CED Scans Reasons for Failures

Impartial Groups Attempt Study of Business Flaws

By BAUKHAGE - News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—The favorite game in Washington today is a new version of "button, button, who's got the button.

Only for "button" read: Depression, recession, shakedown, readjustment or what have you-if you have anything.

Sen. Robert Taft, as chairman of congress' joint committee on the economic report, had a questionnaire sent out to a long list of business men. The gist of the report seemed to be that there was going to be a business recession, but it was going to be in the other fellow's business.

Frequently it is too much faith in @ little regard for one's own that causes business failures. This is especially true of small businesses. Locating some of these "failures" and preventing them was the job recently undertaken and reported on by the Committee for Economic Development, a non-gov-

Baukhage ernment, nonpartisan group which makes studies of this nature. Just as this organization was completing its work, another somewhat similar group was setting a task for itself in the hope of straightening out some of the other kinks in the business world. This was the National Planning association, which is out to discover how the many firms which steadfastly year-in and year-out maintain good relations with their employees do the trick. Both propositions are highly interesting.

CED Furnishes Fair Reports

The Committee for Economic Development has for its chairman Paul Hoffman who, in private life, is president of Studebaker corporation. Directing its research and policy division is Raymond Rubicam, the well-known advertising man.

This organization is highly respected. It has a staff of topnotchers doing the research, and its members lean over backwards to be non-partisan. In fact, at a news conference called here to discuss the report's findings, one reporter became pretty riled because he couldn't get Hoffman to comment on the tax situation, one of the hot-spot political issues of the moment. There are two reasons why CED's

the other fellow's failings and too financing, taxes and competitive opportunity. There are very definite ways in which the business man might be helped in solving these problems, particularly the problem of management. The CED report mentions these: Through advice and counsel from his suppliers; through guidance available from the large trade associations; by means of programs instituted by his own community; through special services which could be provided by established counselling and market research agencies within the means of the small enterprise; more extended research supported by business men and foundations; special courses in universities, colleges and secondary schools, and expansion of the present services offered free by the department of commerce. These are graphically illustrated in the diagram.

Meeting Needs Of Business

But the greatest problem is how to place before the highly-individualistic, hard-to-get-at small business man the facts, both as to his needs and how to satisfy them. That is up to the individuals in each community who will take enough interest to read the report (available without charge from the Committee for Economic Development, 285 Madison avenue, New York City) and bring it to the attensimilar groups. The other proposition which is in the making, and which likewise has a purely objective aim, is being carried on by the National Planning association, which is also a non-political, non - profit organization. The NPA states as its purpose: "Planning by Americans in agriculture, business, labor and tion of the local business men's clubs, chambers of commerce and government." Its study, which will probably take a year, is entitled "The Causes of Industrial Peace under Collective Bargaining."

The project is under direction of two special committees composed ports, it represents the cooperative efforts of top men in the highly practical field of business and top men in the field of science-political economy; a cooperative effort whose sole purpose is to make America a better place in which to live. There are no axes to grind.

The second reason the report is important to all of us is that today more than ever, in a world of competing ideologies, the perpetuation of our democracy, our system, depends upon the fostering of small business.

Although small business needs assistance, that assistance is difficult to proffer, because small business isn't an "it"—it is three and a half million small business men, all highly individualistic; all as independent and hard to influence as a monkey at the top of a cocoanut palm. And these disunited, sink-orswim, cock-of-the-walkers make up 98 per cent of the firms operating in this country today. As the CED report puts it: "Small business is more virile and more durable than might be deduced from the hue and cry heard for many years as to the disadvantages under which it labors. Nonetheless, small businesses are confronted with special problems and difficulties that are very real. It is vital to all business and to all citizens that conditions unfavorable to small business be remedied wherever possible." The report finds that the prob-

RAPID GROWTH

NEW YORK .- The Far West section of the United States has grown greatly in recent years in population, income, industrial stature and international importance, according to a study in the Index, a quarterly publication of the New York Trust company, just published.

"World War II," the study says, "telescoped into a few years an industrial expansion in the Far West which might have taken several decades to accomplish even at the relatively fast rate of development some parts of the area had been enjoying."

The seven states included in the study are Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevada, Oregon, Utah and Washington.

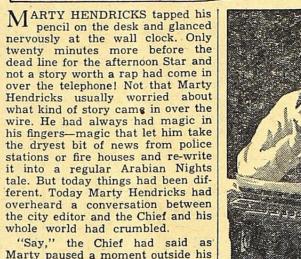

"The Far West," according to the article, "made the largest relative gains in population and income of all the areas of the United States during World War II, and has grown faster than the nation as a whole since 1939, increasing its population by 31 per cent as compared with a 7 per cent increase for the entire United States. REWRITE MAN By HILDA PHELPS HAMMOND

Marty paused a moment outside his half - open door > to sharpen a pencil, "What's This wrong with Marty? He used Week's to be the best re-write man in Fiction South. Could take a story over the wire and turn it into a piece that made a sob sister out of every woman. But he's gone to pieces-hasn't written a good story for months."

"I've noticed that myself," the city editor answered as Marty's heart thumped. "Guess he's gone stale. Twenty-five years at a rewrite desk will do that to a man.

"Well, he'll have to spruce up or give up the job," the Chief growled. 'There's a young man asking for that job and they say he's a dandy. If Marty doesn't perk up we'd better put him back on some light work and get that young fellow."

The conversation had trailed on, but Marty had not listened to any more of it. His hands were trembling as he found his way back to his desk and there was a lump in his throat that he couldn't swallow no matter how hard he tried. He, Marty Hendricks, the best re-write man that the Star had ever had, about to be ditched.

He sat down at his desk and tried to think what it would mean to Sarah Ann if he lost this job. Sarah Ann was a good wife—a mighty good one. She could make a dollar go further than any other wife he knew, but even Sarah Ann had a hard time getting all the things the kids needed out of his salary. And if that was cut, no telling how they'd be able to manage. Six kids they ate up a lot, six kids did!

And now that Marty Junior was heading for college they had to put a little aside every month. six kids were an awful lot-TOO MANY," he thought as he glanced His father probably didn't want him down at the snapshot pressed under the glass top of his desk. There they were—Sarah Ann and the six of just one story that would let him show the Chief what he could do! Ah-there was the telephone now! He picked up the receiver and cleared his throat. "Hello," he said. 'Yes- . . . An accident at St.

Charles Avenue and Adams? Yes, I've got it. What's that? Boy ten years old . . . no hope . . . a bicycle and a car . . . yes . . . whose boy? Don't know yet? . . . I see . . He put down the receiver and pulled his typewriter towards him.

His fingers reached for the keys . . . Ten minutes to the dead line now he'd have to hurry. He'd have to make it a good story . might be the last story he'd ever re-write if he didn't make it good!

H IS eyes strayed again to the snapshot beneath the glass. Ten years old . . . why, that was just the age of little Andy! Perhaps the boy looked like Andy . . . per-haps he had blue eyes and red cheeks and a nose that turned up. His fingers began to play upon the keys of the typewriter-lightly as though someone else were writing. Funny, he thought, that the words should slip off the keys so fast now . he didn't even have to think.

The story was writing itself . . . writing itself this way: "He might have been mine. That's what every man and woman in New Orleans should think when they read about the ten-year-old boy who will never ride a bicycle again. It happened at St. Charles Avenue and Adams Street in the City of New Orleans, but it happens every day in every city of America. It was only a second-hand bike-but the boy must have thought it as handsome as any bicycle that ever came out of a department store. to have it and his mother probably didn't want him to have it either. But mothers and fathers have soft

"The bicycle was painted red and the handlebars were still silvery when they found the pieces. But the wheels of the bicycle were as crum-bled and twisted as the body of the small boy. The police haven't reported yet who was to blame for the accident but WE know. It was the fault of all of us-the fault of modern civilization which allows cars and trucks and little lads on bicycles to ride together on the same streets. He might have beer your kid-and he might have been mine. What are we going to do

Marty stopped a moment and reread the last line. It was a funny line to end a story with, he thought -a wrong line, perhaps. The Chief might not like it. He started to change it, but he couldn't. First of all, because he couldn't think of anything else to say and then, too, because he was in a great hurry all at once. He snatched the paper from the typewriter and fairly ran to the city editor's desk.

The city editor's eyes traveled over the page. "Pretty good," he announced when he had finished reading it. "A little too much editorial flavor to it, but you've perked up Marty . . . why, where's he gone?'

For Marty Hendricks HAD gone. He had made the elevator in nothing flat and he was already shooting down in the lift. He wasn't wondering how the city editor liked the story-and he wasn't caring whether the Chief liked it or not. He was remembering that there was a second-hand bicycle at his house-a bicycle that was painted red and had silvery handle bars.

Jobs weren't important, Marty Hendricks thought as he ran along the street and hailed a passing street car. Not a bit important compared to a boy with blue eyes and rosy cheeks and a turned up nose. He could get another job-but he couldn't get another kid like Andy. Not anywhere in the whole world! And six kids weren't too many! 'No, Sir," said Marty Hendricks to himself as he swung on to the car step. "Six kids are JUST EX-ACTLY RIGHT!"

How to Make New Friends

We had just moved into a new house in a new neighborhood in a new town; a little Western city without any of the advantages of a more erudite community. The second day we were there she came bearing gifts, a glass of jelly she had made from wild chokecherries the autumn before.

She was just a little country woman. She had always lived there. She hadn't ever been more than fifty miles from home, had never seen a railroad train or an airplane, had been only once to the movies.

But I never met one of more cosmopolitan personality, of broader vision or of more supreme happiness. You couldn't be with her for more than an hour without catching the spirit of her infectious laugh, of her rare and rollicking good humor or some of the spirit of her amazing

Yet she was a woman who had lived all her life without "advantages."

One evening as we sat on the porch I questioned her closely about her philosophy of life and the genesis of her personality. And I believe that what she told me will go with me as a source of inspiration and help as long as I live. I also believe it may likewise help you.

All her life she has merely made it a point to make a new friend of every new person who moves into the community. It was the reflection of her friendship toward others that made her eyes shine, her conversation sparkle with good fellowship and the humor that endeared her to everyone within a radius of a hundred miles. She drew you like a magnet. Her charm was irresist-

And all she had done was to make a new friend!

I suppose in her life that some persons had taken advantage of her friendship. I suppose she had been cheated and robbed as I have, as you have. Maybe you and I have become a little bit embittered because of it. Not she. She found the new friends she won outweighed the loss of those who were faithless to her

If you will assume that everyone is your friend, and try to make new social contacts every day, it will do some mysterious and very good things to your personality.

It will make your personality warm and friendly, and will draw persons to you from every walk of

Captain of Industry

Butch wants a bicycle. Lots of lawn and lemonade and baby-sitting lie between Butch and that bike, but we're betting on the boy. He has energy, vision, and our national habit of working hard for what he wants. He's American business-in miniature.

There are many names for Butch's philosophy. You can call it Free Enterprise, Opportunity, Democracy, or Capitalism, if you want.

But, whatever the name, America owes it much. For our most valuable natural resource lies in the ambition and initiative of Americans like Butch.

As great publications have grown from the dreams of young men with old hand-presses-the electric industry had small beginnings, too. A few men with vision strung the first short lines. People with faith risked their savings. Better and better service, at lower and lower cost, created more and more jobs-and carried the benefits of electric living to more and more people.

Free enterprise-and hard work-will bring Butch and his bike together. They are what built America and the American way of life. No nation on earth has found a satisfactory substitute for that combination.

of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doon's Pills. Doan's have been winning new fir'nds for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Armed with the technical training acquired at the institute, graduates establish their own business as radio and electronic technicians or as dealers in appli-

Described as the only school in the world catering to the sightless and the disabled, Radio Engineering institute was opened October 1, 1945. From its meager beginning with only three blind students, the school has expanded rapidly as its 1. What man, one-time gover- facilities became known. The Blind Teach.

Founder and head of this unique school is LaVon Peterson, who was born blind. Peterson acquired his knowledge the hard way-by read-

Enthused about radio since childhood, he determined to make it his life's work although rent, voltage and allied factors. officials at the Idaho School for the Blind had insisted it was impossible for him to realize his ambi-

By persistent effort, however, he finally achieved his goal of becoming an expert radio technician. During the war his services were recruited to teach army and marine radiomen. In a pitch-black room he showed the fledglings the various intricacies of repairing radio sets in a 30-day course.

His success with this venture prompted Peterson to consider establishment of the training school for the blind, "Why can't blind men earn the same thing?" he asked. Two fellow instructors became interested, joined him in the entered to their particular disability.

HANDICAPPED LEARN A TRADE . . . The blind and men afflicted with other disabilities are given a chance to learn a trade which will make them self-sustaining members of society at the Radio Engineering institute in Omaha. Picture shows laboratory for men with sight but who have other disabilities.

"How can the blind man solder?" "How can he handle the tiny and delicate radio com-ponents?" "How can he follow the color code used in radio receivers?" "How can he make the necessary tests essential in this type of work?"

These and a multitude of similar queries are continually being hurled at Peterson and his associates by people interested in the school and Solder Without Burns.

Even the totally blind person, Peterson insists, can do this type of work on a par with sighted people. To the sighted, soldering generally is considered an "impossible job" for the blind person. The school, however, has developed a simple technique in the use of the standard soldering iron for a blind person, permitting him to solder with never a burn.

The color code problem also is easily solved, since the color code in wiring is merely a convenient way for the sighted person to trace wires. The blind person can trace wires equally well with his supersensitive fingers. Although values of parts shown by color code cannot be read by the blind person, specially adapted instruments employing sound and a Braille dial permit him to measure the values quickly and efficiently.

Development of the testing equip-ment is the result of long experimenting on the part of Peterson.

Determined to do radio work and unable to buy equipment that would enable him to take necessary tests and readings in radio work, Peterson sought to devise apparatus which would permit him to do the measuring. Through a long process of building, experimenting and tearing down, he finally perfected the "Braille multi-tester," a device which measures resistance, cur-

Tester Is Keystone.

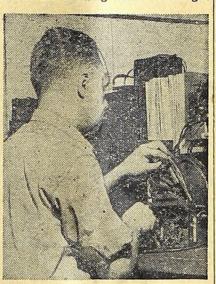

Experimentation with other testing equipment was continued, and an adapter developed at the institute now permits a blind person to read any standard meter. Each blind person in school now builds his own adaptor and learns to use it in radio repair work. This tester, which the student takes with him upon graduation, is intended to serve as the cornerstone for his future business.

As the school's role in aiding the blind became assured, the suggestion was broached that the radio field offered possibilities for persons afflicted with disabilities other

Only requirements for a disabled student are that he has the ability to move about, even though it be in a wheel chair, and that he has enough gripping strength in one hand to hold tools firmly. Grasping devices operated by the teeth, specially designed methods of moving heavy objects and other similar apparatus have been designed for use of those with severe disability.

Entire Logging Town Is Moved For Fifth Time

> Oregon logging community of 600 opulation has moved again. Originally a Minnesota town, the entire community was moved to Oregon 26 years ago when the Shevlin-Hixon Lumber company shift-ed operations to this state. Since then four moves, including two in he last five years, have been made to conform with the company's logging operations.

Roaring Fork Line Will Roar No More

NORTON, VA .- The Roaring Fork railroad has roared its last roar. As its last act, the once colorful little railroad sent a $5 fee to the state corporation commission for a dissolution certificate. The line began operation in 1904 as a subsidiary of Blackwood Coal and Coke company. Although it once carried long trainloads of coal as well as passenger trains, the Roaring Fork eventually was forced to pull in its steel tentacles as large railroads gradually extended their lines into Virginia's

Hallowed Sites Preserved In National Park System

National Park service has become one of the great trustees of American history and tradition. In the system of national parks today are more than 80 sites hallowed by the events that have transpired there or by deeds which have been memorialized in marble and stone. Almost every phase of America's past finds expression in one or more of these sacred areas, where National Park service is endeavoring to present American history in a simple, straightforward manner in order that it may be readily understood and correctly interpreted by every vis-

At most of the more important sites a program of educational serv-

National Parks Tenth In a Series

Guides will be found in many of the areas as well as museums with interpretative and study collections. At other areas guide service has been supplemented or supplanted by self-explanatory maps, literature, outdoor signs and trailside exhibits.

Historic sites in the national park system fall roughly into six different groups or periods-Colonial, Revolutionary, Era of the Early Republic, War Between the States, Winning of the West and the recent Age of Industrial Expansion.

THE COLONIAL period is represented by the Castillo de San Marcos and Fort Matanzas national monuments at St. Augustine, Fla., Fort Raleigh national historic site in North Carolina, Colonial national historical park in Virginia, Fort Frederica national monument in Georgia, George Washington birthplace national monument in Virginia and Fort Necessity national battlefield site in Pennsylvania.

The Castillo de San Marcos, moated and bastioned, was begun in the 17th century to defend the oldest settlement made by Europeans on land now included within the United States.

From the battlements of this fort today one may look across Matanzas inlet and out to sea. With a bit of imagination one may see there the proud galleons homeward bound to Spain with the treasures of Peru, or the Golden Hind, which brought Sir Francis Drake in 1586 to plunder the Spanish town, or the ships of General Oglethorpe, who in 1740 laid siege so St. Augustine.

On Roanoke island to the north, on what is now the coast of North Carolina, is the site of Sir Walter Raleigh's "lost colony." Here, each summer, is presented in pageantry the drama of the ill-fated first attempt of the English to plant a colony on the North American contier in Virginia is George Washington's birthplace national monument, and in Pennsylvania, near Farmington, a reconstructed pioneer fortification marks the site of Fort Necessity and the scene of the opening battle of the French and India

THE GREAT Revolutionary war battlefields of Saratoga in New York and Yorktown in Virginia are included in the national park system as well as the site of Washington's winter encampments at Morristown,

Other important Revolutionary battlefield sites in the national park system are: White Plains in New Guilford courthouse and York. Moore's creek in North Carolina, Kings mountain and Cowpens in South Carolina.

LISTED AMONG the more interesting and significant sites which belong to the first 75 years of the republic are Fort McHenry national monument and historic shrine at Baltimore, Md., birthplace of the "Star Spangled Banner," the Lee mansion national memorial at Arlington, Va., which was the home of lished with Gen. Robert E. Lee and is typical competent of the plantation days of the old historians in | South:

Of interest also is the birthplace of Abraham Lincoln near Hodgenville, Ky. Here at Abraham Lincoln national historical park in a magnificent memorial building is preserved what is thought to be the log cabin in which Lincoln was born.

NEARLY ALL of the great battle-fields of the War Between the States are now under jurisdiction of National Park service.

By visiting them in chronological succession one may acquire a thorough understanding of the events of this vast internal struggle.

The better known battles of this war of which the sites are included in the national park system are: The first and second battles of

THE GREAT WESTWARD movement began long before the War Between the States and continued for many decades after. In this phase of history one finds in the national park system the Jefferson national expansion memorial at St. Louis, Mo., the Meriwether Lewis national monument in Tennessee, which conains the grave of the explorer led the Lewis and Clark expedition through the northwest to the Pacific coast, and the Scotts Bluff national monument in Nebraska, a famous landmark on the Oregon Trail.

There are also the frontier military posts of Fort Laramie in Wyoming and Pipe Springs in Arizona, the site of the Whitman massacre in Washington and the site of Custer's last stand in Montana.

In the West also, in the Black Hills of South Dakota, is the amazing memorial carved in the granite of Mount Rushmore to the memory of the four presidents, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Theodore Roosevélt.

REPRESENTING MORE recent times are the Statue of Liberty national monument in New York harbor, the memorial at Kill Devil hill, North Carolina, marking the site of the first airplane flight by the Wright brothers, the Vanderbilt mansion and the home of Franklin D. Roosevelt at Hyde Park, N. Y.

Representing the world of tomorrow is the proposed national monument to mark the site of the first atom bomb explosion in New Mexico.

The most recently acquired national historic site is the Adams mangion at Quincy, Mass. This mansion, a part of which dates back to 1739, has been the home of two presidents and many statesmen and writers, and its history flows continuously through the whole American scene from earliest days of the republic to the present.

A complete list of national historic sites may be obtained by writing the Director, National Park Service, Department of the Interior, Washington 25, D. C.
