Aut Allen's Blues Defeat Laidlaw's Reds

Old Timers Enjoy Displaying Their Baseball Skill Sunday

The Old Timers Game last Sunday was a big success. In spite of inclement weather many of the Tawas old timers took part in the festivities.

The game got underway with Aut Allen's Blue team winning from Walt Laidlaw's Red team 4 to 2. Hurling for the Blues was Jack McArdle and for the Reds Reg. Boudler and Bill Mallon. For not having played in a long time the old timers showed plenty of their old time skill.

Benny Boldt, of Hazel Park, who hasn't missed an old timer's game and Reg Boudler, of Cadillac, one time Tawas pitcher, both took an active part in the game. Boldt playing short and Boudler hurling. Fifty-four year old Aut Allen, playing as if he was only 20, caught for the Blues and batted out two hits.

All who participated or watched, enjoyed the game and hope for many more Old Timer's days in the future. A meeting is planned, with local old timers, to form an association and taking an active part in the plans and contacting the out of town old timers. A day will be set for next year, and a mailing list prepared of all old timers wishing to participate. In this way more people can be contacted and more time taken in preparing for the yearly event.

During the game, hitting contests were held and the following won Old Timer's Day baseballs. For hitting the longest ball: over 60 years old: John LeClair, Sr.; 50 to 60: Bill Groff; 40 to 50: Benny Boldt. Oldest old timers present: Wesley Groff, age 77; next oldest, Otto Kasischke, 73; and Fred Boudler, 65.

Umpires for the game were William Groff, Russ Rollin, Fred Boudler and Ray Cooper.

Darling Resigns as Public Works Head

With Department Since Last April

Selected by the council in April to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of William Mallon, he had been employed under temporary contract on a six months trial basis. This was with the understanding that if the arrangements were satisfactory to both Darling and the city council, an appointment would be made and a regular contract would be made.

Protest Opening of Pheasant Season

Iosco sportsmen take issue with the game division over opening of pheasant season. At the regular meeting of Iosco sportsmen last Thursday, August 31, the club again issued a protest to the Game Department. It was voted unanimously to send telegrams and phone calls to Lansing to appeal this decision and attempt to secure the closing of that season here in Iosco county. If it becomes necessary to circulate petitions, the club urges all who enjoy pheasant hunting, as well as those who merely enjoy the sight of a pheasant on the wing to assist the club by signing them.

Other business included a report on the progress of the pheasant raising program. The birds are now six weeks old and only minor losses are expected by release age. This means over 200 more game birds in our county.

Bob and Bill Roach reported on the skeet and trap range project. This should be a reality before October 15 when bird season opens. The other situation was discussed and after a heated debate it was decided to write the conservation department seeking advice on this predator. The other has become so plentiful on our streams and lakes that some effective means of trapping or bounty system is desired by the club. The clubs seeks a means of control over the other on the entire AuSable river system in addition to the streams and lakes of our own county.

The meeting closed with an introduction of political candidates present and a showing of two color films, "Pheasant Cover" and "Wild Fowl in Slow Motion."

Coffee and donuts were served following the films. Notification of the next meeting will be by post card and this newspaper.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Korea Military Picture Improved; Senate Passes Mobilization Bill; Nation's Farmers in 'Fine Shape'

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.

KOREA:

Picture Changes

As the Korean war went into the third month military observers were inclined to comment "the picture has changed." And from available information it seemed the Communists had lost the power to mount great offensives involving thousands of men.

North Koreans launched one attack in force, its objective the city of Taegu, temporary capital of the South Korean republic and supply terminal for U. N. forces. It failed. In some of the bloodiest fighting of the war, U. S. and South Korean troops smashed the offensive, held Taegu, and then proceeded to smash bulges all along their lines.

One of the most spectacular operations of the Korean battle was the concentrated air attack on an assembly area at Waegwan, involving 98 B-29's each loaded with 40 500-pound all purpose bombs. The load was dropped in a rectangle 7 1/2 miles long and 3 1/2 miles wide. General MacArthur, commander of United Nations forces, in a report to the security council said: "The ground fighting continues to be of the most savage character." Our outnumbered forces face an enemy with "almost fanatical determination. The whole operation has assumed the character of a major campaign." He went on to ask for troops from other members of the United Nations.

To date the number accepted for action in Korea included Thailand 4,000, the Philippines 5,000, Turkey 4,500, and the United Kingdom 7,500. It will be several weeks before they can be brought to battle.

Military observers agreed that the picture had changed, but added that it will be "a long and hard winter in Korea."

FARMERS:

In Fine Shape

In a major speech at Carlisle, Indiana, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan asserted that the nation's farmers are in "fine shape" and took the opportunity to put in another plug for his farm plan.

Said the secretary: "Even allowing for increases in military food requirements we expect to have enough food so that civilians can continue consuming as much as in the past two years."

Farmers worried about possible economic controls of agriculture were reassured when the secretary said there are grounds for hope that such controls can be postponed for a considerable time or perhaps avoided entirely—"unless the emergency becomes much worse."

Talking up the Brannan plan, the secretary said we need a program which "solidly protects farm prices in case of a sudden slackening of demand" yet "puts an abundance of milk, eggs, and other perishables in the hands of consumers at attractive prices."

Brannan added that the present program of sliding-scale price supports fail to assure support on some of the most important commodities and offers no incentive for necessary production shifts.

WHEAT:

Highest Level

The agricultural department has fixed price supports for 1951 wheat at the same level as the 1950 crop—90 per cent of parity.

The department said 72,800,000 acres of wheat may be planted. If yields are average, this acreage would produce 1,150,000,000 bushels. This year's crop is estimated at 993,000,000 bushels.

In fixing the wheat support at the highest possible level, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan said:

"In view of the world situation, it is imperative that our supply of bread grains be maintained in strong position. Ample supplies will be a major factor in assuring reasonable food prices to consumers and our ability to meet our international food obligations."

"We believe the wheat-production and price-support programs have been developed to protect the interests of both producers and consumers."

The price support announcement had been expected, since Brannan is required by law to announce supports in advance of planting; winter wheat planting starts this month.

Only farmers who keep within acreage-allotment limits can get price supports.

CASUALTIES

Toll Is Heavy

The shattering realities of the Korean conflict reached into many American homes as the conflict went into its third month. More than 2,600 families in the cities and small towns and on the farms of the nation have been notified of servicemen killed, wounded or missing in action.

At the same time, a military spokesman said that Korean Communists had lost 50,000 killed.

PEACE:

There Is Still Hope

The belief that there is still hope for peace, perhaps for only a short time, but still respite from world-wide war, is growing in many quarters. The hope is not one for permanent peace, but one of time, based on the belief in high diplomatic circles that the Russians are not ready for all-out war at the moment.

Diplomatic circles call it the "calculated risk" of war or peace. It is based on three major assumptions:

(1) Russia fears the effects of American atom bomb attacks. (2) Russia does not possess an adequate stock pile of atomic bombs.

(3) Russia's industrial potential is still too weak in comparison with that of the western allies to risk a major conflict.

The first two of the assumptions are, of course, mere guess work. But there are statistics to back up the third.

For instance, America's steel production for 1950 is expected to exceed 71 million tons. Great Britain will produce around 16 million tons and the rest of western Europe approximately 24 million tons. Thus, the allies will produce a total of 111 million tons, compared with Russia's 22 million.

Russia also lags in the production of oil, another of the top essentials for war.

On these assumptions western Europe is planning a three-year rearming program. If the program is successful peace may be prolonged, but the world will be divided into two great armed camps.

RAILROADS:

Strikes Close Steel

The brotherhood of railroad trainmen and order of railway conductors went on strike against three terminal railroads, disrupting several of the country's steel arteries in the midst of the Korean war.

However, with the steel industry pressed to capacity to meet the needs of the stepped-up munitions program and the booming civilian economy, many sources predicted that President Truman would seize the lines.

The unions singled out key terminals in Louisville, St. Paul and Chicago and Republic Steel's switching terminal at Cleveland for the first display of pressure. About 1,000 men walked out for five days. Approximately 30,000 workers, including steelworkers, were made idle.

Negotiations between management and union representatives, with presidential assistant John R. Steelman taking part, produced no progress in the first 24 hours.

Observers believed the government would take drastic action before the situation deteriorated and crippled the nation's vital steel production.

INTELLIGENCE:

Headed by Smith

Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, former ambassador to Moscow, was named by President Truman as director of central intelligence. He will succeed Rear Adm. Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter around the end of September.

The agency's job is to gather and analyze reports from diplomatic, military and all other sources. Some members of congress were not surprised by Smith's appointment.

There had been demands in congress for a shake-up of the agency since the Korean war. Some legislators contended the United States was caught flat-footed by the invasion of South Korea by Communist troops.

General Smith, now 54, has had a long military career, which includes service as chief of staff to Gen. Dwight Eisenhower in World War II. Later he became ambassador at Moscow.

Johnson

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson (right), confers with Sen. Tom Connally, chairman of the foreign relations committee. Johnson has been under increased attack by foes of the administration and some Democrats for the way he handled his office during the year before the outbreak of fighting in Korea.

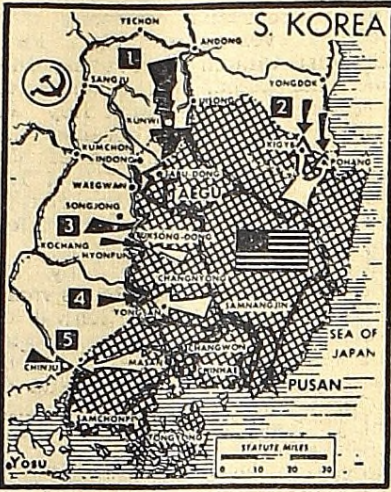

POLITICS:

Election Crossfire

The American political picture cleared somewhat with one definite trend in the spotlight: the voter faces a furious election year partisan crossfire. The issue will be U.S. foreign policy.

The bipartisanship in foreign policy as existed before the Korean war is a thing of the past. From now on voters will hear charges and counter-charges on U. S. foreign policy by congressional candidates.

Victories

U.S. troops won victories on nearly all fronts in Korea during the eighth week of the conflict. The big Communist push (1) on Taegu from the north was driven back; South Korean troops recaptured Pohang and Kigy (2); another bridgehead (3) across the Naktong was beaten back; American forces flattened the bridgehead (4) in the Yongsan area.

HOME-FRONT:

Mobilization Bill

The senate, by a vote of 85 to 3, passed a home-front mobilization bill which would give President Truman power to invoke wage-price rationing controls and other anti-inflation curbs at any time.

The bill then went to a senate-house conference for the ironing out of differences between the senate measure and the bill passed earlier by the house.

In one point the bill was a defeat for the administration since it directed the President to put wage and price controls into effect simultaneously and virtually across the board if he invoked them at all.

The President has maintained he sees no need of wage-price curbs or rationing at this time. Further, the administration requested authority to control commodity speculation, but neither the house or senate versions contain such authority.

Both bills contain an anti-hoarding provision prohibiting the accumulation of excessive supplies of goods designed as scarce.

The administration suffered another setback in that its plea for retention of the provision which would let the President fix controls on selected commodities—meat, for example—in advance of any general controls program, was defeated.

AMERICA:

Angry People

Americans have never liked the evasive tactics and double-talk used by diplomats. That such a dislike still persists in the minds of average Americans was indicated by the increasing number of letters to national leaders and members of the United Nations demanding that Soviet delegate Jacob Malik be thrown out of the security council.

The letters asked why prolong the arguments in the security council? Why not expel the Soviet delegate, the people in the small towns of America wanted to know?

In answer to these questions Warren Austin, U.S. chief delegate to the United Nations, made the following statement:

"Our objective is peace. We do not find peace by throwing out the person with whom we must make peace."

"We must be firm in our principles. We must be strong. But we must also be patient."

"In the United Nations, we must keep trying to convince Mr. Malik and his government of their errors and of our peaceful intentions. Through the United Nations we can reach the peoples of the Soviet Union and of other countries."

"It is not the people, it is the 'ruling circles' that we encounter here. That creates a force of public opinion, backed by moral authority that opposes aggression—and even the Soviet dictatorship cannot ignore such a force."

"It is a strain for us to listen to the deceit that the Russian spokesman has poured out. But truth will prevail. Meanwhile, it is better for diplomats to get nervous indigestion than for young men to get shot."

That, Americans agreed, was straight talk and to their liking.

Suspect No. 8

A stocky 33-year-old American electrical engineer, who fled to Mexico when the FBI began nabbing suspects in the Klaus Fuchs spy ring, had been arrested and charged with passing defense secrets to Russia.

Identified as Morton Sobell, he was the eighth American rounded up and charged with passing defense secrets to Russia. FBI officials said he is a radar expert.

MAKE DASH FOR COVER . . . Two American soldiers, somewhere in Korea, run for safety after their truck begins to burn in a ditch. The fighting continued violent as the United States insisted that any United Nations peace program for Korea must include among its objectives creation of a unified and independent country. This declaration in the midst of the Korean conflict was interpreted as a hint that the unified command might keep on driving past the 38th parallel and occupy all North Korea, once it started the North Koreans on the run. Chief U.S. delegate, Warren Austin, has avoided any direct reference to this possibility in outlining U.S. peace aims.

SOLDIER HIT BY SHRAPNEL FROM ENEMY SHELLS . . . An American soldier lies on the ground shortly after being hit by shrapnel. INP staff cameraman Charles D. Rosecrans, Jr., was standing just eight feet away when the GI was hit. The soldier fell somewhere in Korea where the fighting has been described as just as rugged as the savage combat waged by marines in the Pacific islands during the Japanese war. American soldiers have been warned not to underestimate the enemy soldier.

PUSAN POSIES FOR LEATHERNECK GENERAL . . . Taking the gesture in his stride as leathernecks generally do, Brig. Gen. Edward Kraig gallantly clutches the bouquet of Korean blooms just presented to him by Pusan's mayor (on the general's left) upon General Craig's arrival from the United States with the First Marine brigade. Other members of the South Korean welcoming committee are not identified. Pusan has been the major objective of the North Korean Communists trying to dominate all Korea. It has served as the main seaport for receiving United Nations supplies for their embattled troops fighting the North Koreans.

DISCUSS PROPOSED RADAR FENCE . . . Taking time to check some material before a session of the armed services committee in the nation's capital are (left to right) Major Gen. T. H. Landon of the United States Air Force, Rep. Melvin Price (D., Ill.) of the house armed services committee, and Maj. Gen. Francis L. Ankenbrandt, the United States Air Force director of communications. The armed services group met in secret session to hear testimony of the Air Force generals on the proposed U.S.-Canada radar fence. Such a project would need cooperation between U.S. and Canadian defense chiefs, which is virtually assured.

GOOD CITIZEN

Principles of Good Citizenship Must Be Practiced in Own Home

This is the last of a series of 10 articles from the booklet "Good Citizen," published by The American Heritage Foundation concerning the rights and duties of an American.

The ninth promise of a good citizen: I will practice and teach the principles of good citizenship right in my own home.

Our country, when you come right down to it, is just a lot of families. In the family are cradled the cardinal virtues that enable good families to add up to a great nation—standards of conduct, respect for the rights and property of others, loyalty, health, tolerance, cooperation, self-reliance, good breeding and a sense of the fitness of things.

In principle, the family must be the keystone, the microcosm, the atom—that-can't-be-split of our republic. Democracy must be based on homes where the interests of man, woman and child receive equal consideration. Whether in a crowded rooming house or on the farm, the answer must come from men and women of intelligence and good will who look on the successful maintenance of a family as one of the greatest acts of good citizenship. Just as democracy starts in the home as an obligation, it ends there as a reward. To the degree that all the other duties of citizenship have been fulfilled, your home will be your castle, secure from the threat of confiscation, and those in it safe from detention camps and firing squads.

OTIS WIESE, editor of McCall's Magazine, said in an article, "The home, we all agree, is the foundation of the social structure. And women are the bed rock under that foundation. Any woman who achieves success as a mother has a more pervasive influence over the next generation than any cell of Communists. And her mother's might certainly outweighs in social significance the manufacture of millions of can openers."

"The home, in effect, is the transmission belt of our culture, for it is there that the child learns its first lessons. It is the place where our social health is either insured or undermined insidiously..."

IN CONCLUDING this series of articles, one way to measure the results of our system is to add up our physical and cultural gains in everything from bathtubs to symphony orchestras. Although it has only 6 per cent of the world's population and less than 6 per cent of the world's land area, the United States has:

- Seventy-two per cent of the world's motor vehicles, one for every four people. 286,000 miles of paved roads.
- 231,481 places of worship, representing 55 religions or denominations.
- More than 61 per cent of the world's telephones, one for every 4½ people.
- 208,235 public schools, 1,720 colleges and universities—schools for nearly everybody.
- Forty-eight per cent of the world's radios, one for every 2½ people.
- Ninety-two per cent of the world's bathtubs, one for every six people.
- 6,511 public hospitals.
- Eighty-five per cent of the world's commercial air traffic.
- 258,465 miles of railroad trackage, more than all Europe, including Russia in Asia.
- Sixty-four major museums of art, science and history. Twenty-three symphony orchestras. 650 music societies.
- 31,015,000 homes wired for electricity.
- 12,578 newspapers and magazines. Nearly 2,000 radio stations.
- Fifty million savings accounts; 200 million life insurance policies.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

ABBY LEWIS appears regularly on four NBC shows—"Road of Life," "Eternal Light," "The Big Story" and "Storyteller's Playhouse," portrays cooks, crooks, young girls and old women with equal ease. She sometimes does two very different characters on the same air show. Abby gives the credit for this ability to her father, who was a preacher and missionary in New Mexico when she was a child. She often tagged along on his missionary trips, and afterward impersonated the people she'd met that day.

"The Goldbergs," which has already been on radio, television and the stage, and is now being made into a picture by Paramount, will crop up next as a novel. Gertrude Berg, its author and star, will write the book.

"Information Please," granddaddy of the quiz shows, might better have remained in retirement, if the programs heard since its return to the air are an indication of what we may expect. That painful, futile effort to be funny gets pretty tiresome. In comparison with shows like NBC's "Who Said That?" and American Broadcasting's "Cliche Club" it comes out badly.

Uncle Charlie's Luck Is Bad, Bandit Crosses Him Up

By BILLY ROSE

Last Friday night on the way home from his weekly pinocle session, my Uncle Charlie was held up a few blocks from his home on Allen Street and a wallet containing $13 was taken from him. This misadventure, strangely enough, has made my Aunt Frieda very happy, and with your leave and license, I'd like to tell you why.

To begin with, to hear my uncle tell it, Frieda is crazy like a fox about most things, but when it comes to fortune telling and allied superstitions she's crazy like a crazy. This, of course, in Charlie's own words, "drives him to destruction," particularly when my aunt shells out good money for such charms and amulets as lucky horse-tail hairs and pieces of string with seven magic knots.

"I can't understand," I once heard him tell her, "how a distinct twenty-century type like you could potsky around with such superstitions."

Billy Rose

"Century, schm-century," Frieda answered. "What was good enough by my grandmother is good enough by me." "So why didn't you marry your grandfather?" "So when I look at you, that's who I'm thinking I married."

THE MATTER CAME to a crisis last Friday when Charlie arrived home from the shop and Frieda asked him for 10 dollars.

"Only last week I am giving you 10 dollars," he exploded. "What you making, a down payment on a Cadillac?"

"A catalogue I am not needing," Frieda sassed back. "Today I am purchasing from a certain Gypsy a brass fish with the sign from Zoroaster which is absolute guar-

STRANGE SPECTACLES

By Richard H. Wilkinson

ON THE MORNING of Aug. 4th, Sandra Hunter glanced through her bedroom window and saw a strange spectacle. Between the great white house and the street was a wide expanse of lawn, and this lawn was at present occupied by a young man pushing a lawnmower.

Sandra didn't know what to make of it. She remembered that her mother and father were away for the weekend and that the servants were in the rear of the house.

By the time she had dressed and ventured outdoors, the young man had finished his mowing and was resting in the shade of the veranda.

"Will you kindly explain what this is all about?" said Sandra.

"I just mowed your lawn as it should be mowed."

"Should be mowed?" Sandra puckered up her brow. "What do you mean, 'should be mowed'? Who are you? And where is Rufus, our gardener?"

"I'm Jerry Leonard. I bribed your gardener this morning to let me mow your lawn. You see, I have to drive by your house every morning on my way to work, and every morning I've noticed that Rufus cuts the lawn unevenly."

"Well of all things!"

"Besides, I've been wanting to meet you since last June."

"Meet me?"

"Yes. My mother and I moved into the old Saunders place last June and, the day after, I saw you and decided I had to meet you."

"I've been hoping you'd speak to me for ever so long," Sandra said, "but you gave the impression of being rather high hat."

I noticed your lawn and thought of the idea of bribing Rufus. It was like killing two birds with one stone." He grinned. "I knew your father and mother were going to be away."

"Why, the very idea! I—I can't believe you're serious."

Jerry Leonard scratched his head. "I was never more serious in my life. Shucks! I'm sorry if you feel the way you look."

"The way I look!" Sandra began to wonder how she did look.

A dozen retorts came to mind but they all seemed flat and inadequate, almost silly. She hesitated for an instant longer and then turned abruptly and strode back to the house.

Jerry Leonard watched her go and into his face there came a look of disappointment.

THROUGHOUT the day Jerry was conscious of a forlorn misery. All his carefully formed plans had proved fruitless. At 5 o'clock he drove home via a route that did not take him past the Hunter estate. Leaving his coupe outside in the drive he entered the cottage by the rear door and found a note on the kitchen table, left there by his mother, which advised him that she had gone to a church supper and that if he didn't want to come to he'd find some warmed-over things in the oven.

Jerry moodily ate the warmed-over things and afterward stepped outside to smoke a cigarette. He was about to ease himself comfortably onto the doorstep when he chanced to glance toward the drive. He blinked, rubbed his eyes, swallowed. "What the devil!" he said.

As he approached, the girl who had been washing the automobile's wheels straightened up and stood off to survey her work. It was Sandra Hunter.

"What the dickens," said Jerry, "are you up to?"

"Oh," she said. "Hello." She gestured toward the coupe. "Dirty wheels. Been getting on my nerves for weeks."

"Wha—what?" said Jerry. "I've noticed you driving by every day from my bedroom window. Rest of the car looks fine, but you always seem to forget the wheels. Very annoying."

Jerry puckered up his brow. He peered at the girl very intently. His face was grave. He said, "Is that all?"

"No," said Sandra. "I've been hoping you'd speak to me for ever so long, but you gave the impression of being well, rather high hat. This seemed like a logical method to promote friendly relations," she grinned. "You see, I knew your mother was away."

PASADENA, Calif.—A writer, Mrs. Eloise Andrae, needed some local color for some radio crime stories she was writing. She needed to get in jail, so— She took out a temporary driver's license under the name of Susan Ann Little and used it to cash a check for $25. Nothing happened. Next she charged a $3.95 slip to a friend who didn't have an account. Still no policeman. Then she went back to the store and pulled the same stunt for $15.47. Detectives hauled her away to a cell with lots of local color and looked her on suspicion of forgery.

Waterfowl Season To Open Several Days Later in '50

Michigan waterfowl hunters will open the season several days later this year, have five to seven days less hunting time, but unchanged bag and possession limits.

The conservation department announces hunters operating in the upper peninsula can begin stalking ducks, geese (except Ross's geese), coot, sora rail, other rails and gallinules beginning at noon, October 13. In the lower peninsula the waterfowl season opens simultaneously with the below the Straits small game season at 10:00 a. m., October 15. Throughout the state the waterfowl season closes November 10.

Timetable maps showing shooting hours for every part of the state will be available in all district and regional offices of the conservation department not later than the last week of this month. Department points out that after opening day, the lower peninsula starting hour for small game will be 7:00 a. m.

Woodcock hunters will have the same season dates as last year. Above the Straits the regulation hunting period runs October 1-20 while below the Straits the regulation hunting season is October 15-November 5. Woodcock may be hunted until sunset while hunting for other migratory birds must cease one hour before sunset.

Bag limits for ducks and geese are the same as before. Hunters may lawfully take four ducks per day of which not more than one may be a wood duck, and may possess not more than eight ducks but not more than one wood duck. Four geese except Ross' geese may be taken in one day or held in possession, of which two may be Canada or white-fronted geese, or one of each.

In addition, 25 American and red-breasted mergansers, singly or in the aggregate may be taken in a day, with no limit to the number which may be held in possession after opening day. Daily bag and possession limit for coots continues at 10 birds as does the limit of 25 sora rails. Bag and possession limits for the woodcock are the same, four a day, eight in possession.

Final ruling on maximum permissible hunting periods and bag limits is made by the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service. With exception of a two-day loss of waterfowl—to permit a joint opening with small game season so as to ease hunting pressure—the conservation department has gone along with maximum permissible season and bag limits.

According to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service the 1950 regulations for all flyways in the United States were recommended only after the most extensive biological investigations and consultations with state game administrators. The Service reports that the aim has been to closely adjust as much as possible the hunting pressure to the anticipated flights of ducks and geese in the various flyways.

Fishing License Sales Down This Year

Apparently a lot of weather discouraged fishermen changed their mind last month and decided to wet a line at least once this season.

For license agent reports to the conservation department in August reveal a surprising 251,634 resident fishing licenses sold to push total resident sales over the 649,000 mark, or within 4.4 per cent of last year's pace through this period. License sales, down most of the year because of poor fishing weather, were off nearly 30 per cent in July.

Rather than being down, annual non-resident license sales registered a five per cent increase over last season's pace with 96,500 being issued. Temporary non-resident licence sales which were off 23 per cent now are off 17 per cent. Agents have issued over 58,000.

Trout stamp sales recorded show a slight gain. Off over 11 per cent in July, the department reports stamp sales now are down about nine per cent with 123,100 issued.

But retail minnow license sales failed to show a gain and now total 1,636 or over 10 per cent fewer than at this time last year. Sales were down only about six per cent in July. Wholesale minnow license sales tapered down. Up about five per cent in July over comparative 1949 figures, sales now are over three per cent behind. Agents issued 154 through August 31.

The fair is over and our staff welcomed Sunday and Monday for recuperating. A fair means a lot of hard work for the committees and exhibitors, but there always is a lot of satisfaction in assembling that great array of the very best articles, livestock and crops that our people possess. It is always a thrill to see the delightful work of the 4-H members. In the basement of the Hale Community building we saw the articles of food preservation by freezing and canning, the muffins, the cookies, the pies, the vegetable baskets, the corn, potatoes, beans, the flowers, the handicraft work, the knitting and clothing articles. The 4-H Leader's exhibit of "The House at 4-H Built" came in for its share of attention. The open class of entries of crops, vegetables, and flowers received a great deal of admiration from the estimated 5000 people who visited us in the basement.

In the Ladies' Department we found excellent entries in baking, canning and needle work. The exhibits of art and antiques was well received.

The twelve 4-H beef calves dominated the livestock exhibits this year because of the calf scramble calves. Of course there was also the usual good display of dairy cattle. Charles Binder, who in 19-48 won the George Prescott, III and sons award was back with his Brown Swiss heifer with a nice bull calf by her side. Sure, we may be all "Faired" out now but we will all be back next year.

About this time every year I get calls to see some sick pullets. The farmers report a few dead birds, and some of the best pullets droopy and showing blue colored combs. The pullets have just begun to lay 50% or better but fall off sharply. This disease is commonly called Blue Comb and as yet we don't know what causes it nor how to prevent it. An effective cure is to give three quarters of a pound of epsom salts to 100 birds in the amount of water they will drink in one-half day. Follow this immediately with one level teaspoonful of potassium dichromate to each four gallons of drinking water for three days. Give pure water one day and the potassium dichromate for another six days.

I just received notice from Graydon Blank Extension Specialist in Animal Husbandry of Michigan State College about the 1950 Ram Truck schedule. Mr. Blank says the truck will be loaded with registered Hampshire, Oxford, Shropshire Corriedale, and Suffolk rams. Sheep breeders who are looking for a good ram will do well to order one from the truck. They should place the orders with me or Mr. Blank. The truck will arrive at the feeder calf yards at West Branch October 4.

4-H CLUB NOTES

4-H Club Reporters Say—

The State 4-H Show and Iosco County Fair are history! Notes on the State 4-H Show held at Michigan State College in East Lansing would include:

- Donna McCormick's complete costume exhibit rated a "B" premium.
- Virginia Hildner in Food Preparation judging—19th.
- Leaberta Townsend — clothing judging, 15th.
- Jack Bellow's Handicraft exhibit received a "C" premium.
- Ken Seigris's Handicraft exhibit received a "C" premium.
- Leonard Wiluski and Claude DeLosh each were awarded a "ribbon of merit" for their contribution to the State 4-H Show.
- Dorothy West and her accordion had an opportunity to play over Station WKAR, East Lansing, through the courtesy of Grant Salisbury, farm editor. We heard Dorothy did a very fine job.

All our State 4-H folks, including our chaperone, Mrs. Herbert Townsend, were housed in the new Shaw Hall dormitory.

We received comments from our judges and certainly all the congratulations should be passed on to the 4-H Club members for the high quality exhibits. They did a nice job in feeding their steers and dairy cattle. The Grand Champion steer was exhibited by Phillip Partlo and the Reserve by Duwayne Durant. The dairy boys, Ken Seigris, John Webb, Alton Buck, Bill Seaver and company are to be congratulated for their fine work and exhibit.

Our flower garden and vegetable exhibits were bright spots that won't quickly be forgotten. The flower clubs of Mrs. Blanche Douglas of Hale and Mrs. O. J. Westcott of Tawas City were responsible for the touch of floral beauty.

Let's extend a hand of sincere gratitude to those 4-H Leaders, Vocational Agricultural Instructors and 4-H friends for their contribution in supervising the 4-H Department. A heap of thanks goes to you folks for your voluntary efforts. Your only pay comes from the appreciation we all extend to you for your cooperation. And to George Prescott, III, thanks for the promotion of 4-H Club Dairy work. Bill Seaver who received this award and all of us grateful for your interest.

To the Iosco County News and Tawas Herald—Messrs. Smith and Thornton, I'm sure you have contributed more to the betterment of club work through your 4-H Float Parade awards than words can tell. We appreciate it.

BASIC WHEAT LOAN RATE ANNOUNCED

A basic loan rate for 1950-crop wheat produced in Iosco County of $1.99 per bushel was announced by the Production and Marketing Administration county committee.

Last year's rate was $1.96 per bushel.

The basic rate applies to wheat grading U. S. No. 1, Earl M. Partlo, committee chairman points out. Wheat produced on farms cooperating in the 1950 wheat acreage allotment program grading No. 3 or better, or No. 4 or No. 5 because of test weight or because it contained wheat of the classes durum and/or red durum, will be eligible for Commodity Credit Corporation loan or purchase agreement. The chairman says that a schedule of premiums and discounts for the various qualities of 1950-crop will be issued at an early date and will be available for inspection at the county PMA office in Tawas City.

To be eligible for the loan, wheat must be placed in approved storage either on the farm or in a commercial warehouse or elevator. Storage allowances will be continued for 1950-crop wheat on the same general basis as last year.

The county rate is based on a national average rate of $1.99 a bushel to farmers as announced by PMA on June 30. The equivalent national average rate for U. S. No. 1 wheat is $2.00 per bushel.

The Agricultural Act of 1949 requires that the price of 1950-crop wheat be supported to farmers at 90 percent of the parity prices on July 1, 1950, the beginning of the marketing season. The July 1 wheat parity price was $2.21 a bushel. For the same date last year the wheat parity price was $2.17 per bushel.

Loans and purchase agreements will be available from CCC through the county PMA office, in accordance with the program provisions, from time of harvest through January, 1951. They will mature on April 30, 1951 or earlier, on demand.

Looking Forward
 More people are being born than are dying. By 1950 world population will increase about 300 millions. That is more than twice the present population of the United States. To offset this increase, farms and factories must be geared to increasing production.

Autumn Colors
 In the fall in the northern states the leaves change color—brilliant reds, greens, blues, etc., but the color was there all the time. However, it isn't noticed until fall or autumn because earlier in the year the green of the chlorophyll in the leaves is so potent.

Indian Cattle Raisers
 Indians have increased their beef cattle herds from 171,000 in 1932 to 383,300 in 1946, and meantime the quality of the cattle has improved greatly. Dairy cattle, likewise, increased from 11,000 to 50,000 in the same period. Income from livestock operations during these years grew from $1,300,000 to more than $21,000,000.

Decline in Livestock
 The number of livestock on U. S. farms has been declining continuously since the peak was reached in 1944. The drop in 1947 included a reduction of 933,000 head of dairy cows.

PMA GIVES 4 "C'S" OF CONSERVATION

There are four "C's" in Conservation according to the Iosco county PMA committee.
 The first "C" is for cover. A protective cover is about the best defense known against erosion. In the first place, the leaves and stems of thick-growing plants break the fall of the rain. This prevents "splash erosion." Then the roots hold the soil and keep it from washing or blowing away. And when the roots die they help to build up the humus in the soil. This helps to make the soil more porous, with a greater capacity to absorb water. The stems and leaves of plants slow down the run-off of excess water, thus reducing the amount of soil carried away with the water.

The second "C" is for construction. This includes the construction of terraces, dams and spreader dikes. The second "C" stands for the conservation practices which includes changing the surface of land to check run-off and control erosion. Instead of leaving the land unprotected, a terrace or dike or dam crosses the path of normal run-off, thus checking the flow and diverting the water to an outlet where it will not dig or gully through the land.
 The third "C" is for contouring. Similar to some of the construction practices, contour farming puts barriers in the way of run-off. Instead of furrows running up and down the slope of the land, they follow the contour of the land—on the level.

The fourth "S" is for control of water. If the productivity of this land depends on irrigation, conservation practices are carried out to prevent loss of water. If there is too much water, conservation of the land calls for getting the excess water off the land.

The PMA committee says that all four "C's" are in the Agricultural Program, which provides assistance to farmers to aid in establishing protective cover, constructing soil and water saving structures, in contour farming, and in irrigation and drainage.

WARNING GIVEN ON HESSIAN FLY

A warning about Hessian fly, the insect that attacks wheat in the fall and spring, was given this week by Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent.
 In this area, planting wheat before September 7 is dangerous. This date was established as best for this area by Michigan State College specialists who set wheat seeding dates which avoid damage by the Hessian fly.

Wheat plants attacked by the fly become stunted and may turn dark bluish-green in color. Infested plants finally die back from the leaf tips. The injury is done by the larvae (maggots) of this insect which feed beneath the leaf sheath, usually next to the ground.

The only satisfactory control for the Hessian fly at this time is to plant wheat in the fall after most of the danger from the insect is past. Hessian fly does not live to lay eggs after late summer.

Some farmers claim to have planted earlier and escaped damage but the fly is not so prevalent every year. The agent adds that this may be a year when the larvae of the Hessian fly are around to damage the wheat in the seedling stage.

Agent Clark also advises farmers to plant certified seed. Grain elevators ordinarily have a supply but if not the agent has a list of available sources at the county extension office.

 You believe in a program of rigid economy both in State and National Government, while keeping in mind that in time of war our country must come first.
 You believe that new taxes should come only in the event our National Security is endangered.
 You are concerned about serious need for better highways and the further development of Natural Resources in Northern Michigan.

New MSC Bulletin Ready for Tourist Resort Operators

"Planning Better Overnight Accommodations," is the name of a new 24-page bulletin issued by Michigan State College to aid tourist and resort operator's reports Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent.

Written by C. A. Gunn, of the MSC agricultural engineering department, the bulletin is based on five years' study of quarters for tourists and travelers in Michigan.

The publication is illustrated with drawings, photographs, and diagrams, making it easily understood. The author calls special attention to the four main elements that are needed for an attractive, efficient and easily maintained business:

1. Attractive, functional and well-constructed buildings.
2. Adequate and safe water supply, waste disposal and other utilities.
3. Ample openness and effective landscape plantings.

Four pages of layout diagrams give suggestions for a variety of site and patronage situations. Many of the recommendations will be of interest to those operators who wish to remodel present facilities.

Although primarily a guide to better structures and grounds, the book also devotes space to a summary of capital expenses, operating expenses, and anticipated income.

The new publication is a part of the educational work directed to tourist and resort businesses, carried on by the MSC Conservation Institute under the direction of L. R. Shoenmann. A copy of the booklet may be had by writing to the Agricultural Engineering Department, Michigan State College, East Lansing, or by calling at agent Clark's office in East Tawas.

Thinking of the Long Pull?

Better Buy Buick!

If that car of yours has put its best days behind it, there's no time like right now to think about starting out afresh with a taut, new, up-to-the-minute motorcar with all its mileage still in it.

And there's no better place in the world to start than with the beauty pictured here, for a variety of reasons.

For one thing, this Buick SPECIAL is a quick-stepping Fireball valve-in-head straight-eight that's priced lower than some sixes.

For another, it's built with typical Buick ruggedness through and through—a husky that can take a lot of years without crying "Uncle!"

Then, too—this high-styled beauty is proving to be one of the most economical Buicks ever built—easy on gas, easy on upkeep, easy on you in its soft, floating, light-handling comfort.

It even comes with Dynaflo Drive* if you like—and Dynaflo means that you will never have to service or replace a friction clutch, and that rear-end or transmission servicing—even engine upkeep—are cut to a minimum.

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Of course, you can't see all of this in the brief span of a trial drive.

But you can experience the good solid feel of Buick strength beneath you. You can satisfy yourself on the lightness of the controls, the utter smoothness of Dynaflo, the quick surge of Buick's Fireball power.

All such things will tell you that this is a car you'll be glad to live with for a long time to come—and you need only to ask your Buick dealer for a demonstration to see precisely what we mean.

Why not call on him soon to talk about signing up?

Tune in HENRY J. TAYLOR, ABC Network, every Monday evening.

FOR CONGRESS
(Republican---10th District)

Let's Face These Facts ...

1. After 32 years the Tenth District needs and deserves a change.
2. Our neighboring Congressional Districts have seen fit to send to Congress young men, Gerald Ford, of Grand Rapids, and Charles Potter, of Cheboygan, BOTH IN THEIR EARLY THIRTIES. Both are being returned again without party opposition. The tenth district should also send a young man MAYOR CEDERBERG to CONGRESS.
3. MAYOR CEDERBERG is well qualified for the office and he has a fine POLITICAL, BUSINESS, and MILITARY Background.
4. The weight of the incumbents 74 years warrants his retirement. He has recognized this fact. He is quoted Two Years ago in the August 22nd, 1948 issue of the Bay City Times. "I hope to take myself out of public life in the not too distant future. I'd like to have two or three years to rest". Again, Two Years ago in the November 4th 1948 issue the Bay City Times quotes him as saying that that was the "last time" he would seek to return to the House of Representatives.
5. You should know that a Congressman with 32 years service may retire on a special Congressional pension of over $6,000 per year even when defeated. Business and Industry require that you retire between 85 and 68. WHY NOT GOVERNMENT?
6. Don't be misled. When a Congressman is retired or is defeated his place on Committees is not lost to the party. They are filled by other party members. NO MAN IS SO IMPORTANT THAT HE CANNOT BE REPLACED!

The old gentleman glanced up at the young woman he had never seen before. He rose and said in a voice audible to every passenger on the bus:

"Do sit down, then, Mary. I don't often see you out on washdays—no wonder you're tired. And, by the way, skip delivering our laundry next week. My wife is seeing the judge Monday about getting your husband a parole."

Tight Rope
By Allison L. Burks

Grandmother Thorndyke, who has been led to believe that the Dorinda in the house is Dorinda LaCroix, her granddaughter from Paris, begins probing Dorinda's story. She asks to see a scar which the real Dorinda had on her wrist from a cut inflicted by a broken perfume bottle when she was a child in France. The grandmother recounts how the scar was inflicted. She had started the child as Dorinda was standing in a chair in front of her mother's dressing table trying to reach for the flask of perfume her mother had tried to hide from her. The grandmother asks if the scar is still there and grasps Dorinda's wrist to see for herself.

CHAPTER VII

Dorinda tried to draw her hand away but the clutching fingers were firm about her wrist. Fay had risen and came to the bedside, her anxious gaze on Dorinda's frightened face.

"Dear Aunt Lucy—" she began, but the clasp had loosened, the two halves of the wide gold band fell apart. Mrs. Thorndyke stared at the smooth unblemished wrist.

"Dorinda," she whispered. Then her black eyes lifted. There was fear, bewilderment, reproach, in their dark depths. "Sometimes I've thought—but I wouldn't let myself believe it. Now I know. You're not Dorinda!"

Edward's brows were twin black bars cutting across his questioning face. He had been reading the evening newspaper in his favorite down-cushioned chair when Dorinda hurried into the living room. He threw down the paper and rose to his feet as she came in, sensing with his almost cat-like perceptivity that something was wrong even before he looked at her.

"She knows," the girl faltered. "She knows I'm not Dorinda."

"She knows you're not Dorinda? How can she know?"

"It happened all at once. What could I do? If I'd known—but even then what could I have said?"

Edward flushed. "I'd forgotten the scar. Laura did say something about it long ago in one of her letters. I remember that now. But how can a man think of everything." He drew his hand across his face. "Five months—and now this! After all that time, I'd thought we were safe."

Edward Appalled As Grandmother Knows All

He took a cigarette from the crystal box on a low table. He lit it, his eyes intent on the lighted match.

"There could be an explanation. If I could make her accept it." He was talking to himself now. Dorinda was forgotten. "Why should she be suspicious of me, her own son? I've always dreaded that uncanny prescience of hers, but after she'd once accepted you as her granddaughter. I thought we'd have no more trouble."

He puffed furiously, the blue smoke veiling his face, then threw the half-consumed cigarette on the hearth. With the action, he became aware of Dorinda once more.

"Fay—where is Fay? She was there, you said. Perhaps she's been able to soothe Mother. I hope to God she has!"

As if invoked by the utterance of her name, Fay drifted into the living room. She looked cool, untroubled. But her lips were a thin line and the usual fluid grace of her movements had stiffened a little, giving a hint of strain.

"Delay dinner for fifteen or twenty minutes," Edward ordered. "We've got to get this business settled one way or another. I'll go up and talk to Mother myself. I shall tell her Laura had the scar removed by a plastic surgeon."

Fay smiled faintly. "You think she will believe you? I don't—not after the way Dorinda looked when she rushed out of the room. You looked guilty as hell, my dear. Why not tell the truth, Edward? That you brought the girl here to spare your mother shock while she was so ill. That way, you will still be Aunt Lucy's white-haired boy although, of course"—she spread her slim, white hands wide in an expressive gesture—"any other plans you may have made would naturally have to be given up."

Edward shook his head irritably. "That is out of the question. I don't think she is in any condition to be told of Dorinda's death. I'll make her believe me."

Yet he hesitated before he left them as if, in spite of his confident words, he dreaded the meeting with his mother.

Fay broke the silence in which the tension of waiting had held them both. "Perhaps it's better this way," she said surprisingly. "In any event, it makes an end. It was a mad plan and I've helped Edward in it against my better judgment. Now it has failed."

She added, as if impelled by a sort of bitter justice, "Through no fault of yours, though. What Edward can do now, I don't know. But at any rate he knows he'll gain nothing this way."

"What had Edward hoped to gain?" Dorinda did not ask the question aloud. Improvement in his mother's health? That wasn't the answer. Somehow Dorinda had known through all these months that it wasn't the whole answer. Sometimes she thought she had known it the first day she had seen Edward and Fay; had sensed in that first interview an underlying purpose hidden beneath the ostensible reasons they had given her.

Running steps sounded in the hall. The slam of a door. Then silence once more. Fay lifted her head, her blue eyes intent. She went to the door of the living room. Dorinda followed her. The hall was empty. "But in a moment Edward came out of the telephone closet and walked slowly toward them, his haste gone now. He looked very tired."

He drew his hand over his face in the gesture which had become so familiar. "I tried to talk to her," he said heavily. "It's no use. I don't believe she even knew what I tried to tell her. She says Dorinda is dead. She says it as if she knows."

"Mrs. Thorndyke, your grandmother... she is gone!" Carol faltered.

He came close to Fay and added, accenting each word, "She wants me to send for Morrow."

"Morrow!" Fay ejaculated. Then, "It's only what you must expect, I suppose." She glanced back toward the telephone closet. "Did you do what she wanted?"

"No. I had a letter from his office only yesterday, saying that he is out of town. He'll be away for a week at least. But I've sent for Dr. Evans to come at once. Mother was so agitated, I was frankly frightened. I don't know what effect this excitement will have on her."

Fay looked thoughtful. "If she should die the way things are—" she began, but Edward broke in harshly. "Hush, Fay, I won't have you saying that. She won't die, she mustn't die—not yet!"

Dr. Evans Warns What Sudden Shock Would Do

There was such horror in his white face that Fay shrank away from him. "I don't comprehend you, Edward. You must have faced the possibility of your plans ending this way."

"There are some things I can't face." Then, as Fay stared at him, her face puzzled, his tone changed. "Here is Harriet. I think it must be time for us to go into dinner."

Harriet's plain face was fretful as she joined them. "Am I late? My clock has stopped. I was waiting for Lana. Hasn't she come in yet?"

She pressed close to Dorinda's side as they struggled into the dining room. "You said to talk to her—to Lucy," she murmured in a rapid undertone. "I thought I couldn't—but this morning I did go in for a little while. I didn't say much, just how sweet Lana is and how sorry I am I can't do more for her. I think it did some good." She nodded sagely.

Dr. Evans was announced a few minutes after they began dinner. Edward stood up, his white napkin fluttering to the floor, and hurried out. Dorinda could hear his low voice in the hall as he talked to the doctor.

Harriet looked furtively at Fay, her face holding the hurt expression of a child who had been slapped. "Is someone sick?" she ventured.

"Aunt Lucy," Fay informed her shortly, her tone discouraging further questions.

Edward came back to the table but he made only a pretense of eating. Greer carried away most of his dishes practically untouched.

Lana appeared just before the end of the meal. "Sorry I'm late," she apologized breathlessly. "I hadn't time to change." She indicated, with pointed finger-tips the close-fitting mauve sweater she wore.

"Your Aunt Lucy's sick, Lana," Harriet told her quickly.

"Oh, too bad," Lana said mechanically. One small hand, so like Edward's in miniature, grasped her fork almost before she had settled in her place. She did not look up as the others pushed back their chairs, but Dorinda saw the frown that creased her smooth forehead, as Harriet hurried around the table and sat down by her daughter.

Dr. Evans was coming down the stairs. He was a small plump man, with gray hair and kindly eyes behind glittering eye-glasses. His face was very serious. He set his black bag down on the bottom step and came to them across the hall.

"I think she'll do very well now," he said gravely. "I've given her a mild sedative and she is just drifting off to sleep." He cleared his throat. "It seems she had a shock of some kind. Miss Hughes seemed rather vague about it." His glance asked a question.

"It was all a misunderstanding," Edward explained carefully. "She was talking to Fay and my niece, Dorinda, here, and apparently misconstrued some remark my niece made and became somewhat overwrought. I'm a little vague about what happened myself." His white fingers fumbled at the buttons of his coat.

"Dr. Evans," he began delicately, "have you ever had any reason to suspect that my mother's mind might be failing her?"

Carol Carries Word Of Grandmother's Death

Dr. Evans shook his head. "Indeed, no," he said definitely. "I've always considered Mrs. Thorndyke a decidedly clear-headed woman."

Edward waved his hand. "There it is then. I'm at a complete loss. And poor Dorinda, she's had a shock, too."

Dr. Evans eyed her pale face. He nodded tolerantly. "You young people, so outspoken. But you must remember your grandmother is an old and very feeble woman. She can't stand many shocks of any kind." A gleam of curiosity touched his eyes. "You weren't, by any chance, telling her of your experiences in leaving Europe, were you?"

Dorinda took a backward step. "No, oh, no!" she told him in a smothered voice.

"Dorinda doesn't speak of that," Edward moved in front of her, shielding her further from the doctor's view. "That's a part of her life my niece wishes to forget, Dr. Evans."

"Understandable, perhaps." He walked away from them, picked up the black bag, then turned to face them again. "Mrs. Thorndyke must be kept quiet. No visitors for a few days. I can't emphasize too strongly that another shock of any kind at this time could be, almost certainly would be, fatal. Just be careful. I'll stop in again tomorrow." The door closed softly behind him.

Edward's face was shining with moisture. Dorinda could see the tiny beads of sweat that stood out on his forehead. He moped at it with the fine linen handkerchief pulled from his breast pocket. The hand which held the handkerchief was unsteady.

Dorinda left them. She went upstairs and along the hall to her room. After she had gone to bed she lay for a long time staring into the darkness.

But every night ends. Randy's imperious bark woke her. The hands of the clock pointed to eight. The room was filled with cool gray light. Outside the wind had ceased. The fog, thick and woolly, pressed against the windows.

The thought of hot coffee drew her toward the breakfast room, but as she started down the hall a voice called to her.

"Dorinda, oh Dorinda!" Carol came running down the stair, clutching a red bathrobe with distress. "Mrs. Thorndyke—your grandmother. She's gone," Carol faltered.

"She—she died last night in her sleep!"

"Dead!" The word dropped like a stone in the silence. "Why, she can't be—" Dorinda stared at Carol unbelievably. "Dr. Evans said—"

"I know," Carol agreed soberly. "We thought she was coming through nicely." She pushed back her disordered hair. She looked younger, more disarming somehow, with the black hair, usually as smooth and shining as a raven's wing, breaking into soft curls about her face. "I dread telling Mr. Thorndyke. I thought perhaps you'd do it."

Dorinda shivered. "I'll call Fay. She'll tell him." She followed the nurse back up the stair.

Fay opened her door almost upon Dorinda's knock. She was already dressed in the blue crepe housecoat that matched her eyes, her hair brushed into shining silver waves. Her expression changed as she saw Dorinda standing there. Apparently she had expected some one else.

Quitter Makes Good
Lesson for September 10, 1950

UNLESS THAT boarding house in Antioch was different from other boarding houses, you could hardly have a private quarrel in it. There would be some inquisitive people who would notice when voices were raised, and who could not resist the temptation to listen.

One of the quarrelers was none other than the famous Apostle Paul, and the other was his best friend Barnabas. At least, Paul and Barnabas had been good friends up to that Dr. Foreman day.

After that day's argument we do not know that they ever saw each other again. Paul never mentioned the incident, but the story got around, and Luke put it into his book of Acts.

Young Man Seeks Position

THE ARGUMENT was all about a young man named John Mark. Young people do not always realize how often they are discussed by their elders, or how much those discussions affect their lives. A young man applies for a job (which he would rather call a "position") and he either gets the job or he does not. But he never sees the files. He never hears the conversations about himself. He never knows just what remark got him the job—or cost him the job, as the case may be. So John Mark may never have known just what Paul and Barnabas said about him.

The facts were plain. John Mark was a native of Jerusalem, son of a woman at least well-off enough to have a large house of her own. He was some relative of Barnabas, perhaps a nephew. (Tradition says he was the young man in embarrassing circumstances described in Mark 14:51-52.) When Paul and Barnabas set off on their first missionary journey together, this John Mark went with them as a general assistant.

All went well at first. But when the party landed on the hot steamy shore of Pamphylia, and when the missionary expedition was about to take off over the high lonesome ranges through bandit country, John Mark left the party and took the first boat back to home and mother.

Two Bosses

WE HAVE no idea why he went. Maybe he had good reasons, maybe not. Anyway, we do know that he quit. And that was all Paul wanted to know. A new missionary party was being made up, and Barnabas wanted to take his young relative along again. But Paul could not see it.

Why take a man who had already fallen down on one job? Why take an assistant that could not be depended upon? The argument between Mark's two bosses boiled down to this: Paul judged their assistant on past performance. It was all he had to go by. Barnabas judged Mark by his love for him and his belief in him. The quarrel was sharp, and the two old friends could not agree. Finally the incredible happened: Paul and Barnabas parted company, and each went his separate way from that time forward.

What happened to Barnabas we do not know. But we do know that Barnabas was right about John Mark. Years later we read in more than one letter from Paul that Mark was a real help to him. We find that another great leader, Simon Peter, called Mark his "son." These leaders of the Christian church, though they might differ on some things, agreed about Mark, that he was a man to rely on.

What This Goes to Show

ALL THIS GOES TO SHOW several things. For one, it is clear that even an Apostle may be wrong. No man can be an infallible judge of another man. And another thing: You can't judge a man on his record alone. There may be more in the man than the record shows.

On the other hand, people do judge others by their records. The dubious young man does not always have a relative who will give him the benefit of the doubt.

If your record is bad, you must realize that there are numbers of people, even good people, who will judge you by that alone.

Russian Sentry Hides as English Remove Big Bomb

BERLIN, Germany—There was one bomb in the center of Berlin that the Russians wanted nothing to do with—in fact they insisted it was a British responsibility.

Workmen restoring the old Tiergarten, Berlin's most famous park, uncovered the 1,000-pound relic of World War II.

It lay just 150 yards from the massive memorial the Russians erected in 1945, just inside the area which became the British sector, to Red army men who died in the storming of Berlin. The fuse was damaged, complicating the problem of handling and removing it.

Three days of negotiations with the Russians followed. The Russians said it was a British responsibility, because the bomb lay in the British sector, but insisted the memorial must not be affected.

German and British bomb experts advised that detonation at the spot would buckle the marble columns of the memorial, and recommended moving the bomb.

Russian officers said moving the bomb would be dangerous. They asked British engineers to sign a guarantee that the memorial would not be damaged.

The British insisted it could be moved safely and finally the Russians agreed to the attempt.

British air force demolition men hooked a steel wire, 100 yards long, to the bomb at noon today and gingerly lugged it 200 yards farther away from the memorial.

The Russian sentry quit his post in front of the memorial and hid behind its big columns while this was going on.

The R.A.F. squad covered the bomb with several hundred sandbags and some bales of straw and hooked up a dynamite fuse. In mid-afternoon they touched off the bomb. Its roar was heard for miles.

The Soviet sentry went back to his post as the dust cleared.

Chips off the Old Rock—But It Was Plymouth Rock

PLYMOUTH, Mass.—A chip off a rock cost a Dartmouth college student $25. But the rock was Plymouth Rock, stepping stone of the Pilgrims.

Albert Leclair, Jr., was fined after pleading guilty of "malicious injury."

Judge Amedeo V. Sarzi lectured young Leclair against damaging "a sacred rock with which the whole country is concerned."

Leclair was arrested when residents complained that a young man on top Plymouth Rock was trying to chip it with another rock.

Tin Can Seen as Prime Influence on U. S. Life

The ordinary tin can has earned itself a place alongside the automobile, telephone, radio, and electric light as a prime influence upon the pattern of daily living.

So declares the American Can company in reporting that the average U. S. family last year opened about 750 cans of food and non-food products. Total consumption for the year was 30 billion metal containers, of which two-thirds were used for foodstuffs.

The consumption of canned foods alone has increased 10-fold since the beginning of the century—from approximately two billion cans in 1900 to around 20 billion last year, the firm said.

The use of metal containers for non-food products such as paint, beer, motor oil and tobacco has grown at an even faster rate—to an annual consumption of close to 10 billion in 1949.

Analyzing the effects on various products, the company said the big jump in use of canned products had not diverted items from other markets but had enlarged existing outlets and frequently developed completely new cash outlets for basic crops and other products long in use.

Lions, Tigers Like Catnip Just Like Household Pets

CHICAGO—Lions, tigers and leopards love catnip—just as much as the family cat.

A bushel of catnip was tossed into the Lion house at the Brookfield zoo by Director Robert Bean—just to see if anything would happen.

The animals responded with an assortment of capers and catnippus that amazed even Bean. They behaved like overgrown kittens. And like cats, they appeared very fond of the catnip.

Tommy, a 160-pound Indian leopard regarded as dangerous, appeared to be trying to giggle. He sniffed the herb, rolled on it, and then staggered around drunkenly with a spray draped over one ear.

Three brother lions—Roger, Colby and Herman—acted very alley catish. Roger howled; Colby chased his tail; Herman rolled on his back, gazed dreamily at the ceiling and gurgled.

Two surly Bengal tigers, Prince and Duke, attempted tricks after taking a few whiffs of the catnip. Duke tried to stand on his head, right in the catnip.

Prince, leaning groggily in a corner, did setting up exercises. He took another sniff and offered to shake Bean's hand. Bean declined.

Toothpick Goes Glamorous With Colors, Flavor

MERRILL, Wis. — The toothpick has gone glamorous, taking on colors and flavor.

The Merrill Woodware Co. was in need of greater market. The answer was found in red, green and blue toothpicks and mint flavors added.

They were first exposed to a market in the south and were such a success they will appear nationally. To all appearances the firm is going to have the biggest year in its 45 year history, thanks to the new twists on an old stand-by.

Since the firm was purchased by W. D. Brown, Jr., in 1948, the emphasis has been on more toothpicks. The firm has spent $50,000 in developing and constructing in its own shops the intricate machinery required to produce 15 to 20 million toothpicks a day.

Largest Manufacturer

In 1950 the firm will stamp out 125,000 cases of toothpicks (30,000 to a case) for the world market, compared to 20,000 cases last year.

The big production gain will make the firm the nation's biggest toothpick maker. One reason, and probably the main one, is the firm's new and unique machinery which can stamp out toothpicks hundreds at a time from clean, straight basswood "ribbons."

Buying only top class basswood, the firm cuts it into two foot lengths which are then shaved into "ribbons" a little thicker than a toothpick and a little wider than a toothpick is long. The ribbons are fed into dies on the stamping machines, which punch out flat toothpicks. These are cleaned and polished, then dried before coloring and flavoring.

Flavor is Added

As the toothpicks move down the drying platform, they are jigged and bathed in moving air until they are dry enough to set off a delicate tilting mechanism. This drops them into a sorting and rejection machine.

Flavor is added in a separate soaking and drying operation. In addition to the packaged retail toothpicks, the company also packs large cartons of loose toothpicks for carload sale. Four such cars this year were sent to markets in China, Japan and other eastern countries.

"You'd be surprised how many people still use toothpicks as toothpicks," said Frank Schuster, manager of the firm's Tomahawk plant. "But a great deal of them are used for food preparation and handling, such as at parties. People like the colored models. They help to brighten up a table."

Three R's Still Being Taught in One-Man Schools

MINNEAPOLIS — Despite substantial school construction and modernization programs in the mid-western states, the little red schoolhouse is far from extinct, a recent study of the nation's public school system revealed.

Some 75,000 one-teacher schools are still in operation, reports R. Jacobs, director of the school division of Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator company, even though an average of 108 new schools were completed in each of 12 mid-western states last year.

"These nostalgic but nonetheless obsolete one-teacher schools actually account for nearly half of the existing public schools today," Jacobs said. "Almost 1,500,000 youngsters form their first impression of school and our educational system in these under-manned, over-crowded classrooms. Small wonder children still frown and wince at mention of the word school."

Jacobs, however, on the basis of a nationwide poll of city, county and diocesan school administrators, was optimistic about the facilities for the postwar crop of 7,000,000 children who will enter schools next year. He pointed out that the U.S. department of labor, for example, reveals that $297,000,000 has been authorized for school construction during the first three months of 1950 alone.

Doris Duke to Raise Pigs On Special Diet, No Swill

SOMERVILLE, N. J.—The Hillsborough township board of health has given Doris Duke, tobacco heiress, permission to enter the pig-raising business provided no garbage is brought in to feed her porkers.

The $50,000 project on Dul Farms, complete with atomizers to keep down odors, had been held up because the sanitary code prohibits the importation of garbage into the township.

The board said Duke farms could engage in as large a hog raising operation as it wished as long as it abided by three regulations. The food must not be imported swill, a permit must be obtained from the board of health, and the business must in no way constitute a nuisance.

The farm manager said the hogs would be raised on a grain and corn diet and that the operation would be run in accordance with the decisions of the board.

To avoid yellow stains on your hands when peeling carrots, peel them under water.

As soon as they've been peeled, raw sweet potatoes have a strong tendency to turn color; this can be thwarted by keeping them in ice-cold water until you're ready to cook them.

You can use bay leaves to flavor a roast or soup without having to fish the leaves out later, if you crush them up in a metal tea ball and drop the ball into the pot while the roast or soup is cooking. Pull it out by its chain when it's done, and the flavor will be where you want it.

cluster of white roses with streamers. A set of one strand of tiny pearls and pearl ear rings, a gift of the groom completed her costume.

The gown of the maid of honor was fashioned like that of the bride of Cohama taffeta in Salisbury-American beauty color, but was not opened at the front. The bridesmaids gowns were of simple lilac shade taffeta cut on simple lines with full flared skirts and square necklines with small stand up collars and cap sleeves. They wore short taffeta mitts to match their gowns and in their hair, halos of taffeta, trimmed with fluffy bows of matching nylon net at the back. Their bouquets were of rumbur lilies tied with white streamers.

Following a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Carlson will be at home in Ann Arbor.

For traveling the bride wore a brown jersey dress with shepherd check and a brown and white topcoat. She had brown accessories and a corsage of white roses.

The bride attended Knox College and the University of Illinois. She was a resident of Alpha house while attending the University and was active in Wesley Foundation.

The groom graduated last June from the University of Michigan where he was a member of the Arts Choral and the Michigan Marching Band. He is a candidate for the Master of Arts Degree in Horace P. Rackham graduate school. He was past chairman of the North Central Region of Methodist Youth Fellowship and past president of the Detroit Conference, Methodist Youth Fellowship.
