Detroit Attorney and Wife Succumb in Sail Boat Tied to Dock

Fleetwood M. McCoy, Detroit attorney, and his wife, Geraldine, were found dead Saturday aboard their 50-foot schooner which had been tied up to the State Park dock for a number of days.

TRAGEDY BOAT

An investigation of the tragedy was made by Coroner E. D. Jacques, Michigan State Police, Sheriff Ivan O'Farrell and prosecuting attorney, Reginald J. Barnett.

The bodies were found by Carl Babcock and Edwin Troia. While tying Babcock's cruiser to the pier they noticed the schooner laying low in the water.

During the investigation officers found $1,700 in cash in Mrs. McCoy's possession.

Chief Frank Morey of the Coast Guard and Gordon Everett, member of the Coast Guard auxiliary, examined the power plant of the schooner Sunday and found the exhaust pipe broken loose.

Apparently the two people had been dead for ten days or two weeks previous to the discovery of the tragedy.

Miss Rosemary Eulaine Mielock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Mielock and Robert Charles Klenow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Klenow, were married Saturday morning in St. Joseph church. Rev. Robert Neumann solemnized the double ring ceremony.

Ice blue satin was the bride's choice. The gown, fashioned on simple lines, featured a Peter Pan collar, elbow-length sleeves, and covered buttons down the front. A bustle accented the bouffant skirt. She wore a matching satin hat, trimmed with orange blossoms, which secured an illusion veil. Her only jewelry was a triple strand of pearls which her mother had worn on her wedding day and she carried an arrangement of pink roses.

Marlene Mielock and Barbara Harwood, junior bridesmaids, wore dusty rose taffeta dresses designed with Peter Pan collars, buttons down the front, puffed sleeves, and full ballerina length skirts. Matching ballet slippers, taffeta hats with velvet streamers, and bouquets of baby white mums completed their costumes.

Mary Margaret Mielock, bridesmaid, and Phyllis Harwood, maid of honor, wore maize and Nile green, respectively. The dresses were styled identically with portrait necklines, buttons down the front and corded ballerina skirts.

Mary's picture hat and ballet slippers were gold, while Phyllis's accessories were forest green. Both girls carried arm arrangements of large white chrysanthemums.

Y. W. L. Holds Annual Banquet

Mrs. Ruth Smiley Guest Speaker

Bouquets of chrysanthemums, placecards of small, dainty marigolds and a smattering of vivid fall leaves on each table formed a bright background for the Young Women's League annual fall banquet at the Barnes Hotel, Monday evening.

After the dinner, the club's president, Mrs. Louise Elliott, welcomed the guests and members with a few well-chosen words and then turned the meeting over to Mrs. Virginia Jensen who introduced the speaker, Mrs. Ruth Smiley, of the J. L. Hudson Co.

The home economist stated that because of the modern trend toward informality, manufacturers are cooperating with the new way of entertaining by designing informal pottery, china, glassware, silver and linen, with an eye toward achieving a coordinated setting.

Mrs. Smiley believes that to get the full benefit from a roast or fowl, it should be cooked at a slow oven temperature, preferably 300° and also suggested using other meats in place of the traditional turkey for the approaching Thanksgiving holiday.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Congress Overrides Truman Veto Of Tough Communist Control Bill; United Nations Forces Take Seoul

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

The race of U.N. forces from the Inchon and Pusan areas to cut South Korea into two sections and isolate thousands of Communist troops in the south went forward at such a clip correspondents were unable to keep up with the advance. The two spearheads made a junction north of Taejon, trapping about 100,000 Communist troops in southwestern Korea. Arrows indicate the directions the converging advances took.

KOREA:

Three Bloody Months

After three bloody months the war in Korea appeared near the end with the capture of Seoul, 500-year-old Korean capital, and the junction of U. N. troops from the Inchon and Pusan beachheads.

The war seemed to be in the last of three stages. The first began with the invasion of Communists troops and their capture of Seoul and the general retreat of American and South Korean troops to the narrow beachhead at Pusan.

The second was that period when U. N. forces maintained their beachhead while troops and weapons for an offensive were being built up in Japan and near Pusan.

The third and final stage began with the Inchon invasion and a general attack from the north and south to isolate the invaders below the 38th parallel and thus destroy them.

The breakout from the Pusan beachhead came suddenly and in force. Troops landed at Inchon captured Seoul and headed south. The two forces were within a few miles of each other at last reports and thousands of Communists were doomed to isolation and destruction in the final phase of stage three.

Military commanders were quick to report that bloody fighting would go on for some time as mopping up operations continued. They expected guerilla warfare in the mountains for a long time since many Communist units were expected to resist to the death.

One important question remained unanswered. Will U.N. troops cross the 38th parallel into North Korea?

NOBEL PRIZE:

To American Negro

Dr. Ralph Bunche, U.N. mediator who brought an end to conflict in the Holy Land, was awarded the Nobel peace prize for 1950.

Dr. Bunche, grandson of an American Negro slave, is the first of his race to receive the peace prize. It will be presented to him December 10. He will receive $23,000 and a gold medal.

A member of the U.S. state department, Dr. Bunche was loaned to the United Nations in 1946. He succeeded Count Folke Bernadotte of Sweden as the U.N. mediator in Palestine after Bernadotte was assassinated in 1948, effected an armistice and ended the bitter clash between Jews and Arabs.

When informed of the award, he paid tribute to his predecessor for laying the essential foundations of the Palestine agreements.

"At this moment, I cannot forget that Count Bernadotte and 10 other members of our team gave their lives in the effort to restore peace to Palestine," he said.

Dr. Bunche is the eleventh American to win the peace prize. Others were President Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root, Woodrow Wilson, Charles G. Dawes, Frank B. Kellogg, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Jane Addams, Cordell Hull, John R. Mott, and Emily G. Balch.

BUSINESS:

Buoyant Economy

The business boom flourished on all fronts during September, supported by a buoyant civilian economy and increased spending for the rearmament program.

Virtually every one of the standard measuring devices that tell the state of business at any given time showed gains, and in some instances new peaks for recent years. Where there were no advances, indicators held steady.

UNITED NATIONS.

Vote Down Red Move

Again the Soviet Union's campaign to seat Communist China in the United Nations met defeat.

The defeat was significant in that a vote was taken within four hours of the opening of the fifth session of the general assembly and was the first time the assembly ever tackled a major issue before disposing of routine organizational problems.

The motion to seat the Communist government of China was introduced by India and led to an immediate clash between Russia's delegate Andrei Y. Vishinsky and the U.S. delegate Dean Acheson.

The U.S. secretary of state said in his speech, "Vote on it now and vote it down." He reminded the assembly that 43 of the U.N.'s 59 members recognized the Nationalists as the true government of China. The vote was 33-16, with 10 abstentions.

Political observers speculated that the Soviet foreign minister might walk out after the vote. He contented himself, however, with declaring the assembly's action "illegal and incorrect."

A Canadian proposal to set up a seven-nation committee to study the question of Chinese representation and report back to the assembly when its recommendations were adopted.

Whatever the report, observers believed Russia would continue its campaign to seat Red China. It was only a matter of time until the question was brought up again.

RUSSIA:

What New Game?

World diplomats are wondering what new game the Russians are playing.

The first clue of a new Soviet attitude was evident with the opening of the U. N. general assembly. Andrei Y. Vishinsky, the Russian foreign minister, and his colleagues on the Soviet delegation were affable. Their speeches were almost soothing, in comparison to what they used to be. They were making a deliberate show of reasonableness.

Later, Jacob A. Malik declared he favored a meeting of top leaders of the U. S. and Russia to negotiate for peace. He said also his government would pledge not to be the first to use the atomic bomb. He also favored general disarmament.

Malik made his views known in answer to questions submitted to him by a Maryland committee for peace. The Russians are always careful in answering questions and never do so unless the questions have been cleared and approved.

With this thought in mind diplomats were wondering could it be possible the Soviet realizes what a narrow escape the world has had from a general war? Could it be possible the Russians finally desired peace or was this a propaganda move?

The state department was inclined to believe the latter. After a hurried conference the department declared Malik's statements were only propaganda.

WAR-TAX BILL:

Congress Approves

Congress approved the $4.7 billion emergency war-tax bill that boosted taxes from 12 to 20 per cent on individual incomes.

It was significant that the senate shouted its approval of the bill without a roll call and the house passed it 328 to seven. And even while the vote was still ringing in the two chambers, the house ways and means committee called a meeting to begin drafting a second tax increase bill.

The two measures together could boost taxes by $12 billion, to almost $50 billion a year—higher than any collections in World War II.

MUMPS:

A Commercial Vaccine

Development of a commercial vaccine against mumps has been perfected.

Dr. Karl Habel of the National Institute of Health said that limited human trials showed the vaccine, while "not 100 per cent protective," appears to give a three-fold reduction of mumps cases among vaccinated people, as compared with those who were not vaccinated.

AID FROM ABOVE . . . Parachutes blossom out over paddies in Korea as much-needed supplies for isolated troops float earthward somewhere in Korea. The supply-airlift to succor the hard-pressed units of American troops in Korea stems from a base somewhere in Japan. The location marker at lower left was placed there by troops sorely in need of ammunition, food, water and other supplies. Some of the chutes have already hit the ground. As the offense of the United Nations troops mounted, there were fewer and fewer isolated units of Americans and less need for this kind of supply life. But the air forces keep it in readiness.

COMFORT FOR THE ENEMY . . . A wounded North Korean soldier prisoner of war is tended at a Tokyo hospital by a United States nurse. Most of the seriously-wounded North Koreans captured in battle are taken to Tokyo for treatment. Red captives seem astonished at the humane treatment they receive at the hands of their enemy. They seem to expect to be handled in the same rough manner as United Nations prisoners of the North Koreans.

AUSTIN PULLS GUN AT UN . . . In a highly dramatic moment of a U.N. security council session, Warren Austin, U.S. delegate, holds a Russian-made sub-machine gun, dated 1950 and captured from North Koreans by American troops in mid-July, which he pulled from beneath the table in support of his charge that Russia is delivering arms to the North Koreans. Austin was reading General MacArthur's report on Korea to the UN.

GERMANY'S PRICE . . . In exchange for German participation in defense, General von Manteuffel wants release of German war criminals, guarantee of pension for soldiers, freedom of shipbuilding and merchant marine.

KERENSKY VS. VISHINSKY . . . Kerensky, one-time president of Russia, describes Vishinsky as a typical representative of the group tyrannizing the Russian people. Kerensky was deposed by the Communists in 1917.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Consular Service Consolidated With Diplomatic Branch in 1924

This is the fifth of a series of articles on the state department and its personnel by Walter A. Shead, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.

By WALTER A. SHEAD

Washington, D. C. — Benjamin Franklin was the first member of the foreign service of the United States department of state when in 1776 he was appointed joint commissioner to France and in 1778 minister to France.

At least seven men who later became President served as chiefs of missions abroad. The consular service was launched in 1780 as an adjunct of the diplomatic service, but was not consolidated with it until 1924.

Briefly, the foreign service represents the American people and the American government throughout the world and is the means of carrying out American foreign policy abroad.

In the set-up of the functional operation of the state department as now constituted, the foreign service operates directly under the secretary and the under secretary of state. It is broken down into six major departments and these in turn are broken down into 18 small offices. The six main bureaus, all under an assistant secretary of state, include the bureau of German affairs, bureau of United Nations affairs, bureau of European affairs, bureau of inter-American affairs, bureau of near eastern, south Asian and African affairs and the bureau of far eastern affairs.

With the eyes of the world focused today on the Far East and South Asia, these latter two departments are of tremendous importance. The Near East and the South Asian affairs bureau is broken down into the office of Greek, Turkish and Iranian affairs, the office of African and near eastern affairs and the office of south Asian affairs. The bureau of far eastern affairs is broken down into the office of Chinese affairs, the office of northeast Asian affairs and the office of Philippine and southeast Asian affairs.

Presiding over the near eastern bureau is Assistant Secretary George Crew McGhee of Texas, an Oklahoma university graduate and a Rhodes scholar. Serving as chief of the Far Eastern affairs bureau is Dean Rusk of Georgia, a graduate of several American colleges

BROADWAY AND MAIN STREET

30 Months Late, Letter Makes a Christmas in August

By BILLY ROSE

This morning's batch of mail included the following from a man in Great Neck, L. I.:

Dear Billy Rose:

As you probably noticed in the papers one day last August a boy named Henry Turriell found a sack of undelivered mail in the rear of a junked automobile on the outskirts of Great Neck.

It consisted mostly of Christmas cards which had been mailed in December, 1947, and the post office, after apologizing for the delay, promised to deliver them the next day.

Well, one of the pieces of mail was addressed to me—a letter from my wife, postmarked Cleveland, Ohio, and dated December 19, 1947. But what was in that letter won't make sense to you unless I first tell you something about myself.

Shortly after I was married in '44, the draft boards began taking anything with two legs, and after ten months in Texas I was put on a boat and shipped off to that swamp called Okinawa. By the time I got there, the shooting was over, so I guess I was better off than most of the boys, but it was a dull and muddy sort of life, and I was plenty glad when I was shipped back and discharged in '47.

IT WAS TWO DAYS before Christmas when I arrived in Great Neck, and you can imagine how let down I felt when I found that my wife wasn't there waiting for me. Instead, there was a note on the table saying her mother wasn't feeling well, and she had gone to Cleveland. She'd be back in a few days—that is, if everything was all right.

Billy Rose

This, of course, wasn't the homecoming I'd been figuring on and I took it pretty hard. But realizing there was nothing I could do about it—her mother didn't even have a phone—I sent her a Merry Christmas wire and told her to hurry back as soon as she could. It wasn't until after New Year's however, that my wife showed up.

That was in '47, and in the past three years a lot of nice things have happened to us—a son, a pretty good job, and most of the mortgage paid off on our house. None of which would have come about if the letter my wife sent me from Cleveland had arrived on schedule.

In it, you see, she confessed there had been another man while I'd been away—nobody she cared anything about, just someone who had happened along while she was lonely and miserable. She said if I didn't want her to come back to write and say so and she'd understand, but if she didn't hear from me she'd figure I had forgiven her and would return and try to make it up to me.

WHEN THE MAILMAN handed me this three-year-old letter a including Davidson of North Carolina, and also a Rhodes scholar.

THE THOUSANDS of men and women in the foreign services are screened, chosen for particular aptitude and technical training for specific jobs, and are known as "career" men and women and generally make a life work of the foreign service.

So conscious has the department of state become of the necessity of winning political objectives through diplomacy after the country has won military victories or without military aid, the department in 1947 established the foreign service institute, which is actually a school for training young men and women in the foreign service of the country. It is departmentalized for specialized training, including schools for all the languages of the world.

The institute is now located in an eight-story building at 2115 C street N.W. in Washington and periodically its graduates, coming from every state in the union, find their way into the ranks of the foreign service. The institute also trains employees of other governmental agencies concerned with foreign affairs. The courses run up to six months, with the regular course for new foreign service officers now three months.

The school for basic officer training provides courses designed to prepare new personnel for initial field duty. The school of advanced officer training is concerned with graduate-level instruction in the social science fields, including economics, politics, law, sociology, social psychology, cultural anthropology, etc. And the school of languages is designed to equip the employees with a rudimentary or even advanced knowledge of the language of the country of assignment.

The foreign service institute equips the representatives of the American people to do a much better job for them in the 75 nations where consuls, embassies and other diplomatic missions are maintained. By the measurement of every yardstick the training is giving to the department a higher type of American citizen than has ever before been possible.

THE FICTION CORNER

SECOND WIFE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

LIFE began for Lionel Ainsley when he met Cynthia Trumble. She was the fulfillment of dreams that were dreamed while he sat alone by his camp fire in the wilderness, while he listened to the hoots of owls and the screeches of bobcats, and wondered if the time would ever come when somebody sat with him by the fire and listened to the night sounds that had been his only companions since graduation from the state school of forestry two years ago.

He met Cynthia when he came out of the bush one June for a short vacation. They were married the day he was due to start back into the woods.

The first week was deliciously sweet. Cynthia had been a country girl, and because Lionel was her first real love, she eagerly looked forward to spending weeks alone with him in the wilderness.

That was before they reached Woodsville, where Lionel had his base. There was a big packing company at Woodsville, run by a man named Benton, who had a son named Austin. Fresh from college young Austin had come to Woodsville to learn the packing business. Quite naturally the place was dull and boring to one so sophisticated.

Then Lionel and his new wife arrived, and Austin looked on Cynthia and vowed to know her better. Austin had that polish about him that attracts women.

So when Lionel finally headed his canoe toward Woodsville to replenish their supplies, Cynthia's pulse quickened a little, and she kept her eyes fastened on the bend in the river that would first reveal the great buildings of the packing house.

What followed made Cynthia a little ashamed. She hated to hurt Lionel, he was so fine and generous and kind. And so devoted. She thought he'd object to a divorce, and it was a little disappointing when he agreed readily.

AND SO Lionel went back into the wilderness shortly after the divorce was granted, and Cynthia, free and exultant, waited for Austin to come to her.

He came at last and stood near where she lay in a hammock. It was night and she could not see his face.

"Cynthia, darling, why did you do it? I feel like a cad, breaking up you and Lionel like that. He's a good sort and—well, I meant nothing by my attentions. It was all—well, sort of fun."

"But, darling, you do love me? You do want to marry me?" Miss-givings chilled her heart.

Austin ran a finger under his collar. "Well, you see, Cynthia—you see, I can't, that is—I'm already married!"

Cynthia nearly swooned. When she again opened her eyes Austin was gone. She was alone. Panic gripped her, then fear. Later she thought of Lionel. She'd not know how to appreciate him. She'd wait. He'd be out of the bush again in three weeks. He'd understand.

It was almost unbearable, that waiting. The people of Woodsville looked at her curiously and whispered among themselves. Three weeks passed and Lionel didn't return. Another week dragged by and still no sign of him.

Then, at last, Lionel came back. Cynthia, watching from the veranda of her rooming house, saw his canoe sweep into sight, and her heart leaped. Lionel at last! Lionel, whom she'd loved and would love again. Lionel who had loved her so tenderly. Love like his didn't die. She had treated him miserably, but she'd admit all that, ask his forgiveness.

And then the canoe neared the shore and Cynthia went down to meet it. Lionel saw her, and waved a greeting.

Lionel gestured toward the girl. "Cynthia, meet the new Mrs. Ainsley," he said.

Cynthia's heart stopped beating. There was someone else in the canoe. A girl.

The canoe touched the shore. Lionel grinned at her happily. "Cynthia, it's good to see you again. Hope you and Austin are happy." He gestured toward the girl, who had turned to stare. "Cynthia, meet the new Mrs. Ainsley."

ABSOLUTE PROOF HADACOL HELPS FOLKS SUFFERING STOMACH DISTURBANCES when due to lack of Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin in the system!

Mrs. John W. Geary, attractive and charming woman of 840 Ursulina Street, New Orleans, Louisiana: "I'd been sick quite some time and the doctors told me it was a nervous stomach. I couldn't eat regularly and lots of times I was unable to hold the food on my stomach. Then I heard about HADACOL. After the first few bottles I could tell a definite improvement. Now my stomach doesn't trouble me at all. I eat anything I want, and my nerves are fine." (Give HADACOL a chance to help you.)

Mrs. Hilton Shuff, a loving mother of Route 1, Box 42, Ville Platte, Louisiana: "My son Mark Wendell has been sick for some time. A lot of the time he couldn't hold anything on his stomach. He was very weak and pale. Then I started giving him HADACOL, and he improved in just a short time. He's regained weight and has more energy than a dozen wild Indians." (HADACOL is great for puny, nervous kiddies with easily upset stomachs due to lack of important Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin.)

Mrs. Alma Kincaid, 2125 E. Adelaide, St. Louis, Missouri: "I've been taking HADACOL for over a year. Before taking it, I had stomach distress for some time. Nothing seemed to help me. Then I took my husband's advice and took HADACOL. A good friend of his told him of the wonderful results he had from HADACOL. Now that I'm taking HADACOL I eat anything. I recommend HADACOL to all my friends." (A big improvement is often noticed within a few days.)

WHY CONTINUE TO DOUBT
These are just a few of thousands upon thousands of letters that constantly pour in telling of the wonderful results the great new HADACOL is giving. It's only a very foolish person who would continue to 'doubt' HADACOL'S effectiveness and continue to suffer in view of such overwhelming evidence.

Relieves the Cause of Stomach Distress Due to Such Deficiencies
So if you are suffering from stomach disturbance (gas pains, indigestion, heartburn), if the food you eat disagrees with you because your system is lacking Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin—don't delay—start taking HADACOL today. HADACOL is not a quick-acting antiacid which gives symptomatic relief—instead, HADACOL actually relieves the REAL CAUSE of such stomach misery due to such deficiencies. And continued use helps prevent such painful distress from coming back.

Hundreds of Doctors Recommend It
Hundreds upon hundreds of doctors recommend HADACOL. It not only supplies weak, deficient systems with extra quantities of important Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin but also beneficial amounts of precious Calcium, Phosphorus and Manganese—elements so vital to help maintain glorious health and guard against such deficiency ailments. And so inexpensive. Costs only a small amount a day. Trial-size bottle, $1.25. Large family or hospital size, $3.50.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny post card. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv. © 1950, The LeBlanc Corporation.

Evolution of Classifications

Zoologists, like many other people, are inveterate classifiers. The oldest historical records contain attempts to classify mammals from various standpoints, scientific and otherwise. One of the oldest and best known is the ancient Jewish classification of mammals into "clean" and "unclean" on the basis of foot structure and cud-chewing habits (Leviticus xi). Subsequent attempts to classify mammals, made by zoologists in various parts of the world, underwent a gradual evolution that reflects the growth of knowledge over the years.

Who Runs America?

the Congress?

the President?

OR YOU AND THE MAN NEXT DOOR?

RUNNING AMERICA is the joint job of 150,000,000 people. It's the biggest job in the world today—keeping it running for liberty and for freedom. And the whole world's watching to see whether Americans can do it!

IN MUCH OF THE WORLD today, the people have resigned from running their own countries. Others have been quick to step in—first with promises of "security"—and then with whips and guns—to run things their way. The evidence is on every front page in the world, every day.

FREEDOM COMES UNDER ATTACK. The reality of war has made every American think hard about the things he's willing to work and fight for—and freedom leads the list.

But that freedom has been attacked here recently—just as it has been attacked in other parts of the world. One of the most serious threats to individual freedom has been the threat of Government-dominated Compulsory Health Insurance, falsely presented as a new guarantee of health "security" for everybody.

THE PEOPLE WEIGH THE FACTS. In the American manner, the people studied the case for Socialized Medicine—and the case against it.

They found that Government domination of the people's medical affairs under Compulsory Health Insurance means lower standards of medical care, higher payroll taxes, loss of incentive, damage to research, penalties for the provident, rewards for the improvident.

They found that no country on earth can surpass America's leadership in medical care and progress. They found that able doctors, teachers, nurses and scientists—working in laboratories where Science, not Politics, is master—are blazing dramatic new trails to health for Americans—and for the world.

THE "GRASS ROOTS" SIGNALS CONGRESS. In every community in the Nation, people stood up to be counted on this important issue. Thousands of local women's clubs, civic groups, farm, business, religious, taxpayer, medical, educational and patriotic organizations spoke out—giving the great United States Congress its unmistakable Grass Roots signal from home!

And ever watchful, ever sensitive to an alert people, The Congress saw that signal, and heard the people speak out, loud and plain. That's democracy in action. That's the American way!

Today among the 10,000 great organizations on militant public record against "Compulsory Health Insurance" are:

General Federation
Women's Clubs
American Farm Bureau
Federation
National Grange
Veterans of Foreign Wars
National Conference of Catholic Charities
American Protestant
Hospital Association

American Legion
National Association of
Small Business Men
United States Chamber of Commerce
National Association of
Retail Grocers
National Retail Dry Goods
Association
American Bar Association

Doctors of this Nation are grateful that the people refused to be wooed by the fantastic promises of this un-American excursion into State Socialism. Doctors of America are dedicated to serve their fellow citizens at home and their comrades in uniform, wherever service to this Nation may take them. And the thing they stand ready to fight for—to sacrifice for—to die for—is not the alien way of life of Socialism, but the prideful security of a free and self-reliant people!

THE VOLUNTARY WAY IS THE AMERICAN WAY!

Throughout the Nation, free men and women, working and planning together, are finding the American answer to every question of medical service, care and cost. Hundreds of Voluntary Health Insurance Plans are in healthy competition—sponsored by doctors, insurance companies, hospitals, fraternal organizations—by industry, agriculture and labor. Today in America—70 million people are protected by Voluntary Health Insurance! Throughout the Nation, families are insuring themselves against the major costs of illness—at reasonable, budget-basis prices. Voluntary Health Insurance takes the economic shock out of illness. Protect your family now. For information, ask your doctor—or your insurance man.

An American's greatest heritage is the right to learn the facts—and to speak his mind. Maintained with honor and used with sincerity—that right will guarantee forever that

by HAROLD R. CLARK

The newly organized American Red Danish Cattle Association snows slow but certain and impressive gains. It has the distinction of being the first cattle breed association that bases its registration requirements upon the proof of production inheritance. Any farmer who will take the pains to keep birth and production records can in three generations have registered cattle even though he started with grade cattle. The unusual clause set up by the ARDCA is that no animal regardless of its inheritance can be registered unless a Dairy Herd Improvement Association production record is made and reported.

At a meeting of Red Dane breeders and County Agricultural Agents with O. E. Reed, Chief of the U. S. Bureau of Dairy Industry and M. H. Fohman, director of Cattle Breeding Research of the U. S. Bureau of Dairy Industry, at Harrisville, last week, Clifford Shantz, secretary reports there are now over 400 members and 5000 birth records recorded.

This is the growth made since its organization in 1946 and Harry Prowse of Marlette was the first elected president and I was the first secretary-treasurer. The majority of the members are in Michigan but one member is in Texas and another in Minnesota. Inquiries have come from all over the United States. Breeders are starting up in several states.

Chief Reed who proposed the introduction of the pure bred Red Danish cattle to Sanilac County farmers back in 1939 was amazed at the accomplishments of this breed in Michigan.

Shantz's report on ten average herds near Fairview showed that they had increased the size of their herds from 10 to 13 cows and production from 285 pounds of butterfat per cow to a robust 330 pounds in seven years. The increase of three cows per herd and 45 pounds of butterfat per cow has meant an increase of $1000 per farm. Alfred Handrich's herd increased from 300 to 430 pounds of fat per cow. Several herds in the state now are averaging around 450 pounds.

Sure stacking beans is a hard job but it pays good wages, so says Frank Stoddard, Dornace Bellville and Theodore Bellville. Elevator operators say that discolored beans are running very high this year. Discolored beans are cull beans and do not find a satisfactory market. Wet weather retards threshing and causes the bean to discolor.

These wise farmers use what is called the McNaughton system. The beans are stacked around a pole on a foundation straw. The stacks are about three feet in diameter, are straight sided and rounded at the top. The beans should be packed rather tightly. Stacked in this way they dry out quickly and repel the rain. Usually they are dry enough to thresh within an hour after a rain. Since rains are predominant during bean harvest time, year after year, stacking does pay.

Spot Deer Census Shows Increase

One of the highlights of Michigan's State 4-H Conservation Camp held recently at the Conservation Department's Higgins Lake Training School was a "deer census." A total of 86 deer were counted on one square mile of land by the 4-H group. In 1947 a total of 66 were recorded on the same area of land.

According to Charles Shick, extension specialist in game management for Michigan State College and the Conservation Department a deer census is a tally of all deer by "counters" stationed along three sides of a check area. The counts are made as the deer are driven from an area by "drivers." In this case about 85 4-H club members acted as "counters" and "drivers."

The census work was supervised by Illo Bartlett, Deer Specialist for the Conservation Department's Game Division. The information obtained will be used with other data to determine yearly trends in Michigan's deer population.

According to A. Marvin Davenport, District Club Agent, Jack Ward of Whittemore attended the State 4-H Conservation Camp and took part in the deer drive.

4-H CLUB NOTES

4-H Club Reporters Say—

It's the lull before the storm! Our 4-H Council Association is electing new board members and the officers of the council association haven't been announced yet. After that, then what? The yearly program—what we will be doing and where.

I've been given to understand that 10 and 11 year old 4-H members have been writing some very good stories in their project reports. Here's an example of a 10 year old genius with a 40 year old mind. He writes, "I used to hear a lot about 4-H Club work even when we lived in the city. All these grand champions and stuff so I was determined to have me a 4-H career. When we moved to the farm, it didn't take me long to get into 4-H. Then what do you suppose happens: I enroll in crops and livestock with a dairy calf. Bless my soul if I didn't get beat out of everything! Oh well, the other guy was better'n I was anyway, but you watch my smoke next year!"

You know, I learned a lot from my projects, but I sure learned more by the poor example of those grown people set. It helps me a lot to decide the way I don't want to be when I grow up." Young man, I know how you feel, but I don't know what you're talking about!

I hope we hear a report from the 4-Her's attending the clinic at Michigan State College Saturday. I understand that is in preparation for the Junior Vegetable Growers Convention in New Orleans this coming December.

Don't forget, any of you folks who want to start a 4-H Club in Iosco County had better write Marvin Davenport, District 4-H Club Agent in East Tawas. He can tell you how, when and what there is about it.

Cover Crops Big Help Against Winter Erosion

Though the soil may not complain now about being covered over winter, Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent says that the results show up in poor soil condition later.

Cover crops can be a big help in protection from wind and water erosion and also save losses from leaching. A living cover crop will collect some of these losses and retain them for future use.

Agent Clark agrees with Michigan State college soils and crops specialists who say that rye is a good cover crop to sow in the fall. The regular Rosen rye gives good soil protection. If spring pasture is needed, Balbo rye is recommended.

Rye can be sowed until about November 1 in Iosco county, the agent says.

A seeding of one and one half to two bushels is sufficient. A quicker protective cover can be had by using a commercial fertilizer.

Big Loss in Meat Caused by Bruises

Meat worth twenty-five million dollars is estimated to have been lost in 1949 because of bruises to animals before slaughter, reports Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent.

Regulations proved that all bruised meat must be removed before a carcass may be offered for sale. This cut-out causes losses of two kinds—the first being the loss to the value of the meat actually cut out and the second the loss due to reduction in grade of the remaining portion of the cuts affected.

Though it may be assumed that these losses or costs are carried by the entire industry, they actually are reflected back to the producer's selling price.

Much bruising is caused by crowding and overloading of trucks. As about 90 percent of all livestock is transported by truck sometime during its lifetime, the following rule of thumb figures have been computed from tables recently published by the National Livestock Loss Prevention board and should be helpful in determining the number of animals that can be hauled safely in any given truck.

Cattle: Beginning with nine square feet for average 700 pound animals, increase one square foot floor space for each 100 pound weight increase up to 1300 pounds.

Hogs: Beginning with two and one-half square feet for average 100 pound animals, increase ¼ square feet floor space for each 50 pound weight increase up to 300 pounds.

Sheep: Beginning with two square feet for average 50 pound animals, increase one-half square feet floor space for each 25 pound weight increase up to 150 pounds.

Wild Sea Lions
Female sea lions weight from 400 to 500 pounds; males, from 1,500 to 1,800

Looking for POWER?

Better Buy Buick!

THAT bold bonnet that stretches out before your eyes on a 1950 Buick isn't there just for show.

Lift it up, and you'll find that the space beneath is abundantly occupied, by one of the biggest hoodfuls of power you'll find in any motorcar.

What you're looking at is Buick's modern version of the high-compression valve-in-head engine, which gains extra wallop from the fact that it uses the exclusive Fireball combustion principle.

We could list a lot of mechanical reasons why fuel gives up extra power in a Fireball engine—how it's wrapped in a swirling, ball-shaped charge—how it burns with a smooth, clean thrust that delivers maximum action.

But the best way to find out what all this means is to touch off the eager horsepower out on the highway by a gentle nudge of your toe—and feel your shoulders press deep in the cushions behind them.

Now all this sounds thrilling, you say, but how about the feed-bills for all these horses? How about miles-per-gallon?

The practical answer to that one is found in this year's experience with the SUPER and SPECIAL—and even the ROADMASTER.

In all three, the horsepower was stepped up at the start of the year—and in all three, happy owners report the best mileage in modern Buick experience.

This is due to a little-known but authentic engineering fact—which is that an engine burns less gas when it doesn't have to labor. At any normal driving speed, therefore, extra power is extra thrifty.

So we say again—if you're looking for power—mighty power—buoyant power—silken power—thrifty power—better buy Buick.

Your Buick dealer is eager for the chance to demonstrate how sound this hint really is.

Only BUICK has Dynaflo Drive* and with it goes HIGHER-COMPRESSION and with it goes FIREBALL-VALVE-IN-HEAD power in three engines. Fireball valve-in-head power in SUPER models. • NEW-PATTERN STYLING, with MULTI-GUARD front-end styling. • TRAFFIC-HANDY front, taper-through fenders. • EXTRA-WIDE SIZE, low-over-all length for easier parking and garaging, short turning radius. • SOFT BUICK SEATS cradled between the axles. • SAFETY-RIDE RIMS, RIDE, from all-coil springing. • SAFETY-RIDE RIMS, low-pressure tires, ride-steadying torque-tube. *Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Eight Rope

By Allison L. Burks

Dorinda LaCroix is really Stella Moore, masquerading as a dead girl in an effort—so she is told—by Edward Thorndyke to save the real Dorinda's grandmother. Mrs. Thorndyke from shock of learning the real Dorinda is dead. Dorinda believes Mrs. Thorndyke may have been enticed by someone holding her face against a pillow. Dorinda's girl friend, Anne Delahay, has been killed by a boulder crashing from a cliff top while she, Dorinda, and Cleve Adams were on a beach picnic. Dorinda is puzzled by mysterious footsteps she heard in the Thorndyke upstairs hall when the house was supposed to be empty. The maid Carrie tells of having been lured away by a fake phone call.

CHAPTER XII

Carrie stared at him, her mouth open. "You mean maybe there wasn't any call at all? That Mr. Greer made it up?"

Poole shrugged. "We've only his word for it."

"Well, he wouldn't do that. Why would he tell me a lie like that?"

Poole grinned briefly. "He might have wanted to take a nice afternoon drive. Was he with you all the time you were gone?"

"Of course he was. He drove me around to all them places I told you about. And he came home with me and he's out in the kitchen now."

"I'll talk to him presently. I'd like a little first-hand information about this purported call."

"I can't figure why you're so interested," Carrie's tone was edged with exasperation. "And what are you doing here anyway?"

She looked at Dorinda, a question in her eyes. The girl knew as plainly as if the words were spoken, that Carrie was asking, "Did you tell them about the lipstick on the pillow?"

She shook her head in a barely perceptible movement and became aware of the sheriff's eyes upon her. He was studying her intently, as if trying to see the picture in her mind. She bit her lip. Sheriff Poole might be slow in speech but there wasn't anything slow about his acuteness.

Carrie had discovered Dr. Hanlon in his inconspicuous seat in the corner. "And you're here, too, Dr. Hanlon. Is someone hurt? Miss Dorinda's all right—"

"Yes, Miss Dorinda's all right," Poole repeated. He added, with a brutal directness, "But Miss Anne Delahay's dead. A boulder from the rock wall rolled down and struck her."

"Miss Delahay dead?" Dorinda could barely hear the words. "Who—who did it?"

Sheriff Poole Gets Investigation Underway

"Who did it?" Poole's eyebrows lifted. "You're quick to assume someone did it. It was—or was meant to appear as—an accident."

Some of the grayness was fading from Carrie's face. "I couldn't figure how a stone'd get loose from that wall. That was a good wall. But I guess maybe it was an accident." She pulled her thin lips into a grotesque caricature of a smile. "Nobody'd want to hurt Miss Delahay."

"Unless it was one of those funny things you read about in the city papers," suggested Poole. He shook his head. "I'm afraid that idea won't work. The cement had been loosened around that boulder—that one boulder in the whole wall—either by time and weather or by some person who wanted it loose for his own purposes. It's too much to suppose the boulder happened to be loose and a tramp or some homicidal nut happened to come along. It could have been an accident. I don't believe it was a tramp. You never saw anyone fooling around that wall, did you, Carrie?"

Her answer was slow in coming. "No, I never saw anyone."

He looked at her keenly. "It doesn't sound right, Carrie, the way you said that. You didn't see anyone. Did you see anything or hear anything?"

"Well, it wasn't much," Carrie admitted reluctantly. "Only one night last week—Friday, it was, the day Mrs. Thorndyke died—I wasn't sleeping so well and I got up and thought I'd fix me some hot milk. I turned on the light and went to the window to pull my shade—my room's at the back of the house—and I thought I saw a little light down somewhere along the top of the bank. It went out while I was looking."

"A little light," Poole said the words over thoughtfully. "What sort of a light? Like a lantern, a flashlight?"

"It could'a been a flashlight," Carrie said. She sighed wearily. "I sort of got to thinking about it and next night I got up three or four times and looked. And I saw it, again. I didn't like the idea of someone prowling around and I put on my bathrobe and went and woke Mr. Greer. He went down there but he didn't find anybody. I didn't see the light any more."

Poole stood up. "There's nothing more I can do around here tonight except I'll have a word or two with Greer before I go. I'll be around in the morning to see the other members of the family. Maybe you folks will think of something else by that time, too."

Harriet went as far as the door of the living room with the two men. "It was nice to see you again after all this time." She added quickly, "Only, of course, it's too bad it had to be a death that brought you here. Do you realize that this is the first time we've spoken to each other since I've been back at Thorndyke House? It brings back old times. There's been lots of changes since I left Trentville."

Poole looked at her gravely. "Yes, there's been lots of changes in the past twenty-five years," he agreed. He inclined his head a fraction of an inch, made a motion as if to place his big Stetson back on his grizzled hair, decided not to, and turned toward the kitchen.

Carrie pushed open the door from the dining room with one elbow. She carried a tray with a silver coffee pot, cups, sugar and cream. She set it down on the coffee table in front of Dorinda.

She did not go away at once but lingered, fists pushing down in her apron pockets. "I don't know what Mr. Edward will say," she quavered, catching Dorinda's glance. "He won't like it, me talking so much."

She hesitated, then asked a little shyly, "Were you and Mr. Adams right there when Miss Delahay got killed?"

"We weren't with her. We'd gone around the end of the cove. I was just coming back when it happened."

"She was all alone—sittin' on that rock where you go every day?"

Dorinda looked at her curiously. "Yes, Carrie. Why?"

"Miss Dorinda, when I went down to the sand this afternoon, I saw Miss Anne there with her back to me, wearin' that suit I knew belonged to you. Just for a minute I thought it was you. Suppose someone did push that boulder—whoever did it mightn't of known it was her down on the rock. They might have thought it was you!"

She looked up at Cleve. His face, white and strained, was touched for the first time with doubt. "It's too fantastic," he said harshly. "I don't believe it. Things like that don't happen. Not here. Not to people like us."

Edward Tells Belief Mishap Series is Over

"Perhaps that's what everyone thinks," Dorinda said soberly. "But every day something horrible and tragic happens to someone."

"In cities maybe," Cleve admitted. "Not in Trentville."

Dorinda shook her head. She lifted the silver coffee pot, filled the cups, "Sugar and cream?"

Cleve nodded absently. He took the cup she handed him, balanced it on one knee. "Can you think of one conceivable reason why anyone would want you out of the way?" He asked violently.

He turned to Carrie. "Do you know of any reason?"

Carrie's face was a study of indecision. "No, Mr. Cleve, I don't know anything. I've thought and thought about it. Unless it could be someone was jealous. Someone who thought she was too young and too pretty—"

"That's ridiculous," Cleve declared. "Who is there to be jealous of Dorinda? I'm your only follower, aren't I, honey? And I know there's no jealous rival planning to remove you on my account."

"I wasn't thinking of you," Carrie looked at Dorinda, her eyes full of meaning. "But Mr. Edward—he thinks a lot of you, Miss."

Cleve laughed suddenly. "Now I know you're both insane." "Now I know you're both insane," There was relief in his voice. "Of all the nightmares women can conjure up! Carrie, Dorinda, in the name of reason I ask you who is going to be jealous of an uncle's affection for his niece?"

Dorinda did not answer. She hardly heard him. She could not look away from Carrie, but sat, staring, at the maid's expression. Carrie knew she was Dorinda LaCroix. And Edward had believed they could keep it a secret!

For Carrie knew, and still she liked Dorinda, trusted her, wanted to help her. The girl's eyes filled with tears. "Thank you, Carrie," she said.

"You go on up to bed, Miss Dorinda. I'll bring you up a glass of hot milk in a few minutes."

"Yes, Carrie," Dorinda was docile. She felt unutterably weary. Her head ached. What she wanted right now, more than anything else, was the solace of her own bed and sleep, a long, long sleep. She clutched the envelope in her hand. Sleep—that was what those little tablets promised.

"Sometimes I think it takes more than education to eradicate the primitive superstition which lies beneath the surface in most of us," said Edward pompously. He added a little more sugar to his coffee. "Reason to the contrary, I find myself yielding to the belief that fatalities do come in threes."

Dorinda stared at him in astonishment. This morning it seemed that yesterday couldn't have happened; that the whole thing must have been the figment of some particularly horrifying nightmare.

"You think then that this last accident was necessary to complete a cycle?" There was a disagreeable note in Fay's voice. Her beautiful face was colorless, her blue eyes heavily shadowed as if she had slept but little.

"Necessary? Let's not put it so crudely." Say rather it added a period. We'll believe now that this disagreeable series is over and anticipate brighter days ahead."

Poole Questions Carol About Her Activities

The door was pushed open and Greer came into the breakfast room. He laid an oblong square of yellow beside Edward's plate. "A telegram for you, sir," he said, his narrow gray face expressionless, and left them.

Edward tore open the envelope, unfolded the yellow sheet. He stared down at the printed words, then crumpled the paper and dropped it on the table without speaking. Edward pushed back his plate.

He spoke then, reluctantly answering the insistent inquiry in Fay's face. "The telegram is from Morrow. I wired him not to hurry." He drew a long breath. "However, he will arrive Thursday night."

"Who is Morrow?" Dorinda asked timidly.

Edward turned in his chair. "Morrow, my dear, is my mother's attorney. As perhaps you know, it is customary to read the will immediately following the funeral. In this case there has been a delay owing to Mr. Morrow's absence from the city on business. However, as I said, he will be here late Thursday and we will learn exactly how my mother wished to dispose of her holdings."

"But you already know, don't you? You said—"

"Yes, Dorinda, I already know. I have known for a good many years."

Harriet straightened herself in her chair, her pale eyes avid. "But your mother made a new will last summer, didn't she, Edward? I'm sure I remember. She sent for Mr. Morrow and—"

"My mother made a few minor changes," Edward interrupted her smoothly. "I am sure there were no major alterations."

He stood up. "If I'm not mistaken, that is the sheriff's car coming along the driveway now. I suppose we're in for a bout of extensive questioning about an accident of which we know nothing. Come, Fay, Lana, let's get it over."

At eleven-fifteen the doorbell rang. Her heart leaped at the sound. Cleve? Her lips formed his name. But it was not Cleve. As Greer opened the door, she could look beyond him and see Carol standing in the portico. She stepped into the hall just as Poole, followed by Edward and the three women, came out of the living room. Carol looked from Poole to Dorinda, her black eyes wide and shocked.

Edward stepped forward. "Carol, this is the sheriff, Mr. Poole, Miss Hughes was my mother's nurse. She has been and will continue to be for the next few days part of our small family here." He hesitated. "Miss Hughes was not here yesterday, Sheriff. I'm sure there is nothing she could tell you."

Poole looked at Carol, his face unsmiling. "Do you mind telling me where you were, Miss Hughes?"

"Of course not. I went to Los Angeles yesterday. I spent the night with a friend, another nurse, Olga Hastings, at the Harvard Apartments. But I don't understand." Carol was bewildered. "What has happened?"

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 24: 25-32

Using Your Bible

Lesson for October 15, 1950

THE BIBLE must be approached in three ways: with the head, with the heart and with the will. With the head for understanding, the heart for appreciation and reverence, and the will for obedience.

That was the first question Philip asked the Ethiopian: Do you understand what you are reading? Not, do you enjoy it, or do you believe it, but do you understand it? If not, then the reader can neither fully believe nor rightly enjoy it.

The King James Version THE BEST and simplest help in understanding the Bible is to read it in the language we speak. Now unfortunately it was not written in that tongue, but in Hebrew and Greek. We have to read it in translations. There are scores of translations in English alone.

The most widely sold of these is the one known by various names: the King James, or the Authorized, or the 1611, version. This was first published in 1611, being essentially a revision of the Bishop's Bible, a still earlier translation. The name "authorized" is misleading, however, for it never was authorized by church or state. It is a noble example of 17th century English and has had a wide influence wherever English-speaking people have gone.

The fact is, however, that people today do not speak 17th-century English any more, and very few of us even read it. Consequently the Bible, in this King James version, has a quaint Shakespearean sound, and the difficulty of the language is one of the main reasons why the average American today finds it hard to read.

Furthermore, the King James is inaccurate in many places. At the time it was published, the translators were working from Greek manuscripts which are now known not to be either the earliest or the best available. For these reasons, fresh translations of the Bible were greatly needed.

20th Century Translations THESE modern-English translations of the Bible haven't changed the Book; they are simply helping the reader to get back to the ideas of the original apostles and prophets; they are putting the Bible again into the language people actually speak.

Some of the more important versions may be noted here. Practically all the churches of Protestant North America have been co-operating through the International Council of Religious Education, in producing what is called the "Revised Standard Version" of which the New Testament is already out, and very popular too. The whole Bible in this version is due to be off the press by September 1952.

This is an excellent version for church or liturgical use, as it keeps close to the King James rhythm wherever it can; for the King James version, whatever its fault, has a rhythm about parts of it (notably the Psalms) which has never been surpassed.

Two other translations have been before the public, and have won many friends, for a score of years now: Moffat's, and the American Translation by Goodspeed, J.M.P. Smith and others. (This latter includes the Apocrypha, to which most Protestants are strangers).

At One Sitting

The average reader, used to taking his Bible in snippets of a verse or two, or a chapter at most, at one time, will find that he can sit down with one of these modern translations and just read on and on, fascinated by the book he has discovered for the first time.

One of the "hardest" yet most important parts of the Bible, for instance, is the Epistles section of the New Testament. Every one of these epistles is a short letter, but how few persons ever read one straight through! Let the reader who is puzzled by the Epistles get a copy of "Letters to Young Churches," a translation by J. B. Phillips, and he will find that dark part of the New Testament simply opening up and shining. The work of translating will go on and on as long as language keeps changing; let us thank God for all those who in our time have been making the Word of God again an open book for all men.

NOW $10,000

Maximum Insurance for Each Depositor in This Bank

Deposits are now insured up to $10,000 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The amount previously covered by this insurance was $5,000.

This increase in coverage is made possible largely by the excellent safety record of banks since the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was formed in 1933.

We and other insured banks pay the full cost of this insurance. Each insured bank pays "insurance premiums" in the form of assessments on deposits. It is really another bank service, supplied at bank expense, for the protection of money you deposit with us.
