'Demand Best for Our Money'

Speaker Says Proposed School Plan Will Do It

"Everyone should demand the very best educational facilities that can be provided for our two most prized possessions, our children and our money," Dr. E. R. Britton stated in his address before the P-T-A, Thursday, October 18.

Dr. Britton declared that American government has recognized the need for public education at public expense since its very beginning.

These needs can best be provided now by a reorganized school district which is large enough to include a great number of people, so that a variety of classes in all subjects can be offered to secure the interest of our boys and girls in gaining an education.

The forecast of programs planned for the year, given during the committee reports, indicates that P-T-A will prove worth while to all who are interested in school affairs.

The meeting closed with a social hour, featured by refreshments.

Reds Explode Second Atomic Bomb; American Harvest Is Satisfactory

THE RUSSIAN BOMB—The question of what the Russians have been doing about the atomic bomb since the first explosion was announced in September, 1949, was answered last week with a White House announcement that another bomb has been exploded.

A few days later Stalin made the announcement in Russia. It was the first time the Russian people had been given any information concerning that country's atomic bomb progress.

The announcement was received in the home towns of the nation much more calmly than the report of the first explosion. The White House statement which said the new explosion was an atomic bomb, belies Communist propaganda that Russia's atomic energy development is strictly for peaceful purposes and not the manufacture of weapons.

The White House announcement said, in part: "In spite of Soviet pretensions that their atomic energy program is being directed exclusively toward peaceful purposes, this event confirms again that the Soviet Union is continuing to make atomic weapons."

Shortly after the new explosion was announced, a British source said the Russians probably now have a stockpile of 50 atomic bombs. Although the Russians have many able scientists, much of their rapid progress in atomic development is due to secrets learned by such men as Klaus Fuchs and Bruno Pontecorvo.

Warren Austin, (left), chief U.S. delegate to the UN, is greeted by Philip Jessup as he reported to a senate committee to testify in defense of Jessup's nomination as a UN delegate. Austin volunteered to appear in behalf of Jessup, who is accused by Sen. McCarthy of being "a dupe of the Communists."

IDENTIFICATION TAGS—The Federal Civil Defense Administration has recommended that every civilian in the United States and its territories wear an identification tag bearing his name and address, blood type, religion, and the name and address of a person to be notified in case of injury or death. The agency recommended the tag be worn permanently on a necklace, bracelet or on a chain around the ankle.

In the event of all-out war or atomic attack, the tag would serve to identify not only the injured or dead, but the mentally ill, persons suffering from shock or amnesia, and small children. It would facilitate medical attention, help to reunite families, and be useful in legal claims of various kinds associated with damage to or destruction of life and property.

The procurement and distribution of such an identification device, and the establishment of rules for wearing it, will be the responsibilities of state civil defense agencies.

THE WHITE HOUSE—Senators, ever conscious of grass roots democracy and its lack of pretentiousness, asked a few pointed questions last week concerning the White House which has been under-going remodeling since December 7, 1949.

The senators were told "there is no royal elegance in the building. It is in keeping with dignity, but there is nothing of elegance in this building that is not equaled in many, many a private home throughout the country. It is dignified and fine, but not too fine."

All this was told behind closed doors to the senate appropriations committee before it recommended spending another $261,000 on the reconstruction of the building. Reconstruction is expected to be complete early next year.

The need for additional funds ($5,500,000 has already been spent) was attributed to increased costs of materials and unexpected delays. The building which had been on the verge of collapse has been reinforced with steel, a basement added, and new quarters made in what was formerly the attic.

AMERICAN HARVEST—Americans will eat well this coming year and, at the same time, will be able to fill its world food commitments, according to the Department of Agriculture's report of the 1951 crop situation.

It has been a trying year due to the Kansas-Missouri flood area and drought damage in a number of other sections. But the 1951 harvest is described as satisfactory.

The corn crops will be in excess of 3,000,000,000 bushels. The Agriculture department had asked for 3,500,000,000 bushels. The winter wheat harvest is expected to total 1,000,000,000 bushels, a little less than the department asked, but not dangerously low.

Generally other crops followed the wheat-corn pattern.

NEW TRUCE TALKS—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway has agreed to the Panmunjom area as a site for new Korean cease-fire talks. The village is located six miles east of Kaesong and 12 road miles northwest of Munsan.

The agreement on a site for the talks does not mean, however, that the talks will actually take place. There remains to be settled a number of technical questions concerning neutrality and policing of the area that could disrupt the best made plans.

Meanwhile, savage battles were being fought in west Korea with the Reds using artillery at a rate unknown to the Communists since the start of the war. But the Allied fall offensive continues to grind out small, hard-won gains at tremendous cost to the enemy.

American infantrymen fire a 75-MM recoilless rifle during the front line action in Korea. Fighting in Korea has increased in recent weeks.

DRAFT CALL—Home town draft boards have begun reclassifying 500,000 married non-fathers. Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, said the men would be inducted into the armed forces as rapidly as they can be reclassified and processed, but estimated that fewer than 200,000 of the 500,000 would be reclassified 1-A.

Hershey urged men who have failed to notify their local draft boards that they have become fathers to do so immediately. He also reminded draft eligible men that the selective service law places upon the registrant the responsibility to notify his board of a change of status. Once the order to report for induction has been issued it is too late to reopen the case.

THE SERIES—Americans in every part of the nation last week forgot their worries long enough to listen to the world series. Wherever there was a radio, at home, in the grocery stores, filling station, poolrooms or fire stations, baseball fans listened to the Giants and Yankees battle for the championship. And it was the Yankees, playing ball like the Yankees of old, making 10 double plays during the series, who were crowned champs, taking the final game from the Giants 4-3.

DEFENSE BOND DRIVE

Americans Are Hanging on to Bonds

The Treasury department reported last week that more Americans are hanging on to more defense bonds than ever before. The Treasury said a new peak of $34,566,000,000 in defense bonds outstanding was reached October 1. The previous high was $34,543,000,000 in June, 1950.

The defense bond drive which began September 3 and ends October 27 is proving to be a big success. In addition, fewer bonds were cashed last month than at any time in the past 17 months.

The department reported 6,200,000 Americans are buying bonds through payroll deduction. At present one out of every two families in the nation hold defense bonds of some kind. The ratio is expected to increase.

McMahon announced that he will ask the atomic committee to approve his resolution calling for an all-out atomic expansion. They were in the mines for two years, working under inhuman conditions 435 feet below the surface, before they made their daring escape and surrendered to German border police. They hope to reach the U. S. or Canada. They were fed the best meal they had enjoyed in five years when they were taken to the German camp.

Cleaner Air Week, Farm Scrap Harvest Are August Promotions

"Cleaner Air Week will be observed in the United States and Canada from October 21 to 27.

The observance was originally inaugurated to focus attention upon the need for control of air pollution from all sources, including smoke, soot, fly-ash, noxious fumes and gases, and to serve as a starting point for year-round smoke abatement and air pollution control activity by public officials, schools, industry, railroads, apartment houses, homes and civic institutions.

Governors of most states, and mayors of hundreds of cities will proclaim the week officially in their jurisdictions, as they did last year. City air pollution control officers will cooperate with their local newspapers and radio stations by outlining their activities during the year, so that the communities will know what is being done to minimize air pollution.

Chambers of commerce and civic organizations will support the project in their communities. They will help place Cleaner Air Week posters in store windows, railroad yards, industrial plants, schools, libraries, office buildings, fire-houses, and on billboards.

Although this promotion week is of greater benefit to larger communities with numerous factories, many home towns of the nation can take advantage of it to eliminate their minor problems of air pollution. Here is a promotion week that could bring about better living in the home towns of America.

Farm Scrap Harvest Set For Aug. 15—Nov. 15

Farmers across the nation are being asked to join in the drive to collect scrap iron and steel recently announced by the National Production authority. The most concerted effort in this drive will be during the period, October 15-November 15.

Sponsors of the drive realize that one of the sources of scrap steel and iron is on farms and the U. S. Agriculture department has been asked to cooperate in the drive. The campaign calls for collection of only scrap machinery or equipment which can not be reconditioned for further use. Farmers are being urged to repair and conserve all machinery which they can continue to operate as this will cut down on the demand for new metal machinery.

Emphasizing the need for scrap steel and iron, the Department of Agriculture points out: "Just as steel is the principal material in the production of such munitions as planes, tanks and ships, scrap is one of the principal ingredients in making steel. Steel is made from approximately one-half scrap and one-half pig iron. Scrap adds to the quality of steel, helps to keep production costs down, and shortens the refining process. For every ton of scrap used, we conserve approximately two tons of iron ore, one ton of coal, nearly one ton of limestone and other materials."

wire, may get into hay and other forage crops and thus endanger animals that eat such food."

Because there are not enough scrap dealers in the small towns of the country to handle the great flow of scrap iron and steel that is expected from the nation's farms, many local farm equipment dealers are cooperating in the harvesting. It is not too late for dealers in home towns to organize a campaign that will mean extra money for the farmers of the area and also be a patriotic effort in the nation's defense program.

The Farm Scrap Harvest is a patriotic campaign. It offers an opportunity for people at the home town level to make an important contribution to the nation's defense program.

Community Chest Has Double Job This Year

President Truman opened the fall Community Chest drive with an appeal for generous contributions and a reminder that "neighbors should always help each other."

The campaign, which will be conducted in hundreds of home towns during coming weeks, will attempt to raise approximately $250,000,000.

The President in his broadcast from the White House said that the drive this year in 1,500 communities will be a double job because the United Defense Fund is tied in with the chest campaign.

United Defense Fund was formed in November, 1950, to raise funds for services to the armed forces through USO and other organizations; to aid defense-impacted communities through united defense services; and to help process clothing collected by American relief in Korea.

Over-all goal of the UDF is $18,624,854. Of this amount, $16,511,854 is being sought through chests and the remainder will be raised in New York city and other non-chest areas. Bulk of the UDF funds—$13,658,207—will go to USO.

Community Chest is a worthwhile activity in which the people of the home towns should participate. It is the sure way for the community to provide funds for its welfare service in one concentrated campaign.

National Apple Week Promotes Fall Harvest

It doesn't take special promotional weeks and proclamations to tell the home-townners of the nation it is apple harvest time. The fact is evident on the farms and in the orchards of the nation. Baskets of apples line the sidewalk in front of hundreds of stores in the home towns across the country.

During National Apple Week the fruit is in greater supply than possibly any other time during the year. As a result, the price is lower than at any other time. Here is the opportunity for the housewife to buy her winter supply at a savings.

For the average small town the apple probably stirs more memories than any other fruit. Remember: the apple for teacher, mother's apple pie, sugary baked apples fresh from the oven, the apples "swiped" from a dark orchard, green ones that gave us a pain in our middle, a candied apple on a stick offered to a little girl whose pigtales we used to pull, fresh and rosy apples on the breakfast table because "an apple a day keeps the doctor away."

The home town housewife who watches her local newspaper during National Apple Week will find a number of tempting recipes for using apples in pies and pastries.

It was dog eat hot dog at the Sherman hotel in Chicago recently as Flame (center), a Hollywood star, threw a banquet for friends in climax of the Chicago Park district's celebration of National Dog Week.

SENATE RESTAURANT

Restaurant Manager Says Most Senators Are Meat, Potato Men

WNU Wash. Bureau

When a moment of leisure hits Capitol Hill, many members of congress automatically head toward the restaurants in the capitol building for food and relaxation.

The house restaurant runs smoothly under the supervision of William A. Brockwell, manager, and Mrs. Edith G. Ridgely, hostess. They must, and do, know every representative, member of the press, and employee in the house, since the patrons are limited to these three groups and their guests.

Working under some difficulty, the lack of space and the fact that invariably everybody wants to eat at one time, Mr. Brockwell and Mrs. Ridgely, and their staff of 110 are able to serve and satisfy their clientele, with only 250 seats.

It is not at all unusual for them to learn at 10 or 11 a.m. that a congressman is planning a luncheon for as many as 50 that day.

SOME CONGRESSMEN have frequent parties, many never entertain. Representative Frank W. Boykin of Alabama has the largest and most frequent parties.

To bring a home town flavor to the representatives in Washington, the restaurant imports special food from many parts of the country for parties held on the hill or for general consumption.

The favorite dessert of the congressmen is apple pie. Generally, they are meat, potato, and apple pie men.

Only about a dozen of them ever ask about fads or diets, such as the recent yen for yogurt or black strap molasses and whole wheat germ.

In such a place where many personalities meet, funny incidents occur, such as the two ladies who had secured passes to the visitors' gallery of congress and stopped at the restaurant to ask if they could get lunch.

The relaxed atmosphere of the house restaurant makes a daily, pleasant retreat for the legislators of the country.

GRASSROOTS

Rural Population Is Salvation of Today's Civilization

By Wright A. Patterson

THE FIRST WEEK of December, 1951 will mark the end of 11 years that I have been writing this column. Through those eventful 11 years I have, on many occasions, recalled the content of that first column, but I have never reprinted it.

The time was the day that marked the close of that conflict in November of 1918. The place was a parlor in the Savoy Hotel on the Strand in London.

"Today we English and all the others of the allied world are crazed with joy over the ending of the war. They do not realize that the world faces a more serious problem now than at any time during the last four years."

Within a comparatively short time we will be engaged in another global struggle that will mark the end of civilization in Europe as we have known and enjoyed it. Our hope of having it returned to us lies in the rural population of America, the people of your towns, your villages and farms. They are the safest, sanest people in the world today.

It was a startling, an unbelievable statement, but I have lived to see much of what Balfour said come to pass. There was that second global war, more destructive, more terrible, than the first one.

Since that first week in December, 1940, with that Balfour prophecy before me as a text, I have endeavored to convince my rural audience, the people of the villages, the towns and the farms, of the dangers in the trend of the socialistic left.

THE FICTION CORNER

TEEN-AGE LOVE

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

IT was only natural that Rose should be thrilled at thoughts of meeting Loring Hunt. After all, Loring Hunt was the most glamorous of modern day screen stars.

3-Minute Fiction

And Rose—well, Rose was just another young girl with dreams.

She had fallen in love with Loring Hunt when she was 12 years old. Maturity had rather dampened her enthusiasm; at least she never betrayed the real depths of it.

When told of Loring Hunt's pending arrival Jerry had snorted. "What!" he cried disgustedly. "That sap coming here? To your house? Why, your mother must be out of her mind!"

"Mother's far from out of her mind," Rose replied furiously. "It's only common decency that she ask Mr. Hunt to stay with us while he's in town."

"Try and keep me away," said Jerry. "I'm not letting the girl I'm engaged to run around unprotected with that lizard in the vicinity."

"We're not engaged," Rose told him.

"We're practically engaged," said Jerry.

A week later Loring Hunt arrived. He was wearing a mustache and colored glasses, both of which he removed as soon as he was inside the house.

"You remind me so much of your father. He was a fine man. I remember him well."

"You were at that, said Loring Hunt. 'I was young too.'" He sighed. "Ah, me! How time does fly. Here I am almost 50 and—"

"Fifty!" cried Rose. "Why, I thought—that is—in your pictures—"

"I look under 30, eh?" Loring chuckled. "They do marvelous things in Hollywood."

"Let's not talk of me. Tell me about yourself. Are you in love? I noticed a fine looking boy giving you a lot of attention."

"Rose was a bit overcome. She hadn't dreamed that her ideal was—was an old man!"

"She started to speak, but a figure had glided up and was standing in front of them. It was Jerry. In the pale light she could see the set look to his jaw."

"Yeah?" said Jerry. "There was a pause, Rose leaped to her feet. 'Mr. Hunt was asking me if I'm in love and— and I told him yes. I told him I was in love with you, Jerry.'"

Slowly Jerry relaxed. Rose had taken his arm and was hanging on for dear life. It was a good thing, he told himself importantly, for Loring Hunt, that she had come to her senses."

RESIDENT NURSE A SERIAL STORY BY LUCY AGNES HANCOCK

THE STORY SO FAR:

Convalescing from pneumonia at Crescent Lake, orphan Gay Gaylor, meets Jean Spencer, friend of Thad Borden, whom Gay despises. That is the son of Dr. Borden, whom Gay is depending upon to gain her appointment on the staff of Bessemer Memorial hospital as a nurse trainee. Thad has inflicted upon Gay the "ultimate insult" of kissing her against her will. Gay agrees to specialize in nursing children and to become nurse at Bethesda orphanage, but she manifests no interest in acquiring a husband and children of her own. She feels disgust for Thad Borden's seeming infatuation with Vivian Poole, "glamour girl."

CHAPTER X

A tall young man stood on the bluff, Myra beside him. "Jim—o-oh, Jim!" Jean squealed excitedly. She ran ahead of Gay and up the stone steps to fling herself into her brother's arms. He whirled her around several times before letting her go. Gay climbed more slowly.

"This is my brother, Gay—the one I've been telling you about. Isn't he super? Jim, this is Gay—Frances Gaylor who is staying at the Borden cottage. You know Myra?"

"Of course," the young man answered. "Myra's one of my best friends, aren't you, Myra?"

"Umph!" Myra sniffed. "Easy come—easy go. That ain't my idea of friendship." She turned and stalked away and into the cottage while the newcomer eyed her quizzically.

"How long can you stay?" Jean asked.

Jim Spencer Wins Gay's Friendship

"I told Mom, Sunday, but she insists I'll have to make it Monday. It seems Dad can't get here until Monday morning—some snag's delaying him. How do you like Crescent Lake, Miss—er—Gay?" he grinned.

"Wonderful!" Gay said with enthusiasm. "It has made a new person of me. Yes, Myra, we're coming. You're staying for lunch, Mr.—er—Jim?" she smiled.

"Gosh, I don't know if I dare. Myra invited me, but after that nasty crack she handed me—"

"Myra's bark is worse than her bite," his sister reassured him. "Only I'd advise you to make haste slowly, as Grandma used to say. Myra resents freshness in any form except food. Wait till you taste her coffee, Jim, and her hot rolls. Um'm's! Out of this world. I always stay when I'm asked."

"I bet you do," her brother jeered. "And what does Mom say to that?"

"Oh, she doesn't mind. Very often she joins us."

Jim turned to Gay. "Say, what has this Borden cottage come to, anyway, a community dining room? And is Myra always the cook?"

Gay smiled and Jean said, "Just you wait until you've eaten one of Myra's meals, Jim. Why, even Mother's sold on her—sold completely. The best way to Myra's heart is through her cooking. I know. She was inclined to resent me at first—until I made a perfect pig of myself at breakfast."

"Breakfast!" shouted Jim. "Don't tell me you even come here for breakfast—you—scavenger!"

"How dare you!" his sister shouted in her turn. "Don't you let Myra hear you class her food as garbage, Jim Spencer, or you'll leave this place in irons. Come on or she'll be mad and we can't risk that."

Gay listened to the lively banter with a feeling on en-ry. How wonderful to have someone to play with—have fun with like this. "That's not fair," Jean complained as Gay returned to the other room. "Anyway, why put on airs just because Jim's lunching with us?"

"Pipe down, infant," the young man told his sister. "Just because you're only half civilized yourself gives you no excuse for wanting everyone else to approve of your uninhibited methods. If Gay sticks around here long enough perhaps you'll learn a few tricks."

"Tricks? Gay hasn't any tricks," Jean protested. "Gay's a perfect lady—except when we're in swimming. Then she lets herself go. Then she's actually younger than I am."

"Don't pay no attention to him, Jean," Myra advised, bringing in a plate of hot rolls. "Brothers always talk turkey—they think it's smart. I don't know why, neither. Now sit down, all of you, and eat while hot things is hot and cold things is cold. Want I should call you ma, Jean? She might as well come over, too. Tain't much fun eating alone—and there's plenty here."

"You're a peach, Myra," Jean said. "You do that. If I call her she'll likely make us both come home. Tell her we'll wait for her like one horse waits for another—when the feedbag's on. Tell her to hurry or there won't be anything left."

"Mad at me, Myra?" Jim whispered as she passed him a platter of baked ham.

On Sunday Gay attended the chapel service with the Spencers. Myra decided she couldn't go. Perhaps the doctor might come early and she felt she should be there to receive him. Dinner was to be at three and the Spencers would dine with them. The day was fine. The chapel was well filled and the elderly clergyman preached a heartwarming sermon, short and to the point. The choir was augmented by a visiting contralto whose splendid voice sent waves of beauty echoing along the beach and far up into the surrounding hills. She was a large, middle-aged woman of commanding appearance and after the service held gracious court. Everyone loitered and the Spencer party was late in getting started home.

"Myra will wonder what has become of us—I want to help her if she will let me."

"She won't," her daughter assured her. "Myra's ambidextrous and follows the old precept of not letting her right hand interfere with what her left is doing. Both are trained experts. If you ever want to get rid of her, Gay, just let us know, will you?"

"Get rid of Myra?" Gay exclaimed. "Small chance. Why, Myra's a part of me."

"Did she ever marry—is she a widow—a Mrs. Gay?" Jean asked. Gay shook her head. "No. Myra's a spinster and as she would say—proud of it. Some man is missing a wonderful helpmate."

Gay Fears Hospital Might Reject Her

Jean hooted. His mother smiled indulgently. Gay said nothing. "I mean, of course, vicariously," the young man explained. "As a foster son—or nephew—or something of the sort. Just how does she consider you, Gay? Surely not as her mistress."

"Heavens, no!" the girl cried. "I don't know, exactly. We just sort of belong—have belonged ever since she came to Bethesda when I was a tiny girl."

"Bethesda?" Jim asked. "That's the orphanage, isn't it? Don't tell me you ever lived in Bethesda, Gay. How come? Or is it none of my business?"

"I lived in Bethesda from the time I was two, when my parents were killed, until at sixteen I went to live with Miss Alden," Gay replied quietly.

"I—I didn't know that," Jean said slowly, almost fearfully. "And Myra?"

"Myra was our cook. She came to Miss Alden's a year or so before she died. I love her and she loves me. She is a grand person."

"You're shouting!" Jim applauded. "And it's not only Myra who's grand, my girl. You're pretty swell yourself."

"Aunt Grace was wonderful to me—to us both." "Aunt Grace?" Jean asked. "Who's she?" "Miss Alden. She wanted me to call her that and I was happy to do it. She taught me so that I was able to graduate from high school with honors and I expect to enter the training school for nurses with the next class—I hope in late June or early July—and eventually go back to Bethesda as its resident nurse."

nurse—except for the risk the authorities might take in adding her to the staff. Ever consider that angle, my girl?" he asked, casting a swift sidelong glance at the girl beside him.

Gay stiffened. What did he mean? Did he feel as Doctor Borden did that the hospital might refuse her admission?

"Risk?" she repeated, coldly. "Don't be naive, Gay," the young man chided. "You're going to be a menace to the male population—a real threat to the peace of every man in the institution, and that's no fairy tale either."

"Rubbish!" the girl answered shortly. "Do you suppose I could enter at the same time, Gay?" Jean wanted to know.

Now it was Jim who hooted derisively. "You—a nurse! Don't make me laugh. You'd faint at the sight of blood—scream to high heaven at your first operation—refuse with sound effects to scrub patients and utensils, not to mention floors—weep copiously when death snatched a patient from your grasp and in general make a blooming nuisance of yourself. No, my pet, the nursing profession is not for you. Anyway, you're not grown up. Wait a few years—five anyway—and then I might consider it."

"You might consider it, indeed! What have you got to do with it? I bet I could be a nurse if I liked—if they accepted me for training. How do you know you'll be accepted, Gay?" she demanded.

Dr. Borden Fails To Keep Appointment

"Of course I don't," Gay replied, "but I have an idea I shall be. After all, Doctor Borden is a member of the staff and he will vouch for me—my ability, I know, and my scholastic standing is excellent—my health, ditto."

"But—" Jean began and changed her mind. Gay thought she knew what she intended saying. Bessemer Memorial was known to be extraordinarily particular regarding its nursing staff. Mrs. Spencer spoke.

"Of course they will be only too happy to have you, my dear," she said with conviction. "And if I'm ever sick, I hope you will come to me. Now please, Jim, put a little more speed into this car. Everything on the road is passing us. What ails you, anyway?"

"I just don't want to shorten this ride," Jim said unperturbed, but the last quarter mile slipped under the car and they slid down the Borden drive just as Myra came to the back porch to look for them.

"Hi!" Jean called. "Got company?" Myra shook her head. "Where on earth you been? Don't tell me Reverend Hammond preached this long. Or did you get a puncture?"

Gay joined her. "Didn't Doctor Borden come, Myra?" she asked. "Have you heard from him?"

"Not a word. Doctors!" Myra sputtered. "Most undependable people in the world. Well, if he ain't here by three we'll eat without him. I ain't a-going to let them ducklings spoil for no doctor. Come in and rest yourselves. Getting hot, ain't it? They's lemonade and ginger ale in the refrigerator. Help yourselves—only don't spoil your dinner."

Myra held the meal until thirty-three when the telephone rang and Mrs. Potter called to explain that the doctor was tied up at the hospital. He had asked her to let them know. He would try to drive over one day during the week. Myra asked if anything special had happened and the housekeeper seemed surprised that no word of the accident on the highway had reached them. A bus and train had collided just outside Bessemer and some twenty people had been badly injured.

"Anybody killed?" Myra asked. "Only the driver," Mrs. Potter reported. It was thought he had faken suddenly ill and had lost control of the bus, but just what the cause might have been probably no one would ever know. It was an interurban bus and no one from Bessemer appeared to be among the casualties. Myra replaced the instrument and returned to the table where everyone was eager for her report.

"So eat plenty," she counseled as she finished. "No sense in letting all this go to waste. I hate trying to fix up cold leftovers, especially duck. Here, Jim help yourself to this piece of thigh—plenty of stuffing and some more onions. Eat hearty, folks. I hope they won't be even a smitch left to haunt me. You ain't eating nothing, Gay. Don't you feel so good?"

"I've had plenty" the girl replied. "It's all delicious—although duck isn't my favorite food. A little goes a long way with me."

"I know—I know," Myra murmured, "and the next time I get ducklings for Doc he'll be right here before I cook 'em. These doctors! Humph! Can't depend on 'em—not one minute, you can't. I hope neither of you girls will ever fall for no doctor. Drive you crazy!"

THE BIBLE SPEAKS International Uniform Sunday School Lessons BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Genesis 37; 39; 41-47; 50. DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalms 105; 124.

When Life Gets Hard Lesson for October 28, 1951

IN an army training center there is plenty to gripe about. Time was, when sundown came, every one was off duty. Now night only begins the trouble. Night marching, night "village fighting," night everything else, in snow and ice and mud all the same, and never with enough sleep. But the army keeps on rubbing those poor boys' heads in the dirt.

Of course the army knows what it is doing. When the boys get through with camp, most of them will be sent to where some real fighting is going on. The enemy, unfortunately, does not confine his activities to the daytime. He fights at night, in the rain, in zero weather, even on your birthday. He picks some very rough hills to fight on. In the roaring confusion of shifting battle lines the soldier does not always get his chow on time, and the nearest hospital may be too far to reach. He is out where he has to be tough.

It is not only in the army that a toughening-up course is just what the doctor ordered. In real life it happens over and over again. It is not the boys who had the easiest childhood who rise most often to the top. It is the boys who worked, who had to work somehow for a living, who develop the toughness in mind and muscle to carry them through life's long struggle.

When Life Gets Hard IT is sometimes thought that God should arrange things differently. What most of us want (lazy as we are) is a soft life, something pleasant, big pay and no work if we can help it. When life is easy for us we think, if we are religiously inclined, that God has blessed us; but if life gets hard, we think God must have forgotten us. Quite the contrary.

There is an almost forgotten verse in the New Testament: "The Lord disciplines the man he loves, and scourges every son whom he receives." (Heb. 12:6, Moffatt's translation.)

The man who is undisciplined never grows up, he is a perpetual boy. For the same reasons, no one ever became God's man except through God's discipline.

Forge for a Sword THIS is as true of nations as of individuals. The story of the Hebrews in Egypt is one case in point. They had it hard, about as hard as any people who ever lived. They became slaves, and remained slaves for hundreds of years.

Humanly speaking, God's total plan would not have succeeded unless the Hebrews had gone through that "furnace of affliction." If Jacob and his family had stayed on in Palestine, there never would have been any Hebrew nation any more than there was an Ishmaelite nation.

Somewhere, some time, those Israelites had to be forged into tempered steel, a sword for God. And the slavery in Egypt was the first stage of the forging. It was a hard life; no doubt many died under the lash. But the hardy ones lived.

If Moses, when the time came, had had to take out into the wilderness a caravan of luxury-loving Egyptians, they would have wilted on his hands. It was because the Hebrews had lived hard in the slave-pens of Goshen that they could live hard in the wilderness when they were free.

Life Goes On THIS is not the whole story, of course. Life, even the hardest kind of life, is not merely a preparation for battles to come. It can be worth living for its own sake.

The trainee may find friends and happiness even in a very tough camp. And down in Egypt, in all the years of Hebrew hardship, life went on. People fell in love and were married, children were born, were brought up somehow, were taught the difference between right and wrong, were taught about the true God.

People nowadays are sometimes jittery about the prospect of "life as we know it" being destroyed. Well, maybe it will be; who can deny that we have it coming to us?

But life will not be destroyed. Under the harshest of circumstances, life will go on, and those who will accept life's troubles as the sending of God will find a blessing even in what at the moment hurts the most.

Antiquated 'El's Are Departing American Scene WASHINGTON, D. C.—America's "El" trains are on the wane.

New Yorkers will soon say goodbye to the Third Avenue El. Last of four overhead trestle systems which once darkened Manhattan streets, its days have been numbered by faster, more efficient subways.

Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago, only other American cities with elevated systems, have seen their overhead lines shrink in importance as rapid transit engineering went underground.

Marvel of 19th Century Three-quarters of a century ago, an "El" opened the rapid transit era. Less than half a mile long, powered by cables from steam winches at one end of the line, the world's first elevated was built in 1867 along Greenwich St. in lower New York. It soon went bankrupt.

But the idea of streetscars up in the air, away from traffic, had been proved possible. Within a decade, New York built several lines. They used steam locomotives. The locomotives showered cinders and occasional red-hot coals on pedestrians and horses below. Enraged housewives, their week's laundry blackened by soot, hurled bricks at the engineers.

In 1902 and 1903, New York's "El's" were electrified. The retired steam engines went forth to new careers in South America, Africa or Asia, puffing away around timber camps, coal mines or quarries.

Other cities built overhead tramways. London, which pioneered in subway transit as early as 1853, tacked on extensions above the streets. The famed "Loop" in downtown Chicago got its nickname from the iron band of the elevated.

Whoo-ssh Overhead railroading brought out the bizarre and fantastic in inventors' minds. A combination railway and airline seemed to be the next step.

At the Scottish town of Milngavie near Glasgow 20 years ago, a 425-foot-long succession of heavy steel towers was put up to test a novel "railplane" suspended from a single steel track. Its cigar-shaped car, carrying 50 passengers, was driven by airplane propellers fore and aft. The inventor predicted a top speed of 125 miles an hour, with no need of a roadbed.

Neither Scotland nor Germany, which also experimented with propeller-driven monorail cars, went on to build a complete system. Today in Germany's industrialized Ruhr, however, is the only successfully suspended monorailway of any sort in the world.

This is the famed "Schwebelbahn" (swinging railroad), running above the Wupper River between the crowded streets of a closely built chain of towns together known as Wuppertal. With its trestles resembling a giant centipede, the electric-driven "Schwebelbahn" has swung back and forth in an eight-mile shuttle between Barmen and Elberfeld since 1901, carrying an estimated 800,000,000 passengers in its fifty years of operation.

Army Develops Rapid-Action Tester for Storage Battery A new rapid-action tester for storage batteries has been developed by the Army Signal Corps at its Fort Monmouth, N. J., engineering laboratories.

The heart of the tester is a specially designed indicator mounted on the dashboard or steering column of a vehicle. It tells the driver at a glance whether he has enough power in the battery to start the engine. In addition, the indicator also shows the amount of the charge, the temperature at which the battery will freeze, and whether use of extra accessories such as a radio, heater, or lighter will bring the charge below the danger point.

The device eliminates the need for unscrewing the cell caps as is now necessary for chemically testing acid contents of a battery.

Girls Bunk in Cemetery To Avoid Human 'Wolves' BRAZIL, Ind.—Girls Do you want to know how to avoid wolves of the human variety when hitchhiking across the country? Two co-edds stopped here on a leg of their 8,000-mile trans-continent jaunt and reported the ideal way . . . sleeping in cemeteries.

Misses Phyllis Fisher, Springfield, Ohio, and Nancy Dennett, Ailestead, N. H., told newsmen they made a practice of sleeping in graveyards.

And they had never been molested. "A sleeping bag in a cemetery is a safe haven from 'wolves,'" they were quoted.

FIRST AID to the SAILING HOUSE by ROGER C. WHITMAN

Floor Sinking In QUESTION: The second story floor of my home seems to be sinking in. When we step on it, it seems to go down, and it also creaks when we walk on it. What do you recommend to adjust this condition?

ANSWER: The house is probably settling badly or the timbers may be rotting, and you should call in a competent building contractor to do whatever he finds necessary. Additional bridging may be needed between the joists, or perhaps the foundations and footings need to be enlarged or strengthened. Sometimes such a condition can be corrected with adjustable posts. The work calls for experienced help; it is not for an amateur. The creaking is one of the symptoms, and can be taken care of after the major operation has been attended to.

Ceiling Zero?

How high will a rifle shoot? This is a matter about which practically all shooters, at some time or other, have speculated. To boil it down into general terms, with the safety element as a prime consideration, the answer is "A lot farther than you think."

John J. O'Connor, of the physics and ballistics research laboratory of Remington Arms Company, Inc., has reduced the matter to a mathematical formula which reveals the rather surprising information that a bullet fired vertically upward will reach a height equal to more than half the maximum horizontal range of a similar bullet fired at the optimum angle of departure.

Concedes Some Danger

O'Connor says: "Since aviation became popular, there has been a slight but present danger from amateur anti-aircraft men on the ground. In the early days of commercial planes it was all too common for planes flying relatively low over the more remote hills of the eastern United States to be met by bullets. When the German dirigibles were making their regularly scheduled flights to this country, there was at least one incident when a dirigible was hit by a small caliber bullet. These and other accidents probably reflect the lack of knowledge of the impressive height which small caliber bullets can attain. In other words shooters depend upon gravity to make their prank a harmless one. Unfortunately gravity, though highly effective in making a poor range guesser come home with an empty trophy bag, is relatively ineffective in stopping a bullet projected skyward."

No Child's Toy

"For example, consider the 22 long rifle bullet, considered by many, unfortunately, to be a child's toy. As is well known, the high speed version has a maximum horizontal range of about 9/10 of a mile. Not so well known is the fact that if fired vertically upwards, it will attain a height of about 7/10 of a mile or 3700 feet. Even regular or Match velocity 22 long rifle bullets will travel about 3500 feet upward. The force of gravity at the muzzle amounts to only 1.63% of the total force acting. At any velocity above 280 feet per second, the air resistance forces are larger than forces due to gravity."

"Calculations indicate that under any practical conditions the attainable vertical height above gun position is more than half the attainable horizontal range, regardless of bullet or muzzle velocity. When we realize that the maximum horizontal range for center fire rifle bullets may be as much as 6000 yards, we see that it is extremely hazardous to shoot at high angles of elevation without being absolutely certain that not only is there plenty of horizontal distance available, but also there are no aircraft in the vicinity."

"Old Reliable"

In the closing days of the fishing season, the crisp, sunny days of late Fall, the old reliable tandem "guinea-tail" spinner will be found to be one of the most effective of all bass lures. In fact, there are myriad oldtime anglers who assert that if they were to be restricted to just one bass lure, they'd choose the "guinea-tail." The tandem spinner shown here is Plueger's luminous spinner and is the pioneer of all the "guinea-tail" tandems.

Fewer Fires

Although there were more people seeking recreation in the national forests last year than ever before, the visitors started fewer fires through carelessness than during the previous year, according to the Wildlife Management Institute.

Careless smokers started 1,701 fires on national forests as compared with 1,842 in 1949, records of the U.S. Forest Service show. Incendiary fires, however, increased from 1,204 in 1949 to 1,724 in 1950. The majority of the blazes intentionally set by "fire bugs" occurred on the national forests of the 11 states lying south of Virginia.

Wait Awhile

Although you see your hunting friends getting busy with dogs and arms for the almost-upon-us hunting season, don't you anglers start racking up for the year. There's still a lot of good fishing for crappie in ponds and even the bass, if you have the patience to fish deep water—and it does take patience. Get those lures down deep, deep, deep and fish 'em slow! That is the technique most likely to produce for the late-season basser.
