VanArsdale was helping a friend, Charles Bolus of Detroit, who had never hunted deer with a bow and arrow before, find a likely looking spot to hunt. The two men spotted a nice six point buck and Bolus downed him with a good shot, the arrow hitting in the vicinity of the deer's liver.

Announces 2-Day Grand Opening

Invites Public to Visit His New Store

"We can give you better service in our new location," stated John Monarch in announcing the grand opening of his new men's furnishings store in the new Ransom Building on Lake street. The store was formerly located in the Tawas Recreation Building.

The grand opening will be held today and tomorrow, Friday and Saturday, and free flowers will be given to the first 200 women to visit the store.

The new building in which the Monarch Men's Wear store is now located was constructed last summer by Vernon Eskstein for Marvin Ransom, a Flint attorney, who has a summer home here and decided to invest in Tawas City business property. Of brick and concrete construction, it is a handsome structure and fully modern in every way.

Mr. Monarch said "I wish to thank the people of the community for the fine response to my removal sale and the co-operation given me in moving to this new location."

Monarch came here from Detroit four years ago, and in addition to operating an up-to-date men's furnishing store, has taken an active part in the affairs of our community. He recently completed a new home on south Lake street.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. N. Forces Surprise Communists With Amphibious Attack at Inchon; Ministers Plan European Defenses

EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.

KOREA:

Now the Offensive

With unexpected and dramatic suddenness the war in Korea turned from the defensive to the offensive.

It was sudden in that the American people were surprised that United Nations forces could be mustered to launch an offensive.

From June 25, when the Communist struck with surprising force and generalship, the people of America watched one continual withdrawal. They heard of one Communist advance after another and the fall of such cities as Seoul, Suwan, Kumsan and Taejon.

And then in one stroke General MacArthur launched an invasion of Korea over 100 miles behind the Communist lines at Inchon. Other forces landed at Yongdok and at points on the east coast.

The main invading force on the west coast at Inchon had one objective: the capture of Seoul, former capital of South Korea, and cutting the supply routes of the Communists from North Korea.

General MacArthur did not try to hide his eventual hopes for the operation. He wanted to cut Korea just below the 38th parallel and thus have the Communists armies between two hammers that would slowly but surely beat them to pieces and destroy them.

The initial invasion was successful. U. S. marine and army divisions captured Wolmi islands in less than an hour, overran Inchon and advanced on Seoul. Kimpo airfield, the best in Korea, was captured, and American troops stood at the outskirts of Seoul.

The southern offensive progressed slowly against stubborn Communist rear guard action. There were indications, however, that Communist defenses were crumbling.

SPYING:

Slack Admits Guilt

Alfred Dean Slack, a former chemist at a Syracuse, N.Y., plant, admitted in federal court at Greenville, Tenn., he was guilty of war-time spying for Soviet Russia.

Slack said he supplied Russian agents with a sample of RDX, a high explosive, and the formula for its manufacture.

U. S. attorney James M. Meek told the court there were "extenuating circumstances" in Slack's favor and recommended a 10-year prison sentence.

Meek told the court how Harry Gold, a Philadelphia biochemist now awaiting trial on espionage charges, made contact with Slack and asked him to obtain details of the manufacture of RDX.

Slack reportedly refused three times to give Gold the information, but when threatened with exposure as a "Soviet spy" obtained a sample of the explosive and the formula, and turned them over to Gold.

JAPAN:

Ready for Treaty

Since the end of the shooting war progress toward a Japanese peace treaty has been blocked because the big powers were divided over what the treaty should be and the procedure for drafting it.

Now, however, the United States has announced it is ready for a treaty and the state department representative John Foster Dulles instructed to begin "informal discussions."

Headliners

"That's a good sight for my old eyes," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said as he inspected six Red tanks, still smoking, where they had been knocked out near Seoul.

"If we lose, we lose forever," Bernard Baruch warned in his latest statement to the American people that all-out war must be waged by the U.S. to win in Korea.

"You see, kids, I happened to be caught in two wars inside 10 years, and the reason I am where I am today is because I am fighting for what I think is right," Pfc. John J. McCormick, 28, wrote in a letter to his two daughters. The letter was received three days after a telegram that informed Mrs. McCormick that her husband had been killed in Korea.

"If American warmongers force a war on humanity it will be their last war. The hate of honest and patient people will explode with a strength greater than any hydrogen bomb," shouted Soviet Marshal Semyon Bagdanow in a speech to bolster Russian morale.

BIG THREE: Not in Accord

Diplomatic sources noted with concern a break, although not considered too serious, in the relations of the Big Three foreign ministers in their first series of New York meetings.

Dean Acheson, representing the United States, Robert Schuman of France, and Ernest Bevin of Great Britain were not in accord on the U. S. proposal to rearm western Germany. That was the major source of disagreement.

The United States, through Acheson, had urged the 12-nation North Atlantic council to reach agreement in principle that western German forces should become part of the projected western European army.

The U. S. idea was that German troop units would be included in the western European army. France, however, indicated that she wanted to go slow and easy on the question.

The gist of the French attitude seemed to be that it was premature to agree immediately on the principle of eventual German rearmament. That attitude was understandable in that France had not forgotten, or is likely to forget, World War I or World War II, sparked by German aggression.

Observers said that there was a possibility that the foreign ministers might come to some sort of agreement in principle among themselves, though it might not be announced publicly.

The ministers discussed a broad range of urgent problems. A communique issued by the three said they were fully agreed that the most urgent problem was that of strengthening the defenses of the free world both in Europe and in Asia and were equally agreed that immediate effective steps must be taken to that end.

That, perhaps, was a true indication of the atmosphere in which the ministers worked. It was not a question of what had to be done, but the best way to accomplish it.

Follow Through

A second offensive against communism began shortly after the invasion of North Korea with the Voice of America beaming broadcasts to the far east describing the exploit.

Factual reports of the daring maneuvers topped all broadcasts to the far east and near east and shared first attention with the foreign ministers meeting in broadcasts to Europe.

MARSHALL:

Anger Close to Tears

In an atmosphere of bitterness that at times brought senators to their feet in anger that bordered on tears, congress cleared the way for General of the Army George C. Marshall, a soldier for 40 years, to serve as secretary of defense.

The waiver to the unification act which forbids the office of secretary of defense to a commissioned officer within 10 years of the end of his active service was approved by the house 220 to 105 and by the senate by 47 to 21.

But before the vote in the senate. William E. Jenner of Indiana took the floor and for an hour, while the senators sat in silence and shame, launched into an attack on Marshall's honor that astounded foes and friends alike.

It was the reappearance of the bitter core of isolationism and Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio and Sen. Kenneth Wherry of Nebraska immediately made it plain that they were not going along with Jenner's denunciation of General Marshall as a soldier and a man.

Taft opposed the waiver on the grounds that it would put a military man in the cabinet as head of the military establishment and would strike at the old American tradition of civilian control of military affairs. Taft also contended it would strengthen the position of the secretary of state "in relation to the Chinese Communists." That was as far as he would go.

Jenner, however, attacked Marshall as "either an unsuspecting stooge or an actual co-conspirator with the most treasonable array of political cutthroats ever turned loose in the executive branch of the government."

Sen. Scott Lucas of Illinois called Jenner's speech "reprehensible, irresponsible, the most diabolical speech in the halls of congress that I have ever heard in 16 years here." The Republicans in the senate were inclined to agree.

Most observers said that Jenner's attack on a man who has served his country for 40 years and is greatly respected by the American people in every walk of life, will have further and deeper repercussions. The Indiana senator is known as one of the most consistent isolationists in congress. His attack, although denied by such men as Taft and Wherry, still carries the label of the Republican party and may be reflected in the coming elections.

CONTROLS:

Curbs on Credit

With the restoration of government curbs on consumers' easy-payment credits affecting car, furniture and household equipment, 32 war materials—including steel, lumber, industrial alcohol, and nylon yarn—were placed under federal non-hoarding orders.

Although no consumer items were named, the "inventory control" was broader than had been expected. No shortages are expected to develop, but the move was made to prevent overbuying by businessmen.

N.P.A. administrator William H. Harrison said: "The purpose of the order is to make clear that national interest demands there be no accumulation of materials beyond what is needed for immediate production."

The new defense production law provides a $10,000 fine and one year in prison as maximum penalty for violations. Harrison ordered industry to "cancel, reduce, or defer" promptly any orders which already may have been placed, if they would bring stocks to an illegal size.

CIVIL-DEFENSE

Plan Handed Congress

A blueprint for a vast civil defense program, greater than that of World War II, was placed before congress. It was designed to rally the nation from an atomic attack and enable it to strike back swiftly and destroy the aggressor.

W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the national security resources board which drafted the plan, said the program was needed because for the first time since the war of 1812 "an enemy has the power to attack our cities, and for the first time in our history that attack may come suddenly, with little or no warning."

The board's report said, "Granted a few minutes' warning, casualties could be reduced by over 50 percent through proper organization and training in civil defense."

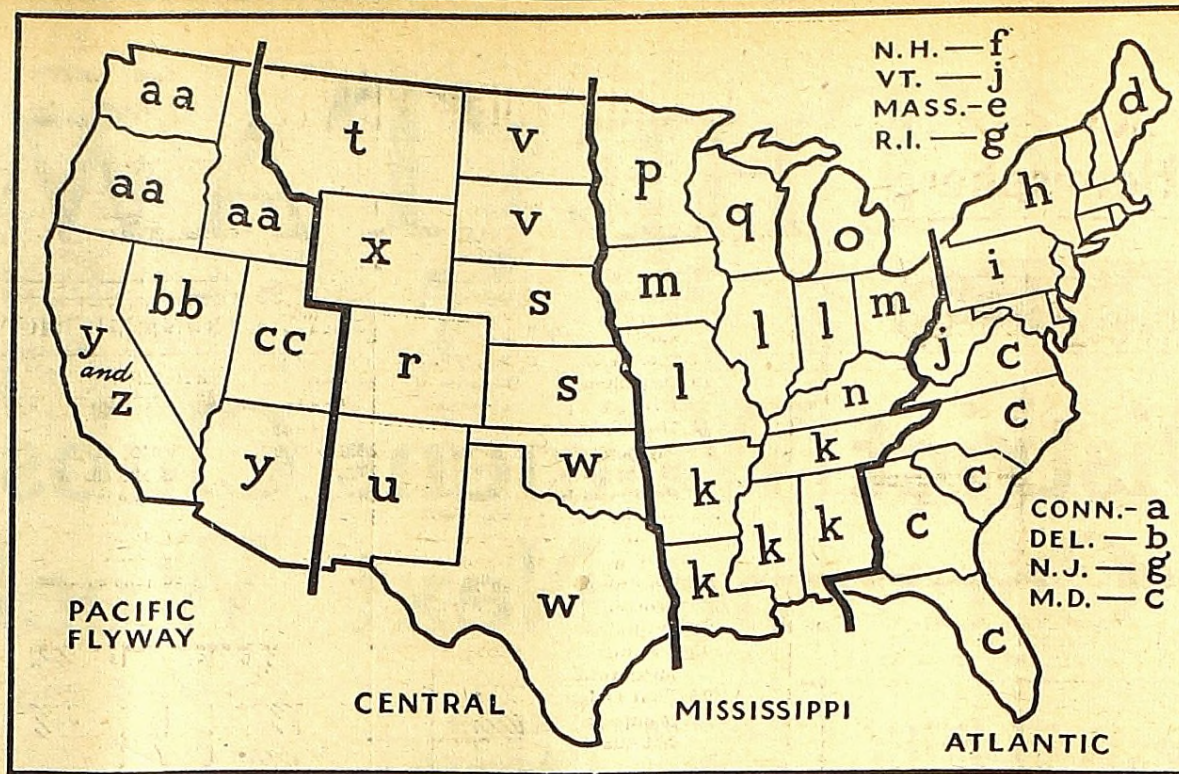

The program outlined a mutual-aid system reaching into every American home and calling for the services of hundreds of thousands of paid and unpaid workers at the federal, state, and local levels.

CONTRACTOR:

Tape Was Too Long

On the lighter side of the news, Michael O'Malley, a Chicago masonry contractor, sued F. W. Woolworth company and the Waterbury Lock & Specialty company for $20,000 for selling him a rule that was one foot too long.

O'Malley claimed the extra foot caused him to build several garages and a house a foot too big and he is being sued for not filling his contract.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

'Good Neighbor' Policy Proves Successful in This Hemisphere

By WALTER A. SHEAD

JOHN E. PEURIFOY SECRETARY OF STATE

Born Waterboro, S. C., Aug. 9, 1907. Son of John H. and Emil Wright Peurifoy. Student U. S. Military Academy, 1925-28. American University, 1935. Geo. Washington University, 1939-40. Married Betty Jane Cox, Oct. 2, 1936. Two children, John Clinton and Daniel Byrd. Entered department of state October 1, 1938. Designated deputy under secretary of state on May 31, 1940.

Washington, D. C.—There can be no doubt but that the foreign policy of the United States, as carried out by the state department, toward Latin and South America today has brought about stronger ties of friendship than has ever before existed.

The dollar diplomacy of by-gone eras has given away to the "good neighbor" policy of former Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and this has been carried on and strengthened by successive secretaries of state Edward Stettinius, James Byrnes, George C. Marshall and Dean Acheson.

Through the Pan-American Union, the inter-American affairs institute, as a result of non-aggression pacts and economic pacts of Mexico City and Rio de Janeiro, Bogota and Havana, there has come to be mutual cooperation and respect between the American republics.

The bureau of inter-American affairs in the state department is headed by Edward G. Miller, Jr., born in Puerto Rico, a graduate of Yale and Harvard, a former law partner of John Foster Dulles in New York, and who speaks Spanish and Portuguese as easily as he speaks English. In a recent address, Secretary Acheson said that as a result of Miller's operation of the inter-American affairs bureau "our relations with the southern hemisphere are on a basis which I think they have never been before. They are on a sensible, sound basis of mutual advantage, and both they and we know that we both really mean business when we talk and when we talk we want to talk business."

The main object of our foreign policy in the Americas is to maintain the security of our nation and of the hemisphere. Second our objective is to encourage democratic representative institutions and to cooperate in the economic field. It is our policy to strengthen the organization of the American states within the framework of the United Nations as the most effective expression of law and order in this hemisphere.

OUR FOREIGN POLICY with respect to Germany has been stymied for the time because of the Russian aggressive policy. But from the first we have supported a unified German government based on free and democratic elections. It is our policy to rebuild Germany economically with the help of the Germans themselves, but to keep from them the potentials of making war. As an occupying power it is our objective to prohibit institutions and activities dangerous to peace and to encourage a truly democratic society which can become again closely integrated with the free nations of Europe.

In the near east, Africa and south Asia our policy is to offer economic and technical assistance if these people want it. Also, we are ready, if they want our aid to help them solve their complex problems of internal, political and social life which such nations as India, Pakistan, the East Indian Republic and other newly formed nations in that area face as a result of the dislocation and disturbances following the war.

The foreign economic policy of the United States is aimed at breaking down barriers to world trade and to increasing the international flow of investment capital through the reciprocal trade agreements program, the proposed international trade organization and the point four program.

The Marshall plan, the North Atlantic pact, the military aid program and the Truman doctrine in Greece and Turkey have withered Communist hopes for over-running the European continent. Our support of the so-called Schuman plan, it is believed, will end their hope of communizing western Germany.

It may have appeared that we had neglected or abandoned Asia and China, but as a matter-of-fact, negotiations had been going on for some time with a number of nations for economic and technical assistance, particularly in the field of agriculture, before the invasion of Korea.

One of the things that has been lacking in United States foreign policy is an effective world information service to successfully combat the Russian propaganda of lies and deceit.

RONALD and Benita Colman had no idea, when they embarked on "The Halls of Ivy" series last January, that they were launching a show that would become so popular so soon. "Really adult entertainment" is the description given by its many devoted listeners. Not only the show, but its theme song, immediately became popular; in fact, so many people wanted a recording of the song that a record has been made by the group that sings it on the NBC Wednesday night broadcasts. College presidents and faculty members have praised the series; students lament the impossibility of finding a college president like Colman.

'Israel Revisited' Answer to What New Nation Is Like

By BILLY ROSE

Early in 1949, my missus and I took a trip around the world, and one of the countries we got to see was Israel. At the time, many of the streets of Tel Aviv, Haifa and Jerusalem were still criss-crossed with barbed wire, and the roads leading through the hills of Judea were littered with burned-out trucks. Nevertheless, thanks to an old Chevy and a pair of even older legs, I managed to see most of this tiny country, and when I left it a few weeks later I was pretty excited about what I had seen.

When we got back to New York, my old boss, Bernard M. Baruch, asked me to put my enthusiasm in my pocket and try to estimate Israel's chances of survival in this highly competitive world. I told him that one swing around the globe wasn't enough to make an economic expert out of a Broadway jumping-jack, but that I had come away from Israel with the general impression that its people were (a) intelligent, (b) tough as nails, and (c) prepared to work like all get-out to make a go of their new lives.

"A business or nation with those qualities usually gives a good account of itself," said Mr. Baruch.

SINCE MY VISIT, I've heard nothing to change my snap appraisal of Israel's chances. On the other hand, I've read darned little on the subject which could be classified as good objective reporting. Most of the favorite stuff was too favorable — obviously the work of men who were out to make as good a case for the new nation as possible. And as for the dissenters — well, as was to be expected, most of them sounded as if they were carrying a 2,000-year-old chip on their shoulders.

Recently a copy of a new book by Ralph McGill — "Israel Revisited," published in Atlanta, Ga., last month by Tupper and Love — showed up on my desk and I began to thumb through it out of a sense of duty. But what started as duty quickly became compulsion, for McGill, editor of one of the South's most trustworthy papers, The Atlanta Constitution, had obviously gone to Israel with an open mind and crammed it with facts and figures before making it up.

I've met Mr. McGill once or twice, and before I was halfway through his book I found myself wondering

THE FICTION CORNER

DAFFY ENOUGH

By Richard H. Wilkinson

ONE DAY last spring a transcontinental air liner got off its beam over the Rocky mountains and smashed up against a rocky peak. It was a few hours before the disaster was suspected, and then the airports could only guess at the location of the wreckage.

Glen Owens, sitting alone in his cabin on the slopes of White Crest valley, heard the announcement over his dry cell set. Young Glen's cabin was located on the course of the liner's flight, and earlier in the evening he had heard sounds that now he remembered as being rather queer.

Glen strapped on his skis, loaded a pack with provisions and supplies and set off up the valley. Three hours later he saw a light and came to the wreckage. Two people were dead, and another was so badly injured that unless he had medical attention pretty quick he too would die.

On an improvised sled, Glen pulled the injured man to the nearest town and doctor. Glen Owens not only received a reward, but he became, overnight, a figure of national reputation.

Three days after this a man from Hollywood, Calif., arrived in Crest, looked up Glen and offered to pay him $500 a week to make a moving picture.

Glen smiled and shook his head. "Nope," he drawled, "I always wanted to be a legerdemainist, and now with this reward money I reckon I got my chance."

"Good gosh, man, it will take 20 weeks to make this picture. That's $10,000. Do you realize that!" "It's a lot of money," Glen agreed, and Then he fashioned a sled, using his skis as runners, twisted some saplings into the shape of snowshoes and wove them with twigs.

"but suppose folks liked me? Then I'd have to stay out there and keep making pictures."

"You'll be a dumbbell if you don't grab this chance."

"Maybe," said Glen good-naturedly, "I'm a dumbbell already."

"Glen! What is the matter? Last summer you wanted to start a dude ranch down in Arizona, but you didn't have any money. So you decided to go trapping for one winter so you could save enough money to buy a half-interest in a ranch and we could get married. And now you're offered $10,000 and you mumble something about being a legerdemainist, whatever it is."

"Legerdemainist," Glen told her patiently.

ALL of which made swell newspaper copy. The reporters ate it up. So did readers. If Glen had been famous before, he was twice as famous now.

The next week three movie producers arrived on the scene. One of them offered a flat price of $25,000 for a single picture.

Leah Conroy was almost in tears. "Glen, for goodness' sake, try and understand what this means. In another month you'll be forgotten. It's your chance. Do you want to be a trapper all your life?"

"Thirty thousand!" said the movie magnate desperately.

Glen heaved a deep sigh. "O. K. If that's the way you want it, Leah!"

So Glen Owens went to Hollywood and made a moving picture.

Glen returned to Crest, bearing his $30,000, and the next day he and Leah journeyed down into Arizona. Within a week they had purchased a ranch.

They were married in the ranch patio, and left immediately for a honeymoon to Honolulu. It was while they were on the boat that Leah asked the inevitable question.

"Well, honey, it was like this," Glen replied. "That offer of $10,000 was good, but we needed $15,000 to buy a ranch of our own, so I figured if I turned down the first offer folks would think I was daffy enough to make me more famous, and the movie folks would offer me more money. Which they did."

"Glen Owens, what is a leger—?" "I dunno," Glen grinned. "And I figured nobody else would, either. All I know is I saw it written out once and copied it off so's I'd be sure to get the spelling right in case I wanted to use it."

Lightning Kills 400 Farmers Every Year

The National Fire Protection Association, sponsor of Fire Prevention Week, which has been proclaimed by President Truman this year for October 8-14, estimates that the farm property loss from lightning alone averages around $10,000,000 a year. The National Fire Protection Association estimates that the annual number of farm people killed by lightning is around 400, and the number of persons injured is more than twice that number.

Fire Prevention Week is a good time to look over your lightning installations to see that they are properly installed and well maintained. Experience shows that properly installed and well-maintained rods have an efficiency in the prevention of lightning damage to farm property of well nigh 100 per cent. Proper protection requires substantial, suitably located rods, effectively grounded, and provided with air terminals in accordance with the National Code for Protection Against Lightning.

Track for hay or manure carriers, metal stanchions and other interior metal bodies should be grounded and interconnected to prevent flashes from induced discharges. A substantial metal roof, electrically bonded, adequately grounded and provided with air terminals to protect chimneys or other non-metallic projections may likewise give satisfactory protection.

Livestock should be protected from lightning by grounding all wire fences enclosing pastures or yards.

Central American Independence Congress of Central America convened in June 1823. After many years of difference, the Union of Central American countries was dissolved and each assumed its own sovereignty, which they have today.

FARM FACTS
from your County
Agricultural Agent

by HAROLD L. CLARK

There is a lot of soft corn in Iosco County. The slow growing season was very unfavorable for corn.

Plenty of rains gave us good growth but the cool days and nights held the corn back for maturing. Now the question is, what to do with soft corn?

I heard Dick Bell, Michigan State College Crop Specialist over WKAR's Farm Forum discuss this problem. These are his suggestions in handling soft corn:

1. Put corn in silo if there are cattle to feed it to.
2. Leave corn standing or in shocks until corn is hard before husking and storing.
3. Store after cold weather sets in and feed up before warm weather returns.
4. Hog down with fat cattle, hogs or sheep.

In the Vine school area the farmers who have silos are hustling the corn into the silo. A crew was at Waldo Curry's Tuesday and Wednesday. Most of his corn was in the dry dough stage and some was dented. They said they were glad they had a silo this year. They would like to have had more mature corn, but even so they are going to get a lot of feed from their corn.

I saw some good sheep management practices at Martin Fehsel's the other day. Martin has 30 excellent Oxford ewes and a good ram which was shown by the very good typed lambs. The flock showed no evidence of internal parasites and the whole flock was in good condition.

Martin manages his flock. He selects good rams and then selects the best ewe lambs for replacement. The ewes are bred to lamb in early April and turned out to an excellent stand of bromo grass pasture. Martin is one of the few sheep breeders who shears before lambing and he says he likes it.

He is always first to shear and never has trouble in getting a shearer when he wants him. The ewes are clean and are rid of ticks. The tagging job is not necessary. In a few days after shearing the sheep are conditioned to stand all kinds of weather. Martin said his sheep averaged about ten and one-half pounds of wool. The wool crop is one of the nice revenues from the sheep business.

Martin knows that sheep need shade in the summer time, so he has provided it by building a straw shelter in the pasture field. He controls internal parasites by keeping a mixture of phenothiazine and salt before the sheep at all times.

He finds that selection of good type breeding stock, early lambs, good pasture, summer shade and parasite control makes his little flock of sheep a profitable enterprise year in and year out.

Every cabin has a picture window view of the beautiful Tawas Bay in the new cabins just built by Cecil Cabbie. The building is designed in a saw tooth shape in which the front of each cabin is built on an angle, opening a view to the lake. Six cabins with central hot water heating plant are all under one roof. The walls are sound proof giving the same privacy of a separate cabin. Cross ventilation and wall and ceiling insulation keep the place cool in the hottest summer days.

Each cabin has a large front room with a swing away bed, a bedroom, bathroom with shower and a kitchenette. A gas stove and refrigerator afford excellent living conditions for the tourist. A back door out of the kitchen provides a convenient entrance for bathers.

The saw tooth design and many of the details of the plan were suggested by Clare Gunn, Buildings and Grounds Specialist and Resort division of Michigan State College.

USDA Council to Promote Grass Day

The U. S. D. A. Council, an organization of representatives of U. S. Department of Agricultural agencies are coordinating their efforts to carry out a more effective agricultural program for the country.

At a recent program planning meeting the group outlined their objectives for the coming year. At the top of the list they placed the annual county Grass Day in which a county field day would be held to show crop, fertilizer and tillage demonstrations. The Grass Day Committee have made application to locate the regional Grass Day in Iosco County in 1952.

Other objectives are a forestry and wildlife study, promote a county land use planning program and develop a soil testing program.

The council plans to circulate a questionnaire to determine the attitude of farmers towards deer damage. The county agricultural agent, vocational agricultural teachers and veterans instructors will set up testing stations.

The agencies making up the council are the Cooperative Extension Service, Huron National Forest, Production and Marketing Administration, Smith Hughes Agricultural Instructors, and the Veterinarian Institute. Lyle Bielby is president, Paul Wallom is Vice president and Harold Clark is Secretary.

Meals for Busy Days—Lesson for Home Ex. Groups

Many meals for busy days, but meals that family members eat with gusto and demand as 'repeats' will be the subject of the next meeting for leaders of Home Economics Extension groups to be held on October 11, at the Methodist Church parlors, East Tawas, at 10:00 a. m., announces Harold R. Clark, County Agricultural Agent. Meals from the oven, the pressure saucepan and a few straight from the top of the stove will all be included.

Ways to add milk in disguised form, recipes that stretch the flavor of meat, and vegetables cooked in vitamin-saving fashion will be featured at the cooperative dinner served at noon.

A check-up and a vegetable quiz on "How Would You Cook Them?" will be the highlights of the lesson which will be relayed by the leaders to local groups about the county.

Sheep Situation Very Encouraging

With prices for market lambs holding up well and with a strong demand for wool, the sheep situation presents an encouraging picture. Flocks that are well managed and on good pasture, and where a careful parasite control program is followed are returning from $30 to $40 income per ewe. In many cases they are doing this almost entirely on pasture and roughage.

Sheep numbers throughout the county are at an all-time low. It will take quite a few years for numbers to build up again. This is a good year to save some of the best ewe lambs to rebuild the farm flock. The early, rapid growing lambs from the best producing ewes, should be the ones to select. Large, well grown ewe lambs can be bred this fall providing they are given extra feed and care this winter.

Because of the demand, replacement ewes of any type are not too plentiful. Persons who wish to start a flock may see their county agricultural agent or write to the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College. In some cases they can be directed to a source of breeding ewes.

If a flock is started, it is extremely important to select a good purebred ram as the ram will influence every lamb born in the flock.

Better Buy Buick!

PERHAPS you've noticed that there seem to be a lot of these brawny beauties running around on America's highways—and it isn't just that boldly gleaming forefront that spreads this impression.

It isn't just the fact that folks who own a Buick get such a bang out of it that they do a lot of driving.

Back of all this is another fact. It's a fact that contains a broad hint to anyone who'd like to know what's what in motorcar buys. 1950 Buicks are breaking all past popularity records, as registered in sales.

So we suggest that you do some personal investigating.

Find out, for example, how masterful you feel, with Fireball power purring away the miles, at a polite touch of your toe on the gas treadle.

Find out how the jolts and jars seem to disappear, when you have big soft coil springs on all four wheels, and fat low-pressure tires on wide Safety-Ride rims.

Then there's Dynaflo Drive,* which Buick owners vote the biggest automotive hit that has come along in years.

With all this, there's room, and comfort, and road-hugging heft combined with a light and willing response to your hand on the wheel—and prices that start down with the sixes.

Seems like almost everyone wants to own one of these Buicks—and most people can. How about you? Isn't it a smart idea to see your Buick dealer now and get your name on his list?

Only BUICK has Dynaflo—and with it goes! HIGHER-COMPRESSION and with it goes! HIGHER-COMPRESSION (Now Fireball valve-in-head power in three engines. (Now F-263 engine in SUPER models.) • NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with MULTI-GUARD fender, taper-through fenders • TRAFFIC-HANDY SIZE, less over-all length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius • EXTRA-WIDE SEATS cradled between the axles • SOFT BUICK RIDE, from all-coil springing, Safety-Ride rims, low-pressure tires, riding-steadying torque-tube

Honey Bee Plan

Importance of honey bees for pollination is indicated by a new plan being tried in Ohio. Bees are needed so badly in that state that the federal government is now paying owners a subsidy of $1 for each hive maintained and $3 for each hive moved into a field of red clover.

Uncoated Wood

Any uncoated piece of wood will give off or take on moisture from the surrounding atmosphere until the moisture in the wood has come to a balance with that in the atmosphere.

Evolution of Classifications

Zoologists, like many other people are inveterate classifiers. The oldest historical records contain attempts to classify mammals from various standpoints, scientific and otherwise. One of the oldest and best known is the ancient Jewish classification of mammals into "clean" and "unclean" on the basis of foot structure and cud-chewing habits (Leviticus xi). Subsequent attempts to classify mammals, made by zoologists in various parts of the world, underwent a gradual evolution that reflects the growth of knowledge over the years.

4-H CLUB NOTES

4-H Club Reporters Say—

Our project reports are in for the county, state and national deadline, September 25. If the rest of our 4-H'ers will come through and send in their reports to complete their projects, we can "Pat" each other on the back.

Some of the stores 4-H'ers wrote can pretty well tell us what their 4-H work meant to them. Here's one by a young lady enrolled in 4-H Baking. "I joined the 4-H Baking Club because I knew it would be such a help to me in future years. Each year I have joined, I knew at the end of the year I would have been glad I joined."

It seems every year that I take 4-H baking, I learn to bake new and different things.

When one joins a 4-H Club they have a chance to meet new acquaintances. I had many good times visiting with the other young folks.

"When I went to our 4-H Community club meeting (held once a month) I always had a good time. We ate, we played and we learned together. I also had a swell time when our 4-H Club had its tour and picnic." That is one of those real good 4-H Club stories. When we realize we have over 100 club members, you can understand what 4-H Club work can offer through cooperative effort between parents and members.

Next week our 4-H Council will meet. Here's what they will decide:

1. If and when we will have a Fall Achievement Day to announce county, state and any National winners. That would likely be the day our 4-H Club pins and certificates would be handed out.
2. Who they will elect to the Board of Directors of the 4-H Council Association.
3. The who, what, where, when and why for the 4-H project leader's meeting on October 23. All our winter leaders (handicraft, clothing, etc.) should attend this meeting.

And our eyes shed many a tear. Only God knows how much we miss him. At the dawn of another year. Greatly missed by Mom, Dad, brothers and sisters.

CLABBER GIRL THE BAKING POWDER WITH THE BALANCED DOUBLE ACTION

WILLIAM L. COMPANY, TERRE HAUTE, INDIANA

Tight Rope

By Allison L. Burks

Anne Delahay arrives at the Thorndyke house and is invited by Dorinda to accompany her to the beach where the latter is to meet a neighbor Cleve Adams. Anne is the librarian in the town where Stella Moore, an unemployed secretary, is posing as Dorinda LaCroix. She has been employed by Edward Thorndyke to take the role. He explained he feared his mother, Dorinda's grandmother, might be fatally shocked if she learned the real Dorinda was dead. Grandmother Thorndyke discovers the hoax and, apparently, dies of a subsequent heart attack. Anne is given one of Dorinda's swim suits and is killed when a boulder from a cliff crashes down on her at the beach. The sheriff is called.

CHAPTER XI

Almost upon the heels of his words, the red police car flashed by the window. Dorinda saw three men get out, Deputy Sheriff Hawley and two others unknown to her. "Charles Poole, the sheriff, and Dr. Hanlon, the coroner," Dr. Evans identified them. They did not come to the house but headed in the direction of the beach.

Fifteen minutes passed. Dr. Evans fidgeted and looked at his watch again. "I should be getting along on my afternoon calls," he murmured, and then hoisted himself to his feet, relief spreading over his round face, as Cleve came into the room.

"Glad you've come, my boy. I've really got to get away. But I couldn't leave Miss Dorinda here." He picked up the black bag, opened it and selected a bottle of white tablets. He shook out a half dozen in his hand and slid them into a small white envelope.

"Take a couple of these when you go to bed," he told Dorinda. "That way you'll get some sleep. You'll need it." He laid the envelope on the table. "Tell Poole if he asks for me, that he can see me later. There's nothing I could tell him anyway."

Cleve came across the room to where she still stood by the window. "Poor kid," he said and put his arms around her.

Dorinda Is Puzzled By Mystery Footsteps

His hand tightened about her fingers. "Thank God it wasn't you!" he said huskily.

She frowned, trying to think. There was something—but she couldn't remember.

"The rain had eaten into the bluff, too," Cleve went on. "Just beyond the weak place in the wall, the dirt had fallen away."

Dorinda said again, as she had said to Dr. Evans, "It was an accident, wasn't it, Cleve?"

The look he turned on her was full of surprise. "Why, of course. Good Lord, honey, you don't think someone pushed the boulder over, did you?"

"No, not really. Only why did it come down just then—when she was there. It might have fallen any time but had to be today, at just that minute." She felt her throat thicken.

"It just happened, that's all. No wonder you've been terrified with an idea like that in your head. Why, who on earth would want to harm a nice kid like Anne? That's ridiculous, Dorinda."

Dorinda's forehead was puckered. If she could only remember—She rubbed her hand across her eyes. "I think I know, Cleve. I'm a little dazed yet, that's all."

Her eyes slid past him, "Oh, Harriet!" she said blankly.

Harriet stood in the doorway, her gray eyes dull, her sallow face wrinkled as if she had been asleep. "Are you and Cleve here alone?" she asked, stiffly disapproving.

"Aunt Harriet, have you been here all the time? Were you walking along the upstairs hall?" Dorinda demanded.

"I've been here several hours. I was asleep most of the time." She added primly, "I went out into the hall once. Lana'd left the bathroom door fastened on my side and I had to go outside and through her room."

Dorinda gave a brittle little laugh. That showed what a hysterical fool she was—working herself into a panic of fear because she'd heard footsteps in a house supposedly empty. And all the time it was only poor harmless Harriet!

"But I thought you were at the Red Cross," she insisted.

Harriet's weak mouth tightened into stubborn lines. "I didn't like it there. I didn't know any of the women, so I only stayed a little while. I walked home."

She came closer to Dorinda, looking curiously into her tear-stained face. "You've been crying." Alarm kindled in her eyes. "Lana—nothing's happened to Lana?"

"No, no," Cleve assured her, "But there's been an accident." He told her, briefly, "The sheriff's down there now." His attention came back to Dorinda. "I wish you didn't have to talk to Poole about it today. But he'll want to ask questions. After all, you saw it happen—I wish you hadn't—and he'll want you to tell him about it."

"Charlie Poole? He's coming here to ask questions?" Harriet rubbed the tip of her narrow nose. The news of Anne's death did not seem to disturb her greatly. She didn't know Anne, her detached attitude said. The girl meant nothing to her. "I haven't talked to Charlie Poole for a long time," she went on in a pleased voice.

"Oh, you know him?" Dorinda's interest was caught by Harriet's tone.

"Of course I know him. We went through high school together. We were—quite good friends. Charlie was planning to go through college and law school. But his father died quite suddenly. There wasn't much money left and Charlie had his mother and that bunch of sisters on his hands." She gave the reddened tip of her nose a final rub. "Just about that time I met Hunt Thorndyke who was here visiting his brother and we got married and went away." She sighed. "I always thought if Charlie's father hadn't died so soon—"

Cleve broke into her reminiscences, his voice deepened to a warning note. "They're coming, Poole and Dr. Hanlon. Buck up, Rinda."

A sudden flash of interest lit Poole's face.

She told Poole what had happened, her voice faltering at the end. Her eyes were tight little fists in her lap.

"You saw the boulder as it started down?" Poole asked. "You didn't see anything else? There was nothing, no one, no other movement at the top of the bluff?"

"No. No one. But there was something—I can't remember—"

She put her hands over her eyes, living all over again that moment when she had seen Anne die. Her hands dropped into her lap. "I remember now. It wasn't anything. Just a flash, a spot of something yellow."

Dorinda Tells of Flash Of Yellow on Cliff Top

"Something yellow?" Poole frowned. "Like what?"

"I don't know. Maybe it was a bush in the sun, a flower. Maybe there was a yellow lichen on the rock. I wasn't really looking up there. It's just that I have a feeling I saw yellow. Maybe I really didn't see anything."

"There are no bushes or flowers along the bluff. And no yellow lichen on the rocks there," Poole said flatly. He pulled a small sack of tobacco and a pack of papers from his breast pocket. He rolled a cigarette slowly and expertly.

"Here's something that looks like an accident. Maybe it is. I'm not saying it isn't. But I'm not satisfied. It's too convenient—the whole setup. Everyone away from the house, servants gone, the loose place—the only loose place in the whole wall, directly above that seat on the beach."

Dorinda heard the sibilant scratch of a match as he drew it across the sole of his shoe. "And you didn't see anyone but you did see something yellow in a place where yellow didn't belong. Think about it some more, Miss LaCroix. Maybe you'll remember what it was that you saw."

Dorinda shook her head. "No, as I said, it's just an impression. If anyone had been standing there, I'd have seen him. But I didn't, and of course, I didn't look again. I forgot all about it."

Poole moved restlessly. "I don't like this—not any part of it. There's too many unexplained things happening around Trentville lately. That salesman, Taylor, for example. We nearly passed that off as an accident, too. They tell me you knew him, Miss LaCroix."

"That's not fair, Poole," Cleve broke in hotly. "Just because he spoke to Dorinda. He might have spoken to half a dozen girls in town for all you know."

"Nothing to get excited about, Cleve." Poole blew a smoke ring into the air. "I'm just saying it's peculiar. I wonder now, just how long was Miss LaCroix out of sight today before you heard her scream?"

"She wasn't out of my sight at all," Cleve declared shortly. "I heard Anne cry out just when Dorinda went out into the water at the end of the bank. She took a couple of steps and started screaming herself. I can assure you she didn't have a chance to run up the steps and push the boulder down on Anne without me seeing her if that's what you're getting at."

"I think Miss LaCroix has told you everything she remembers," a soft voice interposed. "Maybe after she's had a rest and a night's sleep, she'll remember more. That happens, sometimes." Dr. Hanlon, seated in a shadowy corner, spoke for the first time since he had come into the room.

Dorinda, turning her head toward him, saw a heavy man dressed in a loose brown suit, vest unbuttoned over a convex belly. His prominent eyes, matching his suit, were the soft brown of a spaniel's. He nodded to her reassuringly, his lips pursing in a smile.

There were voices in the hall, excited voices. Carrie, her gaunt face flushed and anxious, appeared in the living-room door. Her sunken eyes sought Dorinda, ignoring the others in the room.

"Are you all right, Miss? I been worrying so. The hospital never called me. And my boy wasn't hurt at all."

A sudden flash of interest lit Poole's face. "You say your telephone summons was a false alarm?" he asked, his drawl quickening into terseness.

Carrie's eyes shifted from Dorinda to the sheriff. One big hand flew to her face, pressed against her mouth.

Carrie Was Lured Away By Fake Hospital Call

"Mr. Poole," she breathed. She looked frightened. "What are you doing here? Has something happened? Has someone else been killed?"

"Someone else?" He caught up her words swiftly. "Who was it that was killed in the first place?"

Carrie made a visible effort to compose herself. "I didn't mean nothing," she said sullenly. "Only we've had a death in the family—and I got this phone call. And you're here."

Poole's eyes narrowed. "You didn't sound as if that were all you meant. But what about this telephone call? Tell me about it."

"There ain't much to tell. Mr. Greer took the call. He came and told me. They said it was the hospital at Westport calling and that my boy had been hurt in an auto accident and for me to come right away."

"And you didn't talk to the hospital yourself? Did you hear the telephone ring?"

"No, I was upstairs. But Mr. Greer came up and told me. And he said if Miss Dorinda didn't care, he'd drive me up to Westport."

"And you went?"

"Yes, I had the lunch packed for the beach picnic and I took it down and asked Miss Dorinda if I could go. I didn't feel so bad about leaving her because Miss Delahay and Mr. Adams were with her. And Mr. Adams said he wouldn't leave until me or Mr. Edward came back."

"You were afraid to leave Miss LaCroix alone? Why? Trentville is generally considered a pretty safe place."

Carrie's fingers were making little pleats in the front of her dress, pulling her cotton waist tight against her flat breast. "Well, I don't know. Only Miss Dorinda's so young and pretty. And you read in the city papers about funny things happening sometimes. I just didn't like to go away and think of her being by herself. Anyway, Mr. Edward wouldn't have liked it."

"I see. Well, go on. What happened after you left here?"

"We drove up to Westport just as fast as we could and went to the hospital. There's only one up there so we couldn't miss it. And they said they didn't know anything about an accident. And they hadn't phoned and my boy wasn't there." She sucked in her breath sharply. "So we went around to where he worked. That's Davidson's machine shop. He'd been working all day and couldn't figure what we were talking about. And finally we came back home."

Poole picked up his hat from the floor beside him. He turned it round and round in his lap, his fingers plucking at the narrow grosgrain band. "And is it your idea that someone was trying to get you away from the house?"

Carrie looked startled. "I didn't say that. I guess maybe someone else got hurt and they got the wrong number. It could've been that way."

"It's possible, of course. I'll have to find out if there were any accidents in Westport today. Or if there were any telephone calls to this house from Westport."

Giving Yourself

Lesson for October 8, 1950

"WHEN a girl throws herself away on a man, she generally takes pretty careful aim." That may be so; but more than a few persons throw themselves clean away without taking aim at all. They amble through life, they do not march. They have no personal five-year plans, not even five-week plans. They stumble from one day to the next, they live from hand to mouth. They care for nobody and few care for them. They may be found on Skid Row, living from one handout to another, or they may be found in the Silver Spoon Club, with plenty of money but no idea how to spend it and hardly enough energy to waste it.

Dr. Foreman

A Man Gives Himself MOST people, however, do give themselves to something. Every man who amounts to something, gives himself in one way or another. There was a college student once who practiced nineteen hours a day on the piccolo, it was said. Naturally he couldn't stay in college at that rate, so they got rid of him. But he landed, as you might expect, in one of America's finest orchestras.

If you want to succeed in music, give yourself to music. If you want to succeed in a law course, give yourself to your books. Men usually give themselves to what they think is of greatest value. Some give themselves; that is to say, they devote themselves to their own comfort and happiness.

That is cheap and selfish, of course, but there is a kind of transferred selfishness which is almost as common; giving oneself to one's family to the exclusion of everything and everyone else. A good man will love his family, a good mother her children; but there is a kind of ingrown family affection and mother-love which is blind to community needs.

Down the River THERE are bad ways of giving oneself. A prophet once said of King Ahab, he sold himself to do evil. That is still done. Some give themselves up to liquor and gambling.

There have been quite selfless and tireless advocates of atheism, and communism, and all varieties. Men have worn themselves thin in the service of Hitler and of other tyrants.

If the energy and persistence, for example, which is spent in trying to prevent the humane use of unwanted animals in medical research, were spent in intelligent support of preventive medicine, how much better the world would be!

Say Yes to Christ SO the question is not so much Shall I give my life? The question is, To what? To whom? For three months these Bible studies consider "Growth in Christian Living." All growth starts at some point; and Christian growth starts at the point where the Christian gives himself to Christ and his cause.

Consider what "commitment to Christ" means. It is not sentimental devotion to his memory, it is not singing songs about him or to him. (Not that such songs are wrong!) It is not following a historical character, though Jesus was and is a real person. It is saying "Yes" to Jesus Christ. It is giving one's highest devotion, one's first loyalty, to the Son of God.

It is devotion to the living Christ, ever-present; to the One whose reign is destined to be over all. It is devotion to Christ's cause; to his Kingdom, his control, his way of life. It means growing into his mind; it means becoming more and more like him, wanting to be like him, till at last Paul's words come true again: "For me, to live is Christ."

You Get More than You Give IT IS a mistake to think that if one gives his life to Christ, then he cannot give his life to anything else. The astonishing truth is, when a person first gives himself to Christ, he finds that Christ gives back far more. Christians can be, and are, devoted scholars and business men and mothers and doctors and farmers. The more truly one is committed to Christ, the better he is likely to be at his job, whatever it is.

Last winter there were several fires due to faulty fuel oil stoves. Remember that fuel oil stoves as well as coal burners are dangerous if not properly cleaned. If your oil burner goes out make sure the controls to the oil supply are "off" before pouring in more fuel, and that the stove has cooled before turning on again. Chimneys without sufficient draft should be repaired or rebuilt.

Make your home a safer place to live, protect your family and belongings this winter by making certain your heating equipment is in good operating condition.
