Some of Mr. Truman's critics said his program would mean an era of austerity for the American people. Some said they thought the President was "hysterical" and others said he had thrown the American stands of living out the

Although the nation was shocked by the President's message, Americans in every walk of life were beginning to understand the scope of the program we have undertaken. Most people realized to carry out that program a great increase in taxes would be necessary—possibly the highest in United States history.

It became increasingly clear, too, that such items as automobiles, electric refrigerators, vacuum will not be available in such abundance to the American public as in recent years. Production of these cleaners, television and radio sets well over one-half before the year

CIVIL DEFENSE:

Truman Signs Bill

President Truman signed the civilian defense bill enacted in the closing days of the last congress which provides a defense program estimated to cost about $3,100,000,-

The measure directs the federal governments to provide leadership to the states and communities in developing arrangements to protect civilian life and property in the country's 10 critical target areas against possible enemy attack by atomic bombs, biological or bacteriological warfare or any other

The bill requires states to match federal funds provided for air raid constructions. It was on this point that the bill received some criti-

KOREA:

Evacuation Inevitable

Bitter battles raged in Korea as United Nations forces continued their retreat toward Pusan and what seemed inevitable evacuation of that war-torn country.

And while the battles raged in recent years. Production of these items may be cut by one-third to peninsula. There were rumors in military circles, too, that the U.S. had decided on a stand in Korea.

To the average man in the United States, to the people in the home towns of America, who are anything but defeatists, the Washington debates seemed ironic. The average American was counting the odds, estimated now at five to one, and which the chinese can increase at will. In recent weeks there has been considerable confusion and a number of contradictions as to the actual number of Chinese troops thrown against the U. N. forces.

To many the question now seemed to be whether or not U.N. troops could successfully withdraw to the Pusan beachhead and carry out an evacuation. The situation was described like this: Now it's a question of saving face or saving our hides - and we'd better save our hides. We'll need them in the future against the Communists.

The United States army in Korea is the only one this nation has at present and it must form the core of the new army we have dedicated ourselves to building in an effort to preserve our democratic way of life. Attempting to hold in Korea would risk this army-too great a risk in the opinion of many observ-

Whatever the decision, one thing the average American will tell the world: Man-for-man, the North Korean and Chinese soldier is no shelters built during World War II match for a well trained American soldier. And any victory in Korea will cost the North Koreans and Chinese dearly.

POLITICS:

Matter of Tradition

Critics of President Truman's foreign policy, led by Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio, charged the President "violated the laws and the consti-tution of the United States" by sending troops to Korea and Europe without congressional approval.

In the last few weeks the thunder of debate on the subject has rolled through the halls of congress. It is not, however, a new theme.

The issue of the President's right to send troops to carry out obligations of the country arose in the administrations of Washington, John Adams, Jefferson, Jackson, Tyler, Polk, Lincoln, Grant, McKinley, Taft, Wilson and the late Franklin Roosevelt.

And in every case the issue was settled in favor of the President, namely, that it is his sworn duty to carry out the obligations of the United States.

In this particular case, when the senate ratified the North Atlantic treaty it made the obligations of that treaty law, binding on the President of the United States no matter who he might be. Certain articles of the treaty bind the North Atlantic nations to united effort to maintain the security of the North Atlantic area, including the use of armed force if necessary.

It is these articles of the treaty that the President is upholding in sending troops to Europe. If the congress should deny the President the right to use troops or arms abroad, then certain articles of the treaty become meaningless.

In the few cases where similar questions have reached the Supreme Court, the President has been up-held in his action. It would seem that Senator Taft's attack, therefore, can not succeed in the face of

CROPS:

Prospects Not Bright

The agriculture department reported 1951 crop prospects not so bright as they might be for attainng the government's goal of a record harvest.

Shortages of soil moisture in important southwestern wheat areas, prospects of less irrigation water from snows, freeze damage to fallsown grain crops in the south, loss of farm labor to the armed services and industry, and the prospects of shortages of repair parts for farm machinery were listed as having an effect on production.

The farmers of the nation face a production quota greater than any ever demanded in this country. Increased grain production is needed to rebuild surpluses which have dwindled in the last two years. In addition to rebuilding surpluses; the United States must again assume the responsibility of feeding much of the world if open conflict breaks out between the east and

Social Security

BETWEEN NOW and April 30 many thousands of farm owners and housewives in the home towns of the country must file quarterly returns and pay the 3 per cent tax under the new provisions of the social security law.

For the 81st congress made benefits of social security apply to farm workers and to domestic workers and other folks who work for hire, not covered under the original provisions of the law.

The new law, effective January 1, provides that if a farm employee has worked from October through December, 1950, and at least 60 days for the same farmer in the three months, January, February and March, and has received a minimum of $50 in cash, then he is eligible for benefits under the social security aet. And he will continue to qualify so long as he works 60 days in any subsequent quarter and gets the minimum $50 in cash.

So farm owners who have work ers on their payrolls under these conditions must get an identification number from the government, and each employee must get a social security number. The farmer gets his number by filling out form SS-4A and the employee must fill out form SS-5. These forms may be obtained from the nearest tax collector, or postoffice, or probably from your rural route carrier.

The tax returns must be filed quarterly to include the 11/2 per cent out of the employee's pay and 1½ per cent out of the farmer's pocket to make a total of 3 per cent. The farmer makes his return on form 941 which he will receive from the tax collector every quar-

The treasury department has compiled a booklet which answers all questions relative to the new social security taxes called "Agricultural Employer's Social Security Tax Guide". It may be obtained free by writing to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, U.S. Treasury Department, Washington 25, D.C. Housewives also must file similar returns for their maids, laundresses, gardeners, hired hands and others who qualify under the

Disagrees With Kline

Allan Kline, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, at a luncheon here in Washington the other day, told those present that if price controls were placed on farm produce, the American farmer would not give all-out production of crops or animals or produce.

Assuming that price controls are placed upon every other commodity, this reporter, who attended this luncheon, believes that Kline is underestimating the patriotism, the moral fibre and character of the American farmer.

If we remember correctly, the greatest production ever attained by the farmers of America was during the last war when price controls were in effect, and granting that there has been a floor under a few major crops and hogs, since the war, the American farmer has not failed once, to give all-out production when called upon to do so.

This reporter is of the opinion, that even if such price ceiling were placed upon farm produce wherein farmers were not making the tremendous profits they are making today under the parity system, if called upon by their government they would respond like any other segment of the American people and give their all-out efforts toward a common cause of national security, since food is essential to this security. Kline is opposed to the imposition of price controls anywhere, or wage controls, preferring to rely upon the law of supply and demand and the imposition of sufficient taxes, curtailed credit, public debt management and other fiscal controls to meet the threat of inflation, and defense costs.

Taft Makes His Pitch

Sen. Robert A. Taft, Mr. Republican, has made his pitch. He did it the first day of the new sessionn of congress by vehemently objecting to the fact that President Truman, due to a stress of emergency business and bills piled up by the lame-duck congress which adjourned the day before, decided not to give his "State of the Union Message" until Monday, January 8.

Heretofore, the President has delivered the message the day following convening of congress, which would have been January 4. The irate Ohioan said this wasted the time of congress, although it could not conduct business because no committees had been named.

The senator from Ohio followed that up the next day with a tirade against Mr. Truman's constitutional authority either to send American troops to Europe or Korea, without approval of congress.

Camp Fire Girl Groups Conduct Programs on Traffic Education

ADMONISHING AUTOISTS to sing a song for safety while driving, Camp Fire Girls of the Central Valley Area Council in California launched a campaign in the communities of Stockton, Lodi, San Andreas, West Point and Oakdale.

At meetings of women and men's service clubs, PTA's, church and other groups, the young members of the youth agency distributed cards for drivers to clip on windshield visors. The card pointed out the perils of speeding along the high-ways and byways at 65, 75 and 85 miles per hour. Not content with this effort. Camp Fire members including Blue Birds (7 to 10) Camp Fire Girls (10 to 15), and Horizon Club groups (15 to 18), say that every member of their organization signed pledges promising to obey safety rules while walking, skating, and riding bicycles and scooters.

The girls also enlisted the aid of their parents in the safety campaign. Fathers sent letters to all drivers in the community asking them to please observe safe driving practices, especially while in the vicinity of schools and playgrounds.

The importance of teen-agers to learn safe driving practices was so vital to a group of Beaumont, Texas, Camp Fire Girls that they held a panel discussion on "Should a Fourteen-Year-Old Have a Driver's License?" The discussion was held in school as part of their English class program. The girls did a lot of preparatory research before planning the discussion. They sent for information from other committees and explored the laws of different states with regard to licensing young drivers in their communities. The conclusion reached was that a fourteen-year-old could be given a practice license for two years, should always have an adult in the car, and at the end of the probationary period could apply for a driver's license.

The initial panel discussion proved so successful that the Parent-Teacher Association requested a repeat performance. Later the panel went on the air over local stations.

IN MANY COMMUNITIES across the country Camp Fire members held "Safety Safaris" as demon-strations climaxing their safety drives. The girls enlisted the cooperation of local police and highway departments and civic organizations. Cars, bicycles, scooters, pedestrians and skaters all took part in the "safari." Snappy placards streaming from vehicles pointed out the "rules of the road." The police department in St.

Louis, Mo., recognized the good citizenship efforts of the local Camp Fire Girls safety drive by presenting the organization with an award. "Camp Fire for a happy life-Thelma Ritter gets star billing in her eighth picture, heading the safety for a long one" is one of the trol. ## Many Presidents | Eat Dickinson POPCORN | Ot's Healthful—It Always Pops Suffered Letter Writing Trouble

WASHINGTON, D. C. - Besides President Truman there have been a number of hot-tempered letter writers in the White House. Andrew Jackson was one of them.

Old Hickory was a hot-tempered man. Look at his picture on the $20 bill, if you're lucky enough to have one, and you'll see the firm chin and burning eyes of a man who spoke his mind-a man who said he had but two regrets: That he couldn't shoot Henry Clay or hang John C. Calhoun.

Jackson was no slouch with the acid-dipped pen.

In one letter he called the Bank of the United States "a hydra of corruption." In another, he exploded with indignation at a former cabinet member who ran out on a duel: "What a wretch. This southern hotsput will not fight-my creed is true-there never was a base man a brave one." Free-Swinging Prose There is no record, however, of any of Jackson's letters setting that nation's tongues a-wagging, as have certain letters of the 20th century President who once caused a bronze statue of Jackson to be erected in front of the Jackson County, Mo., court house.

But for free-swinging prose, President Truman can hold his own with Old Hickory. It would be hard to beat the letter in which he called the marine corps a navy police force with a propaganda machine almost equal to Stalin's.

One fact most people in the country have overlooked is the fact that the President has written lots of letters on all sorts of subjects, and nearly all of them are good-humored. It's his occasional letters in the Andrew Jackson vein that get all the public attention.

Thomas Jefferson complained about people making public letters received from him. He said: "I should wish never to put pen to paper, and the more so because of the treacherous practice some people have of publishing one's letters with-out leave. Lord Mansfied declared it a breach of trust and punishable at law. I think it should be a penitentiary felony."

In practice, of course, it's highly unlikely that a President of the United States or other public official would sue you for publishing one of his letters-however much he might dislike seeing his words in cold print.

Can Be Copyrighted

And it has been argued that the public interest sometimes is served by publishing a letter without the writer's consent-to provide, for instance, a fuller insight into the writer's views.

Many persons who have received letters from presidents have refused, as a matter of course, to publish them. Before they would allow publication of such letters consent of the writer would be necessary.

Of course a president-like anybody else-could copyright his lettomobile came into sight. As one loomed near she waved her handpart of his estate. Thus a number of letters by

Fabled Unicorn Called Part Fact by Scientists

WASHINGTON, D. C .- The Smithsonian Institution reports the fabled unicorn of medieval art and legend wasn't strictly a product of the imagination.

Evidence uncovered by Dr. Richard Ettinghausen strongly indicates that the unicorn stemmed from "the one horned rhinoceros of India whose form became weirdly distorted in reports from travelers." The unicorn was variously pictured as a one horned cow, lion, horse and antelope. Sometimes it had wings. Few of the travelers in India who brought back reports of the rhino-ceros, "actually ever saw one of the animals and they gave their imaginations free play," the institution said.

A resolution presented by the niece will join her and they will which were published in the three will which were published in the three country news-papers and we discerning bow and arrow hunting a couple of months Mr. Wagner tributed over 4000 bulletins. There were 292 extension meetings held in the county during the year at which there was a total attendance which there was a total attended 188 Biggs.

The telephone line is near comof 10,600 persons. We attended 188 meetings of extension nature where our participation was not required. The county has a total of eight Women's Extension groups with a membership of 136 and 12 4-H Clubs with an enrollment of afternoon with Mrs. Wilford Whit-272 boys and girls who carried 326 ford.

During the year we assisted 64 different organizations.

> The next day the Board of Supervisors was presented with a resolution to request the removal of the present county agricultural agent. The resolution did not pass, out nevertheless, there is some significance back of the resolution. For this I am disappointed.

I am certain that the movement s not based on unfriendliness for I believe I have many friends on the Board. I admire this body of administrators for their firm con-victions and the courage to carry out their convictions. Even though I am employed by the Michigan State College, who pays my salary and sets up the extension policies for all agents to carry out, it is my responsibility to cooperate with people in the county.

The Smith-Lever Act, which created the Cooperative Extension Service, states specifically in any way that will contribute to an improved standard of living We are out their convictions. Even though proved standard of living. We are to employ those methods which will serve the greatest number of people most effectively. Probably the most effective method is the personalized visit and I attempt to make as many of these visits as is physically possible. However, all agents are limited in the number of people they can reach in that way so we have to resort to group meetings to more nearly serve all the people of the county. Because of the many requests of individuals and organizations, time does not allow me to do all of the things I want to do. Actually, I would choose to spend more time with the less successful farmers, but I am compalled to meet the many am compelled to meet the many personal requests first.

I have sincerely attempted to understand the responsibility of my job and carry out those respon-sibilities to the best of may ability without favor to any group or class of people. I hope that I will be able to understand these peo-ple who feel that I have not done a satisfactory job in my brief ten-ure here in the county.

The lighted window of Derek Bartell's store caught his eye and his mind flashed back to the words he had overheard. The memory brought another source of anxiety. Bartell had left the store for some reason. It probably meant that his daughter was in there alone. Not a pleasant situation with the town in its present turbulent condition

Frazer Stands Guard Outside Bartell Place

He was within ten paces of the building when he saw that another girl was on the sidewalk ahead of him, a slender young woman whose flowing shawl made a light patch against the darkness of the street. She was standing almost in the doorway of the darkened building which adjoined the Bartell store, and he had a quick suspicion that she was watching something.

His attention was diverted for a defying excited, armed men. Frazer caught a glimpse of him as he raced through the lighted area in front of Bartell's place, and instantly he was interested. The man was small and dark - and carried a heavy six-gun swung low on his left hip. This could be the bandit who had murdered The Duke.

hear the guttural, clipped accents He stepped forward again and of the other man's reply, "We was promptly addressed by the girl in the shawl. Her voice was pleasantly husky, its faint trace of accent giving it a quality which made it all the more attractive. She was evidently of Spanish extraction and a closer look told him that she was a very pretty little brunette.

"Big excitement in Mesa Verde tonight," she observed sociably. "I wonder does that rider bring news that the murderer is caught?"

He was about to reply, making casual conversation, when his alert ear caught the sound of a grating boot heel. Someone was in the narrow alleyway which ran between the restaurant and Bartell's store.

He stepped past the Mexican girl and glanced back into the dim passage to where a broad ray of light indicated a window at the back of the Bartell place. Silhouetted against that light was the stocky figure of a man. Frazer knew instantly that he had seen that burly figure before. It was the man Carson Emery had called Vince Gale, but Frazer was not thinking about names now. He was remembering that this was the man who might have been one of the stage bandits, the outlaw who had shown signs of fearing Helen Bartell's recogni-

He saw the man crouch low beneath the window sill, and curiosity at the move almost made him too late. The man was coming up again before Frazer saw that he had drawn a gun and was raising it to the level of the lighted window. That sight drove every thought but that of action out of his mind. Frazer drew fast, only briefly fearful that Scott's gun might not be fully loaded. There happened." was no time to check, however. could swear that he's the same He had to shoot quickly before the man in the alley could get in his bushwhack shot.

There was a brief little scream almost in his ear and then the narrow confines of the passage rocked under what sounded like an echoing shot. Frazer knew that he had heard two shots, his own and the one fired by the man in front of him. Fear went through his mind, a fear that he had fired too late, and he sprang forward savagely even as the tinkle of glass warned him that the stocky man had indeed fired through the store win-

He knew that his own bullet had gone true. The burly man had slumped and was now motionless on the ground below the window. Frazer stepped over him and looked into the store, the weight of anxiety lifting promptly as he saw Helen Bartell coming across toward the shattered window, "Are you all right?" he asked.

"Yes. But what's happening? Did you shoot?"

"Not into the store. I took a shot Christ the Power of God at the man who was firing through the window.'

Men Accept Frazer's Explanation of Shots

He started to explain but had to break off as men began to pile into the passageway. "Back this way, men," he called. "Somebody was trying to murder Miss Bartell. I plugged him." It was no time to be modest. Those men charging down upon him were already aroused and trigger-itchy. He had to quiet them in a hurry or take a chance of stopping some hasty, excited lead.

There was a chorus of comments when he concluded his story, but the male voices died away as Miss Bartell spoke from her position just inside the broken window. "Thanks mister," she said clearly. "You didn't shoot a bit too soon. That bullet didn't miss me by much." She pointed back toward the shelves which flanked the rear counter. "I was standing right back there where it hit." Frazer had a feeling that she was talking to help him, assuring the crowd that he had done just what he claimed, but for the moment he was not concerned over the point. The only matter of interest was what he saw as she came close to the window. There was a spatter of red on the shoulder of her dress and another small stain on her cheek.

Again there was a stir among Motive for Miracle those men crowded into the alley but Miss Bartell's voice quietit. Nothing more. Now tell me who it was who tried to shoot me."

"You're a pretty cool hand," Frazer approved. "I thought you had plenty of nerve this afternoon, but you're even better tonight."

Her quick glance repaid him for the compliment, but there was no time for any further comment. A man was shouldering his way through the crowd.

"What's going on here?" he demanded, his voice carrying a ring of almost belligerent authority. Frazer knew before seeing him that it was the deputy marshal, Ed Delaplane.

"Somebody tried to shoot Miss Helen," a voice replied. "The tall jasper plugged the polecat jest in time.

Power of God

Lesson for February 4, 1951

ONCE UPON a time, miracles were one of the strongest arguments supporting Christianity In our times, it is quite the re verse; miracles are for many Christians a major embarrassment, principal reason for not believing what Christians teach. There is no room in one column to debate this question. A very readable recent book on this line by C. S. Dr. Foreman Lewis, called "Miracles," may help to clear the reader's mind, show ing that the common idea that miracles are impossible, is a mistaken idea.

DAUL calls Jesus Christ "the power of God" (I Cor. 1:24). Whether you believe that Jesus dently steady in spite of the scare hard or easy, depends a good deal she had suffered. on what you think of Christ. If on what you think of Christ. If you think of him as a man much like yourself, and no more, then you have as hard a time believing that he could work miracles as ir believing that you yourself could do so. But if you believe that in some way he was more than simply a man like yourself, but that God was in Christ (as Paul said), that in his mind was the wisdom of God and through him surged the power of God, you will not have much difficulty with the miracles.

But suppose you cannot start with the high faith in Christ as Son of God; at least you can start with historical facts which no one can reasonably doubt. One of these facts is that there lived a person named Jesus of Nazareth. Another fact is that it was believed about him, already in his lifetime, that he could do all sorts of astounding things,-cure hopeless cripples, bring people back from the dead, stop a storm in its tracks, drive demons back to hell.

You will have to admit that this Jesus must have been an extraordinary character to have such things believed of him, even if they were not true. Starting from that point, you may be led to look into this man's story further, and-like many others-may come out at last believing in Christ as the divine Lord.

He saw people in trouble "The bullet struck one of those cans and he came to their help. It was on the shelf. I was spattered by as simple as that. He is not reported to have stopped all the storms in Galilee, but only one; and that one not to have himself nor even to save any one else from death, but to save them from fear.

He sent the demons tumbling into the lake, not to create a wonder-tale nor to show how much stronger he was than demons, but he did it to help a poor wild madman back to sanity. He did not go around to funerals in Palestine bringing all the corpses back to life and cheating the undertakers for three years running. On the contrary, he went to Jairus's house only when asked.

There is a certain modesty about all these miracles; and there is love in each of them. The great difference between miracle-workwhacker. To clean a stone or brick fireplace, hot water and strong soap applied with a stiff brush are often adequate. If they're not, mix up a paste of powdered pumice and concentrated ammonia and cover the smoked areas with it. Let it stay about an hour or two before scrubbing it off with hot water and soap.

If you burn pine wood and want to prevent the gum from collecting on fireplace stones, bricks or tiles, coat them, after they're thoroughly cleaned, with boiled linseed oil.

Historical Expediency

FOR NEARLY 100 YEARS the established foreign policy of the United states as applied to the far east, under both Republican and Democratic administrations, was to recognize and support whatever was the established government of China, whether it was good or bad. We considered it the government of the Chinese people. That was true of the decidedly bad government of the old dowager empress, and we assisted in her defense against the Boxer uprising, for which we did not ask and, in fact, refused to accept any compensa-tion when offered.

When Japan invaded Manchuria, President Hoover urgently appealed to the League of Nations for protection against the aggression. Because of the inability of the League to provide a force for such a purpose, that appeal was in vain. We loudly proclaimed the Atlantic Charter and at Casa Blanca assured China that under its provisions we would see that Manchuria was returned to her at the close of the war with Japan.

Despite such promises, we passed over to Russia some Chinese territory, including the ports and railroads of Manchuria, without telling China we had violated our promises to her. We permitted the division of Korea and withdrew our troops from South Korea before that small nation was in a posi-tion to defend itself from Communist aggression.

When China, under the government of Chiang Kai Shek was fighting both the Japs and the Communists, President Roosevelt sent General Patrick J. Hurley to China to investigate and report. Hurley claimed he found numerous advocates and friends of Communism among the personnel of the state department serving in China and sent two of them home, and issued reprimands to others.

Then came General Marshall who proposed that Chiang admit to his government a number of the Communists as constituting a majority in his government. Chiang refused to consider that proposal. Marshall was followed by Gen. Weidemeyer. President Truman asking that he investigate and report. That report, whatever it may have been, is buried in the files of the state department, and the American people have not been permitted to know its content.

China with a population of some 700,000,000 represents several times the population of Russia. In both man power and natural resources, she has a tremendous war potential. The efforts of the state department of the past have been to prevent that war potential from falling into the hands of what might prove an enemy of the United States. Either through errors in judgment, or by intent, it would seem the present state department has done much to accomplish what its precedessors worked many years to pre-

Congress has appropriated considerable sums to assist the Chiang government. Through the activities of the state department, much of such appropriation failed to reach Chiang.

In this country some of those charged with favoring the Chinese communists have been convicted by the courts and are now serving prison sentences.

Under such conditions, it is small wonder that the American people have lost what confidence they may have had in Secretary Acheson and the department he heads. Directly and indirectly his efforts have been in the direction of appeasing Moscow, without regard to the effect on this country. The action of President Truman in defending South Korea from Communist aggression met with practically universal approval, but the actions of Secretary Acheson, whether the result of bad judgment, or worse, have been as universally disapproved.

In such differences as have arisen between Secretary Acheson and General MacArthur, the people have almost unanimously approved MacArthur. A change is in order, and now. We want a state department that will represent the interests of America, rather than those of Moscow, whether they be errors of judgment, or worse.

At the Republican convention in Chicago in 1944, Governor Warren was urged by some of his California friends to refuse second place on the ticket with Governor Dewey, with the assurance that if he refused he would have top place in 1948. It did not work out that way, but possibly the date was merely deferred for four years to 1952. It looks that way now, unless General Eisenhower should decide to tell the Republicans he will accept if the nomination is tendered him next year.

Long-term investment that pays daily dividends

HESE days thoughtful people turn their minds to the durability of things they purchase.

But it's rare when doing your duty turns out to be the best way to satisfy your heart's desire.

That's what's so marvelous about this '51 Buick. If you picked a car just for the lift it gives youyour pride in its power-or its generous comfortyou couldn't make a better choice.

But make note of this:

That gleaming new push-bar forefront, which greets your eye with flashing beauty, contains 25 grille bars made of stamped steel, individually mounted to "give" and come back unharmed. Combined with a massive, wrap-around bumper, fortressed by two stalwart "bumper bombs" and two added uprights, it gives unsurpassed protection.

Springs of stout spiraled steel on all four wheels let your wheels curtsey over bumps, while you ride level as a lance. But they also need no servicing, and breakage is virtually unknown.

Buick's great-powered engine is a Fireball, wondrously lively and eager at the mere touch of your toe-but it also wrings extra power from every drop of fuel, and has the mechanical perfection that comes only from years of experience with this basic design.

Dynaflow Drive gives you effortless smoothness of control-but it also eliminates clutch repair bills, saves tires, eases strain on the whole driving mechanism, from engine to differential.

The road-steady gait of a Buick assures relaxed security - and is also evidence that you have a durable, deep-silled, X-braced frame beneath you. However you check it, you'll discover this: The things that make you yearn for a Buick on first acquaintance, are the very same things that make Buick such a smart long-time buy.

Better see your Buick dealer-soon.
