All Stars Move
Even though stars often are referred to as "fixed," to distinguish them from the planets, which move so rapidly that their motion is evident in a few nights, all stars move. As a result of the motions of the stars, the constellation figures are not permanent, although many thousands of years will pass before configurations such as the Great Dipper or Orion will look noticeably different.

AND SHOULD you encounter this man, exercise care. He's dangerous.

Jerry Anderson snapped off the radio. He'd heard the particulars of the brutal strangulation of Mrs. Prescott.

After Jerry's recent discharge from the hospital, he decided that he wanted to live out at the cottage.

So, when his mother and Lucy reluctantly left him this afternoon, he was glad.

Jerry sat near the window for quite some time trying to make a start at some of that "self-reasoning."

Jerry sat near the window for quite some time trying to make a start at some of that "self-reasoning."

He had been sitting there for just a few minutes when, suddenly, he heard the back door being opened.

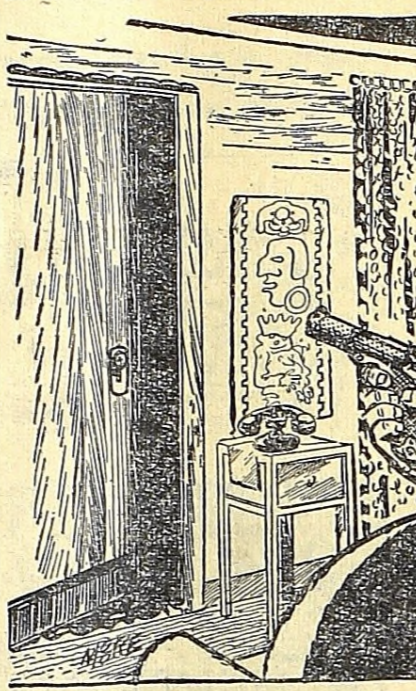

In less than a minute, it seemed, he heard the ice-box door being opened, and a low chuckle came from the intruder.

The minutes dragged while he listened to the man eating and drinking.

undoubtedly thought that he was alone. Perhaps he had seen Lucy and her mother leave hours before.

After what had seemed an hour, he heard the man get up from the table and walk toward the hall.

He thought of the broadcaster's remark, that the killer had not used a car, and that it was suspected that he was making a getaway.

Jerry knew that his safety depended upon what he would be able to do within the next few minutes.

ed so far away from the main highway. He must have come upon the house by accident.

When Jerry heard a hand moving along the wall groping for a light-switch, he stood up and pointed the gun toward the door.

The man's breathing was heavy as he stood motionless, facing the gun. He had a fear that Jerry could sense was genuine.

The man was shaking when he spoke, "You're a cool one, brother. Put the gun down, please, before you hurt somebody."

The man was conscious of the gun at his back, and he spoke in a deep hoarse whisper, "Come to the Anderson cottage off Helm road right away."

"What's up?" Jerry heard the officer ask.

"Tell him," he snapped at the man.

The man lowered his arm slowly and took the receiver off the hook. He'd stall, he thought; maybe the nut would give him an 'in.'

"Drop that receiver and get your left arm up," he hesitated, then ordered his prisoner to go back to the same chair and sit down.

The killer had a dogged smirk on his face as he turned and moved toward the chair. He felt positive that his captor was a 'nut,' and with that gun...

Seconds passed as he continued to glare at Jerry. Then he thought of an old trick that he would try in order to get Jerry off guard.

When Jerry heard the purr of a motor and men's voices. A slight wave of relief swept over him. Almost immediately, there was a sound of cracking shrubbery and running feet.

"Good work, Mr. Anderson, good work."

"The gun was not loaded, officer, and I could recognize him only from his story... you see, I am blind," Jerry said softly.

CAMPAIGN TECHNIQUES

IN Mark Hanna's day the methods used in conducting a presidential campaign were simple compared to the complexities of present campaigns. To put McKinley in the White House was but a part-time job for that master of politics. He could, and did, buy votes with promises. That the promises were conflicting made no difference because those made to one group or class were not known to the other class. When the time came to make good on these conflicting promises the successful candidate was safely established in the presidential mansion and the voters had four years in which to forget.

In those Mark Hanna days there were few different speeches, but many copies of each. Each spell-binder was provided with a half dozen, to be delivered to the type of audience they would fit. The promises of farm commodity increases would be delivered to a farm audience; a wage increase promise to a group of workers. The audiences were small and only those immediately in front of the speaker knew what he said. The same speech could be delivered at the next stop.

Hanna placed his Republican candidate on the front porch of the McKinley home at Canton, Ohio, armed him with a half dozen speeches which would fit any group that called, and invited all America to visit the great man. Many called. As each group approached the front gate the appropriate speech of welcome was laid out. It contained the candidate's promises for their class. He talked only to the little group in front of him. Others of their class would hear the same promises, but no group of any other class would hear that speech or know of the promises made to the other class.

In Mark Hanna's day it was all as simple as that. But they did not know the political campaigning advantages or disadvantages of radio as a medium for the distribution of campaign material. Today the candidate must have a different speech for each occasion; today he cannot buy votes by offering conflicting promises; today radio carries everything the candidate says to the people of every class and to every point in the nation. He talks to many millions rather than a few hundreds. And radio has added millions of dollars to the cost of conducting a campaign.

Radio has done one other thing to political campaigns. With the possibilities of buying votes with conflicting promises eliminated, the candidate and his oratorical supporters have little of a really definite nature to offer. Until election day we must listen to banal double-talk, generalities that mean nothing and to vituperative denunciations of the other fellow, neither of which will change many votes. Radio may have helped to make political parties honest but it has taken much of the joy out of political campaigns.

Party Changer

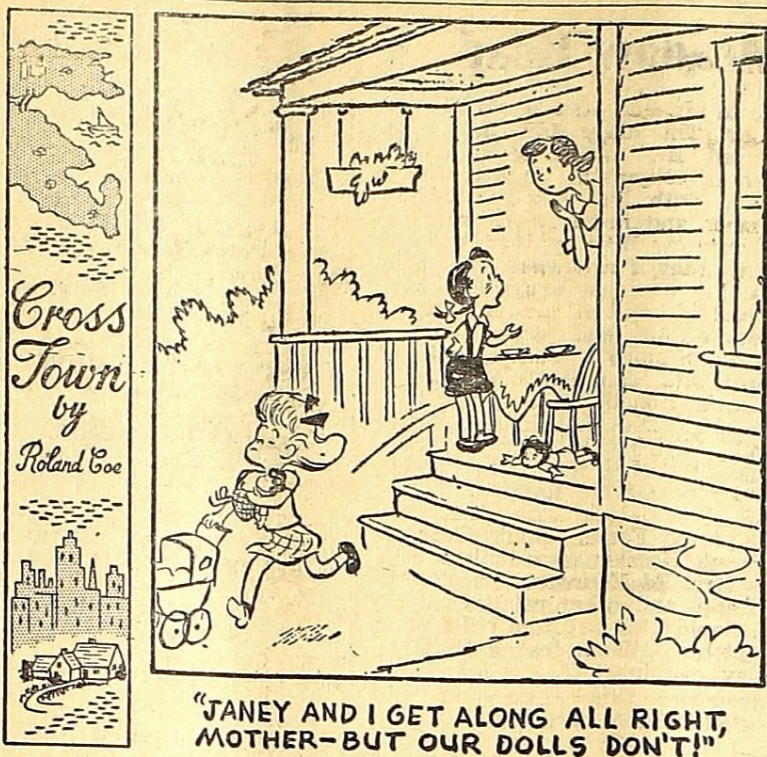

Col. William Lightfoot Visscher was born a Kentuckian before Civil war days. For several years he was employed as an amanuensis by Henry Watterson, and by choice and by precept, followed Marse Henry in his political affiliations. He voted the straight Democratic ticket. Through several political campaigns in the early part of the century Colonel Visscher's services as an oratorical spellbinder were on the market to the party that would pay the highest price. The Republicans, with more dollars to spend, were the successful bidders. It worked satisfactorily until the 1912 campaign when the colonel was sent to Kentucky.

That assignment proved disastrous, both to Visscher and to the Republican party. Marse Henry, his old revered employer, turned on him and editorially ridiculed him as a Democratic Judas. Watterson was powerful in Kentucky. That ridicule cost Visscher his standing as a Kentuckian, of which he was especially proud, and the Republicans lost the state which they had hopes of carrying.

Start figuring election returns by counting several million votes cast by federal government payrollers.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger C. Whitman

QUESTION: My hot-water tank is not a year old and I have rusty water coming out of my hot-water faucets. Can you give me any suggestions on the subject?

ANSWER: One reason may be that you the heating the water too much. A temperature of 130 to 140 degrees is hot enough for domestic hot water. When water is heated more than that, sediment is stirred up that is carried along in the water supply. You could prevent overheating by installing an automatic control. Also, your water supply may contain a great deal of sediment, which could be controlled by a water filter.

QUESTION: We are planning to put up a frame cottage of five rooms next summer. Regarding cement blocks for foundation, people have cautioned me against buying blocks that are made during the winter. Is there any reason for this?

ANSWER: It is true that cement work should not be allowed to freeze during the process of manufacture or construction. Reputable cement block manufacturers do not allow this to happen, however, even during the winter.

QUESTION: We are decorating three rooms. Could you tell me how to get cold-water paint off?

ANSWER: If it is old-fashioned calcimine, it should come off by washing with warm water containing a little ammonia, to be followed by thorough rinsing. If the paint is one of the newer types with a resin base, you can paint right over it with oil paint after first applying a varnish size. If you wish to hang wallpaper, coat it with a glue size.

Mud-Fly Fishing Rules
Mud-fly fishing is a new tactic recommended for use in dead water holes where trout simply refuse to rise to the angler's lures. Take a coachman fly and clip the wings. Then pack mud into a ball about it. Drop the mud-packed fly on the smooth water. As it settles to the bottom, with the water disintegrating the mud into little spalling swirls, the trout should smash it for curiosity alone.

Buoyant answer to Back Road and Boulevard

White sidewall tires, as illustrated, available at extra cost.

REMEMBER that rough patch of road up yonder where the ruts and ridges make a washboard seem smooth?

Recall the tiring tenseness brought on by the drum and hum of road noise and tremor even over smooth concrete highways?

Well, clock away the miles in this stunningly styled Buick — and meet up with the sweetest answer to such matters this side of cloud cruising.

"It's a ride that's soft and smooth as velvet," folks tell us. And we tell them it comes from a host of things.

It comes from the ample road-weight of a two-ton car built low and wide — and so beautifully balanced it handles light as a baton. It comes from the leveling buoyancy of Buick's all-coil springing which puts a pillow of deeply coiled steel at each wheel to soak up the bumps and ripples.

It comes from the softness of bigger, lower-pressure tires that cushion away road tremors and roughness — from the sure-footed, swerve-free steadiness of Buick's extra wide Safety-Ride rims, widest in the industry.

And it comes in special measure from a brand-new engineering gem we call Vibra-Shielding which banishes vibration build-up. Here for the first time you're freed from the motoring fatigue brought on by tiny tremors piling up into bigger ones. Here your miles are made moss-smooth and quiet — long journeys become mere jaunts.

So why delay knowing the most buoyant answer to any road you ever traveled?

Come visit us now. Know at first hand the distinctive styling, the flashing action, the velvety ride over highway and byway that are Buick's and Buick's alone.

Then follow your heart's desire and get your order in promptly. We'll take it in proper sequence whether or not you have a car to trade.

When better automobiles are built BUICK will build them
