Severe Storms Slows Iosco Traffic

December Shows Some Real Winter Weather

The snowstorm of Wednesday night and Thursday slowed traffic on Iosco county's highways to a minimum.

County and city snow removal equipment fought hard to keep the main highways and streets open, but school buses were held up, and schools had a small attendance or were closed entirely. With a great volume of mail for the Christmas holidays, rural carriers were especially hard pressed to make their deliveries.

Yesterday's hard storm followed in the immediate tracks of the previous Tuesday night's storm which had an eight-inch snowfall. Previous to, and the interim between storms thermometers dropped to below zero, and December 1951 established a winter record which has not been exceeded in many past years.

Christmas Vacation Periods Announced

Christmas vacations will start Friday for Iosco schools, according to an announcement made Thursday by Russell Rollin, county superintendent of schools.

Schools having two-week vacations are: Tawas City, East Tawas, Oscoda, Upper Townline, Greenwood, Watts, St. Joseph and Emmanuel Lutheran.

Those with one-week vacations are: Plainfield, Whittemore, Taft, Lower Townline and Vine.

The Sherman Township Unit contract with teachers shows no Christmas vacation clause, and what was planned there was not known.

We Wish You a Merry Christmas

After his ordination he was appointed as assistant at St. Mary church, Grand Rapids, where he served from June 1923 to March 1929.

Seven Injured in Head-On Crash

Accident Occurred Last Friday Near Oscoda

Limited visibility on account of a snow storm was the cause of a head-on automobile collision late last Friday afternoon in which seven people were injured. The accident occurred about three miles south of Oscoda.

The injured were Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Walter of Lansing, and five men from the Oscoda Airbase, Joseph Mammone, Louis Sabetta, Herman Rennello, Peter Pittinato and John Pekaiski.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter and Joseph Mammone were seriously hurt and taken to the Alpena hospital. The other four were hospitalized at the Oscoda Airbase. The Jacques' ambulance from this city, Wilkin's ambulance from Oscoda and the airbase ambulance removed the injured to the hospital.

Rennells, driving the car containing the airforce men, attempted to pass an Iosco county road grader driven by Fred Boulder. He apparently did not see the north-bound Walters car until it was too late to avoid the crash.

Judge Smith Resigns as City Attorney

Hertzler Authorized To Study Possibilities For Sewer Bond Issue

After serving as city attorney for about 20 years, Judge H. Read Smith presented his resignation to the Tawas City common council Monday evening.

The letter of resignation is as follows:

To: The Mayor and the Common Council

Owing to the volume of business in the Probate Office and in my private practice it is not possible for me to give proper attention to the legal matters of the City. I am, therefore, tendering my resignation as City Attorney effective December 17, 1951.

I extend my deepest appreciation to the Mayor and members of the Common Council for their co-operation during the present term, as well as the many Mayors and Councilmen that I have served under as City Attorney during the past years.

Sincerely,
H. Read Smith.

The council has not appointed a successor to Judge Smith.

At the meeting Attorney Herbert Hertzler was authorized to make an investigation of the possibilities for a bond issue to construct a sewer extension on First street in the Third Ward. The sewer to be financed through an assessment district of the property benefited. A pumping station for the extension would be constructed by assessments spread on the city at large.

An additional $25.00 per month was authorized for library maintenance.

Lighting recommendations for New M-55 made by the engineering department of the Consumers Power Company were adopted by the council. Five lights will be installed on the new street as soon as possible.

Wednesday evening Chief of Police George Ruth called a meeting of boys at the public school building for the purpose of organizing a Junior Police Patrol. The response was excellent. Thirty-six boys signed up for membership in the patrol. The group will be organized at once and a program of work adopted.

Aliens Must Report Addresses

Blank Forms May be Secured at Postoffices

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, today, reminded all aliens that they furnish their present address during the period between January 1 and 11, inclusive. Forms may be secured at any postoffice after January 1.

Under the amended law any alien residing in the United States on January 1, 1952, except one in an authorized temporary status, must notify the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, Washington, D.C. of his current address within ten days thereafter and during the same period in each succeeding year.

Argule R. Mackey, commissioner of immigration advised aliens that it is to their distinct advantage to promptly notify the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Washington, D.C. of his current address during the period between annual address reports. This will facilitate and greatly expedite the handling of all records pertaining to aliens and their families.

Mr. Mackey emphasized that the address report is an annual requirement and is not to be confused with alien registration. An alien residing in the United States on January 1 must make the address report each and every year, regardless of whether or not he previously registered as an alien or previously reported his address, except: (1) Aliens temporarily admitted to the United States who have not overstayed their authorized period of admission; (2) Students whose period of admission has not yet expired and who have not violated any of the conditions of their admission.

Mr. Mackey pointed out that failure to comply with the above would subject alien, upon conviction, to fines or imprisonment or both.

Golden Glovers Begin Training

Shuman reports that 16 or more candidates have reported for work outs including Wilmer Alberts, Edward Wells, Dick Mahlon, George Zajac, Jr., Wayne Nelson, Chas. Heckman, John Rescoe, Bill Rapp, Don Church, Dick Werth, Roger McGuire, Alfred Wogoman, Bill Zaleta, Jay Bretz, Fred Dear and Mike Germano. The last four are men from the airbase.

Scotty stated that Wilmer Alberts, who won in the Golden Gloves at Bay City and lost a close decision at Grand Rapids, looks in top condition and should be a top contender again this year.

Progress Reported in Peace Talks; Revenue Bureau Scandal Spreading

FIVE POINTS—Peace by Christmas, the dream of millions of Americans in every walk of life, remains just that—a dream. United Nations and Communist negotiators in Korea continue to make proposals, counter-proposals, demands and tentative concessions, but the two sides are seriously split.

Five points are involved: (1) The U.N. demand for no military build-up during an armistice; (2) Joint inspection teams to police the truce; (3) Possession of islands off both coasts of North Korea; (4) A U.N. demand for a ban on construction or repair of air fields; (5) Reduction of Allied military forces through withdrawal from Korea, demanded by the Reds.

MARCH OF DIMES

JANUARY 2-31

The offer of concessions was first made by the United Nations delegates. They offered to swap Allied possession of strategic islands off both coasts for Communist concessions, as yet not revealed.

The Communists, on the other hand, demanded the right to increase their military potential during the armistice, including the construction of airports. They also demanded the reduction of Allied military forces in Korea by withdrawing them.

Then, in a sudden reversal of policy, the Reds made two proposals: (1) Agreement by both sides not to introduce into Korea any military forces, weapons, and ammunition under any pretext; and (2) both sides to invite representative nations neutral in the Korean War to form a supervisory organ to be responsible for conducting necessary inspection beyond the demilitarized zone, of such ports of entry in the rear as mutually agreed upon by both sides, and to report to the joint armistice commission the result of inspection.

The reversal of policy was so sudden the Allies were caught flat-footed and asked for a short recess. Afterwards, the U.N. command presented 21 questions designed to clarify the two proposals, the most important of which was what nations did the Reds have in mind as neutral inspectors. There are only three or four sections that would be acceptable to the Allies.

If the negotiators can agree upon these two points then they will proceed to the next step of the peace talks. That is exchange of prisoners of war. The Communists report they have almost completed a count of prisoners in their hands and other data necessary for a possible exchange.

The chances for peace in Korea are increasing with each point the negotiators agree upon, but there remains much to be settled. Agreement by Christmas must still be considered a dream.

GAMBLERS—The gamblers in the home towns of the nation are in for a hard time. The Internal Revenue Bureau has announced it will tell all about 2,500 registered gamblers to local police officers. The bureau also announced it would crack down on an estimated 15,000 suspected gamblers who have bothered to register under the new federal gambling-tax law.

Passage of the federal gambling law put most gamblers in a quandary. If local authorities arrest a gambler equipped with stamp, he is subject to prosecution under state laws against gambling. Most states have such laws. If he operates a gambling business and has no stamp, then federal authorities get him.

The bureau now has detailed information about 2,575 bookies and punchboard and numbers operators who applied for the federal stamp by the December 1 deadline.

THE BIG FOUR—While the Allies and Communists were trying to find a basis for peace in Asia, in Europe the big four sat down to discuss disarmament. Although first meetings were cordial, there was little chance of agreement on rival East-West disarmament plans.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky continued to charge that while the United States and Britain talk about lowering tension, their policies tend to increase it; the United States tries to hedge around disarmament with technical talk of "levels of armaments"; the western powers have armed forces twice the size of Russia's.

A-WEAPONS—Peace talks in Korea and disarmament in Europe caused little excitement among the people in the home towns of the nation. They were interested, however, in some concrete facts as outlined by Dr. Alvin C. Graves, scientific director of all Atomic Energy Commission tests.

He indicated that the stockpile of A-weapons has increased virtually double during 1951 and expressed his belief that the work the U. S. has done in atomic energy is the reason the world isn't in World War III.

Said Dr. Graves: "I am not in the atomic business because I like to manufacture things that kill people. I am thoroughly convinced that the reason we are not in a third world war now is because of the work the United States has done in atomic energy. . . I'm doing what I am doing because I believe it is the biggest contribution to the cause of world-wide peace."

TAX SCANDAL—The mounting scandal in the Internal Revenue Bureau, touched off when President Truman dismissed Assistant Attorney General Theron Caudle, is having repercussions down to the home town level.

The scandal could become the most talked about affair in a year that will be marked for its disclosures of corruption. Caudle denies that he has done anything "illegal", but members of the House Ways and Means subcommittee which is investigating his activities termed some of his practices "questionable". In addition, the administration has taken hard action against two former collectors at Boston and St. Louis who are under indictment; others have been fired or forced to resign; still others are under suspicion pending complete investigation.

Whether or not the administration has acted quick enough to off-set possible reaction in the 1952 election is the question Democrat leaders are asking themselves these days. They reason, and correctly, that the average voter in the home town resents the tax drain on his pocketbook. He is, therefore, directly injured by revelations of tax "fixes". Also, they are inclined to believe there is little chance that the scandal will die before the campaign begins because some tax collectors will be involved in court cases. Anyway, the GOP will keep it alive.

This one scandal could be more damaging to the Democratic campaign in 1952 than all the others of the past year put together. The public doesn't like tampering with its pocketbook.

FOREIGN AID—Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors, one of America's great corporations, has warned the foreign aid program can not be prolonged to any great length.

He said: "Our country has now a policy that might be called colonialism in reverse. We are exploiting our own people and our own resources to benefit people in other countries. Even with America's great idealism and productivity, this policy cannot safely be counted on for long by any nation."

Wilson spoke at a session of the first International Conference of Manufacturers attended by more than 300 British and Western European industrial leaders.

Educational Toys Set Sales Records

With 60 per cent more children under five years of age to clutch eagerly at be-ribboned packages this Christmas than there were in the 1939 holiday season, sale records of Christmas toys is almost a certainty. Educational toys is the fastest growing group in the $800 million U.S. toy trade.

The passing centuries of the American way of life were ably recorded by artists of the various eras in America's history, each depicting an era's life and times as the artist saw it with his own eyes. These reporter artists of United States history now occupy a unique niche, an eminence often overlooked by chroniclers.

ANGELS IN ARMBANDS . . . You have never seen their names in the gossip columns of your newspapers that tell the doings of cafe society, but when the chips are down, they will form the hard core of your community's civil defense, helping the helpless and injured. They are plain Americans giving their time as a public duty. Typical of this unselfish army in armbands that will protect the civilians of our nation is this group superimposed on the sky over the minarets of New York City, the biggest responsibility of civil defense in America. Your community may be smaller, but should be as alert.

Richard does not find riding his bike in the new suit too awkward after a little practice.

Money Spent With Local Stores Benefits the Entire Community

This is the third week this column has been devoted to Christmas promotions. In one the material and the intangible benefits that local merchants gain from Christmas parades and community Santa Claus was discussed. In another, Christmas fire hazards and the promotion of safety by local businessmen was the chief topic.

It seems appropriate at this point to discuss a few of the reasons why your local merchant has efforts on Christmas. By merchandising efforts we mean the money he has spent for advertising in the local newspaper, donations to a community Santa Claus and parties, time and money spent to decorate Main Street, and in all probability, time and money contributed to a number of activities of community benefit that he will never mention.

Much of this activity, of course has been in an effort to get the people in his home town into his store to do their Christmas shopping. At the same time, much of it has been due entirely to his community spirit.

But in the main his advertising parades and community Santa has been directed toward selling the consumer. For this reason, many home towners are inclined to look down their noses at these activities and belittle the merchant. But what, after all, is so wrong with it? Every person in this community planned a certain amount of shopping, a number of gifts for family and friends. No amount of advertising or promotion is likely to increase the individual's buying above his economic limitations.

Briefly, the purpose has been to get you, the local consumer, into a local store; to get you to do your buying at home. As the result of good roads and fast transportation, too many home owners today are inclined to take off for the city on a Christmas buying spree. They forget that they could find what they wanted at home; they forget the dollar spent away from home will not return to the community.

Your local merchant depends upon the Christmas trade to keep his front doors open. In many cases he operates at a loss for months, yet knowing that Christmas and other special events will put his business in the black. By taking your business away from the home town you are depriving him and the community of prosperity directly in proportion to the amount you spend.

Many people fail to realize that the dollar spent with the local merchant goes to work for the entire community. He pays it out in store rent and taxes, license fees to operate in the community, salaries to employees, and numerous other services. It is possible that a part of the dollar you spend with your local merchant will find its way back into your own pocket before the following year is over.

On the other hand, the dollar spent in the city remains there in the same manner in which the local dollar spent at home remains in the local community.

So, during the few remaining days before Christmas do your shopping at home. Your Main Street merchant will appreciate your business.

THE LABOR FORCE

Million Women Join Nation's Labor Force During Past Year

WNU Washington Bureau

Although several years have elapsed since the peak of female employment during World War II, in the past year alone more than a million women have gone back into the industrial force of the country.

While this pace has been slower and more orderly than was the case during the last war, there are only approximately two and one-half million less women in industry now than there were during the peak of World War II. In the labor force, which means those working or looking for work, in September of 1951 there were 19,514,000 women.

Although there has been a recent definite trend toward more employment of women, the results have not necessarily been seen in defense industries, except in critical areas. In California, for example, a great number of women have taken jobs in aircraft plants. An arsenal in Illinois is now beginning to hire women. While the total number of women in industry will probably reach and perhaps even exceed the mark set during World War II, the overall picture will not be the same. The trend is not so much toward women in factories, plants, and other defense jobs as it is toward occupations for which women are better fitted.

Because of the present easier pace and less urgent demand for women in industry as compared to the war years, the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor is considering the factors involved in a more orderly and scientific assimilation of women into the labor force. These factors are (1) establishment of day care centers for children, (2) convenient shopping hours, and (3) the question of equal pay for comparable work, one of the strongest points in the current recruitment program for women in the armed forces. Since 50 per cent of the working women are married, consideration of community facilities are important.

While the current military recruitment drive is, in itself, presenting strong competition for the attention of many women, it will affect only one age group—those from 18 to 25.

Older Women Join Labor Force

In terms of the age distribution of women workers in general, the picture now as compared with 1940 shows that the proportion of women in the labor force who are between 20 and 34 has declined, while the proportion 35 years old and over has increased. Fewer women are going into the professional and semi-professional occupations now than they were at the beginning of the decade. The decline in this field is explained in part by the fact that, during the war and post war periods, jobs were plentiful and many women in their teens and early twenties went to work instead of entering school for professional training. The records show that the proportion of women in factories has receded from the wartime high, but the ratio is still above pre-war levels. Employers say there is no age limit for clerical help although they desire women under 49.

Double Polio Drive Period Is Planned

The March of Dimes starts two weeks earlier than usual this year because of the upward surge of polio. During the past four years it has become increasingly difficult for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to carry on its fight against the only epidemic disease still on the increase in America.

Starting January 2, instead of Jan. 15, the 1952 March of Dimes will continue throughout the rest of the month. Local and national officials of the polio fighting organization hope that the doubled, campaign period will be accompanied by doubled efforts on the part of volunteers and by increased contributions by all Americans.

The year 1951 marked the fourth year in succession that the National Foundation went into debt providing patient care for the children and adults who fell victim to poliomyelitis. The 1951 debt was approximately $5,000,000, and it was made up of little debts scattered throughout counties in 48 states.

This means that the 1952 March of Dimes is already mortgaged for this amount before a cent is set aside for research or for the contingencies that lie ahead. All this has come about because of an increase in polio incidence which authorities believe will continue until the final answer to the disease is found in the form of a preventive or cure.

During the last four years, including an estimate of 23,500 cases in 1951, the nation has experienced its worst polio years in history. Not since 1916 has there been incidence to compare with the case loads of these last four years. In the four-year period ended in December of 1951, the nation had 132,000 cases as compared with 113,500 in the entire previous decade.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons
BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Christ Is the Answer

Lesson for December 23, 1951

EVERYONE is acquainted with Jesus the baby. The Christmas festival makes that certain. We know that the lot of babies in all Christian lands today is better because of Jesus the child. His coming hallowed childhood and motherhood for all time. But Jesus did not stay a baby. He was born not chiefly in order to be cuddled in a mother's arms. He was born to be a King; he was born to grow, to teach, to command, to save. Foreman is the festival that presents him King of Kings and Lord of Lords? There are such, but they never had the popularity of Christmas.

Dr. Foreman

Bethlehem Was a Beginning

Innumerable pictures and statues the mother of Christ looms large, the baby small. In the Bible it is the other way around. The interest of the Bible is not centered at Bethlehem, important as that place was in the history of the world. The songs which only Luke has saved for us point far beyond the manger-child.

Bethlehem marked the great moment, to be sure, the miracle of miracles when God became man. But that was the beginning, only the beginning. Two of the Gospels fail to mention the first Christmas at all. The two that do mention Jesus' childhood leave it after a few short paragraphs.

If anything is certain about what the writers of the New Testament thought, it is certain that when they thought of Jesus Christ, they seldom, if ever thought of him as a baby. The little Jesus is a helpless child, depending on the care of his mother. He is sweet and appealing, and every one loves him. But he only lies there perpetually smiling. We like babies, but we have our grown-up affairs to attend to. We think babies are "cute", but we take no orders from, we do not try to be like them. We cuddle them and talk baby-talk to them, but when we get ready to talk sense, when we are in any kind of trouble, when we need some one to tell us what to do, we never talk to babies.

The Power of God

So, if Christ is to mean to us all what he should, it is time we got into the Bible's way of looking at him. He is called the "fulfillment of prophecy". What does that mean? The great prophets looked forward to a coming king, a "Messiah"; he must begin life as a child, because he would be a human being, not an angel.

If our thinking stops with the babe in the manger, we shall never realize the tremendous truth about Jesus. Consider the words that Isaiah used (Isa. 9:6,7): "Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace." These are grown-up words, more than grown-up. They point to something super-human, something coming into this world, as the Bible puts it, "from above".

The Christ of the Prophets is a person who will "rule the nations". The Christ of the apostles is likewise no child. He is the man sent from heaven; he is the "power of God and the wisdom of God" (I Cor. 1:24). He is King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

A baby lets us do as we please; but not the Lord of Lords. He challenges the world—from a throne, not a cradle. What he thinks, we desperately must know. What his will is, we must learn or perish. If the world is going to pieces today it is because we think no more of Jesus than of any other picturesque infant.

The Christ Who Commands

It is said often, as a kind of slogan, that "Christ is the answer". If this means anything true, and it does, it means that the ways of the world are right ways only when they are the ways of Jesus. Thinking, planning, acting—personal and social living both—it is either as Jesus would have it or it is headed for a crash.

This is not to say that the commands of Christ are arbitrary, "just because..." Faith in him is the gateway to life, following him is life.

A sentimental glow as we pass the manger at Bethlehem is not what Christianity means. It means saying as Paul did: Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? A Christ who can be patronized or pitied is no answer; the only answer is the Christ who commands.

BLOOD FOR FREEDOM

Four Nurses Plan 10,000 Mile, Ten State Tour for Red Cross

Four young women are out for blood, and they are going after it in a big way.

First of all, Union Pacific Railroad remodeled a business car, attached a baggage car to carry supplies, and promised to transport them anywhere they wished to go on the 10,000 miles of its tracks to complete their search.

Next the American Red Cross furnished them with supplies and offered to have their local chapters recruit enough patriotic American volunteers to part with a pint of the vital fluid.

So they are ready to hit the road, railroad that is, on a tour that will take them through the eleven western states served by Union Pacific beginning in December.

Star Dust

By INEZ GERHARD

STEVE COCHRAN'S dog, Tschakowsky, now has a collar which his master says will put the rhinestone one belonging to Joan Crawford's Cluget to shame. It's set with elks' teeth; Steve had it made by a soldier stationed at Fort Knox, Ky., where he spent several weeks filming "The Tanks Are Coming" for Warners'. Tschakowsky appears in that one; his screen credits also include "Inside the Walls of Folsom Prison" and "Tomorrow Is Another Day"; as an actor, he rates really fancy accessories.

The play in which Ginger Rogers returned to Broadway, "Love and Let Love", closed after a month's run. But simultaneously with its closing came the announcement by Columbia Broadcasting that she had been signed for exclusive appearances on television, on a contract running more than five years. For a salary of more than one million dollars, she will be the star and mistress of ceremonies of a half-hour weekly show, starting after April 1. She will sing, dance and act in adaptations of her numerous screen shows.

While on her four week's leave of absence from "Stop the Music", Kay Armen conferred with MGM's Joe Pasternak about doing a film musical in Hollywood. She also filled a three weeks' singing engagement at Las Vegas' Thunderbird Hotel.

GRASSROOTS

G. O. P. More Interested in Goats Than Integrity

By Wright A. Patterson

THOSE REPUBLICANS who are looked to as directors of the 1952 battle of the ballots have decreed that the issue on which the big-gun oratory will be charged will be that of "legal and moral honesty and integrity in the operations of the government."

It is a noble issue, but it is not one that will attract or change votes in the quantities that are needed. There is but little personal interest in the fact that a white house stenographer received as a present a mink coat, or that a presidential clerk was given free hotel accommodations in Florida, or that deep freeze units were handed out to several favored individuals by General Vaughn, or that others had free cameras, free vacation trips.

There is a greater number of Americans, who by the practice of industry and thrift, have accumulated two or more goats, than there are those who have only one or less, and those with two or more object to following the socialistic preaching of dividing with those who have less.

Self-preservation is the first law of nature, and those with two or more goats are not favorable to the socialistic trend of the nation and the present administration.

Wherever blood centers are not operating they will accept donors to supplement the national blood program.

Ambitious women, these Red Cross nurses, they are aiming at 2000 pints each month, and will work on "Blood For Freedom," the name of their mobile blood collection unit, until they make it. They must, they say with typical feminine determination, because every drop is going directly to the armed forces.

Heading the group of four nurses that staff the car is Kathryn McDonough, formerly of Waterloo, Iowa. She did private duty after training at St. Joseph's Hospital in Omaha and then served as an industrial nurse before joining the blood program in September, 1949.

Ramona Walla is another member of the crew. She lived at Lincoln, Neb. originally and received her nurses training at St. Joseph's Hospital in Omaha. Before joining the blood program in December, 1949, Ramona did private duty nursing.

Eileen Roth, who came from Elkhorn, Neb., before moving to Omaha, is the third member of the staff. She is another alumna of St. Joseph's in Omaha and was on private duty before joining the blood program in January, 1950.

Monica DeWulf of Cedar Rapids, Neb., has been with the Red Cross blood program since September, 1950. She was also a private nurse after her graduation from St. Elizabeth's Hospital Nursing School at Lincoln, Neb.

COLLECTIVELY, these four white-clad nurses have worked on more than 300 mobile trips made by the Omaha regional mobile unit, operating in Eastern Nebraska, so they have plenty of experience.

"Blood donors soon realize just how simple it is to donate their blood," says Miss McDonough.

"Men almost always joke about the possible high alcoholic content of their blood."

"Take a gallon, I've got a lot," is the comment Miss Walla hears from male stalwarts, and knowing the pressing need for blood on the battlefield, she certainly wishes she could.

Wherever they operate, the nurses will be under direction of a local physician, on their feet all day doing a tough job because they realize its importance.

Miss DeWulf summed it up neatly when she pointed out that, "Giving your life for your country is the supreme sacrifice, but saving a life is certainly as important. Any qualified citizen can do just that, once every three months, actually, by donating blood for our armed forces."

tion. Attacking that trend toward the left, the threat of socialism, will change far more votes than will legal and moral honesty and integrity in government, because it has a personal application, the promise to retain the old and tried and proven American profit system.

Then, too, government spending, the thing that calls for more taxes, which all must pay, can be a big vote getter, especially with the government running into the red with each passing month and government debts increasing at an alarming rate. Such things are of greater moment to the general run of American voters than is who gets a fur coat and other presents, or who goes to prison for embezzlement of government funds.

But orating about the need for legal and moral honesty and integrity in government can be a powerful appeal for turning the rascals out, especially for those who believe in such honesty and integrity. With such an inspiring subject, the big guns of the party should be able to create havoc in the ranks of the opposition, and keep the president on the defensive until the last gun is fired and the last vote is cast. But the Republican leaders must remember that the President is a good explainer.

The land-owning farmers do not want America to be turned into a socialistic state. They do not want to divide acres with the landless who prefer to sit in the shade during the hot summer hours, while

THE FICTION CORNER

NEW LIFE

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

THERE WASN'T any particular reason why young Phil Davis and his wife should dislike Templer. Yet this was the case. For one thing neither of them were used to the habits and customs of small town people. They were city bred, and hence misunderstood the kindly interest of their neighbors. Prying curiosity, they termed it.

"That Mrs. Bixby was over again this morning," Dot Davis said to her husband one night two months after they had become nicely settled. "She wanted to know where I had my washing done. Said she'd been curious ever since she discovered I didn't do it myself."

"Prying old buzzard," Phil muttered. "It's a blasted shame we have to put up with it. Tom Wheeler, who runs the local newspaper, was telling me today that Templer was no different from any small town. They're all the same, he said. God pity the people who have to live in them," he added bitterly.

"I'm sick of it," Dot wailed. "Sick of seeing and meeting no one but old hypocrites."

"But we're not here to stay," Phil cried with sudden enthusiasm. "You remember I told you how I'd been working on the head office? Trying to persuade them to transfer me to Suffolk? Well, I think it's going through. We'll not have to put up with this drab, dull existence much longer, honey."

"I hope not," Dot cried fervently. "I can't stand it a great deal longer."

"I'm sick of it," Dot wailed. "Sick of seeing and meeting no one but old hypocrites."

Two weeks later the long-hoped-for day arrived. Phil received notice of his transfer to the Suffolk office. Joyously the two young people packed up their belongings and said goodbye to Templer. They took an apartment in the suburb of Ashfield and set about the task of getting acquainted.

This wasn't particularly difficult. Mrs. Hooper, who was rather a plain looking person and who occupied an apartment on the same floor with the Davises, seemed eager to help the young folks get settled. She came in every day and made suggestions which Dot found helpful.

Phil came home one evening to announce that he had joined a club, and would be out one night a week.

"It's just as well," said Dot agreeably. "Mrs. Hooper has asked me to join the Neighborhood Bridge Union, so I'll be out, too."

THEY learned things from Mrs. Hooper and other inhabitants of the apartment about other people in other apartment houses close by. For example, the Ricks were considered "fast." The Browns weren't all they appeared to be.

Bit by bit Phil and Dot adapted themselves to their new life. They learned with whom to associate, and whom to ignore. Gradually they settled into the usual routine.

A month after they had left Templer and its drab dullness behind, Phil arrived home one evening with a curious expression on his face. Dorothy noticed the change.

"Oh, nothing much," he replied to her question. "Bob Talbert was saying today that Ashfield was like a hundred other suburban towns. Same monotonous routine and dullness. The only break they get is when someone new arrives."

"That's odd," Dot said slowly. "Mrs. Hooper was in today. She wanted to know where I had my washing done. She'd noticed, she said, that I didn't do it myself."

Phil and Dot stared at each other for a moment in alarmed silence. Then suddenly, of one accord, they burst into laughter.

"Dot," he said, "I wonder if it's the place we live in or if it's just us. We wanted to be near a large city, and now that we're here we've found conditions pretty much the same as elsewhere."

Dot nodded soberly. "I guess, Phil, dear, it isn't the place that makes one's life drab and dull, it's the people who live in those places, it's the way you treat them and they treat you. I guess human nature is pretty much the same everywhere. It's up to the individual, whether or not he or she is happy." Phil held his wife close.

Picture of a man making a smart decision

HERE is a man who's been doing a lot of thinking.

Someday, he's told himself, I'm going to turn in my old car and get a new one.

And he said, still talking to himself, when I do that I'm going to size up the field—give 'em all a real going over.

You see him here at the wheel of a Buick. He hasn't bought it—yet. It's a demonstrator, and he's trying it out.

But the more he tries it, the more he knows he's been wasting a lot of time.

From the moment he looked inside, he said: Here's the room—and the comfort—and the style I've been looking for.

Then he nudged its Fireball Engine into action. It's a high-compression valve-in-head, as you probably know.

He eased out into traffic. Stopped and started for a couple of traffic lights, and said something to the effect that this Dynaflo Drive* is a honey. Why don't they all build 'em this way?

He saw a bump ahead. Place where the pavement had been torn up. Other cars were braking down to a creep to cross it. He held back—rolled right across at regular speed with barely a bobble.

It's hard to believe, he said, but what they say about Buick's ride is right.

Ten minutes later he was out on an open stretch of road. Tried an experimental push on the gas treadle. Boy—what a take-off! You couldn't want more power than that.

Ten minutes more—and he knew something else. You don't really steer a Buick. It just about steers itself. Stays right on the beam on the straightaway. Even straightens itself out after a curve.

To make a long story short—he's found out that nothing else he's tried out can hold a candle—not even a little Christmas candle—to this bonnie beauty.

Back at the Buick showroom, he's going to get one more surprise. The price of a Buick is a lot less than he'd guessed it would be.

Moral: Smart Buy's Buick—right now.

The annual Christmas program of the Sunday school was held Sunday, December 16, at the church. The welcome speech was given by five-year old Sandra Dorey and was followed by songs, recitations and instrumental music. After which Santa Claus arrived to distribute presents and treats for the children. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dorey, daughter, Shirley and a friend from Lansing were callers on Sunday at the Stanley Alda home. Francis Dorey and Glen Thompson left the forepart of the week for Lansing with a load of Christmas trees. The W.S.C.S. held their Christmas party at the home of Mrs. Louis Alverson Wednesday, December 12th. A delicious pot-luck lunch was served at noon. A short business meeting was held, followed by a program in which nearly everyone took part. Then came "Jolly Old Saint Nick" with his pack and distributed gifts to all. The next meeting will be held January 9th at the home of Mrs. Stanley Alda.

Beginning Sunday, December 30 the church service will start at 9:45 a.m. Followed by the Sunday School service. Our Youth Fellowship group will meet Tuesday evenings at 7:00 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cross assisted by the Pastor will be sponsors in this project. The young folks of the community are invited to attend.

TAWAS CITY

CHAPTER 1

Tracy Hayden had been born to the West, and she liked to think of it as unchanging. The cowboy yells, the acrid odor of branding-iron on hide, the bawl of a burned calf, the clouds of alkali dust—the picture as it had always been, built up the illusion. The motorized chuck wagon, along with the cook's portable radio bringing in swing music, only partially destroyed it.

Early morning still, the Arizona sky was brassy and a shimmering heat haze already danced across the rock hills when Tracy reined in by the round-up fire. A Mexican vaquero lifted a red-glowing iron from the fire. He flashed a welcoming smile from a leathery face.

"Buenos dias, Senorita," he said. "And the others of the crew echoed him. The range boss, old Pete Saba, drawled, 'Howdy, Miss Tracy. You are riding early,' and took the pony as she stepped down.

A man had been squatting cowboy fashion in the scant shade of the chuck wagon. With Tracy's arrival he rose, and now came forward with the slow, dragging step of a lazy man. He was a scant inch taller than Tracy, had reached thirty perhaps, and though his body was filled out he retained a suggestion of a hungry look, memory of leaner days. Pete Donohue was not unattractive, yet to Tracy he rang hollow as a counterfeit coin. His mocking eyes, his cynical smile, annoyed her, but saying, "Good morning, Pete," she was friendly enough.

Pete Donohue Arouses Jealousy in Hanlon

"What makes?" asked Pete. "Nothing. I'm just out for the ride."

"Ah, a fellow escapist!" Pete gave her a sidelong look. "You and I should travel together, Tracy."

"Is that a proposal?" asked Tracy, laughing a little. "Or do you just want to ride with me?"

"Let's call it a proposal, darling. If I have a chance to marry a beautiful—and rich—girl, why remain a bachelor?"

Tracy still smiled without feeling amused. She gave Pete Donohue an up-and-down sort of look, saying: "Pete, you're as phony as the Western stories you write. And you annoy me as much as your literary accomplishments."

Unabashed, Pete grinned and retorted, "Ah, the lady is not only beautiful and rich—she is also smart." Then, soberly: "Tracy, you're genuine. A blind man could see that you're no Garrison."

A long yellow cloud of dust rose across the flatlands, kicked up by a station wagon that bore swiftly down on the round-up. The car came from the direction of the Hacienda, the ranch house, and Tracy guessed that it would be the ranch manager, Clint Hanlon. Knowing Clint wouldn't like her there, in the midst of the branding, Tracy turned and walked toward her horse. Pete came after her, caught hold of her arm.

"Hold on, Tracy, did I say something that got under your skin?"

"Not at all, Pete. It's just time for me to ride on."

"Oh, I get it," Pete looked from her to the station wagon which was coming to a stop at the camp. "You don't want to be here for Hanlon to make eyes at!"

Tracy gave him a startled look. "Does he do that, make eyes at me?" she demanded. And quickly added: "I don't believe it!"

"No? Well, just watch this make a look on his face."

Pete put his arm about her shoulders in an intimate way; there was strength in his arm, and Tracy couldn't shrug it off. He walked a few steps with her like that before she slipped away and reached her horse. She didn't look at Clint Hanlon, but swung to the saddle. Clint, however, had strode forward. He put one hand on the bridle reins, holding her there.

Tracy said, "Yes, Clint?" Seeing him new in another way. Attractive but not handsome, a man she liked but could no more than like. And, as Pete had foreseen there was a look on his face. Annoyance, close to kindling anger. An affronted thought flashed through her mind: "He has been looking at me—I never knew."

"Mr. Donohue, I hoped I would not have to remind you that this is no dude ranch," he said. "My men are not paid to entertain the Garçons' guests."

"Glad the telling doesn't embarrass you, Clint old man," Pete replied. His tone made the words an insult. "I might embarrass you by telling you that I've permission to ride where I like in search of material. The Old Garrison hospitality, you know. But I was riding back with—" His glance drifted to Tracy. "With Tracy, anyway."

He turned away in search of his horse without waiting to gloat over the black scowl spreading over the face of Clint Hanlon. Tracy saw that sign of anger, guessed that jealousy was behind it—jealousy of her—and a spark of fear struck off at her heart. Then Clint looked up at her, his face but not his eyes softening.

He said, "This man is no good for you, Tracy."

And Clint Hanlon? He might have been annoyed because Pete put his arm about her; he might have been jealous. But Clint wasn't in love with her, either. Clint might find her desirable, but he knew, too, that she held a stake in the Garrison Ranch.

Yet Tracy was upset. She knew the cause. She was in love. Not with Pete or Clint—but with a man she knew only by hear say. A Garrison, yes. She knew that, and realized it was ridiculous. But what she did not know was that when she met that man he would be standing behind a door—with a gun in his hand and only a desire for vengeance in his heart.

Then Clint looked up at her, his face, but not his eyes, softening. He said, "This man is no good for you, Tracy."

Tracy paused only to chat in Spanish with the buxom wife of a vaquero, and to admire a new, dusky-skinned baby, then rode on through the ranch's Mexican village of adobe houses. The Hacienda was but a half mile beyond.

Ruth Reminds Tracy She's No Garrison

From a distance, Tracy always thought, the big ranchhouse resembled an ancient Spanish mission.

Riding closer, Tracy could see the modern wing so skillfully adjoined to the old. Outwardly this new wing, built by the latter-day Garrisons, was much like the old. Within, it was a world apart. The original part of the Hacienda was the old West, with a Mexican influence; the new was out of a smart Hollywood film, gleaming and luxurious, incredibly comfortable. A step away from the end of the new wing was the swimming pool, the tennis courts, the stables where the Garrisons' blooded horses were kept, and the garage which housed their cars and Juan Garrison's sport plane which Tracy had learned to pilot.

A step from the old wing were the ranch buildings; the barns, the bunkhouse, the corrals. Tracy rode there to leave her mount. She always rode a cow pony.

She entered the Hacienda through the patio gate. A flowering vine clothed the walls of the patio, and the white blossoms had golden hearts that poured sweetness into the air. A door was set deep into the thick, fortress-like wall, and Tracy stepped into the cool dimness.

Tracy had paused for a drink from an ancient water cooler, made of porous stone, when her eyes lifted abruptly to the end of the hall, where a girl stood midway on the staircase, looking down with quiet hostility. She was merged with the pleasant gloom of the house, yet nothing could hide the vivid beauty of her. With her striking beauty, the girl was marvelously poised, and behind her poise was arrogance. For she was a Garrison.

Oddly uneasy at finding herself being watched, Tracy said, "Hello, Ruth. You gave me a start."

Ruth Garrison murmured "Really?" She descended the stairs, moving with a smooth grace, and came toward Tracy in an unsmiling way. She was as dark as Tracy was blonde; the fineness of her features, her flawless white skin, full red lips and wide dark eyes, told of the senorita Old Jeff Garrison had married.

"I've been up with the Senora—my grandmother," she said. "She's been asking about you. I think, Tracy, you could humor her more when she depends so much on your company."

"I didn't think I'd been neglecting her, Ruth."

"You've been riding?"

"Yes. But I meant to be back before the Senora Maria woke."

Ruth's eyes flickered; her enmity toward Tracy seemed to grow. She said, a barb in her voice, "Pete rode out long before the rest of us were up. I suppose you rode together?"

"I saw Pete Donohue out near Dry Wells," Tracy replied, "but we did not ride together." She did not want to quarrel with Ruth Garrison, but a rising fury made her say, "I don't forget that he is your guest."

"After all," the dark girl said, "it's so easy for Pete, and other guests, to forget that you are not—"

"Not a Garrison?"

"Well, yes."

A moment's silence came between them. Tracy felt hurt, and showed it; she bit hard on her lip as though wanting physical pain to force down inner hurt. Ruth let a pleased look come and go in her eyes.

"There's another thing," Ruth went on. "Grandmother Garrison is still prattling about Phil Garrison. She talks some nonsense of having him come here."

"I can't change Senora Maria's mind," Tracy said. "You know that."

"She's an old woman. She can be influenced, and she likes you—"

Ruth paused, and her pause seemed to say, "I wonder why?" Then: "Likes you better than any of us."

Tracy and the Senora Discuss Phil Garrison

"Why should I influence her?" Tracy demanded. "If she wants Phil Garrison here, I have no right to interfere."

"Are you blind, Tracy?" Ruth's voice was brittle now, annoyed. "Suppose she brings this Phil Garrison here—and takes a fancy to him. Suppose he should crowd us—" you included, Tracy—out of her affections. Can you imagine what would happen then? Senora Maria still holds the reins of the Garrison Ranch in her hands—and a whip, too!"

She turned to the door, then swung back to face Tracy again. "You might not care if we Garrisons were forced out into the cold—but you would care if you went with us!"

The mistress of the Hacienda sat in the sun. Her face was turned to the window that looked over land that was Garrison land as far as the eye could see. Tracy could not see her eyes, but she knew that a faraway look was in their still, youthful, dark depths. She stood for a moment in the doorway, silently watching this woman she loved. Maria Garrison wore black silk; a black lace Spanish mantilla, very old and rich and lovely, covered her white hair. Time had not conquered Senora Maria, but it did make her grow smaller. The pale cheek turned to Tracy seemed tiny.

Tracy crossed the room, put her arms about the small body. "It's I, Senora," she said, speaking in the same tongue. "I'm ashamed for having neglected you. I went for a ride, stayed longer than I meant to."

"Ah, you went for a ride," said the Senora. "And you wore those ugly man's clothes. You know I hate mannish women. Go and change, Tracy, then come back to me."

The Senora's rich voice followed her to the door. "When you return, Tracy, we shall talk of Phil Garrison, you and I—no?"

A sensation went through Tracy, electric in its intensity. The name of that unknown man thrilled her as the name of no other man could.

"Yes," Tracy said softly, "we shall talk of Phil Garrison—you and I, Senora Maria."

Tracy returned to the Senora's room in a cool green dress and said, "Now we can talk of Phil Garrison."

"Yes, we must decide today what we shall do about him," Senora Maria said. "I have talked to Ramon, and to Juan and to Ruth, and they are annoyed. They do not want me to bring Philip here, even though he is their own flesh and blood."

"Perhaps it is merely because they do not know him."

"No, it is not that. They fear that he might be a man."

Tracy smiled, saying, "We hope he is, darling. That is what the Garrison Ranch needs—a man."

Then, sobering: "But if Phil Garrison came here, and was all we hope, it would make trouble."

The Senora's eyes lighted with eagerness. "If trouble would change matters here, I should welcome it. My husband was a man born to trouble, but he always made it serve him. I pray each night and morning that Phil Garrison is the sort of man my husband, his grandfather, was. Tracy, read to me what the detective said in his letter."

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Jealousy Not Inherited

By Lawrence Gould

Can Jealousy be 'inherited'?

Answer: Not in any physical sense—this is one more case in which resemblance between parent and child is the result, not of inheritance but of training and imitation. Except where it is based on fact—and is normal and inevitable—jealousy is a symptom of insecurity, especially about one's power to win and keep love. And insecure parents cannot easily give a sense of security to their children. If your parents were too much absorbed with their own problems to make you feel sure they loved you—or each other—it may be hard for you to feel secure in your marriage or to "trust" your partner.

Should we speak of 'feminine characteristics'?

Answer: No, maintains Viola Klein, writing on "The Stereotype of Femininity" in the Journal of Social Issues. Apart from obvious biological differences, the psychological characteristics of men and women overlap and vary so much that to speak of certain traits as masculine or feminine serves no scientific purpose. Most psychiatrists might hesitate to go so far, but it is unquestionably true that many so-called feminine characteristics like dependence, inability to make decisions, extravagance and timidity are really childish, but are cherished in the other sex by men who fear the idea of mature women.

Are we "propagating the unfit"?

Answer: Not as much as some people believe, writes L. S. Penrose of the University of London, England, in The Lancet. To begin with, study of statistics indicates that downright idiots are generally sterile. And while it is true that maximum fertility is found in people, especially women, whose intelligence ranges from well below average to average, the intelligence of the children of such people varies much more than that of their parents and may even be "superior." The fact would seem to be that the population is being replenished, not by the "unfit," but by people of "mediam intelligence"—as has probably always been so.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Chronic Disease and Mental Makeup

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN WE SEE a man or woman disfigured with a chronic skin disease, most of us feel that if the disease could be cured or made less unsightly, that would be the end of the story. However, our skin specialists, psychologists and psychiatrists tell us that the chronic skin disease may be a starting cause of other conditions present, and that these conditions are just as important to the patient's health and happiness as the skin ailment.

In The British Lancet, Dr. M. Hewitt states that to date little attention has been paid to occupational resettlement of cases of prolonged incapacity through skin disease. Based on his experience in employment exchanges in the northwest of England, he comments on the extent of the problem and on the reser-tlement results in a group of these patients. He reviews the history of 50 unemployed persons who had failed to adopt themselves to their skin disability.

These 50 patients (43 men and 7 women) were medically examined and their occupational, social and medical history taken in detail.

It was evident that unemployment among them was due to more than one factor. These factors were investigated carefully.

The findings show that the skin disease itself was much less important than most of the other factors interfering with their employment. The important causes of unemployment were social and domestic problems and unsatisfactory work records.

It was seen also that imperfect mental adaptation to chronic disability plays a great part in long-continued sick absence from work and unemployment amongst disabled persons.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

If the thyroid gland is underactive, the individual is slow in his physical and mental actions.

The alcoholic patient must be helped to adjust his life without alcohol.

The alcoholic is really a sick man and must have the care of a doctor rather than that of a policeman.

Sweat glands help regulate the temperature of the body.

Most cases of simple colitis do not result in serious illness.

In children, being slightly overweight wards off tuberculosis.

The cure of the sick sometimes depends more on kindness than on efficiency.

CHRISTMAS DREAMS

Decorative Effects May Be Obtained By Christmas Card

The deluge of Christmas cards that descend upon the family during the holiday period can be used in many decorative and attractive ways.

One of the most interesting ways they may be used is the form of a mantel or door decoration. They can be attractively grouped together with ribbon and evergreen and add a festive touch to any room.

An eye-catching display can also be arranged by taping the cards to the panels of an inside door and accenting with sprigs of evergreen and gay, colored Christmas-tree balls.

The big, wide Christmas cards that feature reproductions of famous paintings will show well if placed in bleached-oak frames and hung singly or in pairs in a narrow wall space. Six of them, in a panel arrangement, will give a center of interest to one wall. If you wish to really make a display, then thumb-tack the cards to cardboard cut in a tree shape and covered with gold metallic paper. Edge them with evergreen.

The famous carol, "The First Noel" means the first Christmas and this holy anthem goes so far back into history that there is no record as to who wrote or when it was first sung.

An old belief is that the shepherds sang the verses to the music of the angels heralding the birth of Christ, but no one knows for sure.

The beautiful carol, however, has come to be one of the many important things that make Christmas the holy, celebrated season that it is.

Weeks before Christmas, from radios, from concert halls and from the throats of carol singers and just plain singers, the strains of the First Noel remind us all that the celebration of the birth of Christ is once more upon us.

Christmas Eve in Syria Time for Earnest Prayer

There is little merriment in Syria on Christmas Eve. It is more a time of prayer. In both Syria and nearby Lebanon, the Christmas season begins on December 4th and is not concluded until January 6th.

In these two ancient countries there is no Santa Claus. The Syrian believes his gifts come from the camel, for legend tells that the youngest camel to accompany the Magi was tired and weary upon reaching the stable at Bethlehem and the new-born Saviour blessed it and gave it immortal life. In the Lebanon district the "magic mule" is the gift bearer. Children sprinkle freshly mown grass from the threshold to their beds to entice the mule to visit them during the night.

All during the Christmas season, pilgrimages are frequently made from Syria to Bethlehem. Then, on New Years Day, comes the celebrating. Presents are exchanged and children go from one house to another, receiving presents and gifts of money, like children everywhere.

Great Is He Honored This Christmas Day!

It is indeed significant, this birthday that is celebrated on the twenty-fifth of December!

It honors the birth of One who never delved into politics. Who belonged to no party, political or otherwise. He led no revolutions, conquered no vast domains with mighty armies or eloquent words. He advocated little more than a life for salvation—and for that He was crucified on Calvary.

It's Wonderful the Way Chewing-Gum Laxative

Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE —NOT GOOD FOOD

Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon. . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Army Is Through With Goo; Packs Weapons in Sacks

KANSAS CITY — Soldiers who have worked all night trying to scrub and scrape thick, gooey grease off a new rifle will greet with enthusiasm the Army's new method of mothballing weapons.

For years the Army has packed and stored weapons in a heavy, dark brown grease preservative. Soldiers to whom the arms later were issued found the job of readying them for inspection and action a laborious, patience-trying task.

To make them ready meant stripping the rifle, pistol, or machinegun down to the last screw, taking it completely apart and cleaning every crevice, and then putting them back together again. Even then, when re-assembled, grease that had escaped attention often "sweated out" of the guns and soiled uniforms.

But now — at long last — Army Ordnance has developed a new storage pack that soon will replace the sticky preservative grease.

With this new pack, a weapon may be stored for 20 years and when taken out is ready for instant use. It isn't even necessary to lubricate the weapon.

This new preservative pack actually is a thick envelope. It consists of an outer layer of cotton fabric, a layer of plastic-coated aluminum foil, and an inner sheet of kraft paper coated with a special chemical.

The chemical is the secret of the packaging system. It is a volatile compound known as VCI—volatile corrosion inhibitor. When the weapon is inserted in the envelope, the package is closed by heat-sealing it. Then VCI performs the job that the grease did.

Out-Of-Change Soldier Also Out of His Wallet

MILWAUKEE — A soldier learned a hard lesson here recently. Pfc. Stanley Knutson, 21, of Radisson, Wisc., stationed at Fort Sheridan, was waiting at the Milwaukee station when he decided to call home. In the telephone booth, he found he was out of change.

He handed his wallet to a passing stranger, saying, "I'm on the phone. Would you get me some change, please?"

The stranger smiled graciously and took the extended wallet. That was the last Knutson saw of the stranger and of his wallet, which contained $84.

Infants Are Beneficiaries Of Advances in Medicine

CHICAGO — Newborn babies and infants under one year of age have been among those to benefit most from advances in medical science and the efforts of public health agencies during the first half of the century, according to Matthew Taback, A.M., director of the bureau of biostatistics, Baltimore City Health Department.

Mr. Taback says that approximately 20 babies out of every 100 delivered alive in Baltimore in 1900 failed to reach their first birthday. A review of present day records indicates that the mortality rate has decreased at an "unbelievable rate" and now stands at about three infant deaths per 100 live births, a decline of 85 per cent since 1900, he added.

Commenting on the death rate of 50 years ago, he said: "The loss of human life and wasted pregnancy occasioned by the existence of such a high infant mortality rate are difficult to comprehend. Principal causes of infant deaths in 1900 were diarrhea, pneumonia, acute communicable diseases, prematurity and congenital malformations."

The principal causes of infant deaths today, he said, are prematurity, congenital malformations and birth injury.

Dishwasher Is Reprimanded in Returning Lost Check

WAUKEGAN, Ill. — A dishwasher in a local grill found a certified check for $3,500, but says all the gratitude he received for returning it to the owner was a good bawling out.

John Vohwinkel said he found the check in an envelope while sweeping out the grill. He telephoned the man who had lost it.

"When he came over he gave me a good bawling out for opening the envelope."

The dishwasher said he almost threw the envelope away, and would have if he hadn't noticed the check it contained.

Fireman's Life not Quite So Glamorous After All

SAN DIEGO — So, you think a fireman lives a glamorous life? During one 24-hour period, the local fire department responded to six calls.

They couldn't find a man supposedly overcome by ammonia; they checked a report of gas leaking from a car; doused a rubbish fire in a storm drain; failed to find a car reported on fire; and rushed out to a burning refuse dump, reported to be a blazing brush fire.

One call turned out to be a fire—a small grass fire that caused no damage.

The Camel Christmas carton is full of the Christmas spirit—bright and colorful and all ready to give. There's a space on the top reserved for your personal greeting. No wrapping, no fussing with paper or cards or ribbons. The second solution involves your pipe-smoking friends and the fellows who like to roll their own cigarettes. The pound tin of Prince Albert comes in a gay Christmas box, all ready to give—just put your message on the built-in Christmas card. Don't delay. Do it today.
