Cancer Fund Drive to Continue in County

While next Monday, April 30 marks the scheduled closing date for the 1951 campaign of the Michigan Division of the American Cancer Society, the drive will be continued here, it was announced by Nathan Barkman, campaign manager for Isco County in the fund raising effort.

Manager Barkman stated that in some sections the goal has not been reached, due largely to delay in starting the campaign. Many workers for the cancer society were engaged in "clean-up" work for other fund-raising activities and were unable to start their solicitation for the cancer fund until later he explained. As a result, they have not completed their canvass. The fund raising in Oscoda is being carried on under the direction of Mrs. Wm. Pepple, who is chairman for that community.

"We again want to call the attention of county residents to the revolving fund in the form of a loan that is available to cancer patients," Mrs. C. Kate Evans said. She added that pads for dressings are also available.

Rev. Adams to Give Final Sermon Sunday

The family pew, and what has become of it? Does the country need it again? What did we lose with the passing of the family pew?

Two great services are planned for the Baptist Church Sunday, April 29. Rev. Adams from Lansing, who has been supplying for six weeks will give his final message. There will be special music at both services.

Rev. Adams will speak on the subject, "The Call of the Master." At 8 P. M. he will speak on the subject "The Triumph of Family Religion." This will be a great family night service. Families are asked to sit together that we may see how the old fashioned pew looked. Gifts will be presented the oldest mother present and the mother of the largest family present. Come and enjoy this warm heart stirring service, enjoy the singing of old hymns.

Rev. Adams will speak at the Hemlock Baptist Church at 11:15 A. M. He would like to take this occasion to express his deep appreciation for the fine way he has been received by the First Baptist and Hemlock Baptist Churches during the time he has supplied these two churches.

Sunday, May 6th Rev. Mercer will begin his pastorate at the First Baptist Church and the Hemlock Road Baptist Church.

Mail Messenger Makes Last Trip

Karl Kobs made his last trip Sunday as mail messenger between the Tawas City Postoffice and the Detroit and Mackinac Railroad station. With the discontinuance of mail service on the Detroit and Mackinac Railroad, trucks deliver the mail direct to the postoffice door, thus doing away with the mail messenger's duties.

In Tawas City's early days mail came by boat and stage. With the advent of the railroad mail service here in the 1880's, the delivery of mail from depot to postoffice required a messenger. At first the postmaster or an employee performed the duty, but later a special messenger was employed.

Postmaster Lydia Bing found no record in the postoffice of the first mail messengers, but she was able to compile a nearly complete list for the past 40 years.

They were: William Boldt, Robert Boldt, Peter Anderson, Paul Koepke, Sr., Herbert Rutterbush, Truman Rutterbush, Cuthbert Bright, Alvin Cholger, George Cholger, E. S. Ferrand, Ben Gabler, and Karl Kobs.

Early morning fishing on Dead Creek. This season has brought out some of the largest crowds ever to visit the Tawas area. Indications are that the run will be good this week end.

Soft Ball Meeting Next Tuesday Evening

The second spring meeting of the Tawas Softball League will be held in the basement of the Tawas City Hall next Tuesday, May 1 beginning at 7 o'clock. All players or anyone wishing to sponsor a team are requested to attend.

The league enjoyed a very good season in its first year last summer. The league was composed of eight teams which included: Beckett's Real Estate, who were league champions, Nelkie's Dairy, Roll-In Auto Body, Tawas Lutheran, Tawas City Fire Department, Anderson Coach, Fletcher's All-Stars and Junior Fire Department.

Last years league president, Don Seymour, asks all those interested in having the league organized this year be on hand for the meeting next week.

Marshall Works Hard

THE WASHINGTON rumor factory is probably the most active and the most irresponsible in the world. Tales cooked up in capitol hill lobbies, the drawing rooms of high society or in a taxicab conversation are spread as fact within a matter of hours.

The story that the late Franklin Roosevelt was insane and had to be chained to his bed at night was a good example. One confidential news agency believed it to the extent of relaying it to its many thousand customers.

Latest Washington canard is that Secretary of Defense George Marshall is in his dotage and unable to come to his office more than a half a week.

On the contrary, I can state that Marshall, though 70, is probably in better health than before his kidney operation, gets to the office before 8 a.m., has the papers read and sent out of his office by around 8:20 a.m., and puts in a full six-day week, working even on Saturday.

Marshall is alert, his memory is amazing, and he seems completely on the ball. Furthermore, Marshall has put the old uniform aside and is trying to run the defense department as a civilian. This writer had some skepticism about this phase of Marshall's new job when first appointed secretary of defense, but the skepticism appears not to have been justified.

Cattle-Feed Shortage

Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan has been at daggers points over government farm policies for some time with the man he fired last week, Ralph Trigg, chief of production and marketing.

Main reason the ax fell was that the production of certain vital farm crops—chiefly cattle feed—is desperately behind our defense goals.

About 127,000,000 tons of grain will be needed to feed our greatly expanded population of beef cattle and hogs this year. However, farmers have planted or scheduled for planting only enough acres to produce 117,000,000 tons of feed grain.

Corn will be about 5,000,000 acres short of the 90,000,000-acre production goal fixed by Brannan—which Trigg was supposed to deliver.

At the same time we have 4,000,000 more beef cattle and over 5,000,000 more hogs to feed this year than in 1950. The pinch may not be felt this year because of feed-grain reserves.

However, with these reserves exhausted, we will face a serious cutback in cattle production for defense needs—and therefore a meat shortage—in 1952.

Manpower shortage on the farms is one reason—perhaps the chief one—for the failure to divert more grasslands to planting feed grain.

Presidential Pique

President Truman's pique and an economist's desire to throw off his new deal label are back of the administration's tragic failure to clamp on price controls six months ago.

This never-told story starts last year when the elder statesman, Bernard Baruch, publicly came out for price controls.

Real truth was that the White House and national security resources board were at that very time toying with the same idea. But when Mr. Truman heard that the white-haired New York financier was for price controls, he reversed himself.

The President had put Baruch on his "S.O.B. list" when Bernie refused to serve on a Democratic committee in the 1948 elections, and Truman didn't want to be in the position of coming out for price controls just after Baruch did.

Another factor was the strong opposition to controls by Leon Keyserling, then acting chairman of the council of economic advisers. Keyserling, a former department of agriculture economist and assistant to Sen. Bob Wagner, was being attacked by Right Winters on capitol hill as a wild-eyed radical.

Keyserling, an able economist but subject to human ambitions, wanted to be named chairman of the council and gain acceptance of a middle-of-the-road adviser. And at that time he told both the President and Stuart Symington, chairman of the resources board, that controls were "unworkable."

In one consultation with Symington, Keyserling argued that high prices would, in fact, be helpful by draining off excess purchasing power and its competition for goods, services and materials needed for rearmament.

Washington Pipeline

Illustrating the Washington canard factory here is another I heard recently: "Drew Pearson has now sold out to Pan American airways. He got a free trip to Europe with Pan American and is now in their pocket."

Real fact is that I paid my way to Europe on Pan American as I have on every other airline. However, I do not hesitate to pay tribute to Pan American's efficient operation across the Atlantic.

Truman Relieves Gen. MacArthur From All Commands in the Far East

MACARTHUR RELIEVED—To millions of small-towners across the nation to whom Gen. Douglas MacArthur has become something of a legend, his removal from all of his commands by President Truman was a shock not easily understood. The action pointed up the seriousness of the break between the general, the White House, and UN statesmen which had raged for weeks over the conduct of the Korean war.

According to grim, stubborn MacArthur, he was fighting Europe's war with arms in Asia while Europe's diplomats continued to fight communism with words. In his blunt, barbed way, he wrote Joseph W. Martin, Jr., house majority leader: "It seems strangely difficult for some to realize that here in Asia is where the Communist conspirators have elected to make their play for global conquest."

Grim-Faced MacArthur
For him the war ends.

That statement struck at the administration's very basis of how to defeat communism. It threw European diplomats into a tizzy. It brought demands in congress that a special bipartisan committee be sent to Tokyo to hear the general's foreign policy views. It brought rumors of the crackdown on MacArthur which the people on Main Street could not believe would ever happen.

The action has produced a shock that may have serious consequences. In the next few weeks congress may possibly be involved in bitter debate as the general's cause is championed by the Republican party.

But above all, it has caused confusion and uneasiness in the mind of the average Main Street citizen whose common sense tells him there is no end in sight for the Korean conflict. It does not answer the question in the minds of millions of people in the home towns: How are we going to get our sons and brothers and husbands free of the blood and filth of Korea?

GRAPES OF WRATH—The people in the big cities of the nation know little about the "Okies" so vividly described in John Steinbeck's novel of the depression, "The Grapes of Wrath." But to the people in the small towns and rural sections of the nation, they have long been a problem—and a necessity.

There are millions of them in the United States, working from the south toward the north as the crops ripen for harvest. And as the harvest nears they are welcomed and just as anxiously the community awaits their leaving. They are poor, often underfed and inadequately housed. They present a problem on the home town level that the individual community is unable to solve.

At last, much to the relief of millions of home towners, the federal government has stepped in and made a survey of their problems. The committee that made the survey has recommended legislation on migratory farm labor that may solve wage problems, establish labor camps, extend social security, public health and education programs with the aid of states and local communities.

Of all the problems that faced the home towns of the nation, that of the migratory worker was one of the most serious. Its solution will be welcomed.

ATOMIC SPIES—In what was probably one of the most dramatic and moving scenes in a federal court in the history of this country, Judge Irving Kaufman sentenced Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, husband and wife atomic spy team, to die for treason.

Said handsome, 41-year-old Kaufman, one of the youngest judges on the federal bench: "I have searched my conscience to find some reason for mercy. It is not in my power to forgive you. Only the Lord can find mercy for what you have done."

Never before in a civil court of the United States had native-born spies been sentenced to death.

Morton Sobell, 34, fellow conspirator, was sentenced to 30 years in prison. The fourth member of the conspiracy, Mrs. Rosenberg's brother, David Greenglass, 29, was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Thus ended another episode in the constant battle to keep the home towns of America free.

KEEP 'EM ON THE FARM—The old question of "how are you going to keep 'em down on the farm" showed up again in preliminary figures from the 1950 census of agriculture.

The census bureau announced that the tentative count of the number of farms in the country came to 5,379,043, a "real" drop of at least 280,000 for the first five postwar years and at least 500,000—or about 8 percent—for the last decade.

The bureau put forth three major reasons: (1) A trend toward combining small farms to form large ones. This was most pronounced west of the Mississippi. (2) A trend away from production of food for home use or sale. (3) Rural people taking jobs in nearby city industries and dropping production of food.

THE LEVELING OFF—Michael V. DiSalle, price director, said in his latest statement that his ceilings have brought "some stability" into view, but that higher taxes and tightening of money and credit supply are needed.

The question in the minds of home town housewives was whether or not the line will hold, or whether there will be another upward spiral in late summer as predicted by many economists.

In defense of controls, DiSalle said: "We had to start price controls. It was a psychological move to combat the factors that were driving us toward a serious inflation."

Labor Policy Committee
At Truman's invitation labor returned to the Defense Board.

U.M.T. DROPPED—The house armed services committee dropped efforts to write a universal military training program that would have reached into the home of every family in the nation. The senate had previously approved establishment of a U.M.T. program in connection with pending draft legislation.

The committee adopted an amendment by which congress agrees to consider recommendations to be made later by a five-man U.M.T. commission. Legislators who approved of U.M.T. said they believed universal military training will be enacted within a year.

THE HIGH SCHOOL PROBLEM

Large Numbers of Students Quit Classes

According to a national survey of home town high schools, boys and girls are dropping out of their classes at an increased rate. The study revealed clear danger that the trend may reach proportions comparable to the exodus of students during World War II.

Educators in the high schools of the country are being urged to conduct a "stay-in-school" drive to persuade students to remain until the completion of their courses.

Major reasons for school-leaving were said to be increased employ ment opportunities, expectation of the draft, economical need, lack of interest in academic work, an restless, insecurity or social maladjustment. In the case of those awaiting draft summonses, their grades often suffer.

COMMUNIST SURRENDERS TO U.N. FORCES . . . A Chinese Communist prisoner, who has been hiding in the field alongside this road, crawls along the road just after creeping from his hiding place to surrender to soldiers of the United Nations forces. This incident occurred near the 38th parallel, as the U.N. forces were extending their beach head across the parallel in the face of a tremendous Communist build-up. At the time this picture was taken, U.N. officers were expecting the outbreak of a new spring offensive by the Red hordes gathered in North Korea and across the Yalu river in Manchuria.

A FRENCHMAN RETURNS FROM INDOCHINA . . . Blinded in battle and lacking his right hand, also lost in battle, a soldier of France arrives back in Paris from the wars against the Communist rebels in French Indochina. Two of his buddies carry his baggage and aid the disabled veteran to a waiting bus which will carry him on his journey home. This veteran was one of a group of 91 wounded French veterans of the Indochinese fighting who arrived in France from the foreign battlefield recently. They have given good account of themselves, forcing the Reds to revert to sniping after a full-scale offensive.

"MISS HOME FIRES" . . . Voted by the first marine division fighting somewhere in North Korea as "the girl we would most like to come home to," Miss Home Fires shows all us folks back home what the leathernecks mean when they want to come home to a girl. Their female "destination" is Miss Betty Gray of Chicago, Ill. Miss Gray's fame was spread by Corporal Clark Kelly. The World War II practice of voting girls various titles is in full swing in Korea.

WANTS AMBASSADORSHIP . . . Miss Marie Geneau, assistant of senate sergeant at arms, made a two-month study of Haiti and asked for job as U.S. ambassador there when the present ambassador retires after 30 years service.

CAUGHT SHOPPING . . . James Dunbar stands still as a dummy in a haberdasher's window in Times Square, New York City, while patrolman encourages his immobility with a gun. Standing in left background (face hidden) is Leonard Brown, allegedly Dunbar's helper. Dunbar entered window through hole in glass to the right of the doorway, with the intention of passing out merchandise to Brown, but Patrolman Hayes ruined the act.

WILL PRESIDE . . . Mrs. John E. Hayes, Twin Falls, Idaho, president of the national congress of parents and teachers, will preside over the group's 55th annual convention, May 21-23 in the municipal auditorium, Miami.

THIRSTY LAND 5,000,000 Acres of Farm Lands Are Irrigated in Western U.S.

(This is the second of two articles on California's world-famous Central Valley irrigation project.)

The prime objective of the Central Valley project is an equalization of the fabulous agriculture empire's water resources between the surplus area of the north and the water-deficient southern two-thirds, providing for irrigation of more than one million acres of fertile farm lands.

Reclamation projects provide additional recreational features for thousands of Californians. Bass and trout fishing are especially good in Shasta Lake.

This is how it was worked out. Surplus waters of the northern valley are conserved behind Shasta dam on the upper Sacramento river, as well as Folsom dam, under construction on the American river, and released as needed downstream.

Star Dust STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

EMERIC PRESSBURGER, Michael Powell and Hein Heckroth might well have rested on their laurels when they finished "Red Shoes", but they went on to bigger and better things, by screening "Tales of Hoffman". The complete opera was filmed in beautiful sets designed by Mr. Heckroth, with a star-studded cast which includes stars of both opera and the Sadlers

HEIN HECKROTH

Wells ballet and chorus. Sir Thomas Beecham was the film's musical director. Mr. Pressburger says he thinks this is the only picture ever filmed around a sound track; the entire score was recorded and the action fitted to it, and never has sound been more successfully dubbed in. "Tales of Hoffman" should be seen by everyone who like exceptional films.

Harry Cohn, president of Columbia Pictures, said "This is the most important deal we have ever made", when Stanley Kramer signed on the dotted line to deliver 30 top bracket pictures during the next five years. In return he'll get $25,000,000. Kramer makes only successful pictures, the latest being "Cyrano de Bergerac", has 12 big properties on his list.

The board of directors of the Motion Picture Association has made some fine new rulings. "Neither the illegal drug traffic, nor drug addiction, must ever be presented"; suicide is to be discouraged unless absolutely necessary to the plot, and "There must be no scenes at any time showing law-enforcing officers dying at the hands of the criminals," unless the plot demands it.

Farmers Are Enjoying More Prosperity Than Ever

By Wright A. Patterson

THE FACTS AND FIGURES used in this column were provided by a national life insurance company.

As compared with the conditions of the mid-twenties and early thirties, those operating the 6,372,000 farms of to-day are following the sunny side of the farm prosperity road, thanks to a beneficent government. Farm mortgages are not now being foreclosed by the thousands each day or week, as was true of that time—mortgages representing farm purchases made at exorbitant prices for land. By last year, 1950, mortgage foreclosures were practically over. The farm had grown from an average size of 195 acres in 1900 to an average size of 395 acres in 1950, and the mortgage had dropped to an average of only $850 per farm, a mere 8 1/2 per cent of the value of the farm and its equipment.

That reduction of the farm mortgage represents but one evidence of farm prosperity. That average American farmer of 1950 was 49 years old. His 195 acres of land and his farm buildings were worth $10,000. His farm machinery and motor vehicles, with live stock and poultry to a value of $2,100, represent a total plant value for each of the 6,372,000 farms of $14,300.

For each farm there was produced in 1950 crops representing a cash value of $4,350, plus $350 worth of the products of each farm used by the farm

The water is picked up by the Delta Cross Channel and flows south to the Tracy Pumping Plant on the rim of Central Valley's western foothills. There the water is lifted 200 feet into the Delta-Mendota Canal, to flow another 120 miles south to Mendota pool in the San Joaquin river.

At this point the imported northern supply takes over the job formerly done by the San Joaquin river. By this exchange, San Joaquin waters can be retained behind Friant dam and diverted still further south by the 153-mile Friant-Kern Canal for irrigation use in the critically water-deficient areas along the east side of the San Joaquin valley as far down as Bakersfield.

At the Friant dam another canal moves water 37 miles north for irrigation purposes in Madera county.

The initial features of the project, which will be completed and in operation this July, will cost an estimated $400,000,000, of which 87 per cent will be repaid through sale of water and power developed by the project over a sixty year period. The remaining 13 per cent is charged to non-reimbursable items such as flood control.

ALTHOUGH THIS is a vast project, it is only one small part of the nation's reclamation program that has already proved to be a fruitful source of new wealth from the development of the west's great natural resources.

Reclamation opens new opportunities for people of this nation to build new farms, new homes, new industries and new business establishments in our best and oldest American tradition.

Today some 5,000,000 acres of arid and semiarid land are irrigated with crops produced on these lands averaging in excess of $500,000,000 per year in value.

Since the first reclamation project was started in 1903, the west has been provided with 95 dams with combined storage capacity of 82,780,000 acre-feet of water; 35 power plants with more than 3,000,000 kilowatts capacity; 16,000 miles of irrigation canals; 3,000 miles of electric transmission lines.

In return, reclamation projects have produced $500,000,000 worth of crops per year; $33,000,000 in power revenues; $2,000,000,000 in federal taxes between 1916 and 1949; and $1,500,000,000 which is spent in every section of the United States each year.

This is the brief story of this nation's attempt to bring water to thirsty land, a story that has been repeated in many sections of the world since before the time of Christ, but never on such a vast scale.

ROMANCE IN ELEVATOR

By Shirley Sargent

THE professor had been elevator starter in the six story Brent building ever since Tod Davis could remember. He clicked his castanets, guiding people into one or another elevator. Sometimes he said, "Car going up," or "Step in, please," but usually he just clicked his castanets and motioned.

Tod sidestepped the crowd going into the second car. Valerie operated elevator number three part time, helping to put herself through college. The professor winked and let Tod go in, but it wasn't any good. He was shoved into the corner opposite Valerie by eager shoppers.

Romance in an elevator, Tod thought wryly. Personal conversation, interrupted by calls of "Three, miss," and "Second, please," was nearly impossible, but Valerie managed it.

"Good morning, Mr. Davis," she said now, formally. "Why aren't you at college?"

"Too nice a morning to be cooped up," he said, watching her but conscious that every eye was on him. Everybody streamed out by the time they reached the top floor and only two nurses got in for the down ride. Quickly, he said, "I'm quitting school."

Valerie's expressions — anger chasing disappointment — told him how she felt. As people got on at the fourth floor level, all she could say was, "I'm afraid you're making a mistake." Tod had known Valerie would be stubborn. First floor and everybody out as a new stream crowded in. Just enough confused time for Tod to stop beside her. "It's that job," he said urgently, "I'll be making enough for us to be married on. Steady work."

As the elevator zoomed past the fourth floor he took her in his arms and proposed.

"So's running an elevator," she reported. "Why don't you talk to the professor?"

Tod leaned against the wall, watching the professor direct traffic. He couldn't see college for the $2.70 an hour he'd get working for a construction company. Balance the promise of an underpaid white collar job after two more years of college against that kind of money, and you didn't give a darn for education.

The castanets clicked, the professor's arm moved, people shuffled forward. Watching him, Tod was reminded of an automat. The professor was a fixture, performing the same gestures routinely. Habit and duty guiding him. Like a puppet, Tod thought, realizing why Valerie wanted him to talk to the professor.

With the elevators all in use, he turned to Tod. "How's college?"

"I'm quitting for a job at $2.70 an hour."

"So you can get married?"

"Valerie says she won't marry me unless I finish college."

"Smart girl," the professor said quietly, turning back to the impatient people, castanets clicking, arm waving.

In the next lull, the professor spoke hurriedly, "I took this job on temporarily 23 years ago, because I needed money to be married. I was going to teach, be a professor, but the children started coming and this was steady. Great job if you like herding sheep."

Tod watched the professor with sharpened awareness. Herding sheep. A steady job, but automatic. No thought, no chance for advancement. That's what Valerie had wanted him to see. Was Valerie afraid he'd end up like the professor?

Thoughtfully Tod boarded the third car, standing as close to Valerie as the pressure of the crowd would allow.

"I thought you had to work," she said coldly.

"I'm going back to college," he said, forgetting the people when he saw her eyes light up. They shot past the second floor without stopping. "Will you marry me right away?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," she said and the elevator zoomed past the fourth floor level as he took her in his arms. And the next thing they knew, the crowd was shouting, "Sixth floor, everybody out."

Pack dogs carry a load of about 35 pounds which is about one-half the weight of the animal. . . . Rotten birch or hardwood sawdust makes the sweetest smoke for smoke-curing fish. . . . With a gear-shift outboard motor it isn't necessary to let the clutch out before shifting gears, as in the case of an automobile; simply shove the gear-shift lever, but not at high speed. . . . It is said in Arizona that one "climbs for water and digs for wood—reason: the small annual precipitation of water collects in a few shady rock pools near the mountaintops and the best campfire wood is the root of the ironwood tree. . . . You may not believe it, but occasionally a doe deer is found wearing antlers. . . . A hiss in the woods may mean a wild turkey instead of a snake for, during hatching season, wild turkeys make a hissing sound in imitation of a snake as protection against disturbers seeking eggs—but, it's best to investigate from a position admitting of hasty retreat if it isn't a turkey! . . . The deer, one of the most cautious of animals, will often starve to death rather than move from the protection of a woods. . . . The fat man in a hurry might well take a note from the otter: His legs are so short that he is a slow uphill climber, but he makes up for lost time by sliding downhill on his belly. . . . Nobody knows how new-born eels find their way home from their foreign breeding places—but they do, as eels in American and European waters leave their streams and swim to the warm Atlantic waters where they produce their young and die, and the young eels go right back to the homes their parents left. . . . The minute plants and barely visible animals of the upper levels of the sea are known as plankton, of which the sardine is the most ingenious consumer as he catches them in a seine which nature has strung in his gills. . . . Bears hibernate because they are full and fat, not because the weather is cold or food is scarce. . . . The North American wolf is a fairly amiable "dog" in summer, when food is plentiful—but with the coming of winter snow, gales and cold log nights, the wolves travel in packs and are a menace to man and animals.

Beachcomber Enlisted

Uncle Sam's long arm has reached out and tapped upon the shoulder that epitome of carefree existence, the beachcomber, the Wildlife Management Institute reports.

Time was, not many years past, when a man could pick some quiet key and forget all about bureaucracy, Washington, and the outside world. But no more. As the man "on the beach" roams the sands in search of the day's new stock of flotsam and jetsam, he may stumble upon a small plastic container holding a postcard which tells him: "These cards are being used to study the currents of the Gulf of Mexico. Please remove the plastic and fill in blank spaces. Mail every card you find. No postage needed in the United States. In return you will be told the place of their release."

The cards, scattered by planes, are being employed by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to trace the pattern of shore currents in the Gulf in order to determine methods of controlling the "red tide," caused by an animal-like organism, which killed an estimated half billion fish off Florida a few years ago.

Life sure is getting complicated.

About 'Coons

'Coon skins once were standard measures of barter.

Early records are full of transactions by which all manner of articles were sold for standard numbers of pelts. The fur was made into hats and linings, the leather into women's shoes. The fat carcass, when rendered, provided a good grade of light lubricating oil. The flesh was, and of course is, a common dish, usually roasted.

It is commonly believed that a 'coon makes a very good pet and that it washes all its food. This is just about half true. If obtained when young, most 'coons do become tame as cats. Most of these stay tame for a year or so.

But after that, most become unpredictably vicious, no matter how gentle has been the owner's treatment.

The Lemur, a member of the same order as the monkey, gets its name for its nocturnal habits. Lemurs is Latin for "sprites that walk in the night."

Line Size

Because of the lack of standardization in casting lines, as well as in fly lines—that is in size and weight—the average angler may find himself confused at the poor performance of a given-test line when he has been led to believe that test line is the correct thing for his reel. For instance, we were having trouble with a 12-lb. test casting line. We changed to another line of 12-lb. test, but of smaller diameter, and casting ease increased.

To prevent unpleasant odors when boiling fish or shellfish, place a stalk of celery in the pan during cooking.

Bake your eggs in cream: add one to two tablespoons of thick cream for each individual baking dish; break in egg; bake slowly for 15 to 18 minutes.

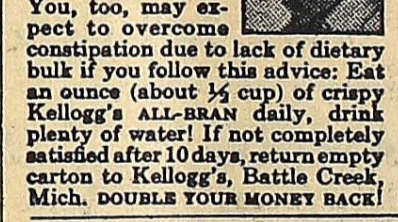

Poached eggs served on toasted buns or home-made biscuits are a nice variation of an old theme. Sausage patties or links, fried to crispness add appeal.

Give poached eggs a new pedestal. Dip round, shredded wheat biscuits in hot water quickly, just to soften. Drain, dot with butter and top with hot poached egg.

A new tropical leaf plant, called Florida spinach, is being grown. Reports say it far surpasses the European spinach that we have been accustomed to using.

4-H CLUB NOTES

The 4-H Club Reporter Says:
I made a visit to Gaylord last week for an Extension Conference. I had a chat with an old school chum named Al Hakola. Remember him? He was your 4-H Club Agent some years back. He still is promoting 4-H Club work. He was setting out contours for a 4-H Club Tractor Maintenance contest and enjoying every minute of it.
Sunday, April 29 is 4-H Club Sunday. May we suggest that all 4-H Club members, parents and leaders let this day be recognized by their presence in the Church of their choice? Be very glad you live in America.

The Hale 4-H Community Club met in the Hale Community Building Thursday evening April

12. The meeting was called to order by our president Leaberta Townsend. Faye Huber led the pledges to the American and the 4-H flags. Twelve members and a few leaders and parents were present. We talked over our May meetings schedule and decided to leave it our meetings to be from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. Mary Jane Douglass and Joan Bilby volunteered to give a demonstration on giving demonstrations.—Robert Douglass, reporter.

Nine young girls met at Mrs. M. Davenport's home last Thursday, April 12th to organize a 4-H Food Preparation Club.

Officers were elected as follows: President, Joanne Wendt; Vice-President, Janet Slaven; Secretary, Patsy Clements; Reporter, Martha Westcott.

We did this on Thursday after school April 12th and learned also how to set the breakfast table properly and also eat what we prepared. A little recreation was enjoyed and we all went home well satisfied with our new club and Mrs. Davenport, our leader.

Martha Westcott, reporter.

New 4-H dairy club members should not delay the purchase of heifers for their 1951 projects, advises Marvin Davenport, Iosco County 4-H Club Agent.

He advises that members get their heifers now. Don't wait until the last day on which new members may join to start looking for your heifer. It takes a lot of looking to select a suitable animal.

Word from Nevels Pearson, assistant state 4-H Club leader at Michigan State College, says it is best to secure a heifer out of good proved bull. The dam should have a production record of at least 400 pounds of butterfat. If you can see the heifer's dam, observe the shape of her udder. It should be well-shaped and strongly attached. Don't expect a heifer to have a desirable udder unless the dam has one, Pearson says. Judges pay much attention to udders in the production classes.

If possible, see as man of the close relatives of the heifer as possible. They should have good size, good breed character, dairy type, good feet and legs and good udder.

Unless the father of the club member is a good judge of dairy animals, it is well for the young person to seek advice when selecting the heifer.

Your heifer should be purchased from a healthy herd and be negative for Bangs disease. If the member's father practices calvehood vaccination the member may wish to have this done. It can be done between the ages of four and eight months.

Be sure you secure a copy of the vaccination record if the calf was vaccinated before purchase. Check also to make sure registration papers are completely and correctly filled out.

D.H.I.A. REPORT FOR MARCH

The 187 cows in the fifteen herds in the Iosco Dairy Herd Improvement Association averaged 780 pounds of milk with 28 pounds of butterfat. Clarence Carpenter, Supervisor, reports that the Julius Anderson and the William Heriman herds led the small herds with an average per cow of 952 pounds of milk and 33.5 pounds of fat and 932 pounds of milk and 32.7 pounds of fat respectively. Arthur Povish led the association with his 17 registered Holsteins which averaged 1142 pounds of milk and 40.1 pounds of fat. Will Waters herd of 11 cows were second in the association by producing 919 pounds of milk and 34 pounds of fat.

Most members were feeding a grain ration which amounted to about one half of their total feed costs. This practice has proven to be profitable as evidenced by a substantial return over feed costs. These good dairymen recognize the value of testing in that it gives them a basis for selecting their superior cows and culling out unprofitable cows. Testing is a part of their accounting system which shows them the value of their dairy enterprise and the weaknesses within their dairy herd. By these records they learn what practices are most profitable.

LANDSCAPING MEETING

Because of the many requests for help in landscaping the home grounds, Harold R. Clark, County Agricultural Agent has scheduled Joseph T. Cox, specialist in landscaping, of Michigan State College to give assistance to home owners. Mr. Cox will meet with individuals and help them with their specific landscaping problems.

He is suggesting that owners of new and old homes, supervisors of public buildings, such as schools, townships and city halls, lodge halls and churches and community and public parks bring in their proposed plans so that Mr. Cox may offer his recommendations.

Mr. Cox will be in the office of the Cooperative Extension Service in the Federal Building, East Tawas Wednesday and Thursday May 2 and 3. It will be necessary for those seeking council to have an appointment. The appointments should be made with Agent Clark by telephone or letter.

Mr. Cox will give an illustrated talk on landscaping in the evening of Wednesday, May 2, beginning at 8 p. m. This meeting will be held in the Federal Building

Although the completely automatic factory is still a dream of the future, more progress toward that goal was made in 1947 than in any of the preceding 100 years of the automatic controls industry, according to the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company.

"NOW DRIVING MY FIFTH DODGE!"

"My big 1951 Dodge is more than living up to the Dodge reputation for dependability, ruggedness and low cost of maintenance. It's the fifth dependable Dodge I've owned."
—says Geo. A. Hughes, Grosse Pointe Farms, Michigan

"I'VE PUT THE EQUIVALENT OF FOUR YEARS' DRIVING ON MY '50 DODGE!"

"As a salesman, my 1950 Dodge is always on the go. I figure that I have already put the equivalent of four years of out spending in my car's worth of money for repairs."
—says Harry H. Hurst, Houston, Texas

You could pay up to $1,000 more and still not get all the extra room, riding comfort and rugged dependability of Dodge

TAKE THE WORD OF OWNERS who know Dodge value and dependability from actual experience. "No major repairs in four years' driving"

"After driving another make less than a year, I'm back with Dodge again." "Driven my Dodge 150,000 miles and it's still going strong." These are not unusual comments in letters we receive from Dodge owners coast-to-coast.

Dodge dependability starts with a heavy, rugged frame, a "Get-Away" engine "speed-proofed" to resist wear, designed to be a miser on gas.

There's a safe, rigid, all-steel body, rubber-mounted to eliminate rattle and squeak.

TO MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CUSTOMERS:

Notice of Application to the Michigan Public Service Commission by the Michigan Bell Telephone Company
For Authority to Make Effective Certain Schedules of Rates, Rentals, and Charges

Higher costs inevitably mean higher prices, and the cost of furnishing your telephone service keeps on going up. As the result of wage increases for our employees last November, greater taxes, and the higher costs of services and materials, the rates authorized by the Commission last June are now insufficient to cover our needs. For that reason we shall apply to the Michigan Public Service Commission on May 14, 1951 for authority to apply the proposed rates shown below, and ask the Commission to set a date for a hearing on our request.

EXCHANGE RATES (Excluding Federal Tax)

For rate purposes, exchanges are divided into groups according to the total number of telephones that can be reached without a toll charge. The present grouping is based on the number of telephones in service in each exchange or zone on September 30, 1948. The proposed rates are based on the number of telephones on December 31, 1950.

Let's see what it means to own a ROADMASTER.

It means, first of all, that you're a shrewd judge of fine manufacture. Nowhere will you find a mechanism more skillfully fitted part to part with scrupulous precision—engineered to stricter standards of fine-car quality—than the deep-framed and durable ROADMASTER chassis.

It means, also, that you possess keen appreciation of everything that makes for unsurpassed performance.

For there's more to this dazzling beauty than its thrilling take-off. There's the surplus of power that you need to make you the master of busy traffic or open road—plus the velvet magic of Dynaflow Drive (at no extra cost, mind you).

There's the level-going luxury of ample roadweight buoyantly balanced on coil springs on every wheel—and the security of brakes specifically engineered for firm control of this great-powered beauty.

Time In HENRY J. TAYLOR, ABC Network, every Monday evening.

When better automobiles are built Buick will build them

But there's still another distinction to being a ROADMASTER owner.

It marks you as one who buys wisely and well. Size for size, pound for pound, feature for feature, few cars can even approach what your dollars will buy in this finest of Buicks.

There's much more to be discovered by a visit to any Buick dealer's showroom.

There's the sumptuous softness of cushions, the custom excellence of fabrics and interior trim, the grace and charm of every line and contour.

So if you've dreamed of sometime owning a car superbly fine, there's no time like the present—and no car like ROADMASTER for making dreams come true.

OUTLAW GUNS BY E. E. HALLERAN

THE STORY SO FAR:
Frazer, Helen Bartell and Wenslow, having deceived Gontales, a Mexican agent, as to the location of the munitions cache, make the painful trek to The Little Bear copper mine where the guns and ammunition are hidden. There they meet the caretaker, Rafferty. They are discovered by scouts from Candino's bandit army and know that it is just a matter of time until Candino's entire force descends upon them in an effort to get the guns and powder stored in the mine. They complete hasty preparations for a defense just as the bandits arrive for the attack. The outlaw band greatly outnumber the defenders of the mine.

CHAPTER XVIII

He lined his sights deliberately on the foremost rider and squeezed the trigger. The man went down in a rolling tangle of arms and legs, but Frazer knew only a momentary thrill of savage satisfaction. There was no time for gloating now; the battle was reaching a desperation stage. He jacked in another shell and drew fire once more, this time all too aware that his targets were getting uncomfortably large. The realization made the next clean hit a matter of no pleasure whatsoever.

He fired twice more, getting a bandit with each bullet, but as he levered a fifth shell he caught a glimpse of Rafferty coming over the ragged parapet. The dirty... Leaving Helen to come up last!

For a split second he was tempted to desert his post and rush for the rope, but reason caught up with him in time. He forced himself to sight carefully in spite of the anger that had welled up within him. Another shot and another fallen outlaw. Then he grabbed for a fresh rifle. There was no keeping account of shots at a time like this. Better to make sure something would happen with every pull of the trigger.

The movement gave him a chance to see what was happening beside him. Rafferty and Wenslow were hauling the rope up. So that was it! The mine guard had been playing it the smart way. He had come up first so he could help haul the girl bodily out of danger.

Emil Kranz Appears Among the Attackers

The rifle fire was a steady crackle now, but the charge had spent itself. The raiders had dashed in, taking their losses, only to find themselves barked of their prey and subjected to a withering fire from the guns on the ledge. Meanwhile the dismounted riflemen were too far away to be effective and the mounted bandits were still falling.

The wavering became a halt and the halt became a wild retreat, but still Frazer did not cease firing. It was no time to give an enemy a break. With a bandit army out there in the gorge the only thing to do was to cut the odds while the opportunity presented itself. Every dead outlaw was one less threat for the future.

"I reckon we'll have a minute to rest," Rafferty grunted with a satisfied grin. "Mister Bandit Candino just got hisself a danged good lesson. Them buckos are kinda like Sioux; they're tough fighters when they kin git the other feller on the run, but they don't know what to do when the other party turns out to be a standpater."

"How many in that mob, Wenslow?" Frazer asked. "What's your guess? A hundred?"

"Somewhere in that neighborhood," the little man replied. "We shore picked off a lot of 'em, but there's still too dam' many to suit me."

Ten minutes passed in uncomfortable silence and then Wenslow reported, "Four men ridin' toward us. Look like one of 'em is wavin' his shirt-tail."

Frazer twisted himself uncomfortably around to look. Four riders were coming up the gulch, one of them bearing a dirty rag fastened to a gun barrel. "Flag of truce," he muttered, half to himself. "This makes us a real army, I suppose."

"They want to remove the wounded, I think," Helen said with determined calm.

"Looks like it," Frazer's reply was mechanical, his mind more on what he saw than what the girl was saying. Back of the advancing riders he was able to study the main-body of outlaws for the first time. Even at the distance he could tell that many of them were almost unarmed. Those few riflemen who had attempted to cover the first attack seemed to be almost the only bandits with efficient firearms. Many had only pistols—if they had even those—and the remainder carried what looked like many varieties of old muskets.

"Shove out the extra rifles so it'll look like a lot of us up here," he ordered. "When they start to talk move around a bit. If this is going to be a bluffing contest we'll try to hold up our end of the game."

"What makes you think they're bluffin'?" Wenslow asked.

"Look 'em over. They need guns. They've decided that they can't just gallop in and take what they need, so they'll try something else. I don't think they've got enough well armed men to venture a full scale attack."

The flag bearer pulled aside and one of the other men stepped forward. He was a big man, and Frazer knew him in spite of the huge sombrero which almost hid his face. Emil Kranz, soldier of fortune, had appeared in his proper niche at last.

The big German did not try to disguise his voice. "Hello," he yelled boldly. "Who is in charge here?"

Rafferty stood up, his rifle held ready. "What d'ye want now?" he bellowed. "Come a step nearer and I'm goin' to forget about that dirty scrub rag y've got."

"Don't be foolish, my friend. I offer you good terms. Leave this valley, and we permit you to go in safety."

"No dice."

"Think again. We far outnumber you. You cannot hope to win."

Rafferty's reply was a single word. "No."

"I offer you a half hour," Kranz shouted persistently. "If you leave within that time you will not be harmed. If you do not go I cannot be responsible for the tempers of these men. Already they have a grudge to score off. You have killed many of their comrades."

"Git outta this valley in ten minutes, and we won't shoot no more o' yer dear comrades."

"We'll make you an offer," Rafferty shouted back. "Git outta this valley in ten minutes, and we won't shoot no more o' yer dear comrades."

"You are foolish. You can't..."

"I'm countin' time already. Pick up yer wounded and git!"

This time the German seemed to recognize the finality in the order. He turned to say something to his companions and Rafferty bawled a last order. "Don't try to pick up no guns, neither. The first hombre what forgets his business gets shot. Hustle it up!"

Bandits Carry On The Wearing Battle

The quartette on the ledge watched over gunshots as the four riders separated. Frazer, concentrating his attention on Kranz, grimly hoping that the blond man would try something out of line. He stole a quick glance at Helen and saw that she was white and tense. In the excitement of battle she had been a mighty good soldier, but now the inevitable reaction was setting in.

"Watch those riflemen," Frazer advised, more to divert her thoughts than for any other reason. "They'll make the next attempt to get us, I feel sure. See what they're up to and how many of them are preparing for action."

"Indian tactics now," Frazer guessed. "They'll try to come up the sides of the gulch and snipe at us from cover. How about their chance of getting above us, Rafferty? Can they do it?"

The mine guard shook his head. "Too steep and rocky. If they git above they'll be outa sight o' this ledge. Looks like the bad place is that shoulder o' rock over there. Somebody better keep it in sight all the time."

It was a wearing business, however, dragging on well into the late afternoon. Then the bandits seemed to get some sort of signal, for they withdrew abruptly and could be seen filtering out of the wooded areas to join the main force in the lower canyon. It was then that Helen said calmly, "I think we may be due for some help. Just after this business started I saw four riders up there to the north. They climbed out of sight on the ridge, and it seemed to me that they might be circling to get behind the bandits."

"Only four?" Frazer asked. "Not enough."

"Four could be the scouts for a large force."

"I hope so—but I don't think we can count on any help today. We've got to worry through the night on our own."

Almost as he spoke there was the spatter of fire from the lower gulch. It brought confusion to the ranks of the Candino men, although it was of short duration. Bandits charged up the slopes of the east ridge and for some minutes there was an occasional shot. Then everything was silent again.

"I don't like it," Frazer said soberly. "I'm afraid some of our friends tried to help us—and they didn't have enough of a force to do themselves or us any good."

Helen's voice was low but steady as she remarked, "I had an idea that I knew two of the riders I mentioned. They were my father and Ed Delaplaine."

The early hours of darkness brought an overpowering sense of strain to the four silent people on the ledge. They were listening for those ominous sounds which might herald a final battle. At the same time there was silent wonder in each mind on the subject of that brief skirmish down the gulch. Not that any of them felt optimistic.

Rather the contrary. No small scale attack would have been made on Candino's camp if any real forces were on their way. The main fight was still to be fought by three men and a girl against an overwhelmingly superior force of bandits.

Attackers Rush Again For Mine Shaft Mouth

Presently Rafferty broke the silence to ask abruptly, "Got everything ready, Miss Helen?"

"Everything ready," she replied.

"What's this?" Frazer asked.

"You two aren't planning any more crazy trips down the rope, are you?"

"Nothing like that," Helen assured him. "You lie quiet and don't irritate what any more than is necessary. We'll take care of this matter."

He stifled his curiosity, largely because he knew that it was unwise to talk now. Silence and watchfulness would have to be the watchword until after the storm broke. After that...

It was nearly midnight before the weary listeners caught the first telltale sound of a careless foot. Instantly there was a rustle of movement on the ledge as the tired defenders braced themselves for battle. The night was dead calm and the moon was beginning to lighten the gloom of the gulch as it peeked into view above the hills. The bandits had timed their advance badly, perhaps in the hope that the hours would take their toll of defense alertness.

Frazer kept his attention on the ground at the base of the rock wall, and presently he saw a full dozen shadows moving toward him. Out in the gulch a scrape of a boot heel indicated that other men were advancing there. Apparently the bandits were figuring to reach close quarters and try to overwhelm the defense by sheer force of numbers.

Either that or they hoped one force could neutralize the defensive fire while another party raided the arms cache.

Wenslow muttered something but Frazer did not look around, concentrating on the problem of seeing a vague shadow over the sights of a rifle. Presently he thought he had a man lined up, so he pulled the trigger. The shot set off the fireworks.

From all parts of the valley guns opened up as the bandits tried to beat the defenders down under sheer weight of lead. Some of them were close enough to use revolvers now, and they had the flashes of the guns on the ledge as targets.

"Keep as low as you can," Frazer shouted above the din. "They'll fire at the gun flashes. Don't waste a bullet."

No one replied and the eerie battle went on, becoming a sort of costly sniping at shadows after that first intense volume of fire. Twice Frazer could see the wild rush of men for the mouth of the mine shaft, but each time the rush was beaten back by a deadly fire from the ledge.

After the second attempt there was a lull and the attackers seemed to withdraw down the gulch.

"Anybody hurt?" Wenslow demanded, still assuming the role of official worrier. "I got a nick on one ear, but it ain't more'n a bee sting."

No one else reported a wound, and they settled down to wait once more. This time the wait was not so long. Within a half hour they could hear stealthy movements on the far side of the little valley, and Frazer spoke warningly. "They're sending a detachment up the gulch. That means they must plan to rush in from that side under cover of the next attack. Can you keep your eyes skinned in that direction, Helen?"

"I'll watch them," the girl answered tersely.

Land of Promise

Lesson for April 29, 1951

A NATION must have a home. Gypsies are not properly called a nation because their only home is where their wagons make a camp. Professors of political science tell us that among other necessities, a nation has to have a definite and defensible territory.

But the ancient Israelites did not need a professor to tell them that much. They knew it very well. When they came out of Egypt they could call their clothes and their tents and their stock their own; but nothing else. Even when Moses had given them laws and religion and an army and an organization, they were still not a nation, for they had no land of their own under their feet.

No Welcoming Committee
SO IT was that what those people looked forward to, for forty years, was the "Land of Promise," where Abraham had pitched his tent, where these Israelites' forefathers had worshipped God.

But their ancestors had owned very little of the land. Abraham owned just enough for a burial plot; Jacob owned a tract which, so far as we know, he never occupied. Yet it was a good land, so good that others, long before Abraham, had settled there.

It has no unsettled wilderness; it was dotted with high-walled, thickly populated, strongly defended towns. There were no "welcome" signs on the highways. All the cities of Palestine were united by one common hate for the invading Israelites.

Two Centuries of War
SOME of our hymns give a wrong impression of Canaan, the Land of Promise. In some of our hymns this life is compared to the wilderness in which the Israelites lived for forty years, the river Jordan is a symbol of death, and Canaan means heaven ("Canaan's happy shore").

Well, Canaan was not a happy shore. It was a bloody battlefield for centuries. For the Israelites did not occupy the land all at once. Their fight was not won right away, it was not won in a generation. We do not know for certain the date of Joshua, but a date favored by many scholars is in the 13th century before Christ. The "Land of Promise" was not fully and securely in the Israelites' hands until the tenth century.

The whole story, or such parts of it as we find in the books of Joshua and Judges, shows that it was a long struggle, a weary succession of more or less continual wars, climaxed in the final conquests of the fighting king David.

Some Victories Are Deserved
DURING those wars, many cruelties were practiced by both sides. If there had been a United Nations at that time, they would certainly have condemned the Israelites for aggression and for war crimes besides.

We may as well admit that the Israelites did not act in line with the Sermon on the Mount. How could they? They had never heard of it. The fact remains that if you, an impartial, invisible observer, had looked down from the sky at all the long struggle the Israelites had to put up to win a homeland, and if you had been asked: Which will win, the Israelites or the Canaanites? there were times when you would hardly have dared to make a prediction.

But if you had been asked: Which side deserves to win? You would surely have said, The Israelites.

God Saw the Future
ANY one who could have foreseen the future both of Israel and the tribes with whom they fought for centuries, would certainly have hoped for Israel's victory.

Comparing all that Israel would mean to mankind, directly and indirectly, with all that would come from their enemies, you would have voted for the Israelites without hesitation. If for no other reason, the Israelites deserved to win because of their religion.

If you can imagine what might have been the sinister results if Israel had been destroyed, and with them all knowledge of the one and holy God, you can see how God could not afford to let His people lose.

Dan Cupid Loses Out as a Cause For Jobless Pay

CHICAGO, Ill.—Dan Cupid takes a beating whenever he runs into unemployment compensation laws. He is not considered "good cause for leaving a job," a requirement for jobless pay in most states, according to a commerce clearing house survey.

"When a person quits a job to be married, or to be near a spouse or fiancé, that person is deemed to be withdrawing from the labor market and, therefore, is subject to the disqualification provisions of most unemployment compensation laws," says the CCH report, published in its labor law journal.

Recent examples of head-on crashes between Cupid and the compensation boards are cited in the survey.

Claim Is Denied
A Pennsylvania woman quit her job to be married and moved to another state. The state supreme court held that her act was voluntary and added, gloomily, "Marriage is not a surrender to circumstances of the kind and quality that compel a decision to leave one's employment... no legal obligation rests upon a claimant to marry or join her fiancé."

Cupid did a little better in Illinois, but the claimant did not. In this case a married man lost his job in a city and went to live with his parents in a small town. His wife quit her job and went with him. The circuit court, more sympathetic than that of Pennsylvania, held that she had left with good cause. This was an empty victory, however, since the court added that she was not eligible for benefits anyway. She had left a large labor market for one with very limited possibilities for employment.

In far-off Hawaii, a radio announcer's wife left him and returned to the mainland with the intention of getting a divorce. He quit work to follow her and try to talk her out of it. The ruling was that while he may have left for "good cause," it had nothing to do with his employment. He received no benefits.

Married Women Lose
Married women have not fared very well, either, in cases where they wanted to spend more time with their husbands. One woman told a prospective employer that her husband was a municipal fireman who got his time off in forty-eight-hour stretches, and on those days she would not be able to work. The employer did not hire her, and the holding was that she had refused work without good cause.

Another woman whose husband's workday ended at 7 p.m., quit after the first day on a job where she started work at 3 p.m. Her claim was disallowed when it was shown that she knew about the hours before she accepted the job.

"While it is undoubtedly true that love will find a way," says commerce clearing house, "on the record it does not seem that the unemployment compensation laws will be helpful."

Emperor's New Car Reflects Japan's Foreign Leanings

TOKYO, Japan — Emperor Hirohito of Japan has a new automobile. Observers report it is a true indication of the international leanings of that country.

They figure it this way. During the early days of his reign, the son of heaven rode around in an English Rolls-Royce, reflecting the pro-British tendencies of the day.

While the Tokyo-Berlin axis was in gear, the emperor bought himself a maroon Mercedes-Benz. The five-ton German sedan had bullet-proof window glass and a thick body of steel plating specially designed following the "Sakurada incident"—when a fanatic attempted to assassinate the emperor.

Now, after months of high pressure salesmanship by American car manufacturers, the imperial household has bought a gray Cadillac complete with heater, radio and push button windows. On his first ride around town, spotters reported observing the emperor happily manipulating the automatic windows.

Modern Pied Piper 'Leads' Children to Safety With Jig

HOLBROOK, Mass. — A modern pied piper played an Irish jig and led four children out of the woods near Holbrook recently.

The children, cold and wet, were huddled in sleep beside a boulder when the sound of the jig awoke them. Thinking it was a parade, they began to walk toward the music.

The jig emanated from a public address system atop a police car. An officer had been driving on a road near the woods, calling the youngsters names from the PA system. He picked up a broadcast on his radio and switched it into the loudspeaker.

When only a few drops lemon juice are needed, puncture the skin of the lemon with a fork and gently squeeze out the amount of juice needed. This eliminates the waste that occurs when a lemon is cut, as it keeps the remaining lemon juice fresh.

When eggs are scarce, a medium-sized grated raw potato may be substituted for the egg usually used in a meat loaf. The potato will bind the mixture together just as the egg does.

Leftover vegetables can be perked up if they're served with browned butter to which a few bread crumbs have been added.

HADACOL BRINGS RELIEF TO FOLKS SUFFERING STOMACH DISTRESS

Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn, Bloating When Due To Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin Deficiencies

Cay H. Housler, 641 14th St., San Diego, Calif.: "I am 40 years of age and have had a nervous stomach condition for quite some time. Couldn't eat hardly anything. Back in my home town, I bought a bottle of HADACOL and before the first bottle was gone, I could tell a difference. Then I came to San Diego and couldn't get it here. I sent back to Atlanta for it. Now, thank God, they have it on the market here and I have a supply in my house. Not only that, but I'm telling all my friends what HADACOL has done for me. I sleep well, eat anything I can get and feel wonderful. I could go on and on praising HADACOL, it's done so much for me."

Here is Wonderful News For You Folks Who Suffer From Stomach disturbances (indigestion, gas, heartburn, "sour risings" after meals) because your system lacks Vitamins B1, B2, Niacin and Iron, important elements contained in HADACOL. With today's great HADACOL you can actually relieve the cause of such stomach disturbances caused by these deficiencies. A marked improvement is often noticed within a few days' time. And continued use of HADACOL not only gives continuous relief, but helps prevent such distress from coming back. That's the kind of product you want--the kind you should buy--the kind you should start taking now. Anyone would be very foolish indeed to be satisfied with symptomatic relief, when HADACOL makes it possible to relieve the cause of this stomach distress due to such deficiencies. Know the joy of eating the foods you like without suffering gas pains, heartburn and indigestion afterward!

Mrs. W. H. Morton, Route 1, Murfreesboro, Tenn.: "HADACOL has helped me so much I feel I have to write about it. Before I started taking HADACOL, I had a very nervous stomach and couldn't eat. So I heard about HADACOL. I got a bottle to try and began to feel better and could eat anything I wanted. I feel so much better now. I am always telling my friends how HADACOL has helped me. And I just can't think of enough to say about HADACOL and what it has done for me. I am 28 years old and a steady user of HADACOL. I have been taking HADACOL for about a year."

Mrs. Minnie McCormick, Rt. 1, Wedowee, Ala.: "I am glad to tell what HADACOL has done for me. After taking one bottle of HADACOL, I went to work in the field, chopping cotton, doing all my housework, milking, washing and ironing. I have taken several bottles of HADACOL, now. I can't ever praise HADACOL enough to cover all it has done for me when I had no appetite at all. Now I eat anything and have a good appetite and nothing bothers me. I never do without HADACOL now. My friends noticed my change, and now they are also HADACOL users, too. My 77-year-old daddy uses HADACOL. I want to say thanks to HADACOL and to the makers of HADACOL."

How HADACOL Works HADACOL not only supplies weak, run-down, deficient systems with extra quantities of Vitamins B1, B2, Iron and Niacin but also beneficial amounts of Calcium and Phosphorus--elements so necessary to help maintain good health. And these Vitamins and Minerals come in special liquid form so that they can be easily and quickly absorbed and assimilated in the blood--ready to go right to work at once. HADACOL helps build up the hemoglobin content of your blood (when Iron is needed) to carry these elements throughout your body. Start taking HADACOL at once. HADACOL costs only a small amount a day. Trial size bottle, $1.25. Large family economy size, $3.50. Sold on a strict money-back guarantee. If your dealer does not sell HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana.

Mrs. John A. Feight, Jr., of Route 1, Bedford, Pennsylvania: "Anything Late made my stomach ache and churn all night. My food never seemed to get digested and therefore I would wake frequently in the night with pains. I would be nervous and think over the day's nerve-racking experiences. Every little thing irritated me. I couldn't stand children around me. They made me nervous. I would holler at my two-year-old daughter, Vickie, for nothing at all. Since taking HADACOL all my nausea and nervousness have passed away. All I can say for HADACOL is that it's made me see that this is a beautiful world after all. I'm 20 years old and am a housewife. I really do feel as great as I look in the photograph."

Clean-Up Week Starts May 30

Harold R. Clark, county agricultural agent, announced yesterday that a County Clean-Up Week would be held the week beginning May 30 throughout the rural section of the county. He urges everyone to participate.

School children have been enlisted in the campaign and each homeowner will make a check up of his premises. The slogan of the campaign is "Clean Up, or Burn Up."

Endorsed by the U S Department of Agricultural and the State Agricultural Extension Services, the NFPA program this year emphasizes the theme that Food is Ammunition. The nation can ill afford avoidable farm fire losses, says the NFPA, at a time when food reserves must be built up.

Participation in the Clean-Up drive calls for removal of paper and other combustible materials accumulated in homes and farm buildings, together with careful inspection of buildings and equipment to uncover hidden fire hazards. Repairs and replacements are urged where necessary for fire safety.
