150 Attend Plainfield Conservation Program

One-hundred fifty attended the pot luck supper and moving pictures given by the Plainfield Conservation Association.

Ivan Jones of Flynn Valley showed movies of deer taken on his Alcona ranch.

Mr. Jones believes that the answer to our deer starvation problem is planting Balboa rye. The rye furnishes food in the late fall, which allows the deer to go into winter with a storage of fat in the tissues. The rye provides pasture for the deer much earlier than other seed which has been tried.

The Plainfield Conservation Association has sponsored such projects as bird house building, seed planting, protecting spawning pike, registration of cabins giving winter inspection to out of town owners.

The club's membership has doubled in the past year. The club is affiliated with the M.U.C.C.

Industrial Realtors to be Guests Here

Dinner and Program Will be Held Saturday At Barnes Hotel

At the invitation of City officials and the Tawas Chamber of Commerce, the Michigan Chapter, Society of Industrial Realtors, will tour Northeast Michigan on Friday and Saturday, August 17th and 18th.

It is expected that Tawas will be host to some 18 leading industrial realtors from the Detroit area. Coming from Alpena they will arrive here about 3:30 Saturday afternoon to make a tour of Tawas Industries. At 6:30 p.m. there will be a dinner and program for the visiting realtors at the Barnes Hotel.

Harold McClure, President of the Michigan Chapter, said, "This tour invitation was received with great enthusiasm by our members as they desire to become better acquainted with the Huron Shore country, its natural resources, industrial sites and scenic beauty. We are continually getting more requests from clients who want to locate in smaller cities and need the resources you have in Northeast Michigan. I want to thank you for your kind invitation, we will be able to serve you much more efficiently after our trip to your area."

The interest shown by these realtors would seem to substantiate the fact that there is very little industrial land available in the Detroit area. Industry is also interested in the loyalty of our workers and the increase in man-hour production shown by northern located industries.

Tawas City Team Loses to Hale

Melita Will Play Here This Sunday

Hale ended Tawas City's two game winning streak Sunday, when they blasted the locals 6 to 3 due to a three run out-burst in the seventh inning. Both teams played on even terms for the first seven innings, with both teams scoring two runs, but in the seventh Hale collected three hits and took advantage of two Tawas errors to cross the home platter three times. This was the second win of the season over Tawas City by Hale.

Perry Shellenbarger was on the mound for Hale and posted the win. He allowed seven hits, struck out two, walked two and hit one batsman. Look started on the mound for the locals and was nicked for six hits during his six innings on the mound. Warner took over in the seventh, with Tawas leading 3 to 2, having broken a tie in their half of the seventh. He was greeted by a two base hit by P. Shellenbarger and a single by Clement tying up the contest. Hale went on to win the game in the same inning by scoring two more times.

R. Humphrey, P. Shellenbarger, Clement and A. Shellenbarger led Hale in their eleven hit attack with two each.

Wegner, Warner and Musolf each had two hits in a losing cause. In the fielding end, Tawas fared better as far as the total is concerned, committing four errors to Hale's five, but three of their misplays figured in the oppositions scoring.

TO THE PEOPLE OF IOSCO COUNTY

The Sheriff Department of Isoco County reports that enforcement officers have numerous complaints, especially in the Tawas area, of vandalism committed by juveniles shooting out windows with air rifles, or breaking them out with stones. Also reports of .22 cal. rifles being used on small game, and used in a manner that endanger human life. The co-operation of parents is solicited and will be appreciated if they will try to help enforcement officers halt this destruction.

The Sheriff Department also report that that the dog situation has been somewhat better this year than former years, it can still be improved upon by dog owners. During the past month about 50 dogs have been picked up by the dog warden, and the Sheriff Dept., and not claimed by anyone. We believe that a large number of these were abandoned by summer tourists while they were up here on vacations. Special emphasis is put on the fact of rabies at this time of the year.

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round BY...DREW PEARSON

Korean Peace Talks Develop Slowly; Control Bill Viewed With Cynicism

THE PEACE FRONT—As expected the Korean peace talks have developed slowly. The shooting war in that bloody country may not end for weeks, if then. And it will be years before a feeling of security develops among the South Korean people.

As things stand now, the Allies and Reds are at loggerheads over several questions. The main one, however, is the establishment of a cease-fire buffer zone. The Reds want it established along the 38th parallel. The Allies want it along present battle lines.

U. N. Delegate

Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy is chief U. N. delegate to the Kaesong peace talks. He receives his instructions from Gen. Matthew Ridgway, U. N. commander in the far east.

The Allies contend: (1) The present positions, based on ridges, are more defensible militarily than the 38th parallel; (2) The parallel is where the Red invasion began June 25, 1950. It is viewed in many quarters as a symbol of U. N. defeat, and a settlement along that line is bitterly opposed by the South Korean government.

It may be that some sort of compromise can be worked out on the question, but not without long and exhausting talks.

Meanwhile, the Reds have resorted to their old tricks of injecting political issues into the discussions. The Reds have complained of Allied air and naval power and of the bombing of peaceful Korean villages—a long-familiar Red propaganda twist for air strikes.

THE FIGHTING FRONT—And while the high brass talks of peace, United Nations troops continue to fight and die in Korea. Artillery rumbles, U. N. troops probe at Red lines, and the Reds made counter thrusts.

The U. S. army reported the Communists have staged a tremendous build-up of armed forces since the cease-fire talks began and pointedly expressed hope this was not a sign of bad faith.

Here again is evidence of Communist thinking and policy. Hanging on the ropes when the peace talks started, the Reds took full advantage of U. N. let-up in attack, to show good faith during the talks, to build up their own military forces and supplies.

The Communists have moved more supplies near the front lines than needed to maintain troops while the talks are underway. In addition, they have moved new units and thousands of individual replacements south into the battle lines.

THE EUROPEAN FRONT—While there were talks of peace in the far east, the free nations prepared to meet aggression in Europe.

New plans for defense were announced by George C. Marshall, secretary of defense, when he told congress the administration now plans to have 400,000 U. S. troops in Europe in 1952—nearly double the number previously estimated.

He also disclosed that U. S. allies have promised to have 2,500,000 men under arms next year and to be able to put five million men into the field within 90 days after the outbreak of any new war.

Marshall argued against any let-down in American defensive spirit resulting from the Korean armistice talks and against any congressional cuts in U. S. military aid to western Europe. He said he was deeply shocked at what he termed the "tragic" reaction of the American people now that peace appears in prospect in Korea.

PRICE CONTROLS—Confusion and cynicism seems the only way to describe the average home town's reaction to the price control bill which congress has enacted. The confusion stems from the fact that few congressmen, if any, can give a complete and adequate description of how the law will work. The cynicism stems, in great part, from the belief that the debate on the issue was clarified on the record more for future political effect than for the purpose of purifying the issues.

The bill permits some rollbacks on nonfarm goods and opens the way for some increases. It extends wage, credit, rent, and other emergency controls through next June. But controls are eased in a number of ways and the President got none of the additional authority he asked.

The United Labor Policy Committee, made up of most big organized labor groups, immediately denounced the bill. The committee termed the bill "a callous betrayal of the consumers of the nation by the reactionary coalition which rules congress."

Administration leaders contend it is short of what is needed to combat inflation. Republicans say it is a good bill, if administered properly.

Communist Round-Up

Behind bars are the four ranking Los Angeles Communists who were rounded up by the FBI last week. They are shown as they confer with their attorney, Ben Margolis (second from left).

50 MILLIONTH ELGIN—Every science has its milestones. In horology, the science of watchmaking, the first milestone occurred almost 450 years ago at Nuremberg, Germany. A clockmaker there found means of compressing the parts of a timepiece into a sturdy and compact mechanism. The Nuremberg "egg," crude and clumsy by modern standards, was the world's first watch—so called because it was carried by night watchmen.

Next month the city of Elgin, Ill., which boasts it is the town "made famous by time," will help its ill-used industry celebrate another horological milestone. Scheduled for completion then is the 50 millionth timepiece to be made at Elgin—more jeweled watches than any other manufacturer in the world has yet produced.

Significantly, the 50 millionth watch is claimed to incorporate every major technical achievement since horology was a pup. In stark contrast with the first bulky pocket watch made in the same city 84 years ago, it will be only one-tenth as large, yet will be a better timekeeper.

THE VICIOUS RACKET—Federal agents last week broke up the biggest narcotics ring in the nation's history. Narcotic agents reported the arrest of 10 "salesmen" for the $30,000,000 heroin-smuggling ring. The agents also got $100,000 in counterfeit money.

The ring is believed to have smuggled as much as 50 pounds of heroin into the United States each month. It has been operating since 1949.

MORE MEAT

Cattle, Swine Crop Is Near Record

By January 1, 1952, the number of cattle and swine on the nation's farms will be near a record peak, according to a recent survey.

The country's beef-cattle may total 65,400,000. This would be 5,800,000 more than on January 1, 1951, and 7,600,000 more than at the wartime peak of 1945. This does not include dairy cattle, a source of veal and processed meats.

With this rise in beef cattle, all cattle would increase from the 80 million level of 1950 and the 84,200,000 level of 1951 to about 90 million.

The 1951 pig crop, which will hit the market in September, is estimated the second highest in the nation's history. The department of agriculture estimates that a total crop of nearly 106 million pigs is indicated for the year.

REDS PLAY HOST... Two North Korean soldiers haul a case of beer across the courtyard in Kaesong as the Communists played host to allied delegates at the Truce conference. The talks on a cease-fire agenda for the Korean war were in recess at the time until the Reds could get advice from Peiping. The Communists finally acceded on their demand for removal of all foreign troops in Korea.

PLEA ON CONTROLS... In Washington, D. C., Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston declares emphatically that the house of representatives in its action on controls legislation this far has kicked the American people in the teeth and in the pocketbook, as well as the stomach. Johnston told newsmen that congress has passed proposals which would make completely unworkable any plans for controlling living costs.

INTERNATIONAL CAMP... Leis of welcome are offered by Kiyoko Castroverde of Hawaii to Marilyn Stewart, Oswego, Ore., and by Joyko Yamanouchi, Tokyo, Japan. These girls are delegates to the international Girl Scout encampment at Home Valley, Wash. There are 96 Girl Guides and Girl Scouts here from 14 countries and territories. The encampment is pioneer in style with all the girls living in tents and cooking their meals over open fires.

ENLISTED MEN FRATERNIZE... While United Nations and Communist armistice delegates disagreed over a demarcation line in Korea in their cease-fire negotiations, two soldiers of opposing sides get together for a little by-play. On the road to Kaesong, Cpl. Early F. McIntosh, Brooklyn, general headquarters photographer, receives a Chinese Mao Tze-Tung emblem from a Chinese Communist soldier. The ceremony was performed in mock seriousness.

COSTELLO IN CONTEMPT... Frank Costello arrives at federal court house, New York City, after indictment on charges of contempt of the U. S. senate. Charges stem from his refusal to answer questions by senate crime committee.

HUSBANDS NOTICE!... Writer Rebecca Reyher, back from Africa, says man doesn't pay enough attention to his wife. She cites as example a chief who took 104 wives, but lost 51 of them because they became lonely.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON BY WALTER SHEARD, WNU Correspondent

Irresponsible Congress

THE irresponsible antics of this congress in both house and senate would indicate that some members of both houses are not only willing to gamble on their own political future, but are gambling with the future security of the nation—all in an effort to slap at President Truman.

This state of affairs was never more obvious in the house debate over extension of the national production act when many members of this body, acting for all the world like a bunch of over-grown children placing a tack on teacher's chair, snickered and chortled as they emasculated the controls bill into a document which controls no sense whatsoever.

Your congressmen probably will tell you, "of course I voted for the controls bill." Ask him, however, how he voted while the house was in committee of the whole, when no votes were recorded and all were on teller or division votes. Ask him how he voted on amendments sent direct to the floor by lobbyists for the cattlemen's association as they brazenly strode up and down the corridors of the capitol, conspicuous from one end of the hall to the other by their ten-gallon hats. The house was so obviously in control of the lobbyists that more than one congressman went on record as pointing out how these representatives of the special interest groups were parading up and down outside the chamber, flaunting their power and their control.

The Republican and southern Democrat coalition was in the saddle and riding high. Crippling amendment after crippling amendment was bolted through with great glee. Yet these congressmen voting against the welfare of the people, well knew, as they voted, that a conference committee of saner men, meeting in quieter and more deliberate surroundings would take them off the hook.

A few more responsible Republicans, led, surprisingly by Clarence Brown of Ohio, withstood the grins of a majority of their Republican brethren and voted with a few administration stalwarts.

Warning Issued

There is little doubt but that the truce talks in Korea played a role in the attitude of those who voted to scuttle the controls act. And this led Manly Fleischmann, administrator of the defense production administration and of the national production authority to warn: "If we permit the end of hostilities in Korea to signal any relaxation of effort, we will be gambling with our future security and we will fail to meet the minimum goals of the defense program on schedule—that is by 1953."

Conflicting Amendments

As the controls act left the house and went to conference committee many amendments conflicted, some nullified others; no one in the House knew what the bill contained. And then the President erupted in the midst of the chaos with his mid-year economic report with the statement that not only is there no justification for slackening defense effort, but that we probably will have to increase our military efforts whether or not there is a Korean armistice. Whether the President's report will have effect on congress remains to be seen.

However, it appears to this column that the President has lost all control of the congress. In the house, the veteran Sam Rayburn as speaker, either does not have the will or the power to run that body as he formerly did. In the senate, the majority leader, Senator McFarland of Arizona, has not seen eye to eye with the administration on some legislation and he is worried about his own reelection.

A Stubborn Man

President Truman is a stubborn man. He does not give way easily when he believes he is right. And he does believe he is. But he failed to sell the country on the internal security program. He has done much better on the foreign program. He has preached inflation, but people are not frightened because they do not know what it is. They have never experienced real inflation such as have other countries. But you cannot keep prices down while everything that goes into the making of prices goes up.

MacArthur Speech

In his latest speech, called one of his most powerful since his return from the far east, Gen. Douglas MacArthur lashed out with a sweeping condemnation of American policy at home and abroad. He declared the war in Korea has been indecisive; American foreign policy has become a "mess"; the cost of government "alarming and reckless"; and survival of the free world depends upon a "strong, vigorous, healthy America."

Oregon Showdown

OREGON MAY be the show down state where General Eisenhower finally makes up his mind whether "to run or not to run"—and on what ticket.

The situation in Oregon was outlined to Ike's political chief-of-staff, Sen. Jim Duff of Pennsylvania, the other day by Robert Letts Jones, publisher of the Salem, Ore., Capital Journal. Jones pointed out that Oregon has a primary ruling whereby any person can be entered in the race by a petition of 1,000 signatures—whether the candidate wants his name entered or not.

Thus Eisenhower's name could be entered in the Oregon presidential primary by 1,000 of his friends, entirely without his consent, and as a means of testing out his political strength.

The Oregon primary has another interesting angle, Jones explained to Senator Duff. The state attorney general has ruled that no candidate can run unless his party affiliation is known, thus Eisenhower would be forced, at that time, to be stamped either as a Republican or a Democrat.

Since the Oregon primary is May 16 and since all names have to be filed ninety days in advance, the showdown for Eisenhower would be sometime in February.

Note—It's a good bet that Ike's friends—and he has a lot in the northwest—will toss his hat into the ring through the Oregon primary.

Dressy General

When this column told how Gen. Emil C. Kiel, commander of the air force in the Caribbean, had sent his plane all the way from Ecuador to Panama to get his dinner jacket for a dinner given him by the Ecuadorian defense minister, the U. S. air force queried Kiel, wanting to know if the "Pearson story" was accurate.

Gen. Kiel replied that he had sent a plane back from Ecuador to Panama, but that he had not sent it to bring back his dinner jacket.

However, officials of the defense department pressed him further, finally got an admission that though the plane had not brought back the general's dinner jacket, it had brought back his "full dress uniform."

Propaganda Hurts

Reports from behind the iron curtain indicate that one reason for the seizure of AP correspondent William Oatis by Czechoslovakia was that American propaganda through the Voice of America and Radio Free Europe is hurting.

When the Combies want to get something out of the U. S., their crudest but most successful technique is to seize an American citizen, and hold him as a hostage until we come across with the ransom money.

The reported ransom money in Czechoslovakia is to curtail the Voice of America and Radio Free Europe, both really hurting the Communist government. In fact, the Voice of America has had the Czech government in a state of jitters.

Before Foreign Minister Clementis was purged, the voice made a categorical prediction that he and eight other top Czechs would be arrested. For weeks, the voice pounded home this prediction, giving the exact names of the prospective victims. The Czechs listened but were skeptical.

Then suddenly Clementis was arrested. With him were arrested four of the eight others the voice of America had named. All Czechoslovakia seethed at the news. The accuracy of the voice of America was commented on everywhere, and its listing on evidence has doubled. More than ever, Czechs are tuning in on the voice to see who will be purged next.

Note—Despite the state department's remarkable propaganda job, the budget of the Voice of America and other propaganda projects has been slashed to ribbons. Congressmen who have been doing the slashing have been invited to come to the state department briefing room and get the story—much of it confidential—of what the department is doing. However, only two or three have bothered to get acquainted with the activities of the agency whose work they pass upon.

MacArthur Report

President Truman is pressing Democratic senators to write a report on the MacArthur investigation. They had planned to report about a report, because they feared a majority would not agree to blasting MacArthur. However, the President believes Chairman Dick Russell of Georgia is honest enough to accept the evidence, which most observers consider to have been clearly and overwhelmingly against MacArthur.

Army to Establish News Center For Releases to Local Papers

The people in the home towns of the nation are going to hear more about local soldiers in the army. The army recently announced the establishment of a central news processing center in Kansas City, Mo. The primary purpose of the center will be to obtain recognition in his home town newspaper for each soldier who merits it. The center will provide more news about local men in the army and relieve combat trained soldier of a big volume of writing and typing. The army central news processing center will collect home town items through direct contact with army camps and units in the field, prepare them for publication and release them to local newspapers throughout the country in a single package—while they are still fresh.

Star Dust STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD ANNA MARIA ALBERGHETTI, the 14-year-old Italian soprano, is in Hollywood for her first starring role; she will play a refugee in "The Goddess" at Paramount. She was so good in "Here Comes the Groom", with Bing Crosby, that the studio signed her again. But the picture which will really establish her as a sensation is "The Medium".

Anna Maria Alberghetti Made in Italy, it was directed by Menotti, author of the operetta which ran so successfully in New York and abroad. It is one of those unforgettable films, perfectly acted and sung, beautifully staged. It stars Marie Powers, as did the original production. And the little Alberghetti is marvelous in it.

"Out of This World", the book by Lowell Thomas, Jr., about the exciting adventures of his famous father, the CBS newscaster, and himself in Tibet, is now being made into a feature movie in Hollywood, for release this fall.

There was a good deal of grumbling by jealous competitors when Arthur Godfrey was asked to hobnob with the great on that recent European trip, but his remarks on the European situation, made since his return, have proved how worthy he was of that honor. Godfrey probably has the largest and most devoted audience of any radio or television star in the country.

GRASSROOTS

Let's Not Fool Americans With False Propaganda

By Wright A. Patterson WE MAY NOT resent foreign nations being fed false information by the state department, as Secretary Acheson testified was the case, when on the witness stand before the senate committee investigating the firing of MacArthur. But we do resent, and quite justifiably, paying taxes to the extent of many millions of dollars to be spent by governmental departments in attempting to influence our opinions on Fair Deal socialistic projects.

Many thousands—something like 30,000—highly paid propaganda specialists are employed to promote health insurance (socialized medicine), universal military training, the Brannan food plan, and other things on which congress has turned thumbs down. Through handouts to the press and radio and through thousands of speakers, these publicity experts dish out for our benefit, and at our expense, definitely false and misleading statements regarding these nefarious Fair Deal schemes. For example: They tell us the government-sponsored legislation to provide for health insurance (socialized medicine) will cover all the costs of all our oculist and dental bills, our hospital, medicine and doctor bills, with our regular family physician to attend to the needs of each of us, and at a cost that is far less than we are now paying for covering our ills and misfortunes. The facts and figures they give us for the money we pay are false and misleading. They are definitely lies, but the authors are not asked or expected to prove them. In addition to the press and radio handouts, consisting of many thousands of words each week, these specialists prepare hundreds of speeches, equally as unreliable and misleading as are the press and radio releases. Those speeches are delivered to any audience that will listen. The orators who deliver them are drawn from that army of bureaucrats to be found in each division of the federal government, including social security, agriculture, interior, national defense, justice and others, all of them paid out of taxes of us Americans, and each of them paid far more than they could earn on any other job they could get. These bureaucrats selected for the purpose seek the opportunity to talk to service clubs, farmers and women's organizations, church societies. Special speeches to fit audiences of all classes and types, are prepared by the publicity experts, and we pay both those who write the speeches and those who deliver them to the extent of many millions of dollars each year. And who is responsible for such expenditure of the American tax payers' money? The answer to that question is, congress. It is congress that levies the taxes we must pay, and then appropriates the money for such expenditures as it approves. Among those receiving congressional approval are these propaganda experts, some 30,000 of them, who are employed for the purpose of selling us the socialistic schemes of the Fair Deal, that we may join in the demand for legislation that would effectuate such schemes. Leave them on the job long enough and they will accomplish the purpose for which they are employed. When that happens, we will have followed the Pied Piper of the Fair Deal into the morass of socialism, or worse, from which it will take us generations to climb back to the safe ground of free enterprise and freedom. Congress could stop it if congress would, and we, the tax paying Americans pick the men who represent us in the senate and house of representatives at Washington. For a period of 150 years, succeeding generations have enjoyed the opportunities and freedom that began with the birth of our country. As a people, we prospered, and individually, those who were industrious and thrifty, accumulated beyond those of any other nation due to our capitalistic system. We had many ups and downs, but more ups than downs. Now the leadership we have would change that system to a socialistic economy that has never succeeded. # The government employs some 26,000 chauffeurs, besides providing the cars they use in driving bureaucratic clerks and straw bosses in government jobs. It costs the tax payers many millions.

THE FICTION CORNER

THE LONG WAY HOME

By Beatrice Cargill

LONG AFTER the 12:07 had moved out of sight around Black Mountain, two figures stood motionless on the tiny platform. Above them, creaking on its hinges, the sign read "Turner Junction." Wind swirled and eddied around them harshly. Jeb Reynolds, station master, stayed discreetly inside the ticket office. He had watched folks for twenty years as they experienced that first aloneness. The train had paused for only a minute. Then, with Rob Cameron waving and smiling on the rear platform, it had made its noisy departure. "Must be nearly down the valley to Ellentown by now," John said. Sara clutched the shabby black leather purse tighter. It was Rob's last gift. "Feels like snow in the air, Mother." John's gray head bent to hers. "Turkey weather." "Yes, Thanksgiving's almost here again." Sara looked deep into his eyes. "John, he'll be gone for a long time." "Yes, Sara." Jeb Reynolds came out on the platform and watched them climb into the old blue sedan. The old car woke up and cleared its throat. "Need some anti-freeze, I do." John pulled out the choke. "Maybe a little coffee might help." Sara smiled, but it was only her lips that moved. They drove seven miles past

"Must be down the valley to Ellentown by now," John said. John slowed down near a white, low farmhouse. There was a small sign on the side of an elm tree—"Mrs. Whitely's Famous Dinners." Sara nodded in reply to his unasked question. She straightened her hat in the rear view mirror and put on her gloves, taking a long time with each finger. Rob's train must be nearly to Coddington. THERE WERE long, silent minutes between soup and chicken and dessert. After dinner, they went out behind the barn to see the minks, kept in orderly cages. Mrs. Whitely's boy fished in the pond for sunfish to feed them. Sara bent over to see the tiny creatures and her hair played in the wind. The gray streaks were like a light touch of snow. She counted the minks. Two large ones, one small one, screened off by himself. A family? Their family had been three—John, Rob, Sara. "Yes, they are beautiful," she said, "I wish I could look at them without thinking of the coats they are going to make." She smiled, apologetically. "It seems wicked, to kill them, I mean." Mrs. Whitely grinned. "Well, Mrs. Cameron, I used to feel sorry for them, but after the first check came in, I never thought about it again." The train must be at Gorge City now. Another hour and he'd be there. She closed her eyes. John's arm was around her. "I feel as if I'd been running," she murmured. "Guess I leaned over too long looking at the minks." They settled themselves in the old car again. They could see the farm on a distant hill. "I still love it, John. I still like coming around that curve and seeing it, knowing it'll be there." The car whined in self-pity as it climbed the hill. John drove up to the front door. He fumbled for the key and then just held it in his hand. Something seemed to hold him back. He didn't want to go into the house. He leaned down to pat the old collie who stood waiting there—and saw the note. Pinned to the dog's collar was a scrap of paper. Together John and Sara read it, incredulous. Drawn in the quick scrawl of a boy in a hurry were Mom and Dad—woeful faces above single-line bodies. Mom was clutching the black purse, Dad his keys. Beneath the picture Rob had written in large black letters. "CHEER UP—YOU SURE LOOK GLOOMY" "John, you sure look gloomy," Sara repeated—and John began to grin. Sara laughed. "That boy," he said, "That crazy kid." He opened the door and they went into their house.

Real Estate Bargains Awaited Early Settlers

Soaring real estate prices serve to remind Americans that the early bird gets the bargain. Peter Minuit's famous $24 purchase of Manhattan Island is only one example of the good "buys" available when the country was young. Director Minuit's successor, Wouter Van Twiller, also got his money's worth when he gave a band of Indians about $1.65 worth of presents in exchange for 172-acre Governor's Island in New York Harbor. Staten Island, too, was bought from Indians in 1631 for "certain parcels of goods." Christopher Columbus started it all with an investment in ships estimated by various authorities at from $16,000 to $75,000, of which Columbus himself is said to have contributed the equivalent of $2,000. William Penn received in 1681 almost all of the present state of Pennsylvania as payment for a loan of 16,000 British pounds made by his father, Admiral Sir William Penn, to King Charles II of England. At current exchange rates, this sum amounts to $44,800. In later years his descendants were paid eight times that much by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania for their interests and were permitted to keep their private estates. Penn also was required to pay the king two beaver skins on January 1 each year, plus one-fifth of all gold and silver ore found within his territory. For the province of Maryland, Lord Baltimore had to deliver two Indian arrows yearly to Windsor Castle, plus a fifth of gold and silver ores. Early transactions shifted ownership of the present state of New Jersey several times. Charles II originally granted the area to his brother, the Duke of York, who deeded it to John Lord Berkeley and Sir George Carteret as joint proprietors. In 1674 Berkeley sold West Jersey for 1,000 pounds ($2,800) to two Quakers named John Fenwick and Edward Byllyngs. The executors of Carteret's will sold East Jersey at public auction in 1682 to William Penn and a number of associates for 3,400 pounds ($9,520). Half interest in the state of Maine, as represented by a royal grant to Sir Ferdinando Gorges, was bought from his heirs by the state of Massachusetts in 1677 for 1,250 pounds ($3,500). When the United States bought Louisiana Territory from Napoleon in 1803, the country got a lot for its money. The price of $15,000,000 averaged out to less than three cents an acre for the 827,000 square miles. Subsequently, the Federal Government paid nearly a billion dollars to compensate Indian tribes for their lands in the territory.

Fire talks to operators

Early one morning in the telephone office at Marquette, the switchboard signal from a local fruit market's telephone flashed on. Operator Pat O'Donnell answered the "call," but no one was on the line—only a strange crackling noise. Unable to identify the sound, Pat called for Mrs. Lucy M. Bush, the night chief operator.

Mrs. Bush knew what the mysterious noise was. Her 34 years of telephone experience had taught her many things, and this, she could tell, was the sound of Fire!

Immediately she notified the police and the fire department. They found the fruit market in flames. Fortunately, though, damage to the market was limited, and the buildings next door were saved—because of quick thinking, experience and teamwork.

HOMER CROY'S Jesse James WAS MY NEIGHBOR

THE STORY SO FAR: Bob Ford's plot to kill Jesse James succeeds. He shoots Jesse down in his own home, then gives himself up. He finally manages to collect a meager portion of the original $10,000 reward. Although Jesse's body is nearly desecrated by souvenir-hunters, his friends and relatives get it shipped back to his mother's old home where he and Frank had grown up. There he is buried. Jesse's wife is now destitute, so their possessions are sold at auction — for $117.65. Meanwhile, Frank, who has been living in Baltimore hears of Jesse's death and surrenders himself to the governor of Missouri. His trial is scheduled to be held in the courthouse at Gallatin.

CHAPTER XV

The men bore down on the sheriff like dogs on a bone, but he issued the tickets as he saw fit. Firmly at the door was a deputy sheriff who stated that no guns could be toted inside; they must be checked. At this news arguments began to go off like popcorn in a kettle; men who had packed guns ever since the end of the Civil War said they'd be damned if they'd give them up; a gun was a man's private property and he could do whatever he wanted to with it. Wasn't this a free country? But after no end of hot words, the men were finally talked out of their guns and went into the makeshift courtroom feeling half-dressed.

So grave, so serious was the matter that Frank had eight lawyers; one of them, later, was in President Woodrow Wilson's cabinet; another became a federal judge. They were the biggest potatoes in the bin. When Frank entered, under guard, silence fell on the courtroom; men who had never seen him before looked on him and liked what they saw. He was one of their own. Aligned against him were State of Missouri, the railroads, banks, and the express companies; and the State of Missouri, through the devious ways of the governor, had caused Frank's brother to be shot in the back. Also lined up against Frank was Dick Liddil; and there came into the courtroom a flood of Fords, ready to bury the hatchet ... in Frank's back.

Frank Is Acquitted In Spectacular Trial

William H. Wallace was a spell-binder who had been elected prosecuting attorney on the platform of 'Break Up The James Gang.' His record was one hundred per cent.

Wallace had eighty-nine witnesses to prove that Frank was guilty as a dog. Frank had thirty-nine to prove he wasn't. However, among Frank's witnesses was the most popular man in Missouri—General Jo Shelby. What Robert E. Lee was to the South, Jo Shelby was to Missouri—that is, to the Southern part of Missouri. When he saw Frank, he started toward him, saying, "There's a hand I'm proud to shake." The judge hit the gavel so hard that pigeons on the roof blinked.

The trial began. It turned on as curious a point as you will ever come across—the identification of Frank James. He had to be placed at the robbery. Wallace found a preacher who testified Frank had stayed overnight with him the day before the robbery, and the way he identified him was that Frank quoted Shakespeare. Never before in all outlaw history had a bandit been accused of quoting Shakespeare. Not only that, but the preacher told exactly what Frank had quoted. Frank hung his head, whipped. It just showed what Shakespeare could lead to.

Frank's sister Susie, who was now Mrs. Allen H. Parmer, testified that on the day of the robbery Frank had been with her and her husband on a ranch in Texas, but that couldn't offset the Shakespeare taint. The simple farmer jury looked at Frank questioningly ... there was something intrinsically wrong with a person who would accept another's hospitality and then sit around quoting poetry. Why didn't he damn the railroads like a man ought?

That night the men got their arms back and slept in the yard; next morning, when court opened, they checked them again and went into the opera house. It was a privilege to be there and see that a Southerner got a fair deal.

Wallace was famous as an orator. As the trial drew to a close he soared to heights never before approached even in Missouri. Pointing dramatically at Frank, he said: "Farewell, Frank James, prince of robbers, you are going to your death. You are the cruellest horseman who ever wore a spur, or held a rein. You seemed like Death itself mounted on a pale charger. Thou foul bolt on the escutcheon of the fair State of Missouri—farewell!"

The jury went out. But it was hardly away long enough to turn around; then it brought back the verdict—Not Guilty. It liked the escutcheon just as it was. People shouted; the judge grabbed his gavel; pigeons went fluttering away.

But the end wasn't yet. Frank was out, but only temporarily, for the State of Alabama grabbed him and hustled him down to Huntsville to stand trial of the charge of having robbed the government paymaster at Muscle Shoals. This would settle his hash. No prejudiced Missouri jury.

The Alabama jury listened to the evidence and brought in its verdict—Not Guilty.

While Frank was being tried, a mysterious man had arrived in Huntsville, had asked some questions, then had gone to a hotel and registered. He said he was from Versailles, Kentucky. He waited a day or two, until the jury pronounced Frank not guilty, then revealed his true identity. He was Frank Rogers, a former captain in the Confederate Army and now sheriff of Booneville, Missouri, and he had a warrant for Frank's arrest for the Otterville train robbery eight years before. Soon Frank was on the train, a prisoner once more, bound for Booneville. Once more his mother was on the depot platform and again put her handless arm around his neck—this amazing mother who believed so deeply and unshakingly in her wayward sons. The people on the platform were so glad to see Frank that it practically amounted to a reception.

I saw hanging on the wall in the law office of Roy D. Williams at Booneville the bond that Frank James put up. It was signed by seven men who, at that time, were prominent in Missouri: 'Good, substantial citizens.' Popular sentiment was against another trial. After all, the gang was gone; besides Frank only Jim Cummins was left, and what was the use of trying that old horsethief? The days that had brought about banditry—the Border Warfare days—were over; a new life and a new way of living had come to the Middle West. Let the thing go! And the state did.

Jesse's Body Moved To New Burial Place

And so at last Frank James was a free man.

The world had changed; the great days of banditry were gone. A few outlaws, such as the Daltons, rode briefly to early lead-filled graves. The new generation hardly knew what the Border Warfare was. Clay County itself had changed—Clay County which had been the hottest part in the bed of the Border coals. But even this had begun to cool; a little sputtering along the edges, that was all. 'Aunt Zerel' had cooled; that was the final test. Frank had been at home now for years; grandchildren were coming along. And the body of Jesse James was no longer in peril of snatchers. Twenty years had passed since he had been buried in the yard of her home; she could look out the window of her room and see the grave and she could rock on the porch and see it. Now she gave orders that the body was to be moved and taken to Mount Olivet, the family cemetery at Kearney.

The farm was rented and, for the time being, she and Frank were living at a hotel in Kearney. It was June 29, 1902, a Sunday. Jesse Junior had come, the night before, from Kansas City to be with his grandmother; he was now a strapping young man, rather on the good-looking side, with his father's blue eyes and high cheekbones. He bought a coffin and made arrangements with two grave-openers, and on this Sunday morning the grave-diggers got into a spring-wagon and started out to the farm. Jesse and his uncle, John T. Samuels, followed. They arrived at five o'clock in the morning and went to the grave under the coffee-bean tree. The two grave-diggers set to work. Seven feet down. At last one of the picks sent up a grating sound; there it was—the burial box. The sides of the grave, at the bottom, were widened, planks slipped under, ropes attached, and the men started to lift the coffin. There was a crashing sound—the bottom of th-casket had fallen out and so had Jesse James's skull!

The box was lifted out as best it could be done with the rotting and decaying wood, and all that was left of Jesse James was scraped up and put into the new casket. It was a grisly scene.

One of the diggers got back into the grave, picked up the skull, and handed it to young Jesse. He turned it over, silently inspecting it. There, behind the right ear, was a bullet hole almost as large as a quarter. And little Tim Howard recognized the gold-filled teeth.

Jesse's decayed arms were arranged over his breast, as they had been in the original burial, and the coffin carried into the room where Jesse had slept with Bob Ford a few nights before Ford had shot him down, the room where Jesse had courted Zee Mimms, where his mother had lost her hand and his half-brother his life. How much of violence and gentleness that room had seen! And now Jesse was in it again, stretched out between two chairs.

Young Jesse and John Samuels drove back to Kearney, where Mrs. Samuels was waiting. They told her all that had happened. Frank was upstairs in his room and the two young men went to him. Meantime the palebearers were gathering—all Quattrill raiders or men who had ridden with Jesse. Time was having its way with them; eyes were growing dim and hair gray. Why, the younger generation hardly knew who they were! These old coats who liked to gab of days that were no more.

Jesse Laid to Rest For the Last Time

They almost filled the dining room, and Jesse's mother came and sat at the table with them. She had had made for her a combination steel knife and fork which she wielded with her left hand. Frank announced that, although he was sick, he was going with his mother. She told him what to wear and how to take care of himself, as she had so many years ago. Her son! Her wonderful Buck.

At last the hacks and spring-wagons and mounted riders arrived at the old farm; the gate opened, they went in, this strange, pathetic cavalcade.

"He used to play here in the yard," she said. The funeral procession arrived at the cemetery. A grave had been dug, and toward it the old Quattrill warriors came, carrying the new black coffin on which was a nickel plate with the words: Jesse James, nothing more.

Frank James took off his hat and put his arm around his mother. The coffin was lowered; as it touched the bottom, she gave an agonized moan and dabbed her eyes with her one hand. During the filling of the grave no one spoke; there was no religious ceremony.

When the grave was filled, they began to talk a little in low tones. She pointed: "When my time comes, I want to lay down beside him."

She and Frank and young Jesse went to the spring-wagon. Frank got in beside her and they started back to the hotel.

There the ex-guerrillas talked, laughing over their old exploits. At last the whistle of the engine was heard and they walked the short distance to the depot. As the train began to pull out, there was a flurry of goodbyes. Then Frank went back to his mother.

Frank bought a farm near Fletcher, Oklahoma. As soon as he was settled she went to see him. It was nice to be with Frank and Ann, but she was, as she put it, getting to be a burden to herself. She enjoyed being with them, but the habits of a lifetime were hard upon her and she began to talk about wanting to go 'home'; things had to be taken care of; at last they put her on a train.

That night, on a Pullman sleeper, she began to feel badly; when she identified herself, the crew was surprised. They would do everything they could. But there was nothing they could do and she died on the train, on the night of February 10, 1911, eighty-seven years old—this woman who, so long ago, had left Kentucky as a tobacco bride to come to Missouri. How much of history had happened since then! And in how much of that history had she played a leading part.

The funeral was held in the Baptist church, just as Jesse's had been—the very church where Jesse had prayed for Frank. She was buried beside him. The inscription on the monument reads: In Loving Remembrance of My Beloved Son JESSE JAMES Died April 3, 1892 Aged 34 Years, 6 Months, 28 Days Murdered by a Traitor and Coward Whose Name Is Not Worthy to Appear Here.

And there beside her, in final resting, are Dr. Rueben Samuels and Archie. Over her grave is a stone which reads MOTHER and over Dr. Samuels' is one which reads PAPPY.

Christians and Law

Lesson for August 19, 1951

Americans are not noted for their respect for law. Sometimes big business is the reason. In a certain southern state there are two counties through which run some main highways. But tourists, as well advised to stay away from there, because the roads have been pounded into a mass of potholes by overloaded coal trucks operating at high speeds and often on the wrong side of the road. Now the state has laws against speeding.

Here is an honest state police department. But although various arrests have been made, the head of the police department reports that in those two counties they never yet have been able to secure a single conviction in the courts. Why?

SOMETIMES politics is to blame. That is to say, a man wants to get, or to hold, office, so eagerly that he will ignore or defy the law in order to keep his little place in the sun.

There is another county where a policeman shot a law-breaker resisting arrest and attempting to shoot the officer. The county judge tried to make three successive grand juries indict the policeman, but after looking into the facts they all refused.

Here was the interesting spectacle of a judge on the bench (elected there) trying to make the law work against itself, trying to force a grand jury to indict an innocent man. The thing was, the policeman was from out of the county, but the man he killed, being a bootlegger, had many friends who were also friends of the judge.

Oil-Made Booms After many disappointments, the first valuable oil deposits were discovered in 1908 at Masjid-i-Sulaiman in the Zagros Mountains about 120 miles northeast of Abadan Island.

The Anglo-Persian Oil Company (later called Anglo-Iranian) was soon formed. Added to private investments were the contributions of the British government, which was eventually to hold the controlling majority of the stock.

Other wells gushed liquid gold in the Zagros foothills. More oil turned up at Naft-i-Shah, midway along the Iran-Iraq border in the west. From Naft-i-Shah the petroleum was pumped over the mountains to the Kermanshah refinery and distributed in the form of kerosene and gasoline over much of northern Iran.

At Abadan a half dozen pipelines poured rivers of oil into a complex, modern refinery whose annual capacity is now estimated at 20 million tons. In the oilfields and refineries some sixty to seventy thousand workers have been employed by the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company. The town and neighboring villages that have grown up around the Abadan refinery count 140,000 or more inhabitants.

New roads, airfields, and housing developments have been built, and various training, education, health and recreation programs have been put into effect by the Company as part of its huge Iranian investment and working operation.

Elmer, Electric Salesman, Is Shrewd Change Maker

SYDNEY, Australia—Elmer is an able salesman—and one of the most unique in the world. Elmer (short for electric merchant) is a quick-sale robot carrying cargo from soup to nuts. Inventor T. S. Skillman says that the robot is the only one of its kind in existence, and can handle up to 25 articles at one time. Among items Elmer sells are sandwiches, rolls, soft drinks, cigarettes, chewing gum, packages of tea and candy.

Trade Journal Says Can't Always Let Kids Have Way

LONDON, Eng. — "UNFAIR!" "Unfair," So screamed the trade journal publication Tailor and Cutter recently when it came out fighting mad at a proposal to dress all British children alike. Conservative Sir William Darling made the proposal before the House of Commons. He contended that a standard uniform would cut sharply into the cost of clothing on an inflated market. The kids, he said, would love it.

Magazine editor John Taylor said the kids would "probably" like it, but "would also like to smoke, stay up until 4 o'clock in the morning, and live on jam."

Abadan Oil Port Had Spectacular Growth Period

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The eyes of the oil-consuming world are turned toward Iran and a steaming hot port near the head of the Persian Gulf.

There, centered in the small city and big refinery of Abadan, Iran's huge petroleum industry developed under British concession stands at a crucial turning point. Behind stretch four decades of spectacular growth. Ahead lies an uncertain future, initiated by the Iranian government's recent nationalization of all its oil resources, and followed by British appeal of the case to the International Court of Justice.

Although concessions to other foreign-controlled companies have been taken up and later abandoned, the British operation is the only recent one. Its overall plant includes the world's largest refinery at Abadan, another at Kermanshah, and seven producing fields in southwest and western Iran.

In Nomad Land At the turn of the century Abadan Island, cut by winding canals at the mouth of the Shatt al 'Arab, presented a series of desolate mud flats, fringed by date palms.

North and east of the island, the now industrialized oil districts were little more than mountain and desert wastelands, where nomad life went on much as it had since the days of Harun-al-Rashid, Caliph of the "Arabian Nights."

The region's oil—destined to place Iran among the world's leading producers—was by no means then unknown. In prehistoric times oil springs and gas outlets had fed "eternal flames" housed by Zoroaster temples. Visitors of 200 years before had found the people not only burning petroleum for fuel, but using it in medicines, varnishes, and paints.

It remained for pioneers from the West, however, to turn on the commercial spigots. In 1901 Iran granted British subject William D'Arcy an oil concession covering all the country except its northern provinces.

Oil-Made Booms After many disappointments, the first valuable oil deposits were discovered in 1908 at Masjid-i-Sulaiman in the Zagros Mountains about 120 miles northeast of Abadan Island.

The Anglo-Persian Oil Company (later called Anglo-Iranian) was soon formed. Added to private investments were the contributions of the British government, which was eventually to hold the controlling majority of the stock.

Other wells gushed liquid gold in the Zagros foothills. More oil turned up at Naft-i-Shah, midway along the Iran-Iraq border in the west. From Naft-i-Shah the petroleum was pumped over the mountains to the Kermanshah refinery and distributed in the form of kerosene and gasoline over much of northern Iran.

At Abadan a half dozen pipelines poured rivers of oil into a complex, modern refinery whose annual capacity is now estimated at 20 million tons. In the oilfields and refineries some sixty to seventy thousand workers have been employed by the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company. The town and neighboring villages that have grown up around the Abadan refinery count 140,000 or more inhabitants.

New roads, airfields, and housing developments have been built, and various training, education, health and recreation programs have been put into effect by the Company as part of its huge Iranian investment and working operation.

Trade Journal Says Can't Always Let Kids Have Way

LONDON, Eng. — "UNFAIR!" "Unfair," So screamed the trade journal publication Tailor and Cutter recently when it came out fighting mad at a proposal to dress all British children alike. Conservative Sir William Darling made the proposal before the House of Commons. He contended that a standard uniform would cut sharply into the cost of clothing on an inflated market. The kids, he said, would love it.

Magazine editor John Taylor said the kids would "probably" like it, but "would also like to smoke, stay up until 4 o'clock in the morning, and live on jam."

Army Lensmen Risk Lives for War Pics That Tell the Story

KOREA—Small groups of Army photographers risk their lives almost daily in order to obtain action pictures of America's fighting men in Korea for use by newspapers, magazines, television news programs, and motion picture newsreels.

A typical photography team is the 24th Signal Company of the Army's 24th Infantry Division, a group of 11 men under the command of First Lieutenant Gordon Bowman, of Boston. Their missions take them into the thick of fighting with advancing armor and infantry patrols and high over the battle areas in small planes from which they photograph fighting on the ground.

Six of the 11 have received the Purple Heart for wounds suffered while going about their jobs in battle areas, and one received the Bronze Star Medal for valor. Corporal Lonnie Butler, of Franklinton, N.C., a motion picture cameraman, received the Bronze Star when he ignored enemy fire in order to rescue a wounded infantryman. At the time, Butler had been hit three times by small arms fire.

Shooting pictures of the fighting in Korea presents many problems in addition to the ever-present menace of the enemy. Dust infiltrates many parts of the cameras, at times causing them to lose much of their pinpoint clarity. The equipment itself takes a beating as the photographers operate in all weather, over rugged terrain, and over bad roads.

Sergeant George W. Johnson, of Binghamton, N.Y., says one of his biggest problems is light.

"Here in Korea the light seems to go to extremes," he said. "There's either too much sun or not enough sun."

Sergeant William Wion, Jr., of Oakland, Calif., who shares a jeep with Johnson and Butler, is not pleased with the backgrounds of his pictures.

"It's either all mountain or all rice paddy," he said, "and nothing in between." But, he added, "that's Korea for you."

Johnson is impressed with the fighting qualities of the Army's infantrymen, tankers, and artillerymen in Korea.

"They seem more professional than the men in World War II," he said.

Puerto Rican Soldiers Fling Fish at the Enemy in Korea

Puerto Rican soldiers fighting alongside men of the Army's Third Infantry Division have a battle cry that calls for an explanation. The battery: "Pescados." It is Spanish for "fish."

They picked it up during a successful attack against Chinese Communist positions. As the Communist machineguns opened up, the Puerto Rican fighters heard the sounds of Chinese bugles. To them, it sounded like the trumpeting of fish peddlers in their native land.

One of the soldiers yelled "Pescados!" His fellow soldiers laughed and picked up the cry. Now, when the Chinese bugles are sounded, the Puerto Rican fighters join in a chorus of "Pescados!"

Medical Expert Solves Case Of Swooning King's Army

LONDON, Eng.—The case of the swooning soldiers has finally been solved. A medicine expert came through with an answer to the epidemic of fainting at British Army, Navy, and Air Force formations.

Dr. Edward Sharpey-Schafer, a professor of medicine at St. Thomas hospital, said that the cure is to cease the custom of having parade-ground warriors stand at rigid attention. This, the doctor declares, starts a rush of blood to the feet. "The faint," he said, "is due to a sudden fall of blood pressure which diminishes the supply of blood to the brain."

The doctor told officials that standing at rigid attention causes blood to accumulate in the lower part of the body and is equivalent to a large hemorrhage.

At the height of the epidemic 100 girls hit the ground at a single formation of enlisted Navy women. Climax was reached when a soldier pierced his throat with his bayonet as he fell in a faint.

Kids Hate To Leave School; Wait for it to Burn Down

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Children of P.S. 179, Flatbush, Brooklyn, were not in the usual hurry to get away from the school grounds after receiving their final report cards and concluding class parties in anticipation of a long summer vacation. The reason: they thought that the school was on fire.

Although they might have hoped, the building did not burn down. The students however hung around to cheer the firemen and study the five pieces of apparatus that answered the alarm. The alarm had been turned in by the principal who noticed smoke as the children started to depart.

There was no fire; some smoke had merely seeped into the air vents from the incinerator in the boiler room. For the kiddies, false alarm or no, it was exciting.
