent of the time on controversial roll calls in closing months of the 79th con-

Not normally important, the committee which he now takes over sometimes comes into the limelight, as when it handled the full employment bill in 1945-46. Hoffman vigorously opposed this bill, even in the compromise version which finally passed the house by a vote of 320 to 84. The expenditures committee also has been given jurisdiction over surplus property legislation. Otherwise, the committee's most important jurisdiction is over government reorganization. In this field, Hoffman voted to recommit the government reorganization bill in 1938 and to recommend the later reorganization bill in 1945.

Hoffman was born 71 years ago in Pennsylvania, went to law school at Northwestern university and later moved to Michigan, where he now lives in the town of Allegan. He has been in the house since 1935.

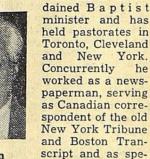

Hoffman's district is made up of six counties in the southwestern part of the state. Its 1940 population was 242,339. The district is predominantly rural and agricultural. Small industrial enterprises exist in quarrying, glass, pottery and machinery. Labor organizations, especially the CIO, have increased their membership there in the last few years but are not a significant power politically. Hoffman has introduced a district's population in 1940 was 336, number of labor bills which are 642. It has long been considered strongly opposed by organized labor. safely Republican.

Foreign Affairs

CHARLES A. EATON (N. J.), new chairman of the foreign affairs committee, usually follows Republican party policy on domestic matters and the Vandenberg line on foreign affairs.

Eaton was a delegate to the United Nations conference in San Francisco and an alternate delegate to the general assembly in London. He voted for the United Nations implementation bill in 1945, and for the loan to Britain in 1946. He also voted for the amendment to the UNRRA appropriation in 1945 prohibiting use of the funds in countries denying freedom to American press correspondents.

Eaton, who has been in congress since 1925, was born in Nova Scotia 79 years ago and spent most of his early life in Canada. He is an or-cial correspondent of the London Times. He also has specialized in industrial relations and for a time was head of the industrial relations department of the National Lamp Works, General Electric company.

The fifth New Jersey district, which Eaton represents, is in the north central part of the state and is predominantly industrial and residential. A considerable part of its population (329,305 in 1940) commutes to work in New York City. Both the CIO and AFL are well organized in the district, and National Association of Manufacturers and chamber of commerce also have substantial membership.

Veterans' Affairs

EDITH NOURSE ROGERS (MASS.), chairman of the new committee on veterans' affairs, is especially interested in disabled veterans, but in general she is sympathetic with most of the aims of major veterans' organizations.

The new committee takes over functions of the old committees on pensions, invalid pensions and World war veterans' legislation. Mrs. Rogers' primary purpose in the new committee, she said recently, is to rework the entire body of existing law on veterans' pensions, disability compensation and life insurance so as to remove the inequities which have arisen under it as a result of its piecemeal growth.

Mrs. Rogers, 65 years old, is a former social service administrator who served in Europe in the Red Cross in World War I. She was first elected to congress in 1925 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of her husband. During the 1920s also she served as the personal representative of Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover in the care of disabled veterans.

On controversial matters, Mrs. Rogers votes with the majority of her Republican colleagues about twothirds of the time and deserts them to side with the Democrats about one-third of the time. On almost the only controversial veterans' matter to come before congress in 20 vears, Mrs. Rogers voted against overriding the soldiers bonus veto in 1936.

The fifth Massachusetts district, which Mrs. Rogers represents, includes parts of Essex and Middlesex counties bordering the Boston metropolitan area. It has some small farms, but is primarily residential. There is little industry except in the city of Lowell which has a concentration of textile mills. Organized labor has little strength in the district outside of Lowell. The Graduate Hair Styling School of William.

William, internationally - known thair stylist, lecturer and author, is the chief instructor of what has been termed "America's most advanced and unusual school" for the teaching of master coiffure design technique.

Since establishment of the school a few months ago, 85 per cent of the classes have been comprised of exservicemen eager to re-enter the beauty field they deserted for the battlefield, William reveals.

Following army precedent, the raining course has been streamlined for completion in only four weeks. In the basic courses of wet hair shaping, dry hair shaping, pin curling methods and artistic hair combing, however, the ex-servicemen find slight resemblance to rifle practice, grenade launching or 15-

One of the distinctive features of William's school is the use of live models on which the ex-G.I.s practice coiffure design artistry-altogether dissimilar to the straw-filled dummies on which they practiced rudiments of bayonet artistry.

In fact, any similarity between the basic training course at the hair styling school and the basic training course at any army post is purely accidental. But the tough ex-G.I.s don't seem to mind. They remember how their army training prepared them for beachhead invasions. Now they don't want to be lacking in preparation for bleachhead invasions.

Blind People Ask To Be Considered As Human Beings

WASHINGTON .- "The blind ask no more than to be treated like human beings," insists Herbert Yanraes in a booklet, "What Do You Know About Blindness?"

Contending that would-be benefactors often do more harm than good, the author lists 10 rules for aiding sightless persons:

1. Speak in a normal tone of voice: a blind man is not deaf.

2. Don't express sympathy for a blind person within his hearing.
3. Use the word "blind" without hesitation; it won't offend him.

4. Don't be over indulgent in helping a sightless person find a seat in a vehicle or to climb stairs. Placing his hand on a leading object is enough.

5. In lending assistance when walking or crossing an intersection, offer your arm instead of grabbing his. Proceed in a straight line if possible.

6. When entering a room where there is a blind person, say something to herald your arrival. The same when you depart.

7. Address a blind person directly, not through another individual.

8. Avoid gushing over the usual things which a blind person can do. 9. Refrain from talking about an 'extra sense' or 'providential compensation.'

10. Be natural and kind, but never patronizing.

Anywhere You Look There's Oil

But Most Surprising of All Locations Is High in Colorado Clouds.

HAMILTON, COLO .- Look where you will-in the Pacific ocean, off the coast of California, in the jungles of South America, in the dust bowl of Oklahoma-you can always find an oil field.

Travel the world over and you will never see one in a more sur-prising location than the Wilson Creek field of Colorado. Anyone but an oil man, who takes his oil wherever he can find it, would wonder how the field ever was discovered in the first place.

For Wilson Creek sits precariously in the clouds on the continental divide, 8,378 feet above sea level. It's the highest field in the United States and you take your life in your hands to get there.

You start from Craig, Colo., over the "Little Burma Road," which is called that because it looks like the famous and equally hazardous wartime route over the Himalayas. Giant Pin Cushions.

For 40 breath-taking miles, you wind around towering mountain peaks, looking dizzily off into space, while your ears pop as you gain altitude. You don't see a man-made structure the entire trip until suddenly you reach the roof of the continent and there you are at Wilson Creek where oil derricks stick crazily out from the mountainside ike pins in giant pin cushions.

These wells are on shelves carved out of the sides of the peaks. A false move at any of these sites would send a careless man spinning a thousand feet down to a rocky canyon floor. Amazingly there have been no such false moves to this day at Wilson Creek. The nation's highest oil field was discovered in 1938 and until the mammoth development began two years ago at nearby Rangely field was the biggest producing area in Colorado. No Pumping Problem. Gaining access to Wilson Creek nvolved a major feat in road engineering. Even after the road was finished, there remained the gargantuan task of keeping it clear of snowdrifts. Up here at the top of the continent a 14-inch snow in mid-May isn't unusual. There's an airfield for emergency use.

The Texas Co. and the California Co., a subsidiary of Standard Oil of California, developed Wilson Creek. There's no pumping problem. The oil just flows downhill to the nearest refineries.

Wilson Creek's 29 wells produce about 7,000 barrels of oil a day in the summertime from the Morrison and Sundance sands at depths of training at 200 flight schools and 6,000 to 7,000 feet. In winter, the paraffin in the crude gets stiff from the cold and hampers the flow of

Passing of 'Saturday Night'

America is losing something in the passing of the old-fashioned Saturday night. We indorse a recent national weekly magazine editorial deploring the spread into the smaller cities and towns of the idea of closing stores so early on Saturday that Saturday night shopping is disappearing.

"Merchants in the smaller towns are taking a big chunk of pleasure out of life in their communities by heading into this program," the publication quotes a Minnesota country editor as writing. "The Saturday night shopping trip is like the Satur-day night bath. It has a social an-Nothing does so much for keeping town and country contacts."

Good here! But there is little hope. In the headlong dive into a new order of shorter days, shorter weeks, shorter schedules and shorter sweats, the American week has been processed into a five-day affair with the old-fashioned Saturday blitzed to a fare-thee-well.

Saturday night was the great night of the American week through most of its history. It was something to look forward to. It had the flavor of a combination picnic, bazaar, county fair and jamboree. There was a banjo-on-my-knee mood to it.

The stores kept open until 10 and closed reluctantly. The dimming of the store lights was as sad as the last tune at the country dance. The crowds were slow going home. Saturday night died hard.

Today the people quit work Friday night or early Saturday and settle into a prolonged program of week-end recreations that will make em miserable. They don't get as much fun out of a 48-hour pursuit of happiness as they used to get between 7 and 1 Saturday night.

Yesterday people went to town Saturday night, fresh, smiling and in a mood for high adventure, and got back around midnight still feeling they had a good time. Today they pile into the jalopy early Sat-urday morn in a mood of irritation and with their faces fairly screamin' "We're off for a week-end and Lord how we hate it!"

HOG PRICES NOW 10 TIMES THE 1900 AVERAGE FIGURE

A CALLER was reminiscing a bit about his boyhood days around the turn of the century. At that time he was assisting his father, a hog and grain buyer, in an Illinois town. On one occasion the farmers had been witholding their hogs in hopes of securing a better price. That increase came suddenly. Hogs jumped to $2.85 a hundred, up from $2.40. The result was a flooded market. As he related the incident, it recalled to me the statement of an Illinois farmer friend, made to me last October. He had some 400 hogs ready for market when meat controls were lifted. For those hogs he received slightly more than $27 a hundred, or about 10 times the average price around 1900.

The two instances caused me to look up a few figures that might have effected the difference in price. The first thing that makes a price is demand. In 1900 the nation had a popula-tion of 76,094,131. To feed that number we then had a total of 62,868,000 hogs. In 1933, when we had 62,127,000 hogs, Henry Wallace issued his death sentence for all the little pigs in his effort to increase the price of their parents. Two years later we were down to a low of only 39,066,000 porkers. From that low figure we climbed, under stress of war necessities, to a high of 83,852,000 in 1944. Through government meat production control, high ration point values to the consumer, a high price for corn and the directed regimentation of American farms, that 1944 top was reduced to 59,739,000 in 1946, when we had a total population of 139,-621,431 to feed. The population had increased more than 75 per cent since 1900, but the number of hogs had increased less than 20 per cent during the same period. A part, at least, of that increase in price was occasioned by a demand that could not be met.

EXPENSIVE CORN

The price of corn was another factor in upping the price of hogs. In 1900, 22 to 25 cents was considered about tops. In 1945, $1.50 was about an average price. As hog fattening feed went up, hog prices soared with the feed.

Still another factor, representing a considerable item of increase, was the difference in money values. In 1900 our dollars had a world standard gold value, and our total stock of dollars amounted to $2,366,220,000. In 1945 our dollars were worth only what they would buy-there was no standard value-but we had a total of about $48,000,000,000. A very considerable part of that difference, between $2.85 in 1900 and $27 in 1945, for hogs, as well as in the price of corn, was inflation. We had billions more dollars, but each dollar bought much less of both corn and hogs. The farmer was not doing as well as the prices seemed to indicate. Government regulation had not made him rich overnight.

ARMY'S CIVILIAN WORKERS

SENATOR BYRD tells us the army has practically the same number of civilian employees as it has officers and men and WACs in uniform. The WACs-they are in uniform-do much of the stenographic and secretarial work of the army and a considerable portion of the hospital nursing. Officers—in uniform—are the executives of the army at Washington and at the widely distributed army stations. Soldiers—in uniform—perform the clerical work of the army from companies up to brigades and divisions. Army supplies are largely provided from privately owned plants, not from government-owned, civilianoperated arsenals. Army organization usually has about two men-in uniform-back of the lines to each one actually carrying a gun. With such conditions why should there be more than a million civilian em-ployees for the army? What can they find to do? It would seem that some of these expensive civilian adjuncts, costing an average of better than $2,500 a year each, could be dispensed with without sacrificing anything in our national defense. It is the man with a gun who protects us.

Make Your Easter Dinner Springlike! (See recipe below.)

Easter Favorite

According to the calendar, Easter comes after spring officially begins, but we have always rather looked to this special holiday as a start of the spring season. Is it any wonder then, that we try to make the dinner menu for this day especially springlike?

Traditionally we like to serve ham or lamb for Easter, but this is really up to you and your family as far as taste and budget is concerned. Whatever you plan to serve, garnish it properly and make the platter look as pretty as a picture. A roast loin of pork does very well with a border of alternate browned potatoes and spiced crabapples. If you are serving ham, use the same garnish. But with lamb you might do well to substitute minted and spiced pears or pineapple for the garnish. In either case, the fruit serves as a delightful relish.

*Roast Loin of Pork. (Serves 6) 5 pounds loin of pork 11/2 tablespoons salt Pepper

Have loin of pork prepared at the market. Rub salt and pepper into the meat. Place in rack in an open pan and roast in a 350-degree or moderate oven allowing 30 minutes to the pound.

pour excess fat from pan and baste thoroughly with the following sauce. Strain before serving.

Quick Cinnamon Rolls. 2 cups sifted flour

3 teaspoons baking powder 1 teaspoon salt 4 tablespoons shortening ½ cup milk 2 eggs, beaten ½ cup raisins

Sift dry ingredients together. Cut in shortening. Mix milk with eggs and work into dry mixture with raisins. Roll dough 34-inch thick then sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon. Roll as for jelly roll. Cut into 1/2inch slices and place in greased muffin tins. Bake in a hot (450-degree) oven for 12 to 15 minutes. Serve hot.

*Snow Cake. (Sugarless)

1/2 cup shortening 2 teaspoons grated orange rind 1 cup light corn syrup 21/4 cups sifted cake flour 21/4 teaspoons baking powder 1/4 teaspoon salt 2 eggs

1/2 cup milk 11/2 teaspoons vanilla

Blend shortening and orange rind; add corn syrup gradually, beating well after each addition. Add 1/4 of the dry ingredients which have been sifted together. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add remaining flour alternately with milk and vanilla. Mix thoroughly. Pour batter into two greased 8 or 9-inch pans. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven for 25 to 30 minutes. While still warm, spread chocolate crunch between layers and over top.

Glorify the muffin by occasionally adding dates, raisins, nuts, grated orange rind, etc., to them before baking.

If muffins or biscuits bake a little ahead of dinner, loosen them from the pan and set in a warm place. Never let them sit as they are, or they will steam and become soggy. The same goes for breads and rolls.

Grated cheese sprinkled on top of biscuits gives them delightful flavor and color. Do this before baking, of course.

Pillow Cases

For the best service from pillow cases, select cases of a firm weave, little sizing, and with smooth and even hems. It's also well to remember that sizes are important-cases too large wrinkle under the head, and if too small, they bunch the pillow into a hard lump, and are more likely to be strained. The best size is a case one and one-half inches wider and six inches longer than the pillow.

Michigan Bell Reports on 1946

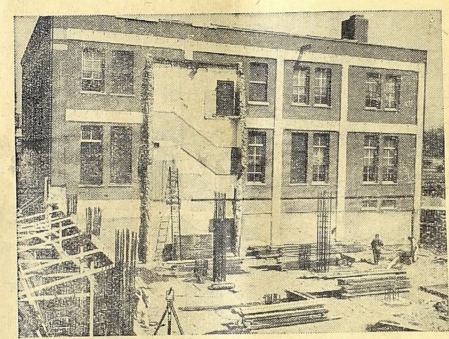

During 1946, Michigan Bell installed more telephones, served more telephones and handled more calls per telephone than ever before. Total revenue was larger, too. But so were expenses. Earnings on investment were more than in 1945. But in the second six months, due to rising costs, earnings were on a downward trend.

ABOUT CALLS - On the average business day there were 7,304,000 local calls, and 197,000 long distance calls . . . increases of 22% and 23% respectively over 1945. Although at times some calls were delayed by insufficient facilities, telephone people gave more good service than ever before in history.

ABOUT TELEPHONES - Michigan Bell installed 34,000 telephones a month, double 1945. A net gain of 204,000 telephones brought the total in service to a record high of 1,378,000. However, it was necessary to give partyline service to many thousands who would have preferred individual lines. And 65,000 others were waiting for telephones at year's end.

ABOUT CONSTRUCTION - $36,000,000 worth of buildings and equipment were added. This investment, all-time high for one year, would have been much greater but for continuing shortages of materials. Increasing demands for service and higher labor and material costs have raised the estimate for our 5-year post-war construction program to $220,000,000.

people, about one-third of whom had less than a year's experience. Nearly half of all Michigan Bell men were returned veterans of World War II. Wage adjustments, made early in 1946, amount to $8,461,000 a year. Payrolls totaled $54,445,000, up 50% over 1945.

ABOUT REVENUE AND EXPENSES - We took in more money than ever before - $91,000,000, or 13% more than 1945. But expenses also increased. Operating payrolls were up 39% for the year. Total expenses, excluding taxes, were 25% over 1945. Total cost of giving service, including taxes, was $79,000,000 - an increase of 11% over 1945. Revenues in 1946 include $3,500,000 subject to refund to customers if the pending rate reduction order of the Michigan Public Service Commission is upheld by the court.

THE PROSPECTS—Our objectives in 1947 are to provide as quickly as possible: 1. Enough telephone plant to take care of all unfilled orders for service and to care for future demands; 2. Facilities to furnish promptly the type of service the customer desires; 3. Improvements in local and long distance service; and 4. Extension and improvement of rural service.

Present indications are that shortages of needed materials will continue to handicap us in 1947. But, we expect by year's end to have filled most requests for service and to have made progress in further improving the quality of service.

ABOUT EARNINGS - Earnings for the year were $12,000,000, or 7.2 cents on each dollar invested in the business. If the Public Service Commission's rate reduction order is upheld, 1946 earnings will drop to 5.9 cents, insufficient, we believe, to attract the new capital needed for expansion and improvement. As it was, during the last half of the year, rising costs sent the earnings rate on a downward trend, which pointed to the possibility that higher rates might become necessary to assure financial stability of the business.

Telephone men and women turned in a record-breaking performance in 1946, and we have confidence that in 1947 they again will surpass all previous accomplishments and give to Michigan continuing telephone service of the very highest order.

TAWAS HI-SPEED

JIII McFarlane, whose father, Richard, disappeared in World War I, falls in love with Spang Gordon, a young lieutenant. He tells her that her brother, Ric, is seeing a divorcee and she goes to camp to investigate. Ric avoids her but she later sees him with Sandra Calvert, an older, hardened woman. Captain Mackey, known as "Old Cy-anide," tells her he knew her mother many years ago. She feels she knows him. Sprang calls to say good-bye. Later, while riding with Dave Patter-son, a family friend secretly in love with her mother, Julia, she is thrown from her horse and taken to a hospital. That night Richard returns from the dead to visit Julia.

CHAPTER X

Julia ignored the interruption.
"He spent two months trying to find something, some record, some grave -anything that would end our sus-pense. He went through dozens of hospitals, even the insane places; he even went out with crews of men who were opening graves! It was a nerve-racking experience for him -and not too happy for me, Richard."

"Sorry." He let his gaze fall, let his clasped hands dangle between his knees. "I didn't think you'd be concerned. I thought you'd be relieved to be rid of me."

"Your conscience must have been more acute than we gave you credit for," said his father, scornfully. "If it hadn't been for Julia's obstinacy, I'd have had you declared legally dead long ago."

Richard laughed, a short, difficult bark. "Legally, I am dead. Richard McFarlane no longer exists.

Not on any record or roster, at least. I've been Roger Mackey for twenty years now. There was a lot of confusion after the armistice, and I happened to come into possession—accidentally, of course—of a passport and arms. passport and some other papers. It suited me not to be Richard Mc-Farlane any longer. I wanted to start over. I stayed on in Paris for a few years and did pretty well—"

"Gambling, as usual?" This from John I. Richard's mouth lifted in a condescending, mirthless smile. That smile, too, was an aching piece of Julia's remembering. "I got along," he said, "in various ways. And then things got rather nasty in France—there was all that argument about the debts, Americans weren't popular—so I came back to this country. I didn't know enything to get into this way. anything to get into-things were a little tough here too, you remember? So I went back to the army. This fellow-this Mackey, whose papers I had-had a commission. I got it renewed, I asked for service in Hawaii and got it. Then last year they sent me back. I'm at Ridley Field now."

Almost Julia cried out. Ric was at Ridley Field. But she caught herself in time, made a little movement toward her father-in-law, begging for silence. He caught the gesture, or perhaps he did not remember, did not connect Ric with any of this. The old forgot easily.

Richard must not know about Ric. All their lives she had built their father up to heroic stature for her children, made him a splendor to admire, but knowing all the while what a false and crumbling foundation she built upon, how dangerous was the structure she raised if a fierce wind blew upon it. But she must not destroy it now.

She must not tear Richard down, offer that ruin to Richard's son. She must not destroy that pictured inheritance of gallantry. Ric was not strong and courageous like Jill. He had all the weaknesses of the Mc-Farlane men; if he had inherited any strength from her it was latent, it had not begun its growth. Now she could not risk giving him a father who had callously abandoned him even before he had learned to speak that father's name.

So she said, rather flatly, "You were at Pearl Harbor, Richard?"

His face changed, twisted. His eyes shifted. "Yes, I was there— at Hickam Field. Now I'm at Ridley. But I've worked for what I've got in the army."

"So," Julia let her breath out, thankful-oh, so terribly thankful that Jill was away! "So you are Roger Mackey now. But why, Richard-why? All this talk, and I still don't understand it. You must not have cared about us at all. You didn't want to see us again, your own father-your own children?"

"I did think about the kids, of course," he said, "and you, too, Dooley. But I hadn't been a very successful husband. You were pretty well fed up with me when I left.'

A Three-Way

Conversation

"I was nineteen years old!" Julia protested. "I'd loved you and married you, and then I'd been left alone, for weeks at a time-not ing!" knowing where you were, even hungryl I had a baby, and then I was going to have another right awayand then it was war, and John I. got that commission for you, because he thought war was what you needed-that it might quiet that Richard McFarlane again, the anrestlessness in you-and so you swer is no. "I gave you money when I had it, Dooley," he said.

"And borrowed it back again when the horses were running at Bowie!" she thought bitterly, but she did not say it. She said dully, "You must have been very sick of me. I must have cried too much, been frightened too much, been frightened too much, been frightened too much, belt our lifetimes though you know the left slope. been frightened too much, left alone there in that cheap little flat. "You were all I had, Dooley," he said gently, "you and those kids." "They're pretty well grown up now, I suppose?" Richard changed the subject with the facile ease that had always been his gift. "How are they?"

"They're very well." She would not tell him anything. Not about Ric, not about Jill's accident, nothing. He had no right to know. He had no rights at all. "Richard is twenty-seven, Jill's twenty-six."

Richard Offers No Solution

"Makes a man feel old. Are they like you, Dooley?" Richard asked. "They're entirely unlike. But they're both McFarlanes."

"Married, either of them?" "No, they're not married."

"At least I'm not a grandfather!" he said, smiling thinly. "Well, I'll push along. Due back for reveille tomorrow. Have to drive all night to make it."

"But, Richard, what happens now?" Julia cried. "What are you going to do?"

He faced her, and she felt herself receding, shrinking as she had al-ways done when he looked at her with that cold, blue stare.

"What happens now depends on you, Dooley. As for what I'm going to do-so far as I know, noth-

"But-you can't just come back this way-from the dead!"

"I've never been dead. I came back because suddenly I wanted to see you, hear your voice again. If you mean shall I go back to being and embarrassing. I'm in the "Richard, I've had twenty-five

I was too you would have ended all this misery of uncertainty for me, you are still the man I was married to, Richard. You're still my children's father. Nothing can change that." "You can change it if you like,

Dooley." "How can I change it? You mean I can divorce you? How can I divorce a man who doesn't exist?

don't they? They might like me if they knew me. Though perhaps you've already attended to that?" "I've given them a hero for a father!" Julia flamed. "You did that for yourself, Dooley, not for me. You're a proud woman, your pride wouldn't let you keep a man in your life unless he was heroic. And you don't want your pretty picture torn to pieces by the dismal reality. So I'll take myself off. You wouldn't want to shake hands, Father?"

John I. thrust his hands into his pockets, drawing in his brows. "No, I wouldn't! You make me ashamed that I am also a McFar-

Without a word Richard walked out of the house. They heard his car roar off down the drive.

John I. sank into a chair and dropped his head into his hands. Julia went quietly and kissed the thinned spot on the top of his head. She did not speak. David was mourning the unworthiness of Absalom, and there were no words to touch the dignity of that grief.

She went numbly, groping for the tair rail, up to her room.

Somehow, always, she had known! Always, unaware perhaps at times, she had been waiting for this, feeling the pressure of odd, uncertain dread. There was a strange and psychic bond, a vibration that lived on between two people who had been married, and she knew now that that quivering tie lived on, bridging years and si-lence, binding her to Richard, even though the bond was bitter. Eventually it had drawn him back to her. She had seen the nostalgia in his eyes, though he had tried to hide it behind his old, cool arrogance.

And now what? What lay ahead? What threatened her, her peace of mind, her pride for her children?

There was Ric. What if Richard found out about Ric, learned where he was, made contact with his son? And then there was Dave. She knew that Dave loved her, with another Richard flared. His eyes took on kind of love, deeper, finer-no fire or passion, no young fever, but the lasting love of a man who would cherish a woman forever.

Julia flung herself down on the bed.

"Oh, Dave!" her heart cried out. "Now that it's too late, I do love you! And what am I going to do?" Jill turned her head on the pillow, eased her body from the cramp of her splinted arm and taped shoul-

"Dooley, you look simply ghast-ly!" she said. "I've never seen black hollows under your eyes before. What's worrying you besides me?'

"Nothing," Julia lied gallantly. "You're enough for one dose. Do I look so pathetic? I must need some vitamins or something. It's missing you so much, I guess."

Julia Fails to-Deceive Jill

Jill drew the corners of her mouth in. "You're a rotten actress, Dooley. You're corny as heck and transparent as cellophane. When you hurt inside, it shows through like veins and things under a fluoroscope. Have you and Dave had a fight?'

"Of course not, silly. I haven't seen Dave since that Sunday. And why should we fight?"

"I don't know any good reason, but you are sort of difficult to understand at times, Dooley. You're so unpredictable. I think I know what you're thinking and feeling, and suddenly I discover I'm all lost and don't know you at all."

"I'm a mystery woman! Human enigma. But the fewer feelings we all have now the better off we'll be." Julia was being platitudinous, she knew, and undoubtedly Jill was probing past that evasive defense with her dry, shrewd young eyes. 'We're fighting a lot of people who've done away with feeling."

"And now," said Jill, in a mocking voice, "the gentlemanly ushers will pass among you, and all the ladies will deposit their ballots in the basket, please. And don't vote for yourselves, girls!" she chirped in a bright falsetto. "Dooley, if you won't talk, shut up! Don't insult my intelligence with that stuff!"

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Y HUSBAND is a wonderful man in every respect," writes a Texas wife, "but he never lets me handle any money. We live in my old home, an enormous old place, which Gordon recently has freed from a heavy mortgage, so that strictly speaking my mother might feel him the rightful owner. Our family includes Mother, my four children and a brother recently discharged from the service because of poor health.

"Gordon likes a generous table and wants his children nicely raised, pays dentist, school, department store and grocery bills willingly, but he checks every item, and makes me feel like a beggar as I explain a long-distance call or a charge at the florists. He never lets me know how we stand financially, but about twice a month when I ask for it, he gives me $5. If I ask oftener I don't get it. This money covers carfare, children's ice cream, library books, stamps, a hundred small things. I am always conscious of not having money, for a casual telegram, a lunch downtown, a magazine.

"Before my marriage I earned good money, put my brother through college and supported my parents. My father was never a successful business man, and my mother was of the old school that knew nothing of management. I was a fitter in our smartest frock shop, so that today I can make all my daughters' clothes and most of my own and mothers. We do all the housework and manage the vegetable garden and chickens. Of course, it is true that all the necessities of gracious living clothes food, laundry and so on, can be managed on charge accounts, but that never gives me the pleasure of Pride Hurt by Dependence.

"Spending!" this letter finishes, 'It is a real pleasure, isn't it? To feel that you can have a book or a taxi or a lunch downtown without that feeling of utter flatness and emptiness in your purse. I've argued with Gordon about it, but while he is perfectly amiable he is I was merely a child. My children, by the way, are aged 8, 6, 5 and 1, spent all the money you made as so that there is no question of my | fast as you made it, he is apprehenearning money again for some time. I miss the sensation of having money of my own. and my pride is hurt by complete dependence. I feel that a wife is a money-earner, too, especially when she gives a man the four children who will some day be such a comfort and delight. Other women surely have had this problem; can you give me any hint as to how it may be solved?"

Other women-many hundreds of other women-have indeed had this problem, Madeline, and as it usually rises from a certain situation, it is often curable. Your husband's attitude indicates that he is conscious of being heavily burdened; he is the only support of an elderly woman, a young wife, a sick man and four children. He is afraid. Afraid of waste and debt and extravagance; afraid of some day perers having to leave you and the ch dren helpless.

"He checks every item . . ."

A FIRM HAND ON THE PURSE STRINGS

The only thing Madeline has against her busband is that he doesn't let ber bandle money. Everything she buys must be on credit. At the end of the month be scrutinizes every bill carefully, and questions her about any item that seems to him unnecessary or extravagant.

They have four children, so Madeline cannot work outside to earn pin money. Her mother and brother also are living with them for the present, so there is a large family to care for. They live in a big old mansion in Texas, a roomy and comfortable bome. Gordon has paid off the large mortgage on it, so he is virtually the owner, although title is in Madeline's mother's name.

Madeline says she feels like a child without any spending money. Gordon gives her about $10 a month to cover everything -stamps, carfare, candy for the children. Before she was married Madeline earned a good salary, and with it she supported her father and sent her brother through college.

Miss Norris replies that Gordon is conscious of the heavy burden he must bear. He is aware that Madeline is inclined to be a free spender, so be has taken the only means he knows to preserve the financial stability of his household. There are many ways, Miss Norris says, for a woman situated as Madeline is to earn a little money at home, such as making bome-made jelly and cookies or some novelty like rag

> It would seem that in so large a house you and your mother might find a source of income that you might rightfully divide as your own. Fitting up an apartment, or taking in children for overnight board are two easy ways of making money, but other very profitable things are being done by housewives today in their own homes. Two old sisters I know weave beautiful table runners in peasant colors; a California family is supporting itself making sturdy, rosy-cheeked cloth dolls. Cookies, bread, jams have a big sale in these times, and catering is surprisingly simple when handled in one's own neighborhood. A mother and two daughters here have all they can do at $2 a dinner, delivered hot at any hour. Even with your four children you can find time for one of these activities, or one of a hundred others, and at once save your own pride and lighten your husband's anxieties.

Divorce, War and Liquor

Half the domestic troubles that have led to an increase in divorces this year can be blamed on the war and half on alcohol, according to Judge McNamee of Nevada.

"Four out of five complainants are women," said Judge McNamee, "but the social stigma of a man divorcing a woman has disappeared." Troubles arising from the loneliness of war and the excessive drinking of one of the partners, lead the entire field of reasons for the increase in broken homes, he added.

B ASEBALL owners, managers, players and writers often can be wrong. So can baseball fans-who don't like to admit it. Here is a letter from an ardent

Ozark country rooter:
"Why don't you fellows admit that all the great ball players of modern time come from the Ozark country, where they can run and throw? I mean Arkansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas? I mean such fellows as Dean, Hubbell, Pepper Martin, Warneke and others. Also this Cardinal ball club that whipped the eastern Dodgers and the eastern Red Sox last year? Red Sox last year? We have the legs and arms in this rugged country that the East doesn't have."

In mingling and hanging around with the Cardinals, one of our favorite ball clubs, we began a slight check-up.

In a vague way, we also had the idea that this fast-running, hardthrowing, hustling team was a product of the cottonwood trail, the country where men have arms and legs and take desperate chances. But we ran across a different answer in checking with the world's cham-

For example—there was Enos Bradsher ("Country") Slaughter, a ball player as typical of Cardinal strength as any man you can find -a ball player with a great arm and a pair of fast-flying legs. "Country" Slaughter should have been a typical Ozarkian. But we discovered that Slaughter came from Roxboro, N. C., and he got his start in the South Atlantic league with Columbus, Ga.

Well, what about George John ("Whitey") Kurowski, as good a third baseman as you'll meet today? "Whitey" Kurowski came from Reading, Pa., playing with Portsmouth in the Middle Atlantic league, where he hit only .386.

Come From Everywhere

Marty Marion certainly must be a member of the cottonwood trail. But we find that Marty came from Richburg, S. C., before moving to Rochester for his baseball education. Marty was with Rochester three years before they decided he could handle an infield rap.

But what about Stanley Frank Musial, possibly the best all-around ball player in the game? Musial reports from Donora, Pa., and almost his entire early career was along the Atlantic seaboard, until he came to the Cardinals six years ago.

Terry Moore came up from Memphis, Howie Pollet from New Orleans. Schoendienst worked in the East. Johnny Beazley is from Tennessee, the city being Nashville.

The Czark landscape certainly has its share of great ball play ers. More than its share.

It is surprising how many fans think of these hard-running, hardthrowing, hard-fighing Cardinals as a rather rough bunch from the Ozark landscape. But this Cardinal camp is one of the quietest and most orderly I have seen. They are all well-dressed, well-behaved, rather soft-voiced and always friendly.

Lon an Ozark Boy

I still miss my old tobacco-chewing pal, Lon Warneke, who could wash down a big hunk of tobacco with a bottle of beer. Lon, from Mt. Ida, Ark., held the all-around, tobacco-chewing championship. He has no successor on the Cardinals today.

The Cardinals' manager, Eddie Dyer, is probably best described as the exact opposite of Leo Durocher, his hottest rival, another great manager. Dyer is a graduate of Rice institute in Texas, one of the leading institutions of learning in this country. The rumor is that he was a Phi Beta Kappa. He was also a football star, one of the best in Texas in his time. He is a quiet, soft-spoken Texan, who has few arguments with umpires or anyone else. But don't forget that he knows his trade. As a minor league manager in the Cardinal farm system, he kept sending along ballplayers who made good.

Dyer had retired from baseball to work in the oil business with his two brothers in Houston, Tex., when Sam Breadon sent for him to fill in for Billy Southworth. As easy going as Dyer seems to be, there is nothing soft about him. You don't get to be the best blocking back in Texas football if you're on the soft side. Dyer has the respect and affection of his squad.

"My team wants to play winning baseball," he told me. "I don't have to watch their hours. They love the game and like to win. They keep in shape. I don't want anyone around I have to watch. Just give me men like Terry Moore, Marty Marion, Stan Musial, "Country" Slaughter, "Whitey" Kurowski, "Red" Munger, Howie Pollet and a few more like these, and I don't have to worry. Whatever happens, I know they are giving the team 100 per cent of all they have."

That seemed to be quite enough in 1946. Ask the Red Sox.
