She wore a finger tip veil, of silk illusion which was held in place by an organdie crown.

Staudacher's Homer Wins Final Game

Tawas City Team Plans to Schedule Exhibition Games

With veteran ball player, George Staudacher, on the mound and doing some heavy stick work, East Tawas downed Tawas City last Sunday 3 to 1. This was the final league game for both Tawas City and East Tawas, and they now will play independent ball, scheduling the better teams in the area.

Staudacher hurled the entire game for East Tawas, allowing five hits and striking out five. He hurled himself out of holes several times, when Tawas men were on the basepaths. Staudacher won his own ball game in the third, when with two men on he hit a homerun, scoring all of the East Tawas runs. He also doubled in the fifth.

The Tawas City tally came in the ninth, when Look walked, went to second a wild pitch and scored on Warner's single.

Bob Rollin started for Tawas City, retiring the side in order in the first; allowing one hit, a single by Gackstetter in the second. In the third inning, Mandock, first-up grounded to short; Rapp reached first on an error, stole second; Elliott fled to right; McDonald reached first on the second error of the inning. Then came Staudacher's three run home.

Herb Look took over the mound duties for the locals, in the fourth, and finished the game. He allowed one hit, and struck out nine.

$1000.00 Increase in Iosco Fair Premiums

Boys' Hereford Steer Show To be a Highlight

4-Day Exhibition Will Be Held at Hale Aug. 30 to Sept. 2

A $1000 increase in premiums will stimulate competition among farmers and city folks during the eighth annual Iosco County Fair, August 30 through September 2, at Hale, Michigan. Because of the increased interest evidenced recently in better breeding in this northern area, the fair board of directors have extended invitations to exhibit at the Iosco fair to Alcona, Arenac and Ogemaw counties.

The Peoples State Bank of East Tawas, furnished the money for the boys, interest free, for the purchase of the calves they caught last year.

Of interest to the school children will be the bicycle giveaway the opening day, Wednesday, August 30th. A girl's bike and a boy's bike will be given to lucky ticket holders in front of the grandstand Wednesday afternoon. Tickets on the bikes will be given away at the office for the asking. Also for Kid's day will be half prices for the carnival rides and the afternoon show in front of the grandstand will be free to all school children.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Reds Make New Advance in Korea; Living Costs Continue to Climb Truman Asks Mobilization Steps;

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

KOREA:

Reds Advance

For four weeks Americans had picked up their morning newspapers and read about the Communist advances in Korea. Now, as the fifth week of the conflict began, the Reds continued to make advances, but not with the ease of the early weeks of the invasion.

The military picture in Korea was not bright by any means, but at the same time, it was not so hopeless as it seemed a few days ago.

The Communists had advanced into Yongdong, about 20 miles south of fallen Taejon, on the central front. Along the western coast, the Communists advanced south to Mokpo on the southern tip of Korea. On the northern front that touches the east coast, Yongdok, captured by American forces, was retaken by Red troops.

North Korean troops had captured two-thirds of South Korea and were continuing steady pressure upon American and South Korean troops. The line was slowly being pushed back toward the main American supply port of Pusan.

According to U. S. military experts, however, the picture had its brighter side. They pointed to the number of reinforcements that have reached Korea, the telling blows of the U. S. air force on supply lines and tanks, and the success of the new 3 1/2-inch bazooka against Red tanks.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of United Nations forces in Korea, made the statement that the Communists have lost their chance for victory.

A new view of the conflict has been taken by the Pentagon. At first the Korean affair was looked upon as a minor fight which this country could take care of in six months. This estimate has been revised sharply upward.

There is no lack of optimism over the eventual result, but there is a clearly defined desire to discourage any thought of a swift victory. In fact, some military authorities report it may be next spring before an offensive can be launched and as many as 200,000 men may be used in it.

A general summary of the situation would seem to indicate the picture has many unpleasant features, but is not entirely hopeless.

LIVING COSTS:

Continue to Climb

To the average American, the man who has a definite income within which he must live, a new and serious worry has appeared. Prices have continued to climb since the beginning of the Korean war, not as fast as the first days after the opening of the conflict, but a steady upward spiral that is beginning to cause hardship for those with low incomes.

The creeping advance widened out through the list of goods, clothing and food. Only a few items essential to America's standard of living remained at the level of the first frightening days of the Korean conflict.

The experts believe the American people are bringing the increases upon themselves. Consumers still crowded into stores to stock up on goods they remembered as scarce in the last war. Department store sales soared 24 percent above the same period of last year. The greatest gain was 39 percent in Dallas, Texas.

Sugar, coffee, cocoa, flour, lard and eggs were reported higher throughout the country. The price of meat climbed rapidly in some localities, although wholesale prices were reported to have fallen since the opening of the Korean conflict.

Observers pointed out that by hoarding, Americans are creating a demand. In turn retailers are taking advantage of the demand and increasing prices for quick profit.

It was the old story of quick profit and greed and the selfishness of a minor group of individuals causing hardship on the public generally.

As compared to prices a week before the conflict began, tin was up 15 cents a pound, wheat up 18 1/2 cents a bushel, rubber up 11 1/2 cents a pound, eggs up 8 cents a dozen, lard up 4 1/2 cents a pound, and hogs up $4 a hundredweight.

This trend, if continued, can mean price controls will become necessary. It may mean, also, rationing of food, clothing and vital industrial materials.

POPULATION:

Up 19 Million

The 1950 population of the United States has been estimated at 150,520,000, almost 19 million higher than the 1940 total, the Census bureau reports.

The nation's population has just about doubled in 50 years and the 1940 to 1950 jump was the greatest for any 10-year period in history. The figures will not be official until checked and revised where necessary.

Eisenhower

Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, president of Columbia university and a national defense consultant of President Truman, wears a quizzical expression as he is interviewed by newsmen. He does not see today's Korean fighting as necessarily the start of World War III, but insisted "we've got to win." He added, "If our forces in Korea are defeated the entire world will be thrown into another great war."

TRUMAN:

Report to Congress

President Truman in his message to congress on the Korean situation called for $10,000,000,000 down payment on a vast mobilization drive to win the war and combat any Red aggression elsewhere in the world.

He left no doubt in the minds of Americans, and the world in general, about the situation when he said:

"The free world has made it clear, through the United Nations, that lawless aggression will be met with force. This is the significance whose importance cannot be overlooked.

"I shall not attempt to predict the course of events. But I am sure that those who have it in their power to unleash or withhold acts of armed aggression must realize that new recourse to aggression in the world today might well strain to the breaking point the fabric of world peace.

"We will not flinch in the face of danger or difficulty."

He recommended anti-inflation controls, a swift stepping up of war production, additional huge sums to arm non-Communist nations and a sharp boost in taxes.

He authorized the calling of reservists and guardsmen, along with free use of the draft law to build up fighting units. Secretary of Defense Johnson was authorized to call units as needed.

A summary of the steps asked of congress:

Remove all statutory limits on size of the armed forces.

Provide $10,000,000,000 additional military funds; details to be supplied later.

Authorize a priorities-and-allocation system for materials for non-essential purposes; prevent inventory hoarding; authorize seizure of materials needed for the fighting effort.

Authorize government loans and loan guaranties to spur defense productions.

SECURITY:

Call F. B. I.

President Truman's statement asking all law-enforcement officers and amateur detectives to channel suspicious information regarding espionage, sabotage, and subversive activities to the F. B. I. had caused many Americans to wonder what is in store for the U. S.

The statement presumably was prompted by the Korean war. Truman stressed that all such inquiries "must be conducted in a comprehensive manner on a national basis, and all information carefully sifted out and correlated in order to avoid confusion."

Truman made no mention of Communists in his statement. Anyone with information should report in person to the nearest F. B. I. office, located in each of the nation's 51 major cities, or ask the telephone operator to connect them to the nearest office, an F. B. I. spokesman reported.

The spokesman emphasized the informant's identity would be kept confidential and he would not normally be brought face to face with the accused. He said anonymous letters are not welcome.

Unemployment

With nearly everything going up these days, it is astonishing to find anything going down very fast. There is one thing, however: the number of payments to the unemployed.

According to the labor department, between January and June there was a 30 per cent drop in the number of people drawing unemployment insurance benefits under state laws.

FOOD SUPPLY:

More Than Enough

As prices continued to climb, the government began a campaign of telling the American people there is more than enough food in this country and that hoarding is selfish and unnecessary.

President Truman stressed that point in a recent speech and the department of agriculture repeated it with a statement that the nation's food supply is so plentiful that price increases are unwarranted.

The department's report stated flatly that with high production prospects and large storage stocks, supplies of food for civilians in this country are expected to continue at the same high level as in past years.

"There has apparently been some speculative buying and price increases in food in recent weeks substantially similar to those occurring in 1939, which receded as soon as consumers realized that food supplies are adequate," the report said.

But the increases in prices, despite the report, caused a number of repercussions on the home front. An immediate investigation into supply, demand and cost was indicated by some government sources. American housewives added their voice to the turmoil. More than one retailer found his displays ignored and demands for price controls and even rationing were being heard in some quarters.

The government reported commodities on which stocks were high included dairy products, eggs, poultry and potatoes. Fruits and vegetables were termed ample. Total meat output in 1950 probably will be slightly larger than last year, the report said.

Many believe any campaign the government might launch for voluntary rationing is doomed to failure.

AUTOMOBILES:

Production Drop

A spokesman for the automobile industry has predicted a sharp dip in the industry's production within the next five months.

Evidently many Americans have already figured the same way, because dealers throughout the country report a great jump in orders for new automobiles. In many localities waiting lists have already been formed.

The automobile industry does not need a big volume of war orders to curtail its civilian car and truck production. All that is needed is the diversion of large amounts of steel to arms output. Building automobiles also takes a lot of critical materials besides steel. It requires copper, zinc, aluminum, lead and other such materials vital to aircraft and other war weapons.

As a result, estimates of this year's probable car and truck output were being revised downward. Before the Korean outbreak, industry sources agreed 1950 vehicles output would approximate 7,000,000 units, even with numerous shut-downs for new model change-overs.

Now most informed sources don't want to guess how many vehicles will be added in the rest of the year to the 4,255,373 built since January 1.

Landing

In a surprise move the First Cavalry Division of the U. S. Army made a beachhead landing near Pohang on the east coast of Korea. The landing was made without casualties or opposition.

SENATOR TAFT:

Pay as We Go

Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, who has preached economy and a balanced budget to the Democratic administration for years, caused a mild wave of shock among many legislators when he proposed slapping taxes on everybody immediately to pay for the Korean war.

The senator said the Russian threat is clamping a "semi-military" condition on the U. S. at a "permanent" extra cost of $10 to $20 billion a year.

"Since this is not a temporary condition but one that may continue indefinitely, we should tax the people for the whole cost," said Taft. He observed the condition may last "perhaps 10 or 15 years."

Many observers believe that pressure is building up on congress for quick and drastic tax boosts to carry the defense load.

LEOPOLD III:

Uneasy Return

Leopold III, King of the Belgians, returned to his throne after an absence of six years, but it was not a secure throne observers believed.

The king surrendered to the Nazis in 1944 and was held prisoner by them during World War II. He is unpopular with a large group because he did not resist the Germans to the last ditch in the early years of the war. Many do not like his wife who is a commoner.

LOOKING A GIFT GOAT IN THE MOUTH . . . A unique gift arrived in the United States recently from President Truman from the island of Crete. It was sent as an expression of gratitude for American aid, from Efthios Protapadakis, a Cretan mountaineer, on behalf of his people. The gift is a mountain goat called Kri-Kri, and it represents the donor's most prized and valuable possession. Dr. Robert Courter, Richmond, Va., veterinarian with the ECA in Greece, checks Kri-Kri's mouth before he was put aboard plane for the U. S. Kri-Kri's ancestors were common on Cretan mountains 3,000 years ago.

TANK DUG IN ALONG KUM RIVER LINE . . . A soldier spends more time waiting than fighting, it has often been said. This tank commander seems to agree as he sits atop his monster, dug into position along the south bank of the Kum river in South Korea, waiting for the word that his fire support is needed by American defenders of the Kum river line. This was before the North Koreans breached this strong defense line of the Americans and South Koreans and advanced below the river to take Taejon from the outnumbered defenders. The river, considered by some a natural barrier to tanks, did not halt the Reds.

U.S. DESTROYER IN KEELUNG HARBOR . . . This United States destroyer, flagship of Vice Admiral Arthur Strubel, enters Keelung harbor, Formosa, after Seventh fleet was ordered to Formosa waters to protect the Chinese Nationalist island from Chinese attack and invasion. The Seventh fleet was also ordered to prevent Chinese Nationalists from making any attack on the Chinese Reds on the mainland of China. The American fleet has been in action. Recently, an American cruiser and a British cruiser destroyed the east Korean coast town of Yongdok, held by the Korean Reds. The two cruisers bombarded the town all one evening and night.

YANK SOLDIER MURDERED IN KOREA . . . Here, somewhere in Korea, is the body of one of four soldiers of the 21st Infantry regiment, 24th division, found midway between a forward observation post and the front lines. According to the signal corps cameraman's caption, the men were probably captured during the night and then shot. This chap was shot through the head while his hands were tied behind him. The United Nations has issued requests to both sides in the Korean fighting that they observe all the rules of civilized warfare and refrain from torturing and killing prisoners. The North Koreans so far have not responded to the U.N. request.

Power to Declare War Invested In Congress of United States

This is the sixth of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen" published by the American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

THE FIFTH promise of a good citizen: I will work for peace but will dutifully accept my responsibilities in time of war and will respect the flag.

Probably the greatest of all powers is the power to declare war. In America this power is not given to any one man. It is not given to our generals and admirals. It is not given to the President and his cabinet. It is given only to our elected representatives — the congress of the United States.

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

All This Ex-Boxer Wants Is Peace and Little Pinochle

By BILLY ROSE

One of the more off-colorful characters around Broadway these days is Kid Herman, ex-great of the prize ring, who runs the newsstand on the southwest corner of 42nd street and Times Square. The Kid, according to the record books, lost only once in 140 professional bouts and was one of the few men to beat Benny Leonard. What's more, he is reputed to have been as scrappy outside the ring as in during his black-and-blue period.

Today, a muscle-bound 56, he likes to think of himself as "a stick of sugar-coated Gandhi." "Me and the world has seen too much fightin'," he told me the other night. "All I want now is peace and a little pinochle."

While we were talking, as if on cue, a man rushing for the subway bumped into the ex-pug.

"Sorry, Mister," apologized Herman. "If I'd known you was comin' I'da baked a cake."

The man's glare relaxed into a grin.

"I coulda flattened him with a punch," said the Kid "but what would it prove? Ya never convince anybody by hittin' him. It's better to go along with people."

"For instance, take the gink who runs the newsstand across the way — Patsy White. Used to be a great fighter. Had a string of 14 straight knockouts till he met up with me. I knocked him down 15 times in 10 rounds, but the first time Patsy heard me tellin' about it, he said it was only 14 times. So the next time I tell it, just to make him feel good, I said it was 14 times, but Patsy says, 'Who you kiddin'? It was 13.' Well, every time he hears me tellin' it he slices off another knockdown, so finally I says to him, 'Okay, let's leave it this way.

Mosta the time you was fightin' me from a horizontal position."

JUST THEN, as if he knew we were talking about him, Patsy waved from across the street and yelled, "How's it goin', Kid?" "Come on over an' get yer name in the papers," Herman yelled back at him.

"In a minute," said Patsy. "Under the arch!"

"What does he mean, under the arch?" I asked.

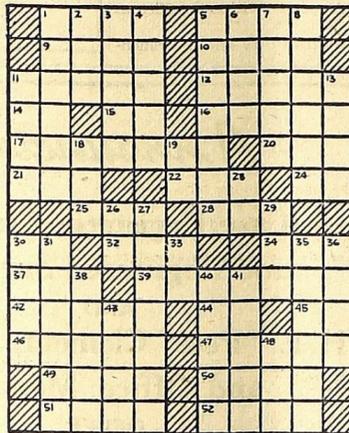

"It's a private joke we got," said the Kid. "When we were kids we lived near the Brooklyn Bridge, and when we didn't want to do our fightin' where the cops could see us, we used to say, 'Meetcha under the arch,' and then go under the bridge and settle things fair and square. By the time I was 10, I musta slugged it out with every punk in the neighborhood — all except Patsy."

"Then a few years ago, after we both set up stands on Times Square, some bad blood comes up between me and Patsy for the first time. The way it happens, one day I order two bundles of papers in-

THE FICTION CORNER

HARMONIOUS UNION

By Richard H. Wilkinson

IT WAS incredible that Tony and Leah Cranston should have quarreled over so small a thing. The neighbors would have been horrified, for the neighbors thought no two people were more ideally suited. The neighbors were right, too. Tony and Leah were harmoniously united. They were deeply in love. There was perfect understanding between them.

Then one day Tony came home from work and went into the bedroom to freshen up for dinner and found two five dollar bills and some change lying on the bureau. He scooped up the money.

"Hey," he said good naturedly, "we can't afford this. I found this money lying on the bureau. It might have blown away. Don't be so forgetful!"

Leah smiled. "Oh, my!" she said. "Did I leave the change from the grocer there?"

A week later Tony discovered a dollar bill where it had been idly dropped on the living room table and forgotten.

"Listen, honey, you've got to be more careful. Money is pretty important to us right now."

"I'm sorry," said Leah, "but it's only a dollar."

"We can't afford to lose a dollar or even a part of a dollar," Tony said, smiling.

The next time—the time Tony discovered three dollars on the kitchen table and one on the floor, where it had blown—he didn't smile. "Good gosh, woman! Show a little more consideration, will you! If I hadn't noticed that dollar on the floor it would have been lost."

"Darling," she said altogether too precisely, "I've never lost a penny of our money."

"How do you know," asked Tony, a bit smugly.

"Because," said Leah, just as smugly, "I can account for every dime you've ever given me."

"Ha!" said Tony. "Let's see you!" So Leah got a pencil and paper—and sat down and figured out her expenditures, to the last penny.

"Well," said Tony, "that doesn't mean you won't lose some if you continue to be careless. After it's gone—well, you've heard the crack about locking the barn door after the horse has been stolen."

"I've heard," said Leah icily, "a lot of cracks."

SUDDENLY it occurred to Tony that this was their first major crisis. Somehow he'd have to break Leah of her habit without a quarrel.

Tony and Leah Cranston were harmoniously united. The neighbors would have been horrified if they thought there was trouble between them.

It was the next Saturday noon when he came home from work that Tony discovered three ones and a two-dollar bill on the bureau where it had been absently dropped by Leah while she rescued the roast from burning.

Furtively Tony scooped up the money and stuck it in his pants pocket. Sooner or later Leah would discover it was missing.

She'd become concerned. She'd ask him to help hunt. He'd make a pretense of hunting and then pretend to find the money where it had blown into the bathroom.

That afternoon Tony went playing golf. All the while he was gone, while he was in the locker room and on the course and later in the showers, he kept thinking of Leah hunting for the missing money.

He came home an hour earlier than he had planned. The moment he saw Leah's face he knew she had discovered the loss.

"Darling, I laid some money on the bureau. Have you seen it?"

"It must have blown off," said Tony. "Boy, I hope we can find it." His face wore a look of grave concern as he began hunting. "We can't afford to lose a cent," he kept saying.

Tony waited until Leah looked as though she were on the point of bursting into tears, remembering she had been saving for a new hat and knowing she couldn't have it unless they found the money. Then he ambled into the bathroom, and, chucking to himself, reached into his pocket.

A startled look came to his face. He reached into his other pockets. They were all empty.

The league leading Beckett's Real Estate team lost their first game of the year this week, when they dropped a close one to Nelkie's Dairy 2 to 1. The "earthmen" continued to find little opposition in the league, running up some lopsided scores.
 Roll-in Auto Body moved up into third place this week, knocking down the Tawas City Fire Department into fourth and Tawas City Lutheran to fifth.
 Only ten more nights remain on the schedule, but there are still a few games that were rained out that have to be made up. If you haven't been out to see the league in action try and be on hand during the next couple of weeks, before the season ends.

Friday Night
 The second place Nelkies' Dairy team shot both barrels at the league leading Beckett's Real Estate squad, Friday night at the D. & M. diamond, and squeezed out a 2 to 1 win. Anschuetz doubled home the winning run, Warner doubled, Erickson flied to center and Long flied to left.
 Batteries: Nelkies: R. Anschuetz and Fogelsonger. Beckett's: J. Lixey and Phillips.

Monday Night

 Beckett's Real Estate dropped the Tawas City Fire Department 14 to 4 at the Tawas City diamond. Both teams started off on even terms for the first couple of innings but the power laden Beckett's team romped to an easy victory.
 Batteries: Beckett's: J. Lixey and Phillips. Fire Department: J. Lansky and Darling.
 Anderson Coach won over the Junior Fire Department 11 to 3. Batteries: Anderson Coach: Priest and Cowan. Junior Fire Dept. Libka and Nelson.

It says SUCCESS-with SPIRIT

First of the Fine Cars in Value

YOU can see this man has made his mark in life, and while his heart's still young.

You can tell he likes action for his money—that he knows a fine car needn't be the most expensive to give the greatest value.

Yes, such are the things you know of any man, when you note that his car is a ROADMASTER.

Follow him on his spirited way as he pilots this lively motorcar through traffic. Even the light-weights are no match for this road-steady husky—not with the 152-horsepower straight-eight Fireball engine that purrs beneath its bonnet.

Maneuver beside him at the next stop light. Then just try to get away as smoothly, swiftly and silently as Dynaflo Drive gets his ROADMASTER going—and keeps it rolling without shifting, even automatically.

But don't waste time merely envying the man in this great car! Why not emulate him?

With all its outsize room, interior luxury and exterior grace—with all its front-rank prestige, rare performance and matchless ride—a ROADMASTER can be yours for less than some smaller cars cost.

In fact, even if you had a fortune to spend, you couldn't make a more fortunate buy in the fine-car field.

So we suggest you try a few minutes behind the wheel. We're confident they will convince you that ROADMASTER has everything you could ever ask for in any motorcar—although your Buick dealer asks a good bit less for ROADMASTER than you might pay for other top-line cars.

Punch Machines Record Data on Traffic Accidents

Finding and recording the where, when why, what and how about Michigan traffic accidents is a routine job in the tabulating office of the State Police safety and traffic bureau.

In this office, located at State Police headquarters in East Lansing is a series of modern machines used to process categorically information taken from written traffic accident reports.

The information is especially useful in making engineering surveys, planning the angle of attack on safety problems and concentrating enforcement in areas with bad traffic accident histories.

Data from traffic accident reports are recorded by means of key punch codes on three-by-seven inch cards designed especially for processing with tabulating machines. A card has 80 columns each of which contains a breakdown of from one to 12 specific items under a general classification.

All told there are more than 900 separate items of information. There are columns for violation, time of accident, type of road, type of vehicle, age of driver, severity of the accident, number of vehicles involved, weather conditions and many other details. A single accident is described by the proper combination of these items.

By making the required number of runs with the appropriate settings on the tabulating machines, virtually any information on traffic accidents can be obtained in a short time. For instance, an inquiry might be received for the number of run-off-roadway accidents that occurred in a certain county during a given period. In this case the first run would be made to select all traffic accidents that occurred in that county, then another would be made to select the run-off-roadway accidents and the final run would pull out cards representing the accidents that occurred during the period of time requested.

"The availability of statistics on traffic accidents is essential in traffic safety and traffic law enforcement work," says State Police Commissioner Donald S. Leonard. "However statistics are not made in the tabulating office, they are only processed there. Traffic accident statistics are made out on the highways."

In 1929 when the safety and traffic bureau was established 328 traffic accidents were recorded. The total last year was nearly 144,000.

Duty of Citizen to Vote Stressed at Farm Bureau Meet

The July meeting of the Iosco County Farm Bureau Board of Directors met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Lorenz. Eight directors and the County Farm Bureau Women's chairman were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Vary and Mrs. Roy Newvine shared in giving a thorough report of the Farm Bureau Workshop meeting at Fairview, July 18. They quoted from an address given by the State Director of Farm Bureau Women's Activities, Mrs. Marjorie Karker. Her theme was that of "a citizen's duty to vote."

There are four groups who don't vote. (1) The age group 21-31, who lack interest after school is discontinued; (2) women who have many and varied excuses not to go to polls because of home duties and children; (3) Rural residents. (4) Foreign citizens. Mrs. Karker gave 13-reasons taken from actual statistics why folks don't vote. The Farm Bureau, she said, "realizes that the rural group is lax in voting; and because it is the largest farm organization, finds itself in the position to correct this situation."

Mrs. Karker recommended each community group have an action committee, the duties of which would be outlined and supervised by a County Action committee. Some of these duties were listed as:

- (1) Registration. See the township clerk for a list of voters and get them to register if not registered.
- (2) By September 12 know all candidates, their background and how they stand from testimonies of candidates themselves. Inform the voters.
- (3) Provide transportation for voters who have none.
- (4) Provide baby sitters or nurseries for mothers with small children who for this reason could not attend polls.
- (5) Contact men folks in the community.

This suggested program presented a challenge to every County Farm Bureau—surely a worthy project.

Frank Smith, Counselor for the Iosco County Junior Farm Bureau, formally announced that the new group had been organized on June 14. Harold Smith is the President, and Marion Herriman, Secretary-Treasurer. The fourth meeting was held August 2nd at Grant Township Hall. The new Junior Group has already undertaken two projects, that of operating hot dog and hamburger stands at both Whittemore Homecoming and the Iosco County Fair. The new group has 21 members.

Plans are rapidly being made for the first annual Farm Bureau picnic in Iosco county. The date has been set for Labor Day and the place will be at the Hi-Rollway Campground. Basket lunch at noon, family style, Community sing. Meet your county and district Farm Bureau Chiefs, and a "top-notch" speaker (to be named later) will be included in the day's program.

George Smith, Junior Farm Bureau Recreation leader, will assist committee are Henry Hobart, Mrs. Roy Newvine, Mrs. Charles Kobs, Chairman. Assisting the committee is Harold Clark.

"We had a wonderful time at Home Makers Week at Michigan State College," says Mrs. Ernest Ross, who with Mrs. Donald McDonald and Mrs. August Miller attended the popular event last month. The attendance of 1125 broke all records. The week was full of activities—educational, social and recreational. The homemaker could choose one of several courses and join in discussion groups on six different topics. There were twenty different courses offered that included family relations, gardening, recreation in the home and community, religion, economics of the home, history, literature, art, conservation and others. Mrs. Ross took the course "Writing for Fun and Money." Mrs. McDonald chose "Light, Heat and Water in Your Home," while Mrs. Miller, fulfilling her responsibility as County Chairman, brushed up on her "Parliamentary Procedure." Mrs. Ross and Mrs. McDonald took the section on "Exhibits and Displays Which Tell a Story" and are very likely to have the responsibility of setting the Home Economics exhibit at the fair this year. Mrs. Miller joined the group in "Exploring the Bible." Other activities included touring the college campus, hearing prominent speakers, including Edgar Guest, the Reverend N. A. McCune, Professor Paul Bagwell, Dr. A. J. Cowden, Mrs. George Lilley and others, community singing and picnics. Mrs. Ross concluded "It is just too bad that more ladies from Iosco County could not attend."

If Ray Jacobs was in the fish bait business he would have hit the jack pot last week. He found hundreds of big white grubs in his strawberry patch that were taking a heavy toll of his newly planted plants. Ray is not in the bait business but does want to raise strawberries. He dug up a lot of grubs and saw to it they will not grow up to be a pesky enemy, but that is slow work and not very certain. Thanks to research and intensive work on insecticides, a new spray material, Chlordane, comes in a wettable powder form and when sprayed on the ground with lots of water, will knock out Mr. Grub and all his relatives. Chlordane is also used to fight army worms, wire worms, grasshopper spittle bugs and many other pests of field and garden.

Do Iosco farmers feel a need for a soil conservation service in this county? That is what Everett Gullembo, District U. S. Soil Conservationist wanted to know when he was in my office last Tuesday. He pointed out that conservation really means that we determine the best use of our land whether it is to be used for agriculture, forest or wild life conservation, and to improve and maintain the maximum productivity of our soil. This may mean putting some farm land into trees, cropping some land heavily while others may be used for pasture only.

In order to get this kind of service, farmers must organize a soil conservation district first and then applying for farmers setting up new plans that will adopt soil conservation principles. It is interesting to note how soil conservation affects all people. It assists in flood control, maintaining soil fertility, improving game population, beautifies the countryside and brings prosperity to the community.

Farm organizations have expressed an interest in establishing a conservation district in Iosco county and it may be that we will have one in the near future.

4-H CLUB NOTES

4-H Reporters Say that—
Vida Burt attended Gaylord 4-H Camp for five days.
Our Dairy and Beef cattle boys had a Dairy and Beef cattle tour Monday, July 31. Thursday night at 8:30 p. m. they had a Dairy and Beef cattle meeting. A movie on "Farm Safety" was presented at the Grant Township hall on Friday evening.
Club officers for the community club are:
President—Charles Binder.
Vice President—David Stoddard.
Secretary—Treasurer—Vida Burt
Club reporter—Doris Herriman.
Doris Herriman, reporter and Mrs. Eleanor Durant, Leader.
The Burleigh Wizards 4-H Club held their meeting this week, the girls with Aileen Ward and the boys with Paul Edie.
We have a very busy month planned. The 10th is out tour, when we will visit each member and have a picnic dinner at noon.
The 12th we will have a bake sale at the Whittemore Home Coming to raise money for flags and other supplies for our club. We will have a joint meeting at the Grange Hall the 16th, at which Aileen Ward and Melba Sheffer will give a demonstration. After the meeting a pot luck lunch will be served.
We are all looking forward to Achievement Day at the County Fair.
Aileen Ward, reporter.

Iosco county 4-H members are busy this week making final preparations to compete in the State 4-H Club show at Michigan State College, East Lansing, August 29 to September 1.
Many are grooming livestock, putting finishing polish on handicraft, pressing clothing entries selecting fresh garden vegetables or rehearsing their demonstration for the big event.
Marvin Davenport, District 4-H Club agent, says Iosco county will be well represented this year at the thirty-fifth annual State 4-H Club Show. It marks the ninth year the event has been held on the campus of Michigan State College.
Dormitory and cafeteria facilities of the college are available to the 4-H Club members, the agent says, and evening entertainment is provided for the visitors without charge.
More than 4,000 entries are expected. Last year all but four counties in the state competed. Arrangements are being made to house nearly 2,000 4-H members. Many of those living within driving distance of East Lansing will return home each night.
Agent Davenport says entries from this county will include:
Leaberta Townsend, Hale, Clothing judging contestant. Virginia Hildner, Hale. Food Preparation judging contestant. Dorothy West and Gilya Werth, of the Tawas, demonstration team.

The Hardwood Lake Camp for Iosco, Alcona, Oscoda and Gladwin counties was attended by 824 Club members and leaders. Not even the weather prevented a good time. The camp council included:
Mrs. Joy Wilson of Sterling, Mich., Mrs. Ed. Balzer of Gladwin county, Mrs. Blanche Douglass of Iosco county, Miss Laveria Mishler of Gladwin, Ronald Schulz of Gladwin, Miss Norene Huber of Hale in Iosco county and Miss Agnes Galbraith of Mio in Oscoda county. The camp program was supervised by these folks and the good job they did could be measured in part by the request of the 80 members attending for another camp in 1951.
A lot of talent in club members showed up on "Stunt night." Harry Herriman of Grant Township and Bud Bannister contributed their bit to that successful event. Leaberta Townsend of Hale and her girl friend sang a duet that was enjoyed by the members.
Four of the camp councillors, Laveria Mishler, Norene Huber, Agnes Galbraith and Joy Wilson put on a model business meeting demonstration. This business meeting concluded the arrangement for the planting of some 250 trees at the camp. Each club member planted at least one tree. We are hoping that the next few years this windbreak may show the evidences of the effects of this 4-H county camp group.
I'll speak for each and every member present at the camp—thanks to you parents, leaders and friends of 4-H Club work for making such a successful camp possible.

Disappearing Island

Bogoslov Island 25 miles north of the Aleutians, consists of three volcanic cones, and is one of the mysteries of the Bering sea. It is of volcanic formation, and since its first eruptive appearance in 1796 it has disappeared, reappeared and changed physiographically many times. Its most recent eruption was in 1910. Sea lions and birds have returned to the island at every reappearance.

Tight Rope
By Allison L. Burks

Edward is disturbed by the fact that a casual acquaintance of Stella Moore, masquerading as Dorinda LaCroix, has recognized Stella on the street and may make trouble for himself and his cousin Fay, his fiancée, who has employed Stella to pose as Dorinda to help keep Dorinda's grandmother alive. They are afraid that if the truth of Dorinda's death in a lifeboat at sea after a ship was torpedoed were known, it might prove fatal to the aged woman. Stella reviews the events which led to her, an unemployed secretary, being employed to pose as the rich Dorinda LaCroix. Fay speculates on the wisdom of Stella's giving up the masquerade and leaving the Thorndyke house.

CHAPTER III

"It seemed to both of us," Fay explained, "that to learn of her granddaughter's death would kill Mrs. Thorndyke. She is so ill, it would need only this one thing more. We want you to take Dorinda's place until Mrs. Thorndyke has sufficiently recovered to be told the truth. It may be weeks, it may be months. We've taken this way to get in touch with the right kind of person."

"But I don't believe I could do it," Stella Moore had stammered. "It isn't as difficult as it sounds," Fay assured her. "Mrs. Thorndyke hasn't seen Dorinda since she was a small girl. No one in the village has ever seen her. There are no recent photographs. We do no entertaining since Mrs. Thorndyke's illness. It will be quite simple really."

"You see now why the French requirement. After all, a girl brought up in France would be expected to be able to speak French. Probably you'll never need it but you might."

"And," she went on, an ironic note in her voice, "you need have no uneasiness. The Thorndykes are one of the oldest and most respected, as well as wealthiest families in Trentville. We can give you references which I am sure will satisfy you—only, of course, we want your promise not to let anyone know of this impersonation. We think it best to confine this knowledge to the three of us. We are not even letting Harriet Thorndyke, Mrs. Thorndyke's sister-in-law, and her daughter, Lana, who live with us, know. If too many people share the secret, the truth will inevitably come out. If we do this thing at all, we can't afford to have that happen until the proper time comes, as you can readily understand."

Stella Moore hesitated. She felt a reluctance, hard to explain, to go on with this. She had thought of playing a part for only a few hours daily. This would be a part for all day, every day. Could she do it? But she had a broken wrist, she had no work, most of all, she needed the money. She would be foolish to pass up such a chance. Yes, she would try it.

'Grandmother' Captures Dorinda's Affections

Fay looked relieved at her acceptance. "I'm glad, I think if you'd decided against it, we'd have given the whole thing up. You're the only one I've felt would have any chance of playing Dorinda with conviction."

"Not that I blame you for hesitating," she added coolly. "I must own I don't like it myself. But what else can we do? Mr. Thorndyke is devoted to his mother. I am extremely fond of her myself."

"No, she is not my mother." She answered the unspoken question. "I'm a distant cousin of Edward's although I've made my home with the Thorndykes for a long time. Mr. Thorndyke and I expect to be married whenever Mrs. Thorndyke's health permits."

So Dorinda came to Thorndyke House, a big old house furnished in the lush opulence of the nineties, with thick carpets, heavy hangings of red velvet or gold brocade and massive furniture. Here at her journey's end, Dorinda met the other three members of the Thorndyke family: Harriet and her daughter, Lana. And Grandmother.

Harriet was middle-aged, thin and spare. Her hair was a faded brown, her eyes watery and gray behind the pince nez precariously perched on her long narrow nose. She had been married, widowed, she had a daughter.

Lana was a doll-like girl in her early twenties, small and childishly pretty, with heavy, dark red hair worn rather long and turned under in a smooth roll about her shoulders, and round eyes which were sometimes blue, sometimes green. When she had come to know these two better, Dorinda could understand the rather cynical remark Fay had made on the drive from Los Angeles. "It won't be difficult keeping a secret from them. Harriet is absorbed in Lana; Lana is absorbed in herself."

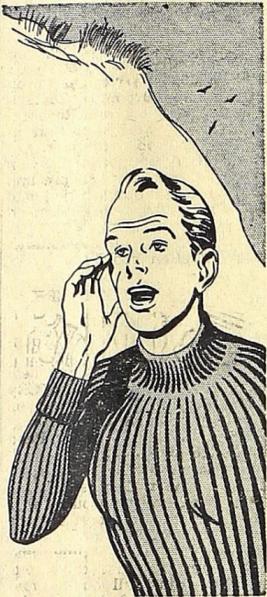

Grandmother was just Grandmother, a fragile and elegant old lady whom Dorinda had loved almost on sight.

She went down the dimly lit hall to Grandmother's room. As she lifted her hand to knock, she saw

Harriet just rounding the head of the staircase. The older woman peered at her with nearsighted eyes. "You're going in to see Lucy?" A dissatisfied expression crossed her colorless face. "She seems to think a lot of you. Queer how she almost grieved herself to death before you came. You'd have thought Lana'd be a comfort to her—her own husband's niece. But no, it was Dorinda. Dorinda all the time. And she hadn't even seen you for years."

"Well, after all, her own daughter's child—" Dorinda began soothingly, and turned as Carol opened the door, her pretty dark face dimpling in welcome. "She's been waiting for you," she said and Dorinda crossed quickly to the bedside. She took Grandmother's frail little hands in hers, she bent and kissed Grandmother's cheek. It was like soft wrinkled velvet against her lips.

"Was I long in coming, darling?" she asked and sat down in the cushioned chair drawn up close to the bed.

"If you're going to be here a little while, Miss Dorinda, I've a few things to attend to," Carol excused herself. Her crisp white uniform rustled as she moved.

Mrs. Thorndyke's brown eyes followed her as she went out. "A pretty piece, isn't she? The best-looking nurse I ever had. You don't see really black hair like that very often. She took care of me when I was in the hospital last year, you know."

"I like good-looking people around me. You and Carol and Fay. No better looking women anywhere. I suppose some people would call that little hussy of Harriet's pretty but I don't. Fay's really the handsomest of the lot. But she's cold, Dorinda. Beauty needs warmth for perfection."

"Fay is lovely," Dorinda said honestly. "I think I have never seen anyone more beautiful."

Dorinda Finds Lana Slightly Distasteful

Dorinda went away when Carol came back. Grandmother was right about Carol. Black satin hair, black eyes, a rounded figure. She exuded vitality, possessed all the warmth which Fay seemed to lack.

Back in the living room again, Fay announced she had letters to write. Harriet and Lana went upstairs to inspect the purchases Lana had made in the village that day.

"How about a few games of cribbage with me, Dorinda?" Edward asked, and drew a card table up in front of the fire.

Outside the wind had risen, rain dashed against the windows. Now and then a gust of smoke down the chimney ebbed out into the room and was caught back again into the fireplace as flames leaped high on the hearth. The quiet was broken only by the count, "Fifteen-two, Fifteen-four."

They played until nearly midnight. Greer came in a couple of times, mended the fire, emptied ash trays. Afterwards, Dorinda was to be very glad indeed that she and Edward had played; that they had been together; that Greer had seen them there.

She slept late the next morning. When she awoke the sun was pouring into the room and beyond the windows lay a clean washed world. Edward and Fay still lingered at the table in the sunny breakfast room, smoking over the coffee cups. Edward smiled at her but Fay, lovely in a blue housecoat that matched the blue of her eyes, only murmured a cool good morning as she lit a cigarette.

"No dieting for you, Dorinda,"

Edward commented. "It's great to be young, eh, Fay?"

Fay shot him a glance full of venom. "I've never found it necessary to diet yet," she said coldly. She turned one shoulder toward him and spoke to Dorinda.

"Edward and I have been talking it over," she announced in a lowered tone. "We've decided that, since in any event you would be leaving very soon, we might as well make it right away, say tomorrow morning. If you take the morning train it will get you into Los Angeles in time to look for a place to live and get yourself settled to some extent before night. That will give you today to get packed. Perhaps you'd better do it yourself. We don't want the servants talking it over beforehand."

Dorinda broke in quickly. "It's all right with me, I'm ready to go at any time. The sooner the better." A shadow crossed her face. "Only what will I tell Grandmother?"

"You're to say nothing to her," Edward said hastily. "Don't give her any hint that you're leaving. We'll make the explanations later."

"I hope she won't be hurt." There was a murmur of voices in the hall. Then the door was pushed open and Lana, closely followed by her mother, came into the breakfast room. She wore a fussy breakfast coat of pale green. A matching satin ribbon tied back her red hair.

Her round face held an expression of pleased anticipation. "I'm starved," she declared, and slid into her chair across from Dorinda, her roving glance taking an inventory of every dish upon the table. Dorinda watched Lana as she began her breakfast, then looked away. There was something distasteful to her about the other girl's dainty greediness. Lana seldom spoke at mealtimes but ate steadily and silently. Her small white hands plied her table utensils with expert correctness, but without actually doing so, she gave the effect of smacking her lips over each palatable morsel she swallowed. Lana was the true hedonist, absorbed to the point of obsession in her clothes, her luxurious pastel-tinted room littered with lacy pillows and long-legged dolls, in anything which contributed to her own adornment or enjoyment.

"What's the matter, Dorinda?" Fay asked. "You're not eating. Perhaps in spite of what Edward says, you are toying with the idea of diet."

Harriet focused her vague eyes on Dorinda's face. "Diet?" she repeated. "Why, Dorinda's not too heavy. Of course, she's young yet and you never can tell—" Her glance shifted back to her daughter. "More coffee, darling?"

Cleve Promises Dorinda One of Trix's Puppies

"I imagine Dorinda has decided to cut down on her food," Fay's voice was pregnant with meaning, and Dorinda, her appetite gone, pushed back her plate.

"It's too nice a day to stay inside," she said lightly and left the breakfast room.

She went down the passage to a side entrance opening on to a smooth stretch of lawn.

A few hundred feet back of the house, there was an abrupt drop to a small beach. A flight of wooden steps led down to the white sand. Once down there you were alone, cut off from any view of the house, and, unless you stood at the very edge of the water, sheltered as well from the gaze of any loiterer farther down the beach by the curving wall of the high bank.

Dorinda stretched out like a cat in the sun. Her last day! She would leave all this—the beach, her lovely room, Grandmother, Cleve. These she regretted. Not the rest. She couldn't even say good-bye. If Cleve were here now she couldn't tell him.

As if her thought had drawn him, she heard his voice. He came down the beach around the end of the curve. He wore slacks and sweater, his feet in canvas sneakers. A brown and white wire-haired dog followed at his heels.

"Hi, Dorinda. I had a hunch I'd find you here. Or if not here up at the house or somewhere else. At least I figured you'd have finished breakfast at"—he glanced down at the watch strapped about his wrist—"eleven o'clock."

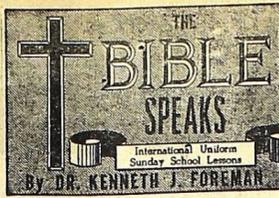

"Cleve's deduction." Dorinda's brown eyes shone up at him. She'd never known anyone just like him. Tall, wide-shouldered, dark blue eyes under tumbled black hair, a long Irish upper lip, a cleft chin. Not handsome. Better than handsome.

"You know what, Rinda? After deep thought, I've decided to give you one of Trix's puppies. Come over this afternoon and take the pick of the litter."

"Oh Cleve—not one of Trix's pups!" She clapped her hands in delight. Then she remembered. She couldn't have a pup.

She swallowed a lump in her throat. "Oh, I'm sorry. I can't come today, Cleve."

He Loved Teaching

Lesson for August 13, 1950

WHAT WOULD you do if you had a million dollars? Several thousand school teachers were asked that question a few years ago. Seventy-five per cent of them gave the same answer: "I'd resign." They weren't real teachers, they were only the hired help. The other twenty-five per cent were the real teachers. A great university teacher, Palmer of Harvard, wrote that he had the perfect job. Believe it or not, he said, "Harvard actually pays me for doing what—if I could afford it—I would gladly pay Harvard to let me do."

Dr. Foreman

No Finished Product

THE REAL thing about teaching is that you are dealing with people, young people, growing people. In every other line of business, whatever you turn out begins to depreciate almost as soon as it leaves the factory.

It doesn't take long for butter to get rancid, or bread stale. A cold-storage egg is a feeble imitation of a fresh one. A car that has changed hands once, even if it has run less than 1,000 miles, is already a "used" car on its way to the junk-pile.

But the products of the teacher's classroom are by no means "finished" products when they leave it, even if it is a finishing school. If the teacher's work has been done well, the product will go on improving for years, instead of running down.

Three Aims

PROFESSOR EZRA, of Babylon and Jerusalem, was one of history's most famous teachers. We note (Ezra 7:10) the same three aims in Ezra's life that you would expect to find in all good teachers. First of all, he "prepared his heart" to do what he did. The "heart" is the Bible expression for character, for life as a whole. No one can be a truly good teacher who has a bad character.

Now Ezra prepared his heart to do three things. The first was to "seek the law of the Lord." What a teacher teaches may be as important as who his pupils are; and Ezra's "subject" was the law which God had given his people—part of what we now call the Old Testament. Nowadays this is called research, but a simple word for it is just study. A lazy teacher is a poor one. A good teacher will spend more time studying than any of the pupils do—and will learn more, too. In fact, the best way to learn anything, including the Bible, is to try to teach it for a while.

Second, Ezra prepared his heart to do the law. The old sneer, "He who can, does; he who cannot, teaches," is true of poor teachers, not of the good ones. Particularly not true of Bible teachers. The aim of Bible teaching, from Moses' time till now, is always practical. "Truth is in order to goodness," as the Presbyterians say. One who has not tried out the Bible ideals in daily living will never do for a Bible teacher.

And third, Ezra set out to "teach in Israel." Your research scholar may or may not make a good teacher. The good teacher is not bored by teaching as some researchers are. He loves it. He is happiest at it.

Take Yourself, for Example

NOW LET US see how this comes out in your own home Sunday school. If yours is like most Sunday schools, the main trouble with it is that they can't find enough good teachers, enough people who really want to know about God's word themselves, who live and love to help others know it.

The Rev. H. M. Lewis of Texas has said in his essay, The Dividends of Teaching:

"When you begin to teach you will realize that at last you have found a purpose for your religion. . . . Teaching gives a motive, the highest motive, for all acts of religion and for all pursuit of knowledge—'For their sakes.' Every Christian has the missionary obligation and is by virtue of his profession of faith, a missionary—'Go, teach all nations.' Make your particular nation young America and your special opportunity systematic work in the Church school. Nothing for Granted

THE UNUSUAL ELECTION LAWS of California provide that the voter, when registering, must state his political allegiance, whether to the Republican, or Democratic party, and he must vote the ballot of that party in all primary elections, though he votes as he wishes, and without regard to party, at any regular election.

In California, the number of those registered as Democrats is much larger than those registered as Republicans, so much so that it would seem that the state could be safely counted in the Democratic column.

Under these unusual California laws, any candidate seeking a nomination has the privilege of seeking the nomination by both parties, and most candidates do seek both party nominations. So each voter, whether registered as a Republican or Democrat, has the opportunity of voting for his preference, either as the Republican or the Democratic nominee.

For example: four years ago, Earl Warren's name appeared as seeking the nomination for governor on both the Republican and the Democratic primary ballots. In that year, he received a majority of the votes cast in both parties, and became both the Republican and the Democratic candidate for governor. At the November election he had no opposition. In reality, he had been elected governor in the primaries in June.

This year he came near to duplicating the exploit of four years ago, but not quite, and the real election must come in November. This year Warren's name appeared on both the Republican and the Democratic primary ballots, and the Roosevelt name appeared on both. Democrats who wished, could vote for Roosevelt as the Republican nominee.

In the primary election in 14,577 out of 18,022 precincts in the state, 592,938 of those registered as Democrats voted for Warren as that party's choice for governor, while in the same precincts, 121,061, registered as Republicans voted for Roosevelt as the Republican choice for the nomination. In five congressional districts, the Republican incumbents were named as the Democrat candidates, and in those districts the November election is merely a formality, those candidates have no opposition. In the 20th congressional district, Representative John Phillips, who two years ago carried both primary contests, this year lacked 23 Democratic votes of winning both nominations, and Phillips must stand for election in November.

It would seem that on the primary returns Representative Phillips has nothing to fear in November, but in politics in California nothing is taken for granted. While Governor Warren did not come as near as he did in winning both nominations, the fact that 592,938 registered Democrats voted for him as their choice while only 121,061 registered Republicans voted for Roosevelt, would seem to make his election in November fairly sure.

In the U.S. senatorial race, Representative Nixon, who had forced the Hiss case into the courts, resulting in a conviction, was the Republican candidate for the nomination, and he, too, was a candidate for the Democratic nomination. On the Democratic side, and also filing for the Democratic nomination, were Representative Mrs. Helen Douglas, and newspaper publisher Boddy, owner of the Los Angeles Daily News.

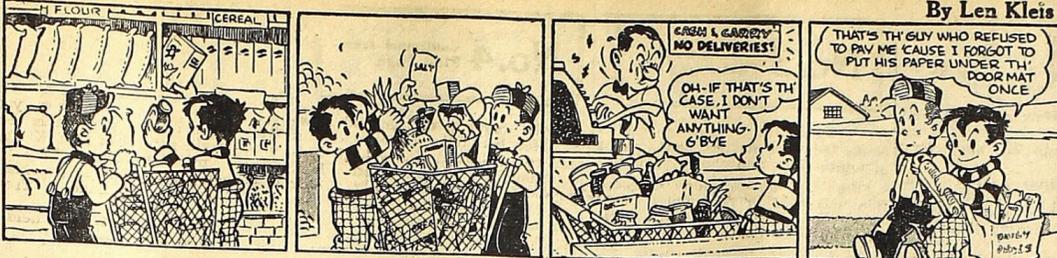

Of those registered as Republicans, Nixon received 428,136 votes, and for the Democratic nomination he received 216,618 votes. Mrs. Douglas received 87,793 Republican votes, but Boddy got 223,277 Democratic votes and 107,771 Republican votes.

Granting that the Republicans who voted for Mrs. Douglas in the primaries will continue to in the November election, with a split of the Boddy vote between Nixon and Douglas, should mean a win for Representative Nixon.

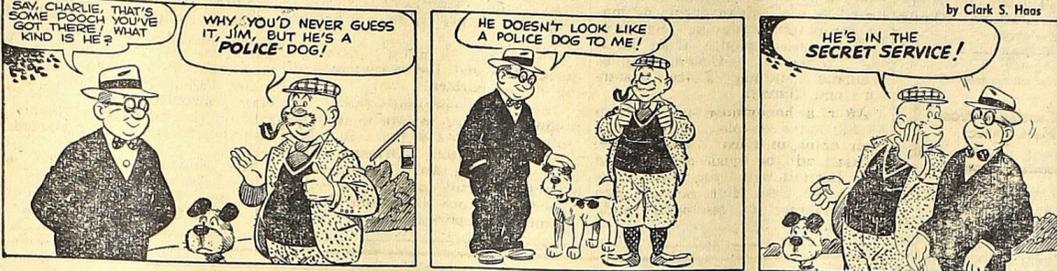

That is the way it looks, but in California politics nothing is taken for granted. Much can happen between June and November, but it looks now as though the state will have two Republican senators.

Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin has made some serious charges, and presented a foundation on which to base a congressional investigation. The people are entitled to know what definite evidence, if any, the investigating committee has developed. Without a definite report from that committee and the evidence to back their report, the people will be justified in feeling that the committee's purpose is a whitewash. Secrecy, behind closed doors, cannot be convincing. We want the facts.

Princess' Husband Climbing Ladder

Princess Elizabeth's husband has started out to work himself to the top of the ladder. Prince Philip won his first command in the British navy recently. The admiralty announced the tall, handsome Philip would take charge of the anti-aircraft frigate Magpie in August. Court circles predicted also that at about the same time he would be upped from lieutenant to lieutenant commander. Philip, 29 next month, now is first lieutenant of the destroyer Chequers, based at Malta. He returned to active Naval duty last fall. The 1,430-ton Magpie is manned by six officers and 186 men. She mounts four six-inch guns, eight two-pounders and several pom-pom anti-aircraft pieces.
