Succumbs in Store from Heart Attack

Steve Haynal of Whittemore Dies Last Thursday

Steve Haynal, age 56, of Whittemore died of a heart attack Thursday noon in the Joe Danin store at Whittemore.

Mr. Haynal had driven his car in town to get his mail at the post-office. He walked across the street to the store for a few peaches. He asked for the peaches and then collapsed to the floor.

Laurel Lawe and Mrs. Roy Charters, clerks at the store, ran to his assistance. They with Dorance Bellville, who had just come into the store, did everything possible to relieve him, but he passed away a few minutes later and before Dr. Douglas of Hale, who had been called, could arrive.

Born January 30, 1895, in Hungary, he came to the United States when about 12 years old, for some years living at Dante, Virginia. He latter came to Whittemore where the family resided on their farm two miles north of Whittemore.

He is survived by three brothers, Pete and John of Whittemore and Joseph of the state of Washington.

Funeral services were held from the home. Elder John Barr officiated. Burial took place in the Reno cemetery by the side of his mother.

5-Year Old Girl Drowns Near Oscoda

Accident Occurred Tuesday Afternoon at Mouth of Dead AuSable

Paula Ann Turner, age 5, drowned Tuesday afternoon in the mouth of the Dead AuSable, near Oscoda. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul D. Turner, owners of the El Cortez Cottages.

The little girl and her two small companions, Kathy and Sharon Micho, ages 4 and 7, had been playing in a row boat near the Turner residence.

Paula Ann, who was wearing a swimming suit jumped into the water several times and climbed back into the boat. On the last jump, the boat apparently had drifted into deeper water and she was unable to get back.

After Paula Ann had disappeared the two Micho children were frightened and did not report to the parents. It is thought the accident occurred at about 4:00 o'clock.

At about 6:00 o'clock she was discovered by Carol Hobson and Betty Langley of Birch Run who were vacationing on the shore.

Undersheriff Leon Putnam and Coroner E. D. Jacques along with Michigan State Police troopers were called to the scene.

Alabaster Loses 1st Playoff Game To Pinconning

White City Plays At Pinconning This Sunday

Pinconning defeated Alabaster Sunday, 1 to 0, in the first of the Shaughnessy playoffs in the American division of the North Eastern Michigan league. The game is being protested however because of a decision by the umpire-in-chief in the fourth inning.

A heated dispute took place in the fourth, when after Dan Horn and Pieper both singled, Horn going to third, Gies popped to the pitcher and Lambert was passed intentionally to load the sacks.

Beechum struck out, but while swinging at the third strike the ball hit him and rolled into foul territory, Horn scoring from third. At this point of the game Alabaster protested to the umpires on the grounds that the ball was dead after striking the batter and that the base runner must not advance. The play was allowed by the umpire-in-chief and Alabaster filed their protest with league officials.

If Alabaster wins the protest the game will be replayed. Dan Horn of Pinny and John Martin of Alabaster, both ex-minor league players, hooked up in a real pitchers duel, with Horn allowing the White City boys only three hits and Martin scattered seven hits to the Bay County team and was tough with men on base. NYC Executive Tells Why Pullman Cars Receive Iosco Stream Names

Several months ago Nathan Barkman and Elmer Werth made a trip by Grand Trunk from Flint to Chicago, returning to Detroit over the New York Central. They were surprised to see Pullman cars in several passenger trains bearing the names of "Tawas Bay," "Silver Valley," "Silver Creek" and "Indian Lake."

Pleased with the names and curious as to the reason for this area to be so well represented, Mr. Barkman wrote to the passenger traffic department of the New York Central Lines. He received the following letter from F. H. Baird, New York Central assistant vice president, 466 Lexington avenue, New York:

"As you probably know, for many years the New York Central System has used the slogan, 'The Water Level Route.' Accordingly, when we ordered our postwar sleeping cars, it was decided to name them after rivers, bays, harbors, ports, lakes, streams, brooks, etc., in or adjacent to the territory served by our system.

"The cars are named in series according to capacity, style and builder. For example, river series cars are Pullman built, 10 roomette, 6 double bedroom cars; bay series are Pullman built 22 roomette sleepers, etc. The idea behind this is to enable our yard forces, station employees and operating people in general to immediately recognize the capacity and type of car by the series name.

"Our postwar order totaled 265 sleeping cars so that we were able to give representation to practically all of the waterways in our territory, including, of course, Tawas Bay, Silver Creek, Silver Valley, and Indian Lake, all located in Michigan.

"I wish to thank you for writing me on this subject and trust the above data will be helpful to you."

AFL Breaks With Farm Agencies; Gen. Eisenhower Reports on Europe

AFL BREAKS TIES—Farmers and farm workers across the nation were pondering the sudden action of the American Federation of Labor obviously aimed at breaking off its heretofore friendly relations with the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange.

Meeting at Montreal, Canada, the AFL's executive council issued a statement which charged that the labor organization could no longer "appease" these farm groups because they had swung "to the side of reaction" in national affairs.

"In fact, on economic issues of vital concern to the national welfare," the statement said, "it has become difficult to discern any major difference between the policy of the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange on the one hand, and that of the National Association of Manufacturers and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce on the other."

The AFL then pointed out that "labor cannot go on indefinitely supporting legislation beneficial to farmers while their organizations maintain a policy of seeking punitive anti-labor legislation."

The AFL made it clear that it was disappointed in the action of the farm groups in teaming up with "big business" representatives to defeat the enactment of effective anti-inflation controls. This would seem to be the opening shot in a civil war between two big segments of the nation's economy.

REPORT ON EUROPE—One of the clearest reports the home towns of the country have received on western Europe's growing strength was made last week by a senate subcommittee after a 14-day visit with Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

Ike and Rosenberg

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, assistant defense secretary, is greeted by Gen. Eisenhower at SHAPE headquarters near Paris. Mrs. Rosenberg is discussing manpower with the Allied supreme commander.

The committee reported Eisenhower as saying "it is almost ridiculous for us to be talking in terms of fright and hysteria" in the face of the free world's overwhelming strength.

The committee reported: (1) Eisenhower's headquarters is dissatisfied with the fact that western Europe has increased its armed forces only 20 per cent since the Korean war began. (They have promised a 75 per cent increase next year); (2) Spain and Yugoslavia should be brought into the "master plans" for defense of Europe; (3) Once European military build-up is complete, it will be possible "to begin the gradual withdrawal of U. S. forces"; (4) There is dissatisfaction among U. S. field representatives at the "multihanded command" in Washington over political, economic, and military operations; (5) It will cost about $1,000,000,000 in France alone to erect the "overhead" for combat operations; (6) Without U. S. leadership Europe by now might have fallen before Communism; (7) Economic aid must be "primarily for the purpose of assisting friendly countries to strengthen their individual and collective defense"; (8) It is most important that east-west trade shall not be permitted to increase the war potential of the Soviet Union.

RED BUILD-UP—While Allied and Communist representatives negotiate a cease-fire at Kaesong, with increasing prospects for success, the Reds have taken the opportunity to carry out a big military build-up in Korea.

Observers are now wondering if the Communists are planning a new offensive if the Kaesong armistice talks collapse, or are they pouring in troops merely to strengthen the hand of their negotiators?

Many are inclined to believe it means a new offensive. They point out that unusually heavy truck traffic through North Korea toward the front, started at the first mention of armistice talks late in June and continued through mid-July.

There is an entirely new vigor in the North Korean army, observers point out, and Communist artillery has become more plentiful and bolder. Red prisoners and deserters invariably talk about plans for a "new offensive". In the past they have usually been right.

THE WHEAT CROP—In a new crop forecast, the department of agriculture predicts this year's wheat crop will fall below a billion bushels for the first time since 1943. This was a decrease of 72 million bushels from its July 1 forecast. However, the department said, the indicated crop, plus reserves, would be more than ample to meet needs.

Floods and dry weather last month was credited with cutting the crop to an estimated 998 million bushel harvest. Several million acres of wheat, corn, barley, flaxseed and potatoes were destroyed by mid-west floods. This year's corn estimate was lowered to 3,206 million bushels, 89 million bushels below last month's predictions.

REDS TO ATTEND—Although the Soviet Union has announced she will send delegates to attend 50-nation Japanese peace treaty conference in San Francisco September 4, the Russian delegation is expected to refuse to sign the document.

The Russians have bitterly condemned the proposed treaty draft as illegal and a device for tying an "aggressive" satellite Japan to the United States.

By attending the conference the Russians will again have an opportunity to create world-wide propaganda. They can be expected to protest the treaty item by them.

A CITY COMES BACK—Nearly 17 million tons of mud, muck and debris have been shoveled aside in Kansas City as the flood-ravaged valleys of Missouri continue to make one of the nation's most remarkable comebacks.

Just three weeks after the flood waters had ebbed from the Kansas City stockyards, a consignment of shorthorn cattle pounded through the wooden pens to mark the reopening of the nation's second largest livestock market.

Three major packing plants are slaughtering again and more than 120 business firms have returned to offices evacuated during the flood. Although many families are still in dire need of relief and assistance, nearly 30,000 employees have returned to jobs washed out by the mid-July flood.

Throughout the flood-stricken area, it's been back to business for grain elevators, flour mills, farm machinery concerns, transfer companies, sheet metal works, motor parts firms, tractor and equipment companies, paint manufacturers, milling companies, a creamery and dairy supply company, soap manufacturers and lumber companies.

It has been a wonderful story of a city fighting its way back.

PRICE LAW VIOLATIONS
$10,000,000 Involved in Fifty Cases

The government is investigating 50 major cases of alleged price-ceiling violations that could result in the return of $10,000,000 to the government and consumers.

Price Enforcement Director Edward P. Morgan hinted that the cases involve some of the largest business concerns in the country. He said one case "has possible international ramifications and involves about $5,000,000 in illegal profits."

In many cases the price agencies are forcing firms found guilty of violations to make restitution to customers. In others, where there is no clear method for repayment to customers, money from settlements is paid to the United States treasury.

MIRACLE BABY HUSKY BOY . . . Nurse Doris Hansen, Hackensack, N.J., hospital, holds Raymond Donnelly, Jr., who was born via caesarean section to Mrs. Ida Donnelly. The baby represents a triumph for medical science. Mrs. Donnelly suffers from a dread form of anemia—an heredity condition in her case in which red corpuscles are destroyed so rapidly that frequent transfusions are required. Doctors say that Raymond, a 7 lb., 4 1/2 oz. boy did not inherit her disease.

He is exchanging a bit of jocular talk with the three finalists in the contest. It must take a defense minister to offer a very effective defense against the charms of three such lovely young ladies, Shinwell may be saying, but who wants to defend himself from this?

STERN GREETING FOR CZECH AMBASSADOR . . . Czechoslovakia's new prime minister, Dr. Vladimir Prochazka, faced an angry reception as he arrived in the United States. Pickets from the Czech National Council of America marched along the docks in New York carrying placards which protested the imprisonment of A.P. correspondent William Oatis and the disappearance of Czech Archbishop Beran. Also, Prochazka was faced with a chilly reception when he made diplomatic calls upon the President at the White House and at the state department, which has entered diplomatic requests for the return of the imprisoned American citizen.

ANDES WHALERS . . . The war scare in the world today has created a great demand for whale oil, and Chile has entered the world's most thrilling profession—catching huge 74-foot, 69-ton mammals like this one. At Quintay, a fleet of eight boats is catching 1200 whales a year. Chile's whaling industry produces about 5000 tons of oil, the finest for precision machinery, and about 1000 tons of nitrogen fertilizer, with a total value of $4 million. The industry is non-stop the year around. From December to May, the whaling takes place 70 miles off the coast, and from June to November it goes on in the polar regions.

CHLORINATION OF DRINKING WATER, for example, is a feature of modern life in the smallest towns as well as the largest cities. Fluoridation of water to prevent tooth decay, especially in growing children, has recently met with medical approval following a five-year test and promises to take its place with chlorination as a public health practice in our cities.

Large cities like Rochester, N.Y., are now fluoridating their water supplies, but Dr. Furman found it significant that the tests were first made in two smaller New York cities, Newburgh and Kingston. Records of tooth decay among children in these adjoining communities during the test period clearly established that the incidence of dental caries, or tooth decay, was less in Newburgh where the water supply was fluoridated than in Kingston, the control community, where there was no fluoridation.

Maysville, a small Kentucky city, was the first in that state to treat its drinking water with fluorides. Dentists at Maysville were chiefly responsible for promoting fluoridation of water. Larger Kentucky cities followed suit.

The need for education in science and technology to keep abreast of the expansion of the chemical industry and profession was stressed by Dr. Furman, who is head of the chemistry department at Princeton University.

"Many members of the profession receive their first scientific training in the high schools of our smaller communities," he pointed out. "The American Chemical Society is interested in aiding high school teachers to interest young boys and girls in the profession. Many local sections of the society make a practice of inviting high school students and teachers of chemistry to attend section meetings."

THE READER'S DATE BOOK Chemistry Has Changed Life In the Small Towns of America

Chemists and chemical engineers are transforming the life of small towns and rural areas as completely as they are remodeling metropolitan city life, Dr. N. Howell Furman, president of the American Chemical Society, reported recently.

"Chemical scientists and technologists serve modern man every moment of his life, wherever he may go," Dr. Furman asserted, outlining the theme of the society's diamond jubilee meeting which will be held in New York September 3-7, and by local sections in all parts of the country during National Chemistry Week, September 2-9.

When a handful of chemists organized the American Chemical Society in 1876, chemical activity was confined to a few centers, principally in the larger cities. Although they met in a small room they constituted a substantial part of the nation's chemists at that time.

Today the American Chemical Society with 65,000 members is the largest organization of professional scientists in the world. Its 137 sections include membership in every state in the union.

Dr. N. Howell Furman

Chemicals have not only become the nation's first industry, Dr. Furman noted, but the tendency of industrial establishments to locate plants near sources of raw materials has led to widespread diffusion of chemical manufacturing and processing. Many new towns and cities formerly rural or even uninhabited areas owe their existence and growth to the expanded activities of chemists and chemical engineers in serving modern civilization.

The profound changes these scientists and engineers have brought about in our daily lives are by no means confined to communities with chemical industries, Dr. Furman observed. The air we breathe, the water we drink, the clothing we wear, the health we enjoy, the cars we drive, the houses we live in and the wide range of objects we use throughout the day all reflect this transformation.

Chlorination of drinking water, for example, is a feature of modern life in the smallest towns as well as the largest cities. Fluoridation of water to prevent tooth decay, especially in growing children, has recently met with medical approval following a five-year test and promises to take its place with chlorination as a public health practice in our cities.

A New Watch?—Ask Your Jeweler's Advice

Are you one of the several million Americans who is a prospective watch buyer this year? If you are, be sure to consult your home town jeweler.

A fine timepiece is like a fine automobile—only an expert really can tell its performance possibilities. And your local jeweler, who has been selling and servicing fine watches for generations, is the best qualified person in your community to rely upon when it comes to the

In addition to reviewing the progress made by chemists and chemical engineers during the past 75 years, Dr. Furman declared, the diamond jubilee observances will focus attention on the prospects for even greater progress in the future.

Since smaller communities will not only benefit from new chemical developments, but will play a substantial part in bringing them about, the American Chemical Society through its local sections will parallel the program of National Chemical Week observances in New York with observances in communities and schools throughout the country.

The week of September 2-9 is the opportune time for the people of America's home towns to learn the fabulous story of chemistry and the vital effect it has had on the ordinary man in his everyday living.

Here again is an opportunity for the local merchant, by exhibits and advertising, to tell the local community a worthwhile story, the story of "Chemistry—Key to Better Living."

Watch Inspection Time Is September 6 to 15

Too often the owner of a fine watch is apt to take his timepiece for granted—and forget to bring it to his good friend, the local jeweler, for a necessary periodical check-up and oiling.

The jewelers of America will be reminding the public of this fact during national Watch Inspection Time, September 6 to 15, and it would be well for the possessor of a quality watch to visit the service department of his community jeweler for the needed timepiece check-up.

Here are a few "do's" and "don'ts" for protection of your watch:

- (1) Always take your watch to a quality watch-service department for any necessary adjustment, cleaning or repair.
- (2) Insist on genuine factory replacement parts.
- (3) Wind it once a day preferably in the morning. And when you wind it, take it off your wrist.
- (4) Try not to expose it to extreme hot or cold conditions.
- (5) Keep it away from perfume, powder, or loose tobacco crumbs.
- (6) And, above all, if the watch should lose its accuracy or stop completely, don't try fixing it yourself. Tinkering with a fine watch movement can be an expensive experiment. Your community's watchmaker makes it his business to nurse watches back to health.

A periodical cleaning of your wristwatch is a "time" saver in two ways. The repairman not only removes any dust or dirt that might have sifted into the movement, but also congealed, dirty oil.

Like any machine, your precious watch movement needs oil—and the right oil—to protect its moving parts against frictional wear. The lack of proper lubrication too often results in this wear, and ultimate inaccuracy or complete stoppage of the movement.

Avoid all possible shocks to your watch. Remember, many an automobile's shock absorbers have been broken when going over a deep rut in the road, and even a "shock-resistant" watch can take just so much out-of-the-ordinary jolting.

When you wind the stem of the timepiece, the action tightens the mainspring, and stores new energy needed to run the watch. Wind it gently with the thumb and finger, and stop when you feel that the tension is at the maximum it can take without damage.

When selecting a watch, personal preference in style, together with pocketbook capabilities, must first be considered. At that point, however, your jeweler is in a position to help you to select a fine watch which he knows is built to give you accurate, dependable service over the coming years. His store and reputation are the guarantee behind the product he sells.

EXCHANGE STUDENTS

German Youths to Learn About U.S. By Living in American Homes

By Anne M. Mattingly WNU Washington Bureau

"The people are so nice—and it's wonderful to be able to see what ever you want to in America. I'm so happy to be here." This statement by 16-year-old Christal Mohr, one of the 74 German teen-agers who arrived in this country recently to study our agricultural methods under a joint national grange and state department program, accurately represents the collective sentiments of the group as they looked for the first time on the American way of life.

These youngsters are to be sent to grange homes throughout the country, a large number going to Washington, Virginia, and Ohio. There they will become "members" of the family, will help on the farms, and will attend the local schools. The homes have all been offered, and in most cases the boys and girls were given a choice of the type of farm on which they wanted to live. The financing while here will be done completely by the grange families in return for the farm work that the youths do.

Although this program of the state department and the national grange is one of exchange, it represents for the most part an opportunity for foreigners to see not only our agricultural methods but also to study our national philosophy and the manner in which we live. It is hoped that after a year in this country, the students will inject into their native Germany upon their return, a good deal of what they have absorbed. Other aims of the program include youth leadership, training, and agricultural progress.

This group of 74 represents only a small part of the entire program. There will be 450 German teen-agers sent to study here this year, but the total from Germany during the year, including all age groups, will be almost 3000. This, in turn, is still only a part of the "Campaign of Truth" program inaugurated by President Truman last year which brought 10,000 persons from 55 countries to the United States to live, work, and study.

JUST ABOVE THE teen-age level, there are "Young Farmers Groups", young men and women in their twenties, from Germany, Norway, Denmark, and Sweden, who do much more traveling than the younger students. They shift from home to home and learn all types of farming, whereas the teen agers become "members" of one family for a year while they go to school.

Since only about one in ten of the group of 74 which arrived recently can speak English, it might be assumed that language would be a great barrier to their American education. However, there was a girl in a similar group last year who, within a month, had learned English well enough to compete with her fellow pupils on their own terms. Officials of the state department and the grange praised the teachers in our schools to whom fell the task of educating these students. The extra time spent with them and the understanding given them did much to aid the rapid adjustment of the youngsters.

Upon their arrival in New York, this latest and first such group of German teen-agers were whisked down to Washington where they, in a group, spent part of their second day in this country writing home to their families to let them know of their safe arrival and to tell of their first impressions.

While in Washington, they met Herschel Newson, master of the national grange, who welcomed them to this country and added that he hoped the Americans with whom they came in contact would learn as much about Germany as the students did about America—that in order to be successful, the program had to be reciprocal.

The group also met Harold Howland, of the exchange of persons division of the state department, who summed up the whole purpose of the program with his quotation from Charles Lamb "How I hate that person!" Lamb is reported to have said, "Why, do you know him?" someone asked. "Of course not," replied Lamb, "if I knew him I wouldn't hate him."

If, through the immediate sphere of the study of agriculture, and the greater and broader one of human relations, this program can continue to aid in the cause of international understanding, it will be a great boon not only to this country, but to the entire world. If knowledge and understanding are present, there is less chance of hatred.

GRASSROOTS

Lack of Positive Platform Has Defeated the GOP

By Wright A. Patterson

OVER THE YEARS I have voted with but rare exceptions the Republican ticket.

One such exception was in the contest between Harding and Cox. As a protest against the unfair methods of the old guard senators in nominating Harding, I voted for Cox. The old guard was unfair, un-American and un-Republican.

In the campaign between Landon and Roosevelt for a second term, I went along with Landon, despite his endorsement of New Deal policies, tempered only by his insistence he could do a better job with them. By not having a Republican program, or a Landon program, but by accepting the Roosevelt program, Landon lost.

If they must have the New Deal, the voters prefer to leave it in the hands of the originators.

In his campaign against a third term for Roosevelt, Willkie used as a subject for a campaign address "I could do it better," referring to New Deal policy.

He deserved to lose, because he was no Republican. He was a candidate who gained the Republican nomination by unfair methods. Willkie flopped as an advocate of New Deal policies on the Republican ticket and deserved his fate at the polls.

Dewey, in his first campaign, came nearer supporting New Deal policies than anything he or his party proposed as their own. When given his second chance, he talked only of a senseless and meaningless term, "unity," when people were asking for a statement of national policies. The Republican party offered them no platform, leaving it up to the candidates to propose their own platforms.

The candidates had no platforms, or at least could not enunciate them. So again the Republicans failed for lack of a constructive party platform, a statement of principles for which the voters were so avidly waiting.

To return a bit farther back to the campaign between Roosevelt for his first term and Herbert Hoover for re-election, that campaign for the Republicans was conducted by the Republican old guard senators, such as Jim Watson, Reed Smoot, George Moses, and others.

They had not been able to use Hoover and preferred to deal with a Democrat, rather than Hoover with a second term. They said so, and admitted that their interest in the campaign was only re-election of themselves. They deliberately worked against Herbert Hoover.

They succeeded in defeating both Hoover and themselves.

In the election for membership in the 80th congress, an off year, the Republicans secured a majority in both houses. They could not undo much that had been done, but they could refuse appropriations to pay the vast army of bureaucrats that was a factor in the Democratic successes.

They did not do that. Expecting a Republican president at the next election, they wanted the jobs continued so they might be filled by Republicans. Visions of future patronage for Republicans were the alluring prospects that provided pay for the millions of Democratic job holders.

But with the meaningless word "unity" the only thing talked about, President Truman beat the Republicans to the punch, and he was given a Democratic congress that the Republican 80th congress had paid for with its refusal to limit bureaucratic appropriations.

And so it has been for 20 years the so-called leaders of the Republican party have been responsible for its defeat, either deliberately planned or brought about by lack of a definite and meaningful program.

Their profuse condemnation of the opposition has not been effective, nor will it be.

Has the Republican party ceased to function as a party?

Are its candidates all on their own, with each one supplying the principles he thinks best; have the party leaders ceased to lead in anything other than vitriolic opposition to what others propose?

Can the party, as such, no longer enunciate policies and principles? Under such conditions, the party has ceased to be of value to the nation. It is time it gave way to some political group that can and will.

We need two functioning parties. Congress gave the President control of both wage and prices, but he exercised only control of prices, and permitted labor to get all the wages it could, regardless.

THE FICTION CORNER

PERFECT DAY

By Sallydale Wimbrow

EARLY FALL bristled the air. The lawn surrounding the little church was caked with brown fallen leaves and in the sky, a bright sun darted behind a cloud.

"Such a perfect day" Nell thought, "Everything is on its good behavior for Steve and Mary"

She folded her hands in her lap and relaxed in her seat. The organist softly began playing the pre-wedding melody. An unexpected tear started down Nell's cheek.

"That's right," she told herself. "Go ahead and cry. Make a fool of yourself and bawl like a baby. Forget about your plan to seem calm."

"The church looks lovely. Isn't it beautiful?" someone whispered. "Everything is so perfect."

"Yes" Nell thought, "Lovely, the white flowers, the fern, everything perfect. I mustn't be sad. I should be happy for Steve, for this is what he wants. It seems so sudden though... his getting married. Just yesterday he was only a boy interested in boats, automobile engines, camping out in the woods for weekends. Is he ready for a wife, a family? Oh, my Steve, I love you. But I would not hold you back. Not if this is your happiness. You have chosen Mary and she is lovely. I would not fight to keep you for myself, though I can't imagine what my life will be now, without you."

The opening strains of the wedding march sounded. People stood. There was the rustle of new dresses, the sound of feet shuffling on the floor. Nell felt stiff. She pulled herself up, put one hand on the back of the pew before her. There was Steve, standing by the altar, his face slightly flushed, looking toward the back of the church. His eyes were bright waiting for Mary. Nell remembered seeing that brightness in his eyes so many times before. She remembered how she had watched him often when he was only a small boy, playing with skates and toy pistols. As he grew, so did her love for him.

"Only yesterday" Nell thought "You were mine. Now you will never be mine again. Mary will hear your questions, solve your problems, be there when you need help. She is your life now. I have given you all I have to give. I only hope you will remember me, Steve, remember me with a smile. I will always love you and cherish the happiness you gave to me."

MARY was coming down the aisle. She seemed surrounded by a faint glow. Nell trembled slightly at the signs of the admiring congregation. Mary was indeed a vision. By the altar, Steve was leaning forward, tense. There was that eager expression on his face that Nell remembered so well.

"The picnic" she thought. "You took me by the river for a picnic—and we carried your old portable phonograph. You played your favorite records—laughed at me trying to learn about jive. That eager alive look you have now. We were so happy Steve. You kissed my cheek and told me I was your girl—there would never be another girl for you. That's what you said, Steve—remember?"

Now the couple stood together, facing the altar. Nell heard the words that tied Steve and Mary together for a lifetime, unable to control a soft sob. "Mary, Mary—make him happy. It's up to you now."

Then it was over. The organ sounded again and Nell watched the couple turn, start for the door, laughing. Steve clasped Mary's hand and they brushed by Nell. "He doesn't even see me" Nell thought "He didn't even look."

Outside a photographer was taking pictures. Nell lifted her chin, tried a bright smile. She walked up to Steve who was standing alone while Mary posed for her picture.

"Darling" she whispered "It was perfect. I am so happy."

He leaned and kissed her "Thank you, Sweetheart" he said. Then his arm stole about her waist and he hugged her.

"I'm rather happy myself" he said and then he looked deep in her eyes. "I guess it's the most perfect day in my life. Mom."

RESIDENT NURSE

A SERIAL STORY
BY LUCY AGNES HANCOCK

THE STORY SO FAR:

Gay Gayner, Bethesda orphanage inmate, anticipates her 18th birthday and freedom from the "home," and reacts with contempt the time Thad Borden, son of Dr. Borden, kissed her at an orphan's picnic where he was an instructor. Thad is the constant "date" of beautiful, impetuous Vivian Poole, haughty daughter of the richest man in Bessemer. Dr. Borden has a special affection for Gay. He disapproves of his son's relationship with Vivian, whom he fears Thad might marry. Gay returns to the orphanage on an errand for the superintendent just in time to see a bully above an invalid, Benny Heaton, from a swing.

CHAPTER II

"Don't touch him!" she warned. "You, Sammy Martin, call Doctor Borden—quick! He's hurt—terribly hurt! There, there, darling," she crooned as a faint moan came from the slightly parted lips. "Doc will make you well, Gay's here. Beat it—all of you!" she ordered fiercely. "And keep quiet—if you can."

Mrs. Overton bustled out followed by Myra, the laundress, and the part-time maid, but Gay continued to hold her place beside him, her hand holding one of his and her voice crooning softly.

"Get up, Frances!" the matron demanded sharply. "Call the gardener and we'll get him inside. How did it happen? I do declare—don't just stand there. Call Jake."

"He must not be moved," Gay said firmly. "He's terribly injured and moving him would make him worse. We'll wait till Doc comes—he'll know what to do."

She Gets Credit For Saving a Life

"Nonsense!" Mrs. Overton cried. "You have always babied the boy and more than likely he's faking right now. Call Jake, Myra."

The cook turned uncertainly. "I think Gay's right, ma'am," she said timidly.

"Do as I say," the matron shouted. "I do declare—!" Myra slipped away.

"He'll not be moved until Doc says so," Gay announced stubbornly. "I should think you'd know that much—at least," she went on and heard the woman gasp but didn't care, for the high iron gate clanged and she heard the sound of hurrying footsteps along the concrete walk. The doctor had come.

Without a word he knelt on the hard ground beside Gay and his kind, competent fingers examined the limp body of the boy. Then he looked up at Mrs. Overton and said crisply, "Call the ambulance. He's badly hurt."

The doctor rose to his feet. "He must not be moved about. It's his spine now as well as his heart. A good thing you didn't attempt it before I came. Somebody had good sense."

"I'm glad you get that much credit, Doctor," Mrs. Overton said stiffly. "Is there anything I can do?"

"Yes. Keep the others quiet and away from windows—if you can. Children should be spared unhappiness where possible—they'll have to face plenty of it later. I'll stay here—help get him into the ambulance. Run along, my dear," he said to Gay who still knelt with one of Benny's hands in hers. She shook her head.

"You heard the doctor, Frances," Mrs. Overton said crisply. "Get up at once."

"I shall stay right here with him," the girl replied quietly. "And I'm going to the hospital with him. He—he needs me. He—he—" The gray eyes filled and she blinked rapidly so the tears didn't spill over.

"Okay," the doctor said, waving his hand to the others. "That's all for now," he went on, and stared impatiently toward the street listening for the wail of the siren. At last it came and a white-clad doctor and nurse hurried to the spot followed by two orderlies bearing a stretcher.

"Easy there, Spine," Doctor Borden warned. Gay still held the boy's hand.

"Let go, sister," the young doctor said and the nurse put a comforting arm about Gay's shoulders.

"Your brother will be all right with us, my dear," she told her. "Don't worry."

"He isn't her brother, Thompson," a new voice said derisively, and Gay's anger flared. "The gal's made a molleycolled out of that youngster—the kid's been utterly spoiled and—"

"That'll do, son," the doctor interrupted grimly. "The girl has probably saved his life—on more than one occasion, I suspect. We'll take good care of him, my dear," he said to Gay, patting her gently.

her with bowed head. "I didn't know. I've been a heel. Please don't hate me, I'm—"

That spring day was to mark the turning point in Frances Gayner's life. Mrs. Overton was incensed. She had long felt that Gay had never been properly impressed by her—that she might even hold her in derision—possibly contempt. Hitherto, however, she had actually flouted her authority even before the doctor and some of the staff, as she was fond of terming the employees. It was not to be borne.

Frances was getting out of bounds. And then Fate took a hand and Miss Alden entered to say that her maid had gone—eloped with her young man, and she wanted Frances to come at once—today.

She walked through the late afternoon traffic without so much as glancing at either passer-by or shop window. Her thoughts were with the ing. Everything seems to happen today. But you haven't told me. How's Benny?"

"We can't tell yet, my dear," the doctor said soothingly. "He is still unconscious. But just as soon as I know I'll get word to you. You can trust me—I'll do my best for the boy. Only—" He paused, pondering the advisability of communicating his fears to the troubled girl beside him.

Gay caught her breath. "Then—then—"

"There's his heart, you know. It has never been sound. Remember those fainting spells—that cough and the shortness of breath so often accompanying the least exertion? I've been watching him for years, my dear—treating him regularly, but without much evidence of improvement. The lad was born with a heart lesion—"

"I know, and you think he is going to die. Isn't that what you mean, Doctor?" the girl asked, her face white.

"Oh, I wouldn't go so far as—" "But it's what you think—and— he will want me with him and I—I won't be there."

Gay followed him inside the small comfortable home of Grace Alden and into a brand-new life. It was Miss Alden who broke the news of Benny's death that same evening after dinner and Gay cried a little.

"I know, and you think he is going to die. Isn't that what you mean, Doctor?" the girl asked, her face white.

"Oh, I wouldn't go so far as—" "But it's what you think—and— he will want me with him and I—I won't be there."

And so the years passed away quickly, Gay grew into a tall, attractive young woman. They had been happy years for the most part, although somewhat hard and puzzling. Miss Alden's crippling arthritis confined her almost entirely to her specially constructed wheel chair. But she was a naturally cheerful woman and thoroughly enjoyed having Gay with her. She found her an apt pupil in every way and was proud as any parent when the girl finished the high school course with a fine rating and received a special diploma from the President of the School Board.

Aunt Grace Breaks News of Benny's Death

"I—I want to know how Benny is," she said, suddenly impressed by the place.

"Benny?" the nurse asked. "What's his other name? When did he come and just what—"

"He was hurt—a swing—his heart isn't good—Doctor Borden brought him—in the ambulance—this morning."

The nurse shook her head. "I'm sorry," she said. "You see, I'm in Women's Surgical right now and can't help you. Come on in and we'll ask the desk clerk. She might know."

But the desk clerk knew nothing. Her files showed that a child had been brought in from Bethesda suffering from spine injury and heart condition. Doctor Borden's patient. Gay turned away. Her heart was lead.

The nurse accompanied her into the lobby and said sympathetically, "Why don't you call Doctor Borden? He should be able to tell you. But you couldn't see the patient right now anyway because visiting hours are over and undoubtedly he won't be seeing anyone for a while. I shouldn't worry, my dear. Doctor Borden is a fine man—you can trust him—and us to do our best for the child."

Gay's gray eyes thanked her. Her voice was gone. She couldn't talk. She ran down the steps and along the street without seeing where she was going. A mud-spattered car drew up at the curb beside her and Doctor Borden called but at first she didn't hear; then as he repeated his call she stopped, turned and ran to him.

"How is he, Doctor?" she asked tremulously. "Is he terribly hurt? I have to know. Tell me."

"Come, my dear, get in here with me and I'll take you home. What's that you're carrying? Benny's belongings?" and as the girl shook her head, "Don't tell me you're running away, Frances. That would never do, you know. What has happened?"

Lesson for September 2, 1951

HOW rare it is to think of persons simply as persons, without any tags or labels! We think "policeman" or "lawyer" or "soldier" or "farmer" or "Japanese" before we think "man." One of the commonest tags we use is the race-tag. So-and-so is a Negro or an Italian or a Pole or a Mexican or a Scotchman, — at least that is the way he looks to us, even before he is Dan or Tony or Steve or whatever his name is. We say off-hand, "All Negroes are like that" or "all Mexicans are that way" and we don't often take the trouble to see whether a particular Negro or Mexican is really like that" or not. But from the Christian point of view, the first and most important fact about any person is that he is a person and not a thing.

A Lower Race

THE story of Jesus and the Samaritan woman shows how Jesus treated a person of a "lower" race than his. We needn't argue the question whether the Samaritans were actually beneath the Jews. In any case, the Jews treated the Samaritans like dirt.

On top of all that, the particular woman with whom Jesus talked at Jacob's well was poor and with no good reputation even among her own people. The disciples were surprised that Jesus talked with her at all. But as we read the story, it is clear that while Jesus "spoke of her condition" as the old expression is, he was dealing with her all the time as a particular human being, not merely as "a Samaritan."

Evidently, to be sure, she was greatly inferior to Jesus, and admitted as much herself; yet this fact did not raise a barrier between them.

A Dominant Race

WE often talk of "race prejudice" as if it were prejudice of toad against under-dog. But prejudice runs in both directions. Of course all race prejudice includes a strain of contempt; but a citizen of a conquered nation may despise his conquerors, the weak may despise the strong quite as easily as the other way around.

In the Bible we have an excellent example of a Christian coming into contact with a dominant, that is, a conquering, race: the story of St. Peter and the Roman officer Cornelius.

Peter at first did not want to have anything to do with Cornelius. God had to shake him into it, so to speak. But once Peter saw the point, he saw it plainly: God made no difference between Cornelius and Peter's own people, the Jews.

It was not for Peter to call any man, even an officer of the foreign army that occupied his little nation and held the Jews severely down, common or unclean.

Which is harder: for a Jew to treat a Samaritan like a human being, or to treat a Roman the same way? Which is harder, for a white man to treat a Negro like a human being, or for a Negro to treat a white man like one? It may be hard either way, but it is Christian.

"In Christ There Is No East or West"

A N old Scotch elder tells this story. "My church had invited the youth fellowship of all the denominations in the state to meet in our church, and the officers of our church were to serve the communion on the last afternoon. It had never occurred to me that some of the delegates would be Negroes, but when I stood up to pass the bread and wine, there sat some Negro young people right beside the white ones.

For a minute I thought I couldn't do it. In forty years as an elder in the church, I had never passed the communion plate to any but white persons. But then I thought, after all I am not passing the bread and wine to Negroes and white people, but only to Christians. So I went ahead with it and I never felt such a blessing as I had that afternoon."

The elder had discovered that what Paul wrote is true: in the "new creature" in Christ there is neither Greek nor Jew, slave nor free man; that in Christ's presence the stone walls that divide the human race melt like snow.

Scientist Studies Region of First Landing in America

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Archaeology and ethnology of the region where Columbus made his first landing on the mainland of the Americas in 1502 has been studied intensively during the past six months by a joint Smithsonian Institution—National Geographic Society expedition led by Dr. Matthew W. Stirling, director of the Bureau of American Ethnology.

The country concerned is northwestern Panama and contains the drainage system of three rivers between the Canal Zone and Costa Rica. Largely because it is a land of dense rain forests and is quite difficult of access, the region has remained almost unknown to anthropologists; little has been written of its people since Columbus' original description.

By and large, Dr. Stirling, who was accompanied by Mrs. Stirling, was able to confirm the observations of Columbus, although the great navigator may have exaggerated a trifle when he wrote of Indians wearing plentiful gold ornaments. Stirling found none of these.

The Spaniards were impressed by the fact that these Indians did not live in fairly large settlements, as did those with whom they had been in contact before in the West Indies, but in isolated huts in the forest. Dr. Stirling did not find any village sites but plenty of single house sites, which were excavated.

From the Atlantic coast the country is extremely difficult to enter. There are no harbors. The rivers empty into the sea between beaches and high, rocky cliffs. Small banana boats anchor a mile off shore and natives bring out their produce through the surf in dugout canoes. It is possible to enter on foot over high mountain trails from the Pacific side—much the safest and easiest way.

At the mouths of each of the three rivers visited, the Rio Salud, Rio Indio, and Rio Cocle' del Norte, there are small Negro settlements. The Indian inhabitants are encountered about 5 miles up these streams, and practically all their contact with civilization is across the mountains.

Police Captain Confesses Spent Time Shooting Bull

PADUCAH, Ky.—Police captain Gerald Stewart was quick to admit to townfolk that he spent a whole morning "just shooting the bull."

A large bull escaped from a local packing company and left a trail of wreckage and frightened people for several blocks. Police were called.

Stewart shot the animal, but the bull continued to charge him. He started to fire again, but found he was out of ammunition. Dodging the mad rushes of the infuriated animal, the police captain began to reload his pistol. Another officer rushed to his aid. After some time and nine "bull's eyes" they managed to kill the animal.

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Despite record numbers of new recruits there are yet only seven "Marines" in the Marine Corps.

They are: Master Sergeant Noel G. Marine, Haverlock, N.C.; Technical Sergeant Joseph N. Marine, Springfield, Mass.; Sergeant John D. Marine, Oakland, Calif.; Corporal Edward E. Marine, Oshkosh, Wis.; Sergeant Victor J. Marine, Downingtown, Pa.; Corporal Alonzo W. Marine, Jr., Cambridge, Md.; Private First Class Houston D. Marine, Hurlock, Md.

Mize One of Game's All-Timers

By GRANTLAND RICE

AN OLD friend of mine by the name of George Ade once started a slogan, hooked up with an organization, which he called "Flowers for the Living."

This is not a bad idea. I don't know what flowers ever mean to the dead. Or kind words. Or cheers. Or anything except the peace of eternal sleep.

We feel that it is almost impossible to write too many kind words about an old Georgia friend known as Johnny Mize, the Demorest Destroyer.

Johnny has always been a large, powerfully built, rather slow-moving performer destined to be no part of a Ty Cobb, who came from a neighboring Georgia village.

Johnny reported at Greensboro slightly over 21 years ago. He was then 17 years old. Today he is on his way to 40.

Johnny lost three years of baseball in the Navy, 1943, 1944 and 1945, a three-year term which cost his record at least 100 or more home runs. Possibly 150 home runs, since he was hitting at that clip after he had surrendered his Navy cap.

Around 15 years ago, St. Louis tried to pass Mize along to Cincinnati's Reds. Johnny had a bad knee and the Reds turned him back. At that time everyone thought Mize was through - a fine power hitter with a bad leg.

So Mize had to move back to the Cardinals. He began hitting home runs without losing any time. He also began winning a flock of ball games.

The Cardinals, meaning Mr. Rickey, sold Mize to the Giants in 1942, nine years ago. They figured Mize was all through, a washed-up slugger.

Mize gave the Giants 26 home runs that season. But he gave them 51 home runs in 1947 and 40 home runs in 1948. Those were the two years he tied Ralph Kiner, the Pirate slasher, now the best of all the home-run hitters. Mize was sent to Kansas City in 1950. He was brought back to hit 25 home runs that year.

Mize was 35 when he tied Kiner's march the second time; Kiner was 25. That's the type of hitter Johnny Mize happens to be. He could spot 'em 10 years and handle 'em. But you can't spot 'em too many decades. Johnny Mize is one of the great power hitters of all time. And quite a fellow beyond that.

The Greatest Hitters

There are many styles of great hitters. Willie Keeler was one of the great place hitters. I'll have to rank Ty Cobb above the immortal Willie.

Ty was a punch hitter. He elected this role over the slugger's job to get on base. They are paying tribute to hitters who have gotten 2,000 hits. Cobb got over 4,000 hits. He also stole close to 800 bases.

Babe Ruth was the power hitter. Babe might have been a .400 hitter just as Cobb might have been a slugger.

The two next greatest hitters I've ever seen in some 50 years of observation were Rogers Hornsby and Shoeless Joe Jackson.

Cobb - Ruth - Hornsby - Jackson. They are the four tops. After these - George Sisler. Sure anybody can be wrong. But what's the matter with Cobb, Ruth, Hornsby and Jackson?

They are the four tops in the land of the ash, in my book. Jackson was a natural-born hitter, if you'll take the word of Cobb, Ruth and Speaker. Years ago on radio interviews, each one told me that Jackson was the greatest hitter he had ever seen.

There is no questioning the fact now that Ralph Kiner is the biggest of the big hitters left. Kiner has averaged 48 home runs a year in the last four seasons.

He may raise this to 50 by the end of the 1951 campaign. Gil Hodges will need another 25 homers to protect his earlier lead.

Yet when Mize was close to 35, he tied Kiner two years running at 51 and 40. Ted Williams is a big hitter, but he isn't a Kiner. No one else is.

The Matter of Class

Several queries have arrived lately along this line: how does the heavyweight division of Sharkey, Carnera, Baer and Braddock compare with the 1951 mixture.

There isn't any big difference except that the modern heavyweights mentioned are more interesting and have more varied personalities. Sharkey and Baer were equipped to be high-class heavyweights, but disliked the game.

The top men today - Walcott, Charles, Louis and Marciano, plus La Starza and possibly Layne—are a queer mixture. Joe Louis was one of the greatest of all ring men—a great fighter in his day and prime. Walcott carries the greatest sympathetic appeal boxing has known in years. His average isn't too hot. He has knocked out Charles and, many feel, he has beaten Louis.

KIDNEYS MUST REMOVE EXCESS WASTE

When kidney function slows down, many folks complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Don't suffer longer with these discomforts if reduced kidney function is getting you down—due to such common causes as stress and strain, over-exertion or exposure to cold. Minor bladder irritations due to cold, diabetes or wrong diet may cause getting up nights or frequent passages. Don't neglect your kidneys if these conditions bother you.
