Port Huron Man Killed In Hunting Accident

Old Bissonnette Farm Scene Of Tragedy

Leslie Deckett Loses Life by Accidental Shot From Companion's Rifle

Leslie E. Deckett, 34, of Port Huron was instantly killed early Wednesday afternoon near the Old Bissonnette farm in Oscoda township. This is the season's first fatal accident for the Isosco county area.

Deckett, William Rogers of New Boston and Sam Dabich of Detroit had arrived at the area where they intended to hunt at about 1:00 o'clock. Dabich, who had been driving, got out on the left hand side of the car. Deckett and Rogers on the right. Talking and joking with each other, the three quickly prepared to hunt. Dabich, who had his back toward the car and his companions, was the first to have his rifle loaded. Turning to answer one of the men the rifle accidentally fired. The bullet went through the panels of the car and hit Deckett in the neck severing the jugular vein.

Coroner E. D. Jacques, State Police, the sheriff's department and Conservation officer Jack LaFear investigated the accident. The body was taken to the Wilkins Funeral Home at Oscoda.

Farmers to Vote on PMA Candidates

Ballots Now Being Mailed to Eligible Voters in County

Township ballots listing the names of candidates for election as PMA Community Commitmen, and as delegates to the county PMA annual convention are being mailed to all eligible farmer voters in Iosco county, according to Earl M. Partlo, chairman of the present Iosco County PMA Committee.

The mailing of ballots will be completed prior to November 24, Mr. Partlo said, and farmers who receive ballots will have until December 21 in which to mark their ballots and return them, either by mail or in person, to the county PMA office.

All ballots received in the county PMA office through December 21 will be counted on December 22 by an impartial three-man election board.

Names of nominees for the following positions will appear on the official ballots: Chairman of Community PMA Committee; vice chairman; regular member; first and second alternates; delegates and alternate delegate to the county convention.

The newly elected Community PMA Committees and delegates will take office on December 29, 1950 and will serve throughout 19-51.

Eligible voters are any owners, operators, tenants, or sharecroppers on a farm that is participating in this year in any program administered by the county and community PMA committees.

Any farmer who does not receive a ballot through the mail and believes he is eligible to vote is urged to call or write the county PMA committee for clarification of his status.

Mr. Partlo said he is issuing a call to all eligible farmers in Iosco county to vote in these committee elections because, "only by voting can a democracy be made to work."

Tawas City's New Police Car Has Two-Way Shortwave Radio Set-Up

Greatly facilitating services of the Tawas City police department, the new police car, recently purchased by Tawas City, is provided with two-way shortwave radio. Connections are with the Iosco county sheriff's office or State Police post.

"We are in a position to give almost instant co-operation with the sheriff's department or State Police through our car to car radio," states City Police officer George Ruth. "We can be reached at most any time in an emergency through this service."

"My duties as city police officer consists of more than traffic control. Among the numerous ways that we can serve you is through the regular patrol of the streets. This is especially valuable at night. Inspection of premises at night might prevent damage from an unnoticed fire. We carry a fire extinguisher with us for emergencies. Our time is broken down so that we can spend portions of it on duty during the full 24 hours of the day.

"Making our streets as safe as possible for the public is the city's aim in its traffic regulation program. Our streets should be safe for ourselves, also our city should be a safe place for those who come here to spend their vacations."

"One of our duties is to be of friendly assistance to the tourists. We can direct them to places of interest and furnish them with the various pieces of literature prepared by the Chamber of Commerce. In many instances we can help to make their visit here enjoyable."

Officer Ruth can be reached at Phone 494 at his office in the city hall; Phone 1080 at his residence at 211 Third avenue or while on patrol through the State Police.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Attempt Made to Kill President; Master Defense Plan for Europe Reportedly Agreed on by Allies

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

In a last desperate effort, North Korean troops attacked U.N. forces just short of the Yalu river as the war in Korea entered its dying moments. Chinese Red troops were reported to have joined the North Koreans in the last minute stand. U.N. forces totalling nearly 200,000 men continued to push northward in the final phases of the struggle.

TRUMAN:

Escapes Assassination

For the first time in history an attempt was made to assassinate a president of the United States at his official residence. The plot came to an end in a blazing gun battle at the very steps of Blair House, the temporary White House.

The assassins were identified as Griselio Torresola, who died almost instantly of wounds, and Oscar Collazo, seriously wounded, both of New York. The men were members of the Puerto Rican Nationalist party which started an uprising in Puerto Rico a few days before the attempted assassination.

Three policemen on duty at Blair House at the time of the attack were wounded. One of the guards, Pvt. Leslie Coffelt, 40, died a short time later in a Washington hospital. The other two were reported seriously injured.

According to best reports the two assassins approached Blair House, one from the east and one from the west. Collazo opened fire first when within 10 feet of a policeman on duty at the steps of Blair House. Two other guards at posts near the steps opened fire on Collazo.

Meanwhile, Torresola, within a few seconds of Collazo's opening shot, opened fire in front of Lee House, which adjoins the Blair mansion on the westerly side.

Guards returned the fire and within seconds both would-be assassins were shot down.

Collazo is reported to have told police that he and Torresola came to Washington "with the express purpose of shooting the President". On Torresola's body was found a letter and a memorandum both cryptic but indicative of conspiracy of the Nationalists to kill Mr. Truman.

The attack resulted in an immediate crack-down on the Nationalist party in Puerto Rico which has demanded independence of the United States.

The Communist party, afraid of being involved in the plot, immediately disavowed any connection with it and termed the attempt a 1950 version of the "Reichstag-fire frame-up in Hitler Germany."

TIBET:

Invasion Ordered

The Indian government which had tried to appease both the east and west in the current battle for freedom, received a rude shock with the official confirmation that Communist China had ordered her troops into Tibet.

India had thrown its weight behind the move to seat Communist China in the United Nations. With the invasion of Tibet, Prime Minister Pandit Nehru found himself in a difficult position. Red armies were at the border of India and it appeared likely that Nehru would be forced to review his policies.

If Communist China and Russia continue their present partnership in foreign policy and exploitation of China's natural resources, the disappearance of free Tibet will bring a formidable combination of Communist-powers to bear against non-Communist India.

Nehru finds himself now in a very unfavorable situation in the struggle for dominance in Asia.

Army Reveals Point System for Reservist

Veterans of World War II are not likely to forget the point system by which armed forces were demobilized when the conflict came to an end. Now a point system is again in the news.

Headliners

"The time has long since passed when the world can be stirred to hope by general phrases of the Soviet Union about disarmament and peace and German unity," Secretary of State Dean Acheson said in rejecting a Cominform proposal for a unified Germany.

"You can have all the glittering front that's left in Europe today. I've had enough," said Barbara Hutton, American heiress who had four husbands, three of them European.

"It is useful for the American government to show in practice that it is ready to help other people rather than issuing propaganda as some other countries do," Premier Tito of Yugoslavia said in announcing his drought-damaged country would get U.S. aid.

EUROPE:

Master Defense Plan

The will and a plan for the defense of Europe against any aggression was made known to the world when the Atlantic pact nations reportedly agreed on a unified army of about 50 divisions, strong fleets in the Atlantic and Mediterranean and a mighty air armada based in Britain and on the continent.

The plans called for General Dwight D. Eisenhower to be named supreme commander of the collective armed forces. The defense plan would reach full force as soon as possible and not later than 1953, it was reported.

The plan is a further step in the armament for defense program outlined in a recent speech by President Truman. The western world has accepted the belief that Russia understands only armed strength.

In the new plan, the U.S. would furnish five to 10 divisions, more than half the warships, all strategic bombers, and five to 10 groups of tactical fighter planes. France reportedly would provide 20 to 28 divisions; Britain about five; Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Netherlands five to 10, and Italy about 10.

Britain would contribute a smaller number of warships than the United States, but would share the major responsibility for sea power strength.

CASUALTIES:

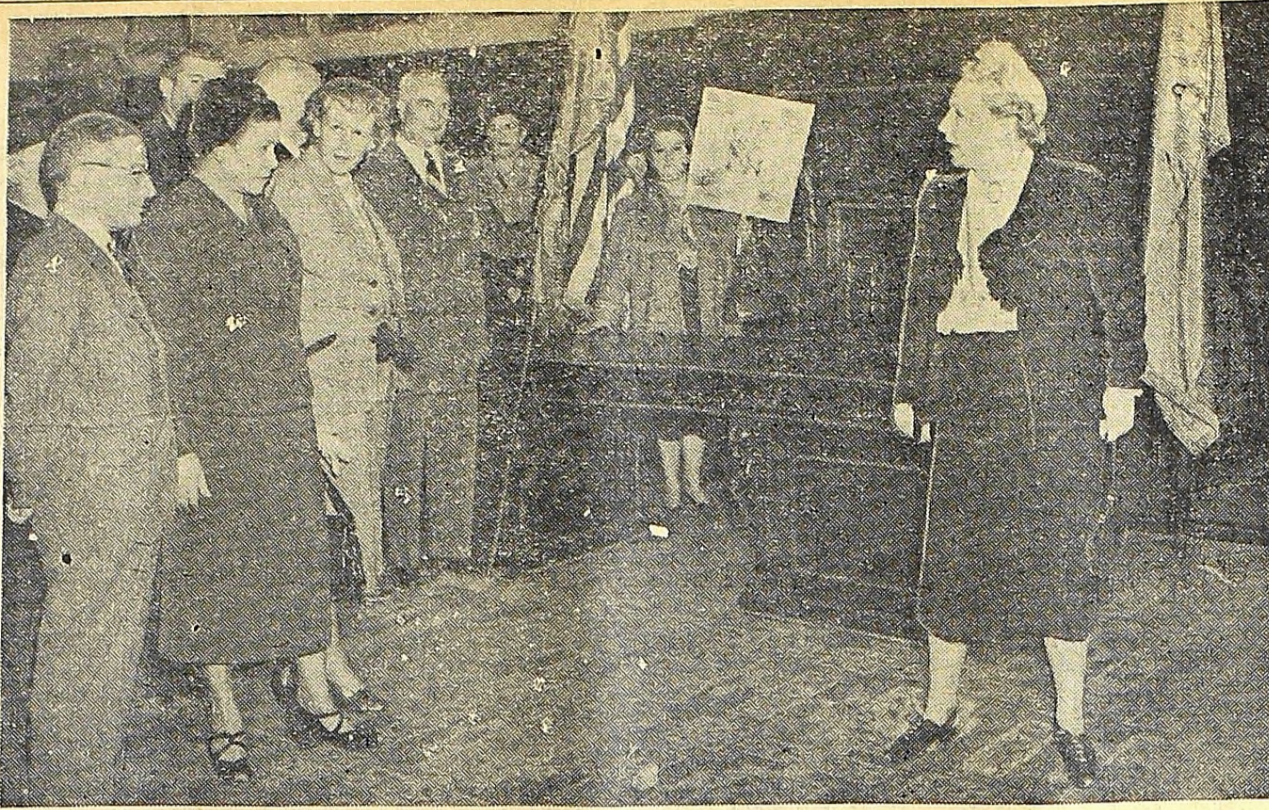

Climb to 26,701

The terrible price of war was brought home to the American people with the announcement that U.S. casualties in Korea numbered 26,701.

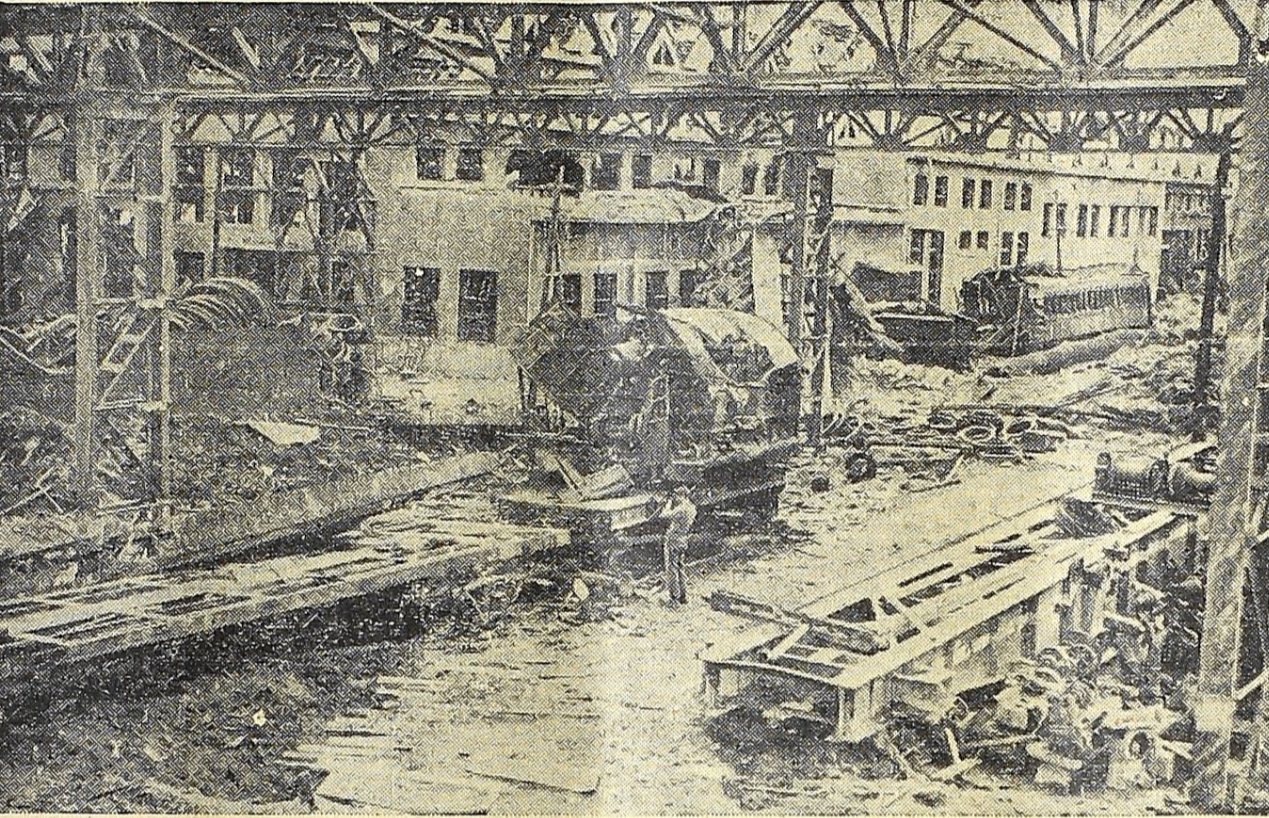

The latest tabulation included 3,683 killed in action, 18,682 wounded and 4,337 missing in action.

The official figure on total deaths was 4,125. In addition to those killed in action, it included 442 who died of wounds and listed as missing those whose capture by North Koreans and subsequent death was confirmed.

The army casualties totaled 23,140, the navy 252, the marine corps 3,133 and the air force 176.

NEW JET BOMBERS . . . Here, in Baltimore, Md., is the first flight of the U.S.A.F. two experimental Martin XB-51 ground support bombers, now well along in testing by air force and Martin pilots. Details are closely guarded secrets. Bomber carries crew of two, is powered by three J-47 jet engines, with each engine producing more than 5,200 pounds of thrust. This is the first postwar airplane specifically designed for ground support forces.

HEAVY SENTENCE . . . Frank F. Di Donatis, Philadelphia driver, was fined $1870 in Elkhart, Ind., for overloading, and sent to jail for 1,870 days when he couldn't pay. Eight days later he was released in his own recognition, pending a jury trial.

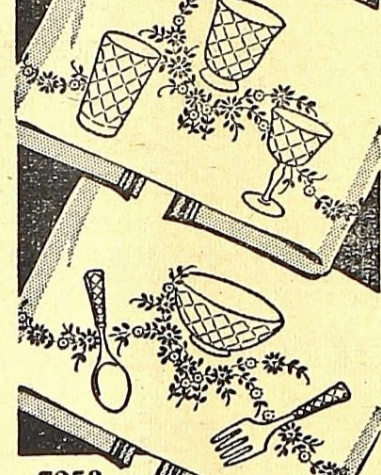

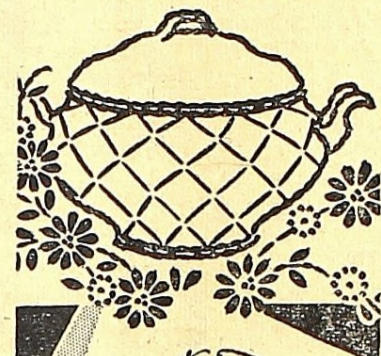

TOOTHLESS GENERATION? . . . Dr. Helmut Zander, Tufts college dentistry prof., brushes the teeth of a hamster and says penicillin in tooth powder is best cavity stopper. He predicts a toothless generation.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Is Your Hubby Overly Generous?

By Lawrence Gould

Can a husband be too generous?

Answer: Yes, and not always because he has a guilty conscience. Any normal man gets pleasure out of making his wife happy, but the man who spends more than he can afford on buying his wife presents shows a lack of confidence in himself — or in her. He may be attempting to build up a feeling of his own importance, or trying unconsciously to "buy" love which he feels incapable of winning on his merits. If you know that your love is what mainly makes your wife happy, you'll limit your spending to the family budget.

Do "parent figures" decide social groupings?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Roger Money-Kyrle in "Psychoanalysis and the Social Sciences." Each of us stores up in his unconscious mind a stock of memories which crystallize as "parent figures," and according as he feels these to be "good" or "bad," he imitates or tries to protect himself against them. When individuals find common symbols for these figures (like a national hero who becomes a symbolic "good father") they form a group with "common values to defend, a common enemy, a common leader, and a common standard of behavior."

Should your recreations help you "get ahead"?

Answer: In the main, no. Your pet sport or hobby should bring you release from the tension which pursuing your career creates, and if it is chosen to help you to get ahead, it becomes another form of work, not recreation. Assuming that it is innocent and harmless, the ideal recreation is something that you do purely "for the fun of it," and not for any practical good it will do you. Yet what you enjoy is really profitable in the end, since pleasure in itself gratifies primitive needs which cannot be safely ignored.

KEEPING HEALTHY Coronary Heart Disease in Young

By Dr. James W. Barton

THERE ARE SO MANY middle-aged men and women afflicted with coronary thrombosis, commonly called heart stroke, that we have been thinking of this disease as only found in the middle-aged. Some months ago I wrote about a group of members of the armed forces, in their twenties, who had been attacked by coronary thrombosis, from which some of them died. It is naturally hard to understand how such young men, who had likely joined the forces in A-1 condition, could be struck down during their war service. In Archives of Pathology, Chicago, Drs. O. Saphir and I Gore report their study of the blood vessels of the heart of 13 soldiers between the ages of 18 and 29 who died suddenly of severe coronary heart disease. Their examination showed that the hearts of some of these gave evidence of old inflammation from infection some years before they joined the armed forces.

In six of these cases, the heart (examined after death) showed that some of the small blood vessels of the heart gave evidences of inflammation considered characteristic of chronic rheumatic inflammation, though other evidences or remains of rheumatic inflammation of the blood vessels were found in only two. In three of these six, and in four of the remaining cases, old inflammatory changes were present about the large coronary arteries. What lesson do young men and women learn from the above? It teaches that an inflammation of the lining of the blood vessels from infection of teeth, tonsils, gall bladder, and other organs, may cause a thickening of the lining of the blood vessels so that it is hard for the blood to pass through the vessels; blood pressure is raised and that part of the heart is deprived of its proper blood supply as with the larger blood vessels (coronary) which causes coronary thrombosis.

HEALTH NOTES

Pulp-capping offers a simple, efficient method of treating alive, pulp-exposed children's teeth which otherwise would require complicated treatment or extraction.

Since the coming of the shock treatment, thousands of individuals have had to remain in mental institutions for weeks only, instead of years or a lifetime.

If parents could see how permanent teeth lie in position to settle into the places of the first teeth, they would realize the importance of saving first teeth as long as possible.

Leaving the first teeth in position means that the jawbones will keep their shape and no disfigurement of the face will occur.

Government Jobs
THE LAST CENSUS showed my home town, the little city of Orange, Calif., a population of just 10,000 people. It would take the total population of two and one half such towns to meet the employment rolls of the state department totaling on last July 1, 24,727. To pay those employees would take the total revenue of the people of two and one half towns the size of mine. That is a lot of cost for the operation of our foreign policy, whatever it may be. Personally, I have not believed it was worth the price.

The population of our town represents a cross section of the nation. We have a percentage of perverts, of morons, of Communists, of fellow travelers. In all probability, those 24,727 employees of the state department represent a cross section of the American people, just as does our town. When you select government employees on the basis of their politics, rather than on their ability, such a cross section will be the result. In the matter of number of employees, the state department is one of the smallest of the cabinet departments of the government.

The number of employees in the state department is but a drop in the bucket of the total of government jobs. General Marshall is boss of the big army of civilian employees as head of the defense department. He commands a civilian army of 756,666. That is more people than are to be found in many of our metropolitan cities. To put them in uniforms and a rifle in their hands, would mean adding 26 divisions, 30,000 men to a division, to assist in stopping the Russian hordes, should that become necessary, but that 756,666 will not be put in uniform. A job in the defense department is a safe refuge from the draft.

Of that vast army of civilians 303,509 work for the army, 291,694 for the navy, 154,453 for the air force. Do not ask me what they do, for I do not know. The marines do not have civilian employees, not even for propaganda purposes. All they need is a chance to do a fighting job, and they quickly make the newspaper headlines.

To advise us of what taxes we owe and to keep a record of our payments, the treasury department employs a force of 80,253. Most of those who do the paying would be quite willing to dispense with all of that number. One of the baby departments is that reporting to the attorney general, who has only 89,253 employees. As compared with other figures, that sounds like real economy, but to maintain it makes quite a dip into our pocket books.

And so it goes. There were on July 1 of this year, 407,126 holding jobs in the post office department. That is a little more than 100,000 less than a year ago, but we now have only half the number of mail deliveries. There are 65,573 feeding at the trough of the interior department, and it takes 84,607 employees of the agriculture department to tell the farmers what and how much to plant.

In the matter of years, the department of commerce is the baby of the cabinet family, but within its few years, it has grown into a husky youngster, and in the number of its employees it is still growing. The 38,545 for which it provided jobs in 1947, increased to 60,377 on July 1, 1950. What they all do, I do not know. Possibly concoct new questionnaires, for which manufacturers and merchants are to provide answers. In time, commerce will provide its full quota of government jobs.

Where you would least expect it, the labor department shows a minority of jobs. There is no evidence of feather bedding. It might be possible that there is an excess of time and a half of overtime. But the number of jobs is growing, from 3,382 in 1948 to the 6,091 in 1950.

Such is the job producing records of the nine cabinet departments, but that is not all of the story. Entirely outside of the cabinet departments, there are 29 independent agencies of the executive branch of the government. Those agencies, created by acts of congress or by presidential edict, represent what we think of as "big government." They carry on their payrolls.

The health-breaking burdens of the Presidency are complained of by every man who holds the job. Yet through a long lifetime of newspapering, with many acquaintances among the great and near great, I know of only one man who has refused to continue to carry those burdens. That one man was Calvin Coolidge. His historic statement: "I do not choose to run" was definite, and he meant it. All others would like more of the burdens of which they complain.

Sing Something Purple

The fact that music can bring certain colors to mind has long been recognized by psychologists. Two of them, Henry S. Ogbert and Theodore F. Karowski, found that—out of 148 college students—39 per cent were able to "see" a color or colors while listening to music. Of the number, 53 per cent were able to associate a color and 31 per cent felt a color response. Newton related colors to the diatonic scale in this manner: Do, red; re, orange; mi, yellow; fa, green; sol, blue; la, indigo; and si, violet. Attempts have been made to fashion color organs and other devices to express the correlation of color and music.

Change In Egg Situation

Our eggs are coming from big farms, when 10 years ago they came from small farms. Half of today's eggs come from farms with 200 or more birds.

by Harold R. Clark, County Agt.

The hunting season means just one thing to me. No meetings, only a few office calls and a chance to get at some of the office work that has been stacking up the last fifty weeks. After averaging more than a meeting every other day, nine-tenths of which are night meetings, it will come as a relief. More nights at home may turn me into a family man. I will have time to help my young son with his model airplanes and yes, my wife will appreciate getting the garage and basement in order.

I am one of those oddities that do not hunt. I have no gun and no hunting paraphernalia. I like my comfortable home and bed too well to think about changing my nature.

I don't know why I am writing this column this time. No one will have time to read it anyway. But in case some of our readers keep this paper for a reference they might be interested in the extension program for the coming year. The following are the dates that are already set up.

Beginning with December 1, 1950:

December 1: A conservation district study committee will meet at Grant Town Hall at 1:30 p. m. with Russell Hill, Extension Specialist in Soil Conservation of Michigan State College. The Farm Bureau and the Grange are taking the lead in this movement.

December 5: County Fair Association Annual meeting will be held at the Hale Community Building. There will be an election of four directors. The entertainment will be a party and box social. The idea of the party is to raise funds to help finance the annual fair.

January 16: "Farmer's Day." This will be an all day meeting beginning at 9:30 a. m. with movies and four speakers. It will be something like the old "Institute" and will be of interest to both the farmer and his wife. E. D. Longnecker and Denny Clanshan will hold sessions in soils and crops. D. B. Varner, a very popular speaker, will discuss agricultural economics and Mary Bodwell will discuss buying and give a cooking demonstration. There will be an exhibit of farm equipment and supplies and new home appliances. Also valuable door prizes will be offered. It will be held in the new Whittemore Community Building. The Whittemore business men and the U. S. D. A. Council are taking care of the details.

January 29-February 3: "Farmers Week" at Michigan State College. This is definitely the most outstanding farmers educational event in Michigan. Isco county farmers should attend one or more days. They should see all the exhibits and attend the lectures that would interest them.

February 9: ABA Annual Meeting. 1:30 p. m. George Parsons Extension Dairyman will be the speaker. Probably at Grant Town Hall. (Continued Next Week)

4-H CLUB NOTES

While everyone's hunting, this reporter is getting caught up on reports. It may be hard for you to believe but I visited 126 farms, drove 5,182 miles in connection with 4-H Club activities, spent 75.1 days in the office and 65.1 days in the field. I managed to go to church on Sunday with my family. I attended 51 meetings with a total attendance of 1192 in Isco county. Why bore you folks with this data? You are all deer hunting anyway.

I hear Jim Belson, former 4-H Club member from Whittemore has been called to duty. Good luck Jim!

It's National 4-H Club Congress November 25-30 in Chicago for some Northern Michigan folks. None from our county this year, but there will be in the near future.

Recently we have had many requests for 4-H Club bulletins. We are most pleased to provide them to organized 4-H Clubs. If you and other parents in the community are interested in our 4-H Club program, drop us a line in the Federal Building and we will tell what must be done.

BEANS—Better Raw or Cooked?

How many pounds of cooked cull beans to feed a dairy cow has always puzzled dairy farmers who prefer them cooked instead of raw, reports Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent.

Dr. C. F. Huffman of the Michigan State College dairy department, has figured the right amount. A table showing this ration can be secured from the extension office or the MSC Dairy Department.

As an example, a Holstein cow being fed plenty of good alfalfa brome hay and producing 15 pounds milk per milkin should get as a feeding about four pounds of cooked beans along with about one pound of corn and cob meal.

A Jersey or Guernsey yielding 10 pounds of milk per milking, being fed a non-legume hay, needs about five pounds of cooked beans and a half pound of corn and oats at a feeding.

Beans take up plenty of water in the cooking, so that 1 pound of dry beans swells up to 2 1/2 pounds cooked.

Many farmers are not equipped from the Dairy Extension Department, Michigan State College, East Lansing.

Use of Kerosene
Misuse of kerosene, or coal oil, particularly in rural areas, causes hundreds of deaths each year. One common and dangerous practice is the use of kerosene to speed up a slow fire. Kerosene vaporizes when poured into a warm stove, and this vapor may explode, igniting clothing and furniture in the room. Kerosene should never be used to start fires.

Raw cull beans run about 20 per cent digestible protein. Hence two pounds of beans are worth one pound of a protein supplement such as soybean oil meal.

Grain rations showing the use of raw cull beans can be secured

Tight Rope

By Allison L. Burks

Nurse Carol tells Stella Moore, masquerading as Dorinda LaCroix in the Thorndyke home at the request of Edward Thorndyke, of her belief that danger and death hang over the house. Already Grandmother Thorndyke, who was the object of Stella's deception, a salesman who had penetrated Stella's man-ner, and Anne Delahay, Stella's friend, have lost their lives under suspicious conditions. Carol relates how she has heard strange "whisperings" outside Stella's door, and prevails upon the latter to flee the Thorndyke house with her. The two women note that a car is keeping behind them and determine to find out if they are being pursued, and by whom.

CHAPTER XVII

She took the stool farthest from the entrance and closest to the kitchen. But she could not force her eyes away from the door. Soon it would open, it must open. But she could not picture nor even surmise who it was that would appear in the opening.

Minutes passed. The door did not open. Perhaps, Dorinda reflected, her pulse quickening, whoever was outside intended to wait until they came back to their car.

As if invoked by her unvoiced demand, she heard the click of the latch. The door swung open and a black-coated figure stood framed there, dark hat pulled down over his white face.

"Uncle Edward!" Dorinda gasped and, without reason, felt her tension slacken. She did not know who it was she had expected. But at least it had not been Edward.

He did not look at Carol but came straight toward Dorinda.

"My poor child!" he said. His voice was raw and strained, its unctuous quality gone, banished by some impelling emotion she could not name.

He put one soft white hand under her chin, tilting her face up toward his so that she looked into his eyes. "Dorinda, thank heaven I've found you. I never thought you'd run away from me, my dear. You don't know what you're doing."

"I had to go," she told him quickly, the words tangled on her lips. "Someone there—back in that house—wants to kill me. Someone tried last night—"

"Last night." His eyes narrowed. "You didn't tell me that."

"I didn't have a chance. Someone was waiting in my room when I got home. Whoever it was struck me. Carol found me. She thought I'd fallen and hit my head. But I know that isn't true. And tonight—"

"You promised—" she began, her voice shrill with alarm, then stopped as the car glided swiftly past the iron gates without even a pause. She had forgotten that in order to reach their destination they must pass the house she had, a few hours ago, hoped never to see again.

Edward took Dorinda to Cleve's residence.

They were past the house. She turned her head and watched, as she would have watched a dangerous beast, and drew a long sigh of relief when the winding road removed the place from her vision.

Above the soft purr of the motor, she could hear the steady booming of the surf. Along this section of the road, the coast line curved in uneven scallops, so that sometimes their black car was almost on the edge of the bluff, so close the twisted black cypress rooted precariously in the sandy soil almost brushed against them. A quarter of a mile farther on, the sea might be hundreds of feet away.

On one of the widest of the scallops, an elaborate structure fashioned along the lines of a Spanish ranch house stood some distance back from the road. This must be what Cleve had once described as the "simple beach cottage of the Van Sillars, a toy of some twenty rooms more or less." The only house between his own home and that of the Thorndykes.

Less than five minutes later the car turned in through a white picket fence to another graveled driveway. This was a house, too, she had never seen before. But it did not seem unfamiliar. How many times had Cleve told her of the low building with its wide porches sprawled under the big sycamores. It looked exactly as he had pictured it, silvery white in the moonlight, its low-pitched roof and open shutters black now; though morning would reveal them as a soft green.

The car came to a stop but as she would have slid from her seat, Edward delayed her, his hand on her arm.

"I'll be over as soon as I can get away tomorrow," he told her. "We'll talk things over. Perhaps we'll find it necessary to tell Poole who you really are. I doubt if he's accepted that accident theory yet. But if the truth must come out, I want to tell him myself. It will look better—for me, at least. You'll let me do this, my dear? You won't say anything until you've seen me again?"

"No." Dorinda felt she could safely promise this. "I'm willing to let you explain. But it must be soon. I'll feel—safer."

"Safer!" he echoed. She could sense that he was trying to study her face through the darkness. "Surely you don't think this—this impersonation has anything to do with your safety?"

"No one tried to kill me when I was Stella Moore," she said frankly. "Someone wants Dorinda LaCroix out of the way—I don't know why. I think now that what happened to Anne was meant to happen to me."

"But that was an accident," he protested. "Believe me, Dorinda, it couldn't have been anything else." He sat motionless beside her for so long that she stirred impatiently. "It must have been an accident. I can't see how it could have been—intended." But his voice had changed with the added words and became oddly uncertain.

"It's very late," he sounded tired. "We won't talk of what has happened any more tonight. Tomorrow—"

He stepped down from the driver's seat and came around to assist Dorinda. But the girl was already out of the car, moving swiftly ahead of him toward the darkened house. She crossed the porch and pressed one finger against the electric button beside the entrance—he came and stood beside her.

It was a long time before her ring was answered. She could picture them inside, awakened by the shrill summons echoing through the silent rooms. There would be a wait. Had the bell really rung or had it been only one of the sounds heard in dreams? She pressed the button again. Light outlined the two narrow glass panels beside the entrance. The door swung open. Cleve, dressing gown tied about him, dark hair tousled, stared at them unbelievably.

"Dorinda! Mr. Thorndyke!" The drowsiness fled from his blue eyes. "What has happened? What's wrong?"

Cleve Assures Dorinda She's Free of Danger

"Nothing is wrong," Edward's tired voice said. "Dorinda's had a fright. Nothing to worry about but you can imagine the effect on her added to the trying events of the last week. So I've anticipated your invitation and brought her here. I must apologize for disturbing you but, frankly, I didn't know what else to do. There is the village hotel, but you can imagine the gossip if she arrived there at this hour, or any other hour for that matter. It seemed—impossible."

"Of course. You were right to bring her here. What's the loss of a little sleep between friends?" Cleve caught Dorinda's hand and drew her inside. "You look like a ghost, Rinda. And your hands are like ice. I'll wake Mother and we'll fix this girl up, Mr. Thorndyke. Won't you come in?"

Edward shook his head. "I've caused enough bother for one night. I must get home. I'll be over in the morning with whatever clothes my niece needs. Fay will attend to that."

"There's a suitcase already packed in my room," Dorinda interposed.

He looked at her sharply. "You'd anticipated then—Oh, well, that's another angle for tomorrow's discussion. Good night, Dorinda. Good night, Cleve."

They heard his quick steps as he crossed the porch and a moment later the slam of the car door.

"My poor little love," Cleve put his arm about her. "What have they been doing to you?"

She burrowed her head against his breast. "Cleve, someone wants me out of the way. Tonight Carol heard them talking. We ran away in the car but Uncle Edward followed and stopped us. But I wouldn't go back to that house. I'll never go back."

"Good God, Dorinda! I never dreamed—Poole thought you'd be safe until after the inquest. If I'd had an idea—"

She leaned back in his arms and looked up at him. "Do you know what this is all about? You sound as if you did."

"Not exactly, honey. But I think Poole has a theory. He left night before last for Los Angeles. He'll be back in the morning. He had a hunch and he's tracking it down. Now, what about overhearing threats against you? Tell me exactly what happened."

He listened intently as she went over the events of the night. When she finished, he made no comment on what she had told him. But his lips had thinned and she could see the twin sparks which burned in his eyes.

"You needn't feel afraid any longer, Dorinda. That's over. And now we've got to get you settled. Good Lord, child, it's nearly three o'clock."

His arm still about her, they went up the stairs together. Mrs. Adams met them at the head of the staircase. She looked like a girl with her black hair hanging about her shoulders, a rose-colored negligee outlining her slim figure. But her blue eyes were perturbed.

"What on earth has happened?" she asked even as her hands went out to Dorinda in quick welcome.

Christian Worship

Lesson for November 19, 1950

SOME one has said that if the Christian church did nothing else but offer a regular opportunity for public worship of God, she would have a justified her place in the sun. This is a rather misleading truth, for if a church did nothing but worship it would not be doing its whole duty, indeed it would not be a true church. As our Scripture plainly shows, worship disconnected from life is not only not good, it is sinful.

Why worship? WHAT is worship, and why do we worship at all? We might define it as a meeting with God, both conscious and desired. "He shines in all that's fair," and in truth we are in his presence all the time. But we are not conscious of him all the time. When we are conscious of him, then one of two things happen. Either we hastily shut our minds and run away from him in fear, which is sin. Or we linger, feeling it is good for us to be here.

And then it is worship. Or again, we might call worship conversation between man and God. Every part of it is either our listening to God speak to us, or our speaking to God in some way.

Why worship? We worship because we love God. Otherwise it would be a bore, at best, or a kind of self-torture at worst. We worship because we need God. If Jesus needed both public worship and private prayer, so do we far more. We worship because we need to know God's will.

Public and private worship cannot be substituted for each other. Readers of the Bible know how they were intertwined in the experiences of God's people, and how our Lord himself, who used to attend the synagogue services regularly, also sought God on the hills alone. A man who never meets with God alone in prayer will not know how to come to public worship in the true spirit; and a man who habitually stays away from church for no good reason is not a person whose private prayer-life is likely to be a healthy one.

We need to worship together with other Christians. We need this experience to strengthen our own prayer-life. We need it to keep us from selfishness in our prayers. Intense, earnest prayer, and full of faith too, may be seriously wrong if it is essentially selfish.

In corporate, public worship we are reminded that none of us stands alone; that God has many children. We need to worship together because it is one of the very few things, perhaps the only one, that all human beings can do as one. No two of us are alike, yet we are alike in this one thing: We are all human beings in need of God. To worship together is to be reminded of this.

Why Worship As We Do? IT OUGHT not to be surprising that men worship God in so many ways, for there are all sorts and conditions of men. But within the Protestant churches, our differences are not important. Essentially we have much the same "pattern" of worship. It will be helpful to you, the next time you are in church, to ask, at each part of the service: Why do we do this? What good does it do? Could it be left out without being missed?

As you visit other churches from time to time, take note of any differences, not in a spirit of criticism but considering whether you might learn from them. What do you and they have in common?

You will agree that there are hardly any parts of a typical Christian worship service which we could do without. We need the prayers, for in them we all pour out our hearts together before God. We need the hymns and psalms, because they express the beauty and the joy of our faith; most of them are prayers set to music. We need the Scripture reading, because in it we hear the Word of God. We need the sermon, because it applies the Word of God to our own lives and problems. We need the offering too... why? But the offering is true worship only on one condition. Do you know what it is? After all, the real test of every part and variety of true worship is: Has this experience brought man and God closer together in spirit and in truth?

"Easier to use" says Mrs. Alfred Riewesthal, Hales Corners, Wisconsin, top winner at State and County Fairs. "No waiting, no special 'bothersome' directions to follow. I've never used any yeast I liked better."

"Faster dissolving" says Mrs. Lydia McDonald, Springfield, Illinois, winner of 17 first awards at the 1949 State Fair. "You simply combine it with water, stir it well, and it's ready to use in just seconds' time."

"Faster rising" says Mrs. Blanch Blue, Syracuse, Indiana, State Grange Contest winner. "It's more satisfactory than ever. No Fleischmann's cuts down rising time—gives perfect results when you bake at home."

WHEN SLEEP WON'T COME AND YOU FEEL GLUM

Use Chewing-Gum Laxative - REMOVES WASTE... NOT GOOD FOOD
When you can't sleep—feel just awful because you need a laxative—do a MILLIONS do—chew FEEN-A-MINT.
FEEN-A-MINT is wonderfully different! Doctors say many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon—right in the stomach. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy—you feel weak, worn out.
But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowels where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that weak, tired feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel fine, full of life! 25¢, 50¢, or only 10¢

Economical Cough Relief! Try This Home Mixture

No Cooking. Makes Big Saving.
To get quick and satisfying relief from coughs due to colds, mix this recipe in your kitchen.
First, make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup of water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
Then get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any drugist. This is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations.
Put Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of splendid medicine—about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, and tastes fine.
And for quick, blessed relief, it is surprising. You can feel it take hold in a way that means business. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, eases soreness. Makes breathing easy, and lets you get restful sleep. Just try it, and if not pleased, your money will be refunded.

Put Your Weed and Insect Killers Out of Reach

Chemical weed and insect killers that won't be needed until next summer should be stored from children and animals, Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent, cautioned this week.

Cases of accidental poisoning from chemicals appear weekly in the newspapers. They give tragic examples of the serious effects of careless use of potent weed and insect killers.

To keep such accidents from happening in Iosco county, the agent recommends that all insecticides be stored in closed, metal containers and that they be clearly identified and labeled. They should be stored in a place out of reach of children and never in or near the kitchen or food stocks.
