Former Tawas Student Gets Old Text Book

"This brings back happy memories," wrote James Phin-ney of Detroit to Rev. J. J. Rockle of this city when Rev. Roekle sent him a copy of Swinton's English Literature, a textbook used in the Tawas City schools more than 50 years ago. Mr. Phinney ad-vertised in the Herald a few weeks ago for a copy of this book thinking that he might find it in the old home town.

Mr. Phinney graduated from the Tawas City Public Schools in 1898. He is now in the elevating and conveying machinery business at Detroit. His office is located at 1662 Penobscot Building.

A Year of Decision

THE YEAR 1950 will go down in recorded history as one of mo-mentous decisions, the results of which only the future holds in the firm grip of destiny.

In the midst of the customary election confusion, Korean war news, inauguration of economic controls incident to military mobilization, military missions from twelve member nations of the North Atlan-tic Pact have been meeting here in Washington, causing little more than a ripple in this news-ridden city.

But behind these meetings, set in a lofty green and gold conference chamber of the inter-departmental auditorium on Constitution avenue, there is being settled the fate of nations and in all probability the destiny of the free world in a life and death struggle against Russian communism.

And in that struggle, the United States is committed to play a leading role in this new and dramatic fight for self-preservation, which in all likelihood may be the first step toward a centuries-old dream of a United States of Europe.

Grim visaged men sat in those historic meetings. These were men of war dedicated to band themselves together to keep the peace, if possible, but to pool their united strength against the common enemy-communism.

They were there from little Iceland, from our neighbor to the north, Canada, from the United Kingdom, from our ally France, from the Netherlands, from the Republic of Portugal, from Belgium, from tiny Luxembourg, from Italy, from Denmark, from the fiords of Norway and from our own United States - led by five-star Gen. George C. Marshall, secretary of defense.

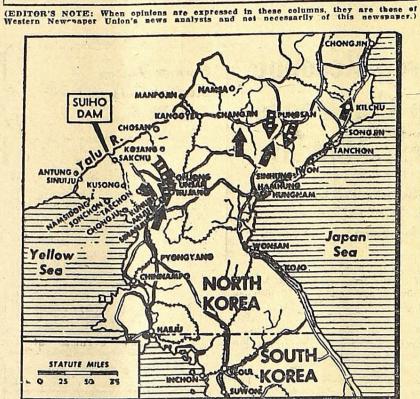

Amid the popping of flash blubs, the white gleam of the kleig lights and the clicking of newsreel cameras, the tall scholarly looking Marshall, dignified, calm and speaking slowly, but firmly, welcomed the missions from the twelve countries. Then the newsmen and cameramen were chased from the room and under the utmost security precautions the history-making conference got underway. What the results of this conference will mean to the folks in the home towns of the country of course, will be more money, more armaments and probably five to six divisions of American boys along the nation's first line of defense, which is now moved to the Elbe river.

First Epochal Event

But this is not the first epochal event of 1950-the first likely being the establishment of the economic union in Europe under the aegis of the Marshall Plan, the same Marshall who is now this nation's secretary of defense. And the second was the first army of the United

ELECTION: Republicans Gain

Taking the administration by surprise, the Republican party made sweeping gains in the senate and house in one of the most hotly contested national elections in years.

As final tabulations were being completed, observers believed that the Democrats would retain 49 senate seats and the Republicans would have 47. To all practical purposes the Republicans will have a working majority in the senate and will control legislative voting with the aid of rebellious southern Democrats.

In the house the Republicans made sweeping gains, but not enough for control.

Most startling aspect of the election, in the opinion of most observers, was the defeat of such men as Democrat Sen. Millard E. Tydings of Maryland and Sen. Scott Lucas of Illinois.

Lucas was the Democratic majority leader in the senate and Tydings was a strong supporter of the administration and the state department.

In Ohio, Sen. Robert A. Taft won a resounding victory over the labor-Truman purge attempt. Foreign policy played an important part in Taft's campaign and the results of the battle may shake the foundations of the Republican party. Some observers saw Taft's victory as a plain indication that the people were

GERM-WARFARE: Infected Rats Found

One of the most frightening and horrible discoveries of the Korean conflict was made public when the army disclosed it had found five thousand rats and mice innoculated with deadly plague and other germs in a secret laboratory near Pyongyang.

The army reported more than 5,000 rats and mice were inoculated-with such diseases as bubonic plague, encephalitis, and eurirra-waddy fever immediately after the U.N. landing at Inchon.

Only 380 of the carriers were alive when discovered and 200 of these were mad from hunger. None were believed to have been turned loose or to have escaped from their sealed cages, though fleas from the dead animals might spread disease.

The project was reported under the supervision of a Russian woman scientist who fled northward after the landing.

The animals were kept in cages in groups of from two to 20. They were well fed and their furs sprayed with a chemical that en-couraged the multiplication of fleas.

The discovery will provide a clue to the type of germ-warfare ex-perimentation Communist countries might be carrying out and give the free nations of the world an indication as to what horrors the Communist will resort.

SPAIN:

Ban Is Lifted

After four years the United Nations had lifted its diplomatic ban against the Spanish government. The action accomplished two objectives:

1. It withdrew the 1946 recom-mendation to all U. N. members that they withdraw ambassadors and ministers from Madrid. 2. It lifted the 1946 ban against admission of Spain to the U. N.'s specialized agencies. The United States, however, will not return an ambassador to Mad-rid. President Truman said publicly recently he would not appoint one.

The U. N.'s resolution left intact the condemnation of the Franco regime for its aid to the Axis during World War II. The United States voted in favor of removing the boycott which was spearheaded by Catholic Latin American nations.

CHINESE COMMUNIST TROOPS CAPTURED IN KOREA . . . Lt. M. H. Allen, Spokane, Washington, and Lt. C. O. Grewe, Portland, Oregon, interrogate a group of prisoners at Hamhung, North Korea. This group was among the first of the Chinese Communist troops to be captured and taken into custody during the fighting in North Korea near the Manchurian border. Gen. Douglas MacArthur sent a strong note to the United Nations protesting the intervention of Communist China into the Korean conflict.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey added a marathon television show to his list of political-campaigning devicist of political-campaigning devic-es. He had Mrs. Dewey on the show with him a while. He asked her, "Why don't you take your hat off." She replied. "Because my hair's a mess. Why do things like this happen just when I need a permanent?"

"The Communists committed one of the most offensive acts of international lawlessness of historic record," Gen. Douglas MacArthur said in his report on Chinese intervention in North Korea. George Bernard Shaw, Irish au-thor and wit, who died at the age of 94, for years had kept the world in a whirl with his use of words. Here are some Shavianisms: Success-"The secret of success is to offend the greatest number of people;" Truth-"The truth is the one thing nobody will believe;" Love-"Sir, there are two tragedies in life. One is to lose your heart's desire. The other is to gain it."

KOREA: Situation Serious

The war in Korea which seemed on the verge of complete victory not happy with the administration's for the United Nations forces took a dangerous turn with the inva-

Nations which victoriously prosecuted the Korean war under the leadership of Gen. Douglas Mac-Arthur, and which gained the United Nations tremendous prestige and a more united support from the free world than ever before.

Truman Speech Praised

Added to this is the fact that there is general agreement here that the speech of President Truman before the United Nations on October 24, will go down in history as one of the finest state papers of record-that his pronouncements on that occasion offered more light and more hope to troubled peoples throughout the world in the ageold fight for freedom and liberty. This is indeed the year of decision, in which it will be decided whether the world is free or shackled.

Void Hard to Fill

This reporter was one of those privileged to know and to talk often with Albert S. Goss, who died unexpectedly as he was about to deliver an address at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York. His passing from the Washington scene, as master of the National Grange will leave a void difficult to fill, for Mr. Goss was one of those unselfish men, unselfish of his strength and ability, who literally gave his life to the cause of agriculture. He had a gift for organization, and to draw to him the loyalty and love of those surrounding him and his statesmanship on the agricultural field in Washington will be sorely missed.

FAO Having Trouble

The United Nations food and agricultural organization is having its troubles in session here. Some are of the opinion that it is merely "growing pains", but there are others within the organization who would like to see FAO become only a statistical organization and play a role similar to the pre-war organization known as the international institute of agriculture. The American delegation however, believes FAO should take action.

John Davis Lodge ousted Fair Deal Democrat Chester Bowles in the governor's contest. Democrat Sen. Brien McMahon, however, was reelected.

In New York, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, twice-defeated Republican nominee for president, won a third term as governor of that state. The governor's running mate, Lt. Gov. Joe R. Hanley, was defeated by Sen. Herbert Lehman. Here again was evidence of that trend where neither Republicans or Democrats were able to sweep all offices. This split across party lines was evident in many sections of the country.

In California, Republican Gov. Earl Warren, seeking a third term, won re-election over James Roosevelt, son of the late President. Rep. Richard M. Nixon also defeated Democrat Helen Gahagan Douglas in a senatorial battle.

In a congressional fight that attracted nation-wide attention, American-Labor party Rep. Vite Marcantonio of New York, the only minor party representative in the house, was unseated by a Democratic-Republican-Liberal coalition formed for the sole purpose of beating him. Marcantonio's foes charged that he followed every twist and turn of the Communist party line during his service in the house.

As final tabulations were compiled, observers agreed that Democratic control of the senate and house was so slight it did not constitute a safe working majority. As a result, the next two years will see a number of bitter battles on legis-or killed by incredible small martion serious, including Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the U. N. commander.

According to available reports, between three and six Chinese divisions crossed the boundary between Manchuria and Korea and went into battle beside the North Ko-

troops south, in some instances as much as 50 miles. MacArthur summed up the situation by reporting that the North Korean army was finished as a lighting force in October by the inflicting of 335,000 casualties. This included 135,000 Reds who were captured. His communique on the situation said: "In the face of this vic-tory of U.N. arms, the Communists committed one of the most offensive acts of international law-about 300,000 troops- veterans of the Chinese civil war-which could be thrown into the battle immediately. Another 300,000 are believed to be either in Manchuria or North China.

The dangerous question now facing the free nations is what attitude the Chinese will take to Mac-Arthur's charge that "alien Communists" have entered the war.

Whether the Communist world is prepared to take this colossal step is a secret, most probably locked in the depths of the Kremlin. If the Communists are ready to take this risk it may mean the lation and much of it being passed start of World War III and the end of the world as we have known

WORLD WAR III: Thunder Can Be Heard

The capitals of the world trembled because many observers believed they heard the thunder of World War III on the horizon.

The thunder was caused by Communist China which adopted the attitude that "American intervention in Korea signalizes an intention to invade China."

All Communist dispatches and broadcasts hammered out the same recurrent themes:

1. The Chinese Communists will oppose "American imperialist aggressors" with concrete action.

2. American use of the atom bomb will mean retaliation in kind. Observers were further troubled because the Chinese evidently meant business. From three to six Chinese divisions had been identified in action in Korea against United Nations forces. They forced U. N. troops to make withdrawals, and, from early reports, intended to continue their march south.

No one in his right mind can overlook the fact that China could be the strongest nation in the world. The Chinese Communist armies already are estimated at 5,000,000 men of whom 1,000,000 are in Manchuria. Peiping recently announced organization of 5,500,000 armed militia, bringing the country's armed strength to more than 10,000,000.

Its industrial might never has been exploited, but could, within a few years, become one of the greatest in the world. China's war supplies at present are furnished in great part by Russia. There is no reason to believe they will be discontinued.

Observers believe that if China is determined to do so, she can take over Korea. It would mean a defeat for United Nations forces and the first phase of World War III. The answer seems to be hidden in the brain of Mao Tse-tung. China's Communist leader.

WHEN SUMMER TARRIED ... Warm sun and sultry breezes dallied over some parts of the nation long enough to see November get a head start. Summer did a quick comeback in Atlantic city recently, bringing the air temperature up to 77 degrees and the water temperature to 63. Among those lured into the surf by November's impersonation of June were Janet March and Peggy Reeves, who are cavorting in the water here without showing a single goose pimple to indicate what's in the frosty offing.

DEAN OF OPERETTA

Romberg Has Composed Over Seventy Operettas and Musicals

Sigmund Romberg, whose life story soon will be shown on the world's movie screens, is the kind of man who makes "highbrows" unhappy.

He insists he is a "middle brow" composer and that he is happy being just that. For a man who bears the impressive label of Dean of American operetta, it is a startling admission.

"Most Americans have middle brow tastes in music. What's wrong with that?" he says in support of his statement that he'd rather write melodies with a sentiment and a tune that people can remember and whistle than heroic arias that almost no one can sing without weeks of hectic practice.

Since Romberg exiled himself to America 43 years ago to escape his parents' determination to make a bridge builder out of him, he is quite content to have the same tastes as most of the rest of the people in the United States.

"Besides," he asks, "what highbrow achieves enough importance during his own life to merit a Hol-

SIGMUND ROMBERG really might have built some beautiful bridges if his parents had their way and he had become a construction engineer. But instead, he has turned out more than 70 stage and screen operettas and musicals. among them standards like "Maytime," "Student Prince" and the "Desert Song," one or the other of which is still touring somewhere at almost any time. He has written a magnificent total of 2,000 songs like "Lover, Come Back to Me."

And he isn't finished yet! "There is lots more music to be written-lots of it in me-and I am writing it," he explains.

Right now, he is composing another musical which he expects to have on Broadway this winter.

Some composers compose their songs on a piano, some in their head. Romberg composes most of his music on a Hammond organ, so that he can get the effect of the entire orchestra as he tests a melody on the Hammond. He used to do it on a pipe organ, sitting in solitary majesty before the gigantic instrument. When the Hammond organ was invented, he got one of the first made. He is paid more because his work is better, and his work is better because he knows more. Now, what would life be without time, energy or knowledge? Not much! So if a robber ever says to you: "Your money or your life!" you would be quite correct (even if untactful) if you said, "My dear felon, you repeat yourself; money is life!"

"That's so," she admitted. Mrs. Whitney went into the kitchen and Paul rose and strolled idly toward the window of his own living room. On the chance of being observed, he pretended to examine a potted plant on the sill.

Surreptitiously he glanced across the court, and was shocked to see the head and shoulders of a man framed in the window on the far side of their neighbors' living room. He called his wife, and, standing well back so as not to be observed, they peered across the court. But the figure in the window on the far side had vanished.

Mr. Phelps looked puzzled. "There's something wrong here. Would you mind stepping into the living room?" They followed him in and he pointed toward the far wall. "You see we have no windows on that wall.

He broke off as Mrs. Whitney gasped. "Why, it wasn't a window at all! It was that mirror! You see, took both heaven and high water, it hangs where a window might be, and faces our apartment. given us in either case.

Energy cannot be created by you or me. Each of us has a certain (and a different) amount; we inherit it, we are endowed with it; but only God in the long run is the source of energy. To make a long story short, life is God's gift, not our creation. It is a blank page on which we write, an empty field in which we can sow as we will. But though the writing and the sowing are our own, the page and the field are God's. So the Christian recognizes this as the central fact of his life: I belong to God. Now if that is true it is also true that our money is also, just as much as life itself, ours only as a trust from God.

Stewardship

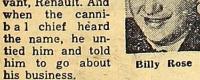

"STEWARDSHIP" is the word which recognizes God's right in our lives; it is the word which describes the principle of life for those who honor God as source of all they are and have. When the proverb-writer says, "Honor God with thy substance," he has just said, "in all thy ways acknowledge him." No man is likely to do what is right with his money who habitually does wrong with his life. No man is going to admit his partnership with God in money matters who does not confess God to be the Lord of all his life.

Now there are two principles brought out in our Scripture about stewardship of money in particular. One is this: God looks on what we have, not on what we haven't. A widow who gives one tiny coin, if that is all she has, is more generous than a millionnaire who has just given half a million to Charity. Second is the principle of willingness. The Lord loves a cheerful giver. Sour givers, regretful givers, stingy givers, no. But the Lord does love the man who gives with a smile. It isn't how much you give, it isn't the fact that you give, it's HOW you give. Is your heart generous in the first place?

Evolution of Classifications

Zoologists, like many other people are inveterate classifiers. The oldest historical records contain attempts to classify mammals from various standpoints, scientific and otherwise. One of the oldest and best known is the ancient Jewish classification of mammals into "clean" and "unclean" on the basis of foot structure and cud-chewing habits (Leviticus xi) Subsequent attempts to classify mammals, made by zoologists in various parts of the world, underwont a

I have had inquiries of the cause of unthriftiness in small pigs. The most common causes are anemia and roundword. Both are determental to the swine industry and should be checked in the early stages.

Anemia is an ailment of young pigs confined on cement and wooden floors. It is due to the deficiecy of copper and iron in the diet. It is necessary to get the iron and copper directly to the pigs as soon out-weigh the tangible values. The as possible. Prevention is the goal. 1. Place pigs on worm-free pastture.

2. Place worm-free sod in pen or 3. Swabbing or spraying sows udder with solution of copper as (ferrous sulfate) - 1/2 pound in one quart of water. Addition of molasses helps solution to adhere.

Roundworms are indicated dull coarse appearance of the hair. In the advanced stages, the pigs are pot-bellied and thin. A one day treatment of sodium flouride will usually clear the infesta-tion. A mixture of 1-part sodium flouride to 99 parts of ground grain by weight, should be fed in place of the usual feed. Give the amount that the pigs will clean up in one day. Any of the mixture left over can be mixed with the regular dry feed.

The above information was tak-en from Extension Bulletin 299, "Profitable Pork Production" published by the Michigan State Col-lege. Ultraviolet Light Hikes Egg Laying Hens exposed to ultraviolet light showed a marked increase in egg production during a series of experiments conducted by U. S. department of agriculture scientists. The exact properties of the ultraviolet radiation causing the increase have not yet been identified, but production was raised by as much as 19 percent through its influence.

The experiments were started in 1945 by the agricultural research administration as the result of a discovery made while scientists were working with so-called bactericidal ultraviolet light (the very short rays of invisible light, frequently used to eliminate bacteria). A source of bactericidal light was being tested for its ability to reduce the number of airborne bacteria in a poultry house when it was found that hens under the ultraviolet radiation laid more eggs than those held under similar conditions but without the light. The scientists then decided to gather more scientific facts about this phenomenon

For five consecutive years, hens were tested in a specially constructed underground poultry house from which all natural light could be excluded. Visible light was provided for certain periods each day by regular fluorescent lamps. The flocks were held in the house at all times during the experiment so that complete control of the visible lighting could be maintained. Recommended laying diets were provided, including normal supplies of vitamin D.

Each year the hens held under bactericidal light produced from 10 to 19 percent more eggs per bird than hens maintained under the same conditions and diet, but without bactericidal radiation. It was demonstrated conclusively that neither the number of bacteria in the poultry house nor the vitamin D content of the light rays was involved in the beneficial effect.

Further tests showed that the addition of vitamin D to poultry rations beyond normal amounts did not increase the rate of egg production. Exposure of hens to longer rays of ultraviolet light, which have previously been found to supply vitamin D requirements for laying hens, gave none of the beneficial results of bactericidal light.

"You needn't feel afraid any more." The echo of Cleve's words was the last thing Dorinda remembered that night. "You needn't feel afraid-'

She slept the deep dreamless sleep which comes with relaxation from strain and did not awake until morning drew a penciled line of sunlight across her face and her eyes opened and blinked in its blinding dazzle.

She felt rested and hungry. Dressed again in the brown pullover and skirt, she ran downstairs. The front door stood open to the soft spring air and beyond the protecting screen she could see Cleve pacing up and down the porch, whistling softly to himself.

He looked around at her call and hurried inside. The screen door closed behind him with a bang. She watched him come, a little stab of pain at her heart. If he could always be this close, always where he could come at her call. But would he want to be-after today? She shook her head driving away the thought. They were together now. Sometimes it seems to me that everyone around me is in a conspiracy to destroy the things I value." His lips were set in morose lines of self-pity.

THE TAWAS HERALD

"But that isn't what I came for." He cleared his throat uneasily. "The time has come when I've got to tell you a few things, my dear. It-it's not exactly pleasant for me but I can't evade it any longer. What I have to say is partly an explanation, partly a confession."

He sat upright, one plump hand on either knee. She looked down at his round white fingers, seeing, without knowing she saw, the well manicured nails, the fine black hairs along the third finger joints.

"I loved my mother, Dorinda. But in her way she was a hard woman. Perhaps not hard, but inflexible. She didn't believe in sycophants, she didn't want her children ever to think they must cater to her, yield to her whims for the sake of favors received. She wanted us to be free to live our own lives. Underneath this may have been the feeling that she didn't want anyone to look forward to her death or be placed in the position of waiting for her to die.

"When I finished college, she made over to me my half of the money my father had left. She would have done the same for my sister except that Laura made an early marriage to a wealthy man. Mother had a little money of her own which came from her own family. She would have made it suffice if necessary even though it meant a simpler mode of living. In. her will that money was designed for charity.

"At any rate, it was understood. that the other half of my father's. fortune was to go to Laura or any children she might have. I had had my share.'

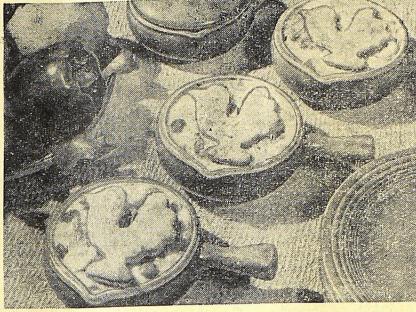

Edward shifted nervously. He got up and walked over to the porch rail, staring out over the clipped turf. When he turned back to Dorinda, he remained on his feet, leaning against one of the square painted posts which supported the roof.

Tries to Rationalize Decision to Deceive

"Apparently, I wasn't as wise as I thought - or as my mother thought. I know she had expected me to go into some business or profession of my own or to at least leave the money in the safe and conservative investments my father had made. But I traveled, I enjoyed life. "Dorinda," he asked abruptly. "Did you see Lana last night?" "Lana!" she repeated in surprise. "Why, no. I haven't seen her since she went out yesterday before lunch. What makes you ask?"

"She seems to be missing. Your Aunt Harriet phoned this morning. She said Lana'd been gone all night and she seemed to think you must know something about it since you'd been gone, too. Although she admitted Mr. Thorndyke had told her where you were and that you didn't know anything about Lana's absence." "I certainly don't," she assured him. "She never tells me-nor anyone else I should judge from what her mother says-where she's going or when she'll be back."

"I told your aunt I was sure you hadn't seen her. I advised her to call Poole-he must be back by now-and she said she would. She was terribly upset. She said Lana's never stayed away all night before."

"It's queer. Cleve, you don't suppose she was one of the persons Carol heard-whispering?'

His face hardened. "It doesn't seem likely. Why on earth would Lana have it in for you? You haven't interfered with any of her plans, have you?"

"I'm sure I haven't. She's always away. About the only time we meet is at meals. I don't suppose we exchange half a dozen sentences a day. You know, Cleve, I can't be-lieve she's really missing. She's probably stayed all night some place and will show up soon."

"I think so myself. Let's not worry until we know there's something to worry about?' He piloted Dorinda toward a door a short distance down the hall. "Breakfast, Myrtle, and plenty of it," he shouted kitchenward.

Twenty minutes later she pushed back her plate. "What a break-fast!" She sighed. "It's wonderful being here, Cleve. I feel so free." "Only one word from you and the place is yours for life. You-" He stopped as Myrtle poked her black head through the door.

stood talking for a few minutes and then ensconced himself comfortably in the seat beside the driver to continue the conversation.

Edward Tells Dorinda Of Life With Mother Trixie came and jumped up in the swing beside Dorinda, and kissed her hand with a moist pink tongue. "Where's Randy, Trix?" the girl asked mournfully but the dog only wagged her stumpy tail and pushed her head against the girl's arm. The sun was warm against Dorinda's fair hair. She leaned back against the pillows, one hand on Trixie's rough coat, surrendering to the peaceful quiet of the morning. It was there Edward found her when he came up the porch steps. She sat up suddenly, blinking at him, half asleep. Cleve and Poole were gone. Trixie, curled up beside her, barked protestingly as she moved. Edward looked at her anxiously. "You're all right?" He pushed the dog out of his way and sat down beside Dorinda in the swing. His glance swept to the open door, to the closed windows overlooking the porch. "It seems private enough here. Where is everyone?"

"Mrs. Adams has gone to market. don't know where Cleve is. I think he's gone away with the sheriff. They were here a little while ago. I must have gone to sleep.' He nodded, satisfied. "No wonder you're tired, poor child, after last night." His face looked pale and tired beneath his smooth black hair. "I've had a hellish morning, Dorinda. Lana seems to have run away, the little fool, and Harriet has been having hysterics all over the place. I'm not worried about the girl particularly. I think she has a peculiar ability to look after her own interests, but it's the incon-siderateness of her going off just broached the subject which was constantly on my mind. It was difficult.

"Then the war in Europe came. Laura died and Mother became critically ill. I went after my sister's child. You know what happened. I was in a panic. We didn't tell Mother that Dorinda was dead. It would have killed her. And by the terms of her will, if Dorinda died before my mother, the money would have been divided among a number of charitable institutions she favored. It was then the inspiration came to me to find a substitute granddaughter-you."

Edward smoothed back his black hair in his familiar gesture. He came back to the porch swing and sat down close beside Dorinda and went on in a lowered voice. "Believe me, I meant no harm. In the beginning my only thought was to prolong my mother's life. As I told you, I loved my mother. And I had to have time to persuade her to change her will.

"But after you came and the impersonation was so successful the idea came to me that even if I failed with Mother, and that feaf was always with me, there seemed to be no reason why we shouldn't go on as we were. You were my mother's heiress, you'd have the money. If we divided it-"

"Good Heavens!" Dorinda stared at him, her brown eyes wide with amazement. "You didn't think I'd take the money, that I'd stay there, that I'd be Dorinda always, did you?" She was too astonished to be angry.

"It's not worth that much to me, To play a part all my life-'

"You'd get used to it. After awhile you'd have believed you really were Dorinda. And neither of us would have been in a position to betray the other. I believe it would have been a wise and successful venture, only—" He paused. moistening his lips,

"Only!" she repeated softly, her eyes filled with the horror of a dawning realization. "Only someone wanted your mother's heiress out of the way. If I had died-who'd get the money?"

4 mushrooms, finely sliced 3 tablespoons finely shredded

green pepper

- 1 tablespoon tomato puree 1 cup light cream or top milk 1/4 cup sour cream
- 2 tablespoons prepared mustard 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper 2 cups diced cooked turkey
- 2 medium onions, sliced
- 1 cup raw rice
- 3 cups meat stock or bouillon 1/4 cup blanched, fried almonds

Heat three tablespoons of cooking oil in heavy pan. Add sliced mushrooms and cook over fairly high heat for two minutes. Add green pepper and tomato puree. Stir in the light cream or top milk and sour cream very slowly. Add mustard, one teaspoon salt, the pepper and mix well. Add diced, cooked turkey. Heat two tablespoons of the cooking oil in a heavy skillet and brown sliced onion until crisp. Add browned onion to turkey mixture. To prepare rice, heat one tablespoon of the oil in a heavy pan, add rice and remaining teaspoon of salt.

Cover with meat stock or bouillon and bring to boil. Cover pan with waxed paper, then lid. Bake rice in moderate oven (350°) for 25 minutes or until tender. Mound rice on a serving dish and pour hot turkey mixture over. Scatter almonds that have been fried in the remaining cooking oil, over the top.
