Fire Prevention Week at Tawas Opens With Parade Monday Night

Sponsored by Tawas Chamber of Commerce

Fire Prevention Week will open here Monday evening with a parade of the fire departments of Tawas City, Tawas Township and East Tawas on the streets of both cities. Announcements during the parade will be made from a sound car. The time—East Tawas 5:30; Tawas City 6:00.

The program is sponsored by the Tawas Chamber of the Tawas City, Tawas Township and East Tawas Fire Departments; the public schools; and Isoco Divisions of the U. S. Forestry Service, Department of Conservation and the U. S. Agricultural Department.

Russell Church is chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Fire Prevention Week program.

The Tawas Chamber of Commerce has joined the national effort to reduce fire hazards in this community and thus save lives and destruction of property caused by fires, by participating in the National Fire Prevention Week, October 7-13.

President Harry S. Truman in his proclamation urged that every man, woman and child in this great land contribute to the national effort to make the United States strong by accepting individual responsibility in the year-round campaign against the needless waste of life and destruction of property by preventable fires.

Mayor George Myles of Tawas City and Mayor Henry L. Klenow of East Tawas in observance of the national campaign have offered their cooperation by providing the cities' facilities to assist in controlling the multitude of fire hazards in the community.

Russell A. Rollin, County Superintendent of Schools, will launch an educational program to be presented through rural schools.

Russell D. Church, Chairman of the Tawas Chamber of Commerce Committee, says that most fires are preventable and a result of oversight or negligence in and around the home. He lists several of the most common hazards:

1. Defective chimneys and heating apparatus.
2. Combustible roofs.
3. Lightning in rural areas.
4. Spontaneous ignition.
5. Misuse of electricity.
6. Careless smoking and handling of matches.
7. Starting fires with kerosene.
8. Improper use and storage of gasoline and kerosene.

Among his recommendations to eliminate the hazards he urges that all citizens should:

1. Check chimney construction, and clean out chimney and furnace.

2. Eliminate combustible roofs or use spark arrestor on chimneys.
3. In rural areas provide lightnings rods.
4. Remove rubbish and old rags.
5. Check wiring throughout the house and other buildings. Replace frayed electric cords.
6. Never assume a fire is out and do not use kerosene for starting fires in stoves.
7. Store matches in fireproof closed containers and smokers be careful.
8. Equip premises adequately with fire extinguishers.

MAYOR'S PROCLAMATION

Whereas, During the past year preventable fires have again brought death to at least ten thousand citizens of the United States and permanent disability or painful injury to scores of thousands more; and

Whereas, Each year natural and created resources worth nearly a billion dollars are destroyed in our country by fire; and

Whereas, The present emergency requires that we conserve our manpower, our productive facilities, and our material resources.

Now, Therefore, I, George W. Myles, Mayor of Tawas City, Michigan, do hereby designate the week beginning October 7, 1951, as Fire Prevention Week, in accordance with the proclamation made by Harry S. Truman, President of the United States of America.

I urge that every man, woman, and child in this community contribute to the national effort to make the United States strong by accepting individual responsibility in the year-round campaign against the needless waste of life and destruction of property by preventable fires.

George W. Myles,
Mayor of Tawas City.

Beef Price Increases Announced; Marshall Retires to Private Life

BEEF PRICES—Harassed small town housewives, who have been fighting a losing battle with the food budget since the beginning of the Korean war, heard the news of a wholesale beef price increase with dismay. OPS authorized the increase of 1½ to 2 cents a pound at the wholesale level. It will mean the home town housewife will pay more for chucks and rounds.

In addition, OPS announced retail price increase on hams, shoulders, and bacon by 1 to 2 cents. Ceiling on pork chops and roasts were recently subject to an adjustment.

Junior Hog Champ

A 13-year-old city reared lad won nearly $600 and carried off top honors in competition with 55 farm youngsters in the 12th annual Chicago Junior Hog Show. Here he is, Carl Silva, Jr., of Dundee, Ill., who never lived on a farm until 5 months ago.

OPS said the new increases will restore fair profit margins to packers. Several had closed in recent weeks because they reported losing money under existing OPS price regulations.

It was estimated the new ceilings represent an average increase of a cent a pound on beef sold by the carcass.

Another order issued by OPS increased the ceiling price on utility grade of live cattle from $21.80 to $23.40 per hundred pounds. This grade is used by canners for the army and some other customers, but represents less than 10 per cent of all beef sold at retail.

FULL SCALE WAR—Military observers believe there is little, if any, chance of Korean truce talks resuming. For the most part they predict increased activity in the fighting, with latest reports confirming this view.

Flame throwers, tanks and artillery were used by the Allies last week in chopping out limited gains in eastern Korea, while in other sectors, U.N. troops beat back large Red attacks.

Gen. James A. Van Fleet, eighth army commander, is reported to have said the Reds at present do not have much of an offensive capability left on the eastern front. He reports Red casualties are running at 20 to 1 in comparison with the Allies'.

Meanwhile, the word war between the Communist and United Nations commands continues. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway warned the enemy that the admission that an American plane accidentally machine-gunned the Kaesong area recently is "no indication the U.N. command will accept any trumped up Communist charge, no matter how loudly they protest." He referred to Communist charges of previous attacks which the Allies have denied.

A-WEAPONS TRAINING—Some 12,000 soldiers from the home towns of the nation will get a close look soon at what an atomic explosion can do as they undergo training in the tactical use of atomic weapons. The training will be carried out in the Frenchman's Flat proving grounds near Las Vegas where the atomic energy commission set off several atomic explosions some weeks ago.

The maneuvers will be the first time army ground forces have received actual field training with the new "tactical" atomic weapons recently developed by the AEC. The weapons are believed to include guided missiles with atomic warheads and atomic artillery shells.

PAY RAISE—A pay raise of 10 per cent was approved by the senate last week for approximately 1,000,000 federal workers. The house must act on the bill and President Truman must sign it, however, before the money would be forthcoming.

The measure would increase federal employee wages on the average of $307.53 a year, at an annual cost to the government of about $340,000,000. It would grant raises to almost all federal workers except those in the post office department. Postal workers previously were voted increases ranging from $400 to $800 in a senate bill.

NO RUSH BUYING—Merchants in all sections of the country, from the home towns to the big towns, have noticed recently there is no buying rush as there was only a few months ago. Economists have come up with several reasons why rush buying has stopped, but the two main ones seem to be the increased cost of items and the consumer now is buying what he needs, not because he fears future shortages.

During part of 1950 and early 1951 the American consumer went on a buying spree because of predicted shortages. Many of the items purchased were on the installment plan and now the consumer is paying for them. The old fear of shortages no longer worries the consumer because he believes goods will be available.

And because of higher prices many consumers are saving for that rainy day, to pay off debts, and to buy things when prices are readjusted.

TAFT PROSPECTS—Sen. Robert Taft frankly admitted on his recent speaking tour through Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota was a prospecting trip which will have great bearing upon whether or not he will seek the 1952 Republican nomination for president.

"A lot of people say they want me to run, but I want to be sure of the amount of support I am going to have before I make any final decision," the Ohioan said.

THE GENERAL—The acceptance by President Truman of George C. Marshall's resignation as secretary of defense retires to private life a man who has held a unique place in American public life during the past decade, especially in the minds of the people in the home towns of the country. Gen. Marshall inspired confidence in the American people as has no other military man in recent years.

Quits Defense Post

Gen. Marshall, retired as defense secretary, confers with President Truman and Robert A. Lovett, the new secretary.

After a long and honorable military career, Marshall rose to new heights as United States chief of staff in World War II. At the end of the war he retired, but was called back by President Truman to head a mission to China in an effort to end the civil war there. After that fruitless mission he was named secretary of state, during which the government launched the foreign-aid program that became known as the Marshall plan. He resigned that post in 1949. A year ago Truman called him from retirement to take the post of secretary of defense.

Senator Johnson of Texas very well summed up the opinion of the average American's regard for Marshall: "Long after the trivial carping of his detractors has been forgotten, the memory of George Marshall's services will stand as an inspiring monument to future defenders of freedom in the world. Because of his efforts, freedom has survived and will continue to survive."

FARM OUTLOOK

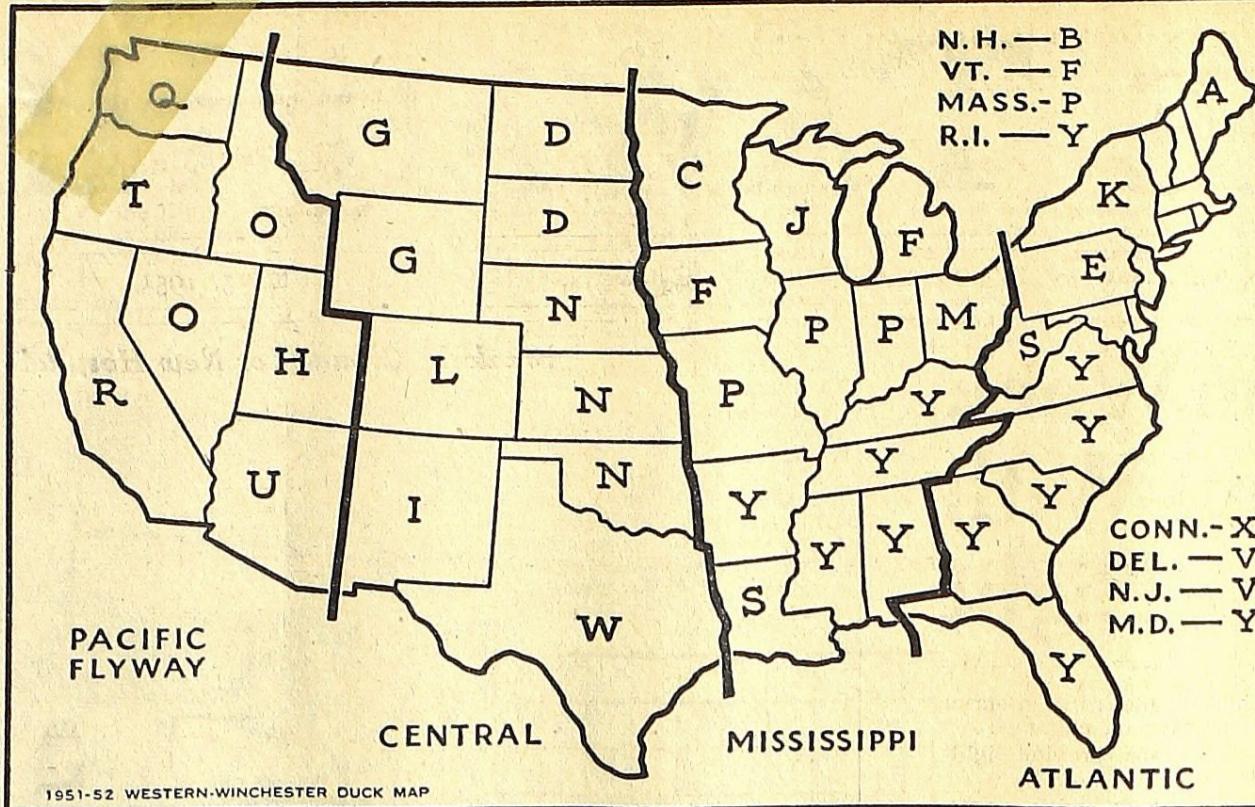

Second Largest Farm Crop Is Expected

Despite unfavorable weather—drought in much of the south and southwest and excessive rain in the midwest—crop production in 1951 promises to be the second largest on record, according to the department of agriculture.

The department reported the volume of all crops was indicated at 133 per cent of the 1923-33 average compared with a record of 138 per cent set in 1948.

In another report, the department predicted livestock marketing will increase this fall to equal or pass the large volume of the fall of 1950. So far this year marketing of livestock has been running behind that of last year. Hog slaughtering is expected to levels of a year ago. As a result, prices may be considerably lower.

THE READER'S DATE BOOK Annual Fire Damage in Nation's Home Towns Totals Millions

National Fire Prevention Week, October 7-13, is an ideal time for the small towns of the nation to inventory their fire fighting equipment and organization. And it is the opportune time for the home town merchant to inspect his building and make a check list for the elimination of fire hazards.

It seems fantastic, but last year 51,000 stores, many of them in the home towns of the nation, were destroyed by fire. The total loss was estimated at approximately $53,000,000.

And fires on the nation's farms are causing deaths of 3,500 persons and a property loss of nearly $100,000,000 every year.

To cut these losses, merchant organizations in many small towns, in cooperation with other civic organizations, have conducted fire safety education programs through elementary and high schools and before local groups. Many communities will conduct fire safety programs, designed primarily to remove immediate fire hazards.

Here is a short self-inspection list that the local merchant might well consult during National Fire Prevention Week:

1. Are all entrances and fire exits unobstructed, clearly marked and lighted?
2. Is all rubbish removed regularly—not just out into the store yard—but burned or hauled away?
3. Is basement storage space separated by substantial partitions and is merchandise stored neatly with easy access for fire fighting?
4. Are flammable liquids stored in approved safety containers?
5. Are all electrical installations performed by a competent electrician?
6. Are all fuses of proper type, size and in good condition?
7. Is there dirt or rubbish under benches, in lockers, behind radiators, or any other part of the premises?

This is a short list the local merchant might make in inspection of his store, or his home, for that matter.

The annual fire loss in the home towns and rural areas is so high today because of two general factors. There is delay in notifying the fire department because the fire isn't immediately noticed, and, there isn't a good supply of water near the blaze.

ganizing farmers to haul water in milk cans to fires; these cans of water help keep the pumps going longer. But rural residents will be much better off and his properties will be safer if he has a dependable water supply for fire fighting with-in easy access of a road and his buildings.

Another program the merchant might find beneficial to sponsor is fire prevention instruction as a part of the regular curriculum of the nation's rural schools. Many a group in the country today feel that fire safety education is just as important to local and national welfare as geography, history, or any other standard subject. The nation-wide trend toward consolidation of small school districts into larger ones was the opening the door for a rural school fire safety instruction program in some areas.

If enough farmers are organized to bring water to a fire in milk cans, the fire department's pumper can be kept in operation for a considerable time. The above picture shows the scene at a fire in a Michigan community, where this method is in use. However, milk cans are no substitute for a good accessible pond or 3,000 gallon cistern.

In Illinois, for example, the 12,000 school districts that existed in 1940 have been reduced to approximately 5,000 districts today. The new districts are stronger financially, better administered, and should be able to include a fire safety education program in their operation.

Many educators believe modern farm youth would welcome the opportunity to learn fire safety as a part of their regular school work. Through such training, they would undoubtedly make important contributions to the fight against farm fire losses.

Nine out of ten fires start through carelessness. Today, America can't afford this waste. Fire hurts our defense effort, consumes needed housing, feeds inflation by destroying $2,000,000,000 in buildings and materials daily.

Don't gamble with fire. Throw out rubbish and rags. Don't smoke where it is forbidden; never smoke in bed. Don't misuse electrical wiring and appliances. Make a fire "safety check" of your home. And keep matches away from children.

There are many other things one can do to prevent fires, but observing these few will help tremendously.

NEPH Week Scheduled For October 7 to 13

Hiring the physically handicapped not as charity but to promote defense production and the national economy was urged by President Truman recently when he proclaimed the week of October 7-13 as National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week.

The physically handicapped is the often overlooked labor source of many home town employers. The results of two recent surveys of the work performance of the physically handicapped indicates that when properly placed, they generally make good. They are excellent producers. They are safe workers. And they stay on the job.

During the past year, as more and more people went into the armed forces, the public employment services found 100,000 more jobs for the handicapped than the year before, a gain of more than 40 per cent.

In the coming year the manpower reserve of the nation will be further tapped by the armed forces. To fill this void in the labor force, local employers might well consider the handicapped persons.

DEFEND AMERICA
From Fire

DO YOUR PART! FIRE PREVENTION WEEK OCT. 7-13

If home town and rural residents can find means to correct them, they will go a long way toward reducing the large number of "total losses" that occur in rural areas. Early detection of farm fires is important. Firemen say that the first five minutes of a fire are more important than the next five hours. Farmers should be on the alert at times when they suspect danger, such as after an electrical storm, or when power machinery is operating unattended. When new hay of unknown moisture content is stored, it should be watched carefully for any signs of overheating. Your local county agent will tell you of methods to "take the temperature" of hay to find out if it is nearing the danger point.

Most small communities now have some kind of organized fire department and water supply is adequate. However, any community that does not have a water supply, a centrally located 3,000 gallon cistern should be considered. Merchants would find that sponsoring such a project would be well worth the effort because of the added protection it would offer.

On the farm, the easiest way to provide adequate water is to dam a brook, or deepen an existing marsh or water hole near the barn. Where this is not possible, the farmer may be able to bulldoze a suitable pond near his buildings.

Many farm fire departments are improving their efficiency by adding large water-carrying trucks and trailers to their equipment. They are using spray nozzles and chemical wetting agents to stretch these supplies even farther. They are or-

ENRICHED BREAD

Enrichment of White Bread With Vitamin B Started 10 Years Ago

Enriched white bread in the past ten years has resulted in the virtual wiping out of two deficiency diseases and has contributed materially to better health and increased vigor to the American people, according to statements from outstanding authorities in medical and nutritional science.

Bakers all over America this year are celebrating the decennial bread enrichment. It was in March, 1941, when the enrichment program got under way on a national scale.

White bread "enrichment" is simply the raising in bread of the content of the B vitamins—niacin, thiamin and riboflavin—and iron. Those elements are produced in volume in the process of milling wheat into flour.

The two diseases which result from a lack of the B vitamins are called beriberi heart disease and pellagra. While the average person probably is not too familiar with either of these, they were not at all uncommon in the United States prior to 1941.

The B vitamins perform an important function in the body. They make it possible to eat an ample quantity of food but still suffer from malnutrition if B vitamins were not present in sufficient quantity to make the proteins, carbohydrates and other food properties adequately absorbed into the body.

It was indications of this lack of proper nourishment which was causing considerable concern among doctors and nutritionists in the 1930's. The state of the nation's health was definitely not good and the fact was pointed up sharply when the draft started in 1940 and 1941. Thousands of young men were rejected for military service and the cause for some of the rejections could be traced to malnutrition.

Families such as the one pictured above enjoy better health today, leading scientists declare, because the bread they consume has been enriched with vitamins and minerals.

The discovery of how to make B vitamins by chemical combinations in 1936 made it possible to provide the people with the vitamins. The method of getting the vitamins to the mass of the people was another problem. Consultation between government health authorities and scientists brought about an approach to the flour millers and bakers.

These meetings culminated in agreement that bread was the natural place for the vitamins and the program was launched in 1941. The B vitamins belonged in bread, since they were present in the original whole grain. Bread is a universal food, appearing most frequently in most families. And bread is one of the least expensive of foods. These facts added up to the obvious conclusion that the best place to provide B vitamins was in bread. Enriched bread thus came into being.

TO THE AVERAGE consumer, enrichment has meant general betterment of physical well being, the scientists say. Studies among children reveal, in test cases, that youngsters who received B vitamins were more vigorous, more alert, less peevish, while those whose diets did not include B vitamins were listless, inclined to cry more readily and showed little inclination for play.

Changing living habits were major factors in making the enrichment program necessary. Around 1900, 95 per cent of all the bread consumed in America was made in the home, today, 95 per cent is made by bakers.

Flour 50 years ago was not as fully refined as it is today and more of the nutritional elements of wheat were obtained in the daily diet. Better transportation and better methods of processing, shipping and handling food brought a greater variety to daily diet.

Each American used to eat more than 200 pounds of cereal products each year. Recently the average has been about 135 pounds. Too, the consumer insists on a white and light loaf of bread which means less of the B vitamins are present in the product reaching the consumer table.

Health authorities who were more and more alarmed by the declining state of national health in the mid-30's made strenuous efforts to promote greater use of whole wheat bread, but with no noticeable results. The consumer still wanted white bread.

Today, a huge percentage of all white bread made by American bakers is enriched.

If Truman Wins Again, Republicans Are Through

By Wright A. Patterson

THROUGH his numerous addresses throughout the nation, notably those in Texas, Washington, Boston and others, General Douglas MacArthur has given the American people "that something to be for" rather than only something to be against.

This he has done in unmistakable words which admit no possible misinterpretations — not weasel words to confuse. Through these statements he has established the clarion call for political battle in 1952.

He calls for a battle for the freedom of the American people as individuals, freedoms established and passed down to us by our forefathers, the founders of this nation.

General MacArthur, without any desire for political reward, has given words to what the Republican leaders either could not or would not express. And he has driven the idea to a point where it must be accepted as a plank on which the campaign will be waged.

Should it, by any chance, not be accepted as the gauge of battle with an insistence that the fight be along that line, the President, if he be the Democratic candidate, will win, and the Republicans as such will be through.

In providing the one issue, that of freedom of the individual, General MacArthur covers all the issues that could be expected. It embraces the opposition toward the drift toward socialism, maintenance of the private enterprise system, the rights of states and local governments—all are wrapped up in one package labeled "freedom of the individual citizen." He has sold freedom as opposed to government direction and persuasion.

There they are, the issues of the 1952 campaign, expressed as the people like them. It only remains for Republican leaders to accept what is their's for the taking with no strings tied to the package.

With it would go the enthusiasm statements as the general delivered them from many platforms. Certainly, these Republican leaders cannot be foolish enough to turn away! It's a campaign ready made for any party nominee—with the exception of General Eisenhower. Such a pronouncement would not be a "viewing with alarm" by either the party or MacArthur.

It would constitute a promise of what the party would do in exchange for victory, the thing for which General Douglas MacArthur, the popular hero, has asked to be done.

The unsupported statements of the approach of the Russian war wolf have ceased to jar the nerves or arouse the fears of the American people, though they have not stopped the appropriations of more billions for preparedness on the part of congress.

A preparedness that does not seem to advance as rapidly as so

THE FICTION CORNER

BIG RED'S CURE

By Helen Langworthy

THE reason my husband has been nick-named Big Red is because he's over six feet tall, carrot-topped and peppery dispositioned. While painting our home and reaching far out from the top of the ladder Big Red fell. There were more people than the doctor and I to realize that my husband had broken his leg. He was howling mad!

Surprisingly, though, Big Red wasn't too bad a patient during his long hospitalization. Yes, leave it to him—he did a royal job, nothing simple and routine! His fracture required specialists, operations and enough paraphernalia around his bed to make it resemble Frankenstein's nightmare. That's my Big Red!

During those long months before he came home Big Red said that the thing he was most thankful for was that he was away from the Sanders, the Markhams, and the Keatings.

Perhaps in other neighborhoods there are more family's like those three. If so, I can sympathize with all who live neighbor to thoroughly nice but thoroughly tiresome folks. Take Mr. Sanders, for instance. He has gall stones. The way he describes the pain, the many medicines the doctors have tried to dissolve them is something to remember for days. When anyone suggests an operation, Mr. Sanders gasps, "Oh, no!" You wonder if one would rob him of his only conversational topic!

Little Mrs. Markham is sweet and lovely. She seems so—until she mentions she didn't sleep last night, the night before and for weeks has heard the clock strike every hour! She's tried counting sheep, hot milk and drugs. Nothing helps.

"If this cure doesn't work," Big Red agreed, "I could always do a repeat."

Then there's Mr. Keating. He's next in size to Big Red. His woe is an allergy. When he and his wife come in maybe it's the new davenport pillow that he stares at like it came from Mars. He's spent hours receiving painful shots and telling about them.

WHEN Big Red finally came home and was established in bed he told me to ask the Sanders, Markhams and the Keating's all to visit. Those bores—and all at once. Wondering if complex broken legs could upset a man mentally, I argued gently. Big Red roared so I asked the three couples over.

It must have been the first time anyone had dared having the three chronic complainers under one roof. How the conversation flew! "My painful gall stones—" was interrupted with, "—not a good night's sleep for three years!" Then Mr. Keating pounced on one of Big Red's fluffy blankets and gave us a run down on awful allergies. I looked at my husband. He was smiling!

Then he began! With a voice that could make a general stand at attention, Big Red described the troubles he'd undergone. He reeled off treatments, doctors, specialists, traction affairs, the silver plates that had been applied to his leg bone during the operations, the pain, the sleeplessness, the discomfort, the way the doctors had been perplexed, hundreds of shots! It was terrific. I think my mouth flew open and I forgot to shut it.

When our company looked at each other in extreme boredom and giggled their feet experimentally as though they wondered how soon they could decently leave.—Big Red winked at me! He took a deep breath—and began again on the horrors of his case.

Out on the porch, with Big Red's voice just a muted roar our guests expressed their sympathy. "Such a one track mind!" said Mr. Keating.

"Don't you get tired of hearing him talk about pain?" asked Mr. Sanders who never tires of his!

I stepped inside, closed the door on their pity. Then I went to Big Red . . . and we giggled, we roared with laughter. Big Red's bed shook. "I can't wait 'til we see them . . . next time," I told him, finally.

"If this cure doesn't work," Big Red agreed, "I could always do a repeat!"

Somehow, though—I'm sure there will be no need!

Cancer Mortality On The Decline

Encouraging indications of a decline in cancer mortality are reported by statisticians who base their findings upon the postwar experience of millions of industrial policyholders.

Favorable developments in the cancer picture are most evident, the statisticians point out, when the recent trend of mortality is studied according to whether the primary site of the disease is accessible or inaccessible to diagnosis.

For the accessible sites as a group, both men and women in the insurance experience recorded declines in the death rate from 1946-47 to 1949-50, men by 2.4 per cent and women by 7.2. There was a reduction in female mortality from almost all the accessible specific types of cancer.

In the case of the inaccessible sites as a whole, the death rate among women declined 1.1 per cent, but, on the other hand, that among men showed an increase of 4 per cent. However, both sexes showed decreases for such specific sites as the stomach, intestines, other digestive organs, bladder, and liver.

Considerable increases in death rates were recorded for cancers of the lungs and other respiratory areas.

Greatly intensified efforts have been put forth on all fronts since the end of the war to fight cancer. These have included the expansion of diagnostic facilities, the opening of more special cancer hospitals, and intensified cancer research. In addition, the statisticians state "great emphasis is still placed upon early recognition and treatment of the disease."

Good or Bad?
"I had a mighty queer surprise this morning," remarked the stock broker. "I put on my last summer's thin suit on account of this extraordinary hot weather, and in one of the trousers pockets I found a big roll of bills which I had entirely forgotten."
"Were any of them receipted?" asked a pessimist.

Planted 'Em Himself
"And you say you guarantee these canaries?"
"Guarantee them? Why, madam, I raised them from canary seed!"

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE -NOT GOOD FOOD

Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!
Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.
But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

HALLOWEEN DROP DOUGHNUTS
Crispy brown outside, delicate and fluffy inside, an easy-to-make holiday treat.
ADD 2 pkg. RED STAR Special Active Dry Yeast to 1/2 cup warm water (110°-115°). Let stand. SCALD 3/4 cup milk. Pour into large bowl with 1/4 cup sugar, 1 tsp. salt, 1/2 tsp. each of mace and nutmeg; blend together and cool to lukewarm. STIR yeast-mixture well and pour into bowl. MIX IN 1/2 cup soft shortening, 2 eggs, with 3 1/2 cups sifted flour. BEAT until batter is smooth—about 100 strokes. SCRAPE down dough from sides of bowl. COVER and let rise in warm place until doubled—about 30 minutes. STIR down and let rest while fat is heating to 350° (to test—a 1-in. cube of bread browns in 60 seconds). DROP batter from teaspoon into hot fat. Turn when edges show color. frying golden brown—about 1 1/2 minutes on each side.
DO'S FOR DOUGHNUTS
• DO have fat 1 1/2 to 2-in. deep in heavy pan for shallow fat frying.
• DO keep temperature around 350-375 degrees. Too hot fat forms crust before doughnuts are cooked through, too cool fat means doughnuts will soak up oil.
• DO turn doughnuts when edges show golden brown color.
• DO sugar coat while still warm.

RESIDENT NURSE A SERIAL STORY BY LUCY AGNES HANCOCK

THE STORY SO FAR: Generosa Grace Alden bequeaths her niece, orphaned Gay Gaynor, $5,000 and her house, enabling the girl to enter nurse's training. Gay, befriended by Dr. Borden, hopes to join the staff of the Bessemer Memorial hospital. Gay pities Dr. Borden because of his son, Thad, who is so enthralled by Vivian Poole, madcap, pleasure-loving, snobbish daughter of the richest man in town. Vivian is now engaged to Adrian D'Archer, a New York artist. Gay despises Thad, because she has lately suffered one time when he kissed her against her will. He is conitrate over the episode, but she refuses to associate with him or even be polite to him.

Again Gay smiled politely, and the visitor patted her hand. "I miss Grace, too, my dear," she said softly. "She was a rare friend—a sweet woman. I think you are a little like her."

disappeared from the Bessemer scene and no one heard anything until the local paper announced, with many pictures, that the only daughter of "our distinguished citizen," Samuel Poole, was to be united in the holy bonds of matrimony to one Adrian D'Archer, fashionable and successful portrait painter, widely known in both Europe and America as the portrayal in oils of the world's most beautiful women.

CHAPTER VII Half an hour later, Gay knocked on the door. There was no response and she turned the handle and looked in. Doctor Borden sat in a chair before the fire, his head in his hands, the contents of the mysterious envelope on the floor at his feet.

"What are your plans?" the visitor asked after a moment in which she wondered if she should leave, but decided against it. The girl needed rousing. She was too apathetic. It wasn't natural.

IT IS on record that a Virginian in the 18th century wrote to his family that he was moving "to the far west," meaning the neighborhood of what is now Bull Run, Va., not far from Washington, D. C. Well, the "far west" moved and it reached the Pacific. Beyond that ocean is the Orient, crowded past belief. Where now can the pioneer go? For pioneering is always in the blood of man. Not in every one's, to be sure; there always are contented stay-behinds; but also there always are the restless souls, not content with what has been or is. How shall pioneering instincts have their way when all frontiers are closed?

Dr. Borden gave up his chair and moved to the door. He opened it and looked out. "Come in," he called.

"Thank you," the girl said simply. "What are your plans?" the visitor asked after a moment in which she wondered if she should leave, but decided against it. The girl needed rousing. She was too apathetic. It wasn't natural.

THE traveling pioneer has about had his day; what we now need is the un-traveling pioneer. Such explorers are of various sorts. One is the mental pioneer, moving to new frontiers of the mind. These can be found breaking out new trails in various directions.

Mr. Bailey put her teacup on the table in front of Gay and said with affectionate admiration, "Frances Gaynor, I think you're wonderful—simply and amazingly wonderful! If I had a daughter I should want her to be exactly like you. I don't wonder Grace Alden loved you. I—I love you myself." The rather hard blue eyes softened and filled with tears. "I never had a daughter, Gay. I wish I had some of Grace's courage and dared adopt a girl."

In science there are the men whose minds produced X-rays and plastics, the men and women who did the brainwork that lay behind the splitting of the atom; in government the men on the judge's bench, in lawyers' offices or in professors' chairs, who have been and are still thinking out the undiscovered meanings of democracy; in education the men and women who have pioneered in new ways of teaching, such as Dr. Laubach, great scholar and missionary, who has led the way in teaching the "silent billion" to read and write; these are all pioneers of the mind. God send us more!

Dr. Borden gave up his chair and moved to the door. He opened it and looked out. "Come in," he called.

"I know. Not tony enough for 'em, Look at that cake, Gay! Five layers! Well, I bet 'twas no better than it should be. A slather of icing can cover an unholty mess. Look, Gay, I took both of 'em to cut it! Tough, I bet a dollar." She threw the paper down with a grunt of disgust.

For instance: once upon a time, practically all Christian people supposed that slavery was not only a good thing, but that God had commanded it for all time. Whitfield, a famous evangelist, said that what America needed for its development was more slaves imported from Africa, and more home-brewing of liquor. Today this sounds so ridiculous that it is hard to believe that a Christian could have said it.

"You're very much like her, my dear," he said huskily.

"Why don't you?" Gay asked reasonably.

Between Whitfield's time and ours there have been moral pioneers, notably a Quaker named John Woolman on whose mind and heart God laid the message: Slavery is a wrong.

"And that is the very nicest thing anyone could tell me," Gay answered. "I hope that some day I shall become as splendid a woman as"

"No Frances Gaynors, Mrs. Bailey," Gay said, "but any number of boys and girls longing for a home and love—praying that some day their dreams of belonging to someone will be realized. Not all the children in Bethesda and similar orphanages are attractive or lovable, but many are, and as Aunt Grace was fond of saying—'Investing in human happenings pays such rich dividends.' Why don't you come over to Bethesda with me some afternoon and get acquainted with the matron and the children? I go over occasionally—it was my home for a long time, you know."

Moral Pioneers WE need also pioneers of the moral life. "Time," says a line in a poem by J. R. Lowell which has made its way into most hymnbooks, "makes ancient good uncouth."

"You're very much like her, my dear," he said huskily.

"I'm afraid," the woman replied. "I doubt if I should be as lucky as she was—there are no more Frances Gaynors at Bethesda."

Time has made ancient good uncouth. But time alone will not do this. There must always be some moral pioneer, some one who will run the risk of being called "bad" by going out in front of popular opinion.

"You're very much like her, my dear," he said huskily.

"I'm afraid," the woman replied. "I doubt if I should be as lucky as she was—there are no more Frances Gaynors at Bethesda."

Between Whitfield's time and ours there have been moral pioneers, notably a Quaker named John Woolman on whose mind and heart God laid the message: Slavery is a wrong.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

International Uniforms Sunday School Lessons SCRIPTURE: Genesis 11:27-12:18. DEVOTIONAL READING: Hebrews 11:1-10.

Lesson for October 7, 1951

IT IS on record that a Virginian in the 18th century wrote to his family that he was moving "to the far west," meaning the neighborhood of what is now Bull Run, Va., not far from Washington, D. C. Well, the "far west" moved and it reached the Pacific. Beyond that ocean is the Orient, crowded past belief. Where now can the pioneer go? For pioneering is always in the blood of man. Not in every one's, to be sure; there always are contented stay-behinds; but also there always are the restless souls, not content with what has been or is. How shall pioneering instincts have their way when all frontiers are closed?

Un-Traveling Pioneers THE traveling pioneer has about had his day; what we now need is the un-traveling pioneer. Such explorers are of various sorts. One is the mental pioneer, moving to new frontiers of the mind. These can be found breaking out new trails in various directions.

In science there are the men whose minds produced X-rays and plastics, the men and women who did the brainwork that lay behind the splitting of the atom; in government the men on the judge's bench, in lawyers' offices or in professors' chairs, who have been and are still thinking out the undiscovered meanings of democracy; in education the men and women who have pioneered in new ways of teaching, such as Dr. Laubach, great scholar and missionary, who has led the way in teaching the "silent billion" to read and write; these are all pioneers of the mind. God send us more!

Moral Pioneers WE need also pioneers of the moral life. "Time," says a line in a poem by J. R. Lowell which has made its way into most hymnbooks, "makes ancient good uncouth."

For instance: once upon a time, practically all Christian people supposed that slavery was not only a good thing, but that God had commanded it for all time. Whitfield, a famous evangelist, said that what America needed for its development was more slaves imported from Africa, and more home-brewing of liquor. Today this sounds so ridiculous that it is hard to believe that a Christian could have said it.

Time has made ancient good uncouth. But time alone will not do this. There must always be some moral pioneer, some one who will run the risk of being called "bad" by going out in front of popular opinion.

Between Whitfield's time and ours there have been moral pioneers, notably a Quaker named John Woolman on whose mind and heart God laid the message: Slavery is a wrong.

Laramie Treaty Example of Way To Talk Peace

CHEYENNE AGENCY, S. Dak.—United Nations and Communist negotiators in Korea might take a lesson from a peaceful "cease fire" council by 10,000 Indians and the U.S. government held one hundred years ago this month.

It was the famous Ft. Laramie treaty which was signed with the federal government after a tranquil 23 day gathering of eight Indian nations, many of which had been at war from time immemorial. The treaty defined tribal boundaries and pledged safe conduct to Americans enroute to the California Gold Rush.

For the first time the Black Hills were recognized as Sioux Territory by the government and other tribes. Re-enactment Re-enactment of the ceremonies were held here September 2 and 3 and more than 200 Indians participated. Senator Francis Case (R-S.D.) and Indian Commissioner Dillon Myer were the principal speakers.

Indians taking part in the original Ft. Laramie ceremonies were the occupants of a vast section of the Central part of the United States. On hand were Dakotahs (or Sioux), Cheyennes, Arrapahoes, Crows, Assinaboines, Gros-Ventres, Mandans and Arickaras who together occupied all the territory south of the Missouri River in Montana and North Dakota, east of the Rocky Mountains, and north of the lines of Texas and New Mexico.

The actual signing took place at Ft. Laramie, Wyoming, but the scene of the re-enactment here closely resembles that area. It took place in an outdoor amphitheater. The treaty was the first agreement ever signed with the plains Indians and while it was not ratified by the Senate, Congress appropriated funds for yearly payments to the tribes. Despite the non-ratification, warfare between the tribes and between them and the whites ceased for three years. Historians say that the "inopititude of the military" precipitated trouble between the government and the Indians in 1854 which lasted for about 25 years. The Custer Massacre in 1876 might not have occurred had the treaty not failed.

Protect Pioneers Supt. D. D. Mitchell of the Indian Service proposed the Ft. Laramie gathering to protect fortune seekers on their way to the California Gold Rush because many of the Indians, caused the stampede of buffalo and other Indian game. In retaliation, the Indians often molested the white travelers' wagon trains, occasionally picking off one of the outsiders. Mitchell declared in a letter to the Indian Department: "We can never whip them into friendship; the prowess of our troops and the vast resources of the government would be wasted in long and toilsome marches over the plains in the pursuit of an ignis fatuus; they never see an enemy."

The veteran Indian official suggested the council be solemnized by the interchange of presents among the Indians themselves which he felt would bring permanent peace among the tribes and between them and the federal government. He thought the Indian boundaries could be established to the satisfaction of all. A government wagon train of presents was ordered to Ft. Laramie to be distributed to the Indians. However, it was delayed and the great assembly of Indians was near starvation when it finally arrived on September 20. The treaty was signed on September 17, 1851.

Practical Chinese Commie Knows the Time to Resign WITH THE FIRST MARINE DIVISION IN KOREA—Marine Private First Class Douglas Hale, of 15401 Mack Avenue, Detroit, Michigan, believes he has found the most practical Chinese soldier in Korea. Through an interpreter, Pfc. Hale talked to a Chinese prisoner who had surrendered voluntarily. The Chinese was carrying a fistful of surrender leaflets.

"Why did you surrender?" asked Pfc. Hale. "I cook breakfast for 60 soldiers," the Oriental chef answered. "Then they go out to fight. Nobody came to dinner. I thought I'd better go south."

Woman Correctly Predicts Hour of Her Own Passing REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — Mrs. Eryth Hanson correctly predicted the hour of her own passing. For a month after she returned from a hospital she said: "I shall die at 11:45 on Aug. 21." That was the time of her death. Said her husband: "She was a woman of great faith, and people with such faith have premonitions not given to others."

"At 9 o'clock that night, she went to sleep," he said. "I called the doctor. At 11:45 he pronounced her dead."

About Deer

Antlers are usually considered the exclusive property of the male deer, but at times a female will be found with a small set. Antlers are shed and re-grown each year. Let's begin with the moment the antler falls off, usually in January or February. Bleeding begins from the pedicel, which clots very rapidly. Skin, which contains veins, nerves and hair, forms over the blood clot. The burr or warty substance forms first, this is caused by the overflow of blood.

The antler establishes its full diameter first and then begins to elongate. Antlers are supplied by two streams of blood, the stream which runs up through the pedicel and a second stream which feeds the velvet. The animal is very sensitive during the time of antler development.

The beam, or main stem, grows until it flattens, then bifurcation takes place, which forms tines. The blood vessels eventually are filled in and closed, beginning at the top. After the antlers take on their solid form, the outer skin, or velvet, becomes very itchy, and the buck will rub his antlers against branches until all the velvet is removed and the antler becomes shiny. This whole process of growing antlers takes approximately 100 to 120 days.

A first year animal will usually produce a single beam or spike, with more tines being added along with each year's set of antlers. The age can be guessed from the number of tines, but this is not accurate due to possible malformation of the antlers which may be caused by: 1. Injury to the antler during growth, 2. Injury to the animal itself, which usually causes malformation on the same side of the animal that was injured, or 3. Poor growth because of poor food.

Cover for wildlife corresponds to barns and sheds of domestic animals. It affords shelter from the elements, refuge from enemies, a place of comparative peace where resting periods may be spent in preparation for foraging, and other activities in the open. It should, therefore, be comfortable, safe and readily accessible.

On the edges of the deep woods and in the dense thickets which are its favorite habitat, the ruffed grouse ("partridge" to most hunters) can, and does, give sportsmen a mighty hard time.

Hard, that is, from the standpoint of bringing home meat while a fellow's learning the game—but as good a time as he'll ever have.

Grouse have the habit of seeming very scarce until a man gets all tied up in the brush. Then, exploding from cover right at his foot, they're apt to disappear before he can snap the safety off.

Even when you're not tied up in brush, they're mighty adept at putting a couple of saplings between themselves and a charge of No. 8's. Every hunter has literally mown off the bushes as a bird disappeared unscathed, and undoubtedly also has had the experience of clubbing a tree with his gun-barrel while swinging on a "side-winder."

Early-season trout fishermen enjoy the "drumming" of the males when the birds are abundant, and are saddened by the lack of it when the birds are at a "low." Yes, in addition to their tricky behavior in the brush during the hunting season, grouse have another habit which gives sportsmen and biologists alike a great deal of concern. They have a tendency to be very abundant for a few years, and then very scarce for a few. This cyclic behavior has received a lot of attention from hunters as well as from professional game men.

Some want to cure grouse cycles, and some only cuss them, but we still have them, and whether they can be cured or only cussed is a question not yet answered. Many observations have been advanced as explanations and have proven to be correlated with the cycles, but not necessarily the cause of them. Biologists of the Conservation department's Pittman-Robertson grouse research project are looking for more correlations.

Biologists believe their function today is to correct all the data they can, on all possible aspects of the rough grouse population, and to develop new approaches to the old problem. They are building the foundation on which grouse management, and consequently the sport of hunting, will rest in the future.

Conservation-minded fishermen used to believe confidently that they should "put the little fish back and give them a chance to grow."

Fact-finding has shown that where fast-multiplying panfish are concerned, the well-meant old slogan is anti-conservation. The trouble is, in more cases than not those little fish won't grow. What they'll do, if put back in the water, is compete with countless little cousins for a too-small food supply.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Lining Cake Pan
To line the bottom of a cake pan quickly, fit waxed paper into the pan, and cut around bottom circle with a razor blade. You'll get a neat-fitting liner.

Tossed Salad
Foods and nutrition specialists advise against adding salt or dressing until you're ready to serve a tossed salad. They draw the liquid from foods.

Fresh Fruit
Fresh fruits should be stored in a cool, dry place. Berries should be spread carefully on trays and sorted, but not washed until prepared for the table.

Woven Fabrics
Closely woven fabrics are best for slip covers because they give greater protection against dust, hold their shape better, wear longer and tailor more easily than do loosely woven materials.

Dish Towels
Cotton crepe makes inexpensive dish towels. The homemaker doesn't need to iron them and they leave no lint on the dishes, according to Michigan State College specialists.

Tired Feet
Your feet will not get so tired from an ironing job if you stand on a throw rug folded into several thicknesses.

Sealing Celophane
A curling iron will seal celophane packages for your home freezer or locker.

Grating Vegetables
Wear a thimble over your thumb when grating vegetables. This protects your thumb and your manicure.

Remove Grease
To remove a grease spot caused by hair rubbing against the wall, place a blotter over the spot and go over it with a warm iron. The grease will adhere to the blotter.
