BURNING PERMITS NECESSARY

Why is it necessary to burn up grass and weeds only to let the same place grow up with weeds again? Burning is not the cure. Grass fires are a nuisance for all fire fighting organizations. Last year in Tawas City, runs with truck and men were made to four grass fires. Other alarms were: fire from faulty wiring, one gasoline explosion, two automobile fires, one defective oil furnace, one overheated water heater, one overheated tar vat and one possible smoking in bed, one cause unknown.

These fourteen fires of 1947 caused over $3000.00 damage and resulted in one fatality.

The actual labor costs in preventing spread of these fires was $400.00. Fire prevention week is in the fall of the year, but let's have fire prevention now and every week of the year.

This week, is the week, to look over your property for fire hazards: old papers, defective chimneys, defective wiring, gasoline in the basement (one gallon of gasoline is equal to eight sticks of dynamite in explosive force). Do you smoke in bed? Put inflammable rubbish at the curb for disposal along with tin cans, etc.

HOME SWEET HOME

The trend in house building is decidedly toward the one-story demitasse, close coupled economy-sized home. At first regarded as a makeshift offspring of depressions and wars, the half-pint dwelling has gone too far for that now. It seems here to stay.

Home development sites all over the land are dotted with homes shucked of old-time standard features such as an upstairs room, an attic, a cupola or a flight of stairs. The upper floor strikes some observers as much a thing of yesteryear as the nickel glass of beer, the five-cent stogie and a straight answer to a congressional committee.

Generally speaking the home of 1948 is something mom and pop would have thought inadequate for the pigeons. They would have required more room for a couple of laying hens. It is a garage with living rooms to match. Everything is close to the ground, including the roof.

The automobile, radio, movies and road maps and electric equipment are responsible for the Tom Thumb domicile. For they have created a new design for living. The era when people stayed home much has gone. The age of gentle living, fire-side concentration, dinner parties and family gatherings is fading out.

Mother's place is in the home—when the car is laid up.

Mom and pop used to have to stay home most of the time. They got the same kick out of the long trip from the back kitchen to the garret that their sons and daughters get from a dash to Canada.

Mother held a roomy pantry dearer to her heart than Joe's Frankfurt Grille.

(Still there is no denying the fact she aged rapidly and wore out earlier doing all the necessary housework and just sitting around in her spare time listening to the old man pick at the banjo. Maybe it's all for the best.)

SECOND LEADER—I tell ya, Harry will never take a powder.

FIRST LEADER—Why not? I think he really hates the job.

FIRST LEADER—We have to convince him. Maybe we can get the doctors to say his health requires that he give it up.

SECOND LEADER—Could we get the wife to work on him? I hear she doesn't like the White House.

FIRST LEADER—That was before she got that new kitchen.

SECOND LEADER—Could we feed him up on a lot of stuff about the beauties of Missouri and make him homesick? Make him yearn for the old haberdashery days.

FOURTH LEADER—How about getting some bigtime gents' furnishing house to offer him a partnership?

THIRD LEADER—We could raise money and buy him the Metropolitan Opera house.

SECOND LEADER—What for?

THIRD LEADER—For Margaret.

FIRST LEADER—Naw. We got to sit down with him and tell him candidly that while he is a swell fellow, as loyal as they come and all that, things have shaped up so he owes it to the party to make way for somebody with more zipperoo.

FIRST LEADER—Did you ever see a Missouri man real mad?

THIRD LEADER—No.

FIRST LEADER—You will!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Lewis Battles Taft-Hartley Law; Baruch Sees 'Total Mobilization'; Eisenhower Repeats His Refusal

Released by WNU Features

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

LABOR: Lewis Fight

Lewis Fight

John L. Lewis and the Taft-Hartley law were locked in a mortal struggle.

His United Mine Workers were still out of the pits in a "voluntary" objection to the companies' alleged refusal to provide them with a $100-a-month pension plan. Most of the 400,000 miners were out fishing. Lewis himself was out gunning for the Taft-Hartley law, enactment of which was largely the result of his activities in the first place.

After the miners had gone out, President Truman, acting under the Taft-Hartley law, had appointed a fact-finding board to investigate the difficulties. But when the board asked John L. Lewis to testify, he refused.

Then the board issued a subpoena requesting that he appear. Again Lewis refused, stating that the board had no right to demand his presence before it.

He said he based his disinclination to testify on the facts that:

1. Neither he nor the UMW had done anything covered by the Taft-Hartley law, thereby nullifying the President's invocation of the law, and

2. Two of the three board members were "biased and prejudiced and in honor should not serve."

Finally, minutes before the deadline, the burly, bushy-eyebrowed chief appeared.

It was obvious, of course, that the UMW chief was out to break the Taft-Hartley enactment. Apparently he was determined to drag the pension dispute all the way through the courts—preferably as high as the supreme court to get a final verdict.

And anyway it turned out, the process would react for the miners' immediate benefit. While the courts would be mulling over the matter the date for the annual renewal of the mine workers' contract in June would be approaching. The longer the present dispute remained unsettled, the worse the nation's coal situation would grow, thus putting Lewis in a good bargaining position to extract a favorable contract for next year.

MOBILIZE: Controls?

Bernard M. Baruch approves of selective service and universal military training for the present quasi-crisis, but he does not think that is enough to meet all the implications of the world situation holds.

The financier and presidential adviser called also for an "economic mobilization plan" and said that America's failure to muster all its resources now for peace would leave "no alternative but to mobilize for war" in the future.

Baruch told the senate armed services committee that he was afraid that if the nation suddenly and without preparation were called upon to mobilize and prepare for a big war, such forces of domestic inflation would be set in motion as could blow the country wide open and leave it defenseless.

He suggested the appointment of someone to "watch the impact upon our economy of the partial mobilization we are entering upon and to maintain a constant inventory, balancing all our growing commitments against our resources."

It had not been a hidden threat, but Baruch's statement had focused attention on the possible danger that a sudden spate of military spending could bring about ruinous inflation.

As a result, talk of reviving the defunct OPA was being heard in Washington. Baruch's warning touched off informal discussions in congress about the possibility of reviving wage-price controls, rationing and other curbs on the domestic economy.

This, of course, had been an integral part of President Truman's famous 10-point program against inflation which he proposed last year, but most congressmen virtually had gagged at the thought of reimposing price and wage controls, and the President was accused of trying to set up something like a "police state."

Now, however, congressmen were not so sure. They were beginning to wonder if the military spending necessary to contain Russia might not have to be buttressed by controls at home.

BUNDLE FROM HEAVEN

U. S. astronomers have revealed the discovery of a bundle from heaven—a strange new minor planet which moves around the sun at high speed.

The planetoid is only about two miles in diameter. Although there are about 1600 of these minor chunks of matter, all circling around the earth like the sun, most of them

'Greatest Killer'

Glenn L. Martin, pioneer aircraft builder, revealed that the U. S. has developed an offensive weapon superior to the atomic bomb. He called it a "radioactive cloud—the greatest killer of human beings ever devised." Martin said also, "I'd be in favor of using it before I'd become a slave to another nation."

LUCIUS CLOBB

On War Nerves

"Pharonie," said Lucius Clobb to his helpmate as he arranged a quizzical wrinkle in his brow, "d'you think we're thunderin' toward another war?"

"Soon as you open your mouth I figure we're in for at least a skirmish," retorted Pharonie. "If you spert half as much time cultivatin' my peace of mind as you do your soybeans we wouldn't have near the arguments we do." She impaled the elder statesman of Pawhooley county on a spearlike glance.

"Dang it, Pharonie, why do you have to drag your rockin' chair militarism into everything I set out to do a little talkin' on? One of the reasons you married me in the first place was to get security. Now you got security but you still want to fight."

The light of creative achievement gleamed briskly in Lucius Clobb's eye.

"Say, by gosh, that there gives me a right smart idea for an aphorism. Nothing I like better than an aphorism. What d'you think of this Pharonie: Between 1941 and 1945 we were united with Russia in the bonds of holy warlock, but now the honeymoon's over, the lock is busted and there ain't nothin' left of the original idea except war."

"Mister Clobb, you can put that out in the corn crib with the rest of your aphorisms," commented the critical Pharonie.

"Mebbe so," sighed the elder statesman, "but it worries me—not knowin' how to feel about this here world situation. I'm gettin' on toward 69, so I could afford to think that in order to have peace and a secure foreign policy we first got to rig up a strong backbone at home. And a strong backbone right now means a strong army and navy and air force."

REPEAT: Ike's No'

Gen Dwight D. Eisenhower, fair-haired boy of both political parties, said it once more: He would not be a presidential candidate on anybody's ticket.

There had been a lull following his unequivocal refusal of Republican overtures, and then the pro-Eisenhower sentiment was resurrected in the hearts of no fewer than four widely divergent groups.

Probably the most unique approach was being made by Torrey Stearns, a New York public relations man, who harbors the opinion that Eisenhower is a Republican.

He conceived a "People for Eisenhower" movement. The method is a nationwide solicitation of voting citizens to send in postcards bearing this signed testimony: "I want to vote for General Eisenhower for president in November. I am a citizen of voting age."

"On June 21," Stearns announced, "all of the statements will be presented to the Republican national convention as indisputable evidence that the people of the United States demand the nomination of Dwight D. Eisenhower for president."

But Eisenhower was having none of it. Speaking through a statement by Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, army press chief, he indicated that "his no politics statement of some weeks ago" should "apply to all parties and groups of voters."

Said Parks: "He has not changed one iota in his position and I do not believe he will do so."

PIPELINE: Junked

The Canol pipeline, that 140-million-dollar project constructed during the war as a means of getting an emergency oil supply from Norman wells in Northwest Canada to Alaska, is ending in the junk yard.

All that is left of it now is being trucked out for shipment to junk dealers in the Midwest United States. Fifty trucks work night and day out of Johnson's Crossings on the Alaska highway hauling salvage.

TO WALLACE: Veiled Hint

Henry Wallace, whose third party movement was coming more and more to follow the standard Communist party line, had reached the status of a complete pariah as far as President Truman was concerned.

In his St. Patrick's day address in New York the President had rejected angrily any notion of accepting Wallace's support in his campaign, even if it cost him the election.

Then, during the course of remarks made at a dinner meeting of Greek-Americans in Washington, Mr. Truman turned on still more heat.

He issued an acidulous, thinly veiled suggestion that Wallace take his third party movement to Russia where Mr. Truman obviously thinks it belongs.

"I was going to tell you that the Greeks had a Henry Wallace," the President said to his listeners. "I was going to tell you that the Greeks had a statesman, an orator, a demagogue. . . They had the greatest demagogue of all times, Alcibiades."

(Alcibiades was a famous Athenian who, after committing certain indiscretions, was forced to flee Athens. He went to Sparta and there betrayed secrets of his countrymen which was instrumental in bringing about the fall of Athens.)

Mr. Truman continued: "If imitators of that ancient Greek conqueror want to see . . . liberties subverted, I suggest that they go not to the Rocky mountains—that's fine country out there. He ought to go to the country he loves so well and help them against his own country if that's the way he feels."

Aw, Drop Dead

Few people can appear more human than this quizzical simian as he bestows a suspicious glare on photographer Arthur Sasse and obviously is thinking he wants his picture taken about as much as he wants a hole in the head. Sasse staunchly unafraid in his belief that no animal would attack a photographer, has been taking pictures at New York's Bronx zoo for 28 years.

HOMEBOY: No Meeting

With the arrival of spring and the yearly rebirth of hope eternal, a second-hand rumor suddenly was revived across the Atlantic. It had to do with the rebuilding of the stripped gears of East-West relations.

The rumor, which was being circulated widely in Europe, said that President Truman was planning a trip to the continent for a Big Three conference with Attlee and Stalin.

Another version, as given currency by newspapers in Turkey, reported that the President might go to Europe sometime in April and possibly visit Turkey and Greece.

All this was good for a flurry of excitement, but in the end it turned out to be nothing more than a clutching at straws.

Mr. Truman, the White House announced, had no plans for leaving the country, and there was no prospect of a Big Three meeting.

SPIES: In Germany

Conditions were getting back to the cloak and dagger state. With a dramatic flare, radio Moscow charged that Russia had uncovered an American-directed spy ring of former German army officers operating out of western Germany, Austria and Sweden to learn Soviet zone secrets.

Leaders of the group functioning in the Soviet zone had been captured and had confessed, Moscow reported. The broadcast claimed, in part:

"He confessed he was a member of an illegal Fascist organization existing in the western occupation zone of Germany, consisting of officers of the former German army who are being used by the American intelligence service for espionage in the Soviet zone."

PIPELINE: Junked

The future of shale oil depends upon several imponderables. For example, the discovery of another East Texas oil field or a number of smaller fields would remove the need of an immediate petroleum substitute. On the other hand, a war would bring it into immediate large-scale production.

Officials Warn Builders to Cut Prices of Homes

Leading Builders Say Little Can Be Done By Them

CHICAGO.—Federal government representatives and bankers in an address to more than 2,500 of the nation's home builders warned them to start planning ways of lowering home costs.

The attacks on high costs met with sharp replies from leading builders who argued, in effect, that there was little they could do about prices.

The debate high lighted several panel discussions before a full session of the National Association of Home Builders' annual convention. The arguments brought out these major points from the varied interests represented:

Mortgage money for homes is "drying up, with thousands of GI loans going begging."

Lending institutions are finding profitable investments elsewhere, which may mean an upping in interest rates on mortgage loans in order to attract them back.

Builders have little to do with prices, "which are based on costs—and anyway, homes cost no more in proportion than do other things that people need and want."

Expect Good Year

Despite the fears concerning financing and inability of many to buy homes at present prices, the 1948 building year should be just as good as 1947, when more than 830 thousand units were completed.

The debate on prices was begun by T. B. King, Washington, D. C., director of the veterans' administration loan guaranty service, who told the builders bluntly:

"The proportion of new homes being sold to nonveterans would appear to be disturbingly high. The bulk of new housing is in a price class beyond the reach of most veteran families. It is not difficult to see that the bottom of the barrel is being approached unless housing costs can be reduced.

"This means you must give more for less. . . I venture to say that the challenge will be met by you—or your competitors."

King said later that by "competitors" he meant more progressive builders, prefabricators, or "things like that, not public housing."

Banker Speaks

Rollin Bengt, a Detroit banker representing the American Bankers' association, told the convention that the problem was one of self-analysis by the builders.

"The reported demand for 10 million homes can only be met," he said, "by better homes at lower price levels. Low cost housing has become high cost housing today. Costs must be held down to the ability of potential purchasers to pay."

Joseph Meyerhoff, Baltimore, Md., past NAHB president, was applauded by the delegates when he said that the builders were getting tired of that kind of talk because "we are fighting every day to keep costs down" and "builders certainly can't be expected to produce homes for a selling price less than what it costs to build them."

The warning about higher interest (which would be reflected in higher home costs) was voiced by John C. Thompson, New York, president of the Mortgage Bankers' association.

"The 4 per cent rate was all right when it was higher than the return on corporate bonds," he said. "But mortgage loans have an overhead cost, too. The net return on a 4 per cent loan is actually about 3.2 per cent over a five year period. The money is there, seeking a fair return, but there is a hesitancy at the present level of return on construction and home mortgage loans."

The warning about higher interest (which would be reflected in higher home costs) was voiced by John C. Thompson, New York, president of the Mortgage Bankers' association.

Shale Resources in West May Alleviate Oil Shortage

RIFLE, COLO.—Vast resources of oil shale in the mountainous West may be utilized in a program to ease America's concern over oil shortages.

The problem has been to get out the oil and make it pay in competition with much cheaper, higher grade petroleum. Extraction methods were difficult and costly.

In a recent U. S. bureau of mines demonstration it was proved that shale oil can be produced for $2 to $2.50 a barrel. That places it neck and neck with petroleum, which has been hiked 50 per cent since the war.

H. D. Brown, a 35-year-old chemist in Grand Junction, Colo., obtained a patent on an oil shale production process that he claims will yield high gravity crude oil for "less than $2 a barrel." He says it is far better than methods the government is working on now.

The future of shale oil depends upon several imponderables. For example, the discovery of another East Texas oil field or a number of smaller fields would remove the need of an immediate petroleum substitute. On the other hand, a war would bring it into immediate large-scale production.

Ruminating on Ruminants, Or Cogitating About Cows

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator

WASHINGTON—The subject of cows recently has been called to my attention.

In the early pre-crossword days, a cow was supposed to be an animal of the bovine species. Now it is just a three-letter word meaning ruminant. There is another three-letter word which also sometimes means a ruminant of which I will speak later.

Before I knew that a cow was either a member of the bovine species or a ruminant, I thought it was something fearful which was euphemistically addressed as "Bossie," and which (I was told) would not hurt me. I took the former statement as correct, but had grave doubts about the latter. Later I was taught that c-o-w spelled, not bossie, but cow, and still later I was chased by one. This caused additional doubt concerning free information furnished by one's elders.

Then came the crossword puzzles. I saw that "three, horizontal" was a three-letter word meaning ruminant. Having heard of the word "ruminant" by that time, and thinking that, thinking or, if you will, ruminating, was a fairly common practice among the genus homo, I wrote down "man." Later when I met a number of congressmen I was convinced of my error.

Now I know that neither definition is entirely wrong. A cow ruminates when it chews its cud (having chewed it before), and a man ruminates when he chews an idea upon which he has chewed before.

In some ways however, cows and men differ. In fact, cows even differ in some respects from women, although all three creatures—man, woman and cow—are mammals, the highest form of vertebrate, those which (the authorities inform me) nurse their young with milk. Just how man gets into this category is a little beyond me, but that is what the scientist says, and I am willing to strain my credulity a little. After all, I suppose that my father, who paid for the milk which I drank when I got so I could take it out of a glass, nourished me in a manner that, although it seems to me that a man assumes a little of what might be criticized as the gland manner of speaking when he tries to get more than a grade-B rating as a mammal.

But to return to the differences between cows on the one hand, and men and women on the other—and I think no one will contradict me when I say there ARE differences): One thing a cow cannot do that a man can, is blow its own horn. And as we know from listening to the soap operas, it is easier to make a woman slip than to make a cowslip.

Now what has a cow got that you and I haven't? Answer: Cattle are closely related to the buffalo, the bison and the yak. I defy any genealogist to produce a bison, a buffalo and a yak in one human family tree. On the other hand, in the branches of a cow's family tree, there are no monkeys.

In some ways the cow has superior abilities. For instance, I have seen a cow roll over without spilling a drop of milk, which is more than any man, carrying a similar amount of lacteal fluid, could do.

Philologically, the cow seems to have somewhat of an edge on man, at least for those who believe in the capitalistic system. The Latin word for cattle (as of course you know if you just looked it up as I did) is "pecus." And the word pecuniary is derived from that, and the words cattle, chattel and capital are to each other what cow itself is to buffalo, bison and yak.

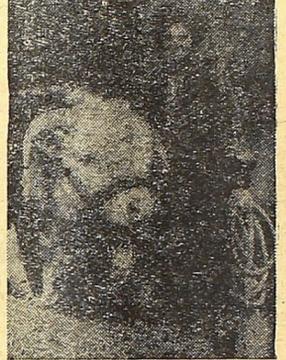

All present-day breeds of cattle, I am authoritatively informed, are descended from the two types, large and small, known in prehistoric times in Europe. However, in recent times (and now we are getting down to what started me ruminating), something new has been added. We now have developed what might be laughingly called "hot cows" and "cold cows."

The "hot" are the Brahmas which have been insinuated into our own American strains to inure them to our southern latitudes and for other purposes. As you know, Brahma cattle are known by their humps. A brahman has a large hump just abaft the shoulders, and the others of lesser rank have smaller humps getting down to something not much larger than a fever blister.

The "cold" cow is quite a different thing. As might be expected, it comes from Russia where they invented the cold war, the cold shoulder and the common or Siberian cold, which is used to correct false ideologies, longevity and monopolistic capitalism.

When applied to cows instead of capitalists, the cold has the opposite effect on longevity. According to a recent article in Food Industries, a McGraw-Hill publication, the Russians have produced, by means of a chilling process applied from early calf-hood, cows which live with a high output to 15 years, yield up to 100,000 liters of milk and give birth to 15 calves.

The process is simple. One selects a calf from selected parents. It is put in an unheated barn where the temperature is kept at five degrees Fahrenheit. The barn, I take it, are much like the ordinary Soviet citizen's dwelling except that there is plenty of bedding and the calves are provided with earmuffs. A citizen of the U.S.S.R. doesn't need the earmuffs because he is only allowed to listen to what the government thinks is good for him, and if his ears freeze it's all right with the censor.

The results of the chilling process on calves appear remarkable, but not for a moment would I doubt the veracity of the writer—despite my early experience with erroneous information concerning cows.

The other type of ruminant upon which these ruminations are based is illustrated in these columns.

The Old Order How It Passeth

After the grey winter days New Hampshire avenue almost sparkles these spring mornings.

The elm buds are spreading and the shadows of trunk and limb make sharp patterns on the wide expanse of the huge Belmont house. This house now is occupied by the Eastern Star—no family ever could have done more than rattle about in that palatial mansion. I suppose there will be few such palaces built in Washington any more—one after another, they are being torn down. The Leister house on Dupont Circle is gone and a family hotel is rising in its place. Many other mansions, too big for embassies even, served as boarding houses for war workers and now they are empty and for sale.

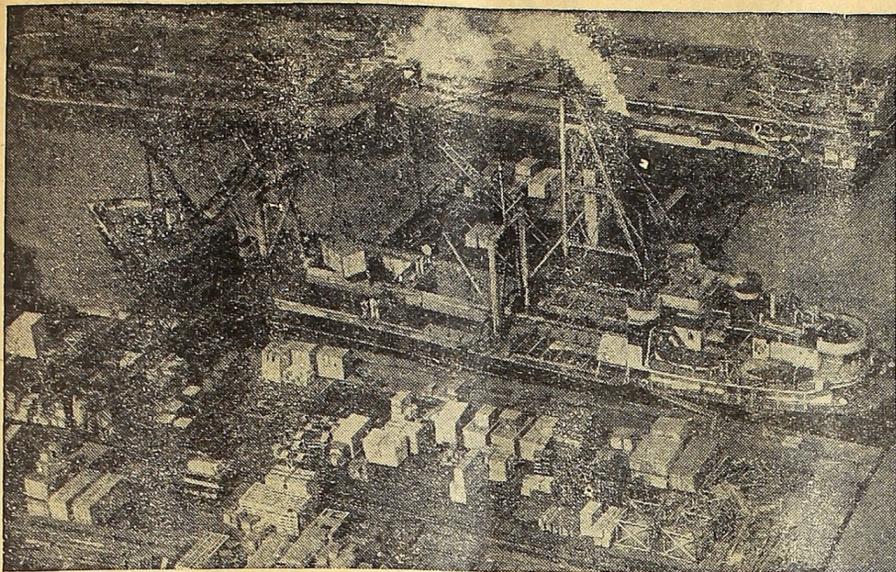

One huge house which I pass occasionally is opened when the third generation, which still retains some of the original fortune, comes to Washington for a wedding or a party. After that the house is sealed up again, the burglar alarms are attached and the old residence goes back to dreaming of the past.

A part of this section of Washington—Dupont Circle—is being sealed off for a year while the roadbuilders burrow under the grassy park to make an underpass for trolley cars and automobiles. This will be the final blow of disfiguration to Connecticut avenue, which has yielded gradually over the years since I first knew it, to the vulgarian invasion.

A block below Dupont Circle that once was gay with the chatter of nursemaids and children of the foreign diplomats stood the British embassy. On the site today is a filling station.

Americans have eaten bananas since the 19th century but still many misconceptions concerning them exist, says Middle America Information. Not, we hope, that they should be kept in the refrigerator.

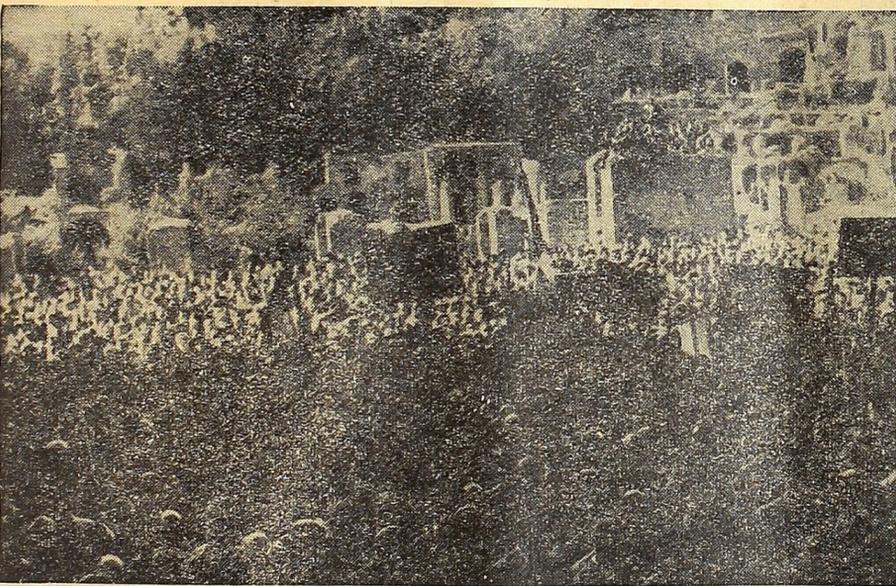

Two-thirds of all divorces are granted to women. Is that because of male chivalry—or the lack of it?

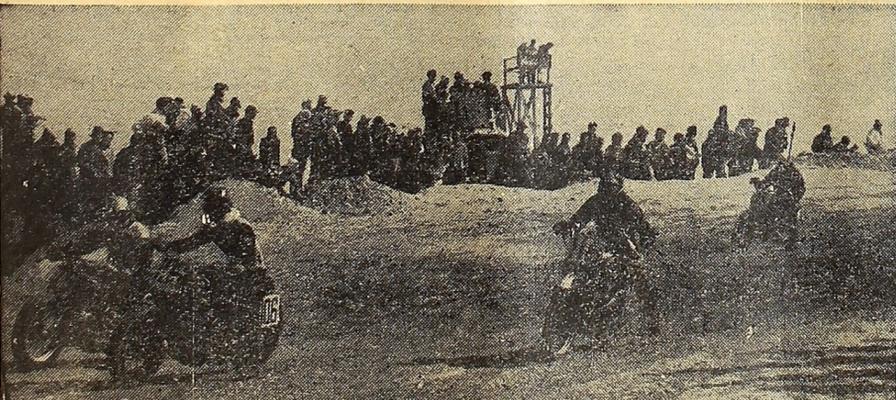

ANOTHER SHIPMENT TO RUSSIA... At the Claremont terminal in Jersey City, N.J., a mammoth dock crane and lighters alongside sling huge boxes containing American-made goods into gaping holds of the Russian ship 'Volga.' The freighter was scheduled to load up with 2,077,078 pounds of American made material, including locomotive and diesel engines, precision machinery and quantities of other essential material. With piles of cargo stacked on the dock and two cranes working at once, loading of the vessel was being pushed with frantic haste to beat an expected ban on export of such material to the Soviets.

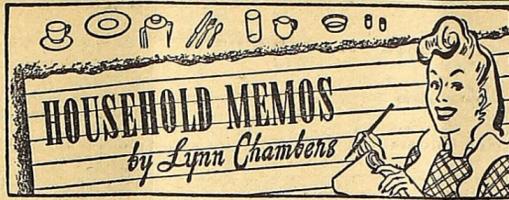

CUBA'S GLAMOROUS POLITICIANS... Not everywhere this year do political elections hold a life-or-death significance. In Cuba, for instance, candidates are conducting their campaigns with a flair for glamour. Posters bearing noble, idealized portraits of all the candidates bedeck buildings along the main thoroughfares in Havana. These four, on display on Havana's most famous street, the Prado Promenade, are distinguished mainly by the fact that they apparently are intended to influence the voters through their sheer size.

HOURLY SUPREME TRIAL IN ITALY... During the month preceding the April 18 elections in Italy, the ancient city of Rome was a seething mass of political consciousness. Here, a crowd of 5,000 gathers in the ancient forum of Maxentius to hear the extreme rightist sentiments of the 'Italian Social Movement.' Speakers told the crowd that they must prepare for the approaching hour of supreme trial. The elections are, actually, an hour of supreme trial not only for Italy but for the world. Their outcome may prove to be the deciding factor in whether or not the Communists will gain control of all Europe.

Variety of Salads Offers Inspiration For Meal Planning

How much can a salad do for a meal? Well, you all know it adds precious vitamins and minerals to the meal, but have you thought about how much flavor and true texture contrast it brings, too? There are thousands of salads from which to draw for true meal inspiration. There's a crisp, green, tossed type for the really heavy meal; there's a cheese and vegetable combination for the meal to which you want to add more protein, and then there's a tossed fruit or molded fruit when you want to add toothsome interest to the meal or have the salad double for dessert. Don't neglect the plain lettuce salads when you lack inspiration for an idea. You can vary the lettuce with several different dressings made beforehand or tossed quickly together the last minute.

Flavor artistry like this can be practiced by any cook to add new meal interest. Subtly flavored, delicately pink tinted shrimp and mellow green avocados are as happy a blending of flavors and colors as ever graced a salad plate.

MERRY MERRY MERMAID

By MARY LOUISE CHEATHAM

IT was still early and the beach was deserted except for a few lone bathers far around the shoreline. Merry finished her splashing in the chilly waters and climbed on a rock by the lakeside, the only rock in view anywhere on the sandy beach. It made a nice spot to sit and dry as the morning sun grew warmer. Spreading her beach robe over the rock to protect her new green bathing suit she rubbed her arms and legs briskly with a towel, then cast it aside and rummaged in the canvas beach bag for her brush and comb, and a hand mirror. She had just finished shaking the water from her long, blonde hair and was brushing it to a golden sheen when a masculine voice beside her told her she was no longer alone.

"Ah, a mermaid!" said the voice, and there stood a bronzed young man in bathing trunks. He was tall and dark and broad-shouldered, and just the sort of a young man a girl dreamed of meeting on her vacation, only he had appeared much too soon. She blushed and groped for an answer. She shivered and sneezed.

"Well," commented the young man. "I don't know mermaid language but kerchoo, yourself."

Without waiting to be asked, he had seated himself on the sand beside the rock and not knowing what else to do Merry went on awkwardly brushing her hair.

"What's your name?" he asked. "Mine's Terry Thornton. Staying with some cousins at that cottage down the line."

"Merry," she admitted unhappily. "Not Merry; Merry, like in Merry Christmas. Only my last name's Day. My mother had original ideas."

"Hm," Terry mused. "Well, on you it turned out all right, though she took a chance. Supposing you were one of those grave, sober people who go around frowning all the time? But with those dimples and that smile it suits you."

Merry blushed again. It was disconcerting to have a strange young man studying her face so closely, but it was funny, too. She laughed.

"Merry," he repeated. "I like that. Merry and Terry. Makes a good combination. Hey! Where you going? Don't jump back in the water, mermaid. I'll only swim right after you!"

"Breakfast," said Merry, gathering up her belongings. "We haven't eaten yet. They're expecting me at the cottage."

"Well," said Terry reluctantly. "Bye, then, for now. See you again." He walked over to the deep end of the pier, waved, dived cleanly and, as Merry left the beach, she saw him swimming with long, sure strokes out to the raft. If only, she thought, he hadn't come along quite so soon! Now she would have to go to the beach even earlier.

"Terry Thornton?" said Mrs. White, with whom Merry was boarding during her vacation. "Why, yes. He comes up here summers to visit relatives in one of those cottages down the row. One of the best swimmers around her. Regular fish."

Merry's heart sank but she ate heartily of the blueberry muffins and decided nothing was going to spoil this vacation of hers. She had planned too long and worked too hard for it, and now she was going to enjoy every minute.

It was not much fun, going in the water so terribly early, but she splashed determinedly the next morning, then spread her beach robe on the sand and lay there on her stomach, soaking up what sunshine there was. Head cradled on elbow, she gazed dreamily at the lake. It was always changing color, like the stone in a ring she used to have—

green, blue, silver or gray, according to the light. The office, with its irritations, seemed far away. "Hello, there!" It was Terry. She sensed his presence before he spoke. "Care for a swim?"

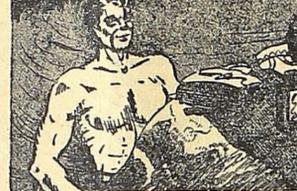

She shook her head. "I've already been in," she said. "Well," he persisted, "You can go in again."

"No," said Merry. "I like it here on the beach."

"Okay," Terry shrugged. "Suit yourself, I'm going to take a swim, then I've got to go to the village. Be gone all day. You ought to come along."

"No," said Merry. "Thanks anyway."

She was sorry to see him go, yet happy, too. He would be gone all day! As soon as he was completely out of sight she waded back into the water. Olga, Mrs. White's cook, came wading out but Merry didn't mind. Olga was plump and comfortable and she was eating an apple.

She had just finished shaking the water from her long, blonde hair and was brushing it to a golden sheen when a masculine voice beside her told her she was no longer alone.

"Can you swim, Olga?" called Merry.

"No," answered Olga, "but I can float." She lay back, easily, on the surface of the water and continued eating her apple, gazing unconcernedly up at the sky.

"That's wonderful!" said Merry. She tried it but sank immediately, and sat up, gasping and blowing water out of her nose. A peal of laughter rang out and she looked into the face of a 10-year-old boy who was swimming about like a porpoise.

"Here's the way," he said, and floated like Olga. "Gee!" he said. "Don't you know how to swim?"

"No," Merry admitted, sadly. "I've never been around water, much. I've always lived in the city, and I just never did learn."

"It's easy," said the boy. "Watch here."

So the lessons began. Hopeful and hopeless by turn, Merry kicked and splashed. Her freckle-faced tutor was a hard taskmaster and a merciless critic. They kept at it most of the day but Merry still couldn't stay on top of the water. "Looks like I'll never learn!" she thought, but early the next morning she was at it again. She managed to be lying on the beach when Terry dropped by. She turned down his invitation to go on an all-day boating trip with some friends. "Another day," she thought hopefully. Her young instructor turned up again that afternoon, as enthusiastic as Merry was determined.

Day after day, by some ruse or other, she managed to avoid Terry and keep on with her attempts to swim. "I don't know why I don't tell him," she thought. "He probably would teach me himself but he might think I am awfully stupid, the way I don't make any progress. Somehow, I am ashamed to let him know."

She went on practicing strokes and kicks, swallowing water and floundering in despair—and then, one day, one day of days, it happened! She swam! Only a few feet at first, then farther and farther and farther with practice. Bobby, her 10-year-old teacher, jumped up and down and shrieked with joy, and they had a water-fight to celebrate. After that, nothing could stop her. It was just an easy sidestroke but it was swimming!

"Tell you what," said Bobby. "I'll take the rowboat and row alongside in case you need me, and I fishing from the island where he has a summer home. He would like to own a jeep, but can't; people, he thinks, would think he was showing off when they saw him in it!

Joan Davis (RKO's "If You Knew Susie") is intent on promoting her 14-year-old daughter Beverly's screen career. Beverly made her film debut in "George White's Scandals" several years ago. She won a role in "Mickey" with her mother's assistance. Seems that Joan went into a huddle with the producer, told him, "Beverly does everything I do—only cheaper."

Although he wanted a musical career, Jack Berch (NBC's "Jack Berch Show") had to turn salesman, selling tea and coffee from door to door. But a prospective customer was the wife of WBKN's program manager in Youngstown, Ohio. She heard Jack singing as he approached her door, amazed him by asking her husband to audition him. He came to New York about nine years ago, with "Jack Berch and His Boys." The "boys" included names that became famous—Mark Warnow, Jerry Colonna, Raymond Scott and Johnny Williams.

Harriet Parsons is the youngest of Hollywood's seven women film producers. Her "I Remember Mama" is a picture that puts her at the top of the list. Her famous mother, Louella, gave her a gay, happy childhood, but Harriet says she was lucky in having an old-fashioned grandmother, to crack down on her when necessary. Her "Screen Snapshots" started her as a producer. In 1943 she hit the big league with "Joan of Ozark," then did "Night Song," "Enchanted Cottage" and now, "Mama."

Maybe William Powell will get one of those Oscars next year. He's been up for the Academy Award three times now. In 1934 he was nominated for his performance in "The Thin Man," in 1936 for "My Man Godfrey," and this year for "Life With Father."

Claude Rains realizes both ultimate ambitions of most actors in his starring role in "Abigail, Dear Heart." He goes crazy, and he dies. His plans include a trip to London in the near future, to star in "The Passionate Friends," for J. Arthur Rank. Ann Todd, seen in many English pictures, and in "So Evil My Love," with Ray Milland, plays opposite him.

Odds and Ends... Bob Hope tries out the jokes on his Tuesday night broadcasts on his family; says they're the toughest audience he ever had... Elspeth of "Big Sister" says lack of family funds introduced her to the theater. From the age of six she went to everything with the family because they couldn't afford a baby sitter... Actual French and German backgrounds were used for the action of RKO's "Berlin Express"... Valli makes her 36th screen appearance as co-star of "The Miracle of the Bells"; the first 34 were Italian films... Mae Marsh, silent film star, is seen again in Argosy Pictures' "Fort Apache."

Herbert Marshall ("The Man Called X") received a letter recently on which the postmarks served as the address. Sent by Myron Rullman Sr. of Washington, S. C., it had only the two postmarks as address—Herbert, Ala. and Marshall, Mich.

Fanny Brice's friends think the "Baby Snooks" star might as well build a projection room in her home and buy a print of "The Naked City"—she saw it three times in one week.

WHEN no one else at the luncheon table noticed Ray Milland's gorgeous gold cigarette case he directed attention to it himself. "My wife gave it to me to mark 16½ years of marriage," he explained. "Which is something, in Hollywood." Unlike many a movie star, he shied away from talking shop, but did admit that "The Big Clock," to be released soon, was a good picture—which, he added, he wouldn't say about some of his vehicles. His enthusiasms, besides his family, include sailing, good cars and Elspeth of "Big Sister" says lack of family funds introduced her to the theater. From the age of six she went to everything with the family because they couldn't afford a baby sitter... Actual French and German backgrounds were used for the action of RKO's "Berlin Express"... Valli makes her 36th screen appearance as co-star of "The Miracle of the Bells"; the first 34 were Italian films... Mae Marsh, silent film star, is seen again in Argosy Pictures' "Fort Apache."

Herbert Marshall ("The Man Called X") received a letter recently on which the postmarks served as the address. Sent by Myron Rullman Sr. of Washington, S. C., it had only the two postmarks as address—Herbert, Ala. and Marshall, Mich.

Fanny Brice's friends think the "Baby Snooks" star might as well build a projection room in her home and buy a print of "The Naked City"—she saw it three times in one week.

This Brave New World

Grace Noll Crowell

DEWY-EYED and shining-faced the morning is starting on its journey of today. Its old wounds healed and seemingly forgotten, its old scars wiped away.

This brave new world! How staunchly it arises From out the darkened covers of the night; How valiently it girds itself to enter The splendid ways of light!

So would I shake the darkness from my eyelids, So would I don my garments with the dawn, The old wounds healed, the old scars unremembered, And thus I would move on Into the waiting ways of light and splendor, My heart's bright banner lifted and unfurled, That I may be a valiant marching comrade To this, the brave new world.

ATTENTION! RURAL PATRONS

Have you ever noticed just how unsightly the mailbox in front of your home might be, to say nothing about the inconvenience it may be for the carrier? Suppose you go out and look; the post may be leaning back at a 45° angle, maybe it's held up with two or three props, the box just ready to fall off, a nasty mud hole just in front.
 Strangers from all over the country are passing by each day and they see those things. Lets have a little civic pride and correct this condition before you get too busy on the farm.
 There will be an inspection of the routes in the near future, so lets not wait until you get an official notice from the inspector to fix your box so that it conforms to the regulations of the Department.
 Boxes should be government approved, placed in a convenient spot for the carrier to serve, post firmly planted perpendicular, box level and securely fastened, 48 inches high. Where there are two or more boxes they should be grouped together.
 New approved boxes are now available at any hardware store. We would appreciate your co-operation.
 Your Rural Carrier.
