Arrests May Clear Up NEM Cabin Thefts

Three Flint Men Face Breaking and Entering Charges

What is thought may clear up a large number of breaking and entering cases throughout the northern Michigan area came through the arrest of George Hardy and Claude Krueger of Flint. The three are brothers and the first two were out on parole in Genesee county.

Tools and accessories on a dragline owned by Louis Brindley and operating at Hale had been stolen. The sheriff's department and state police traced the goods to George and Hardy Krueger. They were arrested, together with Claude Krueger who was brought here on a former charge of traffic violation. They made a plea of not guilty.

A dozen or more northern Michigan cabin owners from as far as Traverse City have identified pieces of property taken from their cabins and found in the possession of the Kruegers, by Sheriff Ivan O'Farrell and state police.

Robert Tremain of Hale, implicated in the theft of property from the dragline, pleaded guilty to petit larceny, and was given a ten-day jail sentence. He was released Wednesday.

Holstein Club Secretary Urges To Vote "No" on Yellow Oleo

October 26, 1950 P. N. Thornton, Editor The Tawas Herald Tawas City, Michigan To the Editor,

Your newspaper, The Tawas Herald, reaches and is read by a large number of the families in this community and I wish to appeal to them through this column for support in a matter of concern to them and me. We are being asked to vote in the November 7th election as to whether we want to legalize yellow oleo in Michigan. It is my belief that we should vote "NO" on proposal number 4 and see to it that we muster up a large group who will vote "No" also.

We do not want yellow oleo sold in Michigan in imitation of our dairy butter. If colored oleo is allowed to be sold why not let them color it pink, red, green, blue or some other color but not yellow.

Steel sheeting was driven down to the gravel bottom to prevent the rats from undermining it again.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman-MacArthur Discuss Korea Reconstruction at Wake Meeting; Dewey Says He Won't Run in 1952

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

WAKE ISLAND: Talks Lack Something

On the hot, lonely little island of Wake in mid-Pacific, President Harry S. Truman and Gen. Douglas MacArthur, two men who have had much to do with world destiny in the last few years, had a talk.

After it was over a statement was issued which said the two discussed a number of subjects vital to world problems. According to the press release they talked about reconstruction of Korea, the possibility of a Japanese peace treaty, and the general agreement to strive toward peace in unity with other U.N. nations.

The meeting was of great interest to the American public from another angle. MacArthur and Mr. Truman had never met and their conflicting views on a number of subjects had been reported in the press during recent months.

Reports of the meeting indicated that MacArthur had only a general idea of the topics to be discussed when he was asked to meet the President. It was also reported that Truman conducted the talks from an agenda scribbled on a pad.

Observers believed these reports gave an indication of the how and why of the meeting. The President had a number of topics to discuss with the U.N. commander and he limited the talks to that agenda. It was also suggestive, some observers believed, that Mr. Truman was acting in his capacity as President and commander-in-chief and not as a man seeking advice.

On the surface the meeting was cordial. In farewell, MacArthur said: "Good-by, sir. Happy landing. It has been a real honor to talk with you."

But the other MacArthur seemed revealed when he said good-by to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff: "Good-by, Omar. Don't let them get you down up there."

To the observer not so close to hand, the MacArthur-Truman meeting seemed to lack something, although no one has been able to say definitely just what.

DEWEY:

A Bombshell

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tossed a political bombshell upon the national scene by saying flatly he would not run for President in 1952 and would back Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the Republican nomination.

The governor had no more than made his statement when other liberal Republicans, including Harold Stassen, backed the move.

"Under no circumstances that I can conceive," Dewey said, "will I accept the nomination for President in 1952, and I doubt if there is any possibility the situation would arise thereafter."

The Democrats had nothing to say about Dewey's announcement. President Truman when informed of it was reported to have murmured "that's fine" and continued his swim in the Pacific.

A number of political figures, however, recalled that the governor said shortly before he announced for the third term as governor of New York, he would not be a candidate for that office again.

The last time Eisenhower mentioned politics he said he did not want to identify himself with any one political party. He added that "I have no political connections, no political ambitions, and don't want any connections with politics."

HARD TO BELIEVE

Nine Firms Announce Price Cuts

In these days when the public seems to be fair game for all kinds of price boosts, it's hard to believe that nine companies announced price cuts. The cuts were on bag-packed coffee, airplane parts and asphalt tile.

The A & P company and Grand Union company, retail grocery chains, announced reductions on the price of their various brands of bag

"Firm action in Korea must not lull us into a sense of false security. What happened in Korea has set world peace on stronger foundations. There may be time to build up a European army with strong aid from Britain, the United States and Canada," Winston Churchill told a cheering mass rally of the Conservative party.

"As for myself, my convictions as to the place and methods through which I can best contribute something to the cause of freedom have been often expressed. They have not changed. Here at Columbia University I have a task that would excite the pride and challenge the qualifications and strength of any man. I still believe that it offers to such an individual as myself rich opportunities for serving," General Eisenhower said in answer to Thomas Dewey's suggestion he become the Republican candidate for president in 1952.

THE DRAFT:

Fathers in Line

National Selective Service Director Lewis B. Hershey, worried about where the men are coming from for the draft, announced he might ask the President to erase almost all draft dependency deferments except for fathers. Later he said he even favored taking some men with children.

Hershey said it might be necessary to take some fathers if the goal of three million men in the armed forces by next June was to be met.

Meanwhile 19,000 young physicians, dentists and veterinarians registered for a possible 21 months' military service. Of the total, 1,522 face induction by January 15 unless they volunteer first.

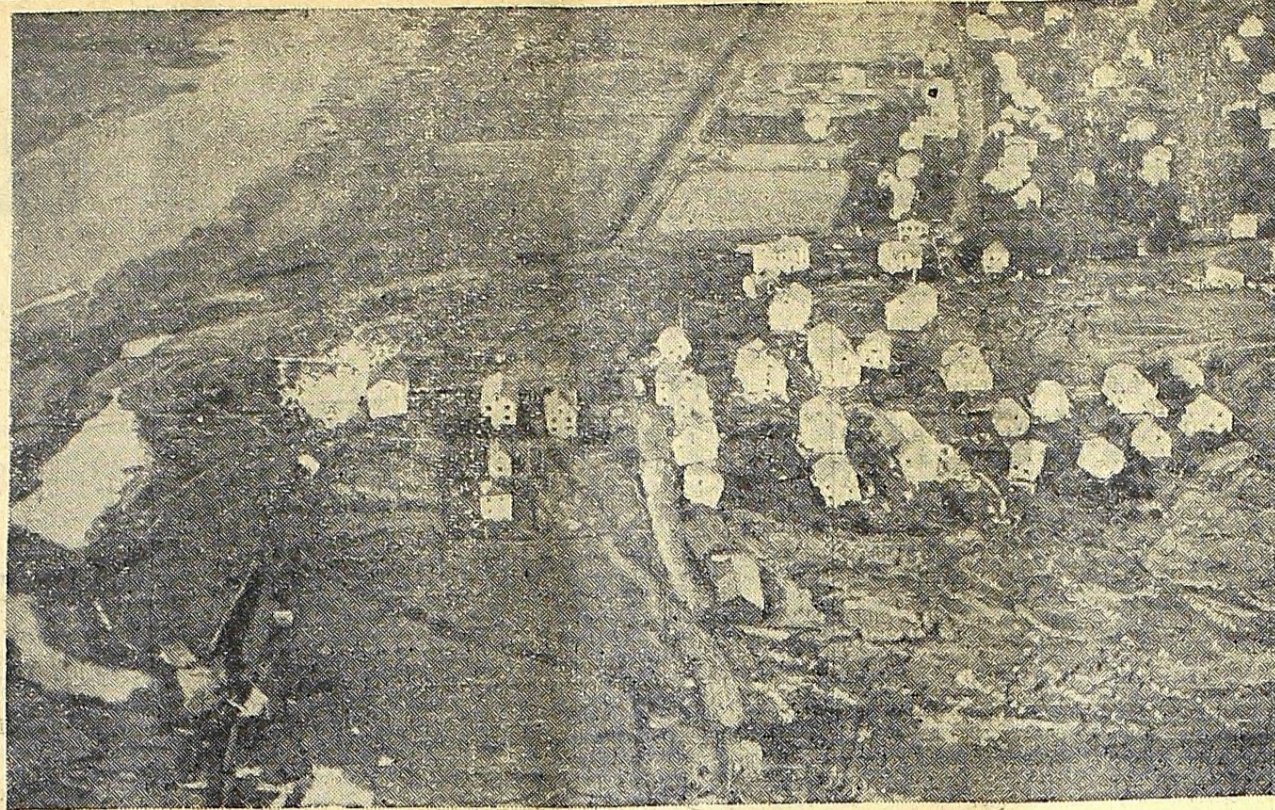

If there are too few volunteers the army will begin an induction program November 15 by taking 300 physicians, 300 dentists and 50 veterinarians. Another 322 doctors, 200 dentists and 50 veterinarians will be called by January 15.

All doctors through age 50 eventually must register, but the first group includes only those deferred during World War II to train at their own or government expense and saw less than 21 months service.

WHERE MUD BURIED 40 HOMES . . . An aerial view of a section of Surte, a town in Sweden about 10 miles north of Goeteborg, where a landslide which was followed by days of heavy rains devastated this industrial village recently and destroyed 40 homes. In the catastrophe, two persons died as their homes were swept from their foundations by a sea of mud and water. During first aid operations, many others were rescued from their ruined houses. Surte is a thriving center of manufacture for Sweden's glassware and chemical industry. Some of the homes completely disappeared in the muddy morass that suddenly swept over them without warning.

DURING WORLD WAR II women, like the one above using a turning tool, proved highly efficient workmen in plants where women had never before been employed.

WOMANPOWER Womanpower Is Great Unused U.S. Resource in Event of War

Former women defense workers of World War II, stirred by news headlines of bigger armament appropriations, are beginning to apply to their old employers for factory jobs, but the jobs generally won't be available for many months yet, reports the family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

From industrial plants in such former war industry centers as Detroit, Cleveland, Chicago, and Minneapolis, personnel departments report scattering "early bird" calls from women who dropped out of war production work after V-J day.

It will be well into 1951, however, before current armament legislation in congress can turn into any sizeable number of factory jobs.

But when the need comes, we will have an estimated reserve pool of 1 1/2 million women, some already trained but most yet to be trained. Normal population growth is increasing this pool at the rate of 200,000 per year, the bureau reports.

Fine World War II Record

Women have proven their value to defense, and therein lies a story in which America overcame prejudice and tradition.

At the beginning of World War II industry found it necessary to recruit women, but they were met with apathy or outright resistance. Many employers and men workers believed that women had no mechanical aptitude, were not accustomed to regular working hours and close supervision and would not work side by side with men without disrupting plant morale.

But as the number of women on production lines continued to increase in World War II, employers and foremen were effusive in their praise of the quality and quantity of the work done by women under their supervision and were even willing to admit its equality to that of men.

In 1940, one American woman out of five was gainfully employed. In 1940, one out of every four women held a paying job. From the Pearl Harbor attack in December, 1941, to the peak of 1944, 6 1/2 million women joined the working force, bringing the total number of employed women to approximately 20 million. Of these, some 48 were production workers in factories.

Many in Heavy Industry

There were 478,000 women in the aircraft industry; they made up 36.5 per cent of the production force, as against a mere fraction of 1 per cent in 1940. In the making of electrical machinery and equipment, a light industry which had employed women on almost a third of its production jobs before the war, the number of women rose to 370,000 or 48 per cent.

The shipbuilding industry, in which a number of jobs are physically difficult, disagreeable, or dangerous, was understandably slow to admit women, yet in October, 1943, there were 164,700 women (9.6 per cent) in the shipyards. Many of them worked outdoors in all kinds of weather or tackled jobs such as cleaning bilges and sandblasting. In other heavy industries, such as steel, reluctant to employ women, the number in the plants continued to increase until 381,600 women were employed by autumn of 1944.

In the event of war and total mobilization, women would play an ever greater part in armed forces than during World War II. During the last conflict 275,000 women were members of the armed forces, about one-third the number that the army estimated it could have used. A new emergency would undoubtedly require a greater number of women in the service.

Women Can Carry Their Share in War

Another war would be a bitter struggle for survival and the great untapped strength of the United States is its womanpower. In such a struggle we must put aside the thinking: man-woman, single-married, Christian-Jew, black-white, and labor-management. None of these must be allowed to interfere with an all-out effort for victory. Women have proven they are capable of carrying their share of the burden and any other thinking would lead to defeat.

Your Worst and Best

Lesson for November 5, 1950

"Within my earthly temple there's a crowd. There's one of us that's humble, one that's proud. There's one that's broken-hearted for his sin. And one that, unrepentant, sits and grins. From such perplexing doubt I could be free. If I could once be certain which is me."

FROM some anonymous rhyme-master comes this complaint, which any of us might have truthfully written if we had thought about it. Which is me, anyway? I seem to have three selves. One is a good deal better than my everyday or ordinary self. On rare occasions he will do something or other so good it surprises even my best friends — it "isn't like me." On the other side is another self, much worse than my everyday personality. He too surprises me by acts or thoughts so dreadful I am afraid of him and ashamed too. Yet both these "other selves" are "me" too.

Life is a Fight

THE TRUTH of the business is that life, when a man takes it seriously, is a fight. It is a war between your best and your worst self. Your two other-selves are there every moment, like ghosts, or rather like a bright angel and a dark one.

It is always possible to become a better man than you are; also, alas, it is possible to become far worse than you are. No man stays the same through life. He is continually pressing upward, or plunging downward, or varying between the two. There has been only one person, Christians believe, who actually fulfilled all the good that was possible for him. The possibilities for evil in his life remained only possibilities—he never let them come to pass.

The possibilities for good, on the other hand, became real. His dark angel remained only a ghost; his good angel was simply his real self. At no point in his life was he forced to say to himself, "I wish I had ... I wish I had not." And yet, even for him life was a struggle. We do not believe he sinned. We do believe he was tempted; and if the temptation was real, then he could have sinned. No man can be really tempted to do what he cannot do. Yes, the Master had his fight. But the point is: he won.

The Way to Win

CHRISTIANS are not exempt in this war of good against evil. We are not "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease" any more than Jesus was. We do not drift into the Promised Land. We have to fight our way uphill.

Yet Christians are expected to win. That is, God stands beside each Christian in his fight, and God's power is for the Christian's use. As Saint Paul says, with each temptation God provides a "way of escape." Our prayer "Lead us not into temptation" can always be answered. Sometimes it can be answered by ourselves. That is, we cannot leave the fight to God.

But we can win as Jesus won: sometimes by standing and doing battle where we are, sometimes simply by leaving temptation behind. For often the best thing to be done is to retreat. Get as far as you can from whatever tempts your worst self. Don't stand debating between right and wrong when you know which is which. Turn your back on the wrong — run, don't walk, to the nearest exit!

Is Alcoholism a Disease?

ONE of the common temptations of millions at all times is alcoholism. It is popular to speak of this as a "disease," and yet it is the only disease of which victims have actually cured themselves. Dr. Brady, whose medical column is well known, reminds us that nobody ever got over migraine headaches, or heart disease, simply by deciding to be well. But men and women have got over alcoholism, essentially by deciding to be well, and sticking to that decision.

Alcoholics Anonymous, that well-known group of former victims, who have been very successful in helping slaves of this habit to become their best selves, use much the same methods we find in the New Testament: (1) staying out of temptation's way, (2) overcoming evil with good; and (3) laying hold of the "Power, not ourselves, that makes for righteousness." Cecil Cabble was elected Chairman of the district Agricultural Council and the delegate to State Agricultural Council and State Cooperative Extension Service Advisory Board. Cabble was appointed delegate to the Standish district by the Iosco County Council at the October 10 meeting.

Twenty delegates from seven counties and the county agricultural agents and 4-H Club agents met with the heads of the Michigan State College Cooperative Extension Service, October 24, C. V. Ballard Director of Cooperative Extension Service, explained the state organization, and its purpose. He said "We feel that the effectiveness of our service to the people at the County level is determined by the degree in which we meet needs and desires of the people we serve." He explained how the local county councils can help to formulate the county extension program. Since there are policies and needs that could be more effective on a state wide basis, the district and the state councils can coordinate the efforts of local groups to a unified objective. The influence of the over all state organizations can move in both directions, that is, local to the state level and vice-versa.

B. D. Kuhn, State Agricultural Extension Leader illustrated by charts the trend of agricultural population. He pointed out how the nations population was moving from farms to urban and rural urban communities. This movement presents new problems. He asked, "Whose responsibility is it to meet these new problems? Are these new situations to be neglected, or is this a responsibility of cooperative extension service?" He explained that this decision can be a responsibility of this new state organization.

The counties included in the Standish district are Iosco, Arenac, Gladwin, Clare, Ogemaw, Oscoda, and Alcona.

Mrs. Ralph Burt and Mrs. A. W. Miller are the district delegates from the county 4-H Council and the Women's Extension Council respectively.

98 Attend Farm Bureau Meeting

Ninety-eight farmers met at the Community Building in Hale October 25 to hold the 2nd annual meeting of the Iosco County Farm Bureau.

Niles Vermillion, Manager Michigan Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. was guest speaker and gave a brief history and the merits of the Automobile Insurance Co. the newest venture of Michigan Farm Bureau. "The success or failure of this non-profit organization, he said, depends on the farmers, and its benefits are made available to Farm Bureau members only." Mr. Vermillion predicted non-officially, that insurance business would reach the million dollar mark by the end of the year. Junior Clemens local agent for the company received a round of applause when asked to stand by Mr. Vermillion. Clemens territory includes Iosco and Ogemaw counties.

Included on the business agenda for the evening were committee reports by Mrs. A. T. Vary, William Herriman, Tom Nelkie, and Frank Smith. The program reflected by each committee proves that Iosco County Farm Bureau is going ahead by the efforts of each and every member under the direction of good leadership.

Clark, in support of a County Soil Conservation Program stated our nation is only as strong as our ability to produce. Less people are feeding more people than ever before in the history of the nation through mechanized farming and a high rate of efficiency. The demand upon our soil is so great that soil conservation practices are absolutely essential. He advised that farmers become better informed on soil conservation.

A brief address was made by Orlo Wasson, District Representative on Consumer-Farmer relations. Each party, he said, is equally guilty of misunderstanding each other. More effort should be made in each case to correct the misunderstanding.

The program included a poem, "The Cheese Works," by Elmer Britt and a monologue, "Her First Vote," by Mrs. August Lorenz.

Refreshments were served by the Farm Bureau Women's Committee.

The following election of directors was held at the 2nd annual Farm Bureau meeting. James Mielock, west Reno, President; John Mortenson, north Plainfield, vice president; Joe Barnes, lower Town Line, Frank Smith, Reno No. 1, Orville Strauer, Sherman, L. S. Little, Grant No. 1, G. O. A. Prescott, III, Vine, Tom Nelkie, Laidlawville, Wilma Biggs, Lower Hemlock, Henry Hobart, Wilber Women's Director, Mrs. Irene Lorenz, Junior Farm Bureau Director, Harold Smith, Ms. William Herriman was re-elected as Secretary-Treasurer.

4-H CLUB NOTES

4-H Club Reporters Say—

Last week Gailly Werth, Dorothy West and Charlene McCall of the East Tawas 4-H Club attended a Service Club meeting in Ogemaw county. Dorothy played a few numbers on her accordin. The girls enjoyed their first 4-H Service Club Box Social.

We were very pleased to hear from Mrs. George Waters of Reno township concerning the possibility of organizing a 4-H Club. Many communities are just getting underway and I'm sure there will be one within reasonable distance of the Waters farm.

They tell me there will likely be no 4-H Council Association meeting until the second Monday in January—the 9th.

The Whittemore Grange is meeting on November 6 at the Grange Hall. There will be a discussion of 4-H Club work—how clubs are organized and successfully conducted. Mr. Davenport, District 4-H Club Agent, will be there.

We would like to urge our 4-H Club potato growers to attend the Potato and Apple Show at Petoskey November 7 and 8. The winner of the 4-H Potato contest will be awarded a trip to the National 4-H Club Congress at Chicago the last of November.

The Grant Township 4-H Club met on October 12, and signed up for their winter projects. There were seven boys who signed up for the Electrical project with Ralph Burt as their leader. Eleven boys signed up for Handicraft with Stanley Van Sickle as leader and seven girls signed for sewing with Mrs. Ralph Burt as their leader. The boys with their Dairy and beef will continue their projects throughout the winter with Mrs. Alton Durant as their leader.

Michigan Voter: PROTECT YOURSELF AND FAMILY!

1 PROTECT YOURSELF Against Imitation Butter

Your right to know—for sure—that there's BUTTER on the table—is threatened by a move to tamper with Michigan's long-standing imitation-BUTTER law. The present law is a GOOD law. It protects you—your family—and the family table. Especially, it also protects you when you "eat out."

Now, with a referendum vote on this subject on the ballot November 7, it's up to you. It's your job to protect yourself against imitation-BUTTER—to make sure you get the real thing. Vote "NO" on Proposal 4, November 7th.

2 PROTECT YOURSELF Against High Milk Prices

In case Michigan's present law—prohibiting substitutes colored yellow in imitation of BUTTER—is rendered ineffective in the November general election... thousands of Dairy Farms will be driven out of business. Milk will become scarcer... higher in price... as it has in other states which now allow imitation-BUTTER to be sold colored yellow. It is no accident that milk prices in cities in those states are 1 1/2 cents a quart higher than milk prices in states (including Michigan) which maintain a protective law against selling imitation-BUTTER colored yellow*. Keep Michigan milk plentiful—reasonable in price. Vote "NO" on Proposal 4, November 7th.

3 PROTECT YOUR OWN and Michigan's Prosperity

WARNING: The first year Canada allowed substitutes to be colored yellow in imitation of BUTTER cost Dairy Farmers there 50 MILLION DOLLARS. That can happen in Michigan... where 600,000 people depend on Dairying for their livelihood... with an investment TWICE THAT OF THE ENTIRE WORLD OPERATIONS OF THE FORD MOTOR COMPANY! Reduce Michigan's income by many millions of dollars and you depress the market for all kinds of Michigan goods... besides irreparably damaging Michigan's soil and agriculture.

For your own sake... for your family's sake... for Michigan's sake... VOTE "NO"—on Proposal 4—general election, November 7th!

These facts are published by the Dairy Action League, 415 Hollister Building, Lansing, Mich., working with consumer, labor, farm and dairy groups in behalf of keeping Michigan's present and effective anti-imitation law. It is financed by the 600,000 Michigan People dependent on dairying.

Tight Rope By Allison L. Burks

Stella Moore and Cleve Adams, while on a trip to town see Edward Thorndyke and a "blonde woman" pass in a car. Edward has hired Stella to pose as Dorinda LaCroix, who is dead, in order to help Dorinda's grandmother whom it was feared the shock might kill if she knew Dorinda were dead. But Grandmother Thorndyke penetrated Stella's masquerade and died of what was thought to be a heart attack.

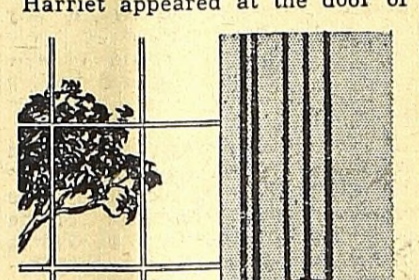

"Fay will attend to it," Edward said hurriedly. "In the meantime, Dorinda, I'd like a word with you. Will you come into my study?" The girl assented quickly. It appeared Edward had sensed her desire to talk to him.

CHAPTER XV

Her heart began pounding. "Don't imagine things." The words of Cleve's advice echoed in her mind. "The bulb's burned out." And then she caught her breath. She knew suddenly, intuitively, that there was someone in the room. She had heard no sound, or, if she had, it had been too small to register in her consciousness.

"Thank you." Lana's tone was indifferent but there was a mounting excitement behind the baby blue of her eyes. "If the sheriff should show up, still wanting to know how I spent Tuesday afternoon, just tell him I'm—out. And that you don't know when I'll be back."

Dorinda looked at Fay uncertainly.

the breakfast room. She wore a frilled blouse and dark skirt. The crooked buttoning of her waist, the wisps of faded hair escaping its pins, showed in what haste she had dressed.

"I didn't mean to be late," she apologized. "I intended to breakfast with the rest of you, Lana will be down in a minute." She stared at Morrow. "Good Heavens, Mr. Morrow, are you sick?"

He did not answer her. In the bright light, Dorinda could see the thin film of sweat on his forehead. "I'll get my papers—" He stopped, bending over, his arms crossed and pressing against his stomach. "I'm afraid," he said faintly, "I'm going to be ill."

Edward sprang to Morrow's side and caught his arm to support the stricken man. "Get Carol," he said to Dorinda, his face tense.

Dorinda feared attack may mean more danger. Carol took charge with characteristic efficiency. By the time they had led the lawyer to his bedroom, and Dr. Evans had arrived, the stricken man was resting more or less comfortably.

"Dr. Evans seemed to think I was a little precipitate in giving him an emetic without a doctor's say so, but any fool could see Morrow had eaten something which didn't set easily. However, he's sufficiently recovered now to make eyes at his nurse and enjoy having his hand held."

She made a little face. "At any rate, I'm removed from my status as house guest—if anyone can be considered a guest who has never been as much as invited to eat at the family table—and am, I hope, back on the payroll. Whether Mr. Thorndyke or Morrow will pay the bill, I don't know. Nor care, so long as I get the money."

Dorinda's returning smile was wan. "He frightened me," she admitted. "That sudden attack. I thought perhaps—"

"You thought perhaps another accident had happened," Carol surmised shrewdly. "You didn't see a phantom hand dropping a deadly drug into his coffee cup, did you?" She went on without waiting for an answer. "No, my dear, nothing so dramatic as that. Little Morrow's trouble is just plain hoggishness, I'm afraid. Too much food, too much liquor—I wouldn't know. Maybe he's just working up to a good case of stomach ulcers."

When she went downstairs, Greer was just closing the front door. Through the lessening aperture she caught a glimpse of Edward at the wheel of his car just starting down the graveled driveway.

As she turned, she saw Lana at the foot of the staircase. She wore a sheer dress of misty gray under her silver fox jacket and a small black velvet hat shaped like a glorified jockey's cap pulled down over her smooth bright hair. A string of pearls encircled her round throat and she carried, her arm thrust through the straps, a big handbag of soft gray leather which seemed full of bursting, so full, in fact, that the clasp sprang open as Dorinda watched.

Lana snapped it shut hastily with a quick glance at Dorinda. "You look lovely, Lana," Dorinda told her in involuntary admiration.

"Thank you." Lana's tone was indifferent but there was a mounting excitement behind the baby blue of her eyes. "If the sheriff should show up, still wanting to know how I spent Tuesday afternoon, just tell him I'm—out. And that you don't know when I'll be back."

Lana's hand made a swift movement in the direction Edward's car had gone. "Edward, as usual, running away from unpleasantness," she said dryly.

"I wanted to talk to him." Dorinda looked at Fay uncertainly. She didn't think she had the courage to tell Fay, without Edward's sustaining presence, of the decision she had made in the waking hours of the night before. But, unexpectedly, Fay helped her.

Fay was at the window where she, too, had evidently watched Edward's departure, when Dorinda came into the living room. She turned her head and smiled, that brief smile peculiar to herself which possessed no warmth and left her eyes untouched.

Fay in Agreement That Dorinda Should Leave. The older woman crossed the floor and came close to Dorinda. She looked intently into the girl's face.

"Tell me," she demanded abruptly, "do you ever think of simply clearing out of here without asking permission?"

Dorinda felt her face stiffen in astonishment. Had Fay, in some flash of clairvoyance, discovered what she had been planning?

"It's queer, your saying that. It's exactly what I would like to do. And the reason I wanted to see Uncle Edward, I've decided to tell Mr. Poole that I'm not what he thinks I am and see if he won't let me go away from here. But I thought it only fair to tell you and Uncle Edward what I intended to do before I went to the sheriff."

Fay nodded as if the words confirmed some secret thought of her own. "I guessed you had something of the kind in your mind. But listen to me. Perhaps I'm a traitor in saying this. But if I were you, I wouldn't tell Edward. He'll try to persuade you to keep quiet and stay here no matter what your reasons are for getting out. And I know, if you don't, how plausible he can be when he wants you to do things his way."

"Yes," thought Dorinda. "I do know."

"Then, too, I don't see any particular reason why you should tell the sheriff who you really are," Fay went on.

"And I think I can tell you how to work it." A quick puff of gray smoke obscured her face for a moment. "The inquest on Anne is set for tomorrow morning—Saturday. It was originally scheduled for last Wednesday but was adjourned, the sheriff hoping, I believe, to find some evidence that it was not a bona fide accident. As you know, he's done a lot of prowling around here with that bee in his bonnet. Naturally without success because I'm sure it was an accident just as it appeared to be."

"In any event, you'll have to attend the inquest. You can't get out of that. The coroner's jury will, I'm sure, bring a verdict of accidental death. And I don't see any reason why you can't go wherever you want to as soon as possible after that. I think they've given up trying to solve the mystery of Taylor's death. At least they know you had no connection with it."

"My plan is this. Pack a suitcase with the things you'll need in the next few days. The rest of your belongings can be forwarded to you. As soon as Edward is out of the way—and I can see to it that he is—I'll take you either to Trentville or Westport, which we find most convenient at the time for catching a train."

"You'll get back to Los Angeles with money enough for your immediate wants. The thousand dollars you'll find already deposited to your account in the bank where you once told me you had your savings. Anyway, you can write fits to your adventure. I fancy you're about ready to do that."

"Oh, I am," Dorinda declared fervently. "The only thing is—" She hesitated, ashamed of her fear. "I'll have to spend another night here."

"You'd have to do that in any event," Fay assured her impatiently. "Do you think the sheriff is going to let you walk out when you tell him you're not the real Dorinda?"

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When you have two or three worn-out blankets on your hands, cut off the bindings, stitch the blankets together—that is, on top of each other—and cover them with printed cotton. All of which produces a nice warm comforter with a useful life expectancy of several years.

To clean patent-leather shoes (or belts), mix up a solution of two-thirds vinegar and one-third water. Apply it to the leather with a soft cloth and polish it with a dry cloth. Petroleum jelly, applied with the same procedure, will do the job, too.

The patent-leather covering on heels can be prevented from cracking if you coat it with colorless nail polish.

Tarnishing of gold and silver slippers can be forestalled if you keep them well wrapped in old stockings when the shoes aren't in use.

Want a ride that's "out of this world"?

Better Buy Buick!

WANT to be free from that nervous tensing up for a jolt every time a rough spot looms in the road ahead?
Want to enjoy the relaxing feel of a sure-footed car beneath you, that stays level even when the road doesn't?
Well, sir, ease into a Buick and see how such matters are cared for.

See what a wonderful difference in level buoyancy coil springs can make when you have them on all four wheels, not just the front ones.
Note what firm and solid steadiness is yours when a full-length torque-tube drive is your keel—how smoothly you stay on course when the rear wheels can't help but run true.
See what big, low-pressure tires and Buick's wide rims can do to pillow your course without jounce or sway.
In other words, sample this two-ton beauty for over-all stance and balance—and the cradling comfort of its roomy interiors.

And while you're at it, get the very special thrill of its mighty Fireball power plant, plus the free-as-a-bird-in-flight bliss of its Dynaflow Drive.*
It's an experience that you owe yourself—and it's yours for the asking. The thing to do is get in touch with your Buick dealer—and discover the ride that only Buick owners know.

FOUR-WAY FOREFRONT—The rugged front end (1) sets the style note, (2) saves on repair work—vertical bars are individually replaceable, (3) avoids "locking bars," (4) makes parking and garaging easier.

Tune in HENRY J. TAYLOR, ABC Network, every Monday evening.
