J. A. Brugger Market Changes Ownership

Established 25 Years Ago; Purchased by J. N. Brugger, the Son

This week Mr. and Mrs. John A. Brugger announced an important change of ownership in the business enterprises of this city. Their son, John N. Brugger has purchased the Brugger Market, established by them 25 years ago.

Mr. Brugger said "The only real change in the business is a change in an initial—John A. to John N." With the exception of time off for military service in World War II, the junior Brugger has been associated in the business since his high school days. On his return from service he was waiting on customers before he could get out of his uniform, and so he needs no introduction to the retail food market trade in this section of Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Brugger established their grocery and meat market 25 years ago in a building purchased from C. H. Prescott & Sons. Through their friendly service the little neighborhood store outgrew its original quarters and the present building was constructed, and it has become one of the important food markets in the Isosco county area.

'My Favorite Town on Ice,' Says Reck in January Ford Times

Perchville Again Given Wide Recognition

Story of Fishing Town Illustrated With Ektachrome Pictures

"Perchville," the Tawas' Fishing Village on Ice, again received national recognition in a large circulation magazine when a seven page article entitled "My Favorite Town-on-Ice, Perchville, Mich." by Franklin M. Reck appeared in this month's issue (January) of FORD TIMES, the national house publication of the Ford Motor Company. Seven beautiful 4 x 5 color photos by John Calkins, freelance photographer from South Lyons, were used to illustrate the article. In this area the magazines are distributed by the local Ford dealers, Orville Leslie & Sons.

The story was completed last January when Mr. Reck, the editor of Lincoln-Mercury Times, another Ford Motor Company publication and former editor of the famed "American Boy" of a few years ago, spent several days getting their information first hand by personally interviewing local fishermen and trying their skill at catching the famed Tawas Bay Perch through the ice. Accompanying Mr. Reck and photographer Calkins were Burgess Scott, roving editor of Ford Times and Bill Moss, Ford Times production staff.

HOLD PERCHVILLE MEETING TONIGHT

Harold Gould announced that preparations were underway for the setting-up of Perchville during the next few days. A Perchville meeting will be held Friday evening (tonight) at 8:00 to discuss several new ideas for the village. A special invitation by the Perchville committee and Mr. Gould extended to all of the businessmen who will have shanties and anyone else that is interested in the project to be on hand to voice any ideas they may have.

Mr. Reck's article, in his easy-to-read style began, "In the northern latitudes, the surest sign of winter is the appearance of the fish shanty. As inevitably as the robin pants in spring, the little square house with the stovepipe announces the arrival of the deep freeze. Clusters of shanties materialize out of nowhere whenever the ice on lakes and bays gets four inches thick. They disappear just as mysteriously when the ice becomes spongy.

"Mostly, the groupings are informal and private but here and there the clusters have blossomed out into civic enterprises with city halls, 'mayors,' ballyhoo and assorted services.

"The latest of these is Perchville, a creation of the business men of East Tawas and Tawas City, Michigan. Perchville is a colorful community. Its main street, lined with sixty houses, is an oasis of activity in the immense whiteness of Tawas Bay. It has a centrally located city hall built of varnished logs where Mayor Hank Greenwood—a charter boat skipper in summer—hands out keys and bait to bundled-up tourists (Continued No. 3, Back Page)

KEPT SNOW PLOWS ON STREETS 24 HOURS A DAY

Under the direction of Martin Kasischke, superintendent of public works, snowplows were worked 24 hours a day clearing the streets of Tawas City during the heavy snow storms of the past week.

In many towns and cities of Michigan even main streets, plugged with snow, became impassable during the week end before Christmas. Continuous effort by the street department here kept the streets in good condition.

SOME OUTSTANDING HOME DECORATIONS NOTED

In a quick trip around through the city Christmas Eve, some of the outstanding Christmas decorations were: James F. Mark, John St. James, Cecil Cabbie, Clarence Everett, William Leslie, E. D. Jacques, Neon Electric.

Named National Gypsum President

Lewis R. Sanderson Receives Advancement

Lewis R. Sanderson, at one time superintendent of the United States Gypsum Company plant at Albaster, was elected president of the National Gypsum Company at a meeting of the board of directors of that company held at Buffalo. Sanderson succeeds Melvin Baker who was elevated to chairman of the board of directors.

President Sanderson will assume responsibility for the management, including operations, sales accounting, engineering and research. His many friends here congratulate him on his advancement.

With two plants in 1928, one at National City, the other at Buffalo, the company has had an unprecedented growth during the past 23 years, and now has 25 plants producing 150 different products. The annual sales for this year was estimated at $97,000,000.

The National Gypsum Company, in its growth, has acquired the position of second largest producer of building material in the United States.

With the new appointments, a program of greater expansion is planned. Baker, who helped to found the company stated, "this broadening of management will relieve me of the day-to-day management of problems and allow time to concentrate on growth potentials for the company. During the past decade we have increased the company's sales three-fold. Now that more management personnel has been integrated, I intend to devote my energies to further growth of the company in the next ten years."

Sanderson came here as a young man with a minor position at the United States Gypsum plant at Albaster. During the years here he made rapid advancement, finally becoming superintendent. Some time after being transferred from Albaster, he left the United States Gypsum Company to go with the National Gypsum Company.

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Navy Declines

THE NAVY has taken an unusual stand regarding the air warfare which is getting more and more intense over Korea. It has turned down a request from Gen. Otto Weyland, Air Force commander in the Far East, that Navy jets help out the Air Force in combating Russian MIGs.

With increasing Communist strength in the air, and with the Air Force sometimes badly outnumbered in battling Russian MIGs, General Weyland requested help from the Navy's carrier-based jet fighters.

However, despite the fact that there is supposed to be armed services unification, the Navy refused. Official reason was that Navy carriers were outside the fighting range.

Air force pilots who sometimes go into battle against superior Communist odds believe the Navy is trying to hide the fact that its jets are inferior to the MIGs. Since the Navy specializes in fighters, and not long ago boasted the best jet fighter plane in the world, this is a bitter pill to swallow.

Navy pilots today are among the best in the world, but apparently planes haven't kept up with either the Air Force or the enemy. As a result only two MIGs have been shot down by the Navy during the Korean War. One was bagged by a Navy Panther jet some time ago, the other by a Navy pilot who, however, flew an Air Force Sabre jet.

Debate Over McGrath

President Truman's advisers are split down the seam on a bold move to oust Attorney General Howard McGrath and name crusading Sen. Estes Kefauver to clean up the Justice department.

This proposal was pushed back-stage by Averell Harriman, who has been on speaking trips out of Washington and knows how deeply the corruption issue is hurting; also by usually cautious White House counsel Charlie Murphy, and younger staff members.

Their argument with the President is: "The investigations are not going to stop with Internal Revenue and RFC, but will go into alien property custodian, surplus property, and possibly the federal judiciary right up to the Supreme Court. The American people won't be satisfied unless the administration cleans house boldly and dramatically. A sure-fire way to regain public confidence is to name Senator Kefauver as attorney general, giving him complete authority to prosecute, no matter who is hurt."

Mr. Truman seems to like the idea and has been saying privately: "I've always been loyal to my friends. But they haven't been fair to me."

On the other side, a powerful White House force, Matt Connelly, who sits next to the President and makes all his appointments, is more than cool. Connelly vigorously defends his fellow Irishman in the Justice department and has been digging up political friends of Mr. Truman to talk up McGrath and talk down his ouster.

Merry-Go-Round Poll

People not on the political inside seldom realize how much backstage wire pulling goes into the nomination of a presidential candidate. To a considerable extent this lessens the chance of the American people to elect a President. For, while they can elect, not many can nominate.

This frequently leaves the selection of the presidential nominee a matter of barter and backstage lobbying by the party bosses.

Today, Taft scouts have been combing every state in the union, pledging delegates six months in advance. Some of these may represent the people of their state, some may not. Some may realize that world conditions, the threat of war, the hopes for peace, can change the world in six months, and with them can change the presidential needs of the nation.

Therefore, to sound out the true political sentiment of the American people through the 600 newspapers publishing the Washington Merry-Go-Round, this column is conducting a post-card poll on the Republican candidates. (The Democratic poll will come later.) To vote, address a post card to the GOP candidate of your choice, Box 1952, Washington 13, D.C., and tell him: "I'm for you in 1952."

Lucille May Grace, the lady who nobody thought had a chance to become Governor of Louisiana, is really stirring up the state. . . . Attorney General Howard McGrath, while unhappy over the King Income-Tax Committee, has been cooperating quietly with the income-tax probe of Senator Williams of Delaware. McGrath is even trying to get a job for a Williams man, J. George Stewart.

UNSINKABLE CARRIER . . . The H.M.S. Eagle, Britain's new 36,800-ton super carrier is shown in Bangor Bay near Belfast, Ireland, during recent tests. The admiralty revealed recently that the new carrier has a secret new method to control damage caused by enemy guns or bombs and is "virtually unsinkable." The new ship's keel was laid in 1942, but her commission was delayed while British engineers studied wartime damage reports and the lessons learned at Bikini atomic tests. This new knowledge was put into the building of the Eagle. The Eagle's new payload will be 100 jet fighters and atomic bombers.

NEW YORK STREET SCENE . . . An overturned garbage truck and a battered taxicab are shown after a crash at 77th street and Second avenue. One of the vehicles hit a fire box, automatically sounding an alarm. The driver of the truck, Vincent de Marco, 24, died, pinned in the cab of his overturned truck, and four other persons were injured. Fire and emergency squads are shown working to extricate the body of de Marco. De Marco's helper, Louis Cententino, also was pinned when the truck overturned and was removed by jacking up the truck. The cabdriver and his passenger were not seriously hurt.

ABANDONED . . . Patricia Ann Lawrence, abandoned about six weeks ago in St. Lawrence, Wis., church, needed only her parents to make her first Christmas, full and joyous. Police believe the child is from out of town. An attorney for the case of the abandoned child says, "All I can say is that I hope if the mother of the child reads these lines, she will find it in her heart to claim the child." It looks as if Santa didn't forget the child.

EXHIBIT A . . . Exotic stripper, Lill St. Cyr, is shown in court in Beverly Hills, Calif., where she was having a hearing on charges of giving a lewd and indecent performance at Ciro's. She was arrested in November while giving a torrid bubble bath dance. She offered to give the court a personal demonstration and the offer was quickly accepted, so courtroom spectators looked forward to seeing the bubbles fly. With her is her attorney, Jerry Geisler, favorite Hollywood lawyer.

OUT OF SHADE . . . Shirley Delens, West Point, N.Y., comes from behind her big umbrella to enjoy some of the good sunshine at Daytona Beach, Fla. She is wearing one of the new bathing suit creations for 1952.

INJURED GRID STAR . . . Johnny Yuba, star halfback of Elders Ridge, Pa., high school, who suffered a broken neck in a game, was sent to New York for treatment through contributions from his townspeople and the U.M.W.

SCANNING THE WEEK'S NEWS of Main Street and the World

Capehart Amendment Allows Price Increases on Thousands of Items

HERE WE GO—With a sigh of "here we go again", home town housewives across the nation learned the Capehart amendment to the controls law is effective immediately. The amendment opens the way for possible price increases on thousands of consumer items, including clothing, meat, foods, milk, butter, coal, gasoline, tobacco, beer, drugs and cosmetics.

Under this amendment manufacturers and processors are allowed to use their pre-Korea prices and add or subtract cost increases or decreases through last July 26 in computing new ceilings. Because application of the Capehart formula is optional, the general effect of the new order could not be adequately estimated. However, it was believed the particular effect will be to raise prices whenever an application for adjustment is granted.

There is just one possible hope for the consumer. Manufacturers are not required to seek new ceilings, but are allowed to do so. If any concern seeks higher prices for any line of goods, any reductions required by the formula for other goods must be put into effect as well. The firm cannot seek higher prices alone.

Among the items affected by the new order are wool and cotton yarns and fabrics, soft drinks, liquor and wine, lumber and millwork, crude oil, canned and frozen fruits and vegetables, and many other processed foods, also many important chemicals, plastics, insecticides.

Price Director Michael V. Di Salle has warned congress that prices apparently are rising again and it would be a dangerous risk to decontrol any major item now.

FOOD PRICES—While the OPS was announcing possible future price increases, the Bureau of Labor Statistics revealed that its latest index on food prices indicated an increase of nearly 1 per cent since its previous report.

The bureau pegged the price index at 231.2. That placed it 131.2 per cent above the 1935-39 average and 14 per cent above June, 1950.

Leading the advance were fruits and vegetables, and dairy products, including milk, cheese and butter. Meats, poultry and fish declined, as did fats and oils.

TRUCE TALKS—The drawn-out, frustrating Korean peace talks continue with the two sides deadlocked over supervision of the truce and the Reds refusing to open discussions on the exchange of prisoners.

Perhaps the most significant news from the truce talks is that the negotiations have entered the sixth month. It is almost inconceivable that two parties can talk for five months without agreement if there was good faith and a desire for peace on the part of all concerned. This fact alone has made the people in the home town of America pessimistic of the outcome.

By the time this reaches print the December 27 deadline on the provisional cease-fire line will have expired. If an armistice has not been agreed on, then a new cease fire line must be drawn before a final settlement. For this reason (since it appears unlikely an agreement will be reached) increased fighting can be expected on the battlefield as both sides attempt to improve their positions.

TRUMAN—President Truman cut short his Florida vacation and returned to Washington. The President hastened to assure the public that no sudden world emergency dictated his return.

It was obvious two things were uppermost in the President's mind: (1) The deadlocked Korean truce talks, and (2) the still-developing tax scandals.

It was considered unlikely there would be any public announcement concerning decisions about the Korean situation until those decisions had been carried out. The tax scandal, however, was another matter.

The President and those surrounding him have become more and more concerned with the developments (see below) in the tax fix probe. White House intervention, even the calling in of J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, to conduct a sweeping investigation, appeared to be a likely prospect.

MRS. F.D.R.—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, one of the most controversial figures to appear on the American scene, came under attack of Archbishop J. Francis McIntyre for "assuming the role of an agnostic and fatalist".

Mrs. Roosevelt said on a radio program recently: "I don't know whether I believe in a future life . . . I came to feel that it didn't really matter very much because whatever the future held you'd have to face it when you came to it, just as whatever life holds you have to face it in exactly the same way."

"I think I am pretty much of a fatalist. You have to accept whatever comes, and the only important thing is that you meet it with courage and with the best that you have to give."

The archbishop said he considers it "a strange situation that one who is chairman of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, on the question of religion, assume the role of an agnostic and fatalist."

DEFENSE—Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett has announced that a provision for increasing the Air Force from 90 to 143 wings—126 of them combat—will be in the 1953 fiscal year budget now being prepared and which will be presented to congress early next month.

The actual size of the defense budget has not been announced, but it is believed to be within an informally set ceiling of $45,000,000,000 for the entire military establishment.

Congress appropriated a total of $59,403,264,000 for the Army, Navy, Air Force and the Office of the Secretary of Defense for the present fiscal year, exclusive of foreign military aid.

The present 90 wings of the Air Force—their size varies from about 75 planes for fighter units to 30 for heavy bombers—are not modernized since they are in many instances made up of aircraft such as the B-29 and B-50. These planes are World War II vintage and must be replaced.

TAX FIX—The House Ways and Means subcommittee graft in the Revenue Department was blown wide open by the charge of Abraham Teitelbaum that two men claiming friendship with federal officials tried to shake him down for $500,000 with promises of a "tax fix".

Teitelbaum, a wealthy Chicago lawyer, further identified as attorney for the Capone family in some of their legal troubles, swore that Bert K. Naster, Hollywood, Fla., businessman, and Frank Nathan, Pittsburgh, led him to believe that they knew of a Washington clique which was on the lookout for "soft touches".

Naster and Nathan both vigorously denied the charge, but Attorney General Howard McGrath ordered a grand jury investigation of charges.

As far as the people in the home towns are concerned, the charges Revenue Bureau, under fire since the dismissal of Assistant Attorney General Theron Caudle by President Truman. And the deeper the investigating committee digs the more dirt that is likely to be uncovered. There is no doubt now that the echo of this investigation will be heard in the election campaign of 1952.

RECOGNITION GIVEN FORMER TAWAS MAN

Patrick H. Powers, one time resident of Iosco county and pioneer of Marysville, Washington, was recently commended by the Everett Daily Herald for his long conscientious services in many capacities for his community.

Powers, who went to Marysville in 1902, was recently appointed care-taker at the city hall. In recounting his service the Herald states:

Starting in January, 1913, Powers was a one-man police force. At that time remuneration was largely from monthly contributions from individual business houses. He was on duty 24 hours a day, and actually spent sixteen hours of that time on the streets in official capacity.

"Powers was elected to the town council in 1928, serving in that job for five years. He was elected mayor, which responsible position he held for two-year terms, in 1933 and 1934, at the depth of the depression. He worked in the woods and in nearby lumber mills between duties with the municipality, taking over the night marshal job again on January 1, 1937. It was in this capacity that he investigated some noises in the McCann block on March 15, 1938, and in a running gun battle, was shot in the leg. This injury proved serious, but Powers returned to duty. In May, 1943, he took employment at the Tulaip Backup Storage Depot. He was on this job until 1915. Since that he has built several homes in the community.

"In his new responsibility, Powers will be assisted by his wife, Laura, with whom he celebrated their golden wedding anniversary a little over a year ago."

Remove Fresh Stain

The fresher the stain, the easier it is to remove. How to remove it depends upon the type of stain, the color and kind of fabric, and washability of the garment. Here are some suggestions: For egg and meat juice stains—scrape excess food off with a dull knife, then soak stain in cold water. Wash in warm suds. Hot water will set the stain if not first treated with cold water.

A SERIAL STORY OF THE MODERN-DAY WEST

DESTINY

THE STORY SO FAR:

Blender, blonde Tracy Hayden was born to the west, even though she had not been born a Garrison. She lives at the luxurious Hacienda, ranchhouse founded by old Jeff Garrison because her grandfather was loyal to the late cattle baron. Hiding the Arizona range, Tracy meets Pete Donohue, western writer who is gathering "atmosphere" at the ranch. Tracy considers Pete artificial and laughs at his marriage proposal. After warning her of the interest of ranch manager Clint Hanlon, Pete proves his point by arousing Clint's jealousy. But Tracy is in love with a man she knows only by hearsay—a Garrison she is destined to meet soon.

CHAPTER II

She had the letter among the folds of her billowy black silk skirt. She handed it to Tracy, to be read aloud for perhaps the twentieth time. The letter bore the imprint of a detective agency in Baltimore, Maryland. Tracy read in a husky voice:

"Dear Miss Hayden: As I noted in my previous report, there is no doubt but that the man you engaged me to investigate, is the son of Miguel Garrison and the grandson of Jeffrey Garrison. I have examined his passport and other papers of identification, and the proof is conclusive.

"As you requested me not to approach the young man, I have been unable to obtain a photograph. A brief description follows: Age, approximately 28; height, 6 feet; weight, 160 pounds; eyes, dark brown; complexion, dark.

The Ranch Needs A Man Like Jeff Garrison

"The newspaper clipping you mailed me was accurate. Philip Garrison was a member of the Tiger Squadron in China and Burma, and he was discharged because of a wound obtained in action. Garrison now is living at a cheap waterfront roominghouse, and seems in difficult financial straits. His wound healed, but he appears to be under some physical or mental strain that makes him extremely nervous."

"It's very little, Senora Maria—and yet he is Phil Garrison, your grandson," Tracy finished, with a lift in her voice.

"The grandson I've never seen," the Senora softly replied. "His father, my son Miguel, quarreled with his grandfather thirty years ago, Tracy. Oh, it was a terrible quarrel, for those two—my husband and my eldest son—were too much alike. The cause was unimportant. But Miguel went off swearing he would never come back, and he never did."

The black eyes were moist now. "We heard that Miguel lived for a time in the East, married there and had a son, then went to South America. Tracy, tell me this unknown young man is like his father—and like his grandfather."

"He is, Senora Maria," Tracy said softly, "because you want him to be so much. It seems that one grandchild must be—"

"Yes, one must be," Maria said. "And we must have him here, Tracy. For more than the reason he belongs here." She leaned forward, lowered her voice to a whisper, and worry showed in her eyes.

"We have been rich, Tracy—very rich. But the ranch is not as it once was, Senor Clint Hanlon can not make it earn money as my husband did. And Ramon, who should fill his father's boots, is not at home on a cow pony and among cattle. Young Juan's father is dead, and Juan is not taught to work. And Ruth is like her father, my son Ramon, and only a girl."

Tracy felt strangely shaken. "I do not know what to say, Senora Maria."

"Ah, but I do!" the Senora exclaimed. She leaned back in her chair now, and closed her eyes. "My husband's last words to me were, 'Maria, I leave my ranch and my children to you—for only you I trust.' She paused and Tracy realized that her mind was reaching into the past.

"A fine man, Jeff Garrison was—a caballero. I was sixteen when he came to Mexico to buy up cattle and stayed as a guest at my father's hacienda. He was big—the tallest man I had ever seen. And his eyes were blue like the sky. I had never before known a Yanqui, but when I saw Jeff Garrison I knew that my people had lied when they told me all Yanquis were bad!"

Her voice wore a little spell about Tracy Hayden. Tracy could visualize that meeting. The senorita had been promised by her father to another man, to a Mexican of a rich and proud family, but she had fallen in love with the American. The girl had felt something die in her when her father discovered her love, and sent the Yanqui away.

"But he came back," Senora Maria said. "As I should have known he would. He came back with some men who were like himself, and in those days the strongest and bravest man got what he wanted. And Jeff Garrison wanted me!"

"We must have here a man like that," Senora Maria said. "Another Jeff Garrison—a man who will put Ramon and Juan and Ruth in their places. And a man like that, Tracy, for you."

"You shall go to him, Tracy," the Senora said, "and bring him here to us."

The man with the limp followed the landlady up the gloomy rooming house stairs and along the second-floor hall. He eased his weight off the game leg as he waited for the door at the end of the hall to be unlocked. He was a tall, lean man with a good-looking but rather grim face and unfriendly gray eyes. His clothes and the traveling bag he carried were obviously expensive, although hard worn, and it was perhaps that fact which made the landlady eye him with suspicion.

Opening the door of a musty, poorly-furnished bedroom, the landlady said:

"The Senora sent me to talk to you. She saw an item in a newspaper which told of you being a pilot with the Tiger Squadron in China."

"It's one of my nicest rooms. It used to bring me three-fifty a week, but I'll let you have it for straight three."

The landlady waited expectantly, and he gave her three dollars, not speaking. She paused with the door half closed, eying him with a curiosity that was stronger than her suspicion.

"What did you say your name was?"

"I didn't say," came the curt reply. "But if you need to know, it's James Conroy."

The door closed, and the man calling himself James Conroy stood listening to the woman's retreating footsteps.

Tracy Interrupts Jim Searching Phil's Room

He faced about, opened his bag, and searched briefly among the clothing until he found a gun. It was a bulky automatic pistol of military make, sheathed in a leather holster fitted with straps, so that it could be worn under the armpit. He removed his coat, put the holstered gun in place—a strap over the left shoulder and one about his chest.

He slipped on the coat again, buttoned it, then moved to the door and opened it an inch. He listened a moment, and stole like a thief from the room.

He moved with a directness; along the hall to the next door. A key from his pocket opened the door. He stepped into a room that was much like the one he had rented, shabby and depressing, and closed the door behind him. His eyes made a quick survey, finding an untidy desk of a careless occupant. The bed was made up but had been laid upon.

James Conroy moved to the old-fashioned dresser and went through the contents of each drawer with a patient thoroughness, showing no disappointment when his search proved fruitless. He closed the drawers, careful to leave everything as he had found it. He turned then and stooped to pull from under the bed a traveling bag. The bag bore labels of far places; of a hotel in Manila, of one in Hongkong, of the famed Raffles of Singapore—and a dozen others. James Conroy gave them only a glance. He tried to open the bag, found it locked, and he was speculating whether or not to force the lock when he caught the sound of a footfall.

He straightened, turned quickly toward the door, giving his weak leg a twist that sent pain through him and nearly caused him to fall. Pressed against the door, he heard a light uncertain step traverse the hall. And from the bottom of the stairs, the lifted voice of the landlady.

"It's the second door from the end, Miss," the landlady called.

The light footfalls came directly to the door behind which James Conroy stood. A strange excitement lighted in his eyes; his breathing was sharp, as though his heart beat hard and under pressure. He waited until a knock came, then he moved back so that if the door opened he would be hidden behind it. There was a moment's wait. The room was growing dark. The knock sounded again, more loudly.

Tracy Hayden had never been to Baltimore before, and now on her first visit she was seeing a shabby side of the city. The taxi from her hotel had carried her along the waterfront and had turned into a side street, where it stopped before a dingy house. Tracy looked doubtfully around.

Stepping from the taxi, she said to her companion: "Are you sure, Mr. Halloran, that this is where he lives? I can't imagine a Garrison in such a place."

Halloran, the private detective, was stout, florid, cheerful.

"Well, sometimes we come down in the world. Shall we call on the young man?"

"I'd like to meet him alone, if you don't mind."

"You're the boss. I'll wait here in the cab." Halloran gave Tracy a shrewd look.

Tracy pressed the bell, excitement and fear building up in her as she waited. She thought with real dismay: "Suppose he isn't what we think—Maria and I?" And then the door opened, and a gray-haired woman looked out.

"I understand Mr. Philip Garrison lives here," Tracy said. "I would like to see him if he is in."

Tracy Asks Conroy To Visit the Ranch

"You're a relative of Mr. Garrison's?"

"Sort of a distant relative," Tracy said. "Mr. Garrison's grandmother sent me to see him. I've come all the way from Arizona."

The landlady looked as though she would ask more questions, but Tracy was already mounting the stairs. Twice she knocked on the door to Phil Garrison's room. After a moment's wait, she called "Mr. Garrison—?" She tried the door-knob, pushed the door wide, and stepped into the darkening room.

She turned, saw the door slowly closing—and saw the man who had stood behind it. There was a gun in his hand.

Tracy was startled, but not afraid. After a surprised gasp, she was calm enough to attempt an understanding of the situation. She had found Phil Garrison—hiding behind a door with a gun in his hand and a cold, grim look in his eyes.

They stared at each other, letting a static silence build up in the dreary, unlighted room. Tracy found herself forgetting about the strangeness of Phil's behavior, and the gun he held, and instead studied him carefully. He was, and he was not, as she had imagined him.

He had not the Spanish strain so apparent in the other Garrisons. But he was tall and wide-shouldered and handsome. Strength and character were in his face. Tracy thought gladly: "He must be like his grandfather."

The silence between them grew strained, and Tracy felt that she had to say something. "Mr. Garrison, you don't know me, of course. I am Tracy Hayden, and I've come from your grandmother, Senora Maria Garrison."

Surprise showed on his face. He kept staring at her, then put away the gun. And said, "Please go on."

"The Senora sent me to talk to you. She saw an item in a newspaper which told of you being a pilot with the Tiger Squadron in China. She employed a private detective to learn if you are the same Philip Garrison whose father was her eldest son, Miguel."

"And the detective learned?"

"That you are her grandson. And so Senora Maria sent me with a message. She is very old, and since she has never seen you, she wishes you to visit her at the Garrison ranch in Arizona."

The man said nothing. He remained beside the door, his shoulders to the wall, a thoughtful look in his eyes. Tracy saw that though he watched her intently, he still gave her only part of his attention. He was listening for some sound from the hall.

Tracy said, "Perhaps I'm not telling this very well, Mr. Garrison. It's so hard to put another person's wishes into words." She smiled, trying to pierce his aloofness. "I could say that the Senora, your grandmother, needs you. But perhaps that would make you distrustful. So I'll say, instead, that I think you need her."

"What do you mean by that?"

Tracy gestured, indicating the shabby room. "This isn't exactly suitable for a Garrison. I think you are down on your luck. I don't mean to offer a bribe, but the Garrison ranch is very rich. The Senora sees that her Mexican cowboys live better than this."

"Tell me," said the man, "about this ranch."

The People's Choice

Lesson for December 30, 1951

WITH New Year's Day right around the corner we should take stock of ourselves. What is to become of us as a nation? Can we survive in this atomic age? Is our future curve upward or down?

The answer to such questions lies in the answer to another one: What will the people choose? The most important fact about any people, at any crisis in their life, is not what they have, not what they have done or accomplished or enjoyed, not what they have at the present moment in power or in possessions. It is not their reputation, their income, their history. It is simply their choices, their decisions. However grand a nation's past may be, however good their present may be, wrong decisions can destroy everything. What will the people choose?

Democracy Means Free Choice

THERE are some interesting parallels between the United States, or Canada, today, and Israel of more than three millenniums ago.

It was a little nation, so new it could scarcely be called a nation, so small it could be lost in one of our big cities. But when it was beginning its time in Palestine, it was much nearer a true democracy than it was in the more famous and glamorous times of David and Solomon.

There was at first no hereditary monarchy, the people had no precedents to go by, they had to pick their way through an uncertain world, much as we do only on a smaller scale.

In Joshua's time there had been a military government; first Moses and then Joshua had done most of the thinking for the people. But when he grew old, Joshua knew that in the future the people would have to think for themselves. When the people do think, it is democracy; when they think only what they are told to think, it is a police state. Now Joshua knew that the main choice before the people was basically religious. As he put it: Whom will you serve?

A High Way and a Low

THE choice was not merely between good and bad theology. If you choose a God you choose his way of life. The way of the true God was the high way, other ways were low. The Israelites' God was the God of the Law, the God of pure strong living. The gods of the Canaanites were pictured as golden calves, brass he-goats.

There is a world of difference between a man, or a nation, whose highest thoughts cannot rise above the level of the animals they worship, and a man or nation whose highest thoughts are expressed in the holiness, justice and mercy of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

If any one has a sneaking feeling that all religions are really much the same, let him remember what happened in Palestine. The peoples who chose the animal-gods simply rotted away, leaving few traces in the dust of history. The nation that (not everybody, not all the time, but on the whole) chose the true and living God, has made an impression on history such as no nation so small has ever made.

Idols of Today

THE Living God still challenges us, a free people. The words of Joshua might still be spoken in this 20th century: Choose this day whom you will serve. Millions make the wrong choice. Some worship the idol called success—at any price; some fall down and worship Mammon; others worship popular opinion; others will do anything for what is in a liquor bottle; others give their all for the goddess of sex, others for the "great god luck."

The dismissal of ninety cadets from West Point for cheating (who set them the example?), the revelations of the Ke-fauver Crime Committee, the strangle-hold gamblers have on national affairs, the crowded divorce courts and race tracks, the ravages of liquor and drugs even on young boys and girls, the general foggy confusion about what is right and what is wrong, the prevalence of the bare-faced lie in public life—all must cause a thoughtful person to ask: What kind of choices is our country making?

Can we be called a God-fearing nation or do we also still worship idols?

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Whom To Blame

Unimportant

By Lawrence Gould

Is there any use discussing who is "to blame"?

Answer: Very little, even if it were not usually impossible to reach a just decision. But blame and responsibility are quite different things. You cannot correct a condition until you have found what—or who—caused it. The fact that your parents were not "to blame" for your lack of confidence in yourself makes it no less important to realize that they were responsible for it—that your self-doubt is based on their criticisms rather than on your own natural shortcomings. But once you have seen this, the responsibility for trying to re-educate yourself becomes yours, and it is wasting time to blame them.

May abrupt weaning make a pessimist?

Answer: Yes, says London child psychiatrist, Dr. Frieda Goldman-Eisler. She reports a three-year study which led her to conclude that to be abruptly weaned at three or four months arouses fear and resentment in a baby which will lead him to "expect the worst" forever after. Dr. Goldmann-Eisler says that pessimists are usually better money-makers than optimists, but that while 70 per cent of optimists have financial difficulties, they tend to live longer than the pessimists do. Her experiments at least confirm the psychoanalytic belief that abrupt or too early weaning is an emotional shock which has lasting consequences.

Does school change a child's character?

Answer: Not essentially, says Dr. Dale B. Harris of the Institute of Child Welfare of the University of Minnesota. So far as the basic attitudes and interests are concerned, a child learns most from the people he meets and the atmosphere he lives in during the first few years of his life, for it is then that he is most imitative and receptive to suggestion. This is true especially of basic traits of character like friendliness, self-confidence and interest in learning. Schools may modify his attitudes and tastes by giving him wider experience but they make no "drastic changes."

KEEPING HEALTHY

Leukocytes Are Our Disease Fighters

By Dr. James W. Barton

DURING THE FLU epidemic in 1918-1919, a young medical officer was brought to our base hospital and, despite all care and attention, there was no response to our efforts. The visiting consultant looked at the patient's medical history chart and shook his head and agreed that nothing more could be done for him.

Why? Because, despite the severity of the flu which was complicated by pneumonia, the white corpuscles of his blood, the disease fighters, had not increased to any extent; they were insufficient in numbers to put up a real fight for this young physician's life. Also, his family history showed that his father passed away under the same circumstances, no resistance to disease.

The physician is able to estimate the degree or severity of the illness by the increase of the white corpuscles in the blood, which demonstrates the big help of the hospital laboratory in being able to give the physician this information in a very short time. If the number of white corpuscles (leukocytes) is high, the patient may be very ill but his leukocytes are keeping up with his illness—giving the illness a strong fight. An increase in the number of leukocytes, then, is a favorable sign during an illness.

Just before an operation, the number of leukocytes in the blood is often counted to show degree of illness and resisting power of the patient's blood. Counting leukocytes after operation is also important. In some chronic or "run down" conditions, which have been calling on the leukocyte reserves for months, these leukocyte reserves become exhausted. Sometimes certain illnesses exhaust the leukocyte reserves in a short time for some unknown reason.

The suggestion, therefore, is that the leukocyte count should be taken (a) at time of admission to hospital and especially before operation to compare with numbers after operation, (b) when severe infection is present to detect early exhaustion of leukocytes.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

As much as 20 pounds of fat are required on the body always, and it is called "fixed fat."

The best sources of vitamin C are citrus fruits, green leafy vegetables, tomatoes and berries.

Emotional disturbance may cause anorexia nervosa, the symptoms of which are nervous reactions and underweight.

Meat and other proteins are always used in reducing diets, because they burn up fats and starches.

Lack of nourishment in the elderly sometimes shows up in inflammation of the lips and tongue.

By having a periodic physical examination, we would obtain health insurance which is as important as life insurance.

Texas, Missouri Keep Gridders

By GRANTLAND RICE

Where They Come From

NEW YORK—"If you want to size up a football team," writes L.P.S., "take a look at where most of the players come from. There's the answer. Teams that have many players from out of their own state were benefited by the heaviest proselyting, recruiting and subsidizing, as a rule. Did you notice that in a recent well-selected all-Southern team, nine of the eleven men came from the north? I just made a check and found the majority of the Southern stars came from well above the old Mason and Dixon or Smith and Wesson line. Pennsylvania is the main recruiting ground.

Grantland Rice

"On the other hand," he continues, "Texas teams are nearly all packed with Texans. Missouri has nearly all Missouri boys in her line-up. Pennsylvania, I'd say, gets the heaviest raiding. They travel from 1,200 to 1,500 miles to grab the best talent Pennsylvania has to offer. I'd say Pennsylvania could field a team that would outmatch any in the country, including Ohio and Texas. But one state can't take care of fifteen or twenty colleges. Or maybe many more." If any heavy cut is made in football's present system the loudest squawk will come from Texas.

Texas has from 800 to 900 prep schools that go in seriously for football. These myriad schools supply Texas, SMU, TCU, Rice, Baylor, Texas A. and M. and one or two others. The Texas athletic scholarship list is also heavy and if there is any big reduction here Texas may secede again—if not from the United States, at least from the N.C.A.A. Texas could lure in Arkansas and Oklahoma, and have all the fun and action wanted. Football in Texas is a civil war and the teams really go all out. The high schools in Texas battle it to the hilt from September to December. I don't know whether Texas has the phony courses for football players that so many other colleges have or not. I doubt it, since most of the complaints that have come this way haven't blown in from Texas.

Split-Up May Follow

There is a good chance that the end of this football argument may lead to a big split-up to different ways of running the game.

It's Wonderful the Way
Chewing-Gum Laxative
Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE
—NOT GOOD FOOD

Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT's action is so wonderfully different! Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "pushing" action too soon... right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out. But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes only waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, worn-out feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self! (Get FEEN-A-MINT! It's increase in price—still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.)

patrons from Grand Rapids, Detroit and points south.

"The shacks are uninhibited in design and color. Each is sponsored by a business house, and no building restrictions hampered the zany imaginations of the builders. Here is a shanty shaped like a gas storage tank with a dinosaur painted on the outside. Yonder is a flower shop, its walls flaunting bright red roses against the Antarctic expanse. A sports shop features gaudy murals of fishermen in a trout stream and ducks on the wing. Farther on is an exact replica of a trailer. The Ford shanty is a model of the downtown dealership. The shanty provided by the local fish market bears a reassuring sign. "No need of going without fish," it consoles. "If you don't get 'em here, stop at our market!"

"Perchville not only refuses to charge rent for its shanties, but it guarantees a certain amount of limited and specialized free medical service. Over the shack provided by Doctor O. W. Mitton reads a sign: "Fishhooks removed from humans free." This offer was accepted at least once, when a Perchville visitor had a fishhook removed from the lobe of his ear."

The article then went on to tell how the idea was first originated by Harold Gould and his suggestion that the Chamber of Commerce sponsor the project, and the experiences when high winds destroyed the village twice. Mr. Reck then told of the many different baits and lures used by the hearty ice fishermen.

Calkins' excellent color photos pictured the unloading of the city hall; several of the colorful shanties; an angler fishing through the ice; a unique motor driven ice buggie owned by one of the local residents; a mess of Tawas Bay Perch, an old hand at ice fishing. Herb Farrand of East Tawas showing one of the Ford Times staff his sure-fire bait, a Russian Hook.

Perchville first gained national recognition two years ago when several articles by Joe Clark of Detroit appeared in national publications including Life Magazine, U. S. Camera and others. Many daily papers throughout the United States carried picture stories in their photo sections and it received more honors when an article appeared in the "Reveille," published in London, England.

Sources of Pitchblende

The Belgian Congo contains the largest proven pitchblende deposits. Elizabeth II, near the mines, banned during wartime to a town of 20,000, nearly all African natives. In 1940 it exported to the United States more than 1,000 tons of uranium ore. By 1941 Belgian Congo shipments to the U. S. were cut in half, and Canada supplanted Africa as the principal source of U. S. Supply.

Honey Bee Plan

Importance of honey bees for pollination is indicated by a new plan being tried in Ohio. Bees are needed so badly in that state that the federal government is now paying owners a subsidy of $1 for each hive maintained and $3 for each hive moved into a field of red clover.

Evolution of Classifications

Zoologists, like many other people are inveterate classifiers. The oldest historical records contain attempts to classify mammals from various standpoints, scientific and otherwise. One of the oldest and best known is the ancient Jewish classification of mammals into "clean" and "unclean" on the basis of foot structure and cud-chewing habits (Leviticus xi). Subsequent attempts to classify mammals, made by zoologists in various parts of the world, underwent a gradual evolution that reflects the growth of knowledge over the years.

Tenderizing Meats

Citrus fruits are excellent for tenderizing not-so-tender meats. Use either fresh or canned orange and grapefruit juice in pot roasts and swiss steaks.

Anaplasmosis A Menace

Livestock producers in the southern states are calling on research workers to find a way to combat anaplasmosis, which kills 40 per cent of the cattle infected. It is presumed to be caused by a microscopic parasite spread by ticks or other carriers.
