Detroit Men Purchase Holland Hotel

Ketcherside Retires From Hotel Business Because of Ill Health

Sale of the Holland Hotel here to Ernest Larson, of Lincoln Park and Oscoda, and John Pinter, of Detroit, was announced today by Floyd "Shorty" Ketcherside, operator of the well known Michigan hostelry for the past five and one-half years.

The deal has been underway for several months, with final approval of the transfer of the Class B hotel license being made this week by the Michigan Liquor Control commission.

Ketcherside and his partner, Arthur D. Grady, purchased the Holland from Ernest A. Zannis in June of 1945. In October of 1947, Ketcherside and his wife, Eva purchased the interest of Mr. Grady, and the Ketchersides have been sole owners since that time.

Many improvements to the hotel have been made during the past three years, including reconstruction and enclosure of the porch on Newman and Bay streets, and complete renovation of the lobby, cocktail lounge and dining room, as well as the second floor of the hotel proper. The entire structure has been redecorated.

During his time in East Tawas, Ketcherside has been active in civic affairs. He is president of the Tawas Chamber of Commerce and last year was general chairman of the Silver Valley Winter Sports committee. He is a member of the Tawas Kiwanis club, and has been active in Table-Top Congress affairs.

He was stricken with a heart attack in June, from which he is now recovering. Sale of the hotel resulted from his inability to devote time and effort to the business due to his illness.

The new owners, both familiar with the restaurant and tavern business. They started in partnership in the Linc Inn, at Lincoln and Holden in Detroit 14 years ago. Eleven years ago Larson opened Larson's on Fort street in Lincoln Park, Pinter continuing the Detroit business.

Larson purchased the Al Fifer cottages at Oscoda this spring, which he will continue to operate.

Mr. and Mrs. Pinter and their 11 year old son, John, will make their home in the Holland Hotel apartment, being vacated by the Ketchersides. For the time being the Larsons will continue to live in Oscoda.

The new owners have several plans for improvements in addition to carrying out those already started by Ketcherside. They will continue to operate all departments of the business, including the dining room.

Mr. and Mrs. Ketcherside will occupy the former Trudell house on Lake street in Tawas City for the present, and will spend the winter in Florida where the former hopes to make a full recovery from his illness.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Truman Tells U. N. This Country Committed to Armament Program; Costs of Living Near Record High

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

TRUMAN:

Armament for Peace

President Truman, speaking before the United Nations general assembly on United Nations' day, told members of the world organization that the United States would prefer universal disarmament, but that this nation is committed to arming because it is the only way to stop aggression.

The President used Korea as an example of what united effort by U.N. members can accomplish in stopping aggression. He termed the invasion of South Korea by Communist forces a direct challenge to the world organization.

As for disarmament and the solution to world problems, Mr. Truman said the U. S. was willing to enter negotiation, but only if all nations proved their good intentions. Such negotiation could only be carried on if there was concrete evidence of good intention and the open and free exchange of ideas between nations.

The chief executive said few acts in our time have met with such universal approval as the intervention of the United Nations in the Korea conflict.

It was significant that the President did not mention Russia at all during his speech as the chief threat to world peace. It was clear, however, to what world power he referred when he said the freedom loving nations of the world will continue to build up their armed strength, because they have no other choice.

LIVING COSTS:

Nears Record High

The latest government consumer price index reported the cost of living continued to move upward. The gain was 1/2 per cent from the previous month. The index stood 173.9, meaning 73.8 per cent above the 1935-39 average.

The government, however, was only putting into figures what the American housewife has known for some time. Low and fixed income families felt the pinch shortly after the Korean war began. The latest index figure was only 4 of a per cent short of the 174.5 high reached in August and September, 1948.

Even with the publication of these figures there seemed little possibility that the government planned any immediate action to stop the rising cost of living. In the average American city the housewife now pays $21.70 for a food basket costing $10 at the outbreak of World War II.

During August and September of this year housewives were paying 8.5 per cent more for meats, poultry, and fish, including 10.6 per cent for pork chops, 7.5 per cent for fish, and 4.4 per cent for eggs, 1.4 per cent for canned fruits and vegetables, and 2.6 per cent for beverages.

The government's price index is taking on increasing importance in American business economics as more and more contracts between unions and employers allow for wage changes as the index rises or drops.

However, this does not help old people or white collar workers living on fixed incomes.

Ike Says 'No'

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia university, is shown with Dean Phillips Young of Columbia, as they announced the establishment of the "American Assembly" at the university, a convocation of representatives of business, labor, the professions, government and the university, to work out answer to critical problems facing the country. Ike repeated his "no" about running for President.

FREEDOM BELL

Symbol of Freedom Rings in Berlin

The 20,000-pound freedom bell, symbol of the hopes of free men, arrived safely in Berlin after a night run through Communist dominated territory where Red agents reportedly had orders to delay it. The following day it was raised to the belfry of Berlin city hall.

Two days later millions of radio listeners throughout the world heard Gen. Lucius D. Clay, former mili-

Headliners

Leon H. Keyserling, chairman of President Truman's council of economic advisers, speaking on the country economic problems, said: "We do not need as many or as tough controls as in 1944 because the transition of military activity is not nearly so rapid or so great."

Stuart Symington, economic-mobilization coordinator, also had something to say on the same question: "It begins to look as if everybody wants controls so long as the controls don't affect them."

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, speaking on the Founder's Day program at Carnegie Institute said: "Possibly my hatred of war blinds me so that I cannot comprehend the arguments they advance. But in my opinion there is no such thing as a preventive war."

From that meeting came four demands to the western powers, but the free nations were more interested in what the Communists did not say than in the new demands. This is what the Communist asked:

(1) That the governments of the United States, Britain, France and Russia should publish a declaration saying they will not allow the remilitarization of Germany, they will not allow Germany to become "involved in any plans of aggression," and will try to carry out the Potsdam agreement to "build a democratic, peace-loving Germany."

(2) That all restrictions hindering the development of Germany's "peace economy" be removed while a revival of German war potential should not be allowed.

(3) That there should be concluded "without delay" a treaty of peace with Germany which would renew the unity of the German state in harmony with the Potsdam agreement; that all occupation forces of the great powers be withdrawn from Germany within one year after a peace treaty is concluded.

(4) That on a basis of parity, representatives from east and west Germany should form a "Constituent Council" for all of Germany to prepare "the formation of a democratic sovereign government" for all Germany.

The West was not naive enough to believe that any agreement could be reached on Germany. Plans for rebuilding a strong western Germany and an European army continued in full force.

Western diplomats were asking themselves what new acts of aggression did Russia and her satellites cook up?

STASSEN:

Pravda Calls Him Silly

Harold E. Stassen, former governor of Minnesota, created a lot of interest with his letter to Joseph Stalin asking for a face to face meeting of Americans and Russians in an effort to "stop the drift toward war."

Stassen did not receive a reply from Stalin, but the official voice of Communist propaganda, Pravda, published an article calling him silly, crude, and ridiculous, among other things.

The article was, in fact, a flat rejection of the Stassen proposal. The writer made it plain that the Soviet government does not consider Stassen's letter worth a formal answer.

The article said in part: "Stassen demands no more, no less than a change by the Soviet Union of its policy. It is not difficult to see that Stassen is not only crude but also ridiculous in advancing this wild demand which excludes all possibility of a serious view of any degree of 'document' worked out by the president of Pennsylvania university in cooperation with veteran warmongers Eisenhower and Dulles."

The former aspirant for the Republican presidential nomination had little to say about the article. He indicated he would wait for a direct reply from Stalin.

KOREA:

Now Rehabilitation

Except for isolated guerrilla action, the war in Korea was over. The end was hastened by spectacular parachute drops of U. S. troops between Pyongyang and the Manchurian border to block escape of North Korea troops.

As the end came, however, the world was horrified by reports of new atrocities against U. N. troops in Communist hands. Red leaders had long since escaped into Manchuria, most of them fleeing when U. N. troops crossed the 38th parallel.

Now the United Nations is faced with the rehabilitation of Korea, estimated by a U. S. survey at $200,000,000. The figure was described as a rough estimate and many observers believed comparable sums would have to be furnished annually for at least two or three years to put Korea back on its feet.

The rehabilitation of Korea was one of the big issues discussed by President Truman and General MacArthur during their recent meeting at Wake island.

An indication of the job ahead was given when Reginald H. R. Parminter, special adviser to the U. N. on Korean affairs, told the assembly committee working on rehabilitation that over $36 million in relief supplies already had been received.

Members of the U. N. have offered supplies and cash totaling from $12,000,000 to $13,000,000. Another $5,000,000 was expected.

Politicians

U.S. EMPLOYEES

Total at New High

Salaries of government employees will cost the average U. S. family about $402 for the year 1950, compared to $155 in 1929, the family economics bureau of Northwestern National Life reports.

Because the grand total of federal, state and local government civilian employees has approximately doubled in the 21 years since 1929, while the U. S. population has increased by only about a fourth, each average American family must now pay one government worker's salary for eight weeks out of each year, compared with five and a half weeks' salary borne by each family in 1929.

Salaries of federal state and local civilian employees totalled $4,650,000,000 for 1929, were approximately $16,000,000,000 for 1949, and are estimated at about $16,500,000,000 for 1950.

The number of persons on public payrolls fluctuates from month to month, but the roster of civilian government workers will average in the neighborhood of 6,050,000 for the 12 months of 1950.

RUSSIA:

Internal Troubles?

Perhaps it is wishful thinking upon the part of the western powers, but rumors persist that Russia and certain of her satellite states are having renewed trouble with discontented elements of their own subjects.

Nothing in the nature of mass uprisings had been reported. Rumored incidents in the Ukraine, Czechoslovakia and Romania appeared to be on an isolated scale. Nevertheless, the reported incidents, if true, indicate increasing bold resistance to Communist domination behind the iron curtain.

One report told of widespread riots and sabotage in Slovakia where the Communists have experienced trouble since they seized control of Czechoslovakia in the spring of 1948.

Other reports told of renewed resistance to the Communist regime in the Ukraine. Some 2,000 persons were reported arrested in the Kiev area.

Reports persist that the overwhelming majority of the people in the satellite states remain opposed to Soviet domination. This certainly would seem wishful thinking upon the part of western diplomats.

U.S. DEBT:

$218,600 Million

The commerce department reported that the federal government went deeper in debt this year than all the private firms and individuals put together. The total net debt was put at $218,600 million.

The total owed by private firms and individuals was reported at $205,500 million. State and local governments owed another $18,100 million. The government's debt increased $2,100 million in 1949.

MOTHERS JOIN SMALL-FRY PICKETS . . . Here are some of the 200 chanting, placard-carrying mothers and children who picketed P.S. 188 in lower east side New York. They protested the proposed transfer of 300 students to a school 10 blocks away. Mrs. Julia Goldstein, spokesman for the mothers, said they want the board of education to re-open P.S. 97, located two blocks from P.S. 188. P.S. 97 was closed 15 years ago and has been used since as a warehouse. The group planned to carry protest to city hall and the mayor.

HONEYMOON NOT ALL HONEY AND MOONLIGHT . . . If this be bliss, all the marriage manuals since Adam and Eve will have to be rewritten. Just after setting up housekeeping in Brookfield Zoo, Chicago, Kelly (left), 425-pound tiger groom, and Kari, 325-pound tigress bride, just snarled at their audience and then at each other. Maybe it was the lack of privacy that irked them. Anyway the zoo director was hoping that time would make them more compatible. The tigers, which are Siberians, were obtained in a swap for two bears. And the description, "As cross as a bear," seems to apply to them.

ENROUTE TO PRISON . . . David Greenglass (right) leaves federal court in New York in custody of U. S. marshal after pleading guilty to betraying atomic secrets to Russia. The former army sergeant who worked on the Los Alamos atom bomb project will be sentenced on December 4. He could escape the death sentence, for it is expected that he will turn government witness at the trial of his alleged co-conspirators in the Klaus Fuchs atomic spy ring.

RURAL HEALTH

Health Councils Bring Better Medical Care to Rural Areas

One of the brightest indications of progress in securing more doctors and better health facilities for rural areas in this country is the recent announcement by the American Medical Association that community health councils in the nation have increased from 82 to nearly 300 in the last two years.

These figures are based on a survey of the association's council on medical service in which county medical societies were queried, Thomas A. Hendricks of Chicago, secretary of the council, reported.

Local achievement of the community health councils in the last five years include construction of hospitals with the aid of the hospital survey and construction act (Hill-Burton act); increasing available hospital beds; developing clinics; securing more doctors, dentists, nurses and other needed personnel; development of fulltime local public health services; health examination of children of school and pre-school age and correction of their remediable health defects; promotion of voluntary prepayment medical care and hospitalization; provision of medical care for the aged and chronically ill, and meeting costs of medical service to families unable to pay for hospitalization and doctors bills, according to Hendricks.

In some instances community councils have been extremely helpful in cooperating with the national mental health program. Councils have matched government funds to pay mental health clinic personnel and conducted educational campaigns to acquaint communities with the value and manner of operation of the clinics.

And although health councils have been organized in urban as well as in rural areas, they have been especially important in bringing better medical care to the people in rural communities, Hendricks said.

THE A.M.A.'s efforts to promote organization of community health councils to improve medical care for long neglected rural communities date back to the organization of the association's committee on rural health five years ago. Since that time it has been actively engaged in coordinating the efforts of farm groups and state and local medical societies in rural health. The committee is set up so that its representatives can be reached locally in any area. Doctors selected by state medical societies serve as directors in nine regions and as state rural health chairmen in 45 states. Any organization wanting information on setting up a local health council or solving rural health problems may contact one of these representatives or write directly to the A.M.A. rural health committee in Chicago.

AS AN EXAMPLE of how the council plan works, suppose members of an Ohio farm bureau wrote the A.M.A. that a community needs a doctor and does not have the facilities to attract him. The community wants to build and staff a health clinic with aid from the hospital survey and construction act. What happens?

The information is referred to the regional director who takes the matter up with the state rural health chairman and the state medical society. The state chairman and the medical society contact the farm bureau, a meeting is called, and the state chairman and representatives of the state and local medical societies, farm organizations and civic groups get together at the community level to work out the problem.

That the rural health problem is steadily being solved through cooperative community efforts was generally agreed at a conference on rural health in Kansas City, Mo. The conference brought together more than 500 medical and lay leaders concerned with providing medical care to small communities.

Professional Blind Man Plays Gag to the Very Finish

By BILLY ROSE

Last night, in a mood for malt and malarkey, I stopped in to chin with Sammy Fuchs, proprietor of the Bowery Follies and honorary mayor of that unwashed neck of the Manhattan woods.

"What's new and gruesome in your baliwick?" I asked mine host.

"Nothing much," said Sammy, "except that Faker Kennedy died last week and left his eyes to a bartender down the block."

"Come again?" I said.

According to Sammy, the Faker was a professional blind man who had been rattling a tin cup on the Bowery for as long as he could remember. In spite of his calling, however, it was a standing joke around the flophouses that the cane-tapper could shoot off a bug's ear at a hundred paces.

"We used to kid Kennedy about his blindness," said Sammy, "but he never let on that he was an act—if it was an act. And we were never sure because no one ever saw the old cove without his smoked glasses."

"Down at Gargan's Bar where the Faker used to hang out after hours," Sammy continued, "the proprietor had a kind of running gag at the bum's expense."

"When you die," he used to say, "will me your eyes. Mine are gettin' pretty tired from lookin' at the sawdust."

"I'll leave 'em to ya, Gargan," was the Faker's stock answer, "And

THE FICTION CORNER

ONE AGAINST THREE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

JIM Orson had ridden 200 miles on horseback to commit murder. Slouched in his saddle, one hand resting carelessly on his thigh near the butt of the six shooter, he watched from beneath the brim of his hat as the boy came toward him.

"This Marc Newell's place?" he asked.

The boy nodded. "My brother will be back any minute. I'm Davie Newell. Are you Mr. Dumont, the cattle buyer?"

Without changing his expression Jim Orson said: "Yeah, I'm him."

"We've been expectin' you. Come on inside and wait. It's cooler."

"I noticed," Orson remarked, "that you had a rifle in your hands when you first opened the door. Expectin' trouble?"

The boy's face clouded. "I was afraid it might be Jules Snyder. He's promised to get Marc."

"Why is he out to get your brother?"

The boy hesitated. "Because Marc quit his gang. Marc used to hang around with the Snyder bunch, but when they began rustlin' and killin', he quit 'em."

"Right after Marc quit, a man named Tom Orson was shot and Jules let it out that Marc done it. The story spread an' nobody dared deny it because they're afraid of Snyder."

Jim Orson thought: "The boy's lying. He's like his brother—a liar and a killer. It was Marc Newell who killed Tom, and it's Marc Newell I'm going to settle with for the crime."

"You'll like my brother," Davie was saying. "He's swell. He—"

Orson's hand whipped to his hip and he shot at the exact moment lead spurted from the horseman's six-shooter.

Faintly the sound of hoofbeats came to them. Davie set down the pan of potatoes and scurried to a window, turned back into the room, white-faced. Without a word he snatched up the Winchester rifle.

THREE men had drawn rein before the gate. Halfway down the walk Davie was facing them defiantly.

"You git out of here, Jules Snyder!"

The leader of the trio, obviously Snyder, said placatingly: "Put down the gun, kid. We only want to have a talk with your brother."

"You want to kill him!" the boy cried shrilly. "I ain't gonna let you. Marc never done nothin' to you."

Behind Jules Snyder one of the riders had drawn his gun. It was one against three, a boy against a trio of killers.

Jim Orson stepped through the kitchen door. His hand was on his gun.

"ALL RIGHT," he said. "This makes it more even. I'm backing the kid's play."

Snyder's eyes bulged. "Who the devil are you?"

"I'm Orson, Jim. Orson. Brother of the man you killed, Snyder!"

Snyder's reaction was a dead giveaway.

The man who had drawn his gun suddenly levelled it. Orson's hand whipped to his hip. He got his own weapon clear and shot as lead spurted from the horseman's six-shooter.

Snyder swore savagely and went for his own gun. Orson shot again. Two of the horsemen were down, the third streaking up the road.

Orson, smoking gun in hand, bent over the two still figures. The boy watched him, wide-eyed, awed.

"Son, I'll ride into town and get the sheriff. You stay here. When your brother comes back, explain what's happened."

The boy nodded, choking. "Y—you're not Mr. Dumont? You're Jim Orson?"

"That's right," Orson smiled and patted the boy's head. "Come 200 miles on horseback to get a lesson in courage."

"You're going back now?"

"That's right. I'm going back. You see, son, I accomplished what I come for."

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative—REMOVES WASTE...NOT GOOD FOOD

When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative—do as MILLIONS do—chew FEEN-A-MINT.

FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon—right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy... you feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

AILING HOUSE

Question: I have aluminum siding on my house and I would like to paint it white. I understand some sort of "treat coat" should be applied first, so that the paint will adhere properly. Could you give me any information on this?

Answer: There is a special metal priming coat intended for this purpose. I cannot mention trade names in the column, but you may obtain information from the Architects Samples Exhibit, 101 Park Ave., New York 17.

During the Twelfth dynasty vanity was sometimes a very expensive trait. Egyptian rulers of the time often admired their reflections in real silver mirrors that had handles of black obsidian adorned with solid gold.

"Easier to use," says Mrs. Louis Lauer, Pine City, Minnesota, 1949 prize winner at the State Grange Contest. "No waiting, no special directions to follow. It's the easiest yeast yet and the fastest, too."

"Faster dissolving," says Mrs. Robert F. Brummond, Bancroft, Nebraska, with the most entries at the 1948 and 1949 State Fair. "All you do is combine it with water... stir it well and it's ready to use."

"Faster rising," says Mrs. H. M. Berry, Topeka, Kansas, consistent winner at State Fair contests. "It's the finest yeast I know. It cuts down rising time, and always gives me perfect results when I bake at home."

Cinderella Night at Michigan State Grange Convention at Muskegon

The evening began at 6:30 with the annual banquet attended by around 1000 people. Dorsey Kirk, Master of Illinois State Grange awarded bonds and plaques to the Community Service and contest winners. The Highway Essay contest winners were awarded their prizes of $15.00, 10.00 and $5.00 respectively.

An address "Impressions of an Amateur traveler" by William Otto, Secretary of Lansing Chamber of Commerce, also member of Flying Classroom to Europe. He told of conditions as they found them in different countries in Europe.

Members of Ashland Grange presented a pageant "Acres of Diamonds." Agricultural Princesses were then chosen and each presented with the product of agriculture that she was chosen Princess for.

There were 42 Cinderellas participating for "Michigan State Grange Princess." These Cinderellas were chosen by lot at a Mystery Ride in their own county Grange. Cinderalls must be between 15 and 30 years of age.

Dianna Lyke of Whittemore was chosen Cinderalla from Iosco county and took part in the Cinderella program at Muskegon. Each Cinderella wore a formal and silver slippers, presented herby her by her county Grange. Nancy Franks of Kinross, Chippewa county was chosen "State Grange Princess" and was awarded a pair of Gold slippers. She was crowned by the 1949 Princess. All 42 Cinderellas were awarded 12 silver dollars and a pair of nylon hose. One silver slipper was tossed out and 42 men got a slipper and had to match it and he was this Cinderella's escort for the Grand March. The Grange Princess and Verne Stockman of Mt. Pleasant led the Grand March. There were some square dance demonstrations by teen-agers, followed by square dancing for the entire Grange which ended a very entertaining evening at the State Grange Convention. We will be looking forward to Cinderella Night at Cadillac in '51. —Mrs. Wilbur Runyon, secretary.

Gives Regulations on Christmas Trees

Victor Horvath, District Forester for the Alpena State Forest, would like to remind the public that there is a law prohibiting the cutting, removal, or transportation within this state for any purpose of Christmas trees, evergreen boughs, or other wild trees, shrubs, vines, or certain native plants, without the written consent of the owner of the land on which they are grown.

This written consent shall contain the legal description of the land where the above mentioned plants were cut, as well as the name of the legal owner, and this copy must be certified as a true copy by the person to whom such consent was given, or by the register of deeds of the county in which the land is situated, if recorded in his office. Every person cutting, removing, or transporting Christmas trees, evergreen boughs, or other wild trees, shrubs, vines or certain native plants should carry the bill of sale with him and exhibit it to any officer of the law, including officers of the Department of Public Safety, the Department of Conservation, and the Department of Agriculture, at his or their request at any time.

The written consent shall consist of an adequate bill of sale form to be distributed without cost by the Department of Agriculture and cooperating agencies. These forms are now available from the County Agricultural agents and representatives of the Department of Conservation.

Any person who violates any of the provisions of this law or who offers any hindrance or resistance to the carrying out of this act shall be judged guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction be fined not less than $25.00 nor more than $100.00 for each and every offense, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a period of not to exceed 90 days, or by both such fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court.

District Forester Horvath further advises that there will be no Christmas tree cuttings on state owned land in the Alpena State Forest this year.

Cancer a Public Enemy
Cancer second greatest cause of death in the United States, is caused by body cells that seem to "run wild" and interfere with the activities of the body.

FARM FACTS from your County Agricultural Agent

By Harold R. Clark, County Agt

The days of the great lumbering camps where rugged young men from all over the country, spent their winters cutting down the seemingly unlimited huge virgin timbers are past. But the lumbering days are not over. The methods of lumbering have changed. The main source of timbers now are the farm wood lots and the state and national forests. Lumbering is on a selective basis. We do not clear as we go. Logs have to be hauled to the local sawmills or the sawmill has to be moved to the wooded area. These small sawmill operators have had a pretty rugged time keeping the business a prosperous and stable enterprise. So based on the theory, "In Union There is Strength," and "United We Stand," these operators, there are several hundred of them, and are in every county of the state, have formed the Michigan Sawmill Operators Association. Our own Bill Inglesh has been the spark plug in this new organization. He is the secretary and has been very persistent in getting it underway and making it a recognized power. The objectives are many. It proposes to unify standards of stumpage and rates, promote high quality workmanship, and seek cooperation of suppliers in giving values in equipment with services required. Through the association insurance benefits can be obtained. The association will sponsor and promote research in expanded uses of lumber, especially low grade lumber and by-products.

Their first convention was held at Prudenville last month at which time the organization was incorporated and directors were elected. John Hawkins of Hudson was re-elected president and "Bill" was re-elected Secretary-treasurer.

"I can make more money selling feeder pigs than from any other project on the farm," says Wesley Runyon of Hale. "There is a big demand for six to eight week old pigs in the corn growing areas." A corn grower from Ithaca for the last two summers has come to his farm and bought all the feeders he had. He only wished he had more. It seems that Mr. Runyon has a good idea there. Hogs can make good use of the skim milk, where the dairyman is selling cream. The hog makes good use of pasture and hay and since our climate is not favorable for growing of corn, why not look to the feeder market? The Hereford breeders have found an eager market for their feeder calves. Through cooperation of the breeders in supplying a large number of high quality feeders, buyers go long distances to get these northern cattle. I see a possibility of creating a similar organization of breeders of feeder pigs.

"In one hundred years our life expectancy has increased from 40 years to 67," says Dr. C. D. Selby, of the school of Public Health, University of Michigan, in addressing the audience at the Michigan Rural Health Conference which was held at the Michigan State College last month. Through health regulations, vaccines, new drugs, and germicides, and the increased knowledge of disease prevention and cures, mortality rates have been greatly reduced. Of course with the extension of the average life expectancy of people we have more of the old age diseases such as arthritis, heart disease and cancer. An important contributing factor has been the health programs of industry and the health centers and improved hospital facilities of urban communities. A shocking statement was that our rural areas are way behind in their health program with an added statement to the effect that the country is not the healthiest place in which to live. Maybe in our program planning we should give more attention to the problem of rural health.

Use of Silos Recommended

Many silos have stood empty for years which could be profitably put back into use on farms where livestock are being fed. Use of 40 to 80 pounds of molasses as a preservative, 150 to 250 pounds of grain or 30 to 40 pounds of dried whey per ton will help to insure good quality silage. Research has shown that making silage will save 16 per cent more protein and 8 per cent more dry matter than when the same crop is made into hay. This protein saving equals 400 pounds of linseed meal per acre.

4-H CLUB NOTES

Iosco County members received their share of county award medals at the Fall 4-H Achievement Day program last week. Those named included: Robert Douglas, Aileen Ward, Lillian Boien, Charles Webb, Alton Buck, John Webb, Jr., Thomas St. James, Charles Binder Norene Huber, David Stoddard, Dorothy Shellenbarger, Mary Jane Douglass, Paul J. Edie, DeWayne Durant, Leaberta Townsend, George Strauer.

New 4-H leaders receiving their first year pins were: Mrs. Eleanor Durant, Mrs. Pearl Huber, Mrs. Herbert Townsend, Miss Ida Bentley, Mrs. Royden Parkinson, Mrs. O. J. Westcott, Frank Stoddard.

Special recognition went to Mrs. Ruth Bloomquist and Mrs. Paul Kaven, 4-H leaders, for having served five years and ten years respectively as voluntary leaders in Iosco county. The New York Central System presented them with (silver and gold) pins and certificates for their faithful service.

4-H certificates and pins were presented by 4-H leaders to the club members completing projects. Ed. Robinson, Jr., was general chairman for the program. The 4-H Council Association Achievement Day Program committee, Mrs. Herbert Townsend and Mrs. Alton Durant planned the pot luck supper following the program.

National 4-H Club Congress—Chicago

This November 25-29 event is the climax of a 4-H Club career to many 4-H Club members throughout the United States. Members are selected on the basis of their long time 4-H Club achievements. The opportunity to compete is open to any member. It requires persistent participation in 4-H Club work. A members school, church and community activities contribute greatly to a member's chance of attending. This year Iosco county had three candidates considered for this high honor. If those members remain in 4-H work, the next few years Iosco county will have a delegate to the National 4-H Club congress. This year District 4-H Club Agent, M. Davenport is attending as a delegate to the National 4-H Club Agent's Association.

Honey Bee Plan

Importance of honey bees for pollination is indicated by a new plan being tried in Ohio. Bees are needed so badly in that state that the federal government is now paying owners a subsidy of $1 for each hive maintained and $3 for each hive moved into a field of red clover.

Lonely Isles

The remote British islands of Tristan da Cunha, in the far South Atlantic, are known as the "lonely isles." World War I was nearly over before news of its outbreak reached inhabitants of these islands. Years passed before the islanders heard of the armistice. By contrast, it was through World War II that Tristan da Cunha began losing its isolation. In 1942, a secret meteorological and radio station was set up there by the British royal navy and the South African air force.

Bird in hand that's a Beauty and a Buy!

Now it can be told. This clean-lined, smart-stepping 1950 version is the most popular Buick ever built.

Ever since early in the present year, a value-wise public has been taking them away from us as fast as—or faster than—the great Buick factories could roll them out. Within recent weeks, production and sales have set an all-time record.

Count off the distinguished and time-tried features of this winner and you'll know why.

It has a Very Exclusive Motor—Buick's own high-compression Fireball—which gets its driving power from a combustion chamber found in no other car in the world.

It has the bump-smothering softness of coil springs on all four wheels and a torque-tube drive—a comfort combination that no other car provides.

It has Dynaflo Drive*—which ushered in a whole new concept of effortless travel.

It has a brilliant styling which sets it apart from every other car on the road.

And it has prices which say "buy me" to any motorist who's looking for maximum money's worth.

Isn't it sensible, while these great cars are still coming off the line, to check with your Buick dealer about getting one to call your own?

Eight Rope

By Allison L. Burks

Morrow, attorney for Mrs. Thornadyke, who has died, supposedly of a heart attack, after learning that the girl supposed to be her grandmother, Dorinda LaCroix, was an impostor, is mysteriously stricken in the Thornadyke home. Two others have died mysteriously since the masquerade began at the request of Mrs. Thornadyke's son, Edward, who told the impostor, Stella Moore, he was doing it for his mother's good. Stella is attacked by a sense of foreboding and her own danger and Fay Thornadyke, Edward's cousin and fiancée, agrees that it may be better for her to give up the masquerade and leave the Thornadykes home rather than stay on at the risk of her life.

CHAPTER XVI

"I suppose your plan is best," she conceded unwillingly. "At that I don't imagine staying here another twenty-four hours will—" Will kill me, she had intended to finish the sentence. A tremor of fear stopped her. Her careless words approached the truth too closely.

A familiar voice raised in greeting came to her through the open window. Cleve's voice.

"I'll do as you say," she whispered quickly to Fay and ran from the room. Cleve had paused on the white portico to speak to Carol, who, hands clasped about her knees, sat in the sun on the top step. She looked up as Dorinda neared her.

"Little Morrow was in dreamland when I went back," she explained, "so I didn't linger. But I suppose I shouldn't stay away too long." She rose reluctantly, stretching.

"Keep her outside," she advised Cleve as she left them. He looked after her, admiration in his eyes.

"Darned pretty girl," he commented. He laughed as his gaze came back to Dorinda's face. "Only I happen to prefer blondes."

"There's something about a uniform—I mean a nurse's uniform," Dorinda said dreamily. But her gaiety sounded forced.

Cleve caught her hand, his hard brown fingers warm against hers. "By the way, you haven't reconsidered that suggestion I made last night?"

"Haven't given it a thought," she denied hastily.

Carol Tells Her Belief Something Very Wrong

Her words seemed to make no impression upon him. He looked down at her, half-smiling. "You're such a little nut," he said tenderly. "Listen, Dorinda, I've fixed up something for you. Since you scorn my proposition to make an honest woman of you, how about a visit to my house? Maybe when you see me on my own home grounds and come to know me better, you'll have a change of heart. I bear a message from my mother, asking you to spend a few days at the Adams domicile. How about it?"

"I'll have to ask—" she began. "You'll have to ask Uncle Edward," he mocked. "I'll ask him myself. Your pretty nurse tells me he's not in so I'll telephone him later in the day. But get your grip packed for I'm taking you home with me after the inquest tomorrow."

After the inquest. After the inquest tomorrow she'd be on her way to Los Angeles. She couldn't tell Cleve that, though.

Edward did not come home until late in the afternoon. He ignored his previous request for a talk with her. But she didn't care, she had no desire to see him now.

She went to her room early that night. Carrie came in with her hot milk at nine o'clock. There was a bond between herself and the maid, Dorinda felt.

But tonight, to Dorinda's surprise, Carrie's eyes avoided hers. She fidgeted uneasily and seemed anxious to leave. But she stopped on her way out, her big hand grasping the door knob, and said strangely, "I try to do what I think's right, Miss. I hope you won't hold anything against me. All I want's for you to be safe."

She was gone before Dorinda could ask what she meant.

The black hands of the clock moved inexorably onward. At twelve she put down her book. Surely danger was safely locked out tonight. Perhaps she could sleep. But just as she untied the blue robe, a low tapping sounded at the door.

Dorinda stood motionless, cold with fright. "Who's there?" she faltered, and felt herself relax as Carol called softly, "Let me in. Quick, Dorinda. I've got to talk to you."

"Dorinda," she said, her tone low in spite of its harshness. "I was wrong. There is something queer going on in this house. You're getting out of here now, tonight. And I'm going with you!"

Dorinda backed away until the foot of the bed stopped her.

"No," she whispered thickly. "No." She put her hand against her throat, feeling fear an icy trickle along her spine.

"This may mean your life. You can't—just give up. You've got to get dressed and get away from this house." Carol's face, not more than a foot away, was set in stiff planes. Her black eyes were grim and narrow.

"But, Carol, why—why—?" "There's no time to talk about it now. We've got to hurry, hurry." The nurse emphasized her words with another shake. "Come on, dear, dress. I'll help you."

The moonlight lay like silver frost across the grass, turning their immediate world into a black and white theatrical scene devoid of depth or color. Carol's face was a featureless silvery oval.

"The garage is so far from the house no one will hear us," she said. She breathed hard as she slid the wide door upward. "I've got the extra car keys. Your uncle keeps them in the drawer of the hall table."

She looked over her shoulder toward the house. Dorinda's eyes followed hers. When they had first come into the moonlight, Dorinda had looked up at the south wall of the house. It had been dark then, the windows blind, closed eyes. But now, on the second floor, an oblong of radiance broke the symmetry and stared down on them like a seeing golden orb which followed and noted every movement.

Carol saw the light, too. She raised her head uneasily. "Hurry, Dorinda," she said again. "We'll take the roadster."

They followed the curves of the driveway, they passed through the gates into the road. Carol turned the car to the left.

"Can you drive, Dorinda?" she asked abruptly.

"A little. I haven't driven for a long time though."

Tells of Her Hearing Strange 'Whisperings'

"Well, you're probably better at it than I am. I didn't want to ask you to get us started." Carol gave a short laugh that held no merriment. "But when you've calmed down a little—or maybe I mean waked up, you've seemed sort of paralyzed, you know—I'm going to ask you to take the wheel. I don't feel too confident about my own ability. Wait a while though. I seem to be getting along all right so far."

"Where are we going?" "Los Angeles," Carol told her. "We ought to make it by thirty-three. That friend of mine—you remember the one I stayed with before—she'll take us in."

In spite of her admitted inexperience, Carol drove rapidly. They came to Trentville, rolled down the main street, where the little shops, closed and shuttered now, dreamed in the moonlight.

"Carol," she said softly. "Aren't you going to tell me?" "Tell you what?" Carol leaned forward in her seat, looking intently at the road ahead.

"What you heard. How you knew—something was going to happen to me."

She felt the deep sigh that shook Carol's slight body. "It's hard for me to talk and drive at the same time. Or maybe it's that I hate to talk about it. It scares me."

Carol's voice was only a thread of sound, barely discernible above the hum of the motor. "I'd given Morrow his medicine," she began abruptly, "and tucked him up for the night. Then I went to my room and thought I'd read for a while. It was late before I knew it, half past eleven. I decided I'd take another look at Morrow before I turned in—he isn't sick enough to need much care but he's a fussy patient and the more attention he gets the better he likes it."

"Well, he was awake and declared he was hungry, so when I couldn't talk him out of it, I said I'd go downstairs and get him a glass of milk. It was so quiet on those half-lit halls—you know how you sort of tiptoe around so as not to break the stillness. Anyway, I didn't make a sound. I pushed open the rear door of the hall but it swung back shut—you know how it is. I didn't turn on the light—I know where the ice-box is and I got my milk and started back. It was just when I got back to the swinging door—I had my hand against it—that I heard what I heard."

Carol's arm was tense against Dorinda's. "Voices on the other side of the door. They were so close that if I'd pushed even an inch or two more I'd have struck them. Your name was what stopped me. I just waited there and listened."

"I couldn't hear much—they were whispering, you understand. Just your name and the words 'accident' and 'tonight.' It doesn't sound like much but it was terrible, Dorinda. Suddenly I knew you were right; that it hadn't really been an accident before. I just stood there and shook. It was a wonder I didn't drop the milk."

"I waited for a little after the whispering stopped and when I peeked out and saw the hall empty, I hurried upstairs as if Satan himself were after me."

She gave a forlorn little chuckle. "Morrow never did get his milk. I went to my room and walked around in circles trying to decide what to do."

Carol, Dorinda Flee During the Night

"At first I thought I'd call the sheriff. But I was liable to get bumped off myself while I was phoning and anyway, if he did come, what good would it do? Mr. Thornadyke would look at him in that 'my good man' sort of way he has and explain I'd had a nightmare and Mr. Poole would probably apologize and withdraw leaving whoever wanted to murder us to do it at leisure. Look how they've dropped that case of your friend. I tell you, in a small town like this if you belong to one of the old families and have money you can get away with anything. You're sort of like royalty."

"I'm safe now," Dorinda told herself over and over. "I'm safe." Her lips were close pressed to control their trembling.

She made her voice steady. "Carol, it wasn't—it wasn't Edward out there, was it?"

Carol hesitated, half turning her head in the darkness to look at Dorinda. "Honestly, I don't know," she said slowly. "I don't think so. I didn't think so then. But people whispering—they all sound alike. You can't tell whether they're men or women. For some reason I thought they were women. But I could be wrong."

Dorinda's hand pressed the arm so close to her own. "I'm—I'm grateful, Carol."

"You needn't be..." She broke off sharply. The car swerved as the wheel jerked in her hands. "Dorinda, I've been watching the rear view mirror. There's been headlights from another car reflected almost all the way we've come. I thought we'd lost them a while back but now I see them again. Maybe it's a different car. It doesn't necessarily mean someone is trailing us. But there's so little traffic on this road—especially at night—"

"It's no use," Carol whispered between set teeth. "I can't keep that up. I'll wreck us both. And anyway, I haven't gained anything. That car is just as close as before. Maybe it's not following us. I wish I knew."

Dorinda, watching over one shoulder, could see in the distance two yellow lights, like bright round eyes. But another car—it didn't prove someone was following them.

"They're after us or they're not." Carol had the manner of one who has made a decision. "We'll find out. Here's what we'll do, Dorinda. A few miles farther on there's an all-night hamburger stand. I'd planned on stopping for coffee in any event. I don't want to take any chance of either of us falling asleep at the wheel. The stand is a quarter mile from the main road and if the car behind us turns off there too, we can be pretty sure it's us they're following."

Five minutes later Carol gave an exclamation of relief. "Here's the road. Look, you can see the lights of the stand from here." And then, after a pause, "Did they make the turn, Dorinda?"

"They've made it," she asserted faintly. "Carol, they are following us. And the car's closer. A lot closer."

"Well, we've got this far anyway." Carol guided the roadster into the empty space in front of the small eating house and stopped the car with a jerk.

It was a little place, glass-fronted, with half a dozen stools, all vacant now, lined up in front of an oil-cloth-covered counter. Behind the counter a glass pot of coffee simmered on an electric grill; a shimmer of heat rose from a black, greasy-looking metal sheet over a burning gas ring. The rattle of dishes came from the kitchen at the rear. There was at least an illusion of safety here.

Interflowing Life

Lesson for November 12, 1959

AN AUSTRALIAN minister once remarked: "If ever a church could be found whose members treated one another better than people treat one another on the outside, the world would flock to its doors." In that exaggerated remark there is a pointed truth. As a matter of fact, that was the case in the early church and the world did flock to its doors. From six score people that church grew to 5,000 in no time, and in less than three centuries it was the religion of a world-empire.

This Scrambling World ON THE "outside" what is the rule? David Harum put it in a nutshell: "Do unto your neighbor what he would like to do to you." "Every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost." "Every man has his price." "Look out for Number 1." "Blessed is he that tooteth his own horn, for he that tooteth not his own horn, the same shall not be tooted."

People get tired of living in a world like that. Something tells them that the everlasting scramble is not the way to live, there must be a better way. Suppose they could look down the street and see that better way actually being put into practice by a little community of people?

They ought to be able to see it wherever there is a Christian church. But—is the average church that kind of community? Do the members treat one another (on Mondays, that is) with more understanding, consideration and affection than the local atheists or Non-Christians show toward one another? Indeed, is there anything whatever that seems to link these First What-is-common-people together with a common bond?

Making Fellowship Real IN A large city there will be a page or more of Smiths in the telephone directory. These all have the same name, but most of them don't know one another and don't care. Too often it is this way with Christians even in the same congregation. They all bear the same name, but that is about all.

What they ought to have is fellowship. This is not a mere word. It can be a real thing. It is like a two-way blood transfusion, in the realm of personality. It is interflow of life. It can be the source of the Christian's finest growth and service. Musicians develop musically through sharing with other musicians. Every "Future Farmer of America" is going to be a better and more enthusiastic farmer through his associations with the F.F.A.

So our Christian faith and life are kept glowing and growing through the fellowship of like-minded persons. One thing your Sunday school class, and indeed the whole congregation, may well consider seriously, even adopting it as your Project for the Year is this: What can we do to make fellowship more real in our church?

Wider Horizons CHRISTIAN fellowship needs not only to be enriched; it needs to be enlarged. In a town or section where denominational lines run sharply across the population, there is too much cross-fire. Such a community has a hard time being a community. Many a denomination has been afflicted with the disease of pride. Loyalty to one's own denomination too easily replaces loyalty to the kingdom of God.

Whatever be your own church connection, there are unnumbered true Christians outside the bounds of your church. Do you know them? Do you worship with them from time to time? Do you encourage visitors from other churches? Not only in other denominations but across lines of race and color you can find a thrill in coming close to Christians who may even be much better Christians than yourself.

Young people in your church may be interested in a new organization which is interested in bringing together the thinking of young people in every land. Young Christians can bring to such a project the insight and the spirit of Christian Faith, and learn to know young Christians in other lands than ours. Woods From Five Continents Used In Bank Murals

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—Four murals, perhaps the most unusual in the United States, will adorn the walls of a Louisville bank this winter.

The murals, each six feet long and four feet high, are fashioned from hundreds of tiny pieces of wood and present typical scenes of the life of Kentucky—a steamboat, coal mine, sorghum mill and a tobacco auction.

No stains or paints are used—just the natural tints of some 50 different pieces of wood from five continents.

One has only to watch Fritz Bade, their creator, at work, to realize that here is no stuntsman, like the fellow who builds a model of the Eiffel tower from 11,000 toothpicks. Although Bade has been an artist in oil, pencil, etching and wood all his life, he pursues art as an avocation. He has been a manufacturer and salesman for years.

For several years, Merle Robertson, president of the Liberty National Bank & Trust Co., has been giving an original Bade etching each Christmas to some of the bank's larger depositors. After seeing some of the artist's inlaid wood pictures, Robertson decided a set of Bade murals would lend distinction to the bank's proposed new building.

There is color, depth, perspective and expression in these glorified jigsaw puzzles. Blistered poplar has just the right blotches of light and dark to make a "buttermilk sky" over the steamboat. Timber on the boat, standing out white against the cloudy sky and the muddy water, are cut from holly. The shadowy deck is Brazilian rosewood and a tiny awning on the afterdeck is tulip wood with lemon and orange colored stripes. Black and white striped zebra wood from Africa makes a sweater for one of the deckhands.

"Grain for anatomy, color for effect," is Bade's rule.

"I never use a straight grained wood to depict a rounded surface of a body," he explains. The grain must conform to the shape to be portrayed.

Bade says he never has counted, but he estimates there are from 750 to 1,250 pieces of wood in a picture, perhaps as high as 1,500 in some. It takes him 200 to 300 hours to make one picture.

Animal, Bird Beauty Shop Opened in California

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Loa Busche, 26, has opened a beauty shop for animals. She has opened the animal laundry which she believes is the first of its type in the country.

She guarantees to get the customers clean by this routine:

(1) Dunk it in suds and scrub (unless it's a bird, in which case she duff cleans it), (2) manure and buff nails or horns, and (3) administer a thorough brushing.

Her most exciting "laundry" is the Java monkey which nipped her finger and the 16-year-old Indian leopard—which behaved like a perfect gentleman.

Working Girls' Job Market On Wage Upswing, Report

NEW YORK — A New York employment agency reports happy job hunting days are here again. Big companies are hunting for $15,000 a year executives and girls right out of a typing course say, "I want a job for $50 a week."

Suzanne Mathias, partner in the agency, says, "It's almost impossible to find a girl who'll take a job at $40 a week now. Six months ago, although they weren't exactly crying for them, the girls would take the job at that figure."

She hastened to add that things are not yet as tough for employers as they were during World War II.

"Companies are still being choosy about the men they hire for those executive jobs. And a girl still has to prove she has something to offer before an employer will hire her at $50 or more a week."

The labor scarce war years, when companies had to hire inexperienced and often unqualified people, are too fresh in most memories.

"Those days when an employer would say, 'just send me anybody, so long as she breathes and is warm,' aren't back with us. But if job applicants keep holding out for higher salaries and our old clients keep calling up to fill jobs they haven't filled for years, then something's got to give."

Earth's Rotation Slowing, British Astronomer Says

WASHINGTON—Sir Harold Spencer Jones, Great Britain astronomer, reports the mean period of the earth's rotation is changing in two ways.

One change, he says, is well known and well understood. It amounts to about a thousandth of a second a century, sufficient to upset seriously some astronomical calculations. The change is due to the drag of tides over the beaches of shallow seas. This change also affects the day-length of the moon.

The other change, equally minute, is in calculable and unpredictable. Sometimes it hastens and sometimes slows down the earth's rotation.

AROUND THE HOUSE

If the tray under your freezing compartment is not wide enough to catch the chunks of frost when they fall, spread newspaper across it so that the paper extends a couple of inches beyond each edge of the tray. Or, remove the regular tray and put a slightly larger kitchen tray in its place during defrosting.

The above treatment will also combat stickiness in the gasket; but if the stickiness gets beyond this help, hold the gasket in place with a few strips of adhesive tape. Don't try to remove the tape later, though, unless you're getting a new gasket, because the old gasket probably will come off with the tape.

When the rubber-covered dish drainer or skeleton tray alongside your sink gets old and sticky, apply shellac, varnish or ordinary paint. Let it dry thoroughly before you do the job (and after) to eliminate the sticking and prolong the life of the tray.

To blacken or polish a stove, here's a routine that gives it a good finish and makes it last. When rust and grease have been removed, rub the stove thoroughly with waxed paper. Then add a tablespoonful of strong leftover coffee and a few pinches of brown sugar to a can of your favorite brand of stove polish. Don't mix them up; just take a dab of all

Crack-Down Unexpected

DESPITE the general predictions that nothing important would be done by the administration on controls and the anti-inflation front "until after election" the prognosticators were confounded when the federal reserve board cracked-down overnight with really tough regulations on consumer credit and installment buying. The regulations applied to passenger automobiles, household appliances and real estate loans and purchases, both farm and urban.

On top of this, the fast-growing new agency, the national production authority, formed under provisions of the New National Defense act of 1950, already has issued priorities and allocations on scores of raw and processed materials and has held industry conferences with representatives of steel, rubber, chemicals, nickel, sulphur, paper and pulp, and others including the retail trade.

As a matter of fact, the tough FRB order on installment buying was issued in the midst of an industry conference in which retail trade representatives were seeking to have the original consumer credit control regulations issued about 30 days ago, postponed for another 120 days. Of course these retailers had their Christmas trade in mind, which they feel the tougher credit restrictions will hurt.

NPA, although it has split authority under the President's executive order, corresponds to WPB formed during World War II, and it is set up within the department of commerce, from which agency it has taken over jurisdiction in several bureaus including the office of small business.

The department of the interior will have jurisdiction over the oil industry, gas, solid fuels and certain ferrous, non-ferrous and alloy metals and minerals, some in the raw state, others through the process of smelting and refining.

The department of agriculture will have jurisdiction over food, farm implements and commercial fertilizer.

The atomic energy commission will have jurisdiction over source and fissionable materials and the interstate commerce commission over transportation, domestic storage and port facilities.

ESA Boss Named

The President, under the new law, also has created the economic stabilization administration over which he has named Alan Valentine, former head of Rochester university and a director in a number of industries, as boss. This agency will correspond to the old war-time OPA agency and will have jurisdiction over prices, rationing and wages. The veteran pipe-smoking Cyrus Ching, respected head of the mediation and conciliation service of the department of labor, has been named to head the wage stabilization board of nine members in the new agency. The other eight have yet to be named. Also a price administrator is to be named.

This agency has not yet taken form, although by the time this is in print, Valentine may have taken over his duties here in Washington and set up shop for business.

New Housing Shortage

The influx of new workers in Washington due to the defense program is causing concern over the question of housing, not only of personnel but of office space. It will be remembered that during the last war thousands of workers and whole departments were moved out of Washington to other cities. The same thing is happening today, except that a new plan of dispersal-decentralization is being considered. Jess Larson, chief of general services administration, which has charge of housing the departments, has said he will ask congress for approval of the new plan. It consists of dispersal or transferring employees from the District of Columbia to new locations within a 20-mile suburban area, while decentralization means picking up whole new agencies and transferring them to other cities. This requires congressional approval, since most laws setting up the agencies in Washington. Housing is a clog requires their seat to be headache across the nation. The credit restrictions are criticized as hampering the building of new homes. Rent controls are demanded by some, condemned by others.

UN Day Celebrated

United Nations Day, October 24, celebrating the birthday of the United Nations, went off without any incidents except patriotic celebrations in many cities and towns of the land. It is amazing how some organizations such as the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Veterans of Foreign Wars can become so misguided as to feel that flying of the United Nations flag meant disrespect to the Stars and Stripes.

It has been decided to develop a business like working organization for the auxiliary. It was also decided to have a closed membership after January 1st. Mrs. Dixon, Mrs. L. G. McKay, Sr., or Mrs. Cecil Cable may be contacted if anyone is interested in becoming an active member.

A three piece doll bedroom set made and donated by Mrs. Mary Linsdeau and Miss Florence Herick was shown to the group. The auxiliary will dispose of this prior to Christmas. Details will be announced later.

Mrs. Jane Clark was recipient of the Kolinski fur scarf donated by Sams Brothers, Bay City.

Dr. Crandell Speaks At Farm Meeting

On November 2 the Isco county Farm Bureau Women's Committee met with Mrs. Henry Hobart in Wilber township.

Dr. Clare H. Crandell, District Health Unit No. 2, and Mr. Renwick, State Health Inspector presented an informal lecture on Rheumatic Fever, its cause, diagnosis and treatment, illustrated by a movie entitled "We See Them Through." Dr. Crandell explained that heart disease leads in being the greatest cause of death. Rheumatic fever is a heart disease and can be crippling or fatal if neglected.

He recommended clinics in Alpena or Traverse City should an early diagnosis of the disease be desired.

This was the second occasion on which Dr. Crandell has spoken to the Farm Bureau Women's group.

The new officers for 1950-51 assumed responsibilities at the November meeting: President, Mrs. Irene Lorenz, vice president, Mrs. Howard Staebler, Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. Chales Kobs, and Assistant Secretary, Mrs. A. T. Vary.
