Hale Auxiliary Ready For Poppy Sale

"Help and hope is the meaning of the memorial poppy to those who are paying the human cost of our world war victories," Mrs. Forrest Street-er, Publicity chairman of Glenn Staley Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary of Hale, stated today as the Auxiliary continued preparations for the annual observance of Poppy Days, May 23 and 24.

"All the money contributed by those who wear poppies in memory of the war dead goes to the aid of the war's living victims, the disabled veterans, their families and the families of the dead," she explained. "The dimes, quarters and dollars dropped into the contribution boxes of the volunteer poppy workers are the principal source of support for the continuous rehabilitation and child welfare work for the Auxiliary."

"The Government does much for the disabled but the Government cannot do everything. There are many veterans and veteran's families who do not come within the legal provisions for compensation. There are many others whose compensation is too meager to meet their needs. There are many fields of service into which official agencies cannot reach and there the Auxiliary goes with aid made possible by the poppy contributions."

"These are our disabled veterans and dependent families."

Profit, $50—But Houses Are Built

Hammer's Cheerful Song Assures Homes for Vets

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

(This is the third of a series describing how American ingenuity is helping to solve one of America's biggest problems—the G.I.'s No. 1 headache—the housing shortage.)

WASHINGTON.—Have you been in York, Pa., lately? It's a big little town of 50,000 population in southern Pennsylvania with a hinterland of rich farm country, of the famous Pennsylvania Dutch, where tables groan with seven-sweet-and-seven-sour dishes, as good victuals as you'll find though you wonder the world between hors d'oeuvres and baked alaskas from pole to pole and back again.

York is a busy place, a place of bustling industries whose products are known from coast to coast. It is also a town which can lift its eyes from the plowshare and the forge to think, simply and soundly, about caring for its own. It's a town of ingenuity.

Walk out to the Midland avenue section with me. You come upon a batch of clap-board houses—they line both sides of the street for a whole block—in various stages of completion. One group of workmen is finishing the grading on lots; another hauls plaster into a house; still others unload door frames across the street, and put the finishing touches to the roof of a house being built for a veteran.

Go a little farther downtown and you come to the Elm street houses—neat, obviously new, two-bedroom bungalows which have just been sold to veterans for $5,250 each.

On the other side of town, in Park Village, you can drive for blocks through winding streets flanked by new houses, partly completed houses, excavations for houses, and everywhere the cheerful song of the hammer and the saw, the lap of pouring concrete, the thud of the pick in the deep soil.

When the lights go on at night, you will notice that a great many of the old-fashioned, three-story row houses in downtown York are lighted from top to bottom. You'd guess that a lot of people were living in those houses. You'd be right. The buildings have been converted into small apartments.

It looks as though York is getting itself pretty well worked. A glance at the figures confirms just how well the town is doing. In 1946 York built 613 new houses—100 per cent more houses than were ever built in any previous year of the city's history. In addition, Yorkites added 481 new dwelling units by converting old houses into apartments.

Of course, this didn't just happen. It was made to happen by a great many local people determined that York's veterans would have a place to live.

The big drive got under way last year when a survey showed that one out of every three York veterans was living doubled up with friends or relatives in dilapidated old buildings in need of major repairs, or in trailers without standard plumbing facilities. That's the way it was in York a year ago when Mayor John L. Snyder appointed an 18-member emergency housing committee.

The committee's decision was that York should be able to provide 1,200 new units in 1946; another 1,800 this year. They called a meeting of every one concerned with housing; asked each builder to stand up and tell the group how many of the needed houses he would build in 1946—until the pledges met the quota.

Shortages of materials were a serious threat to this undertaking, but York builders had accepted their quotas and were determined to build houses. When they couldn't find the scarce materials near home, they went to Buffalo, to Ohio, to Hagerstown, Md.

Members of the housing committee pitched in with enthusiasm. One of them came back from a Sunday drive with two kegs of nails in his car—bought on the spot when he discovered a little country hardware store that had some. Someone else found a millwork concern in a nearby town which had some door frames for sale.

To keep prices down, local builders voluntarily cut profits. One went so far as to take a profit of only $50 per house on a large group of veterans' houses.

Because converting to apartments is quicker and takes less materials, York also undertook a campaign in this direction, aided by the Chamber of Commerce, the local housing expeditor, banks, press and radio.

In 1946—a year when shortages brought building programs in many communities to a dead stop—York built twice as many houses as had been produced there in any previous year. York's goal for 1947 is 1,800 new living units. The folk in York aren't promising anything—they aren't talking about what they're going to do. But in the first four months of the year—with the building season just getting under way—they've filed over 1,100 applications to build houses.

Big 4 Parley Is Failure; Wheat Pact Is Delayed

MOSCOW CONFERENCE: Little Accomplished

After seven weeks of wrangling, the foreign ministers' conference at Moscow ended in a state banquet. Results of the parley were extremely disappointing, even to those whose expectations had been small. It had been hoped that a treaty for Austria would be worked out, but even preliminary agreements could not be reached. The more important matter of the German treaty suffered the same fate, as expected.

Secretary of State Marshall bluntly blamed the Russians for obstructing the negotiations. He charged that the Soviet delegation had "widened rather than narrowed our differences."

Principal points of controversy were the definition of German and Austrian assets which the Russians want as reparations and the disarmament and demilitarization plan, known as the "four nation treaty."

Almost the only proposition accepted was one, introduced by Russian Foreign Minister Molotov, that all German prisoners of war in Allied hands be returned to Germany by December 31, 1948.

Failure to complete the Austrian treaty means that occupation troops of the four powers will remain in Austria for several more months.

WAR CRAFT: Garsson Case Again

A new move in the drawn-out war contracts graft case of Representative May and the Garsson brothers will be May's testimony in his own defense. His lawyer, Sawyer Smith, told the court that it is untrue that the 71-year-old Kentucky politician profited from deals between the Garsson munitions and Cumberland Lumber company. "Andrew J. May will take the stand and explain to you how every dollar of that money was spent, and how not one cent went to Andrew J. May, the lawyer asserted.

On trial with May are Henry and Murray Garsson, head of the war materials syndicate, and Joseph Freeman, the Garsson agent in Washington. The government prosecutor contends that May received $5,000 outright from the Garssons and two checks for $1,000 each for "intervening in behalf of the companies.

New evidence turned up by the FBI, according to the prosecutor, is the typewriter used in preparing the false invoices of the lumber company, through which it is alleged May received the bribes.

WHEAT AGREEMENT: British Won't Sign

There will be no world-wide agreement of wheat-producing countries on prices and marketing procedures in the near future. This seems certain as the International Wheat conference in London has broken up on British refusal to sign the proposed plan. Negotiations have been in progress for many weeks in an attempt to formulate a five-year price and marketing schedule.

Sir Herbert Broadley, British delegate, explained his reason for rejecting the draft was that the price scheme in it would not enable the price of wheat to fall quickly enough to a reasonable level. "The United Kingdom cannot afford to pay excessive prices for its imports," he said. "The world must face much lower prices for wheat than those ruling at present, but we want to see those prices achieved in a manner which protects the producer against hardship and enables necessary switches to be made without disaster."

Delegates from Canada, Australia and India followed the British lead. Leslie Wheeler, U. S. delegate, urged immediate acceptance of the draft. Brazil's delegate seconded him. This move was rejected. Wheeler then asked that the proposal be sent to the international wheat council, which will be held in Washington, and that countries not now adhering be invited to join. The conference accepted this request.

NO RENT BOOST: House Kills 10% Plan

The house banking committee, reversing its previous stand, voted down a proposal for a 10 per cent blanket increase in rents. It approved and sent on for action a bill continuing controls until December 31. The senate banking committee already has voted unanimously against any raise, and the senate's bill would continue control until March 1, 1948.

The vote in the house committee was 14 to 10. As outlined by Representative Wolcott, chairman, the house bill provides:

Continuance of rent control just about as it is now until December 31, with the President having authority by proclamation to keep ceilings in effect until next March 1 if he deems it necessary.

A new provision whereby tenants and landlords may voluntarily enter lease contracts for up to 15 per cent increases in rent, provided these leases do not expire before December 31, 1948.

BECAUSE he had a problem on his mind that morning Louie didn't give much attention to the man who got in his cab except to notice that he had an old, tired face and looked as though he might have money, and when he heard his passenger say, "Grand Central," he pulled out from the curb in a hurry and swung down a side street to Fourth avenue.

He hadn't had a decent fare that morning and his time would be up at noon. Grand Central, he knew, would meter about seventy-five cents, and if his fare was in the hurry he seemed to be and he got him there on time he might get a quarter extra, making it a dollar.

At Twelfth street, seeing some kind of a demonstration ahead of him, Louie tried to go down a side street to avoid being held up, but the street was filled with trucks and he had no choice but to fall in line behind the stalled uptown traffic. His mouth drew down at the corners and his hands tightened on the steering wheel as he read the signs and banners a group of demonstrators were carrying.

"Darn fools," he said. "Ain't we got troubles enough right here without people worryin' about what goes on in Spain and China and them other foreign countries?"

A faint smile played over his passenger's grim, sagging face. He had made a large donation to foreign relief himself, he remembered, about three months ago. He could make good use of that money, now.

"You don't believe," he asked, "in charity?"

"Not that kind!" Louie exhibited his strong, troubled profile. "Not when there's people in this country needing it just as much as they do over there."

THE MAN gazed admiringly at Louie's thick, lustrous hair, the healthy color of his neck and cheek. "You," he said, "look strong and healthy."

"I'd be in a pickle," Louie told him, "if I wasn't."

"In what way?" Louie shrugged. "You can't support a family on part time in the cab business." And then, his body seemed to grow rigid between his shoulders, "I'm a blood donor."

For a few moments the man was silent; his eyes were reflective. "That's interesting," he said finally. "I'm sure it's appreciated."

"You might think so," Louie gave a short laugh. "The last guy I gave my blood to threw me out of his apartment. He was practically dead. If I'd refused to make the transfusion he would have died. They wouldn't have had time to get anybody else. And yet because I couldn't pay him a month and a half's back rent I owed him he had me thrown out in the street—furniture, wife and kids—everything."

"That seems . . . unfair." "Unfair!" Louie's hand tightened over the steering wheel. "How would you feel if the guy that cracked down on you was walking around the streets with your blood in him? And this guy's rich! He didn't need the money. He'd given five thousand bucks to the Red Cross a couple of months before. He's got more real estate in New York than he knows what to do with."

Louie put his cab in gear. The parade had moved on. Traffic was beginning to thin out ahead. "I'm just praying that some day I'll meet that guy. There's some things I'd like to tell him."

"You'd recognize him—this man, if you saw him?"

"Only by his picture in the newspapers. They had him all covered up when I gave him the transfusion. Only his arm was sticking out." Louie crossed Fourteenth street and swung into the outside lane to make up for the lost time. "But I'll meet him some day," he said.

For some time the man behind him gazed directly through the windshield. He seemed to be unaware of the fact that his face was in full view of the rear-vision mirror. He looked very old, and very tired.

"I see what you mean," he said finally, and Louie could just barely hear him above the noise of traffic. "I suppose we do pay too much attention to what's going on in other countries and overlook sometimes what's going on right under our noses. But we mean all right. It's easier for us to give to an organization that's rigged up to help groups of people than it is to look around yourself for people who need help."

"IF YOU were to meet the man you gave your blood to and didn't know him you might think him a pretty decent kind of a fellow. A man isn't generally thoughtless or bad just because he's rich. Suppose he was caught in a jam himself and needed every dollar he could lay his hands on. Suppose a group of banks were going to foreclose on him and he'd lose everything he had in the world if they did? A fellow like you—young and healthy, why, you could afford to lose a million dollars. You could make it back again if you wanted to; and if you didn't want to you could do something else."

"But when a man gets along in life and then loses everything he's been working for for forty or fifty years it's apt to be quite as big a shock to him as it was to you to be turned out of your apartment. In fact, some very good men aren't able to survive such shocks."

"For all you know, that man may be dead. You may never see or even hear of him again."

With a strange feeling in his throat, Louie turned his cab into Forty-second street and drew up before Grand Central station. The guy seemed to know what he was talking about, he thought. And suppose this man had died—after he'd given him his blood. Died with his blood in his veins. He'd never thought of that before. And he didn't like it, some how.

"I guess you're right," he said his head lowered as he tore the slip from his meter and handed it back. "After all, he didn't know me from Adam. I guess we all make mistakes."

A strange smile lighted the man's face. His hand trembled as he drew from his wallet his last hundred dollar bill and pressed it, folded into Louie's hand.

"It's never too late," he said, "to try to rectify those mistakes."

School Boys Learn Constitution

On a 140-acre fruit farm a couple of miles from Olcott Beach where I used to go swimming and the name of which was taken by one of the sweet singers of the last generation (some of you remember Chauncey Olcott of "My Wild Irish Rose")—anyhow on that farm a young boy strained with the pruning knife; stretched to pluck the fuzzy, Niagara county peaches.

That was scarcely a decade ago. On a bright March day, this same fellow—now 17—came into my office. Since he was a graduate of a Buffalo school, we had something in common despite the gulf of the years. We had something else in common, too. I also had once won a prize in oratory.

Mine had to do with a gentleman named Spartacus when I was a Master Park high school entrant. His was a far more timely topic—the Constitution of the United States. His name is Edward Smith and he's a graduate of St. Joseph's on Main street in Buffalo.

Smith is one of the four national winners of the American Legion's oratorical contest held each year to stimulate American high school boys to study and understand the Constitution. Never was such an understanding needed more.

Winning was no cinch. Two hundred thousand boys from every state entered this year. Smith (there weren't too many "Smiths" in this contest, he told me) had to face nine different critical audiences—one in his school; one in the city of Buffalo; one in Erie county; one in the district; one in the zone; one in the state; one in the region; one in the section, and then the final heat—the national contest at Charleston, W. Va.

Smith's theme was that Americans must not be too complacent about the dangers of Communism; that our Constitution in itself is not protection for our form of government—that its duties and privileges must constantly be exercised by every citizen. He told me, incidentally, that Communism in relation to the Constitution was quite a popular subject among this year's contest entrants.

Edward Smith of Buffalo, a winner in the American Legion oratorical contest based on the Constitution, is being quizzed by Baukhage, also an ex-Buffalo schoolboy, on the Bill of Rights.

WARNS OF SURPLUSES

Strong Farm Program Urged

WASHINGTON.—Expanded consumption and adjusted production are the major points of a strong farm program recommended by Edward A. O'Neal, president of American Farm Bureau federation, in testifying before the house agriculture committee.

"It would be folly to assume that we will not have burdensome surpluses of farm produce again that may wreck farm prices," O'Neal warned.

In endorsing reciprocal trade principles, the farm leader declared that "agriculture more than ever needs an expanded volume of foreign trade to absorb its output."

Although describing the farm legislation since the early '30s as "the greatest cooperative endeavor between farmers and the government," O'Neal criticized "a tendency to develop centralized control of these programs from Washington." Instead, he urged transfer of larger authority to state extension services as a means of effecting savings in costs and providing greater service to the masses of farmers.

O'Neal informed the house committee, which is considering a long-range farm policy, that his organization has not come to final conclusions on the subject, but he read this statement:

"We recognize the desirability of full agricultural production, but agriculture cannot maintain full production if industry is going to maintain rigidly high prices by cutting down production and applying monopolistic controls, or if labor is going to insist upon maintaining rigidly high wage rates and to continue such increases in wages without regard to productivity, and to enforce such rates with scarcity policies which discourage consumption and throw people out of work and onto relief rolls.

"It is this approach which leads to economic chaos.

"Farmers believe in an economy of abundance and stand ready to join with industry and labor to achieve maximum production and maximum employment through price policies and wage policies which are geared to a maximum level of consumption."

"We got troubles enough right here," said Louie.

Ten Rules for Happiness

You've read, you've thought, you've heard a good deal about happiness. You've seen people seek it, most of them unsuccessfully. You wonder whether there is really any way to guarantee yourself as much happiness as you think everyone has a right to expect.

Maybe these ten rules from the Cleveland Academy of Medicine will help. A learned committee from this academy studied the matter. What it sought was a formula for happier living.

The rules are: Have a hobby. A hobby is a refuge, a storm cellar into which you can duck when stress and storms on the surface of your life buffet you about too much.

Develop a philosophy of life. That simply means to have a guide by which to live. A life without one is a helter-skelter existence without plan, without goal, without the comfort of ideals or truth.

Share your thoughts. Companionship is essential to personality and to mental health. If anyone lives too long with his own thoughts they can generate explosive qualities that destroy. Confess, confide, consult someone you like.

Face your fears and have it out. The world is filled with people running away from fears, but never quite escaping them. Face yours. Overcome them boldly.

Balance fantasy in your life with fact. Dream, for all normal beings must, but balance your dreams with acts. Don't fall into the habit of dreaming your life away.

Beware of alluring escapes from your troubles but face them realistically and work out a reasonable answer.

Exercise moderately in order that you may have physical as well as mental health.

Love wisely, for life without love is life without light.

Don't worry. Trust in time and be patient. There you have the ten rules for happiness. They seem almost too simple to be effective.

But they are the rules based upon eternal truths of human nature and psychology, and if you will adopt and follow them they will do some interesting things to your own life.

A Night in a Concrete Mixer

What wartime strains, deteriorations and shortages did to the American railroads is well known, and among those yelling loudest for their alleviation are the users of the so-called "sleeper service." We have taken a few overnight trips lately and the only proper title would be "Through the Concrete Mixer with Pogo Stick." We now know that it is possible to scramble and unscramble the egg in one operation.

The names of the roads involved shall be forever secret, as they are good roads well operated and with equipment no worse than any other's. It is our fixed conviction that the trucks under the sleeper on our most recent ride were on wrong side up, that they carried grappling hooks which became entangled with the railroad ties every 45 seconds and that the couplings, air hoses, wheels, etc., had been through Hiroshima.

The engineer, it could be, was an old snap-the-whip boy. It is possible he was an unreformed motorcyclist and that his theme was "Let us then be up and doing with a heart for any fate." It is possible, too, that those men in overalls who meet all trains and go over the chassis with hammers are short of hammers. We heard a rumor that there is a hammer shortage and that they now do their tappings with requisitions for them.

The one thing of which we are positive is that no paratroopers ever spent tougher periods in space than passengers on that sleeper. "Good night," we said to the missus as we climbed into the upper. "Sleep tight," she answered. Those words will always stand as the most ironical the little woman ever uttered.

The Younger Degeneration

Our Alice got a hunch one day (She's 8, and unafraid)
That killing baby would be easy—
She used the garden spade.

Our Johnny, waxing rather tough (He's 7, and a brat),
Decided nurse had lived enough—
He used a baseball bat.

I think that I shall never see
More lovely kids than these;
They romp and play so guilelessly,
And murder just to tease;

Yet when they sit upon my knee
I'm somehow ill at ease.
Oliver Opdyke

Peace, Beer and Crackers

There is talk of an arcade of shops on the ground floor of the new United Nations' home on the East river, New York City. Elmer Twitchell has an idea for two of those shops that he is sure will go farther to insure peace than all the diplomacy and oratory in the council chambers. In one store he would set up a good old-fashioned saloon carrying back beer for a nickel—a glass Twitchell says the world has never been the same since the nickel glass of beer disappeared, and that the return of back beer in the spring would be a tremendous influence for peace and understanding.

In the other he would build a replica of an old-fashioned country store with cracker barrels and an iron stove. "Any argument that U. N. couldn't settle could be settled here," insists Elmer. "In fact if U. N. has much more trouble I'd abolish its conference chambers and have all meetings on cracker barrel levels."

Fiorello LaGuardia has been chosen for the One World award which entitles an American to make a free airplane trip around the world "in memoriam" of Wendell Willkie. Well, we don't begrudge The Hat a nice trip gratis, but he is as much like Willkie as Dizzy Dean is like George Washington.

President Truman threw out the first ball in opening the 1947 baseball season. It seemed to us that he still lacks speed or a genuine curve, but shows a fair change of pace.

There's this to be said of the credit lines in a Chaplin picture; when you've seen one you've seen 'em all.

What this country needs most is a good five-cent respect for its laws, customs and institutions.

New York now has a bill to permit city workers to retire on pension at 50. That's pretty inhumane. The way things are going it would seem pretty brutal to ask a man to keep on the job much after 35.

We liked the "Alice in Wonderland" show, but wished there might be a musical number "How Are Things in Glocca Carroll?"

PRICES GOING DOWN! . . . In line with the President's appeal to reduce retail prices as means of averting economic crisis, Thomas M. Russell, owner of a market in Brookline, Mass., shows customers sign a window announcing a 10 per cent reduction for everything in his store except meat. He reported plenty of customers at the reduced prices. Many cities have organized their merchants in a similar reduction.

WANTS AN APARTMENT—WELL WHO DOESN'T? . . . Five months of fruitless apartment hunting led Kay Daly, 26, San Francisco advertising executive, to this unique approach to solution of her problem. This 10 by 21 foot billboard, which also graces a 6-foot likeness of her charming self, shows Miss Daly posing before the sign. First day brought many returns.

TOKYO RAIDERS REUNION . . . Lt. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle, who was grounded in his own plane in New Jersey, completed his flight to Miami arriving in time to join his fellow members on the second reunion of the men who made their first bombing raid on Tokyo. He was greeted at airport by Col. C. R. Greening, left, and Col. John A. Hilger, center, fellow raiders. Members of Doolittle's raiders have vowed to meet each year.

COLLEGIATE CALF ROPER . . . M. Woodard, University of Florida student, shows aptitude in more than geometry, as he lays a "piggin' string" on this calf after racing him down the arena. The rodeo is staged each spring by the Block and Bridle club of the university. Many of the students come from the ranches of the Florida cattle country and plan to return and run the family ranches as soon as they have completed their college courses.

NAVY BUZZ BOMB . . . Near Los Angeles the navy sent this buzz bomb out over the ocean in an effort to catch up with the atomic age. It roars into the air with assistance of four rockets, which are on sleds and fall free at expiration of the thunderous thrust in two seconds. The buzz bombs are being developed for naval defense purposes.

MILTON BERLE is concentrating on two things: proving that he can do a successful radio program and raising two million dollars by the end of the year. And he's making the grade. His Tuesday night NBC show has gone so well that it's been renewed for the summer, and he's made one-fourth of the two million, barnstorming four nights a week with his troupe, then rushing to New York for his broadcast. The money is for the Milton Berle Foundation of the Men's League in Aid of Crippled Children. Oh yes—he wants to pile up another million for the National Children's Cardiac home in Florida. Even Hollywood can't lure him away!

John Brown, starred as "Melvin Foster" on "A Date with Judy," is easily distinguished in the halls of Hollywood's Radio City; he's usually running. Tuesday nights he sprints from "Judy" to "Amos 'n' Andy," immediately following. Thursday nights he's frequently on the Abbott and Costello show and on the Eddie Cantor program, which takes the air as A and C sign off.

Singer Janis Carter, who has never warbled a note in films (she'll soon be seen opposite Glenn Ford in "Framed"), will be publicized by Columbia Pictures in a series of singing guest shots on the air. She was a runner-up in the Metropolitan auditions, so the build-up seems a natural for her. But—why hasn't Columbia let her sing for the cameras?

Pine and Thomas' forthcoming Paramount release, "Adventure Island," will contain several spots of absolutely silent footage, so that when bobby soxers squeal over Rory Calhoun, as they did at the preview, grown-up fans won't miss out on the dialogue. Blank spaces in the sound track are to be called "scream footage." But—what if the bobby soxers don't scream?

Radio actress Ginger Jones' most prized keepsake came from a cuff of the trousers her husband, Les Damon, wore at their wedding. He found a few grains of rice there, had an old watch of hers made into a ring, with the rice in the watch compartment, and gave it to her on their first anniversary. Ginger is the clever newspaper woman in "The Right to Happiness."

A few years ago Jean Pierre Aumont knew little English beyond "yes" and "no." But wait till you hear him in "Atlantis!" Seems he spent a night in jail in a small Virginia town, during the war, because he said "yes" to the sheriff when he should have said "no," and was jailed as a spy. Right away he made up his mind to learn to speak English, as fast as possible.

When Amos and Andy sang a duet as a gag during rehearsal of their Tuesday NBC show recently somebody recalled that back in 1922 they auditioned as vocalists at a Chicago station and to their surprise got the job. But after seven months they quit of their own accord; heard a record of Bing Crosby singing with Paul Whiteman's Rhythm Boys and refused to compete.

When Madge Meredith worked as cashier in 20th-Fox's cafeteria she made a screen test, but had left the studio by the time executives got around to seeing it. But RKO saw the test, signed her, and she's prominently featured in "Trail Street."

Columbia used 3 extra firemen when making scenes in "Her Husband's Affairs." The reason: Several hundred extras were sporting beards of inflammable crepe hair.

ODDS AND ENDS—Clem McCarthy, who describes his 16th Preakness, May 10, wanted to be a jockey, but couldn't make it—too tall. . . . Charles Chaplin's "Monsieur Verdoux" chalked up as not very good. . . . Those beautiful bangs Eleanor Parker wears in "The Voice of the Turtle" have to be combed away every night; her husband doesn't like them. . . . Came Out in Wash

While out walking in San Francisco one day, William J. Burns, the noted detective, encountered a drunken man.

"Ain't you Mr. Burns?" the drunk asked.

"Yes, I am," answered Burns.

"Know who I am?"

"No, I do not."

"I'm the husband of your washwoman."

"Well, what of it?" inquired Burns. His scorn brought a sneer to the man's lips, and he said:

"Thought you detectives knew everythin'. Tell you somethin' else you don't know. I'm wearin' one of your white shirts!"

All for a penny!

Look what Grandma got for a penny when she was a little girl — a trained dog act! Towser grips the coin in his iron jaws, leaps merrily through the clown's hoop, and deposits the little red cent neatly in the little red barrel.

Quite a show for a penny! But nothing to the show your present-day electrical penny puts on for you. That penny does a lot. It will:

- Tell you the correct time for 4 days, or vacuum-clean 6 large room-size rugs,
- or bring you an evening's radio entertainment,
- or run your sewing machine for 8 hours,
- or wash 3 heaping tubfuls of clothes for you!

Grandma's gay little bank may be a collector's item today, but electricity puts on a bigger and better show as it takes more and more work out of your housework.

It costs so little — and it does so much! Dollar values for penny prices — that's the record of the friendly folks in this company, under sound business management.

YOU spot it on the highway every time a Buick comes along:

Here you meet the future face-to-face.

Here you see the clean, rich, uncluttered design that marks the swing away from what was to what is going to be.

Here's the sweep and flow of fender line that's called for by a streamlined age — here's the solid, steady look that spells roadability — the broad beam that means room — the massive bonnet that tells of Fireball power aplenty.

Here's grace, here's ability, here's sturdy dependability — all wrapped up in one handsome package that's not merely up-to-the-times but ahead of it.

Here are the good looks that bespeak good works; you hardly have to be told of precisions carried to ten-thousandths of an inch, of materials searched out from the finest to be found.

Any wonder that such a creation is America's most wanted automobile? Any wonder people pass up cars that may be easier to get to wait for a car that's going to stay fresh and new and modern-looking?

The simple fact is that you're buying in the future when you buy any good car today.

Why not settle on the one that most obviously foretells what the future will be — that has the most in it of what is to come?

Buick dealers' showrooms are kept pretty bare of display models by the eagerness of Buick buyers to "take over" the first minute they can.

But you'll be greeted in every one of them with courtesy and sincere interest in getting your Buick at the first minute possible.

Drop in — talk it over — and insure yourself a happy future by placing your order now. We'll take it, with or without a car to trade.

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

Jill McFarlane, whose father, Richard, disappeared in World War I, is in love with Lieut. Spang Gordon. She is upset to learn her brother, Ric, is in love with Sandra Calvert, an older woman. During her absence, Richard visits her mother, Julia, and tells her he is now Captain Mackey. Julia is heart-sick at his lack of interest in the past. Richard sees Ric and tells him he knew his father in France. Later he threatens Sandra, but she married Ric anyway. He has the boy transferred and Sandra arrives at the farm to live. Julia hears from Richard who tells her he made an attempt to prevent the marriage. She is thankful that he has shown himself to be a father at last.

CHAPTER XVI

Foster, she was thinking irritably, could at least have unloaded that odoriferous bag of fertilizer from the back! Or was that a part of Jill's and John I.'s diabolical contriving? The old man had been as impish and secretive as a warlock this morning. Sandra wrinkled her nose as she got into the seat and brushed off the cushion a bit fretfully with her handkerchief. She asked, "Is it very far?" as Julia came back from superintending the loading of the luggage, and slipped the key into the ignition.

"Five miles. A breeze in ordinary times. Now we never come in unless we have to. Our tire quota is small in this county, and even with a priority we have to wait for months."

"I hope Ricky's tires are good," Sandra remarked. "I'd rather counted on joining him soon. It's absurd to be separated uselessly, I think."

"Ricky's tires?" Julia repeated, a bit puzzled. "Ricky told me about his red roadster. He was so sorry to have to give it up," Sandra babbled on. "I'm sure he'd expect me to use it."

So, Julia thought unhappily, Ric was turning into a McFarlane liar, too! How was she to explain to this eager, greedy woman that the red roadster belonged to Jill? John I. had bought it for her, had resented it whenever Jill loaned the car to Ric. Ric had had a car the last year he had been in college, but he had traded it off, impulsively, to buy a quarter interest in a plane that one of the co-owners had crashed and burned soon after.

"Ric must have forgotten that he disposed of his car last year," she said. "So much has happened since he enlisted that it got out of his mind. There is a red roadster on the place, but it belongs to his sister, and it's put up, too."

"Oh," Sandra was obviously upset. "He talked so much about it—I can't understand it."

Julia was grateful when at last the gate-posts and white pillars of Buzzard's Hill came into view.

"Oh," breathed Sandra. "That's the place, isn't it? I recognize it from the picture Ricky has. It's beautiful!"

"It's very old," Julia said. "The house was built by slaves, the brick was made right on the place. But we like it."

The others were waiting on the lawn. (Oh, Jill, why did you have to have on those dreadful overalls? Julia was thinking.) Her broken arm in a grimy looking sling, her pretty hair tied up in a bandana, a feed bucket in her hand, Jill came forward, grinning.

"Hi, Sandy!" she shouted. "You're just in time. We need another hand with the pigs!"

Sandra said, "How do you do?" nervously. Shook hands with John I., appraised him briefly, and then ignored him. She made a little gesture with her tinted fingers. "My trunk—"

"My gosh," muttered Jill. "There's nobody here to carry it upstairs. Foster's away over to the hill pulling corn. You'll have to unpack it out here, I guess, Sandra, and carry the stuff upstairs."

"Oh, but I couldn't! All my dresses—and shoes and things!"

"We'll manage some way, Sandra," Julia said.

She led Sandra up the stairs to Ric's old room, noting instantly that Jill had removed the good candlewick counterpane and replaced it with a faded green madras thing from Mammie's quarters.

"I hope you'll be comfortable here," she said. "The bath is next door down the hall, and we have supper at six."

"Thank you—I think I'll lie down." Sandra looked wan.

Some Coffee For the Guest

Julia heard the old four-poster squeak, before she reached the head of the stairs. She was a little angry with Jill. There was no point in carrying this thing to absurdity. But when she found the two of them on the screen porch, drinking from cold bottles of pop, she knew by the glint in Jill's eye and the twitching of old John I.'s mustache that anything she could say would fall on deaf ears.

"You could have thought a little about the reputation of the house, at least," she complained. "That horrible old counterpane!"

"Don't you weaken now, Dooley," Jill warned. "She's not going to pull any Queen of Sheba stuff on us."

"You're being very crude," Julia said coldly. "She'll see that it's all a gag. I think I'll take up some cold orange juice. After all, she is our guest—today at least."

"Dooley, you'll ruin everything! Take her up a pair of slacks and tell her we feed the pigs at five o'clock."

"She'll bust all that red paint off her finger-nails," John I. chortled. "But Julia was firm. She carried the little tray up to Ric's room, but when she came down there was an odd, tight expression around her mouth."

"She asked me if there was any whiskey in the house. She said she felt faint."

Jill's eyes sparkled. "Go and get Foster's jug of corn, Gramp. The one he hides in the pump-room."

It was too swiftly evident that Sandra would never be a part of Buzzard's Hill. She came down to supper, languid and cool in a green silk frock, every curl in place.

Dishes of grits, sausage and scrambled eggs were in the middle of the table.

"Mammie doesn't serve at night," Julia explained. "She has been canning peaches to-day, and she's tired. Will you have buttermilk, Sandra? Or perhaps you'd rather have some tea?"

"That will do—if you haven't any coffee," Sandra sighed.

"Rationed," Jill said. "You wouldn't remember that, living in a hotel."

"We could make Sandra one cup of coffee," Julia said. "After all, she's had a hard trip."

She went to the kitchen and dripped some hot water through fresh grounds under Mammie's disapproving eyes.

"Now I got to use them grounds over for breakfast, and you won't like it," Mammie grumbled.

Sandra murmured, "Thank you" faintly when the cup was put before her.

Foster had been bullied by Julia into carrying the trunk up the stairs, and as soon as the meal was ended Sandra went up to unpack.

"I'll bet on one thing," Jill said grimly. "I'll bet she hasn't any money. And how can she go to join Ric, when he'll be sent off to war? Are you planning to be patient and sweet with her for the duration, Dooley?"

"As long as she's Ric's wife and under our roof, I'll be kind," Julia said, with firmness. "I never had a mother-in-law, but I know what I would have liked her to be."

Sandra Presents A New Problem

"Your mother-in-law wouldn't have had a daughter-in-law like your daughter-in-law, Mrs. McFarlane. Every time she passes a mirror she stops and does something to her eyebrows! Some time when she does that I'll start screeching at her."

"Roger Mackey?" Julia caught her breath and fought for a casual attitude.

"I just happened to notice his picture there on Jill's dresser. A much younger picture, of course, but I'd know Rod anywhere."

"That," Julia had control now, "is a picture of Jill's father. He went to France in the last war. He did not come back."

True—it had to be true! Her children's father had not come back.

The man who had come back was an indifferent stranger.

"Oh, yes, Ricky told me. And I remember now that Rod Mackey told me that Richard's father was his friend. But the resemblance is remarkable—uncanny, really. You don't know Roger Mackey?"

"I have no friend whose name is Mackey," Julia answered, calmly. But her hands were uncertain, and as she dressed, a cold fear pressed on her throat. This was something she had not foreseen, that Sandra could be a danger,

When Dave came he was a little stunned at the sight of Sandra.

"This is Ric's wife, Dave," Julia introduced them.

"You might have prepared me," Dave said. "After all, my arteries are hardening, and the aging should be protected from sudden shocks."

"How foolish!" Sandra roared. "You know you aren't old, and I do hope I'm not a terrible shock!"

Jill, sprawled in a chair, ground her teeth.

"Dave means you're rather an abrupt addition to the McFarlane tribe," she said.

"Did Ric come home, too?"

"Oh, no, they sent him off to some horrible school," Sandra replied, quickly. "He's supposed to learn to be an officer, or maybe it's a gunner—he wasn't very certain about it. We hardly had time to say good-by."

"He'll probably make a good gunner, and I can't think of anything more important in a war than gunners."

Sandra drew her lips in piteously. "But he'll be in danger! Gunners ride in those planes. They're shot at. I can't bear to think about it."

"The thing to do then," said Jill curtly, "is not to think about it."

"This is a war where anybody can be shot at," Dave remarked.

"The army and navy have no monopoly on danger."

"It's a war where almost anything can descend on you," drawled Jill. "And not always bombs and things in parachutes."

Dave said, "How about going to a movie, Dooley? I've got six gallons of gas left and a new ration ticket coming up Monday."

"Go along, Dooley," prodded Jill. Julia said, "You go with Dave, Jill. You haven't had any fun lately, either."

"No, I refuse, definitely. I wouldn't try to fix my hair and wiggle into clothes with only one arm to see Clark Gable in person. I picked corn today, Dave. In a splint. Tell that to the Russian women."

Sandra sat with her small feet crossed, a watchful look in her eyes.

"You must scold them for working so hard, Mr. Patterson," she said, sweetly. "I'm sure it's quite unnecessary."

Jill's feet hit the floor with a thud. Jill's eyes were the eyes of a bad filly.

"Sandra is a very naive person, Dave," she drawled in a deadly level voice. "Ric told her that we were country gentry, and she believed it."

Sandra narrowed her tinted eyelids. "Oh, no," she said, coolly. "I do not believe all I hear, Jill. Sometimes I do not believe anything at all."

Antagonism crackled like static in the air, making Dave definitely uncomfortable.

"How about it, Dooley? Are you coming?" he asked.

"Go along, Dooley, don't be such a stick!" urged Jill. "Buy her a hot dog and some strawberry pop, Dave. Make her relax. She's been strung up like a fiddle for days."

"If this is a therapeutic treatment, I'm not going," Julia tried to laugh. "But if it's supposed to be fun, I might be tempted."

"It's for fun," Dave said. "But we'll miss the last show if we spend too much time talking about it."

"I'm sorry to leave you, Sandra," Julia tried to smooth the troubled air, as she prepared to go. "But there are some good programs on the radio."

"Don't start making company out of Sandra," Jill protested. "She's family. Family don't rate any special consideration."

Julia slumped in Dave's car and let her shoulders droop.

Julia Goes To a Show

"I shouldn't go," she said. "The girl's strange and a little edgy, and Jill has been acting like a fiend ever since we heard she was coming. I feel as though I had been riding a bomb ever since the train came in."

Dave said, soberly, "So Ric dumped another package of trouble in your lap! She's older than he is, isn't she?"

"She looks older. She must be. She's been married before. She and Jill won't get along at all, but what can I do? I can't turn Ric's wife out of the house."

"Don't worry — she won't get so venomous that Jill can't take care of herself. Odd that Ric, who was always so fastidious, would be attracted to a woman like that."

'SEE AMERICA FIRST'

National Parks Are Major Lure to Vacation Throgs

WNU Features.

Vacation-hungry Americans are on the move. Tourist trails once again are jammed as the American public, with its vacation lanes unshackled of wartime restrictions, attempts to cram a full quota of fun and frolic, rest and relaxation, adventure and sight-seeing into the short vacation span of a few weeks.

The upsurge in vacation travel is noted in all forms of land, sea and air transportation. Trains and buses are crowded; airlines are booked with reservations; passenger vessels and even tramp steamers are unable to accommodate all those bent on sea-faring jaunts.

With transportation, food and hotel accommodations in Europe still insecure in the war's aftermath, most Americans still are content, as they were last year, to heed the old slogan of "See America First."

The nation's principal attraction for vacationists is the national park system, embracing 169 separate areas in all parts of the United States. Last year the park system attracted a record-shattering 21,600,000 visitors, half a million more than in any previous year.

On the basis of attendance so far, Newton B. Drury, director of the National Park service, which administers the system, predicts that 1947 will set another new record.

"What's more," says the park chief, "we hope to be able to take better care of our visitors than we did last year, when our park staffs had nowhere near recovered from the reductions of wartime."

Concessioners who operate the hotels, lodges, stores and transportation system in the parks also were short-handed last year. Drury points out, but he adds that "they probably will be in better shape this year."

AS HAS BEEN the case for many years, one of the most popular travel objectives of the American vacationer will be Yellowstone National park in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho. Yellowstone is the oldest park in the entire system; it is, in fact, the oldest national park in the world, having celebrated the 75th anniversary of its founding on March 1 of this year.

Containing approximately 2,213,000 acres, it is noted for its geysers and hot springs, of which it has more than any other area in the world. Old Faithful, spouting its steaming waters high into the air at intervals of about an hour, day and night, summer and winter, has become a virtual symbol of Yellowstone.

Yet Yellowstone would be a great national park if there weren't a geyser or hot spring. While the two great falls of the Yellowstone and the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone with its vividly colored walls combine to form its most spectacular scenic feature, the park abounds in natural beauty. Yellowstone lake, with its hundred miles of shoreline and its eastern border of lofty peaks; scores of towering waterfalls; Obsidian cliff, of black glass; high and sweeping upland valleys and vast expanses of little-known wilderness—these merely suggest the variety of the scenery it possesses.

No other national park is as widely known for its wildlife. Yellowstone played an important part in restoration of the American bison, after it had come close to extinction, and there are hundreds of them in the park today. In quiet streams and marshes, the traveler is likely at any time to come across moose, Elk, antelope, bighorn sheep, grizzly bear, although not always seen by the traveler, are there and in numbers.

Most familiar, perhaps, is the black bear, and this animal provides one of the most vexatious problems that confronts the National Park service. For, despite warnings that they are wild animals and dangerous, visitors insist on feeding the bears.

Accommodations for visitors in Yellowstone range all the way from luxurious hotels down through inexpensive housekeeping cabins to the campgrounds which are scattered throughout the park. Hotel and lodge centers are situated at Mammoth Hot Springs, location of park headquarters; at Old Faithful, Canyon and Lake, while cabins are available at Camp Roosevelt, near Tower Junction. There are highway entrances to the park from north, northeast, east, south and west. Because the demand for accommodations is certain to be heavy this year, those who plan visits to the park are advised to obtain reservations as far in advance as possible.

IN MARKED CONTRAST with the oldest of the national parks is the newest, Big Bend in West Texas, located in a big bend of Rio Grande river. The State of Texas made a present of this 700,000-acre park to the people of the United States in 1944—so short a time ago that there has been little opportunity to provide it with the developments found in most of the older parks.

While much of the park is semi-desert, where the desert vegetation is staging a steady recovery of its natural condition after many years of heavy grazing, its heart is the forested mass of the Chisos mountains, rising to elevations of more than 7,000 feet. Along the Rio Grande are three sheer-walled canyons, Mariscal, Boquillas and the Grand Canyon of Santa Helena, the deepest and most imposing of the three.

An improved road southward to the park from the town of Marathon is now under construction, and ultimately it will be reached by a first-class road. Accommodations in the park, for 40 to 60 persons, are simple but good

IN THESE UNITED STATES

Memorial Service Will Note First Landing in New World

WNU Features.

JAMESTOWN, VA.—Tribute to that intrepid band of colonists who debarked on Jamestown beach May 13, 1607, to mark the first landing of permanent English settlers in the New World will be paid at annual commemorative ceremonies here Sunday, May 11.

In the hallowed little Jamestown Memorial church religious services will be conducted as the main feature of the observance. Jamestown Day, as May 13 is designated, has been observed under sponsorship of the Association for Preservation of Virginia Antiquities annually for half a century.

The tower of the original Jamestown church, long the only visible relic of Old Jamestown, dates back to 1639, perhaps longer. Of particular interest are the loopholes in the tower through which colonists fired at Indian marauders. Original and unrestored, the tower is constructed of hand-made bricks and mortar, laid in English bond.

Built as Memorial.

In 1907, the tri-centennial of the founding of Anglo-Saxon civilization in the Western Hemisphere, the memorial church was erected over the massive three-foot foundations, buttresses and tiled chancel of the church of 1639. The old church was burned during Bacon's rebellion in 1676, rebuilt not long after, but at some unknown period in the 18th century was abandoned and gradually fell into ruins.

There was a still earlier log church with cobblestone foundations, fragments of which may be seen in the graveyard. It was in this church, probably built in 1617, that the first legislative assembly in the New World was convened July 30, 1619 with Sir George Yeardley, the royal governor, presiding. This historic event took place more than a year before the Mayflower set sail from Plymouth.

Back of the chancel railing among the remains of the 1639 church may be seen the "Knight's Tomb," formerly inlaid with brass, which was stolen at an unknown time. It is the only tomb of its kind in America and is supposed to be that of the same Sir George Yeardley, who died at Jamestown in 1627.

Countless dead are buried in the ancient graveyard, which has been restored by the National Society of Colonial Dames of America. Although the actual number of graves and the names of most of their occupants have been lost in the shadows of time, a number of interesting old tombstones still remain.

Grave of President.

An ancient tombstone marks the final resting place of Benjamin Harrison I, ancestor of Benjamin Harrison, signer of the Declaration of Independence. Buried nearby is another Benjamin Harrison, ninth president of the United States.

The epitaph on the tombstone of William Sherwood proclaims —for all the modern world to see—that he was "a great sinner." The inscription, legend insists, was made in accordance with a provision of his will.

An intruding sycamore tree, now more than 130 years old, has disturbed the eternal sleep of the Rev. James Blair, founder of the College of William and Mary, and of his wife, Sarah Harrison Blair. They began their long sleep side by side, but the tombstones have been pushed far apart by the misdirected tree, which now has fragments of the stones embedded in its trunk.

Program Announced.

Officiating at the commemorative religious service will be the Rt. Rev. William A. Brown, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of southern Virginia.

The historical address will be given by Paul Green, author of the historical drama, "The Lost Colony."

Racing Responsible For Taxless County

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y.—Virtual elimination of taxes is possible in Saratoga county as a result of the county's cut from pari-mutuel betting at the race track.

Under a state law passed primarily to aid New York City, Saratoga county last year levied a 5 per cent tax on race track betting. The county's cut amounted to $1,062,000, and the budget is about $750,000.

"Off We Go"

AVIATION NOTES

AIRPORT CHATTER

Airplane dusting of farm crops was studied at a conference of pilots, farmers and scientists at Rutgers university, New Brunswick, N. J., which was believed to be one of the first meetings of its kind ever held.

Discussions centered around new insecticides and fungicides useful in large scale dusting operations. Weather problems affecting airplane dusting also were discussed. . . . The city of Clarinda, Iowa, was granted title to a 294-acre tract formerly used as a prisoner of war camp. The property was deeded over by War Assets administration with the stipulation that it be used as an airport. Prior approval of a $60,000 airport bond issue and a federal grant of $53,000 will provide funds for developing the field. . . . Use of light aircraft has been found effective by the Ogden, Utah, police department. The department recently has utilized small planes to search for a missing deer hunter, found stranded in the rugged Wasatch mountains, and to locate a sheep herder lost on the desert.

Out of consideration for fox whelps at Owatonna, Minn., a flight of America's mightiest army bombers changed course. Informed by Wayne C. Liddell, manager of a fur farm near Owatonna that the roar of even one plane makes the female fox extremely nervous and fearful for her young, army officials revised the scheduled course for a flight of B-29's making a simulated attack on Minneapolis.

CAA LISTS 4,431 PORTS

In connection with the national airport plan under the federal aid airport act, Civil Aeronautics administration has listed 4,431 airports which should be constructed or improved during the next three years. From the list will be selected projects to be included in the fiscal 1948 construction program, depending on the amount of funds appropriated by congress and relative urgency of each project.

Included on the list are 417 large airports (those with paved runways of 4,300 feet or longer), 3,850 smaller airports and 164 seaplane bases. Grand total cost of construction is estimated at $985,800,000, which would be divided between federal funds of $441,600,000 and sponsor's share of $544,200,000.

Of the 4,431 projects, 2,550 would be entirely new airports while 1,881 are existing fields requiring improvement.

A dramatic example of the use of air freight when combined with a bit of ingenuity spared some 20 families in Alaska the necessity of spending the winter in igloos or other improvised housing. The ingenuity came from Williamson, Inc., of Sheboygan Falls, Wis., which built 20 prefabricated houses in such small sections that Northwest Airlines was able to fly them to Anchorage, Alaska.

FASTEST BOMBER . . . America's fastest bomber, Consolidated Vultee's jet-propelled XB-46, is completing flight tests at Murco army airfield. Under secret development for two years, the XB-46 is powered by four J-35 turbo-jet engines housed in two low-slung nacelles. The needle-shaped fuselage is 106 feet long, only seven feet less than the 113-foot wingspan.

PREFER FACING BACK

Ninety-four per cent of transcontinental army air transport command passengers prefer to sit facing the rear of the airplane, it was shown in a five months' survey. The command conducted the experiment on its "statesman" flight between Washington and Fairfield, Calif. Of the 1,020 passengers queried in the survey, 959 favored reversed seating. Riding backward, ATC surgeons report, is safer in the case of crash landings since passengers have the entire seat for support.

France Built $3 Billion In Churches in Century

The greatest wave of church construction in history occurred in France in the 12th and 13th centuries. Although having only 10,000,000 inhabitants, France, between 1170 and 1270 alone, built 80 cathedrals and nearly 500 cathedral-class churches at a cost that today would be equivalent to about $3,000,000,000.
