Bernadotte's Murder Dramatizes Question of Palestine Before U.N.; East-West Crisis Hits Final Peak

By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.

HOLY LAND: Murder

The sullen-faced, uniformed men in the jeep didn't say a word after they had stopped the procession of United Nations cars that was winding through the Katamon section of Jerusalem.

Carrying a machine gun, one of them walked up to the automobile in which Count Folke Bernadotte and Col. Andre Pierre Serrot were sitting, looked inside and started shooting. The two killers fled, leaving Serrot dead and Bernadotte mortally wounded. The U. N. Palestine mediator died as he was being carried into Hadassah hospital on a stretcher.

For Bernadotte, head of the Swedish Red Cross, nephew of the king of Sweden, diplomat and humanitarian, it was a wretched, futile end.

His death was mourned not only by governments but by millions of ordinary citizens, yet he died not knowing when or if ever his assiduous and sincere efforts to organize peace in the Holy Land would be fulfilled.

Bernadotte's assassination brought Jerusalem—and all of Palestine, for that matter—perilously close to the brink of general violence. There was danger, too, that the uneasy Arab-Jewish truce might fall to pieces under the circumstances.

For the time being, Bernadotte's killers remained unidentified. The Israeli government called it the work of Stern gang terrorists and issued an edict outlawing that extremist group.

In Oslo, Norway, U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie added his panegyric to the praise that was being heaped on the martyred Bernadotte:

"He burned with eagerness to bring about an understanding between Arabs and Jews. He thought always of justice and peace."

FINAL REPORT: 'End It Now'

As the United Nations general assembly convened for its fateful 1948-49 session in the Palais de Chaillot the member nations took time out to pay somber tribute to Count Folke Bernadotte, their representative in Palestine who had died while trying to implement the peace of which they were supposed to be the architects.

Then they began consideration of the plan for an enforced Palestine settlement that Bernadotte had submitted before his death.

THE SWEDISH COUNCIL'S final 35,000-word report recommended that the Arab-Jewish war should be "pronounced formally ended." If the Arabs and Jews refuse to make peace, the U. N. should do so itself, the report said.

It calls for changes in the boundaries of the U. N. partition plan adopted in November, 1947, proposing that the Negeb desert be given to the Arabs and that the Jews should receive all of Galilee instead of only the eastern part.

Other recommendations include:

1. INTERNATIONALIZATION of Jerusalem by placing it under U. N. control.
2. ESTABLISHMENT of a technical boundaries commission to delimit the new frontiers.
3. CREATION of a Palestine conciliation commission to deal with population exchanges and supervise other parts of U. N. decisions.
4. SETTLEMENT of the problem of 360,000 Arab refugees by giving them the right to return to their homes in Jewish territory or to receive compensation if they choose not to return.

It was a good plan, the United States thought, and Secretary of State Marshall announced that this nation would back it to the fullest extent. Said Marshall:

"THE UNITED STATES considers that the conclusions contained in the final report of Count Bernadotte offer a generally fair basis for settlement of the Palestine question."

He called it "the best possible basis for bringing peace to a distracted land," adding that "No plan could be proposed which would be entirely satisfactory in all respects to every interested party."

THERE'S NO EXCUSE

America's Rural Fire Loss Can Be Cut

Although fire prevention week is over for this year, the danger of farm fires is not over and possibly never will be.

But that seeming inevitability is no excuse. As a matter of fact, fire protection experts say, there is no longer any excuse for America's 100-million-dollar annual farm fire loss.

The means to reduce it are avail-

Shrinkage

Since 1939 the total number of dollars in circulation in the U. S. has more than trebled—from 33 billion to nearly 109 billion—while our industrial production of goods to buy has less than doubled. Result: Cheaper money. Each dollar's proportionate worth in goods has fallen until it now takes 1.76 dollars to buy as much as one dollar would buy in 1939. Over three times as many dollars bidding frantically for less than twice as much goods equals inflation.

RUSSIANS:

Western Stand

Those who, in commenting on the strained relationship between the East and West, have been wont to say, "It'll get worse before it gets any better," probably had reached the end of their rhetorical rope.

For it was unlikely that it could get any worse without producing armed conflict of some kind. This, it appeared, was the top of the heap of crises that had been piling up for two years.

There were these developments: THE AMERICAN, British and French ambassadors, who had been talking with Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov and Premier Stalin in Moscow for six weeks, left the Russian capital, presumably ending the four-power discussions.

THE THREE western powers asked the Kremlin for a simple and final "yes or no" on the question of whether Russia will lift its blockade of Berlin.

U. S. SECRETARY of State George Marshall, speaking before the U. N. general assembly, warned the Soviet Union that American patience should not be mistaken for weakness.

With the Moscow talks at an end the center of action in the crisis had shifted to Paris where the issue would be debated in the U. N. The western nations—the U. S., France and Great Britain—plainly had had enough and were determined not to give another inch.

In an hour-long speech before parliament, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin expressed his nation's determination: "We are firmly resolved to go on with our policy."

"I AM NOT SAYING by that that we are committed to war and all the other things that might ensue. We have not reached that stage yet."

Speaking to the United Nations in Paris, George Marshall, U. S. secretary of state, outlined the basic U. S. foreign policy in much the same manner as Bevin. The United States, he said, would not "compromise the essential principles" or "barter away the rights and freedoms of other peoples."

HOME OWNERS:

Record High

One of the most maddening of all the modern paradoxes is that while millions of American families are searching desperately for decent places to live, at the same time more American families own their own homes now than ever before in history.

About 49 per cent of the nation's non-farm families owned their homes at the beginning of this year, it has been revealed by a federal reserve board survey. That comes to a total of 18.5 million city and town families.

Although the survey did not take up farm families, the proportion of home owners among that group traditionally has been much higher than among city dwellers.

? Current Events ?

If you haven't been spending all your evenings taking the dog for a walk or fixing the hen house, chances are you've been reading about some of the events on which the following five questions are based. Can you answer them?

2. The American, British and French ambassadors who have been conferring with Molotov recently took their leave of Moscow. Can you name them?
3. This year, 16 years after he soared 10 miles into the stratosphere in a balloon, a Belgian scientist-explorer plans to plunge two miles under water to investigate the deep sea world. Who is he?
4. Who is the man who took the assassinated Count Bernadotte's place as U. N. mediator in Palestine?
5. Princess Elizabeth of England was in the world spotlight when she got married last November. Now she is in the news again for a different reason. What is it?

ANSWERS

PRICE AID:

Sure Thing

One thing is dead sure about the coming election: No matter who gets into office, farm price supports will be continued.

Governor Dewey is on record as favoring the Hope-Aiken law passed by congress last June, and President Truman says he is in favor of farm price supports and has been all along.

BOTH SIDES have promised their help to the nation's farmers. As a result of the growing amount of light that has been shed upon the idea of price supports there has been a lot of argument as to whether they keep up costs of living in the city and, hence, contribute generally toward inflation.

The system was started in the 1930s to save farmers from bankruptcy caused by surplus production and lack of consumer buying. It accomplished that end.

IT WAS CHANGED during the war to make farmers produce more food than the country needed to feed less fortunate nations who were fighting the Axis. It did that.

After the war this incentive system was continued to keep greater amounts of food flowing into destitute areas abroad. It was successful in that, also.

Now, however, as a result of this artificial stimulation, production is beginning to pile up in the U. S. The wartime pattern of price support no longer fits the American market.

THE POTATO situation is a case in point. As the government continues to stimulate the production of potatoes the guaranteed prices keep consumers from getting the surplus crops at bargain prices, and at the same time the system keeps farmers growing too many potatoes.

Congress this year elected to revise the price support program, effective in 1950, by providing new parity prices based on modern farm practices and by allowing a fluctuation in support levels to conform with general economic conditions.

Dewey and Eggs

In sharp contrast to Henry Wallace's unsavory experience with eggs in the South, the product of the hen brought nothing but good to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, GOP presidential candidate. At his Pawling, N. Y., farm he was made honorary member of the national "Good Egg" club and was presented with an egg-bedecked plaque by Hobart Creighton (left), GOP nominee for governor of Indiana and president of the Poultry and Egg national board.

ANSWER MAN: Brannan

When it comes to questions Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan gets all kinds, many of which have nothing to do with farming.

Pouring in at the rate of 3,000 a day, the queries vary from: "How do I bury cats in the ground?" to "What was Little Eva's last name in the play, 'Uncle Tom's Cabin?'" and "Can you recommend a lonely hearts club? Three of us girls are interested."

Small Logging Town Builds a Debt-Free War Memorial

DRAIN, ORE.—The memoria, that "couldn't be built" will be dedicated in this logging community of less than 1,000 inhabitants.

Everyone thought that this town would be lucky to eke out a statute. Instead it has built a war memorial that cost more than 100 thousand dollars, every cent paid.

Without taxation, borrowing or public funds, Drain and other small communities nearby have built one of the finest recreation centers in southwestern Oregon.

Materials alone cost 100 thousand dollars. Cost of the completed project would have been more without hundreds of hours of donated labor.

The "north Douglas county living war memorial" has a concrete tennis court, a baseball diamond with floodlighting and a $75,000 swimming pool and bath house.

"We decided we had to build the best," explained James Whipple, president of the war memorial committee. "When you surrender your life for your country you are giving the best you have. It would be an insult to build anything which wasn't the best possible."

Nucleus of the memorial fund came from wartime scrap metal and paper drives. They gave benefit shows. They begged, donated, goods and held auctions. When Drain had to replace a condemned street bridge, the war memorial committee offered to do the work. The $700 they netted went into the fund.

To get cement for the swimming pool, the town set up a cowpoke's wagon and sold $1 "coupons." The coupons meant that the buyer had contributed a sack of cement. Grade school pupils sold 450 coupons in a single afternoon.

Falcons Chase Birds Which Harass Pilots in Iceland

REYKJAVIK, ICELAND.—A new job has been found for the Icelandic falcon, which has been idle since European kings and noblemen gave up hunting with falcons—a popular, though expensive, sport of the Middle Ages.

The British air ministry recently has produced five Icelandic falcons which will be trained to keep unwanted birds off British airfields. Flocks of birds near and on airfields are known to harass pilots when taking off or landing. Five falcons were flown to Prestwick in a British aircraft recently.

Scientists Manufacture New Chemical to Aid Heartbeat

RENSELAER, N. Y.—Scientists here are making a chemical believed to be identical with one involved in transmitting nerve impulses to the heart.

Their man-made chemical is levoarterenol, obtained from the breakdown of the synthetic drug arterenol. It was isolated by Dr. Maurice L. Tainter, director, and Dr. Froula Luduena and Benjamin Tullar of the Sterling-Winthrop Research institute.

Apparently Dr. Tainter said, the chemical is the same as sympathin E one of the natural go-between chemicals in the control of automatic nervous activities, such as the heartbeat, breathing, and blood pressure.

The man-made chemical is only one-fifth as toxic as adrenalin, a powerful heart stimulant. It is expected to be of great aid in research on human body functions, Dr. Tainter said.

Hit by Streamliner, Motorists Suffer Only Minor Bruises

KANKAKEE, ILL.—Two motorists were riding in a semi-trailer truck which was struck by a streamliner train traveling at 90 miles an hour—and lived to tell about it.

The lucky two, Theodore Martin and 14-year-old Rodney Smith, had started across a railroad crossing near here when they saw the Santa Fe Super Chief bearing down on them. It was too late to back up, too late to get across. The train smashed into the center of the trailer and started dragging the truck down the tracks.

But the cab, in which Martin and Smith were riding, caught on steel beams protecting the flasher lights at the crossing, and remained there while the streamliner demolished the trailer. Martin and Smith emerged with only minor cuts and bruises.

Switchman Loses Both Legs While Hurrying to Work

MOLINE, ILL.—Kenneth R. Shields, 28-year-old switchman, overslept and missed his bus to work.

Hurrying to the Rock Island lines yards, he decided to save time by catching a freight train, passing near his home. He slipped as he ran to grab it.

What Shields didn't know as he was carried to the hospital, where both legs were amputated, was that his boss had been trying to call him at home. He wanted to tell Shields not to report to work.

Washington Social Hours: Cold Turkey, Hot Gossip

By BAUKHAGE

News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—Washington cocktail parties and other social gatherings have been widely publicized as makers and breakers of reputations, national candidacies and international policies. Not all of these affairs may forge or fracture the destiny of nations, but many often bring together as great a variety of human ingredients as are to be found at any one place at any one time, anywhere.

For example I have just returned from lunch. I probably should say ly likely he would celebrate a similar occasion 55 years hence.

A little macabre, I thought, but no one seemed to take it that way—least of all the fellow-citizen of Dante who was enjoying himself immensely over his cold smoked turkey and doubtless became lyric over the lira and other important transalpine institutions before we were through.

On the bearded one's left was a representative of the state department who gave me a disappointing eye-witness and unsensational account of the recent parliament session of one of our South American neighbors—a session which I had judged from previous dispatches, would be punctuated by revolver shots.

We had heard rumors of mysterious shootings there which were supposed to have made up in political significance what they lacked in marksmanship. Also there had been hints of cabinet changes due not only to mistakes in policy, but to hasty burials. I asked my fellow guest about it.

"Oh, no," he said, "there were no cabinet changes."

"But what about these terrible rumors of graft and corruption?"

"Well, the President in his address did make particular reference to the evils of political corruption and to the importance of selfless loyalty on the part of the servants of the state."

"But was that all?" I persisted. "No names, addresses, or telephone numbers?"

"That was all," he insisted, "It was a very quiet session. Furthermore there was none of the protocol we observe at a joint session of the two houses of the American congress. This parliament was called to order, the President came in, spoke his piece, and went out."

At this point, my host broke in. He insisted that I repeat the story of the opening of this summer's special "turnip" session of congress which nobody outside of a few million radio listeners who happened to be tuned in had heard before.

Legislative Faux Pas, De Luxe Style

This July 26 when a very angry house of representatives was called to order, it was known that the regular chaplain could not appear. So, when a stranger took the rostrum, the less-somnolent members rose, bowed their heads, as is the custom, to listen to the prayer. The first words they heard resounding through the chamber were: "Whereas the public interest requires that the congress of the United States should be convened at 12 o'clock noon on Monday, the twenty-sixth of July, 1948, to receive such communication as may be made by the Executive; Now, therefore, I, Harry S. Truman, President of the United States..." and so on...

Gradually the members realized that the man addressing them was not the substitute for the absent chaplain of the house, but the substitute for the equally-absent reading clerk whose duty it is to read bills and official communications.

It was most embarrassing. The voice they were hearing was not the voice of a man repeating the word of God; it was the voice of the substitute clerk repeating the proclamation of the man at whom they were maddest. The members didn't like to make public admission of their error by sitting down, and so they had to stand through the painful 114-word pronouncement which had torn them from the bosom of family and constituency, and brought them back to heat-ridden Washington.

Next to the state department official who had unwittingly provided the excuse for my anecdote was the consul-general of the Philippine republic who happens to be the son of another college classmate of mine. He, like the rest of his family, had outlived the Japanese occupation, and with his sister, had participated in the effective Philippine underground, memories of which made this day's current tragedy of the Philippines—the eruption of Hibokhibok volcano on Camiguin island—a decidedly minor concern.

On my left was a prominent Washington lawyer. During a lull in the discussion of international, if not cosmic affairs, he suddenly asked: "What was your mother's maiden name?"

"Alice Blood," I replied.

"Yes," he nodded in satisfaction, "My aunt, Clara Brown, often told me about your mother. They were classmates (Ingham university '78), and she was a bridesmaid at your mother's wedding in La Salle, Illinois."

Skipping your correspondent around the table, we arrive at a famous scientist. We exchanged reminiscences too, for he also was a graduate of the same college. As we talked, I remembered an anecdote about him I had heard from a mutual college friend.

A Check by Any Other Name . . .

Not many years after his graduation, this scientist and his young wife arrived in the city where our mutual friend was in business, and called on him. The businessman recognized the scientist's face immediately but for the life of him couldn't remember the man's name.

During their lunch, the scientist remarked that he was going on an extended trip into Canada and had unfortunately run out of money. He wondered could he get a check cashed at the businessman's bank. The businessman gladly acquiesced, thinking that when he saw the signature on the check, he would recognize the scientist's name. Together they went to the bank, the scientist wrote the check, and the two men went to the cashier's window. But as the scientist handed in the check, all the businessman could read was the name of a bank in a very distant city and the amount—five hundred dollars.

He had already said to the cashier, "I want you to meet my friend . . ." but could get no further. Terribly embarrassed, he turned to the scientist and said: "I'm sorry, but I can't recall your name."

Of course the cashier overheard this remark and with the natural caution of the banker, said to the businessman: "This will be fine, Mr. X, but will you please endorse this?" Mr. X turned it over, noted the name but did not recognize it, trembled to think of what would happen to his bank account if it bounced (and he was sure it would), and signed. Farewells were spoken, the scientist departed. Day after day the businessman awaited the call from the bank.

In fact, he told me he had picked out a space on the wall where he intended to frame the paper so that he could call attention to it casually should some other vaguely identified caller request a similar favor.

Nothing happened. A month or so later, another college friend came to town. The businessman related the story, describing the scientist and his occupation. Unaccountably his listener burst into laughter.

"Didn't you know," he said between gasps, "That man's technical as well as scientific information which he acquired at school along with his Ars Magister made him a cool million the year after he was graduated?"

At the luncheon there was also a Chinese oil expert who merely listened and an ERP representative who left early.

And now back to my red-headed host. He related the adventure of one of the guests who had been unable to appear. It seems this gentleman had formed a corporation called "World Development, Inc." or something very similar. When my host heard his glowing prospectus, he said, "Aren't you covering a lot of ground?" "Oh, no," said the promoter who since had acquired considerable influence in international affairs, "this is just a subsidiary of the Inter-Planetary corporation."

Then I had to go, so I never knew what master-plan for the rebuilding and exploiting of the nation, the world or the sidereal spaces were discussed or consummated. But I have no doubt you can go a long way in Washington—starting with cold turkey.

Price Support Paradox

IN THE makeshift agricultural act passed by the 80th congress, the department of agriculture, through the commodity credit corporation, was mandated to support basic crops such as wheat and corn at a price 90 per cent of parity.

But paradoxically the same congress, in a rider on the act extending the charter of the commodity credit corporation, effectively prevented the CCC from fully carrying out that mandate of price support.

As a result, thousands of wheat and corn farmers are being forced to sell their crops to grain dealers at "distress" prices—that is, at prices below the parity price. Millions of bushels are being sold at from 10 to 20 cents a bushel below the support price. Here's how it happened.

The agricultural act which extended the present price support law was rushed through in the last hours of the dying congress. So also was the act which extended the charter of the CCC making it a federal corporation instead of a corporation under the laws of the state of Delaware, as it had operated for 12 years.

In the senate this act was handled by the agricultural committee but when it reached the house it was sent, surprisingly, to the banking committee chairmanship my Congressman Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.), Chairman Clifford R. Hope (R., Kas.) of the house agricultural committee made violent objection but Speaker Joe Martin was obdurate.

As a result a rider was slipped into the charter extension which removed from the CCC all power to purchase or lease any private property for storage purposes. And that in a nutshell is why the CCC in thousands of cases cannot support prices: They do not have facilities for storage or authority to buy or lease these facilities.

The farmer who does not have adequate safe storage on his farm or who cannot obtain suitable commercial storage is out of luck insofar as price support is concerned. He must either store his grain in inadequate storage and take his chances on its acceptance later by CCC or sell at distress prices to the grain dealers. And he must take the same chances under the purchase agreement plan.

The commodity credit corporation formerly had storage facilities for more than 300 million bushels. At one time in 1942 they had 408 million bushels of grain under loan in safe storage. However, during the past several years, because of the rapid movement of grain, wheat and corn and the fact that prices were well above parity, it was not necessary to store so much. So they disposed of these storage facilities and as of today they only have storage for approximately 50 million bushels. During the past two or three years only 20 million to 50 million bushels have been in storage on loan.

Lack Storage Space

But with the bumper crops of this year, both as to wheat and corn, and with the price dropping down to and below the support level the estimate is that it will be necessary to store from 200 million to 300 million bushels. It is possible that most of the wheat crop can be taken care of but with the 3.5-billion-bushel corn crop coming on top of it officials frankly can see no means of providing safe storage unless farmers can do it themselves.

The price support program, including loans and agreement purchases, was adopted in the first instance (1) to provide a more orderly marketing of the crops; (2) to protect the farmer from taking losses by the need of disposing of his crop as soon as harvested and (3) to provide an "ever-normal" granary. But the headache this new law provides for CCC is not over even if storage could be provided now, for when the loans and purchase agreements expire the grain then is turned over to the government and facilities must be found for storage. Under the new charter of CCC that will pose a serious problem.

Speculators Responsible?

And inevitably the story is going around that the grain speculators who maintained a strong lobby in Washington were sponsors of the rider in the new CCC charter act. Certainly they are the only beneficiaries of this lack of storage facilities since they reap the advantage of obtaining grain at prices below the parity figure. And it appears to this writer that this whole thing may blow up in someone's face and become a political issue.

THE MET AND THE MOVIES

The Metropolitan opera, it is announced, has been in conference with Hollywood on the presentation of grand opera on the screen. Okay here, but we want a promise there will be no "Son of Gotterdammerung."

Grand opera could use a wider audience. Things are not in proper balance when millions of people hear Looney Tunes and only thousands hear "Samson and Delilah." Or when sweater girls, Kashmir travelogues and Disney mean more to the masses than Bach, Paganini, Lily Pons and the big scene in "Tannhauser."

The movie fans might like opera. They could be in a mood when anything on the screen that offers relief from shrieking limousine brakes, gunfire and people in shower baths would be mighty welcome. Not to mention love scenes in hayfields and episodes in the Casbah.

Hollywood could do much for grand opera, by the same token. It would at least scrap the old scenery and see that costumes fitted.

And it would see that the westerns took place on the screen and not in the lobby or bar.

However, we warn the Met that it had better be on its guard lest the Hollywood influence go too far. We would hate to see the announcements of "Madam Butterfly" or "Carmen" carry the lines "Free Comic Books for the Boys and Girls! Special Exhibit of Tommyguns in the Lobby! Don't Miss the Saturday Night Jackpot!"

We have grave fears of billings such as these:

"Tristan and Isolde," a Warner Brothers' Super Special! With Woody Herman's Orchestra on Stage.

"Goldwyn Does It Again With Peleas and Melisande! Don't Miss the Stage Presentation of La Scala Days! Free Dishes!"

"Cavalleria Rusticana! A Republic Pictures Production! Watch Your Neighborhood Theater News for Further Details! With the Added Feature 'Billy the Kid.'"

"Starting Today: The Barber of Seville! Starting Thursday 'The Big Murder at Triple Bar Ranch!'"

"All This Week Beethoven! All Next Week George Raft."

But what this department fears most in one of those Hollywood screen preludes with all the credit lines, viz:

LA TOSCA
An Allied Artists' Production.
Story by Ted E. Tilton.
Taken From a Script by Lydia Schmoose.
Based on an Idea by Puccini.
Dialogue by Herman Schnaffel.
Additional Dialogue by Welsh and Burke.
Costumes by Schimzai.
Make-Up by Dolores Dolores.
Musical Arrangement by Joe Zileh

Let's have a little co-operation between the movie and the opera, but don't go too far, boys!

Bells, Bells, Bells

Elmer Twitchell, an old-time hook and ladderman himself, is upset by the order cutting down the bell alarms in New York fire houses, following a decision that it makes firemen victims of hypertension and cardiac troubles. "On paper it sounds logical," declared Elmer, "but in practice it is no good. Fire bells keep a fireman tense and sleepless? Bunk. On the contrary an old timer can't get a wink of sleep when deprived of 'em.'"

"Those younger fire laddies may find bells a nuisance but older smoke eaters were raised on 'em. Their hypertension will go up 50 per cent the first night they are expected to sleep without 'em. Mark my words, with the bells cut out a week, you will find the fire department close to a nervous collapse."

The Buffalo Philharmonic offers to supply baby sitters to all purchasers of season tickets. This removes the last excuse for not having a big family.

VANISHING AMERICANISMS

"Let's be fair about this. . ."

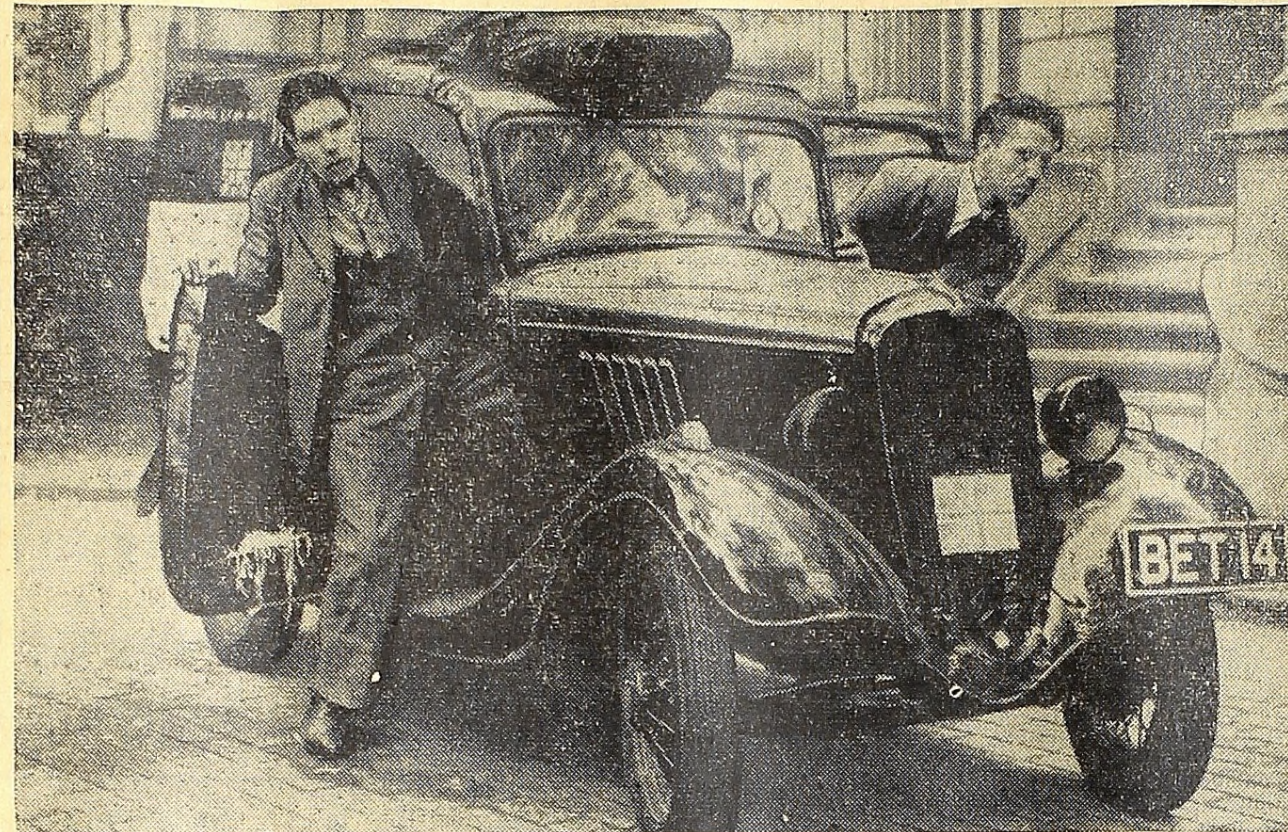

"If we are wrong we'll gladly say so. . ."

"The boss ain't a bad guy at heart. . ."

Ed Kobak, head man of Mutual Broadcasting, announces that after January 1 all his programs requiring that listeners answer a telephone to win prizes will be abandoned. "I think legally these shows cannot be banned," he says. "But the important thing is for a man to be right with himself, and not just consider what he can get by with." What! Can there really be a figure in American entertainment who is for getting back to old-fashioned ethics?

HERITAGE OF AN AMERICAN SOLDIER . . . When Pvt. Robert Johnstone Jr., of Easton, Pa., was killed in action in the battle for the Philippines, he left behind him a will that many would call strange. He directed that his G.I. insurance of $10,000 should be used to educate a Japanese in the American way of life. This year his "love thine enemy" idea bore fruit. Robert Nishiyama (right above), a student kamikaze pilot during the war, arrived at Lafayette college, Easton, Pa., to start classes on a scholarship financed by Pvt. Johnstone's will. Here, he is greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Johnstone and their son Bruce.

CHIMNEY SWEEP ON MISSION TO MOSCOW . . . Because he had lost all faith in formal diplomacy and striped-pants negotiators for peace, Arthur Cuttriss, 43-year-old London chimney sweep, appointed himself ambassador of the working man and started to plan his own mission to Moscow. Cuttriss (left) is shown with Lewis Rothwell, a bobbin-winder, as they called at the Russian consulate in London to see about visas. He hopes that a man-to-man talk with Stalin will settle the whole problem of world peace. The two "envoys" will use this little car for the trip to the Russian capital. They're taking along a change of clothing and three extra gallons of gas.

WHO CASTS THE FIRST STONE . . . For a study in the brutalized emotions that can grip men who are caught in the surge of mob action, take a look at this picture of some young French aviation workers in the middle of a big riot in Paris. They are posing defiantly with hands filled with stones and chunks of broken concrete which they hurled at police during the recent riot of the members of the nationalized aviation industry in the French capital. Several persons, including police, were injured in the clash which was touched off when the workers staged a mass demonstration outside the industry's headquarters.

THAT'S HOW TUNNELS ARE BORN . . . The final "breaking through" of the rock barrier where the two sections of the Brooklyn-Manhattan tunnel join underneath the waters of New York harbor took place with a considerable bang as a dynamite charge was used to blast a hole through the last few feet of rock separating the two ends of the tunnel. The project, which has been under construction since 1940 and will cost 70 million dollars, is expected to be open for motor vehicle traffic in 1950. Above, Sam Allen, superintendent of the Brooklyn section, shakes hands with Andy Amisano of the Manhattan section.

KATHLEEN NORRIS Maternal Selfishness

Released by WNU Features By KATHLEEN NORRIS

HAS a girl the right to marry when that marriage means the breaking up of her mother's home?

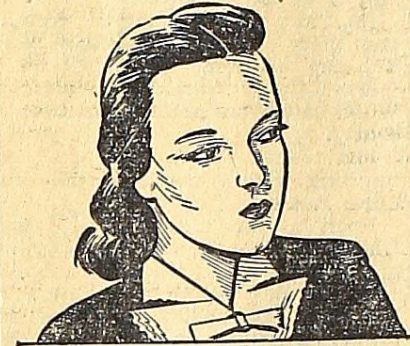

That is the question that Louise Barton asks me. Louise is hardly a girl. She has passed her 29th birthday, and she has been engaged to her Douglas for seven years.

When they first hoped to marry, Doug was in the navy.

"But we didn't care, we were so happy," writes Louise. "There didn't seem any problem at all, then. If we had only gotten married, and told the family about it afterward, how different it all would have been. My father was living in, and Douglas' mother, too. My other Peter got into the navy in his very last weeks of the war when he was 18.

"Now I am 29 instead of 22, Peter is soberly at work in an insurance office, Douglas' mother is dead, his old home broken up through the housing emergency into small apartments, and my mother a confirmed invalid.

"She has diabetic complications, stomach ulcers, blinding headaches, and a troublesome sacroiliac; enough trouble to keep her nervous and uncertain of herself. Some weeks Mother can be about, go to church and club, and perhaps the next week she collapses utterly.

Fears Mother's Attitude. "It breaks my heart to desert Peter, leave him to the domestic and financial burden, and yet it breaks my heart, too, to delay my marriage any longer. In fact," writes Louise, warning of rebellion as the letter goes on, "everything would be ideal for me if it were not for Mother's attitude.

"She insists on going on in our old big uncomfortable house instead of selling it or renting part of it; she takes no account of the fact that Peter is engaged, and although his girl is handicapped now by the care of a paralytic father they have their hopes and plans, too.

"Douglas has established himself most successfully in a town about a hundred miles away; that isn't a great distance, but it means I can do little for Mother and Peter. He has a lovely little house there, all furnished, and we would love to have Peter with us.

"Why is it my duty? My mother says to wait, and that many girls do not marry nowadays until they are older than I am. But many do, and all my friends are happily establishing their nurseries and coming to consider themselves old married women. And wait for what? I don't want to wait for my mother's death, or count that in on my plans. What is your advice to a girl whose family claims are so heavy and yet who is so deeply in love?"

My advice to you, Louise, is to get married at once, and never for one moment consider your mother's inexcusable attitude. And my advice to Peter is the same. When she gets tired of playing sick, she will get well. When she gets tired of keeping up a cumbersome old house, she will get rid of it.

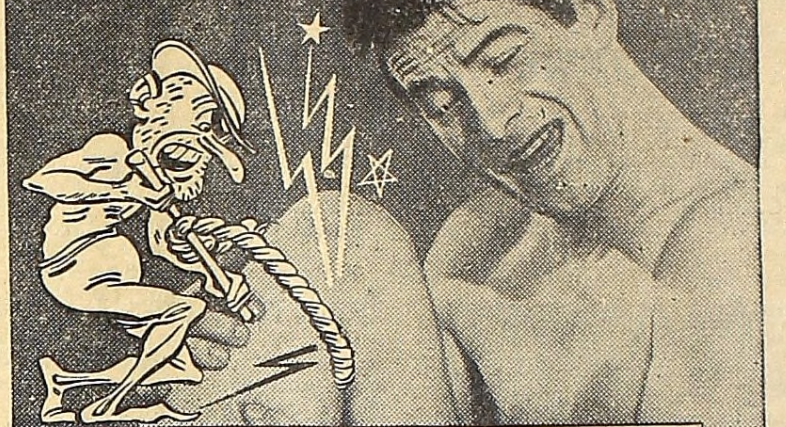

Injustice to Herself. To let her jeopardize your life's happiness now is not only an injustice to you and your Douglas, but to herself, too. Whatever the sorrows, losses and disappointments of her life have been, and whatever her physical ills, they are strictly her personal property, and it is for her to handle them. You will have your own some day, and I hope you will remember then how you feel now.

Few marriages can stand the strain of a discontented, sickly, critical old person, right in the home circle. Such old persons, if you dig into their own history as young married folk, were invariably intolerant and critical when it came to their own old people, a generation earlier.

Refuse to Pay Income Tax Used for 'War Preparation'

Walter C. Longstreth, a Philadelphia lawyer, and his wife, Emily, told the internal revenue bureau that they were refusing to pay 34.6 per cent of their 1947 income tax because they believed it "was used for preparation for war." They wrote: "True patriotism requires a citizen to protest . . . when his country adopts a course that is leading to degradation and destruction."

Extension Service Notes

"Keeping Fit," Subject of Next Women's Extension Meeting

Members of the Iosco County Extension groups are joining in a state-wide campaign against colds according to Harold R. Clark, Agricultural Agent. Leaders will meet in the Extension Conference Room in the Federal Building at East Tawas at 10:00 o'clock.

Fact and fad about food and fatigue as well as about diet and teeth will also be discussed by Miss Roberta Hershey, Extension Specialist in Foods and Nutrition from Michigan State College.

Keeping fit through all the years of life will be considered from many angles including the importance of iodized salt for folks of all ages and the necessity of dairy products for adults.

Quick breads, nutritious cookies and cereal candies will be sampled at the meeting and recipes for some everyday foods will be distributed.

There are now ten Women's Extension groups in the county who will send leaders to this training meeting. These leaders will then in turn teach the leaders of their respective local groups. For information in organizing groups in other groups in other localities contact the County Agent, Harold Clark at East Tawas.

Gardners can plan now for a supply of root crops during the fall and winter months by choosing the method of storage they want to use, says Harold Clark, county agricultural agent.

Special attention must be paid to crops that are placed in storage. The edible portions of plants placed in storage are living plant parts, and although stopped in development, still function as live plants. Changes take place in tissues and they are affected by temperature, moisture, air and light.

Root crops includes beets, carrots, turnips, rutabagas, salsify, parsnips, and winter radishes. The crops require cold, moist conditions with little air circulation. A temperature near freezing with a relative humidity of 90 to 95 percent is recommended. The root crops may be stored in outdoor pits or mounts, in an indoor cellar or in specially constructed store rooms in the basement.

Tops of root crops for storage should not be cut too close to the roots. With beets about one-half inch of the tops should be left to prevent "bleeding." None of the root crops should be dug until just before freezing weather in late October or early November. Parsnips, salsify, and horseradish are not injured by freezing and may be left in the ground all winter. Better still, they may be dug, placed in mounds and covered with soil in the garden.

Soil Conservation Demonstration at George Prescott, III Farm

How to improve crop yields and farm income by soil adaptability practices will be demonstrated at the George Prescott, III farm, located ½ mile north of McArdle's store in Tawas township, Monday afternoon beginning at 1:30 p. m. October 11. B. A. Meyers of the Soil Conservation Service will explain the methods of determining soil types and suggest rearrangement of fields in order to make the best use of the various types of soils at the same time conserving and building up the fertility of the farm.

Four demonstration farms have been surveyed and the farmers cooperating are Tom Nelkie, Dornace Bellville, Fred Latter and Mr. Prescott.

Soil maps and recommendations for improved land use were made by the S. C. S. on each of the farms. On these farms they found problems of drainage, erosion and varying soil types which vary considerably in the adaptability and economic uses.

On the Prescott farm changes of fences which will follow the strips on soil types are being recommended. The resulting fields will not be the conventional square field but will run diagonally through two or more fields. Some fields will be in the regular four year rotation crop program while others will be used strictly on a grassland basis.

Improved soil conservation practices are spreading to all parts of the United States and to all kinds and conditions of land. Flat lands of naturally high fertility offer problems to the soil conservation specialists, as well as the rolling lands. Each farm has their individual problems and are treated accordingly. The testimonials of farmers who have practiced soil conservation emphasizes the great potentialities we have in improving farm incomes.

All farmers in Iosco County have a conservation problem and therefore should receive a great benefit in attending this field trip.

Livestock Shippers Co-Op Meet at Whittemore

Members of the Arenac-Iosco Shippers Association heard specialists discuss the aspects of livestock marketing situation at the Whittemore School, Thursday evening. Ike Walton, Manager of the Michigan Livestock Exchange told the group that the favorable feed situation was putting pressure on heavy feeder cattle and we could expect to see more finished beef going to the market this winter and next spring. This may effect the price of top beef but the average price of all beef should remain good. He pointed out here in how the public had been led to believe that farmers were getting rich on 40¢ beef when actually an infinitesimal number had reached top market. Mr. Walton said that MLSE had made an impressive gain in the last two years. Their grain in value of business had made them more favorable market for cattle and with the increased efficiency the members of one of Michigan's largest cooperatives were better net prices for their livestock.

Bob Williams, sheep salesman of the exchange said that lambs were coming in a very thin condition, due to dry pasture and were not easy to sell. Farmers who had neglected the docking and parasitic treatment of lambs were taking a big cut.

Paul Pennock, Agent of Arenac County said that he has always been concerned about the marketing of livestock and lauded the accomplishments of the Michigan Livestock Exchange in commanding top prices for its members. He said it was unfortunate that so many farmers had not found their best market and were selling their cattle to speculators who are making neat profits by selling these same cattle in the Detroit market.

Harold R. Clark, County Agent of Iosco county told the farmers that a good balanced farm program would mean, better pastures and more feed, which would tend to improve the quality of finish and an improved price. Breeding for better types of meat animals would also improve efficiency and quality.

The Arenac-Iosco Shipping Association is a farmer's cooperative which is organized to assure its members of reliable trucking service. The association has designated Rudy Gingerich and Forrest Streeter as their official haulers.

James Mielock, presiding over the meeting. Mr. Mielock and Nelson Ostrander were elected to serve three years on the board of directors. Edgar Shaffer of Standish was elected to fill an unexpired term. Other members of the board of directors are Percy Crawford of Twining, Howard Staebler and Orville Strauer of McIvor.

'BOOMERANG'
By ROY CONSTINER

Holloway wanted to disown Jimmy until a beautiful woman proved that father and son were cut from the same pattern.

TRAILING smoke from an expensive cigar, stoutish J. P. Holloway led his wife from the elevator and into his private office. "Knew the moment you called," he flared, "Jimmy had wired for more money. But I'll not send him one cent. Not one red cent! You understand?"

Mrs. Holloway settled herself in the nearest chair. The gentle expression on her small, motherly face did not change. "As a matter of fact," she said softly, "I did hear from Jimmy, but—"

"Knew it," J. P. interrupted, "knew it all along. You were sitting right here when I told him I would absolutely not tolerate any foolishness from him while he was attending college." He hesitated momentarily as he puffed furiously at his cigar, then added, "And now that he has gone and invested over his head in this—this blind enterprise with this woman whom he thought was his friend, and she has run out on him with the capital and left him without as much as far—"

It was then the intercom buzzed. J. P. flipped the button irritably. "Yes?"

"A Miss Jenkins to see you, sir," came a voice through the intercom set.

"Has she an appointment?" he asked.

"Oh, goodness!" Mrs. Holloway broke in hurriedly. "James, I forgot to mention her. I asked her to stop in today."

J. P. frowned. "Well, who is she?" he asked caustically.

"We met yesterday at Mrs. Wellington's dinner party," she replied, as she patted an imaginary gray hair in place; then added, "She is, I think, associated with the Delburn Motor corporation in Detroit; therefore, I'm sure, in a position to help us buy a new car sooner than we could have hoped to otherwise. . ."

"But I don't want a new car," he countered. "I have just had our old car overhauled."

"But—surely, James," she returned somewhat pleadingly, "you can spare her a moment."

J. P. paused momentarily as he relit his cigar, and then flipped on the intercom set. "Send Miss Jenkins in," he said briskly.

What J. P. saw entering his office a moment later was a dark, slender woman, and in the mid-afternoon light she was almost beautiful. The coil of her black hair pinned into a chignon at the nape of her neck, the tailored gray suit with the white pleated blouse was very becoming to her straight shoulders, and narrow slender hips, he thought.

"It's so nice of you to permit me a few minutes of your valuable time, Mr. Holloway," she began. Then, with a slight nod toward Mrs. Holloway, she added, "I've heard so much about you and your rapid advance in the business world, that it's really quite a pleasure. . ."

What J. P. saw entering his office a moment later was a dark, slender woman, and in the mid-afternoon light she was almost beautiful. The coil of her black hair pinned into a chignon at the nape of her neck, the tailored gray suit with the white pleated blouse was very becoming to her straight shoulders, and narrow slender hips, he thought.

"It's so nice of you to permit me a few minutes of your valuable time, Mr. Holloway," she began. Then, with a slight nod toward Mrs. Holloway, she added, "I've heard so much about you and your rapid advance in the business world, that it's really quite a pleasure. . ."

the Johnson ranch and other real estate holdings. Two of the finest people in radio, they have brought happiness to thousands of people as they traveled over the country. The broadcasts from veterans' hospitals alone made the program an outstanding one. May they have the best of everything, always!

"Madame Bovary," one of the great novels of all time, will no doubt undergo considerable adaptation (with an eye on the censors) before its two versions reach us this year. Claudette Colbert is slated to star in it on the first Ford theater broadcast of the season and Lana Turner is booked for MGM's screen version, with Vincente Minnelli producing.

Waitresses in Warner Bros.' commissary will never forget James Stewart's lunches, when he was making "Rope." After scanning the menu he'd ignore the fancy dishes and order grilled hot dogs, day after day.

Which reminds me of John Lund, lunching at New York's famous 21, where the quality and variety of the food is terrific. Lund read the menu, said he didn't know why he bothered as he always ate scrambled eggs anyway!

Rival companies are dazed at RKO's accomplishment in landing an exhibit at New York's Metropolitan museum. De Monvel's portrait of Ingrid Bergman in "Joan of Arc," the armor she wears in the picture, color transparencies of scenes from the film and props used in it, all are on exhibition at the great art gallery for an extended period.

In his role as a tough army officer in "A Bell for Adano" on the "Theater Guild of the Air," Robert Montgomery had to make some very uncomplimentary remarks about the navy—in which he served as a commander in the last war. At the end of the broadcast he whispered into a dead microphone, "Listen, fellas, if you navy guys were listening, I was only kidding."

RKO advertised for "a talking dog," bear or horse to narrate animal film in well-known documentary series. Must have good voice. No birds or cows." Now comes the complaint that they're exhausted because they received so many replies. Suspicious persons suggest that maybe it was done to call attention to "Friend of the Family," an RKO Pathe release.

Janet Barrett, pretty dancer who broke her back 15 months ago in a fall from a horse, is launching a come-back at Warners with two roles—a director's secretary in "Two Guys and a Gal" and a newspaperwoman in "The House Across the Street."

When Robert Sterling finished his role in "Roughshod" he took some visiting wartime friends on a sight-seeing bus tour as the best way to show them Hollywood. The bus driver recognized and introduced him to the other passengers, who were skeptical. "He's a phoney," said one man. "No star would travel on one of these buses." Suited Sterling perfectly.

Calves will weigh around 300 to 400 pounds and yearlings from 700 to 900 pounds.

Grading and sorting of pens will be finished so prospective buyers can look the cattle over Wednesday afternoon and Thursday morning. Judging of the ten best steer calves and five best pens of steer calves will be done Wednesday morning. Prizes and ribbons are furnished.

4-H and FFA members will have a chance to buy the two best individual steer calves, or top pen of calves.

Prospective buyers are invited to attend the Smoker at the West Branch Country Club at 8:00 p. m. the evening before the sale. They will meet the consignors and learn about the program behind the sale.

Sale catalogues will be available at the yards previous to the sale listing each pen consigned with average weights. The ten best steer calves will be sold individually.

Those who wish room accommodations for the night before the sale should write the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of West Branch.

Buyers will have a better view of the sale ring this year. Bleachers have been constructed which will seat around 500 people and give everyone a clear view of the auction ring. The yards have been enlarged to accommodate 98 pens of cattle.
