Elks Win Three Consecutive Games

Take Games From Rose City and Sterling

The Tawas City Elks won their second and third consecutive victories of the current season this week with a 37 to 34 count over Rose City Friday night and a 61 to 49 win over Sterling Tuesday night. The Elks reserves also found the win column by administering a 26 to 25 defeat to Rose City and taking a 36 to 33 victory over the Sterling reserves.

This week end the Elks will journey to Harrisville for two games and Tuesday local fans will have their first opportunity to see the Elks on their home floor when they play host to the ever-dreaded Mio squad. Mio has retained their entire last years varsity squad including their center who received honorable mention on last year's all-state squad.

Friday night's tangle with John Janish's Rose City squad proved to be a thriller from the opening seconds to the final whistle, with the locals holding a slight 12 to 11 edge at the first quarter. In the second quarter Rose City hit the hoop for nine points and the half-time score read 20-20. The third quarter found Rose City dashing cold water on Tawas City's hopes when they outscored them 11 to 7, but in the final stanza Tawas City turned the tables on them with a 10 to 3 edge, with Gary Humphrey pulling the game out of the fire in the last minute of play with 3 points.

In the Sterling fracas it was the locals all the way when they meshed 16 points in each the first and second quarters while Sterling had 10 in the first and followed up with 8. Sterling stoked up the furnace in the third quarter when they scored 17 points to Tawas' 14 but their drive lost steam in the final stanza, scoring 14 points to the Elks 13.

Coach Defibaugh commented this week that he was well pleased with his teams showing and especially their good backboard work.

Tommy Morley proved to be Tawas City's stalwart in offensive play, hitting the hoops for 25 points registering 10 against Rose City and 15 at the expense of Sterling. Rollie Gackstetter and Gary Humphrey were the other top scoring threats with 20 and 19 points respectively.

Davis and Herriman, the two guards also had their hand in the scoring with the former totaling 13 and the latter 12.

Shades of Paul Bunyon and His Blue Ox!

Course of Dead Creek Moved, Straightened

Shades of Paul Bunyon and his blue ox! Paul hitched "Babe, the Blue Ox," to "Whistling" River to straighten out the hundreds of bends that caused great loss of time to travelers, according to legend and poetry.

When the Tawas City Board of Education wanted to straighten out Dead Creek, Carl Rempert proved a modern counterpart to the great Paul during the past few weeks. John Konenski's Tawas Sand & Gravel Company had no Blue Ox, but the more prosaic dragline under the guidance of Rempert straightened the bends out of Dead Creek and moved it over where it merrily courses down Third Street from the Glen.

To complete the straightening process, the city has authorized a channel to be cut from near the Sixth Avenue bridge to Seventh Avenue, bypassing the pond and bend in front of the George Tuttle residence and back of the Elgin Hill residence on Sixth Avenue.

Pictured above are Martin Kasischek, superintendent of public works, Matthew Pfeiffer, his assistant, and Mayor George W. Myles on hand last Thursday afternoon to witness the last shovelful of dirt being removed, allowing the water to course down the new channel. The channel is on a straight line from the Glen to Eighth Avenue.

Tawas City Public Schools will have a fine piece of property for playgrounds with the completion of the landscaping which is now in progress.

Ray Garner Here Next Wednesday

To Present 'Exploring In the Southwest'

Ray Garner in "Exploring the Southwest" will appear on the December program of the Kiwanis Club sponsored travel series at the Tawas City Auditorium, Wednesday evening, December 12.

This latest venture of one of the country's most famous mountain climbers sets a new high in adventure films. It is the story of an unexplored section of the West, lying within the borders of Utah and Arizona—an area where few men have ever been. The film begins with orientation shots of deep canyons, weird rock formations, great sand dunes, snow capped peaks, animals and flowers. Then through Monument Valley, where Garner and his party climb a mountain. Beautiful Havasoo Canyon, with its great waterfalls.

Then the real exploration begins! In a jeep, and on foot making their own road through quicksands and blasting their way through rocks, they find new areas of giant pinnacles, hidden parks, homes of ancient cliff dwellers—and a great new stone arch—one of the most beautiful in the west.

Honor City Founder With Street Name

Honoring one of Tawas City's founders, the city council named that portion of the Plank Road which extends from the Public School Buildings to the city limits "Harris Avenue." It had no official name previous to this time.

The original plat of Tawas City was dedicated in 1867 by Charles H. Whittemore, James O. Whittemore, Charles Harris and Mr. and Mrs. George B. Mathews. Whittemore Street and Mathews Street gave recognition to the Mathews and the Whittemores, but it remained until the recent council to honor Harris by giving his name to a street.

When the original section of the city was laid out and platted there was no Plank Road. Some years later the road was constructed. Entering the city at 12th avenue it cut diagonally across to Second Street. All the streets in the plat had been previously named and so this received no official designation, and remained that way until the recent resolution was passed by the council.

When the necessity of an official name for the street became evident, "Harris Avenue," appeared appropriate. The name was suggested by City Clerk Albert H. Buch, who as city clerk and register of deeds, has become familiar with the history of the city and its early inhabitants through the original papers and records filed in his offices.

The Charles Harris, who was co-signer on the original plat of Tawas City, was the father of Charles Harris, well known resident of the city at this time.

Probation Revoked Sent to Prison

Donahue, convicted on a stolen car charge, was sentenced to not less than one year nor more than two years at Jackson Prison by Judge Herman Dehnke at the December term of circuit court held here this week. Donahue had stolen a new Mercury car from Orville Leslie & Sons. Probation had been revoked on the findings of the probation officer.

Donahue, a soldier at Oscoda Airbase, stole the car in July. In an 80-mile chase by State Police he was stopped near Midland only after the officers had shot into the car. The Leslies interceded for him and he was placed on probation. He later violated the court order and probation was revoked.

In addition to other duties, Mr. Mielock has been outstanding in his work for Farm Bureau. Much credit is due to Mr. Mielock and his board of directors and committee members for the work accomplished and is largely responsible for membership interest and participation in all phases of Farm Bureau in Iosco county.

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Mrs. Truman

MRS. TRUMAN makes no bones about her desire to turn the White House over to new tenants. At a reception the other day, the first lady confided to a friend: "This is a terrible life. We don't have any privacy at all. If I want to go across the hall to see the President or Margaret, I have to get dressed up. I can't just slip a kimono on, for you never know who you'll find in the hall. I'll be glad when we get back to Independence and can live like human beings." Mrs. Truman said she thought the government should provide private living quarters away from the White House for the first family. She was referring, of course, to the fact that Secret Service vigilance has been tightened since the attempt on the President's life, so that guards are on every floor of Blair House.

The Taft Brothers

Taft forces are so sore at brother Charles Taft for announcing for Governor of Ohio that they may put genial Congressman George Bender, a GOP stalwart, into the Republican primary in Ohio to run against brother Charles. There are several reasons for this row over the younger member of the Taft family. Primarily, Bob Taft forces are sore because two Tafts in a political race cause confusion and make the public think one family is out to dominate the state.

Second, brother Charles has not been regular. He was a friend of Franklin Roosevelt, voted for him a couple of times and served under him in the Federal Security Administration and later in the State department during the war. Charles also bolted the regular Republicans in Cincinnati where he has been a member of the city council and helped elect a Democratic mayor, Albert Cash.

Backstage Boss

Democrat Frank McHale, towering boss of the onetime Indiana 2 per cent club machine, makes no bones about the fact that he put Hoosier banker Frank McKinney across as Democratic national chairman, coached him at his first press conference, dictated letters for him to sign, and arranged his appointments.

McHale nabbed the committee chairmanship for his protegee by the old adage of "being the fustest with the mostest."

Jake Arvey, the Chicago Democratic boss, tipped McHale off that Bill Boyle was on the skids and suggested that the big Hoosier might like the job himself. Whereupon McHale put in a long-distance call for his friend and fellow Irishman, Kingmaker Matt Connelly of Mr. Truman's staff.

"I know just the type person you need to restore the prestige of the National Committee," he said. "He should be young, a successful business executive, clean as a hound's tooth, and a loyal Democrat."

"If you know that kind of a guy, you've bought yourself a national chairman," Connelly said.

McHale then recommended Frank McKinney who both fits the description and did a bang up job in the Pentagon. Kingmaker Connelly saw to it the door was bolted, refused to let other Democrats with candidates of their own see the President.

Washington Items

Governor Dewey did not meet secretly with Eisenhower at the Waldorf as reported last week. A Broadway columnist got that one mixed with a Waldorf meeting which did take place between Dewey, Senator Duff of Pennsylvania, Herbert Brownell, the Dewey GOP mentor, and Gen. Lucius Clay. Georgia-born Clay, a lifelong Democrat, is now in the Eisenhower camp. The meeting discussed ways and means of rounding up delegates despite the fact that Ike cannot declare until next spring.

There's not the slightest question but that Ike started life as a Democrat. His first speech at the age of 18 at Abilene, Kansas, was at a Jackson Day dinner.

Taft-ites are suspected of putting a neat one over on Arthur Krock. He reported that Ike would come over to the Taft side if the senator would desert the isolationists.

Washington Pipeline

Only diplomat who got the VIP treatment at the Soviet embassy party last week was Premier Mossadegh of Iran. The Russians supplied Mossadegh with a four-man escort to run interference through the big crowd which clustered three deep around the caviar. (American guests at the Soviet embassy shun Soviet champagne which is sweet and usually hot, but make a bee-line for the bowls of caviar as soon as they arrive.)

LABOR DEMONSTRATION IN TOKYO . . . Labor Union members stage a demonstration against the new anti-strike law and impending layoffs. Unions involved were government labor unions. Demonstrators tried to enter the grounds housing the Diet building and were met by police forces. A violent scuffle ensued. The demonstrators were repulsed, but not until they had incited a large-size riot. Demonstrations have been rife in this newly-democratized land. Recently students demonstrated against Emperor Hirohito, hissing him and clamoring against his position, the first time this inviolate "ruler" has suffered insult from humans.

HOUSES ON A MOUNTAIN . . . These terraced houses are homes of the iron mine workers at El Tofo, Chile. Iron fed to Chile's new steel plant at Huachipato comes from El Tofo mine, a virtual mountain of high-grade iron ore, located in the vast mineral area of northern Chile. Because of the richness of the land in iron ore, Chile no longer has to import steel from the United States. The industrialization that makes possible the production of sufficient steel to supply the nation was undertaken and completed with help from the United States. Chile received a 40 million dollar loan.

TOY PISTOL ROBBER . . . In Los Angeles, former convict James Dupriest was caught by police fleeing with $243 following a market holdup. But he was not caught red handed, for Dupriest lost both his hands in a prison mill accident and held the toy pistol, allegedly used in the robbery, with hooks. He was recently released from Folsom following a five-year term for robbery. "What else can I do?" he said, following arrest. "I've got to eat." The judge was not expected to take this as a good excuse for robbery.

PIN BABY GOES HOME . . . Baby Elvira Difuntorum, flown to Chicago from the Philippines recently to have a straight pin removed from her lung, is none too happy about starting her homeward journey. Holding back tears, little Elvira bids goodbye to Nurse Carolyn Kappa at St. Luke's airport, accompanied by Nurse Manuela Basilla and Dr. Jose Reyes, both of Manila. The operation to remove the pin from the baby's lung apparently was successful.

TRANSDIAL DIAL . . . Cross country dial telephone service became a reality for regular customers when Mayor Frank Osborne, Alameda, Calif. (above), was called by Mayor M. Leslie Denning of Englewood, N.J. General use is expected in a few years.

CHINESE PUZZLE . . . Although suspended by the Chinese Nationalist government and ordered to return home to account for $19 million in government funds, P. T. Mow was still acting as the Nationalists' legal representative here.

SCANNING THE WEEK'S NEWS of Main Street and the World

U.S. Charges Commies 'Murdered' 5,500 American Prisoners of War

ATROCITIES—A wave of anger rolled across the United States with the grim announcement by Eighth Army officers that the Reds have killed about 5,500 Americans and 290 other U.N. prisoners of war. Civilian and senate reaction was immediate and brought demands the Korean truce negotiations be broken off and use of atomic weapons against the Communists.

Representative Crawford of Michigan summed up the average civilian's point of view by stating: "Let's get an answer from the Communists or let's quit negotiating and get tough and push the fight to a conclusion."

The atrocity report said the Chinese had killed 2,513 American prisoners, 10 British, 40 Turkish, 5 Belgian and 75 others of "unknown nationality". The remainder of the victims were slain by North Koreans before or after the Chinese entered the war. It was also estimated that the Chinese have killed at least 2,790 non-Korean prisoners and the North Koreans about 3,000.

The worse atrocity was blamed on the Chinese who killed 1,250 Americans near the Yalu river boundary of Manchuria between September 16 and 18, 1950.

The Eighth Army spokesman who released the atrocity story gave no reason for making it public at this particular time. One result, however, is expected to be the cementing of public opinion for a quick peace or an all-out fight using, if necessary, atomic weapons.

Immediately after the story was released there were reports of investigations into whether or not the death figures were correct. Latest reports indicated they might be revised upward.

PEACE TALKS—There was, however, every indication that a cease-fire might be in prospect for the Korean battle front and possibly an armistice by Christmas. Allied and Communist negotiators were reported nearing agreement on the latest U.N. proposal.

The Allied plan consisted of four points: (1) Hostilities to continue until an armistice is signed; (2) the present battle line to be a provisional cease-fire line; (3) this line to become final if a full armistice is reached within 30 days; and (4) if the armistice is not reached within 30 days, negotiations will start over by drawing a new cease-fire line based on whatever the battle line may be at that time.

The idea behind the Allies plan to gain a cease-fire now, but at the same time keeping the pressure on the Reds so the final armistice agreement could be negotiated.

Distrust between the Allies and Communists remains the biggest hurdle in any peace settlement.

POLITICS—As a general rule politicians have always been reluctant of putting down in black and white definite opinions on domestic and foreign policies, especially before an important election. Sen. Robert A. Taft, at the moment leading contender for the GOP nomination for president, is an exception to the rule.

The senator recently wrote a book setting forth his views concerning U.S. foreign policy which he entitled, "A Foreign Policy for Americans". Before next year's campaign is over it could be that Senator Taft will wish he had never had the inspiration or time for his literary effort.

The senator, charging that President Truman put "all kinds of political and policy considerations" ahead of his interest in liberty and peace, has started a cyclone in political circles that will grow as the election gets nearer.

Taft also says in his book, "If the present trend continues, it seems to me obvious that the President will become a complete dictator in the entire field of foreign policy and thereby acquire power to force upon congress all kinds of domestic policies which must necessarily follow."

In rebuttal, the Democrats are charging that Taft is still an isolationist and the same man who said in 1940: "War is even worse than a German victory."

AGAIN 'NO'—For the second time in as many weeks President Truman had occasion to say "no" to a proposal that he meet with Premier Stalin, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Plevin for a big four conference. The suggestion was made by President Vincent Auriol of France. The President contended the United Nations is the forum in which the leaders of the world should work for peace. He added, however, he would be willing to confer with Stalin if the Soviet leader came to Washington.

On several occasions the President has given the same answer to such a proposition, expressing the opinion that agreements with the Russians are not worth the paper on which they are written.

MEAT SUPPLY—The small town housewife will resume her role as the dictator of prices of steaks, chops and roasts in the neighborhood butcher shop in the next few months. That is the opinion of prominent cattle producers and farmers in the midwest corn belt where cattle and swine are finished for market.

Stockmen base their reasoning on mounting livestock production in the nation, with federally inspected beef plants turning out beef at a higher rate than in any November in four years.

Housewife resistance to high prices is credited with already rolling back pork prices from 1 to 12 cents a pound below ceiling levels. Gross farm income is reported higher this year than last because of the large numbers of animals marketed at higher prices, but net profits are reduced because of higher operating costs.

Also of concern to cattle producers is rising imports of foreign meat, some of which has not yet been placed on the market. This country's imports of pork and beef this year are breaking all former records. Pork imports are up 60 per cent over last year.

AUTO TOLL—The National Safety Council, which has geared its statistical service to a weekly basis, reported last week the death figure from automobile accidents has reached 995,600. The millionth death will occur during the third week of December, the NSC predicts.

"This tragic event would make a mockery of all that Christmas stands for," Ned H. Dearborn, council president said. "I appeal to everyone to drive and walk with extreme caution during the next few weeks. The millionth traffic death can be delayed if everyone does his part."

NEW TAXES—While vacationing in Florida, President Truman is reported to be working on another request to congress for increased taxes. The report states he will definitely ask for more money when the lawmakers come back to work in January. Only the amount of the increase is yet to be determined.

The report immediately drew the fire of Republicans and Democrats alike. Several stated they will not vote for any more taxes. And Senator George of Georgia, chairman of the powerful finance committee which handles tax measures in the senate, has already stated he will not vote for an increase "short of all-out war or a war crisis."

The lawmakers are well aware of the fact that 1952 is an election year and that a tax increase is always an unpopular measure.

UNITED NATIONS—Talk continued in the United Nations last week on disarmament with the Western powers outlining details of their plan and the Russians proposing one of their own, a dusted-off version of one that has been rejected by the West a number of times.

Not even the most optimistic member of the United Nations believed that anything other than talk would come from the proposed plans. The rival disarmament plans are attracting a great deal of space in newspapers in all parts of the world, but the general public seems to view them as propaganda.

IS STALIN ABOUT TO DIE?

Rumors Say Premier's Heart Weakened

Is Premier Stalin of Russia about to die? He was absent from the tribunal atop Lenin's tomb when the Soviet armed forces paraded through Red Square in Moscow November 7, the 34th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution. The rumor persists that he was not there because of the heart condition, from which he has suffered for years.

That question was being asked by world leaders around the globe last week as rumors began circulating in Berlin that Stalin's health has deteriorated greatly in the past month or so. The Premier, who will be 72 next month, is believed making his usual winter visit to a Black Sea resort to escape Moscow's cold weather.

Special Christmas Promotions
Can Mean Much to Community

Beginning this week local merchants will increase their advertising space in home town newspapers and get their Christmas promotions in high gear. If they have not already done so, stores and windows will be decorated and toy displays will be enlarged.

Too many home town merchant organizations, however, miss one of the constructive possibilities of Christmas promotions. It can be more than just a merchandizing effort. If handled correctly it can create an air of well-being and charity among neighbors, and especially, considerable happiness for the children.

Many small towns now skip the old custom of having Santa Claus come to town because the expense does not justify the return. This thinking is a mistake. Of all the promotions this creates more goodwill than any other. And if it is a united effort of all the merchants, the expense will not prove too great for any one retailer.

Although on a larger scale than could be afforded by the average home town, the arrival of St. Nick in Allentown, Pa., early last month is an example of the kind of enthusiasm such a promotion can create.

The Allentown event was made possible through the efforts of Max Hess, Jr., one of the city's department store owners. It was arranged for St. Nick to arrive from the North Pole with all the fanfare, color, and glamour of a movie star or war hero. Hess has been sponsoring the premiere for the past six years.

This year, Hess arranged for Santa Claus to fly into the Allentown fair grounds from the North Pole, with his three trained bears. When Santa alighted from his special helicopter before some 10,000 cheering youngsters who were Hess' guests for this annual event, he had his trained bears skate, tight-rope walk, bicycle ride, play ball, and entertain the children with many more tricks. Then he distributed gifts to crippled, orphaned and destitute children from the various child caring and welfare institutions of the area, who were special guests of honor for the day.

The Allentown fair grounds was the site of the arrival and welcome party this year. The entire city was invited. In addition to the arrival of Santa and the animal act, Hess treated the children to hot dogs, soda pop, and ice cream.

Hess gets as much fun out of the event as the children. "We learn something new about welcoming Santa every year," he said after this year's party. "The first time we had him come into town on a fire truck and climb a hook and ladder to reach the toyland of our department store. We were forced to abandon that stunt."

"The next year, St. Nick dropped from a helicopter atop a downtown office building. That wasn't so good either," Hess explained. "For Santa got air sick and was so dizzy he nearly walked off the edge of the building."

This year, Santa and Mrs. Claus flew in from the North Pole by helicopter, and taking no chances they landed at the Allentown fair grounds. "But perhaps even then it was a mistake for Mrs. Claus to take off a few minutes later and fly back home, leaving her husband with all his young friends," Hess said. "For Santa's merriment soon disappeared. As he rose from his plush, crimson throne to take his post at our nearby department store, he was rushed by hundreds of his youthful fans. He claimed that it was like being hit by an entire football squad with kids coming full force at him from every direction."

"In the excitement, St. Nick had half of his long, flowing beard ripped off, and was also painfully jabbed in the stomach with a hat pin by a curious youngster who wanted to know if Santa's big 'bay window' was real."

Although he claims the kids are getting livelier each year, Hess is still going to bring Santa to town for them and make bigger and better Santa Claus reception parties annually.

Max Hess is a progressive merchandising executive who realizes that his annual party, although expensive, is building his business goodwill as well as profits. The same thing can be done in the same towns with the same results. It does not have to be on such an elaborate scale.

Santa will arrive in Green Bay, Wis., this year by train. In the past he has run into considerable trouble on his visits.

Tuberculosis Can Be Cured, Prevented

Tuberculosis is not inherited as so many people still believe. It is spread by people with active disease who cough up germs.

The treatment is based on rest and should be undertaken in a hospital under medical supervision. There is no specific cure for the disease. The drug which has been found of greatest usefulness is streptomycin, but it is not a cure. The rehabilitation of the tuberculous, as with other handicapped

One of Santa's reindeer died en route one year. Twice when he came by helicopter he was hampered by snow storms and almost got lost. Last year he tried coming in by boat. With the temperature 7 below, the boat got stuck in the ice on the bay, he froze his toes, and when he arrived in Green Bay, only a handful of children greeted him.

This year to help assure a crowd, he will give out gifts.

Christmas Seals Help
Battle Against TB

Sometime during the two or three weeks before Christmas, thousands of home town families will receive Christmas Seals from their voluntary tuberculosis associations. The purchase of these seals will further the constant fight against the chronic, communicable disease that is killing more people than all other infectious diseases combined.

Since 1907 when Emily P. Bissell launched the first Christmas Seal sale millions of these stamps have financed the National Tuberculosis Association's campaign to stamp out the disease that killed approximately 40,000 persons in the United States in 1949.

Emily Bissell got the idea for the Christmas Seal from a magazine story telling of a Christmas

Stamp sale in Denmark in 1904, originated by Einar Holboell, a postal clerk.

With the backing of the Philadelphia North American the first year's sales amounted to $3,000. The first national Christmas Seal sale the following year brought in $135,000.

Since then the sale of Christmas Seals has become synonymous with the Christmas season. The dollar the home town pays for his seals is financing one of the great medical battles of this century.

Here are some facts about tuberculosis that the home town should consider:

Since the Christmas Seal campaign for tuberculosis was inaugurated almost 50 years ago, the death rate has been forced down 85 per cent. This has meant a saving of 5,000,000 lives for, if TB had continued to kill at the rate of 50 years ago—194 per 100,000 population—it would have killed 5,000,000 more people than have died of tuberculosis in the intervening years.

The decline in death rate, however, has not been matched by a similar decline in the number of cases. It is estimated that approximately 500,000 persons in the United States have active tuberculosis. About half of these—250,000—are "unreported", that is, are unknown to health authorities. These people must be found and placed under treatment to save their own lives and to prevent the spread of the disease to others.

The search for these persons is being made among apparently healthy people because tuberculosis has no obvious symptoms in its early stages. It can, however, usually be detected even in an early stage by means of a chest X-ray. Thus, X-ray "screening" programs are today being conducted among large groups of apparently healthy adults. Last year approximately 16,000,000 small X-ray films were taken in the United States. Your Christmas Seal money helps pay for this program.

persons, should begin at the time that the disease is diagnosed and should continue until the patient is re-adjusted to community life following his discharge. Medical research on tuberculosis is being sponsored by official agencies, by drug manufacturers, universities and hospitals, and voluntary tuberculosis associations. Christmas Seal funds are making possible much of this research as well as scholarships for doctors.

New DU Film

A new full color and sound motion film entitled "Water is Life," will shortly be released by Ducks Unlimited, C. A. Gross, president of the famed international sportsmen's conservation organization announced today.

Produced by Ducks Unlimited (Canada) during the past summer months, the film depicts the vital necessity of water not only to wildlife but to the adjacent human life as well. Its theme dramatically portrays the economic value of a marsh.

"Water is Life," will be shown throughout the United States at meetings of Ducks Unlimited members and will also be available to other sportsmen's groups upon request. Producer Ormal I. Sprungman has employed the use of the breathtakingly realistic commercial Kodachrome for the first time in the new picture. Sprungman is the producer of many other Ducks Unlimited pictures during past years.

Break for Anglers

Two and one-half dollars of federal aid to make fishing better for the followers of old Ike Walton will be spent by the states during the coming year largely to find out what fish resources they have and what can be done to increase them, according to the National Wildlife Federation. The money comes from an excise tax on sport fishing tackle which was earmarked by a 1950 federal law known popularly as the Dingell-Johnson Act.

Twenty of the first 26 fund applications received by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service were for projects classified as "research." Apportionment of the first year's Dingell-Johnson collections, $2,574,910, was announced last Sept. 21 and by Nov. 1 project plans had been received from 12 of the 48 states.

John S. Gottschalk, assistant chief of the Service's federal aid branch, said when all applications are in he expects the first-year proportion to run about 70 per cent for investigations and 30 per cent for acquisition and development.

Utah Is First
Utah was first in with a plan to survey the fishing pressure, the extent of the angling harvest and its economic value to the state. Virginia will launch a similar study of game fish in impounded waters, going into fish growth rates and other biological factors. New Hampshire has been granted funds for two statewide surveys, one covering lakes and ponds, the other measuring fishing pressure and fish populations in streams of the Granite state.

Kentucky will experiment with farm ponds and make a scientific study of Kentucky Lake. Maine has filed fund applications for seven research projects, ranging from trout stream management to a creel census of ice fishing.

An Idaho project calls for a survey of spawning area in the Salmon River and tributaries. One of the purposes will be to estimate the losses if and when proposed Hells Canyon Dam is built on the Snake River, cutting off salmon runs from the Pacific.

A preponderance of research is expected at first under the Dingell-Johnson program because in most states fisheries investigations have lagged for lack of funds. Development projects, such as construction of new fishing lakes and stream improvement, will come later.

Similar Evolution
The older Pittman-Robertson federal-aid game program, started in 1937 with a tax on sporting arms and ammunition, went through a similar evolution. Most of the money went into research in the early years. During the 1950 fiscal year, however, 50 per cent of Pittman-Robertson funds went for development of wildlife areas and game habitat, 25 per cent for acquisition of game lands, and only 20 per cent for research. The remaining 5 per cent went for maintenance of prior developments and for coordination within the states.

A few states—Michigan, Missouri and Pennsylvania are good examples—have been carrying on fisheries research on their own for several years and are ready to start using federal aid money for development projects. Pennsylvania already has submitted plans for construction of a new fishing lake in the Pittsburgh region. On all Dingell-Johnson projects, as with the Pittman-Robertson game projects, the states must put up $1 to match each $3 of federal aid.

Color Unimportant

This will come as rank heresy to many plug addicts, but we'll stick with the contention that the color of surface lures for bass isn't too important. Of course, most of them are made in a wide variety and pattern as regards color, but as anglers know, the great majority of them have neutral shades on the bottom—that portion which alone is visible to the fish.

The main factor in fishing surface lures is plug action.

Saving the Surface
The little man was pushing his cart through the crowded aisles of the big super-market. "Coming through," he called merrily. No one moved. "Gangway," he shouted. A few men stepped aside. He ruefully surveyed the situation and then smiled as a bright idea struck him. "Watch your nylons!" he warned. The women scattered like chaff in the wind.

Something Trivial

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE
By ROGER C. WHITMANStoring Furniture In Unfinished Attic

QUESTION: I am planning to store some furniture in an unfinished attic, and I am worried about the intense heat in the summer and the extreme cold in the winter. Is there any way I can protect the finish from warping or otherwise being damaged?

ANSWER: I believe you would find it an excellent idea to place a thick blanket or batt-type insulation in your roof between rafters. The vapor-barrier should face the attic space. This would keep the attic cooler in summer and warmer in winter. If the attic is kept in this way at a more normal temperature, and if the upholstery is well protected from moths, also if the space is dry—which is most important—the furniture should be all right. Dryness is most essential. Dust covers could be placed over the pieces. If your attic can meet these conditions it should be safe to use it for the storage. But if it is at all damp, you had better store it somewhere else, but not in your basement, which would be still worse.

AUTO ACCIDENTS REACH NEW PEAK, SAYS ROTI

Holiday accidents this year will contribute to the worst traffic toll of any year in Michigan history, according to Cpl. Frank Roti, of the East Tawas post of the Michigan State Police.

"The total number of accidents and the combined total of deaths and injuries are reaching new peaks," Cpl. Roti said. "The toll will be materially increased during the holidays unless drivers and pedestrians alike make greater efforts to practice safety."

"December is supposed to be the happiest month of the year, but instead it is the deadliest. Last December 153 persons died in Michigan traffic accidents, 44 of them during the Christmas week end."

"It is also feared that during December of this year there will occur somewhere in the nation the one millionth death in American traffic since records were first started. It could happen Michigan."

"Longer periods of darkness and adverse weather conditions make traffic more hazardous at this time of year. During the holiday season traffic increases and many persons become so absorbed in the Christmas rush they grow careless."

"There is nothing we can do to prevent darkness and bad weather but we can avoid carelessness if we try. Let's all be especially alert and avoid having that millionth death occur in Michigan. And finally, why spoil Christmas with a needless tragedy."

"I never cease to marvel..."

writes Mrs. Mabel Sykes of Lansing

Dear Friends:

When I started to write a check for my bill this month, I couldn't help but think how much service it represented.

Friends in Grand Rapids were moving to New Jersey. A call to them made it possible to make arrangements for them to stop here on their way.

I received word that a sister was very ill out in Iowa. Just by lifting my receiver and giving a number in Cedar Rapids, I was in touch with home and assurance that all was coming along fine.

I never cease to marvel how easily we call across the country now without even a wait for the call to go through.

I am not unmindful of the multitude of people who make this service possible, and I wish it were possible to say "thank you" to each one of them.

Sincerely yours,
Mabel Sykes

RESIDENT NURSE

A SERIAL STORY
BY LUCY AGNES HANCOCK

THE STORY SO FAR:

Gay Gaylor, orphan and nurse trainee, and Thad Borden, doctor, rather estranged, the father and son of Dr. Borden, Thad's father and Gay's friend. Gay dislikes Thad because of past incidents but is fond of Dr. Borden who helped her gain a position on the Bessemer hospital staff. Later Dr. Borden reveals to Gay that the Bethesda orphanage board disapproves of employing a resident nurse. Gay has been preparing herself to nurse ill-children at Bethesda. Dr. Borden pleads with Gay to forgive Thad for the young man's past misdeeds. Gay plans to open a convalescent home for children at her home.

CHAPTER XVI

"He's going to stop in on his rounds this morning. Let's have coffee and a sandwich ready for him, Myra. This is like old times, isn't it?" Gay reached for the bread and cut two generous slices. She remembered the doctor's preference for a thick sandwich—"a man's sandwich," he called it. Well-buttered bread, a slice of cold veal, than a slice of savory stuffing for which Myra was famous, salt and two stalks of crisp celery on the side. The tray was ready when the doctor's car stopped at the curb in front of Number Seventeen Belfort Street. Gay opened the door and greeted him cordially. He followed her into the well-loved room and sat down in the old familiar chair. For a moment he gazed around, his eyes reminiscent of those other visits, then he turned and said, "Now for the big news, Gay. I'll eat and listen at the same time, if I may. It's a busy morning and much as I'd like to, I must not linger. M'm, this is good! You certainly know how to make a sandwich, my dear Myra!" he called, "your coffee is, as usual, out of this world, as Thad would say. Now begin, Gay."

Gay Considers Home For Convalescents

"Don't eat so fast," the girl warned. "You'll have indigestion. I'm getting restless, Doctor," she went on as the man put down his half-eaten sandwich and reached for his cup. "What do you think of the idea of turning this place into a convalescent home for children, Doctor? I could manage five or six—that is, Myra and I could. Do you think it could be arranged?" The doctor looked at her strangely. "Are you by any chance psychic, Gay?"

"W-why?" the girl asked.

"Thad and I were talking of that very thing only this morning," he told her. "Oh, not this place—not your home, my dear. It isn't altogether suitable—too close to your neighbors for one thing and then it isn't large enough or exactly convenient. You would have no privacy—"

"I don't need privacy—from children, Doctor Borden," Gay interrupted. "Just where did you decide was the proper place?" She spoke somewhat stiffly. She had felt such enthusiasm over her plans that she didn't relinquish them easily.

"Why, the Borden place, of course. There's more than five acres of land—a small stand of trees, mostly birch, the apple orchard, a running stream, a big garden, the huge house with its dozen unused rooms, besides the cottage over beyond the orchard that could quite easily be made into a place suitable for me—when I retire." He grinned at her. "Imagine me retiring, Gay. But I could putter around and help amuse the children while you and Thad run the place—with help, of course," he finished hastily, eying her warily.

At first Gay's eyes had darkened with something like resentment. They had stolen her plans—had gone ahead and robbed her of her dream. Then as the doctor went on talking she began to feel something of his own enthusiasm.

"But—but you're not thinking of retiring, are you? Oh, you can't. What would your patients do? You're not really ill, are you?"

"Not ill, exactly," the doctor told her finishing his sandwich and swallowing the last of the coffee, "but the old ticker isn't what it used to be, my dear. Your old doctor has got to slow up a bit. I'm well past fifty, Gay, and have worked hard all my life. I'm beginning to get a little tired—at times. It's a relief, however, to know that Thad will carry on."

"I—I think they're wonderful, Doctor Borden," she said huskily. "But how could you swing it? Wouldn't it cost a lot to equip a place like yours? I mean—anything as huge as that?"

"Oh, it will cost plenty, of course, but I have ways of raising the money. Some of our civic-minded Bessemerians will no doubt be glad to help. I thought of asking them to take care of certain parts—say, one furnish and equip the nursery in memory of a mother or wife or child. Another might like to furnish a bedroom or two or perhaps a small ward. Someone might enjoy equipping the playground. Oh, we have lots of plans, my dear. But I must run now. We will get together on this. We need your help. Where's Tommy?"

"Weeding Myra's garden, Doctor. It's amazing how that boy gets around."

"Weeding? But—"

"Oh, he uses a weeder one of the neighbors brought over. He's become friends with everyone in the block," she laughed, "and has lived here less than a month."

"He's a great lad," the doctor said and made a dash for the door. "Look at the clock, Frances Gaynor," he cried. "I'm a busy man."

"And you talk of retiring," Gay jeered. "You'll never retire"—as she watched him enter his car and waved her hand in answer to his uplifted arm—"until you die," she finished, the thought sending a shiver of dread through her heart. She wondered if Thad knew of his father's condition. She hadn't seen Thad in more than a week. She hadn't encouraged his friendship.

"Seems to me you ain't none too polite to that boy, Gay," Myra had protested. "Tain't like you to be rude to folks."

She was cool when he called to see Tommy and not too cordial as he ate Myra's cookies and drank her iced ginger ale. In fact, she always found many duties that needed her undivided attention when he came, and Myra would shake her head and mutter to herself as she saw Thad watching the door hungrily for a sight of Gay's return. And just the other day Myra had taken her to task about her treatment of the doctor's son.

Myra Is Enthusiastic About Doctor's Plans

"How you do go on," Myra said unperturbed. "You feed his father, don't you? Always have ever since you come here—years ago. What's the difference? I can't see none—except Thad's young and like most boys has got a bottomless stomach. Don't that Miss Potter feed 'em? I'd like to give her a good piece of my mind. Why, that boy eats 'sif he ain't at a square meal in a month of Sundays."

And Gay, making no reply, had walked away. Now as she entered the kitchen with the empty dishes, Myra asked, "What does Doc think of your idea, Gay?"

"Oh, he and that precious son of his have a better one," the girl replied. "They want to turn the old Borden estate into a convalescent home for children—so I guess that knocks my dream into a cocked hat."

"Now that's something like," Myra cried with enthusiasm. "Think of the big yard—the orchard and the little woods and that stream for wading, Gay. Why, it's—its just the place for kids to get well and strong in. Do you s'pose they'll let me help—cook for 'em, Gay? Do you? And are you goin' into it with 'em?"

Gay shook her head. "I don't think so," she said drearily.

Myra stared for a moment then turned to the salad she was concocting. "You prob'ly know what you're a-doin'," she muttered and sighed deeply as Gay left the room.

All the rest of the morning the girl was unaccountably depressed. Perhaps it was due to the squelching of her plans or the doctor's disclosure of his physical condition. She didn't know. But she felt out of sorts, restless and unhappy. A feeling of dread—of foreboding—possessed her and she jumped nervously whenever the telephone shrilled. It was early afternoon that Mrs. Potter phoned to ask if Thad was there. Her voice sounded thick. Gay told her he wasn't. Suddenly the housekeeper was weeping convulsively.

"Can you come at once, Gay?" she asked and Gay, the feeling of dread growing more pronounced, cried, "What is it—what has happened, Mrs. Potter? The doctor?"

"Yes. Oh, hurry—hurry and try to find Thad."

Gay called Myra. "Call everyone you can think of, Myra. Find Thad Borden and send him home—at once. His father is ill," she said as she sped down the front walk. She didn't wait to get the car out but hurried—almost ran along the street to the old Borden house. It wasn't far and when she reached it a big, shiny car was parked before the front porch in the place where the doctor's shabby coupe usually stood.

She went inside. Mrs. Potter came hurrying toward her. Pointing to the study back of the offices she said shakily, "They're in there. Did you find Thad?"

Gay shook her head and went directly to the closed door, turned the handle and looked inside. Memorial's Chief of Staff stood beside the wide couch on which Doctor Borden, white and very ill, lay. He turned as the door opened and motioned her to enter.

"Glad you came, Gaynor," he said softly. "You've got a job on your hands. I warned him—Now, now, Doctor, don't move—just relax. The best nurse in the city—the world, for that matter—is going to see that you obey orders, old man."

"Hello, Gay!" the sick man murmured weakly, trying hard to smile.

Gay Retains Fear Of Iron Gates

"Dad, Dad!" he whispered. "I'm here. Don't you worry—we'll have you okay before you know it." He patted his father's hand and drew back.

"Better let him stay as he is for an hour or two—maybe three," Doctor Cushing advised. "Then he can be undressed and made comfortable for the night. Have you a bedroom downstairs, Thad? He should not climb stairs—not right away," he qualified as the patient frowned. "When this passes he will undoubtedly be about as usual, but maybe now he'll listen to me and take things easier."

"He will," Thad promised firmly, then went on, "There are a couple of bedrooms in the back—what used to be the servants' quarters," he explained, "but we can put up a bed right here. Why not? I'll attend to it at once." He hadn't noticed Gay, or at least he hadn't spoken to her and the girl hesitated to say anything.

"Can you stay on, Gaynor?" the Chief of Staff asked.

"Of course," Gay answered and heard a sigh from the couch. She turned to meet the look of satisfaction on her patient's face. "I haven't my uniforms, Doctor, but Myra—my housekeeper—will get them to me at once."

During Doctor Borden's convalescence, there were many conferences regarding the plans for the Marcia Borden Convalescent Home for Children.

"That's what it's going to be called, Gay," the doctor said. "I know exactly where the sign will be placed. Crescent-wise—a rched above the wide entrance gates of wrought iron."

Gay shuddered and Thad said quickly, "You don't like that idea?" "An iron gate takes me back to Bethesda," the girl said. "For years it haunted me day and night—the clanging of that heavy iron gate shutting me in. I hate gates, Doctor Borden."

"But with little children—"

"Oh, I realize it's silly of me," Gay acknowledged "and probably the gate you have in mind would have no least resemblance to the one protecting Bethesda's sacred lawn from the populace."

"So that gate was another of your annoyances—hurdles, if you like," the doctor smiled. "Well, I think, perhaps, you owe something to that iron gate, my dear. Anyway, it didn't deter you from wanting to return to Bethesda as resident nurse, did it?"

"No," the girl answered. "I think I wanted to be convinced—to prove that it had no power to keep me in—that I was free to go and come as I pleased. I wanted, childishly, perhaps, to shake my fist at it—taunt it with the declaration that it couldn't scare me."

"Poor kid!" Thad murmured and Gay flushed with embarrassment.

"Of course," she went on hastily, "all that was long ago—before I went into training. Nurses are supposed not to have neuroses—to shrink at nothing—fear nothing—balk at nothing—"

"Rubbish!" Thad said emphatically. "Nurses are human—"

"Are they? There have been times when some of us have wondered," Gay said whimsically. "But go on with your plans, Doctor Borden. There is to be a wrought iron gate or gates. What else?"

"We'll have Forrester, the architect, come out some evening when I'm at leisure, and we'll go into the situation quite thoroughly. He'll be able to give us an idea of the extent and the subsequent expense of reconstructing. When we know just what we're up against, we can go ahead and start raising the money."

Hero's Farewell

Lesson for December 9, 1951

A moving picture company once conceived the idea of recording and putting on the screen all over the country what two opposing candidates were saying on various problems. It was enjoyable, or maddening, according to your political views, to observe the contrast. Both men read what they had to say, but their reading was entirely different.

One man kept his eyes on his little desk, never made a gesture, never looked at the audience. It was not inspiring—just a middle-aged man reading to himself. Candidate B on the other hand never left his script come between him and his listeners; he kept his eye on them and unless one observed him carefully one would not notice that he was reading. (He won in a walk, too.) Now the way to get the true flavor of Deuteronomy, especially the chapters selected for this week, is to listen to some one read it who can read like Candidate B. For Deuteronomy is not a desk-book; it is mostly out-of-doors oratory. It was not meant for the eye first, but for the ear.

After the Great Man, What?

A great hero, Moses, was taking leave of his people. In spite of all the grumbling and the rebellions, it is no exaggeration to say that for those people he stood in the place of God. He not only towered above his own generation, but he cast a light far into the centuries, so that to this day we are indebted to the inspired greatness of Moses, the man of God.

Yet the greatest of men must die. When it came time for him to say farewell it is hard to imagine the sinking of heart that all his people felt.

Before them lay the unknown; their whole course of life was about to change, in ways they could not foresee; with Moses gone, how could they face the future? Was he to leave after him (as some "great" men have done) only a vacuum?

A Challenge

IN the closing days of his life, Moses focussed his people's eyes on two things. First was the Law. Life is not lived by impulse and inspiration only. Life, to have power and meaning, must be a patterned life, clear and definite lines, a sense of direction. So Moses left behind him—not full details, these were for others to work out—the main lines of civic and social, as well as individual life, in the Law which God had made clear to him as the true "design for living."

But Moses does not simply pound it into people's ears: You shall, you must, these are the orders! He sets it out as a clear choice. He shows the people the alternatives: Life and Good on the one hand, Death and Evil on the other. Make up your mind, he says: Choose. The Law of God does not force you.

It is not an arbitrary thing. The reason for the Law is never "just because." The reason for the Law is that it is the way to live. You don't have to keep it, Moses says in effect; but if you choose to reject it, the end of the other road is Death.

This is true for individuals, it is true for nations. It is a terrific mistake to think of God as ordering us about for his own amusement, or to tie us down. He gives us orders for our own sakes.

A Song

A NOTHER legacy Moses leaves behind is a Song. We do not usually think of Moses as a poet, but Deut. 32 is ascribed to him. He knew people might forget the Law, but a Song they would not forget. "I care not who writes a nation's laws," said a philosopher, "if only I can write its songs."

What Moses gave his people was no mere tuneless trash, but a grand hymn of faith. What Moses most of all wants his people to do, is not to remember him but to remember God. So after all the law is on the books, and all the speeches have been made, at the last he gives his people a Song, to remember God by.

Is it not so always? What are the parts of the Bible that mean most to all generations? Always the singing words of Psalm and prophet and gospel, the rhythm of Paul's chapter on Love, the majestic choruses of the Revelation. Though great men pass, though the mind forget the Law, the heart will not forget the Song.

CHRISTMAS IS EVERYWHERE

The fact that the many customs practiced at Christmastime stem from various peoples and nations is a sign of the universality of the great holiday.

The custom of the Christmas tree is believed to have originated with the Romans, although Martin Luther receives much credit for popularizing their use. From the tree-worshipping Druids came the using of mistletoe as a sign of good will and peace. Mistletoe boughs once were used for arrow parts, and thus signified evil. The Druids conceived the idea of raising them high and out of reach, thus converting them to a sign of kindness and peace.

The Yule log came from England, where it was tradition that a tenant could feast at his lord's expense as long as a round of wood would burn. England also added the Wassail bowl, filled with spice and ale. Americans substituted with the egg-nog bowl.

The traditional and beautiful concept of the Crib of the Nativity, featured yearly in churches, homes, and on countless thousands of Christmas cards, came originally from the brush of St. Francis of Assisi in 1223.

There are hundreds of other Christmas customs practiced in countries around the world, either stemming from these, or in some way related. Those mentioned here might have descended from the Yuletide customs of civilizations centuries before man began writing competent histories. For Christmas customs were originated the night the Magi followed the gleaming star in the sky to worship at the crib of the newborn Saviour, and have continued since.

'Los Pastores' Is Traditional Feature Of Mexican Yule

ONE OF THE traditional features of the long Mexican Christmas celebration is "Los Pastores."

Participating actors are trained weeks early for this pageant that portrays the story of the shepherds who followed the star to the stable at Bethlehem and found the Christ Child.

Christmas songs passed down from one generation to another are sung by the actors as they pass through the streets at midnight, Christmas Eve. Each carries a long pole on which are fastened stars of transparent paper illuminated from within by candles, and beats time to the singing with shepherds' staves ornamented with jingling bells.

The procession ends at the church, with midnight mass, the singing continuing until dawn, while the devout kneel about in prayer.

On January 6, the day of the Three Kings, Los Pastores sing traditional songs before images of the Kings. On that day it is the custom for children to stuff their shoes with hay and place them on balconies in anticipation of the coming of the three Kings.

The horses of the Kings are supposed to eat the hay, in return for which the grateful Kings place toys and sweets in the children's shoes.

St. Nicholas So Called By American Tots Only

American children are the only ones who call the patron saint of Christmas St. Nicholas.

St. Nicholas is, of course, a slurring of the Dutch word San Nicholas, but the name has different forms around the world. Father Christmas is indigenous to Britain; Santa Claus to Germany; Kris Kringle to Holland. All, however, are but variants of St. Nick, who was an actual person.

Nicholas was a bishop, one of the youngest in the history of the church, at Lycia, Asia Minor, and he was renowned for his piety and grace. But it was his generosity that really made him remembered. Born of wealthy parents, he was a dispenser of the good things of life and one of the greatest givers of gifts in the history of the world.

Too Much Roasting Can Ruin the Turkey

Many a turkey, perfectly dressed and beautifully stuffed, has been all but ruined in the actual roasting process.

The temperature used in roasting is the most important factor—it is perfectly possible to transform an excellent, tender, high quality bird into a stringy, tough, dry turkey by too high heat in roasting. Modern methods recommend 300 degrees and require no tedious basting.

Two little girls were playing. One pretended that she wanted to rent the other's playhouse. "Have you any parents?" the playhouse owner asked. "Yes, two," was the reply. "I'm sorry," the small landlady said, "but I never rent to children with parents. They're so noisy and destructive."

Loony Labor
A lunatic was nailing shingles on a wall. He was a very energetic and workmanlike man, wearing overalls with two large pockets. As he extracted the nails from one pocket he looked at them, hammering some in and throwing the rest away. "Say, Wellington," said another inmate who sauntered by, "why are you throwing half the nails away?" "Heads on the wrong end," was the curt answer. "You dope," said the other, "what do you think the other pocket is for? Save those wrong ones for the opposite wall."

A widow visited a spiritualist medium who soon had her in contact with her late husband. It was a tense moment. "Dear John, are you happy there?" "Very happy," replied the departed one. key to someone's Merry, Merry Christmas

This is the key to many things.

It's the key to a Buick, as you may well guess.

It's the key to power that is nimble and mighty and always alert—and to miles that are wondrously smooth and supremely pleasant.

It's the key to a prized possession that will keep this Christmas joyous in memory for months and even years.

And it's the key to sparkling eyes and happy smiles and delighted surprise for that very special Someone who receives it.

Want to know why a Buick's key can work such wonders? Come in and find out firsthand.

This, we promise you, is one bit of Christmas shopping that you're going to enjoy.

When you touch off that Fireball Engine that's a high-compression valve-in-head eight—when you set that Dynaflo* pointer at "D" for "Drive"—when you lay hands on that graceful wheel, ease into motion and feed the power—you're going to feel like Santa Claus and all his reindeer as they skim through the air with the greatest of ease.

This is a great car, a great performer, and a great buy.

No need to tell you the shopping days

Equipment, accessories, trim and models are subject to change without notice. *Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on other Series.
