Demand 15c Raise And Contract

The employees of the United States Gypsum Company, Alabaster, called a strike at 5:00 p. m. Tuesday, September 5, 1950 in support of their contract demands. The workers are members of Local 371, United Chemical Workers—C. I. O.

C. J. Adamczyk, regional director of UCU-CIO, makes the following statement:

"Negotiations broke down Tuesday afternoon. The Company announced it would put into effect an 8 1/2 wage increase Tuesday at midnight over the heads of the Union which demanded a 15c an hour increase retroactive to July 1, 1950, as well as the terms of a contract. Faced with this 'unfair labor practice' and ultimatum, the membership voted unanimously for a meeting called at 4:00 p. m.

"The United Chemical Workers, C. I. O. won its second N. L. R. B. vote in two years, the second one upon petition of the Company which demanded that the Union prove that it still represented the majority. The vote was 112 to 1.

"State and federal mediation services have been notified of the dispute."

Drop 11-Inning Game to Alpena

In a long 11-inning game Sunday, at Alpena, Tawas City dropped a tough 9 to 8 decision to the northern team. The marathon battle looked like an easy one for Alpena, when they scored three runs in the first and then building up to a 5 to 3 lead going into the first of the ninth. In the ninth, an error and a double by Bob Rollin and a single by Bill Groff scored two runs and tied up the ball game. When Alpena failed to score in the last half of the ninth, the game went into extra innings.

In the tenth Tawas City scored three runs on singles by R. Anschuetz, Gackstetter, Westcott and Rollin, taking a 8 to 5 lead.

Alpena came back with three runs on five hits in the last half of the tenth and prolonged the game into the eleventh. Alpena scored the winning run on a double by Palmer and a single by Schults.

Among Tawas City's 16 hits were doubles by Westcott, Anschuetz, and Rollin, with Russ Anschuetz getting four hits in six times up and Bob Rollin, who had three for six.

Community Church to Present Film Story

"Out of the Night," the true story of the Pacific Garden Mission in Chicago, is to be shown at the Alabaster Community Church on Tuesday, September 19, at 8:00 p. m. Rev. Marvin Lewis, well-known evangelist from Florida, is showing the film.

The actor who portrays the part of the bum in the film actually begged on the streets of Chicago while the camera shot the scene. Not knowing this, passersby scorned him. Another difficult assignment for the actor was to stumble and fall headlong on the filthy streets.

This moving, dramatic story will be of interest to all ages. The people of the community are cordially invited.

700 Herefords to Pass Through Auction Ring

W. L. Finley Here to Help Plan Big October Sale and Show

More than 700 Hereford calves will be listed to pass through the auction ring at the annual sale to be held October 19 at West Branch. This was revealed Wednesday evening at a meeting of the Northeastern Michigan Hereford Calf Breeders Association held at the Federal Building, East Tawas.

W. L. Finley of Michigan State College was at the meeting and is assisting in making plans for the big sale and show. About 30 members of the association were in attendance.

Organized about 15 years ago, principally through the efforts of Charles T. Prescott, the association has been instrumental in placing the northeastern Michigan counties on the map as producers of high grade feeder animals. Through the annual sales hundreds of northern grown Hereford calves are distributed throughout the country. The growing of feeder animals has become one of the principal and most profitable branches of farm industry here. Finley, a former Isosco county agricultural agent, helped to organize the association and has taken an active interest in its affairs since.

371 Enrolled at Tawas City Schools

Large Number to be Recruited for Bands

The membership in the Tawas City Public Schools is as follows: Kindergarten, 33; first grade, 27; second grade, 22; third grade, 25; fourth grade, 18; fifth grade, 24; sixth grade, 21; seventh grade, 36; eighth grade, 27; ninth grade, 44; tenth grade, 32; eleventh grade, 35; twelfth grade, 27. This totals 371.

With the intention of recruiting a large number of students for the two school bands, bandmaster Bruce Orr has announced that all students will be given an opportunity to enroll in the bands that have been formed.

While conferring with Superintendent A. E. Giddings, the decision was reached that all students interested in the music program would be tested with scientific test to check their musical ability, and that arrangements would be made whereby instruments could be rented for three months to determine the instrument best suited to each individual child and his interest in it. This method of starting children on musical instruments is being widely used by schools throughout the country with great success.

Lessons will be furnished by the school. Now is the logical time for children to start, and it will only be a matter of months before they will be given an opportunity to secure a position in the concert band and to participate in all of its functions.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

MacArthur Note Spotlights Breach On High Military-Civilian Levels; British Soldiers Arriving in Korea

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

MACARTHUR: Truman Applies Gag

The now famous note of Gen. Douglas MacArthur to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, which President Truman personally ordered withdrawn, gave the people of the U.S. the almost unparalleled spectacle of a President telling an American general to mind his own business and leave foreign policy to the White House.

In his note General MacArthur declared Formosa is vital to America's far east defenses and must remain in non-Communist hands. He went so far as to say that many did not understand "the pattern of oriental psychology to respect and follow aggressive, resolute, and dynamic leadership."

To pursue any other course than holding our Pacific positions would expose our friends in the orient "to the lustful thrusts of those who stand for slavery against liberty, for atheism against God." The general's idea is that Formosa should be included in our Pacific positions.

In personally ordering the note withdrawn, the President set forth the official American policy—the United States has no designs on Formosa, we are guarding it to keep the war from spreading, and its future as a former Japanese territory is a subject for international settlement.

Republicans, however, quickly made political meat of the note and put it into the congressional record. Observers also were of the opinion Communist nations would use it as propaganda expounding U.S. 'imperialistic' designs upon Asia.

It is an unfortunate breach between the military and high civilian levels. Nothing like it has been spotlighted on the American scene since Lincoln's troubles with his generals and cabinet members.

POLITICS:

What's The Issue?

An unusual, almost unique, situation has developed on the American political scene. In the midst of war, with the highest number of employed in several years, with prosperity at a new peak, congress must adjourn soon so many of its members can campaign for reelection. But the question is: What will be the issues?

Four months ago there were a number of issues. Among them were such questions as reduced spending, slashing or increasing armed forces, and communism with the government. Many of those campaign issues have been cast aside and others must be found to take their place. Criticism of the conduct of the war seems the most likely.

The senators and representatives are faced with another question. Should they go home to campaign now, or wait until the international picture has cleared and the Korean war has reached a definite phase? They will be criticized whatever they do.

The political picture is further confused for a smashing pre-election victory in Korea could give the Democrats immediate needed support and would knock the Republicans' campaign of criticism of the war's conduct into the ash can.

It is one of the most unusual situations ever to face a congress.

CASUALTIES:

Climb to 100,000

The Korean war is now in its third month. In this time the war has taken a toll of more than 100,000 killed, wounded or missing on both sides.

It is a rough estimate, observers reported, with nothing official from North Korean sources, and United States losses are not up to date.

The estimate was broken down as follows:

North Korean losses — front line, 50,000; killed and wounded by strafing and bombing front, 20,000; losses among guerrillas and in sea actions, 10,000; civilians killed or wounded by long-range bombing attacks as announced by North Korean radio at Pyongyang, 11,582.

UN losses — American casualties (unofficials and estimated by several sources which were not named), more than 500; South Korean battle losses, more than 20,000; South Korean civilians, but no possible estimate.

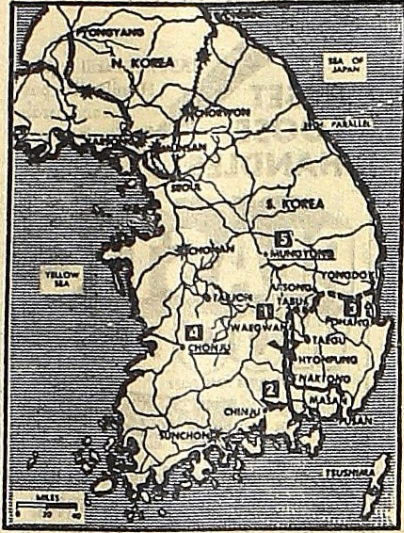

SOCIAL SECURITY:

10 Million Benefit

President Truman signed into law a vast expansion of social security which brings 10 million more workers under the law and, in some instances, increases benefits as much as 100 per cent.

The new law was not as far reaching as the President had campaigned for, but he called it "an outstanding achievement" nevertheless. The law will become active beginning October 1.

Air Strikes

As North Korean troops regrouped along the comparatively quiet Weywam-Tabu-Uisong (1) front, B-29 bombers and fighters continued strikes against rail marshalling yards, bridges and supply depots (bomb burst symbols). Communist attacks west of Mason (2) were countered and the South Koreans met a new drive on the east coast (3). Two main enemy headquarters are at Chonju (4) and Mungyong (5).

KOREA:

British Troops Arrive

Crack British troops—1,500 strong landed in Korea as U.N. forces continued to battle an increased Communist offensive from the north in the area of Pohang.

The British reinforcements were from Hong Kong and had been in training for mountain fighting for 16 months. They will operate under the command of Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of U.N. ground forces in Korea.

Meanwhile, bitter fighting on the east coast continued, in what military observers reported as a move by the invaders to cut in behind the vital communication center of Taegu. Frontal assaults on U.N. positions in that area repeatedly failed in recent weeks.

The Reds were reported using 40,000 troops along the jagged northern front, slipping strong patrols through the mountains to within 18 miles of Taegu.

In the air, United States planes continued to pound Red supply and manufacturing centers and give close support to ground forces.

The U.S. air force had flown 20,500 sorties since the beginning of the war and was credited with severely crippling the enemy. Confirmed destruction of 111 Red tanks was among the results listed, with no evaluated estimates on the number knocked out in more than 600 attacks on tanks, armored cars and half-tractor vehicles.

SOVIETS:

A New Trend

A new trend of thought has efused from the Korean war. It is based on the assumption that the struggle now has entered the critical stage and the battle lines are fairly well stabilized, and, that the men in the Kremlin now must know beyond question that North Korean forces are doomed to defeat.

The new thought is simply this: The Communists have decided what their next major move is to be and are getting set to make it.

Western diplomats believe the Soviets and their satellites have three courses open to them at this point:

First, they may occupy North Korea in an effort to prevent the U. S. - U. N. forces from crossing the 38th parallel and moving in close to Manchuria and the Russian port of Vladivostok.

Second, being confronted with the prospect of a North Korean defeat, they may make an effort to settle the fighting in some manner acceptable both to Russia and the west.

Third, they may send armed forces into the fight on the side of the North Koreans in open defiance of the U.N.

Many United States officials believe the first of the three courses is the most likely one to be employed by the Soviets. These officials believe that Russia is still anxious to avoid moves which might lead to a general war.

Employment

As the Korean war entered its tenth week the United States was experiencing a steadily tightening labor market. Unemployment was relatively low and more than 61 million persons had jobs.

In some instances there were reports of labor "pirating" and other industries, especially aircraft, sent out scouts for skilled technicians. The situation was not likely to improve.

RAILROADS:

Strike Called Off

An unexpected strike threat, involving 131 major railroads and an estimated 1,700,000 rail workers, was called off by the unions after President Truman issued an executive order for federal seizure of the railroads.

Acting quickly to prevent a national emergency, the President ordered Secretary of the Army Frank Pace to take over the rail lines and operate them "in the name of the United States government."

Within an hour the unions issued a statement: "The men we represent will work for the government gladly under government operation of the railroads during this period of crisis until this dispute can be settled on its merits through mediation."

For the past 18 months rail unions and management have been deadlocked in a wage and hour dispute. The unions have demanded a 40-hour week and a 31-cent-an-hour wage boost for yard workers to keep their take-home pay the same as it has been for the present 48-hour week.

Observers pointed out it was the fifth time in 32 years that the government has stepped in to take control of the nation's rail system. And most members of congress gave quick approval of the President's order.

The unions considered the government seizure of the roads a victory for their side, but any jubilation was quickly dampened with the announcement by White House press secretary Charles G. Ross that "the government doesn't intend to conduct negotiations with the union." Such negotiations will continue between unions and railroads with a federal mediator available "if needed."

APPROPRIATIONS:

Stagers Imagination

The house sent to the senate two appropriation bills that staggered the average American's imagination and caused many to ask: "Where's the money coming from?"

One was an emergency bill of $16,771,333,379 to help rearm this country and its allies, passed by a roll call vote of 310 to 1, and the other, a general appropriation bill of $35,554,490,425.

The senate approved the general appropriation bill the following day and sent it to President Truman for his signature.

The emergency bill included the big appropriation to purchase 5,333 warplanes and boosts to more than $30 billion the military outlays set up for this year.

As an idea how the money will be spent, the bill included $260 million for work on the hydrogen bomb and the atom bomb, $598,637,370 to stockpile strategic materials, $4,535,400,000 for the air force, $2,648,029,000 for the navy and $3,063,547,000 for the army.

In addition, there was $62,655,850 to strengthen the state department's "Voice of America" program.

The general appropriations bill carried a proposed $62,500,000 loan to Spain. It was approved by a standing vote of 165 to 90. No administration leaders spoke against the measure, which was surprising since President Truman and the state department had strongly opposed it and it had never been approved by the congressional committees' having charge of foreign policy.

Representative Smith of West Virginia made a bitter attack against the Spanish loan, pointing out that "we have here an almost ridiculous situation where an attempt is being made to write foreign policy in an appropriation bill on the floor" of the house.

Crime Probers

David Lubben, Hillsdale, N.J., candy maker, is shown chatting with Jack Elich, investigator for the senate crime committee. Lubben testified that "hoodlums" working for Frank Costello muscled him out of a business worth almost a million dollars a year. His testimony was taken in connection with a hearing into activities of New York gangsters accused of operating a $10 million black market in sugar.

COLLISION:

18 Persons Dead

The navy hospital ship Benevolence was rammed and sunk by the freighter Mary Luckenback in a dense fog just outside of San Francisco's famous Golden Gate with a loss of 18 lives. The navy announced 469 persons were rescued.

The Benevolence sank on her side within 20 minutes after the collision as she returned to port from a trial run.

The meeting adjourned after only 35 minutes discussion. Malik announced that the meeting failed to reach an agreement on the issue of inviting the North Koreans to the council's public sessions. The U.S. and others have declared they will not consider any invitation to the North Koreans until council security resolutions are obeyed.

PLEAD FOR UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING . . . Gen. Omar Bradley (left), chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and defense secretary, Louis Johnson (right), went before the senate armed services committee recently to strongly endorse universal military training legislation for the assured safety of this country throughout the years to come. Bradley said he believes some provision must be made to dovetail selective service and universal military training. The defense secretary stated that lack of United States preparedness is "alarming our friends and encouraging potential aggressors." Sponsors of universal military training say UMT would have prevented the Korean war.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

United States' Oldest Executive Department Began Duties 1789

By WALTER A. SHEAD

DEAN GOODERHAM ACHESON
SECRETARY OF STATE
Born April 11, 1893, in Middletown, Conn., son of Edward Campion Acheson, Schools; Grace; A. B., Yale, 1915; LL.D., 1936; honorary L.L.D., Wesleyan, 1947. Married Miss Alice Stanley, May 6, 1917. Children—Jane (Mrs. Dudley W. B. Brown); David Campion Acheson, Mary Eleanor (Mrs. William F. Bundy). Private secretary to Louis D. Brandeis, associate justice of the U.S. supreme court, 1919-21; with Covington, Burling and Rublee, 1921-33; appointed under secretary of treasury, May 10, 1933, resigned November 15, 1933; member Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson and Shorb, Jan. 1, 1934-Jan. 31, 1941; appointed assistant secretary of state, Feb. 1, 1941; under secretary of state, Aug. 27, 1945-July 1, 1947; secretary of state, 1949. Ensign, U.S. Navy, World War I.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The department of state of the United States of America is the official channel through which the American people conduct their relations with the other peoples and governments of the world. It is the oldest of the executive departments of government and went into action in 1789 with Thomas Jefferson as the first secretary of state.

Because of the fact that this nation was traditionally self-sufficient and isolated and aloof from the rest of the world until the advances of technology conquered time and distance, the people of this nation probably know less about the state department than any other branch of government.

However, since World War I the state department has been growing, not only in its dealings with the rest of the world, but in the impact of its actions and its policy upon the everyday life of every individual American citizen.

What the American people are concerned with now is just this: What about the department of state today? Who are the men and women who comprise its personnel roster of some 22,000 employees? Where do they come from? How are they chosen for the tasks assigned them?

And above all, what is the foreign policy of this nation and how is this policy formed? This series of articles, of which this is the first, will attempt to deal objectively with this subject and answer some of these questions.

THERE ARE TWO main premises upon which to spotlight the state department. First, the department proper has about 8,000 employees, most of whom are stationed in Washington. These comprise the general management and functional and operational segments of the department. Then second, there are about 14,000 persons in the foreign service who staff the more than 280 embassies, legations, diplomatic missions and consular ILENE WOODS, singer on the CBS, "Steve Allen" show and the voice of Walt Disney's "Cinderella," was a radio personality in Portsmouth, N. H., her home town, when she was 11. For singing on two local programs she was earning $11 a week. She was on a network show before finishing high school; then Paul Whiteman engaged her. Two Hollywood-produced shows took her west. Her husband is a musical arranger there, and they have a two-and-one-half year old daughter. Miss Wood's break in the "Cinderella" movie came as a result of her helping one of the Disney organization staff make some test records. Hers was perfect.

Well Made Plans of Men Go Wrong - Without Murder

By BILLY ROSE

If you've nothing better to do for the next three minutes, let's play a game called "Answer Yes or No."

Question: If a doctor were accused of allowing a mean old man to die who had only a week to live anyhow, and you were on the jury, would you find him guilty of murder?

A dopey question, you say, because it leaves you no choice? Well, let me brief you on the events leading up to the crime and then put the question to you again.

The mean old man—let's call him Andrew Horton—was a millionaire of the almost extinct rough-'em-up Jay Gould school, and among the people he delighted in pushing around was his son, Andrew, Jr. To round out the picture, it must be admitted that the youngster pretty much hated this treatment: He was a weak-chinned and weak-willed society kid who in his teens had developed a cordial dislike for two things—(a) work, and (b) his father who insisted on it.

A few months after the boy's 21st birthday, the old man came down with a heart attack that all but did him in, and the specialist who was called in informed the son that his pop didn't figure to live more than a week or so.

Billy Rose

coming of fortune, the young man went out and tied on quite a package, and on the way home drove his car through a plate-glass window on Madison avenue. He was arrested and promptly bailed out, but the story hit all the front pages.

When his father saw the papers the next morning, he almost had another stroke, and it didn't help when the boy faced up to him and blurted out that in a short time he'd be doing as he darn well pleased.

When his son left, the millionaire sent for his lawyer. "I'm going to teach that kid of mine a lesson," he told him. "Fix up a new will where he doesn't get a penny and bring it back this afternoon. The doctor can witness my signature."

"What beneficiary do you want to name?" asked the lawyer.

"Make it out to one of those outfits for medical research," said the old man.

THAT AFTERNOON the will was

THE FICTION CORNER

FRESH FISH

By Richard H. Wilkinson

"IN HEAVEN'S name," Tommy Hunter cried, "why can't we get married? We love each other! There is nothing that stands between our complete happiness, but the consent of a bi—"

"Of my father, Tommy," Dolores interrupted him gently. "That is a big obstacle, my dear. In my country, girls do not marry without the consent of their parents."

"Rats," said Tommy. "You mean you won't break it! You don't love me!"

"All right," he said. "I can't see it your way, but I guess I've got to take it—and like it."

He left her abruptly, crossed the sun-bathed patio of the old Spanish hacienda and entered the door on the opposite side.

Inside the small room Tommy saw a white-haired old man taking his ease in a chair near a window.

"Senor Jacinto," the youth began, "I come to you again and for the last time and in all humbleness to ask the hand of your daughter. I—"

"And for the last time," interrupted the old man angrily, "I refuse. My daughter is descended from a noble and proud family. She deserves a husband of distinction and wealth."

"You mean," said Tommy, "that you will sell your daughter to the man who will lend you enough money to increase your measly fish business. A fish peddler dishing out stuff about noble ancestors! Bah!"

"Get out of my house, you American adventurer! And if you come back once more, I will turn you over to the police!"

Back at his hotel Tommy's spirits sank to a low ebb. He had not the remotest idea how to persuade Senor Jacinto to consent to his marriage to Dolores.

Suddenly Tommy leaped to his feet. He could not provide funds to help Dolores' father expand, but on the other hand...

Early the next morning the streets of Ortega rang to the cry of "Fish! Fresh Fish!" delivered in a strange and foreign dialect. Housewives rushed to their doors and smiled over the odd sight of a blond-haired American youth pushing a cart in front of him on which reposed a canvas tarpaulin covering great quantities of fresh fish. Curious, they stopped and questioned him, were astonished to learn that his price was far below that of Senor Jacinto.

NEWS of the oddity spread rapidly and before noon Tommy had sold out his supply. On the next day it was the same, and again on the day following.

A week passed and Tommy had worked up a nice business. Occasionally he saw Senor Jacinto, but the old man passed him by with never a word, but glowering looks.

On the eighth day Senor Jacinto stopped him on a deserted street. "This is an outrage! Ortega is not big enough for two fish dealers. One of us will have to go."

"What a pity you are planning to leave the land of your birth where you own a fine house and have many friends."

"What a pity you are planning to leave the land of your birth where you own a fine house and have many friends."

Senor Jacinto choked with rage. "It is you who will go. I was here first. I built up the fish business here. You will have to go!"

"Gladly," said Tommy. "The moment you consent to my marriage to Dolores, I am not a fish dealer by trade. I am a surveyor. I would like to continue to be a surveyor, but not alone."

"Never!" shouted the angry man. Tommy shrugged and shook his head sadly. "It is a pity." "Fish!" he called at the top of his voice. "Fresh fish!"

Senor Jacinto nearly burst a blood vessel. "Stop!" he shrieked. "The very sound of your voice is like a knife in my side. Take my daughter and the devil with you both! Only leave me in peace!"

Dolores was waiting in the patio when Tommy came for her. "You are a very good fish peddler," she said. "Will you always be a fish peddler?"

"Only," said Tommy, "if your father should change his mind about consenting to our marriage."

A flourishing industry sixty years ago in Sherman township was the apary of Matthias Schneider & Sons. With at times more than 400 hives of bees producing honey, the product was sold by the wagon load in the then flourishing towns of AuSable and Oscoda. In later years it was shipped to Ohio and Pennsylvania. Starting with the hunting of wild bees in the early days, the business increased until the Schneiders had hundreds of swarms and their apary was equipped with machines to manufacture their own hives.

Matthias Schneider, had seven sons, Matthias, John, Fred, Joseph, Frank, Anthony and Charles. The older boys were interested in the business and the oldest, Matthias, was the principal operator. Following his death in 1893, the Schneiders gradually went out of the bee business.

SPONTANEOUS IGNITION FIRES PLAGUE FARMERS

President Truman has called upon the country to observe Fire Prevention Week October 14. Preventing fires is particularly important to the American farmer, because usually farmers are highly vulnerable to fire due to their isolated location, lack of water supplies, and high combustibility of their properties.

One hazard that plagues the farmer particularly is the outbreak of fires from spontaneous ignition. The National Fire Protection Association, which sponsors Fire Prevention Week annually in cooperation with the Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture Extension Services, had his to say about this serious fire hazard today:

"To thoroughly cure hay and pea vines and other roughage. Do not allow horse manure to accumulate in large piles in stables or against buildings.

Horse manure and undercured hay will heat spontaneously when stored in large piles. This heating may continue until the temperature of ignition is reached.

Frequent observation of the stored hay should be made for several weeks or as long as there is any evidence of heating. Hay which is heating excessively should be removed from the barn; but first, the heating area should be thoroughly wet with water. Fire department hose should be ready to combat possible fire. The hay should be transported a safe distance from building's walls, as it may burst into flames later.

The trick in making sure your farm is safe from hay-fire hazard," the National Fire Protection Association concluded, "is to institute regular over-all inspections of your property not only during Fire Prevention Week but during the other fifty-one weeks of the year as well."

Tractor Death Causes

Main causes of deaths from tractor accidents are: (1) overturning; (2) falling from tractor; (3) leaving power take-off parts unguarded; (4) catching loose clothing in moving parts; (5) oiling or adjusting tractor while in operation, and (6) falling to keep children off of tractors.

FARM FACTS

County
Agricultural Agent

by Harold R. Clark, Co. Agent

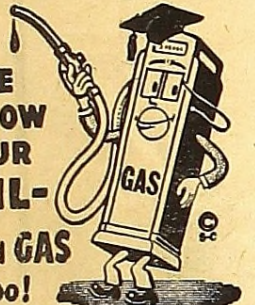

According to conservationists, no land is waste land, and it seems that all lands have a definite economic value if put to its proper use. This principle is being proven by the members of the AuSable Forestry Products Cooperative. Several years ago a small group of men under the direction of Bill Piper organized this cooperative and sold pulp wood on cooperative basis.

During and following the war there was a big demand for pulpwood and the pulpwood business flourished. Suddenly the supply caught up with the demand and the cooperative found themselves without an outlet for their winter's work. Then Bill, Swede Fransson and Pete Peterson looked for new outlets. They learned that farmers in the southern part of the state were in need of fence posts and they wanted these fence posts to last. Knowing that by treating our native woods with pentene they can produce a post with excellent durability.

So now fence posts is an added line. The cooperative purchased a few acres from Tom Hill and are installing a post treating plant and this will be the storage lot. V. B. "Jim" Shultz has recently been employed as field manager and it is his responsibility to supervise the production of the supply and find markets for their products.

Talking with Jim recently he states that right now the demand for pulp wood is high and he needs lots of cutters. He also needs men to peel posts. At one cent a foot an expert could peel themselves a good job for part time farmers and laid off shop workers.

A mighty nice thing the Michigan Artificial Breeds Association is doing for our 4-H and FFA members is offering a complimentary service to any bonifide member who has a heifer or cow as a project. I am sure these boys will hesitate to use a scrub bull. All they have to do is to make application through our office and present duplicate applications to Tom Nelki, the inseminator. I am pleased that our local ABA is cooperating in this program.

Farmers who want to save their alfalfa for next year will not pasture nor cut it between now and October 15. This is the period in which the alfalfa roots build up its winter food supply (starch). Cutting or pasturing in September and October has been the principle cause of winter killing. It is quite safe to pasture after October 15.

My family and I were invited to attend the Farm Bureau picnic Labor Day and we are glad we went. About 50 families (total 150 persons) left their work and had themselves a good time. Games were organized by Lyle Bielby and George Smith and the athletes pitched horse shoes and played ball. The high lights of the day were the three ringers made by Mrs. Alton Long (hers was a clinche on the second hop), Mrs. Claude Harder and Miss Harder. Those ringers carried about the same significance as a home run in Briggs Stadium. The usual bountiful potluck lunch put everyone in a good mood to hear Clark Brody relate interesting facts about the Farm Bureau. Jim Mielock did his usual good job as master of ceremonies. Short speeches by Arlo Wasson and Bill Parker ended the dinner program.

The Juniors beat the old men in soft ball by a score of 15 to 16. I had a hard time to convince either side that I was unprejudiced as an umpire, but I came out of it without a bump.

Everybody had a good visit and became better acquainted with the neighbors. Credit for the success should go to Mrs. Charles Kobs, Chairman, Mrs. Lloyd Newvine, Chairman of the reception committee, Henry Hobart, Marshall, and Lyle Bielby and George Smith, recreation leaders.

4-H Club Leaders Honored for Years of Service at Show

At special ceremonies during the State 4-H Show at Michigan State College, one hundred and fifty-four 4-H Club Leaders were honored for their years of voluntary service as leaders, announced Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent.

The 4-H leader in Iosco county receiving awards was: Mrs. Ella Kaven, of Hale. Because Mrs. Kaven was unable to attend the State 4-H show in Lansing, she will be awarded her pin at the Fall Achievement Day.

One emerald award for 25 years service and 12 diamond pins for 20 years of service were awarded. Gold pins were presented to 107 leaders for 10 years of leadership and pearl pins to 35, for 15 years. One leader received both a pearl and gold pin.

4-H CLUB NOTES

4-H Club Reporters Say—

Jack Ward is attending Conservation Camp this week at Higgins Lake. This camp under the supervision of the 4-H Club Department of Michigan State College is held each year to train potential Junior Leaders and 4-H leaders on technical in teaching conservation and forestry practices. When Jack returns, he will assist in the organization of a conservation club in Whittemore. What he will have learned at camp will be a great deal of help to his community club.

Monday, September 18 is the date of a special meeting of the Iosco County 4-H Council Association. The meeting will be at Grant Town Hall and will start at 8:30 p. m. Committee reporting will include Awards and Achievement committee on candidates for county, state and national contests, program committees on Councils program for 1950-51. We urge parents, 4-H leaders and other adults to attend the meeting. This is one way to learn about your county 4-H Club program.

4-H Club members are completing their project reports before the September 25 deadline. Project and Community Leaders have been supplied with the necessary report blanks.

We just received word of the official placings on our State 4-H Show Demonstration team—Gailya Werth and Dorothy West, they took third place in State Competition. That is a real start. Good luck girls for another year.

Any community interested in starting a 4-H Club—Now is the time. A meeting of the parents of potential club members is the first step. When such a meeting is planned, call Marvin Davenport, District 4-H Club Agent in the Federal Building, East Tawas. He will be glad to explain the 4-H Club program to you.

Will Vote on Price Support

Potato growers in Iosco county will be asked to vote in a referendum that will determine whether Federal price support and an amended Federal marketing order for potatoes should be continued, Earl M. Partlo, chairman of the Iosco County PMA Committee, has announced.

The referendum, to be conducted by mail, will be held during the week of September 25 to 30 inclusive, and any grower who produced 1949-crop potatoes for market will be eligible to vote.

A ballot, a copy of the amended marketing order, instructions for voting, and a postage free addressed envelope for returning the ballot to referendum headquarters will be mailed to all known eligible potato growers in the county sometime prior to September 25, Mr. Partlo said. Growers will then have until September 30 in which to mark their ballots and place them in the mail for return to R. E. Keller, an official of the U. S. Department of Agriculture in Chicago who has been appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture as his agent in conducting the referendum.

In addition to Michigan growers, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and North Dakota growers will also be asked to vote in the same referendum, as well as growers in several counties of Indiana and Iowa.

Specifically, growers will be asked to signify whether they approve or disapprove the issuance of Federal Marketing Order No. 60, with amendments, authorizing regulations of the handling of potatoes grown in the North Central potato production area (Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, and the several commercial counties of Iowa and Indiana).

The order must be approved by at least two-thirds of the growers voting in the referendum, by number, by volume or by volume of production, before it can be issued by the Secretary of Agriculture.

The law (Public law 471, 81st Congress) requires that no price support shall be made available for potatoes of the 1950 crop if proposed marketing orders are disapproved by producers voting in referendums.

So in effect, the chairman explained, the growers will actually be given the opportunity to vote on the question or not they want price support continued on potatoes for the 1950 crop.

IS YOUR FARM READY?

Since the production of food is so important in a national mobilization program, Earl M. Partlo, chairman of the Iosco County P. M. A. committee urges every farmer of the county to ask himself, "Would my farm pass a physical?"

"If all the farms of Iosco county were given notice to report for war food production service, how many would be in Class 1-A and how many in 4-F?"

"Are they physically fit or are they anemic, washed out, gullied and unfit for either military or civilian food production service?"

With these pointed questions, the chairman calls attention to the vital part the Nation's farms have in any program of national mobilization.

On the reassuring side, he calls attention to our existing stockpiles of food and to what many of the farmer of Iosco County have been doing through cooperation in the Agricultural Conservation Program to keep their farms prepared. This year 509 of the 949 farms in the county are "signed up" to carry on soil conserving and soil improving practices approved by the ACP program.

Inspect Grain Now for Insect Damage

Bran bugs and weevils are big enemies of grain stored in granaries, points out county agricultural agent Harold R. Clark. He urges farmers to inspect their stored grain regularly from now on insects.

Damp grain tends to heat and it is in heated grain that these pests may be at work. Bran bugs and weevils can cause grain to heat enough to cause great damage in addition to the injury done by their feeding. Warm weather during the fall is very favorable for grain insects.

Fumigation is the best way of getting rid of bran bugs and weevils once they infest the grain. Ray L. Janes, extension entomologist at Michigan State College, advises that careful attention must be paid to the conditions under which fumigation is done. The granary must be tight enough to prevent the fumigating material from escaping through the walls and floor while fumigating is being done. The temperature of the grain must be above 65 degrees Fahrenheit when the work is done. The fumigant should be used according to directions obtainable from the agent's office.

Janes recommends a mixture of three parts of ethylene dichloride and one part of carbon tetrachloride for fumigating. The carbon tetrachloride is essential because ethylene dichloride is explosive when used alone. Both are poisonous and must be used with great care. Avoid breathing the fumes. The mixture is used at the rate of one gallon to 200 bushels of grain.

Take the capacity of the granary into consideration, since one gallon of the mixture will not be enough for 200 bushels of grain in a 1000 bushel capacity granary. County agricultural agent, Clark, can give further information on the fumigation of stored grain.

Better Buy Buick!

YOU CAN SEE here how smart it is—don't have to be told that it's the most quickly identified car on the road today.

You probably know that the engine under that broad bonnet is a Fireball straight-eight valve-in-head engine and a lively stepper in any company.

You can check the abundance of its room by the simple expedient of taking the family and trying out its spaciousness at the nearest Buick dealer's—and a very few minutes on the open road will satisfy you that all-coil springing, low-pressure tires and Buick's torque-tube drive really do produce a ride that is matchless for its soft comfort.

BUT RIGHT NOW, it may be that the money angle is the thing uppermost in your mind, and on that we'd like to make two points:

All our records go to show that this is the most economical Buick ever built. It is easy on gas, on oil, on tires, on upkeep.

And if you choose it with

Dynaflow Drive,* it immediately eliminates all chance of friction-clutch repair and replacement—not to mention greatly reducing rear-axle and transmission maintenance.

Best of all, your initial outlay is a highly favorable one—whatever Buick you buy. For these brawny straight-eights—built rugged and solid for durable service—are priced at a level that makes them a standout buy in any price class.

Yes, better buy a Buick. Your dealer will be glad to demonstrate, glad to work out all the arithmetic of a deal. See him right away and get an order signed.

Attraction
Mr. Holt, the proprietor of a cigar store, was worried. His competitor was attracting crowds to his window by employing a vivacious Spanish girl to sit in it and roll cigars, meanwhile "giving the eye" to the boys outside. Mr. Holt had an idea. Next morning a blonde was rolling cigars in his window—but with her back to the street. There soon was a crowd—inside the store.

Keep Him Caged
When she was four, her parents decided it was time to take little Anne to church. So the following Sunday she accompanied them to services. The minister, up high in his pulpit, was earnest and vigorous. His voice rolled out over his flock in loud tones and low, as he waved his arms and twisted his torso. And he completely fascinated small Anne. Finally, clutching her father's arm, she asked worriedly, "What do we do if he gets out?"

Tight Rope

By Allison L. Burks

Grandmother Thorndyke, who has been told the beautiful girl in her home is her granddaughter, Dorinda LaCroix, begins to suspect a conspiracy. She has asked to see a scar which the real Dorinda had on her wrist. Fay Thorndyke, her niece, and fiancée of Edward Thorndyke, the old lady's son and instigator of the masquerade, attempts to prevent the expose, but Mrs. Thorndyke holds on, pushes up the false Dorinda's sleeve. There is no scar and she knows the truth. She is prostrated with a heart attack from the shock and Stella Moore, unemployed secretary who is pretending to be Dorinda at the request of Edward, suffers acute remorse. The family physician, warns against any more shocks.

CHAPTER VIII

"Fay," Dorinda faltered, "Carol says that Grandmother died last night. We want you to tell Uncle Edward."

Fay's face was very still. But a quick flash of calculation stirred for a moment in the depth of her eyes. She came out in the hall and closed the door behind her.

"I can't say that I'm surprised," she said slowly. "I had a feeling that this might happen. I'll tell Edward."

Dorinda watched Fay as she went down the hall to Edward's room. She rapped quickly, then stepped inside. It was five, ten minutes before the door opened and she came out. Edward followed her. He wore a robe of heavy plum-colored damask, his damp hair still held the mark of the brush. As he came closer, Dorinda could see that his white face was oddly crumpled, his eyes red-rimmed and clouded with suppressed tears.

"She—she's gone, Dorinda." The words rasped in his throat. He reached out and took her hand, his clasp so tight she gave a gasp of pain.

Fay was impatient. "She was nothing to Dorinda."

"Yet she's the only one who really cares." But he dropped the girl's hand and went toward Grandmother's room with Fay.

Carol Fears Blame For Nap During Duty

Mrs. Thorndyke lay on the high carved bed. Carol had straightened her fragile figure and folded the thin hands across her breast. Except for the gray unnatural pallor of her face, she looked asleep. Yet hardly a peaceful sleep for lines of pain limned the quiet mouth where traces of the soft rose lipstick still lingered.

Edward dropped on his knees by the bed. "Mother," he whispered harshly, "Mother, forgive me."

Dorinda standing beside him, caught the words. Apparently Fay did, too, for she said crisply, "Please, Edward. There's no need for dramatics. How did this happen, Carol?"

Carol took a deep breath. There was a defensive note in her voice when she spoke. "Dr. Evans gave the sedative before he left. I took off her bed-jacket but he said not to disturb her so I didn't even remove the makeup I'd put on in the afternoon. She went to sleep right away."

She looked at Edward, who had risen to his feet and stood dabbing at his eyes with his handkerchief. Her tone carefully excluded Fay.

"I sat here reading until two o'clock. I felt her pulse again then. She seemed to be all right and was sleeping peacefully, so I went down to the kitchen and made myself some coffee. I wasn't gone long—fifteen or twenty minutes perhaps. When I came back she didn't appear to have stirred so I took off my uniform and put on my robe and lay down on the couch here in the room."

"I went to sleep quickly. Everything seemed as it should be. Dr. Evans hadn't thought it necessary to have a special night nurse. And I'm a light sleeper. If she'd called or made a sound of any kind, I'm sure I would have awakened."

"I slept right through until eight o'clock. When I went to look at her I thought at first she was still asleep. But she wasn't asleep—" She stopped, swallowed, blinking a little. "I can't think I'm to blame."

"We're not blaming you, Carol," Edward assured her hastily. His hands tied and untied the cord of his damask robe.

"I don't want to look at her. She wouldn't have liked it—us looking at her when she was helpless. She was always independent." He cleared his throat. "She asked so little, poor Mother."

"But what she did ask, she had to have," Fay declared. She displayed no grief, only a sort of futile anger. Yet as she looked at his pain-filled face a protective tenderness came into her own. She laid her hand on his arm and close at his side, went with him out of the room."

Dr. Evans was just entering the downstairs hall. His plump fussy face was perturbed, his kindly eyes troubled behind his eyeglasses. He looked up and saw them and came running up the stairs.

"This is sad news, Edward," he clucked. "I didn't anticipate another attack so soon. But in these heart cases, one never can tell."

There was a knock at the door. Carrie came in bearing a tray with a silver pot and a cup and saucer. "Mr. Greer thought you'd want coffee," she explained, and set the tray down on the bedside table.

"It's terrible sad about Mrs. Thorndyke," Carrie said awkwardly. Her strong bony hand smoothed the dresser scarf. "I'm awful sorry, Miss."

"Thank you, Carrie." Dorinda pressed her hand against her eyes. She wouldn't cry, she mustn't cry. If she started, she'd never stop. "I'm going to miss her," she added, trying to keep her voice steady.

"We're all going to miss her, Miss Dorinda." Carrie's deep-set eyes filled with tears. "We all loved her. I just wanted to tell you how me and Mr. Greer feel—" She stopped as someone rapped lightly on the door.

"May I come in?" Carol's voice asked.

"Yes, do come in, Carol," Dorinda urged gladly.

Her face brightened as she saw the silver coffee pot. "Oh, coffee!" she cried. "Is there any left?"

Fay's face was very still.

"Plenty," Dorinda assured her. "But I've no cup. Wait, I'll wash this one."

She went into the white-tiled bathroom and ran hot water over the thin china cup. She washed and dried the silver spoon.

Carol took the filled cup from her with a sigh of pleasure. She lit a cigarette and leaned back in her chair. "This is the first chance I've had to relax this morning." She drew on the cigarette deeply. "Sometimes it seems to me people think a nurse never gets tired or needs to rest. They expect her to be something more than human." The tip of her pink tongue touched her lips. "I'm sure Miss Thorndyke blames me for sleeping at all last night. But I'd had no rest since six o'clock yesterday morning."

Carrie Begins Stripping Away Coverings on Bed

"She couldn't really blame you," Dorinda said. "And Uncle Edward understands, I'm sure."

"Yes, he is—he has always been—very kind. But I guess the truth is, I feel a little conscience-stricken myself. Though Dr. Evans tells me I shouldn't. It was so unexpected, there wasn't any reason to think she would die like that." Carol blinked. "I thought a lot of her, Dorinda."

She laughed a little forlornly. "I want to go some place where I can have fun and wear pretty clothes and feel like a live person again. Being on a case so long, one gets to be a sort of automaton. No one to talk to but an invalid, watching what you say, careful to avoid talking about anything unpleasant."

Carol ground out the end of her cigarette in the ash tray. She swallowed the last drop of coffee in her cup, then leaned forward, her hands clasped loosely about her knees.

"You know, Dorinda," she began thoughtfully, "we grieve for your grandmother, but after all, it was an easy way to go. Maybe it was the best thing that could happen to her. You see, her physical condition had improved but she had begun to fail mentally." She met Dorinda's eyes and looked away with a touch of embarrassment.

"Of course, I don't need to tell you that—she'd get notions about things and nothing you could say would change her. Mr. Thorndyke tried to tell her that scar had been removed by a plastic surgeon but she simply wouldn't listen to him. You'd have thought she'd believe him—her own son. I really felt sorry for him. But I had to tell him at last to let her alone. Arguing only agitated her more. As it was, she had quite a bad attack after he left."

She pulled herself to her feet. "It's done me a lot of good—the coffee, the cigarette and talking to you." She smiled gratefully at Dorinda. "I imagine I'll be around here for a few days. Mr. Thorndyke has asked me to sort out his mother's things."

A spark of excitement kindled in her black eyes. "He said, too, that I'd better stay until after the reading of the will. That he felt sure his mother had remembered me, I'd been her nurse for so long. Gee! Do you suppose it would be as much as a thousand dollars?"

She looked a little ashamed. "I oughtn't to say that. I'm sorry I did. Only money's so hard to get and it takes so long to save even a few hundred. You wouldn't know that, Dorinda. You're one of the lucky ones."

"Yes, I'm one of the lucky ones!" Dorinda echoed. Carol could not know the bitterness that accompanied the words. She watched Carol as she went out. She wished she could tell the little nurse how glad she, "the lucky one," would be to change places with her.

The long upper hall seemed dim, coming from the brightness of her room. As she headed for the stair, she almost ran into Carrie who, dust mop and broom in hand, was just outside Mrs. Thorndyke's door.

Dorinda stopped. "She—she's not in there, is she, Carrie?"

"Oh, no, Miss!" Carrie looked shocked. "They took her away. Mr. Greer told me to clean up the room." She pushed open the paneled oak door.

Carrie turned on the bedside lamp. Grandmother's bed was almost undisturbed, so quietly had she lain. The top sheet and blanket were folded back, the white pillow still held the imprint of her head. But Carrie stripped back the bed-clothes, threw the pillows to the middle of the mattress, preparatory to removing the snowy cases.

Dorinda Finds Lipstick Smears on Pillowcase

"Wait, Carrie, wait!" Dorinda caught the maid's wrist. She leaned across the bed and lifted the pillow on the farther side, a plump unrumpled pillow. She laid it down so that the lamplight struck it fully.

Carrie stared. At Dorinda's feet Randy growled softly.

Almost in the middle of the smooth linen surface, were two small smears, the shape of a mouth. The smears were light rose touched with mauve.

"You turned the pillow over when you threw it there." Dorinda was trembling, she didn't know why. "That stain—it's lipstick, her lipstick, Ash Geranium."

Carrie snapped out the bedside lamp. The room was dark once more. She laid the pillow with its ghastly stains in place again.

"I'm going to clean up the room, Miss." Carrie was already at the window, pushing back the heavy velvet draperies. "I'm going to vacuum and change the linens."

She added, her back still to Dorinda. "I'll leave that pillow case on till the last thing. Then it goes in with the rest of the laundry." She did not even turn as Dorinda left her.

The tall clock in the lower hall chimed the hour—twelve o'clock. Dorinda, her hand on the wide oak-ustrade, went down the stair, reluctant feet lingering on the carpeted treads. She didn't want to talk to Edward about this. She was tempted to keep quiet. But a force stronger than her own desire made her go on.

She did not find Edward downstairs. Greer told her he had gone to the funeral parlor and relief flooded her at the reprieve. In the living room she found Harriet with her inevitable knitting. Lana was there, too, perched in a window-seat, a box of chocolates and a motion-picture magazine on her lap, her pretty kittenish face sullen.

As Dorinda came in, she pushed the magazine off her lap to the floor. She patted back a yawn. "Oh, I'm bored to death," she declared shrilly. "How on earth do you stand it, Dorinda, hanging around her day after day?"

She bit into a chocolate, discarded it, picked out another. "Mother insists I have to stay here. 'Out of respect to Aunt Lucy,' she says. Suppose she is dead. What good am I doing by staying home on a scrumptious day like this?"

"Lana, you know Edward wouldn't approve of your going out so soon," Harriet protested.

"What do I care what that stuffed shirt thinks?" Lana's face hardened. She didn't look like a kitten now. The soft contours of her jaw sharpened, her round eyes narrowed, became more green than blue. "Mother is afraid Edward will throw us out now that Aunt Lucy's gone. She needn't worry." She spoke slowly, emphasizing each word. "Edward isn't going to throw me out."

"What do you mean, Lana?" Harriet demanded. She dropped her knitting into her lap. A hectic spot of color burned above each cheek-bone.

Brother to Jesus

Lesson for September 17, 1950

THEY WENT fishing together, no doubt; very likely they worked together in the shop; perhaps little James was the nuisance that small brothers sometimes are, but like all small brothers he would tag along when Jesus went walking over the Nazareth hills. As a man in later years he became influential and famous; indeed it was he who probably wrote the book in our New Testament called "James." But as a boy, his neighbors saw nothing remarkable in him. So completely commonplace was he, that as Mark 6 shows us, the natives of Nazareth couldn't believe that one of James' brothers could amount to anything.

Dr. Foreman saw nothing remarkable in him. So completely commonplace was he, that as Mark 6 shows us, the natives of Nazareth couldn't believe that one of James' brothers could amount to anything.

Unbeliever

FOR years and years James grew up with Jesus, boy with boy. They lived under the same roof, ate from the same dish. James may even have worn his big brother's outgrown tunics. All his childhood days he knew the care and love of the same mother Mary that Jesus had. Through all those "silent" years when Jesus lived and worked in Nazareth, James lived and worked beside him.

And yet, the strange thing is that when Jesus left the carpenter shop and went about "doing good" as Peter said, James did not believe in him. It seems clear from the story in Mark 3 that both Mary and the brothers (not James only) had the idea that Jesus was out of his mind. They came to get him and would have stopped his ministry at that point, if they could. John also mentions the fact that Jesus' own brothers did not believe in him.

It seems strange, yet the reason may not be hard to find. Perhaps it was a case of the old proverb, "Familiarity breeds contempt." Perhaps James had a sort of inferiority complex about himself, maybe he agreed with the villagers' low opinion about him, so that he could not believe that his brother could be the Christ. In any case it is plain that if miracles could ever have compelled belief, Jesus' miracles would have convinced James... but he was an unbeliever right through the day of Calvary.

Believer

PRECISELY what changed him was never known. Some anonymous writer in early times wrote a "Gospel of James"—a piece of fiction never accepted by the church as genuine. What we do know is what Paul tells us; that after his resurrection, Jesus "appeared to James." It may well be that James was convinced by the risen Christ as he had never been by the Carpenter of Nazareth.

Be that as it may, as time went on and Christians began to multiply in Jerusalem, James appeared as the leader of the Christians' Home Church. At the important conference held in Jerusalem to decide the church's first great controversy, it was James whose speech was the "last word" before the decisive vote.

Quality of Leadership

JAMES was not an accepted leader merely because he was a brother of Jesus. There were other brothers who remained quite obscure. James was a recognized leader because of his personal qualities. The reader is invited to study these out for himself. But there is one interesting and unusual combination of qualities in this man, strictness with himself, together with flexible generosity in dealing with others.

In Acts 21:17-26 it is clear that James kept all the laws of Moses himself—and expected other Jews to do the same. To the end of his life he was personally a rigid conservative. But when it came to other people, he was far more tolerant.

When the question arose, How much of Jewish law shall we expect Gentle Christians to observe? James agreed to the startlingly small nucleus of laws that the Jerusalem conference set forth as the absolute minimum for all. James did not wish his own conscience to bind every one else. He did not expect every one to be bound by his own pattern. He had high standards and he lived by them. But he did not use his own standards as a club with which to beat others over the head.

Powerful X-Ray Reduces Cancer Inside Bodies

LONDON—Cancers growing inside human bodies are being reduced or wiped out by a powerful new X-ray, medical scientists report.

The X-rays are 2,000,000 to 23,000,000 volts in power, the strongest ever used medically. They come from super X-ray machines of various kinds.

They can reach deeper into the body, with more punch. They don't affect all cancers, for some tumors resist X-rays or at least have not been affected by less powerful rays. One machine, a Van de Graaf generator, produces 2,000-volt X-rays. This means X-rays with double the power of all the medical radium in the world, said Dr. John G. Trump of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The rays can deliver 60 percent of their tremendous energy to cancers three or four inches deeper inside the body, he said. They speed through the skin, bone, and other tissues without doing much damage to these healthy tissues. They don't slow down enough for damaging work until they have gone a few inches.

A rediscovered trick of treatment makes the beam even more potent, Dr. Trump said. This is to put the patient on a turntable, revolving slowly, to change the angle of the X-ray bombardment.

The cancer then gets the X-ray from all sides. There is far less chance of injuring the skin where the beam enters, or other healthy tissue. This rotating idea was first tried in England nearly 40 years ago, but at a time when there were no X-ray beams that would concentrate deep in the body.

In 100 patients treated since last October, the cancers have shrunk each time, and some still are shrinking, Dr. Trump said. These included cancers of the head, neck, breast, lungs, and pelvic organs.

It still is too early to know whether anyone has been cured, but "we are hopeful the results will show more cures than by conventional methods of X-ray treatment," Dr. Trump said. The patients are far less likely to suffer from radiation sickness, he added.

Shrinking of deep cancers with 23,000,000-volt X-rays was described by Dr. Roger A. Harvey of the University of Illinois. These rays come from a betatron, a doughnut-shaped atom-smashing machine.

In 23 patients, all with advanced cancer, the cancer has shrunk each time, so far as can be observed, Dr. Harvey said. Whether any of the 23 will recover can't be predicted.

58 Persons Die in Crash Of DC-4 in Lake Michigan

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. — About 19 miles northwest of St. Joseph, at the bottom of Lake Michigan, is the remains of a giant DC-4 which crashed and carried 58 persons to their death in the worst air disaster in the nation's history.

It probably will never be known what caused the crash. Debris scattered over the area indicated a tremendous crash or explosion. Most pieces of wreckage were no more than inches square.

Searchers found hundreds of pieces of the foam rubber cushions. Coastguardsmen, using boat hooks, fished wreckage from the lake. They brought up a pair of brown wool trousers, the pockets empty and the buckle ripped from the belt.

There were some flight kits, maps bearing the name of Northwest Airlines, a man's white handkerchief, a bank book of the National City Bank of New York, a green jacket of a woman's dress, a man's shorts and parts of bodies.

Among the debris was a child's shoes and a little girl's rag doll. The doll was one of the few things that came out of the crash complete and intact.

Disintegration must have been complete when the plane struck the water. That was all that remained of a giant, proud airliner.

Prices Irr Cherry Grower; Orders Trees Cut Down

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich.—George Washington, so legend says, cut down one cherry tree. Fred E. Reed of Sutton's Bay did better than that, however. He ordered workers to cut down his orchard of 250 trees.

It all came about when Reed was offered only 4 cents a pound for his crop of Michigan sour cherries. "I'll clear the ground and raise strawberries," Reed declared flatly.

Last year's crop of Michigan sour cherries brought 9 cents a pound. Packers are offering 4 cents for this year's early crop, but promised growers additional payment (possibly up to 3 cents a pound) later if the price of the processed pack warrants it.

But Reed isn't interested in subsidy prices.

"When I can't raise cherries and make a profit without depending on price supports I'll quit growing them," he declared.

The only trees he left standing were a few for his personal use.

HOUSEHOLD TIPS

Prunes can be cooked without using any extra gas by setting the pot, with prunes and water, over the pilot light on your stove before going to bed at night. In the morning they'll be completely stewed.

Don't waste the last little bit of shortening in the container. Pour boiling water in, let it cool. Then skim the shortening off the top. If it's a glass container, be sure to put a spoon in before you pour the boiling water, to prevent cracking. In the case of cardboard containers, save the last bit of shortening by spreading the container flat and scraping it with a flat-bladed knife.

The night before baking day, wrap your shortening in waxed paper and put it into the freezing compartment of your refrigerator. In the morning it'll be hard enough to shred on a metal grater. This makes mixing it with the flour and other ingredients much easier.

DREAMS COME TRUE IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

QUEBEC, P. Q. (1950) . . . Day-dreaming about your holidays? Spread out a map of Quebec's North Country and count the little mountain lakes, if you can. Here the grey trout hides beneath the lily-pads, awaiting the glint of a spinner, and the black bass keeps a hungry eye alert for a bait expertly handled. All stocked with fighting fish of some variety, many of these lakes are part of a long chain, linked by cascading streams with deep, quiet pools where the speckled trout swirls the water with his tail. If the sport of rod and reel does not attract you, and you prefer to golf and swim, sail and loaf, ride and climb, paddle and eat, Quebec offers you all of these delights, and many more, either in the Laurentians, the Eastern Townships or Gaspé. Amid the soft, moss-green contours of the oldest mountains in the world, you will find sport and hospitality to suit every taste. After spending a few days in friendly, gay Montreal, where the old and the new so complement one another, or in unique Quebec city, you may motor to a pension in a quaint hamlet in the mountains; rent a log cabin in a grove of birches and be your own chef, or fly to a large resort on its own lovely lakes, with luxury accommodation and facilities for every kind of summer fun. —Adv.

Hospital Fare in 1873

Hospital patients did not "fare" any too well before 1873, the year that marked the origin of professional nursing in the U. S. Today's hospital meals are planned by dietitians and prepared by skilled chefs.
