Groff was fishing for perch through the ice on Tawas Bay when the big fish happened along and grabbed a minnow which he was using as bait.

Tawas Kiwanis Holds Charter Night Banquet

Former Michigan Kiwanis Governor Guest Speaker

"Freedom is Not Free"—was the topic of the remarks given by Arthur Pierpont, principal speaker at the Fifth Annual Charter Night banquet of the Tawas Kiwanis Club held Tuesday evening at the Hotel Holland.

Pierpont, from the Owosso Kiwanis Club and Past Governor, Michigan District Kiwanis Clubs, in his talk spoke on the principal subject of the day, our strained relationship with Communist nations. He said that in order to keep our freedom we must start at the source—our homes. In order to keep our freedom we must make sacrifices as individuals and as a nation.

Too many of us take liberty for granted. Every citizen should familiarize himself with our constitution, he said. Every Kiwanian should do his part in helping to solve the problems of the day. He said "We must work for freedom, pray for freedom, and even lay down our lives for freedom."

Arthur Johnson, past president of the Tawas Kiwanis Club, introduced Walter Graveline of Bay City who acted as toastmaster.

The program included address of welcome by Earl I. BeMent, president of the Tawas club; group singing and short talks by several Kiwanis club members. The group singing was led by Dr. A. Shook of Bay City. Virgil Ackerman played the organ. Invocation and benediction were pronounced by Rev. L. Wayne Smith.

President Truman Asks for Unity As Nation Builds Up Armed Might; U. N. Forces Continue to Pull Back

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

With food prices near the all-time high of July, 1948, which was nearly 217.3 per cent of the 1935-39 average, the government drafted a 30-day moratorium on all prices increased. The chart above traces the food price spiral. The moratorium was delayed by disagreement within the government's economic-control organization.

TAFT:

Constructive Criticism

In a speech which he called "constructive criticism" of the administration, Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio served notice that the Republican party pledged itself to securing a greater voice in policy making.

The senator based his criticisms on what he called the President's legal right to send American troops to Europe. He added that we "had better commit no American troops to the European continent at this time."

Mr. Taft expressed a tide of thought that has been growing throughout the United States since reverses in Korea, namely, that the defense of Europe was primarily western Europe's responsibility, not ours.

Undoubtedly the most powerful Republican in the senate, Taft seemed to be serving notice on the administration that congress intended to cut in on the President's power to formulate foreign policy. If the Republicans are willing to push the question it could lead to a state of confusion in congress never before seen in a time of crisis.

One of the most startling statements of the senator's speech was the one when he said the U. S. ought to go along, for the time being, in the U. N. for its value as a world forum, but that the instrumentality was mortally weak in having been founded, not upon "justice" but upon the power of its leading members. To the people in the home towns of the country who had placed their faith in the United Nations it was like a blow below the belt.

Was it possible that some of the nation's leading legislators believed that the United Nations was as dead as the League of Nations? Was it possible that some of our prominent leaders favored U. S. withdrawal from the United Nations? Taft's speech put those questions into the minds of many.

Two days after his "policy" speech, Senator Taft announced he was in favor of pulling U. S. troops out of Korea and setting up a new Pacific defense line based on Formosa and Japan. For these he would fight, he said. He then warned that if Russia attacks western Europe "it means war."

CONTROLS:

A Matter of Time

Wage and price controls appeared certain for the nation as it moved toward full mobilization. To the average housewife the need for price controls on food was becoming desperate.

A disagreement within the government's economic-control organization blocked action on a planned 30-day wage-price freeze. The action was a temporary measure to hold the line until enforcement machinery could be set up about March 1.

Price controller Michael V. DiSalle reportedly will need 30,000 workers for a nationwide staff, of whom more than half would be charged with tracking down black marketeers, hoarders, price gougers and other control chisellers.

Some temporary plan to stop the price spiral was considered necessary by most people. At the present rate of increase, food prices would be at an all-time high by March 1 and would bring hardship for fixed income groups. Millions of workers have contracts which grant pay increases as the price index climbs and this group would not suffer.

The people on pensions and white collar workers are hardest hit by any price spiral.

Eisenhower

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower (above), is surrounded by lensmen as he speaks for newsreel and television cameras in the Pentagon during his first press conference after being named commander-in-chief for European armies. He left for a tour of European capitals shortly afterwards, declaring that the defense of western Europe cannot be carried out successfully unless sacrifices of other Atlantic pact nations equal those of the U. S.

DRAFT:

For All 18-Year-Olds

Any day now the defense department will ask congress for a blanket draft of all physically fit 18-year-olds to serve 27 to 30 months in uniform.

There is a question, however, whether or not congress will approve immediately. A number of legislators were reported splitting hairs over the request. Many felt that 18½ was young enough and 24 months long enough.

GRATEFUL FOR FREEDOMS . . . Former federal worker, Miss Margaret E. Gruver, 53, stands in front of the $10,000 home she donated to the United States government in appreciation of the "freedoms enjoyed by an American citizen." Miss Gruver was forced recently to leave her job as a government worker by bad health. She announced the gift of the house to the government in a letter to Senator Johnson, Colorado Democrat. She enclosed a deed and the key of the house in the letter. Miss Gruver says that she plans to go to Florida to live in a trailer camp with her mother who is 73 years old.

GREEK WARRIORS IN ACTION IN KOREA . . . Greek soldiers on patrol are silhouetted against the sky as they proceed along a ridge in Korea during the withdrawal of United Nations troops after Chinese and North Korean Communists began their drive south across the 38th parallel. Presence of these troops and those of other member nations of the U. N. should dispel critics of the U. N. action in Korea who complain that the United States is bearing the whole burden of defending the Korean republic from the Communists. Most of the rear guard action in the evacuation of troops by sea has been fought by our allies.

BUS PERFORMANCE BRINGS DOWN HOUSE . . . This is a general view of damage wrought when a bus skidded on the icy street at Chatterton and Olmstead avenues, New York City, recently. It struck an auto, jumped the sidewalk and smashed into a ground floor grocery store, knocking down one wall of two floors of a three story apartment house. No one was hurt, but 16 families were forced out into the cold with no immediate arrangement for shelter from the weather.

NOT A GHOST . . . Marine P.F.C. Albert Haebe, 19, New York City, erroneously listed as dead in the Korean fighting last September, displays war department wires with his parents following his arrival home recently. He recalled the mixup in telegrams which caused his parents to arrange a memorial service. Albert and his parents show the three telegrams which said he was (1) wounded, (2) dead, (3) recovered.

MASQUERADING BANDIT . . . Salina, Kansas, police say Russell Pearsall is the much sought after "female impersonation bandit." He is held in connection with the shooting of a Salina policeman during a frustrated holdup attempt.

PIQUED . . . Claiming encroachments against their ancient privileges, India's displaced ruling princes have organized a red leadership of Maharajah of Baroda (above) to win recognition and guard their ancient rights.

TRUMAN:

Drops Fair Deal

President Truman opened his "State of the Union" message to congress with the words "our country is in a healthy condition." From that point he stressed strength and unity in the face of Communist aggression throughout the world.

One of the remarkable points of the President's message was his apparent willingness to drop his much debated Fair Deal program—for the time being—in order to get on with the business of building up the free world's ability to wage "a full-scale war against Russia," if such conflict becomes necessary.

Mr. Truman's plea for unity was impressive and undoubtedly won him some new friends in a hostile congress. "I ask the congress for unity . . . I do not ask, or expect, unanimity . . . Let us debate the issues, but let every man among us weigh his words and deeds," he said.

Many legislators called the President's speech conciliatory. And despite certain routine political sharpshooting which some Republicans indulged in after his address, it was obvious that the opposition party was affected favorably by his effort to find unity of purpose. It seems likely that an era of greater co-operation and political peace is in store for the 82nd congress than could have been hoped for a few months ago. The people along the main streets of America may at least see swift and vital decisions made to meet the crisis. It was also evident from the President's speech that on one point he would not give an inch. He stood unyielding on the issue of military co-operation with western Europe.

The Program

President Truman outlined a 10-point legislative program in his "State of the Union" message to congress:

1. Appropriations for the armed forces build-up.
2. Extension and revision of the draft law, presumably to induct 18-year-olds and extend the draft term from 21 to 27 or 30 months.
3. Military and economic aid to the rest of the free world.
4. Revision and extension of his authority to expand production and control wages, prices, and rents.
5. Improvement of the agricultural laws to help "obtain the kinds of farm products we need for the defense effort." This might include a direct subsidy to farmers to keep from setting farm price ceilings at less than parity.
6. Improvement of labor laws to "help provide stable labor-management relations" and assure "steady" production.
7. Housing and training of defense workers and "the full use of all our man-power resources."
8. Legislation to increase the supply of doctors, nurses, and other medical personnel.
9. Federal aid to the States for elementary and secondary education.
10. A "major increase" in taxes.

UNITED NATIONS

U. S. Seeks to Brand China Aggressor

Britain's Sir Gladwyn Jebb told the United Nations his country was not yet ready for a final decision on American demands for U. N. condemnation of Red China as an aggressor. He held the U. N. that to "look well before you leap is a wise maxim in foreign affairs. If we do leap, we should all leap together."

There was an undertone to Jebb's

A-Bomb

Atomic energy commission chairman, Gordon Dean (above), reported recently the Russians do have the atomic bomb. He made the announcement during a news conference in which he told newsmen that the government will have to cut down its development of atomic energy for peacetime uses because of the international situation.

KOREA:

Pattern Repeated

The pattern of the Korean conflict continued to repeat itself. Following the January 1 attack by Chinese and North Korean Communists on United Nations forces south of the 38th parallel, a general retreat to the south and the old Pusan beachhead continued.

The retreat was along the old "Heartbreak Highway" down which Americans and South Koreans first retreated before the North Korean invaders last July.

Although Communist casualties were reported heavy, the Reds continued to attack and push southward.

It seemed unlikely that United Nations forces would be able to establish a line short of the Pusan beachhead. What would happen after that is anyone's guess.

Some military leaders believe U. N. troops will be able to stand off Communist thrusts with the aid of U. S. fleet guns. It seemed unlikely, however, that a counter-offensive could be launched for months.

It was obvious to every observer that the position of U. N. troops in Korea was steadily growing worse. And there was no indication that their position would get better.

FARMING:

Some Curbs Lifted

The government removed all restrictions on production of wheat and corn for 1951 in an effort to maintain safe reserves of these vital bread and livestock feed grains under the national emergency.

The only crops still under production controls are some types of tobacco, peanuts and rice. It is possible that restrictions may be eased on peanuts and rice.

The action came too late for additional planting of winter wheat but is expected to increase spring wheat planting which makes up 30 per cent of the nation's crop.

Farm experts predicted that the unlimited corn acreage would increase the nation's meat supply by at least three pounds per person this year. There was enough meat available in 1950 to supply each person with 145 pounds.

speech, however, that indicated Britain and other countries might go along eventually with the American proposal for a verdict condemning Peiping as an aggressor in Korea.

In many quarters it was believed that Britain, which has recognized Communist China, is leaning more and more to the American view of China's aims in the far east.

Hoover Statement

BANKING GOVERNMENT officials here do not believe, as Mr. Herbert Hoover seems to believe, that the people of this country have degenerated into a nation of rodents.

It is as foreign to the nature and character of the men and women who till the soil of America's vast expanses of farms and fields and to the staunch independent, freedom-loving folks at the grass roots in the home towns of this country to crawl into a hole, and, as the saying goes, pull it in after them, as it is for the American eagle to assume the qualities of the carrion buzzard or traits of the thieving, boisterous crow.

And yet, during the past few weeks two schools of thought on the nation's foreign policy have been put forth and the people seem confused. Mr. Hoover would crawl into our hole and pull out two oceans in over us and let the rest of the world go hang. John Foster Dulles, Mr. Hoover's own political party, would face the world, would offer our military and moral strength to save western civilization from the onslaught of Communist barbarians. If we should do as Mr. Hoover suggests, scamper into our holes, like rats and mice, Mr. Dulles says we would not be the "kind of a United States which could defend itself."

We have got to make up our minds quickly on this question. Time is running out. Do you take to your hole with the rats and mice, or will you be on the side of the American eagle?

Unfortunately, there is a segment of the American press which bolsters the Hoover fallacy and gains disciples by the simple expediency of criticism and division—an old Hitler stand-by and improved upon considerably by one Mr. Joe Stalin. Stir up confusion, criticism, tell lies often enough and big enough and eventually they will be believed. These men in our national life, little men of little faith, are saying we must abandon Korea. We must pull out of Europe, we must abandon our solemn pledges, our moral commitments, our allies in Europe, we must forget the United Nations and hoe our own row, we must find a scapegoat for the loss of a battle in Korea.

Moral Stamina Shown

If we are to conquer communism, it will not be by military force of arms. No Gibraltar in this hemisphere will help ideas out of the United States. And in spite of the loss of the battle of North Korea, there is one fact which in the mind of this reporter will do more to impress all Asia than if we had won a signal military victory. That was, when despite the extremity of the military evacuation of Hungnam, we did not forget our friends, and we had the moral stamina to evacuate with our own men more than 100,000 friendly Koreans.

Airlift Was Victory

The Berlin airlift was a moral victory over overwhelming odds in the cold war with Russia. We kept our word to feed those people in Berlin. We will keep our word with France, with England, with Belgium, with Greece and Turkey and all the other countries of the free world if we are to remain a nation worth defending.

Would Lose Rhur

But on the material and military side, there is one thing which Mr. Hoover and his followers overlook. Russia now has a manpower pool of some 800,000,000 to draw from. This nation alone has 150,000,000. But we even it up to some extent by a five-to-one edge on production and armament and fire power. If we abandon Europe, then we are handing over to Russia the tremendous production resources of all Europe and the rich steel assets of the Rhur valley which would give them the advantage in armament, and we couldn't dig our holes deep enough here to keep them out.

Washington Silhouettes

The nostalgic wind-up of the lame-duck session of the 81st congress . . . farewells, swan-song speeches, even a few tears and the immediate swearing-in of a new congress with many brash freshmen on both sides of the capital . . . Washington's noiseless street cars, with trolleys underground . . . Two newsmen in a taxi bewailing the hi-cost of living; the driver pulls to the curb and cracks, "How much do you boys need?"

Remember 1946

Remember the 1946 campaign which brought in the 80th congress on the slogan "had enough?", which referred principally to price ceilings and rationing of meat? Meat likely will be the first commodity to go under price control and rationing. It is rapidly passing beyond the purchasing ability of the average American and many are clamoring for a price ceiling on this food commodity.

EXPERIMENT ON WHEELS

Manufacturer Experiments With Revolutionary Type Automobile

To the average American, whether he is a farmer or city man, laborer or millionaire, there is nothing as fascinating as an automobile. Every year Americans look forward to the day when new models are put on display.

Recently an experiment in the automotive future—a low, sleek sports car with dramatic, sweeping lines of a jet aircraft—was unveiled by the styling section of General Motors. It gave Americans a glimpse of what the future might hold for them.

Harley J. Earl, GM vice president in charge of styling, said the new vehicle will bear the symbolic name of Le Sabre. In development for four years, Le Sabre will be a "laboratory on wheels" for testing both mechanical and styling ideas that designers have sketched on drawing boards and discussed in engineering shop-talk.

"This is the car of the future only in the sense that some of its design or mechanical features may appear some day in standard motorcars," Mr. Earl said.

"Le Sabre is purely experimental. Actually, it is the second car of its kind, the advanced counterpart of an experimental car we built 12 years ago for the same reason—to find out whether some of our futuristic ideas would pay off on the road," he declared.

Mr. Earl's 1938 experimental car was equipped with a number of styling and mechanical innovations considered advanced at that time. But they appeared, sometimes in modified form, on later production models.

It was the first American styled car on public display with electrically controlled convertible top and door windows, curved glass door windows, pushbutton door latches inside and out, a low vertical front grille, fender extensions over the doors and tail lamps recessed in the rear fenders.

Details of the hood and fender treatment also appeared in the design of subsequent General Motors production cars.

"We didn't know in 1938 what features of our first experimental car would be used—or abandoned—as we developed our styling since that time," Mr. Earl declared.

"By the same token, it is impossible to say now what innovations we are testing in Le Sabre may be used stylistically or mechanically in future production models," he said.

300 Horsepower Engine
He pointed out that materials used in Le Sabre, such as magnesium and aluminum alloys, would be unobtainable from a cost standpoint in current production models.

Le Sabre will be powered by an experimental V-8 engine with 10-to-1 compression ratio plus supercharger. Its dual fuel system will utilize current premium fuels and methyl alcohol (methanol). Methyl alcohol will be injected into the combustion chambers through the carburetor at a certain level of the speed range for extra power boost.

The engine, still undergoing tests, is expected to develop more than 300 horsepower with supercharger. Stroke and bore will be 3 1/4 by 3 3/4 inches. Piston displacement will be 215 cubic inches.

Engine weight is expected to total 500 pounds. Horsepower to weight ratio, as yet undetermined, is expected to be remarkably high in comparison with standard production vehicles.

LeSabre's total weight is expected to be in the neighborhood of 3,000 pounds. The low weight factor is attributed to use of heat-treated magnesium and aluminum alloys in body and engine construction.

The body is only 36 1/4 inches high at the cowl and 50 inches high with the convertible top raised. Wheelbase is 115 inches and overall length is 200 inches. Overall width at the front fenders is 76 1/2 inches.

The top section of the front grille is part of the lighting system. When the front lamps are turned on, the grille revolves out of sight and a pair of close set headlights, fitted on the reverse side of the grille, swings into place.

Beneath the headlight-grille assembly is the radiator air intake. An inverted Y-shape bar protects the aluminum radiator core. Additional slotted air inlets range along the sides of the main inlet. Two other small air scoops are designed on the underside of the front bumper.

A "laboratory on wheels" for testing tomorrow's designs and mechanical ideas is pictured as it will look with top down and ready for the road.

A simulated tail cone and dramatically styled tail fins give the Le Sabre the jet aircraft look.

Fuel Tanks in Fenders
The lighting system includes a pair of running or parking lamps at the outer extremities of the front fenders, just above the flanking curve of the bumpers.

Two sets of three tail lamps are mounted on the trailing edge of the rear fins, outlying the car from behind. These operate as tail lamps and directional signals, while below them at the base of the fins are the backup lights.

The simulated jet-type tail cone houses the stoplight, centered by a "spinner" or bomb-shaped hub that serves as a rear bumper. Two smaller but similarly shaped spinners are fitted into the split front bumper design at either side of the radiator grille.

Le Sabre's twin tail fins have the functional purpose of housing aircraft type 20-gallon rubberized fuel cells, one for gasoline and the other for methyl alcohol. They are similar to fuel tanks in aircraft wings.

Although Le Sabre's instrument panel appears as replete with indicators, dials, meters and control knobs as a bomber cockpit, Mr. Earl said their operation would be simple even for a driver at the steering wheel for the first time.

Both labels and illumination of the instrument clusters—one on the steering post and the other in a center group beneath the crash roll—are clearly defined. Various indicators are illuminated from behind, while the center group of instruments can be lighted by a fluorescent tube.

The indicators flash red warning signals, such as the fuel, oil and torque converter gauges, to notify the driver when the levels reach a certain low point or a dangerous condition exists.

Le Sabre has the usual instrument panel gauges and dials. In addition it has such aircraft features as a tachometer, compass and altimeter. Other indicators register engine oil temperature and pressure and the torque converter fluid level and temperature.

Hydraulic Jacks
Knob controls are illuminated by small bulbs in plastic inserts in the handles. They light whenever the ignition is turned on.

Electrical pushbutton door releases operate inside and out and windows are lifted and lowered electrically. In the event of battery failure, door releases function mechanically with an extra push on the buttons or a turn of the car key.

Instrument panel controls operate hydraulic jacks on each of the car's wheels. In the event of a blowout or flat tire, the driver can jack up the car without leaving his seat. A electrically driven screwjack, controlled by a switch, is available to adjust the driver's seat.

In addition to a warm air circulating system, the car is equipped with a thermostatically controlled electrical seat warmers. These operate on the same principle as electrically heated flying suits used by airmen.

As with Mr. Earl's earlier experimental car, Le Sabre has an electrically operated convertible top. Its construction differs from the earlier version, however, in that it has no visible linkage.

Also, it may be partially opened to ease the way for driver and passenger to get in or out of the seats. If the car is parked with top down, rain falling on a sensitized spot between the seats actuates the top raising mechanism and raises the windows automatically.

Jet Aircraft Lines Used in Styling

The experimental Le Sabre was in development for four years. It utilizes lightweight aluminum and magnesium alloys in its body and engine construction and incorporates the sweeping lines of a jet aircraft in its styling. It is not necessarily the automobile of the future, but some of its design and mechanical features may appear some day in standard motorcars. Designers, however, report it may be years in the future. The use of aluminum and magnesium alloys in body construction would make it too expensive for the average American.

The Great Teacher

Lesson for January 28, 1951

WE HEAR a lot about a "better world." God pity the poor lout who thinks the world as it is, is all right! And may God stab awake those who are afraid to try to make this world better. If you want to see a group of people who are not afraid, and are really working at this, go to your nearest Sunday school. There you will find teachers of religion. They may be doing a good job or a poor one; but anyhow they are trying. And when one of these teachers succeeds, even a little, in what they are all trying to do, the world has already been made a little better.

Dr. Foreman

Greatest of Teachers

EVERY Sunday school teacher, or any other sort, for that matter, should study the methods of Jesus to see what good teaching can be. He is and will always be THE Teacher.

His object was not to teach science or history. The only technique he taught was the most important of all—the technique of fine living. His object was to teach "what we are to believe concerning God, and what duties God requires of man."

In short, his subjects were Faith and Life, not separately but welded into one.

Down Where We Live

HIS method was always simple. He did not use long words, he did not "put his hay on such a high shelf that only intellectual giraffes could reach it," as Billy Sunday expressed it. Common people heard him gladly, because he taught in the kind of language they used, he spoke of things that were familiar to them.

So the good teacher today never teaches over the heads of the class. This means he has to have a good imagination, has to make believe to himself that he is one of the class instead of the teacher. He has to remember how the world looked to him when he was a boy, he has to stay young in heart.

Jesus could surely have taught more profoundly than he did. Instead, he said at the end of his days, "I have many things to say . . . but ye cannot bear them now." However true a thing might be, he would not say it if his hearers were not ready for it.

Truth in Pictures

THEN Jesus taught in pictures; we call them parables. The best-loved and remembered parts of his teachings are the stories he told. Every one of them was simple; they were about the kinds of people his listeners knew or had often heard of.

The good teacher will always use illustrations. But the best ones will come right out of the experience of the pupils. Jesus never quoted from a book his hearers had not read. He never used illustrations that only a Ph.D. could understand. Furthermore, he never tried to teach two things at once.

A teacher, looking over a Sunday school lesson, may find it full of suggestive ideas; but it is generally better to pick out one truth and illustrate it in several ways, as Jesus did when speaking of the Kingdom of God, than it is to try to bring out everything that could be brought out, and so confusing the class.

Making Them Think

NOW some teachers, trying to be simple, succeed only in being dull. The good teacher must keep the class awake, otherwise no one can learn anything. There is a good motto which might be borrowed by all Sunday school teachers: "Nothing that is not interesting; nothing merely because it is interesting."

Jesus gained attention and interest in various ways. One was the "cryptic" nature of his teaching; that is, it was often puzzling. There was often something that sent listeners away thinking: Now what did he mean by that?

Confucius once remarked: "I give my pupil one corner of an idea. If he cannot get the other three corners for himself, I do not want him for my pupil." So Jesus often gave out one corner of a truth and let his hearers (and ourselves!) wrestle out the other three.

Draft Could Leave Yankees Intact

By GRANTLAND RICE

CASEY AND 1951
NO BIG-LEAGUE MANAGER, whether it be trouble from the draft or opposing teams, can look into a more cheerful future than Casey Stengel.

Grantland Rice with Casey in 1948 he gave complete evidence of being a philosopher first and a manager second.

You could figure from his conversation that he intended to give the Yankees all he had and let fate and nature take their courses.

"We'll have a good year," he said then, "a very good year. But not everyone can win."

Casey says the same thing in the gray dawn of a new year—1951. "We'll have another good year. If we don't win again—well, who can win them all?"

"No one knows what the draft is going to do," Casey said. "Here is one angle about which no one can complain. We have already lost a young and very promising star in Whitey Ford. He should have been better than a 20-game winner this next season. But the Phillies, Tigers and others have also lost stars—and many more will go. Good veterans can mean more to a team today than promising rookies or younger players."

Casey survived a 75-game absence on the part of Joe DiMaggio in 1949. He also survived 74 serious illnesses or injuries on the part of his players.

Same for 1951

He will have the same rough road for 1951. The Red Sox, with Scarborough and Wight added to their pitching staff, will be or should be much harder to cudgel out. They still have the big guns ready. Their defense has been their weakness. Cleveland can be better and the Tigers can be rough.

But Casey views the future, as fog-ridden as it is, with an undisturbed mind. It requires a considerable amount of morbid detail to disturb Stengel.

"We have something of a family team," he says. "Not many kids around now. Most of us are married men with families. Our pitchers are no longer kids—after losing Ford, Raschi, Reynolds and Lopat are all far past the rookie stage, not so likely to be called. You can't fill Henrich's place. Tommy is too great a ballplayer. But we didn't have too much of him last year.

"We have a fine catcher—a good pitching staff—three-fourths of a good infield and at least a good outfield. No one can say how many games Joe DiMaggio can play, but he played 138 or more last year. That's quite a bunch for a veteran around 35. Then look at our coaching staff again—Dickey, Turner, and Crossetti—with Henrich added. Why that bunch could run two or three teams."

They could—and do a good job—but Casey is still the boss. One point is that George Weiss had arranged for more farm strength than he ever drew credit for. He had more than a few good ballplayers in the offing when they were needed—including such people as Bauer and Coleman and Woodling. It may be that Rizzuto won't have quite as good a year as he had last season. But you can gamble he will have a very good year just the same. He was at his all-time best in 1950. He won't be far away in 1951.

So Casey Stengel looks out upon an upset world and an upsetting game with his philosophy in good working order. He hasn't started borrowing any trouble yet. "Why look for it," he says. "It'll find you, sooner or later."

Looking Ahead

A real prophet is the fellow who can tell you what eight football teams will be in the four major bowls on January 1, 1952. That's only a year off. This time we had California, Michigan, Texas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Clemson and Miami. How many of these will be out at the next bowl show? Michigan, for one. The Wolverine can't return now in the next three years.

At this time last year Stanford was the team named as the likely West Coast Bowl candidate for Jan. 1, 1951. But Stanford didn't come close to making it. My guess for next year's Rose Bowl would be Howie Odell's Washington team with U.C.L.A. next.

Washington gets a flying start with a brilliant backfield, headed by passer Heinrich. Stanford still lacks depth. U.S.C. will be a problem once more, an unguessable guess. Washington has the better chance out here.

From the Big Ten, I like Illinois. This team barely missed out in a snowstorm this last time. Ohio State and Michigan can't come. So the Iose Bowl looks to be Washington and Illinois. All this, of course, is dependent almost entirely in the course of the draft.

Teenager Gets Appetite Back; Thanks Hadacol

HADACOL Supplies Vitamins B, B₁₂, Niacin and Iron Which Her System Lacked.

According to Sara Loraine Beck, Box 253, Coker, Alabama, when a person is only 15 years old and feels terrible, can't eat or sleep the way they should, it's mighty bad. That is the way Loraine says she used to feel, but that was, of course, before she started taking HADACOL. Loraine found that taking HADACOL helped her system overcome deficiencies in Vitamins B, B₁₂, Niacin and Iron, which HADACOL contains.

Here is Loraine Beck's own statement: "I was run-down, sick and skinny, and weighed only 90 pounds before I used HADACOL. I would not eat because I had no appetite. Now I weigh 123 pounds and have an appetite. I feel a lot better. I have been taking HADACOL 10 months and am still taking it. I am 15 years old. HADACOL has done me lots of good."

4-H CLUB NOTES

The Michigan Sheep Breeders Association is having their 16th Annual Bred ewe Sale Wednesday, during Farmer's Week at Michigan State College. This organization is giving 4-H members a 10% discount on all purchases. This is a real opportunity for those interested in sheep to get some excellent foundation stock. A total of 78 ewes from the Shropshire, Oxford, Corriedale, Hampshire, Southdown, Dorset and Suffolk breeds will be offered for sale. The sale starts at 12:30 p. m. Any 4-Her interested please contact Marvin Davenport by Monday, January 29 in East Tawas.

Say gardeners—this weather may not remind you exactly of getting ready to pan your vegetable garden, but you had better check those tools, make those row mashers and check your fertilizer and seed requirements. With rising prices, your gaden can save you literally hundreds of food dollars. Be smart—plan now and save money!

Patricia Williams, reporter for the "Hale Know How" 4-H Club tells us that Leader Mrs. Townsend and members of the Hale Know How met at the Home Ec room at Hale High School on January 13th for their first 4-H sewing meeting.

Our first lesson was making a dress form of our own figure, an exact duplicate to fit our patterns to. We all think this will be a very satisfactory way to make our garments.

Members who have not purchased their patterns and materials as yet are going to do so this week, in order that we can get started soon.

We plan on meeting every Saturday morning in order to complete our garments before Achievement Day in March.

Doris Herriman of Grant township Community Club gave us this report of her club's activities:

The Grant Township Community 4-H Club met at the Grant township Hall on Thursday evening, January 11, with 10 members and one leader present.

The business meeting was called to order by the President, Charles Binder.

Programs for the 1951 year were passed out. After discussing the work for the year the meeting closed and the remainder of the evening was spent in playing games.

Thanks girls. We hope you will keep sending these reports and hope more 4-H Clubs will join in news writing.

You 4-H Club leaders keep the evening of February 12 open for 4-H—details forthcoming.

CHAPTER V

Washington had been quick to issue orders. Relations along the southern border had been cordial recently and no one wanted to endanger the new friendliness. A quick investigation indicated that there had been several small shipments of munitions into the danger zone, all of them to dealers in mining towns centering around Mesa Verde. It was further disclosed that every shipment left its buyer's hands promptly, disappearing nowhere with only the record of a sale to a fictitious name behind it. Derek Bartell had handled the largest of these transactions and had given credit backing to two other buyers who could not otherwise have handled deals of such size.

Frazer recalled all this as background. He had known nothing about it at first, coming into the picture only when Jim Brent appeared at his ranch and asked for help. Brent considered the matter as a routine job of blocking the shipment of illegal arms and he outlined Frazer's job as a simple bit of inquiry. Frazer was to contact a certain Archie Scott, who was already on the job. Scott would have all the facts. Between them they could decide what steps should be taken.

Sally Chew Sneaks Into Frazer's Room

A sound in the darkness below interrupted his thinking. Someone had closed a door softly down there at the rear of the hotel and he could hear a stealthy grate of footsteps for just an instant. Then another sound of footsteps sounded from the direction of the street. Someone had stepped out of the back door to wait for a second person who was coming around through the side alley.

Frazer realized that he was looking down into a sort of stable yard between the back of the hotel and a livery stable which fronted on the next street. It was a place where traffic might be expected, but something told him that these movements were too stealthy to be those of persons engaged in legitimate business.

The puzzle solved itself almost at once. A girl's voice whispered, "Would it be you, darlin'?"

Frazer grinned even as a man replied in the affirmative. The red-haired girl's brogue was distinctive even when she talked in a stage whisper. He was about to turn away from the window, not caring to eavesdrop on this backdoor romance, when he heard the man say, "I've got only a minute to talk, Sally. Then I've got to be going."

Instantly the girl flared up, her anger getting the better of her discretion. "So that's the way it is with ye, is it?" she snapped, no longer whispering. "She's back in town now, so ye've got only a minute fer me. I might have known it would be..."

"Please, Sally. Don't talk loud. You'll..."

"Shut up. Ye can't play me fer a fool, Ed Delaplaine. I'm done with ye right now!"

The slamming of the door indicated that she meant it. Frazer could hear the disgruntled deputy cursing down there in the darkness, and then his footsteps crunched in the alley once more.

Well, that answered one of the questions which had been in the back of his mind. He knew why Delaplaine's face had been so red this afternoon. The deputy had been visiting Sally Chew when Helen Bartell returned so unexpectedly to town. That had been embarrassing for Ed and irritating to Sally. Frazer could make only a guess at how Helen Bartell had felt about it.

Frazer checked his thoughts impatiently and started toward the door. Thinking was all right, but his game now was to get out there and find Scott. He might be able to save himself a lot of strain on the imagination.

He halted just outside the door as a board creaked in the hallway. That was odd. He had heard no one walking out there.

The door knob grated faintly as it was turned with immense caution. Frazer slipped into position so that he would be screened by the door when it opened, then poised himself for whatever move would be required of him, which was only common sense, considering the fact that one man had already died because of Frazer's errand in Mesa Verde.

Enough light filtered into the room from a quarter moon so that he could see the door opening. He could even make out the outlines of the small form which came through into the room. It was his nose, however, that told him the identity of the intruder. He had smelled that particular brand of perfume not too many minutes ago.

He took a quick step forward, one arm pinning the red-headed girl's arms while he put a firm hand across her mouth. "Well, look who's here!" he drawled. "What did I ever do to deserve this?"

After her first violent start, she was passive in his grasp, her firm, well rounded body trembling a little as she stood still. He took his hand away from her mouth and she murmured reproachfully, "You scared me. Did ye have to be so sudden?"

The question—and its tone—left him puzzled. He felt sure that the girl was sorely afraid of something, yet she was trying to sound casual. "I wasn't expectin' such good company," he countered. "Do you always slip in so easy like?"

"You're mean," she told him, turning in his arms until she was pressing herself against him. "That's no way to talk to a girl."

He lifted her clear of the floor and kissed her once.

"That's because the circumstances seem to require it," he told her. "Now suppose you tell me what you wanted here."

Again he could sense the con-spidor. The old familiar game. They were deliberately getting the prospector drunk.

He kept his eyes away from them after that, but managed to seat himself so that he could overhear scraps of the conversation. It was not particularly enlightening. The big man was encouraging the prospector to talk about mineral signs in the region, evidently quite absorbed in the information he was getting. To Frazer the only significant feature was the way he kept the talk on the canyon country of the northwest. Still it did not seem to be getting them anywhere.

Nor was it getting Frazer anywhere. His immediate objective was to find Archie Scott, so he slipped away quietly, trying to shake off the feeling of impending disaster that came over him.

Frazer was about to pass by the hotel when it occurred to him that this was the very place where Archie Scott would come. The hotel bar offered better prospects for finding his man than did any of the lesser places along the street. Consequently he went in and found himself a place in a corner, his quick glance spotting the surly Chew in close conversation with the burly man Marshal Emery had called Gale. That was a nice combination. Suppose Gale had indeed been one of the stage bandits? Where did that make Chew fit? Did it have anything to do with the red-headed girl's visit to his room and her subsequent report to someone downstairs?

Masked Man Shoots Agent Archie Scott

There was no opportunity to consider the point, however. The important thing was the presence in the room of a man who fitted the description of Archie Scott. Frazer checked the items mentally. A heavy-bodied man of perhaps forty, sandy-haired and with a mustache beginning to show little flecks of gray. That fitted. Moreover the man was dusty and red-eyed as though he had recently traveled hard and far. The gun at his hip also indicated a stranger to town, one who had not been notified of Marshal Emery's anti-gun edict.

Even as he considered the prospects of contriving a meeting the whole matter was taken out of his hands. The door swung open and a man stood there, a stocky man whose face was completely concealed by a shapeless black mask. A forty-five swung to cover the astonished group in the room as the masked man growled, "Take it easy, gents. If anybody's violatin' the town's law about totin' guns I'll take it as right polite for 'em to keep their guilt a dark secret. Don't pull nothin'!"

The masked man glanced around briefly, as though to assure himself that no one was going to offer any opposition, then he leveled his gun and fired two quick shots. It all happened so suddenly that he was gone into the outer darkness before anyone could move. A couple of the watchers had not even stopped chuckling.

It was Frazer who made the first move. Something like black rage was tearing at him as he bounded across the room to where a man was already on the floor. For the second time in a few hours he had witnessed deliberate, cold-blooded murder. This time the killer had not even tried to make it appear that his victim had been pulling a gun; he had simply shot his man without any preliminaries whatsoever.

Getting the jump on the others in the room, Frazer was able to whisper a quick question as he stooped over the fallen man. "Are you Scott?"

The dying man's eyes were already taking on a glaze, but he seemed to hear the words. "Scott," he whispered. "The... the bullet..." Then the breath went out of him in a horrible grunt and a gush of blood came to his lips.

Frazer did not wait for anything else. He snatched the forty-five out of Scott's belt and headed for the door, a cold anger welling up within him. For the first time since he had taken a hand in this deadly game he felt something personal in it. A member of his own team had been ruthlessly slain.

A rectangle of light marked a back door and a voice from beside it yelled, "What the hell's goin' on here? Who was that other jasper, and what's...?"

"Which way did he go?" Frazer snapped.

"Through that first alley." The man was so surprised that he replied without waiting to pursue his own line of questioning. Frazer accepted the direction and hurried through, certain now that he could hear the footsteps of his quarry ahead.

He snatched the forty-five out of Scott's belt and headed for the door, a cold anger welling up within him.

He reached the end of the dingy street and started to work his way back, stopping at each saloon as he came to it. Finding Archie Scott by a mere description would have been a difficult task at best; under present circumstances it promised to be a pretty tough job. Still he had to try. Tonight was the time set for the two agents to meet. Unless Scott had run into trouble he would be in Mesa Verde waiting.

He was a little grim when he entered the next saloon, but he brought his mind back to business promptly when he saw a pair of familiar faces. The big blond man and his little Mexican companion were sitting at a table with a wiry old fellow whose leathery features marked him as a desert rat. Just as Frazer looked at them he saw the big man dump his drink in a

Seeking Archie Scott, Frazer Scouts the Town

It did not require many minutes for him to take the measure of Mesa Verde. He walked quietly along past the blazing windows of saloons and honkey-tonks, listening to the myriad sounds of the town's night life, and what he saw puzzled him even as he interpreted it. He had come prepared to see a wild mining camp in the throes of a boom; a wild, wide-open, hell-roaring town such as Tombstone and Alder Gulch had been. But Mesa Verde was different. It was cruder, quieter—and somehow more sinister. Its citizens patronized its dance halls and saloons, but without the rowdy enthusiasm which had been characteristic of those earlier camps. There was a peculiar restraint here, a furtiveness which branded the town.

flict within her. "I..." she began. Then: "You got no right to talk like that. Let me out of here."

She scurried away and he listened until her footsteps had faded on the lower floor. Then he went out into the hall and followed as silently as possible. A din of voices came to him from the bar, but the rest of the lower floor was silent.

He paused for a moment at the foot of the stairs, then headed for the outer door. The latch was in his hand when he caught a brief cry from somewhere in the direction of the kitchen. "But he was still up there," a girl's voice protested to someone.

Black Bean Soup Starts a Fine Dinner (See Recipes Below)

Savory Soups

NOTHING IS SO delightful and cozy on a blustery day than the soup pot simmering merrily on the range. It's a sight to warm the heart and tantalize the appetite.

Those appetites which have every appearance of never being satisfied can be appeased nicely with a first course of soup, hot, hearty and well-seasoned.

On a busy day when you're almost too rushed to prepare a big meal, serve a chowder with crusty bread, crisp salad and fruit from the canning cupboard.

FOR DINNERS at which you entertain, it's easy to give a partylike atmosphere with easily made-in-advance soup, such as this black bean soup served with a slice of lemon:

- *Black Bean Soup (Serves 8)
- 1 cup dried black beans
 - 1 quart cold water
 - 1/2 small onion, sliced
 - 1 stalk celery broken in pieces or 1/4 teaspoon celery salt
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - Few grains pepper
 - Few grains mustard
 - Few grains cayenne
 - 1 tablespoon butter
 - 1 teaspoon flour
 - Juice 1 lemon
 - 1/2 lemon thinly sliced
- Soak beans overnight. Drain and add cold water. Cook onion 5 minutes with half the butter and add to beans. Add celery, simmer 3 or 4 hours or until beans are soft, adding more water as water boils away. Rub through sieve. Reheat to boiling point. Add lemon juice and well-mixed seasonings. Blend with remaining butter and flour cooked together. Garnish with lemon.
- Oyster Bisque (Serves 4 to 5)
- 2 tablespoons butter
 - 1 cup finely minced celery
 - 2 tablespoons flour
 - 1 pint cream
 - 1 pint stewing oysters
 - Salt, paprika
 - Chopped parsley
- Clean oysters, chop very fine. Reserve oyster liquor. Simmer celery and butter in double boiler until tender. Blend in flour. Add cream and seasonings, stirring well. When ready to serve, add oysters, oyster liquor, and parsley. Heat thoroughly, do not cook.

Navy Bean Soup (Serves 10 to 12)

- 2 cups navy beans
- 3 quarts cold water
- 1 ham bone
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 1 stalk celery, chopped

Soak navy beans overnight in cold water. Then add ham bone, sugar, onion and celery. Simmer 4 to 5 hours until beans are soft. Dilute with water or milk and season. (Put whole beans through sieve and thicken slightly with flour and water, if desired.) Serve hot.

Spiced Tomato Bouillon (Serves 10 to 12)

LYNN SAYS: Increase leftover appeal By Artful Service

Slices of leftover tongue placed on pieces of split, hot cornbread then topped with hot mushroom soup make a delicious entree.

It's easy to make a casserole by placing sliced potatoes in a greased casserole and topping with ground, cooked meat. Pour over all a thin cream sauce, seasoned with grated onion, then cheese. Cover and bake until potatoes are tender, about 45 minutes.

- *Recipe Given

- 3 quarts tomatoes
- 2 onions, sliced
- 6 whole cloves
- 1 to 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
- 1/4 teaspoon dried basil
- 3 bouillon cubes
- 1/2 lemon, sliced

Simmer together for 10 minutes all ingredients except sliced lemon. Strain through fine sieve. Add lemon very thinly sliced. Reheat just before serving; top each serving with a spoonful of sour cream, if desired.

Savory Fish Soup (Serves 6 to 8)

- 1 1/2 pounds white fish
- 1 quart water
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 clove garlic, chopped
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup canned tomatoes
- 2 tablespoons parsley flakes
- 6 cloves
- 1 bay leaf
- Pinch of saffron
- 1/4 teaspoon white pepper
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- Salt to taste

Cut up the fish and cook in quart of boiling water for 10 minutes. Sauté the chopped onion and garlic in the butter to a light brown, then add the fish. Next add the tomatoes, bay leaf, saffron and pepper. Cook over a slow fire for 30 minutes.

Strain in soup. Season with salt, slowly add heavy cream, simmer for 10 minutes more, and serve with parsley flakes and slices of toasted bread.

Clam Chowder with Tomatoes (Serves 8)

- 1 quart clams
- 3-inch cube fat salt pork
- 1 sliced onion
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 4 cups potatoes, cut in 3/4-inch cubes
- 2 cups boiling water
- 1 cup stewed and strained tomatoes
- 1/4 teaspoon soda
- 1 cup scalded milk
- 1 cup scalded cream
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 8 soda crackers
- Salt and pepper

Cook pork with onion and cold water 10 minutes; drain and reserve liquor. Wash clams and reserve liquor. Parboil potatoes 5 minutes and drain. To potatoes add reserved liquors, hard part of clams, finely chopped, and boiling water. When potatoes are nearly done, add tomatoes, soda, soft part of clams, milk, cream, and butter. Season with salt and pepper. Split crackers, soak in cold milk to moisten, and reheat in chowder.

Here's a new trick of meat loaf on the second or third day: slice loaf thin and spread with seasoned, mashed potatoes. Bake in moderate oven until meat and potatoes are heated through.

Chopped leftover meat can be added to plain fritter batter. Drop by spoonfuls into deep hot lard (350°) and fry until golden brown. Never discard small bits of chopped ham, crumbled sausage or bacon. Add them to beaten eggs before scrambling or to souffles for appetizing meat flavor.

Lamb roast makes wonderful sandwiches for luncheon. Spread a slice of bread with mint jelly, top with slices of lamb and season with salt and pepper. Top with a buttered slice of bread.

Household Hints

In kitchenettes where serving-table space is scarce, if you have the kind of ironing board that comes out of the wall, let it come out just before dinner's ready to be served. It'll give you added space on which to put serving dishes and such. If you're going to use it regularly, you might make an oilcloth cover for the board.

Discarded window shades make good, durable shelf papers.

A shoe bag that's not being used for that purpose can be put to work in the kitchen. Hang it behind the kitchen door as a container for paper bags, wrapping paper, string, and the like.

Spattered grease on the wall-paper behind your stove can be removed easily if you paint the paper, while it's new, with a coat of colorless shellac. To be more elaborate, you can hang an oilcloth wall rug behind the stove. Or, have the area covered with a large piece of plate glass. Attach it with "corner brackets" or hang it like a mirror.

S.O.S. to Germany

I HAVE A FAVORITE PIPE. It was given to me by a friend, who secured it from the factory in London, where it was made. Should anything irreparable happen to that pipe, I could not replace it because the factory and all of its seasoned briar, accumulated over more than 100 years, was destroyed by a German bomb during World War II. That piece of wanton destruction constitutes my pet peeve against Hitler and his German hordes.

I am sure my affection for that pipe aids in my understanding of the attitude of the French people toward the creation of a new, German army. Other nations, including ourselves, look to Germany as a protection against the possible attack of the Russian hordes on Western Europe. It is early for the French people to dim their memories of destroyed homes, ravaged farms, the death of loved ones, for which the German army was responsible. But hard as it may be, the French people and the French government must think of the immediate future, and what an invasion of Stalin and his Russian hordes would mean to them and to all free peoples of the world. The free world needs and must have a German army if the overrun of Western Europe is to be prevented.

That there is danger for France in the recreation of the German army cannot be denied. That nation has suffered the agonies of invasion by Germany three times in a little more than half a century. Quite naturally they do not want another, but an invasion by the hordes of Russia would be even worse, and it is a choice between these two that France is being called upon to make. The free world, including ourselves, that is seeking protection against Stalin and his Red army, should be able to offer France ample assurance against another attack from Germany, as the price we must pay for French consent to the rearming of Germany. With that insurance, we are in a position to insist.

This nation, and others of the North Atlantic pact, have been patient for an all too long a time, when we consider what is at stake. France has not listened to the arguments of diplomacy. It is high time that she hear the voice of a soldier, the voice of a respected and capable commander who has but recently rescued France from an aggressor, a man garbed in a uniform and speaking the language of a soldier, rather than the voice of diplomacy garbed in the frock coat, striped pants and high hat of the state department.

If the free world is to have a chance of stopping the Russians before they overrun all of Western Europe, including France, and reach the shores of the Atlantic, we must have that German army. The interests of the free world are greater than those of France alone. Time is running out, there is no more left for further argument. The state department has failed. It is high time to try something else. Let us try a soldier as a spokesman, a sympathetic soldier to be sure, a uniform, rather than a frock coat that has failed.

European nations, including Russia, have always understood the language of the respected soldier better than that of a none-too-well qualified, and largely repudiated diplomat.

It is high time we had a change if the free world, including France, is to convince Stalin that aggression in Western Europe might be decidedly unprofitable. Just as it is high time that I stop sighing about what may happen to a favorite pipe and concentrate on the more serious problems of the period. It may be a hard thing to do, but the French must forget their pet peeve and concentrate on what may be coming tomorrow. Presentation of that subject by one for whom they had regard and respect would quite probably be helpful to them in seeing and choosing the road ahead.

A new contract the Chrysler corporation has signed with its 105,000 employees means an annual wage increase for the company to pay of over $2,000,000, and more if the cost of living increases. That is one item in the inflation spiral.

The freezing of wages is not popular with the labor bosses.

Governor Dewey of New York made a speech on the evening of Thursday, Dec. 14, that President Truman should have liked to have made on Friday evening, Dec. 15 in Washington, except had he have done so, it might have called for explanation as to how the nation arrived at the condition described during the President's administration.

Elks Split Basket Ball Honors

Lose to Indians; Win From West Branch

The Tawas City Elks split decisions in their two contests this week, taking it on the chin from the East Tawas Indian in an action packed game last Friday night, 53 to 45 and defeating the bewildered West Branch squad 75 to 26 Tuesday night. The Elks went into the East Tawas fracas with a six win and one loss record, to come out on the short end of the score for their second loss of the season. This Friday night Bay City Visitation will play here, and next Tuesday Pinconning will play the Elks at the local auditorium in a return engagement.

The East Tawas contest featured plenty of action in every quarter, with the two referees having their hands full while officiating the game. The first quarter ended in a deadlock 14 to 14 and the Indians led by one field goal, 23 to 21 at the end of the half when they garnered nine points to the Elks seven. In the fast and furious third quarter East Tawas picked up two more points when they outscored the Elks 16 to 14. The final stanza found the Indians wrapping up the old ball game when they outscored Tawas City 14 to 10. In the confusion in the final stanza, "Sonny" Toms, one of the local cagers, shot the ball in the opposing side's basket to account for their two extra points.

Big guns in the East Tawas line-up were Clark and Porter who each meshed 16 points. Gingerich led the Elks, also with 16 points.

The Reserves were the only ones to salvage a game from East Tawas, when they defeated the East-enders squad 44 to 33. Dwayne Wright led the Tawas City squad with 12 points, followed by Gackstetter with 10, Humphrey 8, Landon 7, Davis 6, and H. Morely 1. Hester led the East Tawas team with 15 points.

The Tawas City Girls lost in their first contest of the year, by one point, with East Tawas coming out on the long end of a 36 to 35 count.

After the first couple of minutes in the West Branch game Tuesday night, the contest turned into an all out rout in favor of the Elks, when they racked up 18 points to the Ogemaw Oilers 5. The West Branch team fared about the same in the second quarter when the Elks racked up 21 points to the lowly five posted by West Branch. Halftime score: Tawas City 39, West Branch 10. The Elks whipped in 15 more points in the third quarter to bolster their bulging score, while the Branchers could only muster three. The final stanza found Tawas City coming up with 21 points while West Branch countered with 13.

In the West Branch game Tuesday night, Bandmaster Bruce Orr, filled in for Coach Mark Deibaugh, who has been suffering from an attack of the flu for the last couple of weeks.

High scorer in the Tawas City attack was Barry McGuire, with 22 points, followed by Gingerich with 18 and Grack 13. Wolf led West Branch with seven.

The Tawas City Reserves continued in their winning ways by defeating West Branch 43 to 28. The Little Elks overcame a 18 to 17 lead held by West Branch, at the half when they out-scored the West Branch reserves 12 to 6 in the third quarter and 14 to 4 in the final stanza.

Humphrey led his team with 19 points, followed by Gackstetter with 12, Wright 5, Davis 2, Anshuetz 2, Scarlett 2, and Anshuetz 1.

tirely new Board of Education which would be elected from the area at large, the amount of taxes which the legal voters would be willing to vote, and what the Department of Public Instruction would be willing to approve.

The matter of site would be among the powers of the new Board, with the consent of the Department. The question of the cost of the operation of a reorganized school is quite prevalent. The amount of money from the taxes of a district for the operation of any school, without a majority vote of the residents, is the share of the 15 mills allowed the schools of the county by the Allocation Committee. This in Isoco county is seven mills at present, or a cost of seven dollars on each thousand dollars of valuation. The money derived from district taxes is now only about eleven percent of that used for operations in the Tawas City district. The remainder comes from the state.

The cost of a new building is also a prevalent question. This would have to be met by district taxes. The cost, of course, would depend to a great extent on what would be built. The area now contains approximately 400 secondary students, and the Houghton Lake and other similar recent constructions indicate that the cost of a building to house 500 secondary students would be about five dollars on each thousand dollars of valuation for a term of 15 years in the proposed area of reorganization.
