GOP to Retain Seats

OKLAHOMA CITY — Indications are that here in the central west plains states the November election will maintain a status quo insofar as the political complexion of the United States senate is concerned. There is, however, a slight chance for the Democrats to gain a seat if the bitterly contested race in Missouri can oust Sen. Forrest C. Donnell, the Republican incumbent.

In South Dakota, Iowa and Kansas, all now held by Republicans, it appears the GOP will hold its own. Here in the Sooner state of Oklahoma a razzle-dazzle race is being conducted between Congressman Mike Monroney on the Democratic side and the Rev. W. H. (Bill) Alexander, Oklahoma City Christian church pastor and lifelong Democrat, on the Republican side. Monroney appears to be an easy winner.

Therefore, in their determined fight to recapture the senate, the Republican party apparently has little chance of gaining a seat in this area, and it does have a chance of losing in Missouri. They need seven seats to win control.

Local issues are playing a big part in the Missouri election and the GOP state organization is pulling all the stops on the gambling issue in St. Louis and Kansas City, the murder of some gang leaders in the latter city; resurrection of the old Pendergast issue and the fact that the man favored by President Truman in the primary, Emery W. Allison, lost out to former Congressman Thomas C. Hennings, Jr., who is conducting a whirlwind campaign. Hennings is a colorful figure and while he was considered a New Dealer when he served in the lower house from 1935 to 1940, he made his primary campaign as an independent, although he came out strong for civil rights. Senator Donnell is considered the official i-dotter and t-crosser of the senate and is an expert on legal grammar. He has a lack-lustre personality and is considered a poor speaker, despite which facts, he has a large personal following in Missouri. Republicans and Democrats alike agree that Hennings is giving the Republicans a tougher race than Allison could have had he been nominated in the primary.

Hickenlooper Favored

In the tall corn country of Iowa, farmer Albert J. Loveland, who resigned as under-secretary of agriculture, is making what appears to be a losing race against probe-conscious Bourke B. Hickenlooper, the GOP incumbent.

In some circles it was believed that Hickenlooper's back-firing and unsuccessful charges against the atomic energy commission and of Communist infiltration in the state department, would hurt him in Iowa. However, he blasted all opposition in the primary and apparently his Washington failures have not hurt him with Iowa voters.

Loveland is an advocate of the Brannan farm plan which is one of the main issues in the Iowa campaign. Although Iowa elected a Democratic senator in 1948 it is considered essentially a Republican state. There are those who believe the GOP may turn to Iowa for a presidential candidate in 1952, with the spotlight turned on Allan Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Carlson Has Edge

Kansas, traditionally Republican, of course will turn the trick again although some election interest is being engendered by the credible showing being made by Paul Aiken, who resigned as assistant postmaster general to make the race on the Democratic side against Gov. Frank C. Carlson, the GOP nominee. Sen. Harry Darby, appointed by Governor Carlson to fill the unexpired term of the late Clyde Reed, is not making the race.

Alexander Weak

Rev. Alexander, the GOP senatorial nominee in Oklahoma, is a young, handsome, wavy-haired enthusiast, a ready talker who leaves his would-be followers little choice of room to stand on his ultra-narrow platform. He is not catching votes in Oklahoma when he brands all Fair Deal, New Deal and Democratic adherents as Socialists, and brands the President and all around him as stupid misfits. He admits he has been a lifelong Democrat and filed on the Republican ticket after the state organization informed him they were for Congressman Monroney.

Murray Is Candidate

"Mike" Monroney, a former newspaper man, won an impressive victory in unseating the veteran Elmer Thomas in the primary. Local interest is whetted in this Oklahoma election because Johnston Murray, son of "Wild Bill" Murray, colorful governor of an earlier era in Oklahoma politics, is the Democratic gubernatorial nominee. This should make for some hot politics in that state before the election.

SOVIET DELEGATION TAKES IT ON THE LAM. . . Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky (right) leads chief soviet delegate to security council, Jacob Malik (second from right), and other members of the Russian delegation from the banquet hall of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel after New York's governor blasted Russia for keeping 10 to 15 million people living under imperialist slavery. The city of New York was giving a dinner honoring the incoming and outgoing presidents of the United Nations general assembly. As Dewey's blast began, Vishinsky arose, looked around the room and headed for the door.

SOUTH KOREAN WELCOME . . Towns and townspeople everywhere in liberated South Korea have welcomed the victorious U.S. marines and the rest of the United Nations forces as they drove the Reds northward or bottled them up in bayonet-lined military traps. One town, as soon as it heard of the U.S. and South Korean beachhead being established at Inchon, voiced its welcome by hanging a sign across the main street leading into the village.

GENTLE RIB AT COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF . . The United States marines have proved on many occasions that they can take it, and they also have proved they can dish it out. This marine amtrack on the Seoul front displays various signs including: "Machine, Just Propaganda" and "Truman Police Force," all good, clean fun and a tongue-in-cheek attitude toward President Truman for his letter labelling the marines a police force of the navy and claiming they have a propaganda machine equal to Stalin's.

'SINGS' OF MILLION-DOLLAR PAYOFF . . Contact man for bookie Harry Gross in the million-dollar payoff for protection to New York city police, Arthur (Artie) Karp (right), is ushered into county court after breaking the Brooklyn gambling probe wide open by giving the grand jury names of police whom he allegedly bribed. The prosecutor refused to reveal whether any of those named by Karp were high officials. Karp surrendered to the district attorney.

WAR TROPHY . . P.F.C. Luther R. Leguire, Tampa, Fla., shows North Korean flag he found flying from flagpole at former residence of John J. Muccio, ambassador to Korea, at Seoul. Flag had been run up by North Korean Communist troops.

G.O.P. WOMEN'S SPOKESMAN . . Mrs. Gifford Mayes, Kellogg, Idaho, is assistant chairman of the Republican national committee and spokesman and leader of more than two million Republican women.

Robbery of the Government

J PARNELL THOMAS, a Republican representative from New Jersey, occupying an important place in the house, was convicted by the courts for padding federal payrolls and accepting refunds from those receiving the pay for work they did not perform. He was fined $10,000 and given nine months in federal prison. One would think that such an experience, together with the sacrifice of his political career, would serve as a lesson to other members of the house of representatives, but evidently not.

Others now are charged with almost identical offenses. If the charges cannot be proved, the radio commentator, Fulton Lewis, Jr., and the Mutual Broadcasting company can be subjected to a heavy libel suit, and, for the good of the Democratic party, should be. Lewis presents names, dates, and amounts in connection with employment by representatives of those receiving payroll checks as employees of the folding room of the house, without having rendered any service.

Both Lewis and his sponsor, the broadcasting company, are financially able to pay heavy damages if convicted of circulating libelous statements, but they will not be called upon to face the libel suit. Such statements are not so politically damaging, as is proof of such statements. It is better politics not to deny than to defend, if the charges are proveable.

Later, party leaders admitted the facts were as Lewis had presented them and ordered a cleanup of the whole smelly political system. It will mean a few bureaucrats must find other places. They undoubtedly will be successful. No one will be fined. No one will go to prison for an admitted robbery of the government, and no political career will be ruthlessly blasted. Someone got away with something for a time before detection, and now by-gones are to be by-gones, and that is all there is to the wrong doing.

It was my privilege to meet Marshal Jan Christian Smuts in London on several occasions during the closing weeks of World War I. On such meetings, I felt I had talked with a mighty intellect. I considered him an old man then—a veritable sage. He was on the side of England, not because of any special love for that nation, but because of his belief in the civilization and methods of England to those of Germany.

During the Boer war he had fought valiantly against what he pronounced English aggression, but he had lived next door to German East Africa, and had seen the results of the blighting hand of German militarism under the direction of the Kaiser.

At the time of those meetings, Marshal Smuts appeared to me as a world statesman of greater ability than any one of the British cabinet, including Lloyd George. Now I would place him in the class of Herbert Hoover and Bernard Baruch in the ability to fathom world problems. At the time I met him, he had the viewpoint of Woodrow Wilson. He was a believer in the Wilsonian theory of super world government and a supporter of Wilson's idea of a League of Nations. He must have felt a personal blow when the United States senate rejected the League pact. At his death, I found he was not old when I knew him, but only my age. He had a wise head on his then young shoulders.

Jan Smuts, as I knew him, was incapable of hating any people. Could he have headed any one of the strong nations, he would have been a powerful influence in world affairs and the establishment of world peace. With him, rather than Atlee, sitting at the conference table with Marshal Stalin, there would have been more than a match for the always crafty Russian, but he never would have been an appeaser.

The world lost a great and valuable statesman in the passing of Jan Christian Smuts, and South Africa a real leader. Knowing him, even slightly, was one of the valued privileges of my lifetime.

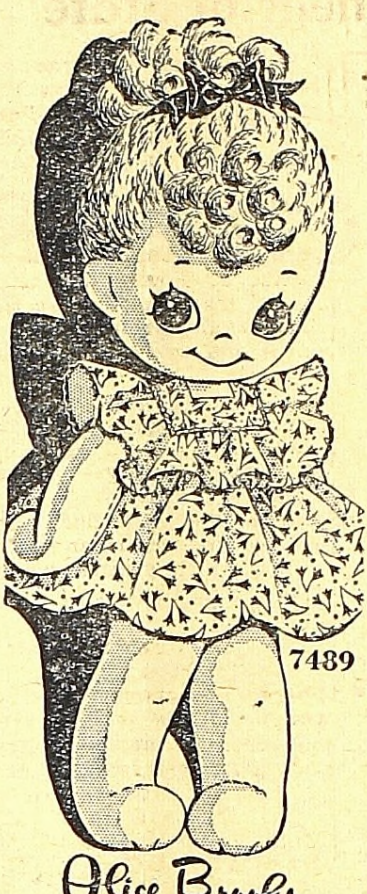

Republican party workers at the local level are discouraged and threatening to quit so far as the national campaigns are concerned. They insist they are not provided with tools by the party leaders. They want a platform and policies to talk about.

Stealings are equally illegal, whether they be from the government or from owned business and whether made by employees of such business institutions or by representatives of the people in congress. But when such representatives happen to be members of the party in power, the attorney general's office is not anxious to prosecute, even though the facts are admitted. The party leaders promise to stop that special method of stealing. If they do, another way is found.

Ratio of Elders Doubles in Century

The ratio of elders to those at the main working years of life has doubled in the United States during the past century, and has increased by nearly two thirds since 1900.

One hundred years ago there were only about six persons at age 65 or older for each 100 of the population at 20 to 64. By 1900 the ratio had climbed to eight, and since then it has risen even more rapidly and is now 13.

Although the segment of the population at 65 or over has been increasing, the relative importance of the dependent population as a whole has declined, due to a rapid drop in the ratio of children to the population at the main productive ages. The number of children under 18 per 100 persons at ages 20-64 has been cut in half, from 107 in 1850 to about 54 in 1950.

In very recent years, however, due to the war and postwar spurt in the birth rate, this trend has been reversed and the child population has increased at a more rapid rate than people at ages 20-64. This will continue for at least a decade, even if allowance is made for a steady decline in the birth rate from its present level, and at the same time the population at the older ages will continue its long-term upward climb.

As a result, we are entering a period when the country will have to provide for the expanding social and economic needs of both its large child and aged populations, each growing at a faster rate than the population at the main working ages.

Ten Key Men Direct Activities Of U. S. Department of State

This is the last of six articles on the state department and its personnel by Walter A. Sheard, Western Newspaper Union's Washington correspondent.

By WALTER A. SHEARD

Washington, D. C.—If you know the top men in any organization whether it be a lodge, fraternal organization, business organization, bank or a government agency, you can judge fairly well the type and kind of personnel that go to make up that organization.

Any person who has met and talked to Secretary of State Dean Acheson is impressed by his earnestness, his sincerity, his intelligence and his integrity.

His next in command is Under Secretary James E. Webb, a native of Granville county, North Carolina.

Frieda Catches Flu, but the Germ Turns on Charlie

By BILLY ROSE

For as long as I can remember, my Uncle Charlie has been complaining of good health — not his own, mind you, but my Aunt Frieda's.

For forty winters, to hear him tell it,—he has been an easy mark for colds, catarrhs and rheumatic pains, while his wife has never developed so much as a sniffle.

Last February, when I dropped in to see them at their Allen Street flat, Charlie was in bed, runny-eyed and carmine-nosed.

"What gives!" I asked. "What always gives?" said my uncle. "Your aunt loses the flu, I find it. She's got a constitutional like a horse."

Frieda was in the kitchen warming up a plaster. "Like a pastrami sandwich she treats me," said Charlie. "I'm all over mustard. Every reasonable woman lays down in bed once in a while. But not her — she won't give me the satisfaction . . ."

Billy Rose

MY FAVORITE relatives came to this country around the time Teddy Roosevelt was elected, and the voyage over, according to Charlie, was the roughest in the history of navigation.

SOUCOOK MASSACRE

By Richard H. Wilkinon

CHARLIE Poe lived by his wits. Not because he had to but because he liked to.

I met him unexpectedly one day last summer in Boston.

3-Minute Fiction

"Not doing anything," he said when I questioned him. "What's wrong?" I asked. "Looking for something," he confessed.

"If you've nothing lined up," I suggested, "how about taking a ride up country with me? I'm making a two-day trip to Burlington."

"Like to," he said. We started the next morning. Charlie wasn't the cheerful companion I anticipated. Obviously there was something on his mind.

Halfway across New Hampshire we came to a place alongside the road where a dozen or more cars were parked.

The man with the tickets saw us and urged us to buy, eloquently elaborating on his printed sign. Charlie dug into his pocket and produced a half dollar.

We followed him along the path. He talked as we progressed. By the time we reached our objective we were all steamed up with apprehension.

uncle telephoned and, without bothering to suppress the triumph in his voice said, "Frieda is flat like a pancake. She's got a flu, with complications yet."

"I'll send my doctor down," I said, "and I'll be around in the morning."

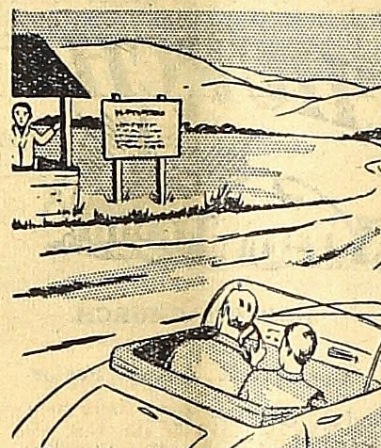

"What are you doing out of bed?" My aunt motioned me in, and in the bedroom, propped up on pillows as usual, was Charlie.

"What should happen?" said Frieda. "Your uncle got overheated running up and down the stairs like a chicken."

"I thought you had the flu," "Oh, that," said Frieda. "I fixed it with a guggle-muggle."

For the benefit of the uninitiate, a "guggle-muggle" is an old East Side remedy composed of warm milk, egg, honey, cinnamon and whiskey.

"Wish your uncle happy returns," said Frieda. "It's his birthday."

Halfway across New Hampshire we came to a place a sign proclaimed the site of the famous Soucook Indian massacre.

We had entered a small clearing. Beyond it was a ledge, overhanging a shallow gorge through which a trickle of water flowed.

"That," said Charlie, "is the best gag I've ever seen."

"How can the tourists prove it didn't?" Charlie asked. "And what do they care. That chap knew what they wanted and he gave it to them. They were satisfied." He became thoughtful.

Charlie didn't mention the Soucook massacre again during our trip, but I suspected it was on his mind. When he left me in Boston two days later he shook hands warmly.

"Where are you off to now?" I asked him. "Oh, the western plan of mine is still rankling," He grinned. "See you around."

Late in September I had occasion to go north again. Traveling the same route that Charlie and I had taken, I remembered the Soucook Massacre. The shelter was still there and there were cars parked outside.

"How about this?" I asked. He grinned. "You gave me the idea," he said. "Remember you wanted to know how the guy could prove the massacre happened here? Well, I asked him, at the same time flashing a tin badge I sometimes carry around. He decided to move on."

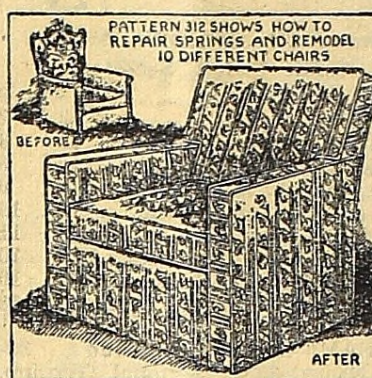

"Is that sort of thing ethical in your profession?" I asked. "Sure. We're all suckers. Some of us are smarter. The guy was getting fed up anyhow. So am I. Some day somebody is going to ask me to prove that massacre story. If I'm smart enough I'll be gone before he gets here."

Suits Him to a Tee

"It must be nice to own a chain of stores."

"Yes; you can spend all your time on the links."

WCS OBSERVES TENTH ANNIVERSARY

Methodist circles throughout the county are observing the 10th anniversary of the founding of the Women's Society of Christian Service, and on Wednesday the Wilber women and the Tawas City women joined in a birthday party at the Wilber church. Several guests from Oscoda were present, and the number of persons participating in the pleasant event was about fifty.

Mrs. John Newberry was in charge of devotions. In outlining the future program of the WCS, eleven candles on a three tiered birthday cake were lighted by Mrs. Werth of Oscoda, the wife of the pastor. The cake donated by the Tawas City women attested to the culinary skill of Mrs. C. L. McLean.

Incidentally the date, October 18 was the anniversary of the organization of the Wilber Ladies' Aid Society in 1911, which group was the forerunner of the WCS. A fact related by Mrs. William Phelps, who was one of the charter members.

Delicious refreshments were served during the social hour following the program.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dorey and daughters of Birmingham spent the week-end at the Francis Dorey home.

Lawrence Jones of East Tawas called on friends here on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bennington of East Tawas called on friends here last Thursday.

FARM FACTS

from your County Agricultural Agent

by HAROLD R. CLARK

"I figure a grass farming program is my best bet says Clarence Brindey whose farm is on the county line in Reno Township." By not raising corn which I consider as always a risk for us here in this section of the county, I can handle my work easier, I don't worry so much about a late spring and I am free to make hay when it is ready to make. When you have corn you usually are cultivating when you should be making hay."

Clarence is now milking twelve cows and is breeding to a registered Holstein bull and plans eventually to have a milking herd of twenty cows. He sells cream and feeds skim milk to calves and pigs. He has some nice heifers and steers in the barn. He never turns young cattle out to pasture before they are a year old. He says under that age they have to have more than grass to be thrifty. He likes Holstein steers. He says they make good growth on pasture and roughages.

With his farm work pretty well caught up he has time now to make some improvements around the barn. He is installing a pressure water system and milking cups. A new milking machine has been installed and I noticed a petcock at every stall in the air line. He said it certainly was a labor saver because you do not skip a cow when milking with two units and that saves a lot of steps.

His new tool shed was his pride and joy, and justly so. It is a laminated rather job which he built himself and mostly from his own native lumber. It is of good size and good height provides room for storage of hay as well as machinery when needed. His shop in the corner of the shed was equipped with power driven tools which have proved to be time and money savers.

The above is what we, Ed Longnecker, Denny Chapman of the soils and crops department of Michigan State College, and I found when we went to see Clarence's field of reed canary grass. He said, "My dad was one of the first in the county to adopt brome grass and it certainly has been a great crop for us, so when I heard about reed canary grass I decided to try some on this west field." Only a little reed canary grass was showing up but Denny said there would be plenty in a year or two. We will be interested in the development of this field.

Two new Michigan State College bulletins have come over my desk. One "Winter Wheat Culture in Michigan" and the other, "Muck Soil Management for Hay and Pasture Production." The wheat bulletin gives complete but brief information on cultural practices, selection of the seed, fertilizing, harvesting and storing. The muck soil bulletin is a result of a recent research in muck soils and was written by Dr. Paul M. Horner, Extension Specialist in Soil Science. The bulletin discusses the adaptable grasses and legumes for hay and pasture under various drainage conditions and the importance of fertilizing muck soils. We have ordered a supply of both bulletins which I feel will be of interest to many farmers. We also have some plans for drying soft corn, which might be of interest to some of our farmers, especially this year.

FARM BUREAU MET AT GAYLORD LAST WEEK

Last Thursday, October 12, Farm Bureau representatives from 11 counties of northern Michigan met at Gaylord to plan for greatest membership drive in Farm Bureau history. Mrs. J. S. Yeager, assistant Secretary of Michigan Farm Bureau spoke to the group. Said Mrs. Yeager "Never before has the farmer needed an organization as is needed today." Mr. Yeager continued, "Many groups and individual feel they can speak for farmers—but only the farmers are qualified to speak for themselves."

Also present were Wesley Hawley, director of Membership, Michigan Farm Bureau, Arthur Behning, district director and Arlo E. Wasson, district representative.

Those attending from Isoco were: Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Newvine, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Strauer. Mrs. Newvine has been appointed County Membership chairman.

Honey Bee Plan

Importance of honey bees for pollination is indicated by a new plan being tried in Ohio. Bees are needed so badly in that state that the federal government is now paying owners a subsidy of $1 for each hive maintained and $3 for each hive moved into a field of red clover.

Uncoated Wood

Any uncoated piece of wood will give off or take on moisture from the surrounding atmosphere until the moisture in the wood has come to a balance with that in the atmosphere.

Minerals Needed by Dairy Cows

Dairy farmers may be losing money in supplying minerals to their cattle, Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent advised his week. Minerals are important. The farm advisor pointed out, but added that feeding minerals not needed, failing to feed essential minerals, or paying too much for commercial multiple minerals is costly.

From Jim Hayes, extension dairy specialist at Michigan State College, the agent received these rules which he thinks will enable farmers to feed mineral properly and economically:

SALT: Common salt should be provided for cattle of all ages on a "help yourself" basis. When salt is supplied this way none need be added to grain rations. The salt should be "loose" if the time of daily access to the supply is short. Do not throw salt in the manger at feeding time—an intake of too much or too little may result. "Block" salt, as the sole supply, should be used only when the cattle can get at it practically all day long, as where they are on pasture, in a pen-type barn, or have containers at the stanchion line.

If the cattle keep in good health and in good production no other mineral need be fed.

Iodized salt should replace common salt if "big neck" or goiter occurs in new born calves, a signal of an iodine deficiency in the herd feed or water. Commercial "Trace Mineral Salt" contains sufficient stabilized iodine to prevent goiter.

Trace mineral salt should replace common salt when a deficiency of cobalt is indicated by cows lacking appetite for grain, by young stock lacking appetite for roughage or grain, or by an animal showing a depraved appetite as when they chew boards or eat hair. The response to providing needed cobalt is quick. Improvement will be noted in a few days.

COBALT-SHY calves are a special problem. When calves getting milk are unthrifty, lack appetite, dissolve one-fourth ounce of either cobalt sulphate or cobalt chloride in one quart of water. Feed one teaspoonful a day till the calf improves. Feeding trace mineral salt to such calves does not seem to correct a cobalt deficiency quickly enough.

STEAMED BONE MEAL, containing phosphorus, need not be fed to dairy cattle unless they have a depraved appetite that feeding trace mineral salt, containing cobalt, does not cure. Calves or young stock practically never need extra phosphorus. Cows may lack phosphorus where the ration consists of only cereal grain, but not if the grain contains at least one-sixth of a high protein feed such as soy, bean oil meal.

Better Buy Buick!

YOU want a new car to be tops in things like style and room and comfort and power——and a thrill-packed fifteen minutes with the nimble number pictured here will show you it has all these things in abundant measure.
So you ask us—how about money? What does it cost to buy a Buick—and to own one?
All right—let us ask you some questions.
Take first cost. Do you know that Buick prices start down at a level below what you'd pay for some sixes—and that every Buick, on a cents-per-pound basis, is a stand-out buy?
Take operating cost. Do you know that the bang you'll get from Buick's Fireball power comes from a valve-in-head engine—recognized by engineers as a thrifty saver of fuel?
Do you know that owners of 1950 Buicks are writing us rave letters, saying that this year's version is the most economical Buick ever built?
Do you know that such comfort features as coil springs on all four wheels protect the car as well as the passengers—and throw in an extra saving because they need no servicing, and are practically breakproof to boot?
Do you know that Dynaflo*—in addition to keeping you fresh as a daisy on a day-long drive—caps its convenience with savings on tires, cuts down the strain on transmissions and engines—and eliminates all friction clutch repairs, because it hasn't any?
Take final cost. Do you know that when the owner of a Buick gets a yen for a later model, the prices that Buicks command on a used-car lot are the ultimate proof of their long-run value?
So if you want a real run for your money, better buy Buick. And the first step is very simple: Go see your Buick dealer—soon—and get an order signed.
* Dynaflo Drive is standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

FOUR-WAY FOREFRONT—This rugged front end (1) sets the style note, (2) saves on repair costs—vertical bars are individually replaceable, (3) avoids "locking horns," (4) makes parking and garaging easier.

The sewage and disposal system and extension of same was discussed.

The report of the Chief of Police for September was read.

Results of Traffic law enforcement: Warnings to drivers ..... 15 Tickets issued (Parking and Traffic) ..... 15 Accidents Attended ..... 1

September 11th arrested 16 year old boy for drunkenness on Lake St., near Mathews.

September 14: Arrested 21 year old man for giving liquor to a minor. Case pending.

Business places found open ... 14 Fines turned in to the city $100.00

I also suggest that there should be a curfew ordinance in effect where a certain time is established for youngsters under the age of 17 to be off the streets.

I believe 11:00 p. m. without a signal such as a whistle or siren would be sufficient and fair to all concerned. It would give the children time to return home from the show, also boys working in bowling alleys. At certain times I have been confronted with the question as to what time they are to be off the streets which results in the youngster going home when he desires. Respectfully submitted,

George W. Ruth.

Tight Rope

By Allison L. Burks

Sheriff Poole launches an investigation into the death of Anne Delahay who was killed by a falling boulder while on a swimming party with Stella Moore, who is posing as Dorinda LaCroix in the Thorndyke home. Stella was hired by Edward Thorndyke, to perform the hoax because, he said, it might be fatal to grandmother Thorndyke to learn that the real Dorinda is dead. But Mrs. Thorndyke learns the truth and dies of what is believed to have been a heart attack. Dorinda found lipstick traces on the old lady's pillow and feared she might have been murdered. There is a feeling that whoever pushed the boat off might have been trying to kill Dorinda, mistaking Anne for her.

CHAPTER XIII

"A regrettable accident occurred—" Edward began but the sheriff interposed quickly.
 "Something occurred which appeared to be an accident. We're not certain that it was."
 "But what happened?" Carol asked again. "Was anyone hurt?"
 "A friend of Dorinda's was killed," Edward told her. "I don't think you know her, Carol. There was a miniature landslide at the bluff. Miss Delahay was struck by a falling boulder."
 "A friend of Dorinda's." Her eyes turned to Dorinda in quick sympathy. "But how terrible for you! Oh, I wish I hadn't gone away. Maybe there was something I could have done."

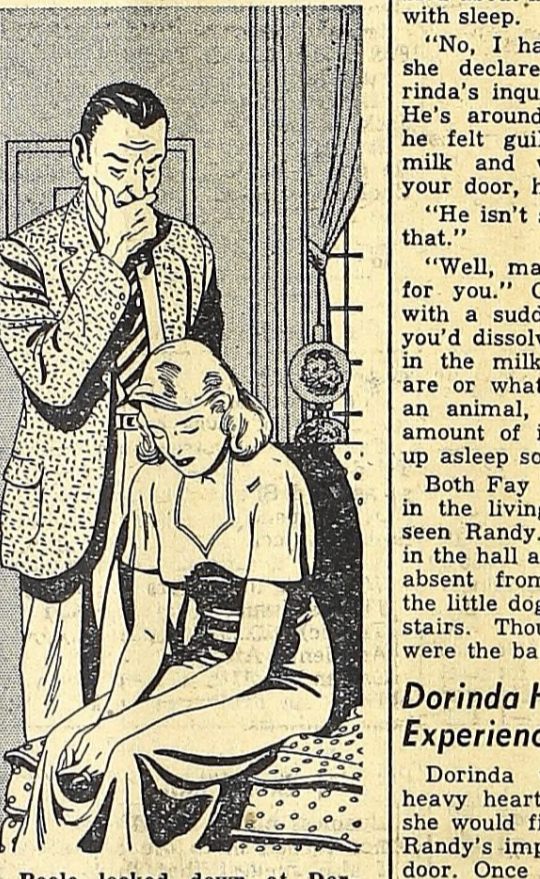

"There was nothing anyone could have done," Dorinda said dully.
 Poole crossed the hall to the foot of the stairs. He stopped in front of the girl who sat there, looking down at her.
 "You haven't thought of anything else?" he asked.
 She shook her head.
 "Rather an odd thing happened," he went on thoughtfully. "Yesterday, it seems that Johnny Heffner, who makes deliveries for McGregor's, was out this way at about the time Miss Delahay was killed. He saw a girl walking along the road just outside the place. He thought she turned in at the gate although he had passed the house by that time. He took this girl to be you. You weren't outside any time during the afternoon?"
 "I didn't come up from the beach at all until—" Dorinda stopped, her mouth tightening.
 "That's what I understood. Queer, how a girl with yellow hair—who couldn't possibly be you according to your friends and relatives—keeps bobbing up. You remember there was a yellow-haired girl with Taylor just before he had his accident."
 "That's what Mr. Hawley told us."

Fay Discovers Dorinda Is Keeping Door Locked

"And now she shows up again. Miss LaCroix, you told me yesterday that you saw something yellow at the top of the bluff. Think hard, now, could that something have been a glimpse of someone's yellow hair?"
 Dorinda hesitated. "I don't know," she said slowly. "I don't think it could have been. I didn't see anyone but if she, that girl, had been crouched down behind the wall with just a little of her hair showing—I couldn't be sure."
 Poole's lips thinned to a straight line. "It begins to look as if this accident wasn't so accidental after all." There was a certain satisfaction in his tone.
 "What are you talking about?" Edward demanded sharply.
 "What's all this about Dorinda seeing yellow? It's the first I've heard of it." His face was crumpled by some inner agitation. "Mr. Poole, my niece is a nervous, imaginative girl. I hope you'll not let anything she may have fancied she saw, at a time when she certainly must have been in a more or less hysterical state, influence you."
 Poole fumbled with his cigarette papers. He glanced at Edward obliquely from under dust-colored brows. "H'm, your niece may be imaginative—but there's certainly a few things about this affair that can't be laid to imagination. She didn't imagine the girl at the Silver Slipper. She didn't imagine the girl who turned in at your gate yesterday."
 Edward moistened his dry lips with the tip of his tongue. "Surely, Sheriff, you can't pay attention to such trifles. I know nothing about the girl at the roadhouse. But as to such a person coming in here—after all, your delivery boy didn't actually see her enter the gate. And if he did see anyone, it was probably Dorinda herself. Possibly she has forgotten."
 Poole's lips quirked. "Cleve Adams must have forgotten as well, then. He seems quite certain she was with him all afternoon." His voice changed suddenly. "You seem very anxious, Mr. Thorndyke, that this affair should be considered an accident. Surely, if someone deliberately pushed that boulder over the bluff, you want us to find out who it was."
 Fay's blue eyes had darkened. "I'm beginning to think things are rather strange around here myself," she observed dubiously.
 "Nonsense!" Edward barked. He looked at Dorinda, his eyes hard with suppressed anger. He opened his lips as if to speak, then turned and strode back into the living room without a word.

 Carol started up the stairs. "Come on up," she whispered to Dorinda as she passed her, and with a glance at Fay who stood looking after Edward, the girl followed the nurse up the steps.
 "I want to know more about this," Carol said as they came into the upper hall. "If you'll wait for me in your room until I change, I'll be with you."
 In ten minutes Carol knocked softly and came in, wearing a red-and-white printed house coat, a red ribbon holding back the dark curls from her face.
 So Dorinda told her. It seemed she almost knew the story by heart now she had told it so often. When she had finished, Carol sat silent for a few minutes, her dark face thoughtful. Then she rose and paced up and down the room, puffing furiously at her cigarette.
 "It doesn't seem as if it could be anything except an accident," she commented, returning to her chair. "But I don't like it. I suppose I'll have to stay a day or two longer." She shivered. "But let's look out for accidents."

 She did not see Carol again. Lana had already departed in her car. Edward and Fay set out only at dinner, where Edward maintained an unbroken silence, and Fay, too, ignored her. Harriet was quiet as well, seemingly absorbed in some deep study of her own.
 Fay did speak to Dorinda though as the girl excused herself from the table and was about to leave the dining room.
 "I didn't know you locked your door at night, Dorinda. I can understand you were upset after what happened here yesterday but surely you're not afraid of anything—or anyone—right here in the house?"
 "Why, how did you know?"
 "Greer told us about your friend and I thought I'd come and speak to you. It wasn't late when we came home, not much after ten. But your door was fastened and I thought you must be asleep."
Dorinda's Dog Randy Suddenly Disappears
 "I was—almost." She wouldn't tell Fay how frightened she had been.
 She spent the evening in her room, trying to read.
 Carrie came up at nine-thirty with her hot milk. "You look ghastly, Miss. You'd better go to bed," she said commiseratingly.
 So, soon after her departure, Dorinda undressed. After a moment's hesitation, she picked up the little envelope which had been left on the bedside table and shook two more of the small tablets into her glass of milk. She had to sleep, she had to forget. For a few hours at least.
 But, before she had time to drink it, there was a knock. Greer's voice reached her from beyond the panelled door.
 "Mr. Adams is on the phone, Miss Dorinda. I didn't know whether you'd retired or not."
 "Oh, ask him to wait, please. I'll be right down."
 She slipped on a robe over her thin night dress. Randy was watching her, his black eyes wide awake. "Be a good pup." She shut the door carefully behind her and went downstairs.
 "Hello, Dorinda, are you all right?" Cleve sounded anxious. "Poole was here just a little while ago. He's all worked up over this business, and darn it, he's almost got me thinking that there's more to it than meets the eye. I don't believe it—not really—but I'm uneasy. I had to call you and be sure everything was okay with you."
 "Of course, I'm all right, Cleve," she said. "But I'm glad you called.

Poole looked down at Dorinda.

Carrie came to her in the morning while Dorinda was dressing. "I haven't seen him anywhere," she said soberly. "I think he must have got outside somehow. Could be he's gone back where he came from."
 "You shouldn't have anything to do with me, Carrie," Dorinda declared. "Everything—everyone that comes near me meets with trouble." She blinked back the tears.
 "Now, Miss, I wouldn't say that. But someone in the house did let your dog out. No getting away from that. I asked Mr. Greer this morning and he said he thought Mr. Edward and Miss Fay were in the living room all the time you were downstairs, but either one of 'em could have gone through the dining room to the kitchen and up the backstairs. Though I can't think why they'd do that."
 "Randy didn't bother anyone," the girl choked. "If he's gone—"
 "Don't feel so bad, Miss. Mr. Cleve'll give you another dog."
 Dorinda shook her head. "I don't want another one. It wouldn't be the same. Besides, I'd be afraid something might happen again."
 Dorinda could not believe he had wandered away. After breakfast, she searched desolately through the house again, trying to think of some spot she had overlooked. Last night she and Carrie had gone over the basement and even the outside garages. But there was one place they hadn't searched—the big attic which covered the spreading house like a cap.
 Carrie had tried the door and found it locked. "Well, it's no use looking up there," she asserted. "Mr. Greer has the only key to that door. And even your Randy, smart as he is, couldn't crawl through a keyhole."
 "Seems queer, locking up an attic." Dorinda had to try the door herself before she was satisfied. "Why do they do it?"
 "Oh, years ago Mrs. Thorndyke found one of the maids taking her boy friend up there on the sly. So she ordered the door be kept locked and I guess it just got to be a habit. There's nothing worth anything up there."
 But, Dorinda thought now, it was the one place they hadn't gone. Randy could only be there if someone had shut him up deliberately.
 Greer was polishing silver in the butler's pantry when she told him what she wanted. He detached the key to the attic door from his heavy key ring but hesitated before he handed it to her.
 "Wouldn't you like me to look for you, Miss Dorinda?" he asked. "It's pretty dusty in the attic, I'm afraid. And I'm quite sure your little dog couldn't be there."

Growing in Prayer

Lesson for October 22, 1950

LIFE MAGAZINE, which does not set up as an authority on religion some years ago carried a story about a little girl who was going to be confirmed in the Episcopal church. In describing the requirements for confirmation, the reporter said she had "graduated from 'Now I Lay Me' to the Lord's Prayer."
 Most Christian ministers, including those of the denomination in which she was confirmed, would agree that (1) if that is as far as she had "graduated," she still had a very long way to go in learning about prayer, but (2) the little girl had got about as far as thousands of "Christians" ever go. They learn the Lord's Prayer when they are children and that's that. When they grow up they don't actually pray, themselves; they leave it up to Grandma or the preacher—or the tiny tots who "sound so cute" saying "Now I Lay Me."

The Lord's Prayer
 THIS is not meant to say anything against the Lord's Prayer, or to imply that we are wrong every time we use it. But our Lord did not mean that prayer to be used as a magic formula, he did not intend it as a substitute for our own free prayers. We know this is so, because in the first place he himself never used that prayer again, and in the second place, although dozens of prayers by Apostles and others are recorded in the New Testament, the Lord's Prayer, as such, is never used. Then what is the Lord's Prayer?
 It is his suggestion as to the lines along which, and the spirit in which, we ought to pray. (See the book by William Douglas Chamberlain on the Lord's Prayer, "The Manner of Prayer.")
 One truth suggested by the Lord's Prayer is that we are not alone in the world. Every verb, every pronoun referring to the one who prays, is in the plural—OUR Father... forgive US... lead US... We have to remember that God is Father of others, not of ourselves alone; that we dare not be selfish in asking special favors of him for ourselves.

Maturing in Prayer
 PRAYER at its lowest level is nothing much more than "Gimme." The untaught pray-er may even talk to God as if he were a personal servant, a kind of celestial bell-boy on call whenever we ring for him.
 The growing Christian will grow in prayer as in all things; he will grow to the point where, even when he prays as an individual, he will be remembering how many ties bind him to other individuals; he will pray less and less for his own necessities and more and more for what he may share with others.
 The beginning Christian, the childish Christian, will pray as a child prays. If his prayers were all arrows they would all point toward himself. As for the mature Christian, if his prayers were visible arrows they could be seen pointing into all the world; he will have those in every land for whom he prays, for his heart bears their names in love and faith.

Learning God's Will
 A GOOD deal of worrisome argument has gone on over the question: Can prayer change the will of God? We shall be less bothered by that question when we discover two truths.
 One is that in the Lord's Prayer, and in the Bible generally, we have already revealed to us the lines along which God's will moves; and the other is that prayer itself is a means of learning God's will.
 If we know that God's will is against something, then, if we have any sense, we know there is no use in praying for that thing. If we know God will desire something, then we can be confident that our prayers in that direction will be heard with favor.
 A study of the Lord's prayer, from this angle, will teach a Christian how to pray in accordance with God's will. Paul knew this. When he prayed that his Philippian friends' "love may abound more and more," he knew very well that this was precisely in line with the will of the Father who is eternal Love.

Iosco Forges Ahead In Quality Holsteins

Iosco county farmers, recently commended by Jim Hayes, Michigan State extension dairyman for the excellent butterfat average made by the county herds on test, are still forging ahead with better holstein breeding.

Of considerable interest to local dairymen is holstein trade news made last week. The United States Department of Agriculture has just released the new proof on Shianawana Commander Ormsby, formerly owned by George A. Prescott, Jr., & Sons of this county.

Commander is a half brother to Shianawana Captain sold last year to the Artificial Breeder's Association at the college by Lloyd Johnston of Au Gres. His selling price was $3500.

The new proof on Commander shows five daughters owned by Johnston and four by George A. Prescott, III with a combined butterfat average of 454 pounds and 13,023 pounds of milk. Daughter and dam comparison show an increase of 1,591 pounds of milk, a plus 2 test and plus 61 pounds of fat.

Mr. Prescott has nine Commander daughters in his herd and is now crossing with a Carnation herd sire. Ted Anschuetz, another local dairyman, recently purchased a son of a Commander daughter, a son of Twenty Grand 7th, son of the $20,000 Twenty Grand bull, Waldemar Bischoff has leased Sarallen Segis Commander, son of another Commander daughter and sired by Rainbow Sir Bess Rose Segis, another great sire sold to Michigan State for $5000.

Ed Smith of Alabaster recently purchased another son of a Commander daughter sired by Mr. Prescott's Carnation bull and Roger Earl a Commander daughter freshening next month to the Carnation bull.

Holstein breeders of the county need take a back seat to none in their herd improvement programs in which they are most ably assisted by the new tester, Rupert Bentley of Whittemore.
