Friends Bid James F. Kerr Farewell

"Knowing you are keenly interested in fishing and golfing, we present you with these gifts," solemnly said William Parker as he gave a nicely wrapped gift package to James F. Kerr, Friday evening at the Holland Hotel where a large number of friends had gathered to bid Mr. Kerr farewell. To the delight of the group Mr. Kerr was somewhat nonplussed when he found a miniature fishing rod and a set of toy golf clubs in the package. Mr. Parker made amends by then presenting Mr. Kerr a handsome pen and pencil set. Mr. Kerr responded to the occasion by telling how much he had enjoyed the time he had spent here as superintendent of the National Gypsum Company plant.

The evening was spent in cards, games and visiting and helping themselves to the buffet lunch. It was an enjoyable affair and someone suggested that it would be a good plan not to wait for someone to move away from the community before holding a similar get-together.

Mr. Kerr has resigned as superintendent of the National Gypsum Company plant and will go to Tennessee. He was succeeded by Keith Waugh, formerly superintendent of a National Gypsum plant at Bellefonte, Pa.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

British Election Set February 23; Seek Anti-Trust Law for Miners; Conflict Seen on Proposed Budget

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

TRIO WILL CHART RENT CONTROL, HOUSING . . . With rent control and housing two major items on the agenda of the current congressional session, these legislators will play a major part in law-making activities. They are, left to right, Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) of the house banking committee; Chairman Burnet Maybank (D., S. C.) of the senate banking committee, and Sen. John Sparkman (D., Ala.) member of the senate banking committee. They are shown after conferring with President Truman on rent control and federal housing aid.

ELECTION:

Britain's Choice

In a little less than a month Britain's voting populace will make an elective decision on the issue of whether to continue with socialism, state planning and nationalization of industry under the present Labor government or to return to free enterprise with Winston Churchill's Conservative party.

In setting February 23 as the date for the general election, Prime Minister Clement Attlee must have been acutely aware that this will be far and away the most bitterly contested and momentous election in modern British history.

Britain's 33 million voters will elect a new house of commons, with the party seating the majority of candidates getting the right to form the government.

Speculation was high as to whether defeats within the past two months by the Labor parties in both Australia and New Zealand could be taken as a straw in the wind, insofar as the outcome in England is concerned. Most informed opinion had it that it would be dangerous to predict a downfall of Attlee's government on the basis of the "down under" elections.

Chief reason for this thinking was that the Labor party very recently had been able to show signs of substantial gains in Britain's fight to overcome poverty.

BIG STICK:

Union Monopolies

Virtually everyone from busboy to bureaucrat probably has, at one time or another, discussed the question of whether the tactics used by some of the larger unions—particularly John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers—in securing benefits for their members do not constitute a monopoly in restraint of trade.

ON CAPITOL HILL that issue had been presented more forcefully than ever before when 10 senators—seven Democrats and three Republicans—sent to the senate judiciary committee a report stating that a bill forbidding labor to monopolize control of industry would end the "usurpation and abuse of power" such as currently is being demonstrated by Lewis' three-day work week in the soft coal mines.

The 10 senators were members of the senate banking committee, which had been investigating the problem of the miners' short work week but which had no power to take legislative action in that economic area.

THE REPORT pointed out that "If this usurpation and abuse of power to control production and price is tolerated by the congress, its unbridled use will spread from union to union, from industry to industry, and the congress will never again regain its own narrowly circumscribed power to control the economy of the nation consistently with the Constitution of the United States."

RED STUPIDITY REACHES NADIR

Soviets Claim U.S. College Girls Spies

There appeared no end to the absurdity to which Moscow would go in screaming to the world about how it is being imposed upon by low-lived, unprincipled spies. The latest frenzy of the Soviets in that sphere was directed at the Swiss branch of Smith college for women at Geneva. According to charges from Moscow, American girls at this school are being trained for

Soviet Walkout

It has been evident for a long time that Russia wants to eliminate China's Nationalist government, both from the Chinese and international scenes, and is sparing no effort to achieve that end.

IN ADDITION to the military pressure exerted by the Chinese Communists, the Soviets had turned on the heat in the United Nations in a continuing attempt to get the Nationalist delegation discredited in the security council.

Latest development along those lines came when Russia's Jacob Malik wrathfully stomped out of a security council meeting because the other delegates would not kick out the Nationalist representation.

And, said Malik, he would not return to the council as long as the Nationalists sat at the table. Meetings with them present would be a parody, he asserted. And the chief Nationalist delegate, T. F. Tsiang, who was presiding as January chairman over the first council meeting this year, "represents nobody," Malik concluded.

U.S. BUDGET:

No Balance

Mr. Truman's federal budget for the fiscal year starting July 1 was not surprising. It was unbalanced, calling for the government to live more than five billion dollars beyond its income during the year—if congress doesn't pare the figures, or give the President the "moderate" tax hikes he has proposed.

THE OVERALL BUDGET figure was 42 billion, 439 thousand dollars, but Mr. Truman declared the proposed spending "vital to our security . . . and to the welfare of our people."

As was to be expected, Mr. Truman insisted the budget was one of soundest prudence and restraint. He argued that it was a financial expression the steps the government ought to take now "to build toward economic growth and the expansion of human freedom in our own country and in the world."

National defense continued to be the biggest expense in the budget, although expansively covered in that is the money being spent in an effort to insure Europe against any further spread of communism.

An ironical twist was the fact that while the U. S. is pouring money into Great Britain as a part of that general effort, the British turn right around and give aid and comfort to communism by formally recognizing the Communists.

AS FOR TAX INCREASES, the President was silent on specific recommendations. He did, however, indicate that he would like an earlier date for imposition of an increase in social security taxes from one and one-half per cent to two per cent on employers and employees. The President apparently wanted that extra money to aid a health-insurance plan, which congress seems to have little intention of approving.

FORMOSA:

Many Tanks

The administration was standing pat on its decision against U. S. military intervention in Formosa—destined to be the next area of conflict in the Communist drive to control the Far East.

Official U. S. attitude was that this country could do more to combat communism in the volatile Orient by extending economic aid to lands still outside the Red orbit than it could by direct intervention in the struggle.

AT THE SAME TIME, however, the generalized term "economic aid" was being employed as usual to cover a multitude of purposes. A case in point was the news that the Chinese Nationalists had purchased nearly 300 U. S. army tanks for shipment to Formosa, where they would be used in the defense against the Communists.

The military vehicles were listed as surplus army equipment, and the price tag was $1,000 per tank. Similar tanks, minus weapons, cost about $58,000 to build during the war.

ANOTHER element in the paradox was that the Nationalists paid for the tanks with money from the 25-million-dollar kitty which was provided for the aid of China by congress last year.

U. S. state department's stand on the matter was expressed by Michael McDermott, department press officer, who said that the Chinese Nationalist government had been spending the aid money through its own purchasing agents and had bought whatever armaments it wanted.

"WE STILL recognize the Nationalist government of China and would interpose no objection to its exporting this material from this country," he stated.

Although the destination of the tank shipment was not disclosed officially, it was an open secret that the cargo was bound, aboard a Turkish ship, for Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government headquarters on Formosa.

FEDERAL OUTLAY:

GOP Sharpens Knife

Even as President Truman was calling for a 42-billion-plus federal budget for the coming fiscal year, Republican members of senate and house were sharpening paring knives in an effort to slash some of the proposed expenditures. Many Democrats, too, expressed misgivings over the prospect of another five billion "red ink," or deficit, spending.

GOP HOUSE LEADER Martin served notice that the "Republicans in congress have no intention of accepting this budget and will work night and day, if necessary, to bring it within the bounds of the capacity of the people to pay."

Similarly, the GOP senate leader, Wherry of Nebraska, termed the budget message "purely political" which "sugar-coated" the red ink implications.

Representative Taber (R., N. Y.) was the most violent in his attack on the budget proposals. "We cannot maintain our liberties," he charged, "if we turn this money over to the President and the Socialist schemers who surround him." Taber said he intended to battle for a balanced budget.

THERE WAS A POSSIBILITY that the President might be in trouble on his budget, because ever since the congress convened members have been talking of economy.

Answer Is 'No'

Dean Acheson, U. S. secretary of state, arrives for the White House conference at which it was decided that the United States would not interfere in Chinese Communists aims in Formosa. President Truman said this government will not provide any military defense or assistance to the island.

PROGRESS:

Deodorized

Rubber products which in the past have been anything but attractive because of their odor, may now smell as sweet as "mountain air after a shower" as the result of development of a new series of odorants.

The I. E. du Pont de Nemours company, introducing the odorants, said they may be used singly or in combinations added during the manufacturing process.

HEROIC ATTEMPT . . . Tow-truck driver, Temple Ray, attempts to pull blazing wreckage of a 24,000-gallon gasoline truck away from the streamliner train Super Chief after a mishap at Azusa, California. He is sitting in the cab of the truck, silhouetted against the flames, as he tries to drag the blazing trailer clear of the streamliner. The train is at extreme right. Cable from his tow truck can be seen curling out from hoist on rear of Ray's truck. He persisted in the effort until flaming gasoline spread under his vehicle, forcing him to abandon his attempts.

DEPARTING SHAH'S VISIT A SUCCESS . . . Princess Fatemeh, sister of the Shah of Iran, Grover Whalen and the Iranian ruler, Mohammed Reza Pehlevi, enjoy a cup of coffee before the Shah and his sister boarded a plane at New York for their homeland. The Shah made it plain that he considered his six-weeks' tour of the United States a success. The young monarch spoke of an understanding having been reached between two sides seeking truth and honesty. He said America, by listening with sympathy to the problems of other nations, creates the hope that "together we might find a much happier world in the future."

MERCY SLAYER . . . Dr. Hermann N. Sander, Candia, N. H., free on bail for mercy slaying of Mrs. Abbie Borroto, a cancer patient, shakes hands with Rev. C. Leslie Curtice (right), pastor of the Candia Congregational church, at the close of the services which the accused doctor and his family attended. Mrs. Sander stands at left with two of their three children, Mary Alice, 4, and Martha, 5. Rev. Curtice and three other residents of Candia have launched a petition in behalf of the accused doctor. His supporters claim he injected air into the bloodstream of the patient because her malady was incurable and he wanted to save her from suffering further pain.

EX-KINGS JOIN REVELERS . . . The cares of monarchy are miles and years away from these two ex-kings, dancing with their ladies at a Sherry Netherlands celebration in New York. At left, the ex-king of Yugoslavia, Peter, dances with Queen Alexandria, and at right, the former British ruler, now the Duke of Windsor, dances with the duchess, formerly Wally Simpson of the United States. The Duke gave up the throne of England to marry the woman he loves. Both former rulers are spending part of their exiles in America, and seem to regret in no way their absences from the thrones. Both have "lived like kings" since parting with their crowns.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON
WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent

Population Moving

WHILE ALL the attention and shouting about the 1950 census right now seems to be over the questions to be asked about income, the real political significance of this census is in what it will do to congress after the reapportionment as a result of the census.

This second session of the 81st congress is sitting for the last time as now constituted, for as the saying goes, there'll be some changes made. For instance the migration from rural areas into the cities will make a definite impression on the complexion of congress and more representatives will come from the urban centers.

New York state, for instance will lose three congressmen; Pennsylvania will lose two. Indications now are that Illinois, Georgia, Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee and Oklahoma will each lose at least one congressman.

California will be the big winner with an increase of eight more congressmen. Florida, Indiana, Michigan, Texas, Oregon and Washington will each gain at least one. And there may be other shifts as the population moves from East to West.

Seed Shortage Soon

The department of agriculture is deeply concerned over the fact that up to 100 million acres of land may go seedless as a result of a combination shortage of about 446 million pounds of grass and legume seeds and the new decrease in acreage allotments of basic crops.

In other words, some 30 million acres will be released from the production of wheat, cotton, tobacco, potatoes, rice and other allotment crops in order to prevent surplus in those crops and the estimate for needs of grass seeds stands at about 756 million pounds whereas the production this year amounted to only 310 million pounds. Whether these acres will stand idle subject to weeds or erosion, depends upon whether or not the farmers will plant more acres this year to Ladino clover, brome, sweet clover, alfalfa or other legumes.

Huge Pig Crop

The department of agriculture forecasts a record crop of pigs going to market in 1950 with the first wave to reach the market in the late winter or early spring at a reduction of about 10 per cent in price. The present 90 per cent of parity price support will be maintained through March and an expected reduction in the price support is expected beyond that date.

REA Gets Help

Approximately 800 applications are on file with the rural electric administration from companies seeking to give rural telephone service under the law enacted by the last session of congress.

And apparently there is an entirely different feeling between the private telephone companies and REA as compared to this government agency and the private power companies. Perhaps the telephone companies are taking a page out of the book of experience, for as a matter of fact they are offering REA every facility and help as a result of their long experience, instead of attempting to bloc the program as did the electric utilities.

Most applications for extension of phone service to the farms is coming from established private firms. The private companies say they installed 350,000 rural telephones in 1949 without REA. One advantage the private companies have is that REA seemingly does not want established electric coops to handle telephones. So new telephone coops must be organized.

Would Widen Security

One of the "must" bills insofar as the administration is concerned and a likely campaign issue is the bill to extend social security to the tune of about 11 million additional persons and to increase its benefits. This measure (HR 6000) already has passed the house and carries increased payroll deductions to be borne by employers and employee alike. It would up the average payment from about $26 per month to about $44.

Another on the administration time table is the aid to education bill which passed the senate last session carrying an appropriation of about 300 million and which became all snarled up in a religious controversy in a house committee.

It will be remembered that the senate in the 80th congress passed a similar bill introduced by Senator Taft, and which was never reported out of a house committee. It seems almost certain that some kind of education bill will pass this session.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET Bogey and Pandas Were Tame Compared to J. Brutus Booth

By BILLY ROSE

There was a lot of talk on Broadway in recent weeks about the incident at the El Morocco club where Humphrey Bogart was caught with his pandas down, and to hear the prissy boys tell it, unless Bogey stops acting up he's a cinch to finish behind the well-known eight-ball.

Well, mebbe so, but I wouldn't bet on it. It's my belief that, if anything, his daffy didos will help his pulling-power at the box office, very much as they helped John Barrymore, W. C. Fields, and other talented screwballs who had the nerve to do what the rest of us only daydream about.

And don't let any old-timer with braid on his vest tell you that the entertainment business wouldn't have tolerated a Humphrey Bogart in the dear, dead days. According to the record, the antics of yesterday's stars make our present crop of performers look as pale as a ghost who has just seen a man.

For easy example, take, say, the great tragedian, Junius Brutus Booth—a name to conjure with and make faces at.

JUNIUS BRUTUS was born in England a few years before the 19th century made its bow, and by the time he was 13 a servant girl had accused him of being the father of her out-of-bounds baby. During the next four years, among other things, he took a crack at being a sailor, a sculptor and the husband of two ladies, without the customary divorce in between.

None of this stunted his growth, however, because by the time he was 20 he had become one of the great stars of the London stage. He appeared at Covent Garden as Richard III, and the following season at Drury Lane as Iago to Keane's Othello. And, unless the record is lying, his success was so great that a group of envious actors started a riot in the theater and tried to burn it down.

Offstage, Junius Brutus was even more spectacular than on, and if Lauren Bacall's husband had been sampling the flesh and winepots of Piccadilly at the time, chances are his capers wouldn't have rated a morning-after thought. Booth, so goes the story, made so many passes and passed out so many times that finally, at the insistence of husbands, bartenders and bobbies, he pecked and skedaddled to New York.

Here, he proceeded to revolutionize most of our acting techniques and, despite the enormous quantities of wuzzle-water he consumed, he never let his audiences down. At one matinee, he was literally carried into the theater, and while the manager was splashing water on his face the customers began to yell for the show to go on.

Amused by their catcalls, the tragedian stuck his face through the curtain and roared, "I'm drunk now, but in ten minutes I'll give you the greatest King Lear you ever saw." And he did.

Another time, he went into a pawnshop to borrow $10, pledged himself as security, spent the tenner on Jersey applejack, and then, as per promise, came back and squatted in the pawnbroker's win-

IT HAS TAKEN LONG

It has taken long for me to learn

The simple lessons that the Master taught:

To consider the lilies as their petals burn

Among the wayside grasses, to take no thought

Of a tomorrow that may never bring

Some direful, long anticipated thing,

To mark the sparrows on a windy stem

Lashing and dipping in a day of storm,

And to remember that He cares for them,

And shelters them and keeps them from all harm;

And that I am more valuable than they

To Him who walks beside me day by day.

"Let not your heart be troubled . . ." —these His words

Should have been learned and heeded long ago.

I should have lived light-hearted as the birds;

I should have marked the lilies—Ah, too slow

Has been my heart in learning how to live.

Dear God, You tried to teach me. Please forgive.

GRACE NOLL CROWELL

down until his manager redeemed him.

One night while playing "Richard III," he suddenly decided to revise Shakespeare's script, and when it came to the duel scene in the last act he began slushing away at the young actor playing the role of Richmond. The episode ended with his chasing the kid out the stage door and several blocks down the Bowery.

AS THE YEARS leaped on, Booth's capacity for nuttiness became something of a national legend, and any theater he was scheduled to play generally sold out the day the engagement was announced. Stories about the caperous crackpot were repeated around every pot-bellied stove—and little wonder. For instance, while taking an ocean voyage, the ship passed the spot where an actor named Conway had committed suicide by drowning. Junius Brutus suddenly appeared on deck and yelled, "I have a message for Conway," and dove overboard. And for the next 30 minutes, he played water-tag with the sailors who jumped in to fish him out.

In his final years, Booth took up the study of Buddhism and developed so great a horror of inflicting death that he would burst into tears if someone happened to step on a bug. He financed a campaign against hunting and, while on tour one autumn, enraged at the wanton killing of birds, he bought a cemetery plot and held a funeral for some pigeons a sportsman had shot.

Despite all this hi-jinks and hoopla, however, he was quite a family man, and the 10 children he raised were devoted to him. Unfortunately, the final curtain on the career of the inspired looney who hated killing was that one of his children, John Wilkes Booth, was the man who assassinated Abraham Lincoln.

"A DAY in the Life of Dennis Day" recently included the arrival of his second son, Eugene Dennis, not long after Patrick James McNulty celebrated his first birthday. The birth of that high-pitched speaking voice Day uses on the air was accidental. Mary Livingston heard one of his records and got Jack Benny to audition him when a new singer was needed for the Benny program. Day had been singing only on a small station, and was nervous and excited. Benny, in the control room, said sharply, "All right, Mr. Day!" and Dennis' voice came out in a squeak as he nervously replied, "Yes, please!" He got the job and the voice stayed in.

Danny Kaye has never made a funnier picture than "The Inspector General"; in fact, it is doubtful whether anyone has. Kaye is at his best, and has wonderful material. The scene in which he appears as himself and three other people is inspired. As usual, his wife, Sylvia Fine, wrote his songs. Henry Koster's direction is superb, the cast excellent.

Nobel Winner Will Use Money To Foster Peace

LONDON.—The Nobel prize of 152,289 Norwegian crowns ($21,889), given for efforts to promote peace, will not benefit its recipient one dime's worth financially because he's going to use it all exclusively in efforts to promote peace.

The winner of the prize, Lord Boyd Orr, is convinced that hunger is the root of just about everything and the 69-year old Scot wants to do everything possible to increase the world's food production. That's why he declines to profit from the prize—not even to the extent of a new hat.

A respected authority on nutrition, a former director-general of the United Nations food and agricultural organization, Lord Orr is a political philosopher who likes to pack wisdom into snappy epigrams. World peace is his passion. "Not that I wouldn't fight if something vital or sacred was threatened," he says, "but I don't want to. It's so unnecessary."

Food Is Answer

His formula to end wars can be squeezed into one word—food. "Feed the people and they won't fight," he says.

He insists that "hunger is the greatest politician of them all."

Lord Boyd Orr is an earnest man with a mission who looks like an elderly, weather-beaten physician or a professor, or an up-country politician, or a farmer in town for the agricultural convention. In fact he has lived, or is living, in all these roles. Much contact with the world has not erased entirely his Ayrshire manner of speaking. There is Scotch in his r-r-r's.

He smokes matches.

There is tobacco in his pipe all right, but he lights up and forgets to puff because he is so intent on driving home a telling point. Match after match is expended as he makes his arguments factually, wittily and sometimes bitterly. The world moves much too slowly to suit him.

In young manhood he was physician. Then he became more interested, by turn, in physiology, animal nutrition, human nutrition and finally the vast problem of feeding the world to preserve peace.

Glad to be Farmer

Now he thinks of himself as a farmer and is glad to be one. He is caustic, believes that in every life there should be a garden, the outdoors and the feel of weather.

Since January, when King George elevated him to the peerage—he had been known before then as Sir John—Farmer Boyd Orr has come down from Scotland occasionally to take his place in the House of Lords, to vote, to put in some plugs for world government, to tell all who will listen about his conviction that food is the beginning and end of everything. He appreciates being in the House of Lords—it gives him a platform and a base of operations—but he doesn't think too much of it as an institution.

"Ought to have been reformed years ago," he said. But let the politicians worry about that, his mission is food.

Footman, Glockwinder Dance With Royalty at Palace Fete

LONDON.—It was a wild dream come true for the footman and the clock winder at Buckingham palace. At the annual household party the queen danced with the footman and the princess danced with the clock winder.

Queen Elizabeth, in diamond tiara and flowing green gown, waltzed with the liveried footman. Princess Margaret, sleek in rose and pink, swirled over the glassy floor with the man in charge of the palace's famous collection of French gilt clocks.

Until the wee hours of the morning they danced with other staff members in the traditional palace staff party.

King George, still recuperating from a leg ailment, sat on the sidelines until shortly after midnight. Then he retired.

Pal Tries to Aid Escape; Saws Hid in Peanut Butter

COVINGTON, KY.—Stanley Flannery wasn't satisfied with being released from the Covington jail. He returned five hours later to gain a friend's release—with a jar of peanut butter.

Flannery, 25, who has no known address, and was being held on a breach of peace warrant, was released from jail and instructed to leave the county, police said.

Instead, he returned later with a bag of goodies for James Sturgeon, Kenton county, held under $10,000 bond on charges of breaking and entering, and possessing a stolen automobile.

James Fox, turnkey, became suspicious and, inspecting the parcel of food, found a number of hacksaw blades, which had been broken in two, inside a jar of peanut butter.

Flannery walked from the jail after delivering his package.

ENTERPRISE PAYS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

PAUL SPARROW'S vaudeville act wasn't especially good, nor was it especially poor. He did a couple of trick dance steps, told some fairly funny stories and sang a couple of songs. There were dozens better than he. Yet Paul always played the big time, always got the best money. We who were in show business at the time, wondered.

The answer was simple when you stopped to think about it. Paul was enterprising. He gave himself a build up. For one thing he selected his music with care. He instructed the orchestra what to play and how to play it before he came on. He made a stooge of the drummer. He sold the idea, generally, that he was terrific.

We all expected that Paul would be among the first to go. But he wasn't. I didn't see him for almost a year, then one fall up in San Francisco, I ran across him again. It was rather a unique experience, because the gag he pulled that night was epic.

It seems that, despite his enterprising faculties, Paul was due to get the air. He had exhausted his bag of tricks. Managers were getting wise to him. On this night he was trying out at the Olympia Theater. Most of us thought it would be his swan song. On the other hand, if he went over big with his audience it would mean a 40-week contract. There wasn't a chance.

We watched him come out from the opposite side of the wings. He was doing a quick little dance step. There was a matting of applause that almost instantly died away.

"Well," grinned Paul, "If you're serious, that's fine . . . if my gag took in an old trouper like you, it worked better than I thought it would."

Paul hesitated, then went into a routine. It was pitiful, because the step was rotten and he had apparently lost his self-confidence to boot.

I was standing so I could see Paul's face. For the first time since I'd known him I saw anger in his eyes, a red flash in his cheeks. He stopped dancing.

"All right," he said. "All right, wise guys, I'll show you."

The hecklers booed at him, shouted catcalls. Paul's face went livid. He suddenly galvanized into action.

I HAVE SEEN some good trick dancers in my day, but I've never seen anything to equal the antics of Paul Sparrow that night. Thoroughly aroused, he became a contortionist. He performed feats that were unheard of in the art of dancing. He threw himself around that stage like a madman. It was marvelous to watch. Superb!

Paul came out for three encores. He was a man inspired each time, and each time the audience gave him an ovation. They clapped for five full minutes after his last appearance.

After a while I strolled back to Paul's dressing room. The manager was just leaving. Inside, Paul was happily folding up a sheet of paper. I could tell by the expression on his face that it was the contract.

"Hello, feller," I grinned. "You killed 'em. I guess the thing to do if you want to stay in vaudeville these days is get mad."

"Why," he said, surprised. "Did you think I was mad? I wasn't." "Don't kid me. Those hecklers had you down for the count."

"Well," grinned Paul, "if you're serious that's fine. I mean, if my little gag took in an old trouper like yourself, it even worked better than I thought it would."

"Wait a minute," I said, beginning to feel funny. "What are you getting at?"

"It was a gag, old horse. I hired three hecklers to do the job—you know, make the audience feel sympathetic toward me by having scathing remarks hurled at me. Then I pulled my trick. My new step. It really wasn't much of a step, you know. It only seemed that way. The audience was sympathetic. They would have liked anything I did." He grinned broadly. "You see, I was on the skids. I had to think of something. I tell you, friend, if you want to stay in vaudeville these days, you've got to be enterprising."

East Tawas, Mich.

To the Editor:
Tawas Herald

We would like at this time to publicly express our thanks to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis and particularly to the local chapter, and at the same time to urge all your readers to give their full support to the current March of Dimes. Briefly we would like to describe our experiences in dealing with the local chapter because we think this information will be the best support we could give the local drive.

Two of our three children, Joseph, Jr., age seven years, and Alicia, age 18 months, were stricken with polio on the tenth of September. Joseph's was a severe case and he was hospitalized for 102 days. Alicia's was a mild case and did not require hospitalization. We did not go to the local chapter for help, but instead Mr. BeMent came to us and offered us the services of the local chapter. He did not ask us how little or how much we could pay. We did not have to comply with a lot of red tape. They did not tell us to whom or where we could take our children for treatment. All they asked was that the cases be diagnosed by a competent physician and certified by the State Board of Health, and they took over full financial responsibility.

Needless to say, it was a great help to us to be relieved of the financial worry, and at the same time know our children would receive the best treatment and care known to medical science. We were fortunate in having the Blue Cross hospital insurance to pay the hospital bill, but if we had not, the National Foundation would have paid that along with the rest of the expenses.

As stated above, our little boy had a severe case of polio. However, to date he has made a remarkable recovery, and we have high hopes for a full recovery. We cannot help but feel that no small part of the credit for this recovery is due to the physiotherapy treatments that he received from Miss Driscoll at Mercy Hospital, Bay City. Miss Driscoll received her training from the National Foundation at Warm Springs, Georgia.

Full recovery will mean a long and expensive affair. He still receives weekly therapy treatments at Bay City, and will have to have periodic check-ups for years. This is also being taken care of by the local chapter. Again we urge everyone to give to the best of their ability, because we can assure you that every dime given will be used for the purpose intended, namely to carry on the fight against polio.

Sincerely yours,
Mrs. Joseph N. Dimmick.

Farm Bureau Notes

A. Tracey Vary, Farm Bureau Roll Call Manager, revealed last week that the county quota of 45 new members would soon be reached.

Mr. Vary, his assistant James Mielock, and Roll Call captains began pushing Farm Bureau membership the first week in November. When the state-wide Roll Call ended December 10, a total of 33 new members had been added to the county roll.

The original seven community groups has been reinforced by three new groups, named: Townline, Laidlawville and the most recent one, Sherman.

A. T. Vary has done a fine job and has set a crowning example for future Roll Call Managers. He hopes to get the county quota of 45 by February 1.

The regular meeting of Vine Farm Bureau was held January 18th, at the Charles Kobs residence instead of Waldo J. Curry residence because of illness in the family. The meeting was called to order at nine o'clock by Chairman Waldo J. Curry. The minutes of the December meeting were read and approved. There were fifteen members present.

Mrs. Norma Kobs gave a report of the last Board of Directors meeting, which had discussed Land Drainage on M-55, which is now under construction.

Mrs. Margaret Prescott, gave a report of the last Women's Activity Meeting, although she was not present at this meeting because of road conditions, she quoted from the minutes of that meeting at which Rev. Brooks was guest speaker on "Needs of the Community." We have another new membership in our group, namely Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Povish.

Discussion Leader, George Prescott, opened discussion for the evening by reading from the Discussion material "Who Sets Farm Prices." This was followed by a brief discussion of the Brannon Plan with opinions for and against the passage of this bill.

Mr. Prescott then began a discussion on colored oleomargarine, which has just been passed by the Government and the following resolution was set up: "Whereas the entire membership of Vine Farm Bureau having learned of the defeat in the United States Senate of the Gillette-Wiley Amendment attached to House Bill No. 2304, which repealed all taxes on sale of colored oleomargarine, and whereas individual states will no longer exercise any control through the sale of colored oleomargarine, therefore be it resolved that this group go on record as favoring the attachment of a further rider to House Bill No. 2304, stating that individual servings of colored oleomargarine, in all public eating establishments in the United States be cut in triangular shape and further that all packaged oleomargarine offered for sale in the United States be offered in triangular packages."

It was agreed that copies of the above resolution be mailed to Hon-

Homer Ferguson and Hon. Arthur Vandenberg, and that a copy be presented to the Iosco County Farm Bureau of Directors. Letters received by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Kobs, from Senators Ferguson and Vandenberg in answer to their's written against the coloring of oleomargarine, were presented to and read by Discussion Leader George Prescott.

The meeting was then adjourned and lunch was served by the hostess. The next regular meeting will be held the third Wednesday in February at the Waldo J. Curry residence.

The meeting was called to order by the vice chairman, Vernon Papple, due to the absence of the chairman Vernon Anderson.

The next meeting will be held February 15 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Robinson. Anyone wishing to attend is cordially invited.—Mrs. Lyle Robinson, Secretary.

Grant No. 1 Farm Bureau
The Grant No. 1 Farm Bureau met with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Van Sickle on Tuesday, January 19th with seventeen members present. The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Lyle Long. Secretary Edna Anschutz called the roll and read the minutes of the previous meeting which were approved. Mrs. Ball gave a report on the county women's meeting held at Mrs. Mathews January 8th, and told how Rev. Brooks urged all parents to attend P-TA meetings and help keep religion in our schools.

The next business was to choose six subjects for discussion, for the coming year. In the absence of our discussion leader, Allen Herriman, Mr. Little took over, and furnished plenty food for thought until our next meeting February 16 with Mr. and Mrs. Little, Bernice Herriman and Grace Long as hostesses. A nice lunch of cakes, ice cream and coffee was served.

Cobalt Under Study
Feed manufacturers and veterinarians are keeping a close tab on new studies of cobalt in animal nutrition, because recent findings have shown that this mineral may be far more important to the health of livestock than is generally believed.

Why Should a Dollar's Worth of Travel Continue to Cost You $1¹⁵?

"IS THIS TRIP NECESSARY?" you were asked in 1941, when every inch of space was needed for troops and war supplies.

To discourage travel then, a tax was added on your travel dollar, a tax that grew to 15% during the war. The Federal Government collected it through the railroads. The Government still collects it, though your travel need not be rationed now.

Today, the original purpose of this tax is as obsolete as an Air Warden's helmet. But, four years after the war's end, YOU are still paying the Government at the rate of $250,000,000 a year in travel tax.

And, of the billion and three quarters collected since 1941, over half came out of your pocket after the green light on travel went on again.

You don't have food rationing today... you don't have gasoline rationing today.

Yet, a very real brake is still being put on travel. On a coach trip from New York to Chicago, for example, YOU are still paying $4.61 in Federal tax.

And the same with the goods that are shipped to your home community. On every dollar you pay for freight, you pay the Government an extra 3 cents (4¢ a ton on coal). That means YOU are still paying over $300,000,000 a year—freight tax alone.

This tax should be repealed NOW. There is no longer any reason you should pay $1.15 for every dollar's worth of travel... $1.03 for every dollar of railroad freight.

GREEN GRASS OF WYOMING

By Mary O'Hara

On a visit to the Daly ranch, Ken hears from Buck Daly that a white stallion had crashed in the crate bearing theilly and Buck poses the idea that the stallion was Thunderhead. Ken doesn't think so because, on orders of his father, Rob, Ken has Thunderhead held up in the "valley of the eagles" wherefrom he thinks it impossible for Thunderhead to escape. But Daly insists it was Thunderhead he saw, and Ken begins to entertain a suspicion that perhaps it was Thunderhead after all. Ken has seen the broken crate and realizes the loss to Greenway will be extensive, since Crown Jewel was bought in England and shipped to the United States.

CHAPTER III

Kim, the yellow collie, lay on the grass outside the fence, panting violently, his long red tongue hanging out the side of his mouth.

Pauly, a little brown tortoise-shell cat with long topaz eyes, appeared in the stable door, and stood there with dignity, looking out into the corral. In her mouth she held a large rat, still alive, and her head was high to carry the weight.

"See that big rat!" exclaimed Wink.

"She get one yoost about every day," said Gus.

"She's got kittens," said Tim, "and she hunts rats and bunnies and gophers all day for them."

A loud, indignant moo-oo-oo came from the east corral behind the barn.

Rob looked at Gus in surprise.

"What in hell are the cows doing up here?"

"It ain't our cows, Boss. Some of Johnson's cows broke thru de fence in de corner of Section Eighteen. Nine white faces and some calves. Wink and Tim found 'em and corralled 'em. Want I should tell Wink to drive 'em back?"

"No. Wink's got to milk. I'll send Ken."

"Ken ain't home yet, Boss—least-ways, Flicka's not here."

"Howard then."

"Howard—" Gus looked searchingly around, "I ain't seen him neither."

"There's his horse," Rob pointed to a tall black, grazing in the pasture outside the corral.

"He tuk de station wagon."

"To get the mail?"

"Yah."

Rob gave an impatient exclamation. "And now it's milking time. When those kids get off the ranch they don't ever get home!"

"Dot's kids for you," said Gus, a slow warm smile crinkling his pink face.

Rob stood a moment, thinking,—he was annoyed at the failure of the boys to show up.

He strode suddenly forward and Kim arose and ran around the corral to follow.

The cows were waiting at the gate of the pasture to be milked. Formerly, Nell had taken complete charge of the dairy. But now there was the baby, Penelope Margaret, named after Nell's mother and his own, and her care took most of Nell's time.

Rob reached the paved yard behind the kitchen door of the house. Nell would be upstairs with Penny. So now, she would give Penny her bath and her supper.

Nell's Condition

Puzzling to Rob

At the thought of Nell, he became motionless. There was a look of puzzlement on his face. . . . Nell! How quiet she was these days. She didn't look well. She'd always had a tendency to have circles under her eyes but since Penny was born, they had been blue and transparent. Or was she worried? Dissatisfied? Had he fallen down on anything he should have done. She couldn't be unhappy now—not now—why, he had given her the piano! She had a cook! And two new bathrooms and a furnace had been installed since the new band of sheep had brought prosperity to the Goose Bar Ranch!

Rob went into the house and stood at the foot of the stairs, listening, wondering if Nell were taking a nap, but no sound reached him. He returned to the living-room and paused beside the piano, his hand caressing the polished surface. His pride in this gift to his wife was accompanied by chagrin that for so many years of her life with him she should have been without one.

He had wondered if she had missed it dreadfully. You couldn't tell. She never spoke of it.

All the greater, then, had been his happiness when he counted up the first crop of lambs from his new flocks, and realized that the time had come when he could give Nell a piano.

He had told her only that he had to go to Denver to arrange with a commission house for the sale of the lambs and that he might be gone for several days.

He had spent the time with the leading musician of Denver, a celebrated pianist, who went with him from one store to another. They sampled every second-hand grand piano of good make which was advertised for sale. The one they had picked, at last, was a reconstructed Steinway, twenty-five years old, em-bodily a number of advantageous features which newer makes did not have.

All this drifted through Rob's mind as he stood there stroking the piano. He reached a finger down and pressed on one of the notes, trying to hear in it the things his wife heard. At that moment there was the sound of the station wagon coming up the hill behind the house.

Rob went to the back door and threw it open.

"Howard!"

"Yes, sir—here's the mail."

"Mail! You left here at one to get the mail and now it's milking time! Where's Ken?"

"Well, Dad, he's gone up to the valley to see Thunderhead."

Rob's eyes narrowed. He kept looking at Howard without speaking. Howard continued, "You see the haying's over and soon we'll be going back to school," Howard paused checking the truth of every thing he was saying, "and he was awfully keen on seeing Thunderhead again."

Rob and Gus were examining the weather, planning the next day's work.

Rob Ponders Ken's Actions

Rob continued to eye him as if waiting, but Howard looked down and said nothing.

"Did he see Daly?"

"Oh, sure! Yeah—he saw Daly and told him about feeding the rams up."

"Where did he eat?"

"At Tie Siding. I ran into him there when I went for the mail."

"Well then, he won't get back to-night—" It was more statement than question. Rob waited a moment.

When Howard merely shook his head, Rob's tone changed.

"Howard there's something I want you to do. You'll have to take your horse. A lot of Johnson's cattle broke through the fence up on the corner of Section Eighteen. They're up in the east corral, nine white-face cows and some calves. You drive them off our land, put them where they belong and mend the fence before you come back."

"Yes, sir," said Howard with alacrity, jumping out of the car.

Rob closed the door and walked toward his desk, his lips tightening in an expression that was half grim, half amused. He had some work to do on his accounts, but before he began, he gave a few moments of thought to Ken's behavior. Whenever Thunderhead was concerned, or that valley up in the Buckhorns, Ken was loco. If he had gone up there now, something was doing. Howard! Rob broke into a chuckle. Either Howard was circumlocuting and didn't care who knew it or he was making a bad job of it. Well, anyway, Howard was shielding Ken. Wait until the kid came back—

He pulled his papers toward him. After sixteen years of losing money on horses he was now making money on sheep. This meant being able to educate his children properly, employ sufficient help to train and school those horses which he intended to keep, and give Nell the comforts and luxuries he so passionately wanted her to have.

Nell's life was quiet now, not so much riding, not so much to do with her sons and husband, not with the ranch activities. And not so much activity in the house, either, for there was Pearl to do the housework and cooking; leaving Nell time to take care of Penny and to read and practice and to rest.

It was a great change for her, after having lived like a big sister with her growing boys for so long. Often she was surprised to find herself lonely. Penny was like a darling rose in her bosom, or like a thread of melody in her ear, but not yet a companion

Nell suspected that part of her loneliness came from having a secret from Rob. It was something she was ashamed to tell. It was, merely, a premonition. When all was going so well with the family, with the ranch, the sheep, the baby girl they had wanted so passionately, could she be the one to cry, "It is all false! Trouble is coming!" No—of course not. Anyway, it was probably nonsense. She would get over it. But those dreams—always of disaster—

The dream this morning, just at dawn, had been the worst of all—a nightmare. How real! Being strangled and unable to move, or do the least thing to help herself! And suddenly being awake enough to know that she was lying there in the bed, with Rob beside her, and yet the strangling and the terror and the awful presence that was beating down upon her continuing.

It had faded and she had come fully awake, panting, perspiration on her forehead, and still the constriction in her throat and anxious not to wake Rob, but forced by her terror to do something to break the spell, she had slipped out of bed and gone through the open door into Penny's nursery.

Nell and Rob shared the large square room over the kitchen, warm in winter, facing the Green and the morning sun. The small room adjoining, Rob's dressing-room, had now been turned over to Penny and held her white-painted furniture ornamented with little clusters of forget-me-nots and pink roses and bowknots of ribbon. There was the chiffonier in which her clothes were kept, the large table holding scales, toilet articles and bath, there were her little table and tiny chairs.

Nell had gone first to the crib. In the faint light of dawn she could see the baby, lying flat on her back, head turned sideways so that her face was in profile, both arms out on the pillow, crooked at the elbow, the closed pink hands making tiny fists.

Then she had gone to the window to look out and see how near it was to sunrise and there, down on the Green, were a man and woman dancing together. It was Pearl, of course, cutting up with a most decrepit object, shirttail flapping outside his baggy dark trousers, rolled-up sleeves showing thin, hairy arms, a battered black felt on his head. The clothes looked empty but they capered ecstatically, keeping pace with Pearl and the brisk wind which whipped her full cotton skirts about her aged legs.

Nell wondered if the man dancing on the lawn was Tom. Pearl had spoken that name with romantic tenderness. Romance? Ah . . . Romance between the capering scarecrow and maudlin Pearl . . . dancing on the Green in the windy dawn.

Presently she heard Howard's voice outside. That was Rob talking to him.

Soon after breakfast next morning, Rob, mounted on Revelle, and Howard on Jester, and Ross Buckley on Senator, were schooling their horses in the practice field below the cowbarns. These were three fine geldings, conforming to Army specifications, four years old, fifteen and a half hands high, unblemished.

A large black car appeared on the road and stopped, drawing up along the rail fence of the practice field.

Rob immediately swung his horse around. Howard followed him.

Descending from the car was a tall thin man, with a genial ruddy face under a thatch of grey hair, dressed in the Westerner's compromise between town and country, the tight-fitting whipcord trousers called "Cheyenne pants," a waist-length jacket, and wide-brimmed felt hat. He limped a little, there was an accoutreton in his ear and a small microphone on the breast pocket of his jacket.

Beaver Greenway Visits the Ranch

"Beaver Greenway!" yelled Rob, dismounting and going to the fence. "What brought you to this part of the world?" The two men shook hands and Rob's eyes took in the car, the English-looking fellow at the wheel with the checked cap and the look of a man who lives around horses—red face, receding chin, popeyes. Another man was getting out of the tonneau whom Rob recognized as the Cheyenne freight agent.

"Hackett!" exclaimed Rob. "Glad to see you!" Hackett advanced and shook hands.

"This is my son, Greenway, my older son—you met Ken a year ago—"

Rob motioned to Howard, who dismounted in one swift smooth step, looping the reins over his arm.

"Well," said Greenway, "I've got a tale of woe to tell, and Hackett here suggested you might be the man to help me out."

Howard looked interested and moved a step closer. But Rob said, "Well, Howard, you've got a morning's work on the plug—here, tie Revelle to the fence for me, will you?"

SCRIPTURE: Acts 8:4-11:18. DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 8: 21-30.

Unto All Men

"MARK TIME, Christian Soldiers," is not a Christian hymn. The word is "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" The command was given by no less a person than Jesus himself: "Go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them . . . teaching them . . ." (Matt. 28:19, 20) Do you know some one in the church who says he doesn't believe in missions? Such a man does not take Christ seriously. If you do believe in Christ then his commands are for you to obey, not to ignore.

When Men Delay UP TO NOW, the church has been playing around with Jesus' command. Very few denominations are actually putting any large amount of money or manpower into obeying Christ's command to go into all the world.

One fairly typical American denomination contributed last year to all benevolences, that is to all causes not in their own local congregations, the sum of $9,137,065. That sounds like a lot; but divided by the total number of members it boils down to $14.03 per member for the year, or less than five cents a day.

And of course not all that big sum of five cents went to missions of any sort. Yet that denomination gives more per capita to missions than most others do. When a man who gives less than five cents a day to carry the good news of Christ into the wide world sings "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" or prays "Thy Kingdom come!" how much does he mean it? Not a nickel's worth!

Or take the question of manpower. The same denomination sends out as missionaries, every year, as many men and women as are sent by some denominations three times its size. And yet, even so, the total number of ordained ministers in that denomination who are foreign missionaries is only 4 per cent of their total number of ministers.

"Go into all the world," said the Master, "Four per cent of us will," we reply, "the rest of us will stay at home."

When Men Obey AS A MATTER OF FACT, even the earliest church was slow to pay real attention to Christ's command, Forward! Men are strange creatures. And one of the strange things about us is that we often have to be scared into doing our duty.

It took the persecution set off by the death of Stephen to move the Christians in Jerusalem out along the roads south, north, east, anywhere to get away from the city of death. Everywhere they went, they told the story of Jesus.

But at first it was all rather breathless and informal. "Why are you here?" one of these DP's would be asked, as he was passing through Samaria or Antioch or Alexandria, perhaps in the bread-line, perhaps looking for a place to work and settle down. "I'm a refugee from Jerusalem," he would say. "But why?" "Well, I'm a Christian." "What's that?"

So the story would be told all over again, the good news about God's grace in Christ. So the church spread. Today, though an enormous part of the world's population is still unwon, there are Christians in so many lands that the Bible—all or parts of it—has had to be translated into more than one thousand different languages and dialects.

Unto All Men ONE OF THE MOST interesting and surpassing little books of recent years is called "They Found the Church There," by H. P. Van Dusen. It is the dramatic story of how the American GI, to his great astonishment, found Christians in the most unexpected places.

It is a tremendous mistake to think that the Christian religion is only for English-speaking peoples, or for Europeans, or for white people. It began among people whom most readers of this column would set down as "foreigners."

Christ can be as much at home in an igloo or a wigwam as he is in an American farmhouse or in an efficiency apartment on the city boulevard. He comes to all men, and as Peter found out, the Lord is no respecter of persons.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

As we get older, stress and strain, over-exertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 60 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

CYOTakes Over First Place in Indies League

Tawas City Legion Team Defeats East Tawas Indies

The CYO Independents took over first place in the Independent Basketball League, Tuesday night, with a 53 to 38 win over Tawas City Independents.

The game was a close, rough and tough affair, with only a few points separating the two teams in the first half. In the final quarter, Blust and Gingerich, of Tawas City, left the game via the foul route and without their height the CYO squad controlled the back board play and pulled ahead to win by 15 points.

Dubovsky, CYO center, continued to lead in the scoring parade sinking 11 field goals and one foul shot for 23 points. Green, forward, followed with 15 points. D. Landon, Tawas City guard, made six points via the free throw lane and two field goals for 10 points. Blust, Bertch and Gingerich, each were good for seven points.

The second game of the evening found the Tawas City Legion subduing the East Tawas Independents 34 to 39. The Legion jumped off to a big early lead which the East Tawas team was unable to overcome.
