Judge Thomas F. Murphy to Administration's House Cleaning

SCANDAL—Thomas F. Murphy, a New York federal judge, will direct President Truman's non-partisan commission which will attempt to clean up the present administration before the coming election campaign. Murphy is an old hand at investigations. He formerly directed the criminal section of the U. S. attorney's office in New York and prior to being elevated to the bench, served for a time as commissioner of New York's huge police force.

As things now stand, the President is taking personal charge of the cleanup campaign. However, administration critics, as well as some of its supporters, believe that corruption in government as revealed in the past few years has ruined the Democratic party's chance of re-election.

The postwar rash of investigations started when evidence of skull-duggery was revealed in the disposal of surplus war property. Almost immediately afterwards a probe was stated of "five-percenters"—men who peddled influence and obtained juicy government contracts for a fee. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation was next in the headlines for financing loans. This resulted in a shakeup in the agency and the naming of a single new administrator, W. Stuart Symington. Even Democratic National Chairman William J. Boyle figured in the probe and resigned as a result.

The R.F.C. scandal was still making news when the special congressional tax investigating committee plowed into the Bureau of Internal Revenue, resulting in sensational disclosures of "tax fixing" and influence peddling.

It was evident the President had this sordid history in mind when he announced he planned to establish a special house-cleaning agency, and that wrongdoers will be ousted "no matter who they are or how big they are."

The President's action, however, is not likely to lessen the criticism of his administration. To the contrary, it could mean a fresh wave of embarrassing exposures, particularly if the probe is pushed as vigorously as the President says he intends. And if the probers show any signs of heel-dragging, there will be plenty of Republicans ready to prod them along.

It would seem, then, that the people in the home towns of America can expect further disclosures of corruption in government, perhaps more sensational than already revealed during the past few years. One GOP strategist has summed up the situation pretty well: "If this thing really gets rolling, it could make Teapot Dome look like a tea party."

TRUCE TALKS—The Korean peace talks hit a snag of vital importance and interest to home towners who have relatives fighting in Korea—the exchange of prisoners. The Communists refused to list the prisoners, or even to say how many they held. Until they do, the UN has refused to talk on the subject of prisoner exchange.

It may be the Communists will change their tactics and produce the prisoner list before this reaches print. If they do, the UN will then be concerned about the location of the camp and the exchange method.

There are 11,000 Americans and 1,500 British and other UN troops missing in Korea. Under the head of "allied missing" (but not UN) are about 89,000 South Koreans. UN forces hold 165,000 of the enemy, of whom 18,000 are Chinese.

When the prisoners are exchanged, and they must be before there is any final peace in Korea, less than 4,000 can be expected to return, UN officials believe. One UN report recently estimated that nearly 8,000 UN soldiers have died of wounds or atrocities. This would support the general figure of less than 4,000 still being alive.

THE BUDGET—Within the next few weeks the people in the small towns of the nation will hear what the government expects to spend during the fiscal year beginning July 1. The budget is about ready for formal presentation to congress.

Advance reports indicated it may be about $83,000,000,000, although President Truman has spent considerable time trying to prune it below $80 billion on advice of political aides.

Even an $80,000,000,000 outlay would be the biggest in history, except for the two peak years of World War II, when spending passed $95,000,000,000. The spending this fiscal year, which will end next June 30, is expected to be about $70,000,000,000.

A number of factors directed the President's pruning attempts: (1) Military spending must be kept within bounds to retain public support; (2) This year is a presidential campaign year and federal spending, deficits and indebtedness will be an issue; (3) Prospects for a new tax increase to match the rising budget are very dim; (4) Never before have taxes been as high as now.

CEILINGS CUT—Price ceilings on cattle hides, calfskins, carpets, and rugs have been rolled back by the government. The roll-back amounted to 5 cents a pound on cattle hide and 18 per cent (10 to 15 cents a pound) on calfskin.

The reduction in hide ceiling is not expected to have any effect on the market price of leather or on shoes and other goods made of leather, price officials reported. Leather and shoe prices have been depressed and are lower than existing ceilings.

Meanwhile, a threatened shortage of tires next summer has been averted by the government's decision to stop allocating American made general purpose rubber.

James A. Newman, vice president of the B. F. Goodrich Company says the elimination of government restriction on the consumption of new rubber should make it possible for tire manufacturers to produce at least 71,000,000 passenger tires in 1952, or approximately 5,000,000 more than the probable production of 1951.

BRITAIN TO PAY—The British government has announced payment of $176,200,000 on United States and Canadian loans. The payment has an ironic twist since the British have asked the United States for another $600,000,000 in economic help during the next six months.

Britain owes the United States $4,350,000,000 and Canada $1,185,000,000. She has until the year 2000 to pay off these debts, incurred after World War II had ravaged the British economy. The first installment due on the American loan made in 1946 amounts to $138,500,000. Of this, $87,000,000 represents interest.

This is the first picture released of the nation's newest tank, the giant T-36. Ordnance officials say it will outslug any land-fighting machine ever built, although they will not reveal any statistics. They even photographed it blacked out against the setting sun to safeguard military security.

FARM LABOR SHORTAGE

Government Speeds Up Refugee Program

John W. Gibson, chairman of the Displaced Persons Commission, has announced revitalization of the commission's program for the processing of escaped persons with farm experience in order to ready a large pool of good dairy, "dirt", and general farmers for sponsorship by Americans. The action has been viewed by the Department of Agriculture as a step toward the estimate that next summer will mark a peak in the current farm labor shortage.

Gibson explained that any American farmer who can guarantee a job, housing, inland transportation, and that the refugee will not become a public charge, can become a sponsor.

Farmers can get further information from the U. S. Displaced Persons Com., Washington 25, D. C.

EGYPTIAN LIBERATORS SHOW TEETH . . . In Cairo, Egypt, several members of the "Liberation" unit, a group of underground fighters, are showing off their weapons to Ceza Nebarawi and Zanib Al Ghazali in an undisclosed headquarters. Mrs. Nebarawi is the leader of the Moslem women's party, a group that is agitating for the complete ouster of Britain from the Suez canal zone. She entertained the warriors at her home after the inspection of the guns. The weapons of the liberators seem to be British Sten guns, and the bandolier for ammunition worn by the man at the left is branded "U.S."

The wives of three of the four airmen being held in Hungary after their plane was forced down await word on the state department's efforts to obtain release of their husbands. At left is Mrs. Jane Swift, Glen Falls, N.Y., with her two children, Leslie and David, who has never seen his dad. At right is Mrs. Florence Henderson, wife of aircraft commander Capt. Dave Henderson, and Mrs. Ruth Duff, bride of T/Sgt. Jess A. Duff, crew chief from Spokane, Wash., being assured by an official at Erding air depot, Germany, following report plane was forced down in Hungary.

HERO . . . Sgt. 1/C Joseph Rodriguez, 23, San Bernardino, Calif., shown with fiancée, Rose Aranda, received notice from defense department that he has been awarded the nation's highest military honor, the congressional medal of honor. He was given the award for doing what three platoons had been unable to do—dislodge the enemy from a Red hill. He killed 15 Red soldiers and destroyed several enemy automatic weapons that held our forces at bay. He did this without thought of own safety.

SCIENTIST BARRED . . . Dr. Ernest Chain (right), Nobel prize biochemist, developer of penicillin, has been barred twice from the U.S., once on a science mission for the U.N. world health organization. Authorities say that he is inadmissible to the U.S. under the internal security act. Here, he is made a commander of the legion of honor in France in 1948. Critics of security act say it emulates Hitler's decrees that deprived Nazi Germany of scientists.

PLANS CHIANG OUSTER . . . Former Nationalist President Li Tsung-Jen says in Riverdale, N.Y., that Chiang Kai-shek violated China's constitution when he regained presidency without election. Li says he has plan to oust Chiang.

Winter Vacation-Time Is Boom-Time in East

Once upon a time when anyone mentioned vacations everyone immediately thought of summer. In recent years, however, winter vacations have become more popular until today thousands of tourists head for northern states to enjoy winter sports. Other thousands, of course, head south for the sunshine playgrounds.

Winter vacations and sports have become a big business in the northeastern states with many a small town depending for a great part of its annual income on the winter months.

For months communities in New England have been promoting their neighborhood and all that is needed now is a

Resorts Operate on Reduced Budgets

Undaunted by three straight years of sparse snow, New England resort operators are planning for a big season this winter.

Without most of the New England states operating on reduced recreational budgets, the theme for the coming season will be "New England skiing always is best in March". Placards, partly financed by the states and partly by resort operators, will be posted in conspicuous places during the early months of the season.

To those who live in or near the major ski areas, the decline in March business has been a puzzle. The Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, which keeps statistics on the winter sports business, suggests that one of the reasons is the relatively early return of spring in cities like Boston and New York.

Promotion for a longer skiing season has been under way for several years.

Chewing-Gum Laxative
Acts Chiefly to REMOVE WASTE — NOT GOOD FOOD
Here's the secret millions of folks have discovered about FEEN-A-MINT, the modern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here is why FEEN-A-MINT'S action is so wonderfully different!
Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon — right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.
But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self — full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price — still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.

Physicist Sees A-Plants Making Power by 1955

BRECKSVILLE, O.—An atomic plant that could replace coal as a fuel in making power on a commercial scale may be in operation by 1955.
According to Dr. William L. Davidson, internationally known nuclear physicist and director of physical research at the B. F. Goodrich Research Center, an atomic power plant could open up manufacturing potentialities in remote areas of this country where the high cost of hauling in coal might prove prohibitive.

Dr. Davidson is co-author of "Applied Nuclear Physics," a book that the Soviets lifted and later reprinted in an unauthorized Russian edition, and currently is engaged in a special research project for the Atomic Energy Commission. While he cannot discuss the nature of this work, he indicated it may have far-reaching effects in the rubber industry.
The rubber company scientist said that atomic power could prove a tremendous boon to Brazil, for example, which does not have a domestic coal supply, or to Israel, where it is being considered for converting salt water into potable water.

Dr. Davidson pointed out that peacetime applications of radioactive materials are being studied throughout the country. This research, he said, is being made possible by the more than 18,000 shipments of isotopes that have gone from the AEC at Oak Ridge, Tenn., to American industry.

At B. F. Goodrich, he explained, radioactive tires are being used to determine tread wear. In another project, the company has been able to trace leaks in air-conditioning systems. Still another project culminated in the invention of a radioactive golf ball by Dr. Davidson. This "hot" ball can be located when lost in the grass merely by using a small Geiger counter, he said.

How to Find Christ
Lesson for January 6, 1952

NOT every one finds Christ in just the same way. This was true at the beginning and it is still true. A very interesting recent book is, "These Found the Way," edited by David W. Soper. (Westminster Press, Philadelphia, $2.50.) It contains the stories of a dozen modern persons who have become Christians. No two of them have the same story to tell, yet there is something in common among all of them.
Each of them in some way has "found" Christ. It is a mistake to think that all Christians must be cast in the same mold, or that each of us must plant his feet exactly in the footprints (for example) of St. Paul.

Dr. Foreman

Sensational Conversions
At the beginning of John's gospel we find the story of one person after another who followed Christ. There is only one of these who believed in Jesus on the basis of what could be called a "supernatural" experience. This was John the Baptist. He testified that he had "seen the Spirit" (that is, God's Spirit) coming upon Jesus.

Now you cannot "see" the Spirit in the same way you can see a fence-post. Even if you take the story in the most literal way, and take it to mean that the Spirit had taken the visible form of a dove, the question still is there: How would John know that this particular dove was not a dove, but the Holy Spirit?
Whatever you make of it, John was an exception. All the others in the story became followers of Jesus through some one's word, suggestion, invitation; some one introduced them to Christ. That still is true.
Very few people who are Christians today started out with some vision in the sky, some vision of a dove or an angel or of Christ himself (like Paul, later on).

Simpler Cases
JUST as likely, it was not spectacular at all. (Most of the conversions recorded in the New Testament were not in the least spectacular.)
It was someone saying, "Let's go to church," or it was a Sunday school teacher saying, "Bill, isn't it time you accepted Christ for yourself?" or a girl saying, "How can I marry a fellow that isn't even a Christian?" It may be reading a tract or it may be listening to someone's testimony in a prayer meeting, it might be reading that book about how some in our time have "found the way,"—or it might even be reading this column.

However it comes about, two things are always true. First, someone introduces you to Jesus. Then, you make the decision for yourself. You are not likely to come to Christ unless someone else suggests it and helps you; but no other person however good, and no church however great and true, can do for you what you alone can do for yourself: make up your own mind to say "Yes" to Jesus Christ.
Nowadays much is said about "Fellowship Evangelism". There is nothing mysterious about it. For instance, a man who has never thought about becoming a Christian and perhaps no intention of being one, joins (say) a men's club at some church... and one thing leads to another, and he gets acquainted in this way with the minister or with someone else who has had a real and happy experience with Christ... and presently his heart is stirred and he too becomes a Christian—because he has made Christian friends.

Saying a Good Word
YET it is a strange thing: many people will talk about anything else they believe in, before they will talk about Jesus Christ.
Suppose that from the beginning every one had been as close-mouthed about Him as most church members are? Simon Peter, for one, would never have become a Christian. If it had not been for his brother Andrew, who knows what would have become of Simon Peter?
In commercial lingo, Jesus "sells" himself. First-rate things, ideas or persons always sell themselves. But even the finest articles in the world need to have their story told, they have to be introduced, people have to know about them. Every church, every Christian, ought to be (in the best sense) advertising Christ. Is yours? Are you?

Army Regiment Contributes $75,000 to Japan Orphanage
TOKYO—The Army's 27th "Wolfhound" Regiment has contributed $75,000 to an orphanage in Osaka, Japan, for the support of unfortunate children.
The Wolfhound infantrymen, now fighting in Korea, adopted the Holy Family Orphanage in December, 1949, when they saw the undernourished children crowded into dilapidated and unheated barracks.
Through voluntary donations, the soldiers of this 25th Infantry Division regiment have subsidized a new home, a playground, and a camp for the orphans. The funds also have paid for food, clothing, medical treatment, and a new X-ray machine.
The four companies in the Wolfhound Regiment compete for the largest single contribution, and recently four companies raised $1,000 each.

DESERT DESTINY
A SERIAL STORY OF THE MODERN-DAY WEST
WRITTEN BY JOSEPH CHADWICK

THE STORY SO FAR:
Tracy Hayden lives at the Garrison Hacienda in Arizona, founded by the late cattle baron, old Jeff Garrison. Pete Donohue, western writer, guest at the Hacienda, warns Tracy about the interest Clint Henton, ranch foreman, has in her. Tracy is in love with a man she knows only by hearsay, Phil Garrison, the baron's grandson and mistress of the ranch, and Tracy plots to bring Phil, the Senora's grandson, home to run the place. Tracy goes to Baltimore and interrupts a man masquerading as Phil's room whom she supposes to be Phil. Tracy urges him to visit the Hacienda and take charge of the ranch.

CHAPTER III
"It lies in a great valley, between rock hills," Tracy said. "There are cattle by the thousands, horses by the hundreds. There is a fine ranchhouse which we call the Hacienda, and a Mexican village of more than two hundred people. Your grandfather, Jeff Garrison, one of the Southwest's most famous men, founded the ranch. He was a cavalry officer in the Confederate Army. He married a Mexican girl, the Senora Maria Monteros. They had three sons, your father the first—"

"And the other two sons?"
"Juan died ten years ago in a motor accident during a visit to Spain. His son, his namesake, lives at the ranch. Ramon, the third son, lives there also, with his daughter Ruth, who is very beautiful—"

Jim Conroy Swears As Garrison Escapes

"If the son Ramon and the grandson Juan are there," asked the man, "why is it important that Philip Garrison be there, too?"
"I can only tell you what the Senora said. We need a man there."
Tracy wondered as she spoke if he understood her meaning. He did, for he nodded. And yet something was puzzling him.

He said, "I can't decide on such a step all at once. Can't we meet again, and talk it over?"
"Whatever you wish, Mr. Garrison," Tracy said. "I'm staying at the Montrose Hotel here in Baltimore. I shall remain there until I hear from you." She smiled at him, then turned to leave.

He said, as she opened the door, "There is one thing you left unsaid, Miss Hayden — perhaps the most important thing."
His eyes met hers. There was some intimate communication between them.

"What is your position at the Garrison ranch?"
"I am a sort of unofficial foster daughter of the family," Tracy told Jim. "I've lived there all my life. My father was the ranch manager until his death, and my grandfather was the first hired hand—back when Jeff Garrison founded the ranch." She laughed a little. "I suppose I should claim to be part and parcel of Garrison Ranch."

She saw him answer her laughter with a faint smile. It was the first bit of humor or friendliness he had shown. But he said nothing more. He held the door wide for her and, when she walked from the room and along the hall toward the stairs, she felt his eyes follow her. Something like a warm glow spread through Tracy. It wasn't ridiculous any more. She was in love with Phil Garrison.
Jim Conroy felt like a heel. He tried to shrug off his disgust, returning to his own room, telling himself he had tricked the girl only out of necessity.

It was nearly eight o'clock now, and he became aware of hunger. He decided to risk going out to a restaurant.
Conroy was gone no longer than half an hour, and when he returned he took the same precautions as before and once again entered Garrison's room. And this time he was jolted. Everything belonging to Phil Garrison was gone. Garrison had somehow learned the time was growing short. Jim Conroy swore softly. His bird had flown.

He was nearly broke. He was not in the best condition, and his injured leg still caused him trouble. The leg behaved decently most of the time, but when he needed all his strength, it was apt to fail.
The logical course was to give up the hunt for Garrison and try another way to straighten out his life. But his condition wouldn't permit him to land a job. He was an aviator by trade, and a military one at that, and an aviator with a weakness is no aviator at all.

His pipe was smoked out, when the idea came out of nowhere. The girl, Tracy Hayden, could be the bait in a trap.
An hour later, dressed in the better of his two suits, Jim entered a small restaurant. The man he had phoned to meet him was sitting in a booth at the rear. He shook Jim's hand, and then they had coffee.

Jim finally said, "Look, Bert, I know you can get in touch with Phil Garrison, but won't tell me his whereabouts."
"What do you want, Jim?"
"Just a little thing. I merely want you to pass word on to Garrison that there is a girl here in town who means something important to him. Tell him I'll make a decent deal with him. He can check on this girl, for I'll be with her tonight at eight, in the cocktail lounge of the Hotel Montrose. I'm giving that heel a break, Bert."

Bert's china-blue eyes flickered. He said, laughing a little, "I want no part of your feud with Garrison. Besides, how can I give him a message when I don't know where he is?"
"Jim finished his coffee and rose. "Run that errand for me, Bert old man," he said.
Tracy felt unendurably restless, yet she did not want to leave her hotel suite. She was afraid Phil Garrison might phone or call if she went out. She had been careful, there in his room — ignoring the gun he held, but though she played blind, Tracy had noted every detail. She knew that Philip feared something, that he was in danger. She was still worrying when the telephone rang.

Their eyes met, and Tracy looked invitingly pretty, so he kissed her.

Tracy knew his voice instantly and said, "Yes, Philip? Would you like to talk matters over now?"
"I was thinking I'd buy you a cocktail."

He had lost some of his grimaces, and he had a smile for her. When they met in the lobby, he said matter-of-factly, "You're prettier than I thought." And Tracy felt her heart skip a beat. Just those few words made her lose her emotional stability. They found a corner table in the lounge.
He startled her by saying, "Do I pass inspection?"

Jim Finds Himself Entangled With Tracy

"Yes, of course," Tracy said. "I didn't guess you were aware of my stare. You were so intent on that cigarette."
"I've gotten into the habit of watching with a sixth sense. It comes in handy sometimes. Tell me, were you thinking that I'm not much like your Garrisons?"
"I didn't know your father, Philip. And my recollections of your grandfather are hazy. He died when I was a very small girl."
"Perhaps I wouldn't fit in well there. You know nothing about me. You found me hiding behind a door, with a gun in my hand. How do you know I'm not mixed up in something shady?"

Tracy gave him a confident smile. "I have a sixth sense, too. It tells me you are all you should be."
"And you have no curiosity about my hiding? About the gun?"
"I have thought about it, I think you're in some sort of danger." She met his eyes levelly. "And I think that is one more reason why you should come to Garrison Ranch with me. You will be safe there. You need never fear again."

"Was that your impression—that I was afraid?"
"Yes, What else?"
"I should have known I was wrong," she said. "After all, you who were in the Tiger Squadron—" She broke off, seeing annoyance cross his face. "I'm sorry, did I say the wrong thing again?"
"Not that, exactly," he said. "It's just that talking about my flying in China reminds me of things I'd rather forget."

And she thought: "He may not be afraid, but this watchfulness of his — is the next thing to fear!"
At the end of a week Jim Conroy was ready to give up. His plan had failed and, in a way, had even backfired. Phil Garrison for once had made no apparent move to become acquainted with a decidedly attractive girl; more annoying still, Jim found himself becoming entangled with that girl.
He had been seeing Tracy every day, squandering his scanty funds on taking her dining and dancing and sightseeing in a rented car. Jim kept watching but found no trace of Phil Garrison, and he was ready to accept failure. It was Tracy, as much as the failure to bait Garrison, that decided him. Tracy was fun, and he was growing fond of her. And he saw Tracy was beginning to have ideas about him.

It was raining when they drove back from Washington late that night, and there was a pounding knock in the motor of the rented car. Jim pulled into a gas station, and they went in an adjoining luncheon room for sandwiches and coffee. The rain had grown into a pelted downpour while they were eating, and when they ran through it toward the car, Tracy gripped his hand. They were almost to the car when she stumbled. Jim slipped his arm about her and kept her from falling, and they halted there a brief moment in the rain. Their eyes met, and Tracy looked invitingly pretty, so he kissed her.
She whispered, chokingly, "Phil, Phil!" And she looked as though she would laugh or cry, and did neither. Jim knew matters had gone far enough—perhaps too far.
He said, finally, "Look, Tracy—I'm not what you think."
"Don't talk like that, Phil," she told him. "Don't—because I won't listen. You're you, and that's all that matters."

Senora Garrison Falls Suddenly Very Ill

He felt alarmed. "But you've got to listen! I'm not going to Arizona with you. I don't belong there. I'm not a Garrison."
He was startled, alarmed more, when his admission was misunderstood. Tracy said, a contented weariness in her voice, "Don't talk nonsense darling. You are a Garrison. I'm judge enough of the breed to know that. Now don't argue with me—" She sighed heavily, "I'm awfully sleepy."
The next moment she had dozed off against his shoulder.
The telegram arrived the next morning. Tracy had an intuitive warning that it contained bad news when the bellboy handed it to her. She unfolded the message with suddenly shaking fingers, and her breath caught in her throat as she read:

"Senora Maria seriously ill. Suggest you return home immediately. Ramon Garrison."
She had said over the telephone, "Philip, I must see you at once. Please come." And now, as she admitted him to her sitting room, he had an anxious look in his eyes.
He said, "What's wrong, Tracy?" There was concern in his voice.
"It's your grandmother, Phil," she told him. "I've just had a wire. Senora Maria is very ill. I must go home. And you must come with me." She heard him protest, but she ignored it. "I've arranged for passage on a plane that leaves at an o'clock—passage for us both. You'll come, won't you Phil?"

"Phil darling it isn't only because Senora Maria needs you. It's for me, too—and for yourself. You could stop looking anxiously over your shoulder, stop thinking someone was watching or following you. And you could become well! Oh, darling, I see how you limp at times—and how pain makes your face tighten up. You owe it to yourself to come to Garrison Ranch."
He reached up and loosened her arms from about him. After a long moment, he said, "Tracy I owe you something—a debt you do not know about. Does it mean so much to you that the Senora sees Phil Garrison?"

"If she could just see you, Phil, it would give her immeasurable happiness. The others — Ramon and Juan and Ruth, are selfish, not really except for the money. Senora Maria will look at you, Philip, and she'll smile and say, 'Yes, you are like the Yanqui I married.' She'll love you as she has loved no one since Jeff Garrison died. Give her a last bit of happiness. Philip—please!"

He turned and faced her, studied her with a strange thoughtfulness, and Tracy realized how unlike Ramon and Juan he was.
Finally he said, "Tracy, I said I owed you a debt. I'm going to make payment. I'll go and see Senora Maria—on one condition. I visit the ranch on the understanding that I may leave immediately after meeting the Senora, if I so wish, and that no attempt is made ever to locate me again."

Tracy felt as though she had been slapped. She looked at him with hurt eyes, found him awaiting her agreement.
"Very well," she brockenly said. "I agree to that, Philip."
The final lap of the journey was made in a station wagon driven by a Mexican whose saddle-brown face was half hidden by a big straw sombrero.
The lumpy tone she used made him look at her fully, and what he saw in her eyes filled him with uneasiness. Tracy Hayden was—or thought she was—in love with him.
"No—" slowly. "No, I'll never hate you."
"If you knew what was in my mind," he said, "you'd hate me."
Tracy startled him out of his gloomy reverie by saying: "By your scowl, I'd say you don't like Garrison Ranch."

Doughnuts Were Loaded; Woman Goes to Jail Cell

VALDOSTA, Ga.—She didn't know the donuts were loaded—but it looked true enough to land her in the same jail with her husband.
Mrs. Raymond Shaw was arrested when she entered Lowndes County jail to visit her husband, carrying a bag of doughnuts loaded with pistol bullets, according to Sheriff J. L. Futch.
Earlier in the day, the sheriff said, Jailer Joe Brantley had taken a pistol from Guy Cooper, Shaw's cellmate. The bullets fitted the gun.
Cooper, charged with armed robbery, said his wife had smuggled in the pistol the previous day.

Doctor Says Atom Bombs Had Little Effect on Health

DURHAM, N. C. — Most of the Japanese who were A-bombed in 1945 are "perfectly normal except for a few scars," Dr. Paul G. Fillmore said at Duke University today.

At the present time the only effects are radiation cataracts of the eye, which are not a serious problem because they can be removed by a comparatively simple operation, he explained.

Dr. Fillmore, who recently returned from two years as a member of the Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission in Japan, said the Japanese people recovered from the immediate, acute effects in a period of weeks or months.
Most of the people who have developed cataracts are not seriously enough hindered to keep them from their jobs, he said.

Dr. Fillmore, now under an Atomic Energy Commission fellowship at Duke, said that ABCC is a long-term project that is continuing to look for other differences in exposed and non-exposed persons. The major divisions of the project are genetics, pediatrics, and medicine, he said, although there are many supporting surveys such as the eye investigations.
Japan's greatest medical problem, he said, is tuberculosis, which seems to be the result of crowded living conditions.

Army Regiment Contributes $75,000 to Japan Orphanage

TOKYO—The Army's 27th "Wolfhound" Regiment has contributed $75,000 to an orphanage in Osaka, Japan, for the support of unfortunate children.
The Wolfhound infantrymen, now fighting in Korea, adopted the Holy Family Orphanage in December, 1949, when they saw the undernourished children crowded into dilapidated and unheated barracks.
Through voluntary donations, the soldiers of this 25th Infantry Division regiment have subsidized a new home, a playground, and a camp for the orphans. The funds also have paid for food, clothing, medical treatment, and a new X-ray machine.
The four companies in the Wolfhound Regiment compete for the largest single contribution, and recently four companies raised $1,000 each.

Nice Compliment

The clerk could see he had a difficult customer, so he put everything he had into his sales talk. "These socks are the very latest pattern; the colors are fast; hole-proof; won't shrink; priced far lower than you will find elsewhere. And a very good yarn it is, too." The customer eyed the salesman a moment and said, "Yeah, and you tell it very well."

Slip of Tongue

The chief of the railroad's claim agency found it hard to believe the report submitted by one of his men which stated that the farmer had lost 2,025 pigs through the road's negligence, and, of course, he went out to the farm to interview the shipper again. "That's a lot of pigs," the claims chief growled to the farmer. "Are you sure you lost that many?" "Yeah," lisped the farmer. "Thanks," said the wise claims chief and changed the original report to read: "Two sows and twenty-five pigs."

Army Delivers News to Troops On All Fronts

WASHINGTON—No foxhole is too deep or outpost too remote to prevent "doorstep" delivery of some type of Army newspaper.

Every soldier—in a training camp in this country or manning a front-line battle station overseas—is kept up to date on the important news from home, world events and items of importance within the Army through one or more publications of the largest newspaper chain in existence.

More than 250 newspapers—varying from the two-war veteran, professionally-styled tabloid, The Stars and Stripes, to the most crude, make-shift edition of a regiment, battalion or smaller unit publication—are delivered daily to soldiers in all points of the world.

Service on the world-wide circulation route ranges from one to 48 hours after the papers leave their presses or stencil duplicating machines. Reader interest rises in a direct ratio to the length of delivery time required, and the local unit news presented.

Soldiers first are introduced to the Army newspapers while in training, each post maintaining a newspaper and many units at each station also publishing some kind of news sheet. They get in the habit of reading them.

When they are sent overseas, where civilian newspapers are not readily available, the men become dependent on these Army newspapers. The "theater" editions of The Stars and Stripes, plus other publications within their area, are the most effective information media, the main link with the outside world.

The Stars and Stripes, which dates from World War I, is the most popular and complete Army newspaper. Its pages are crammed with stories "hot off the wire" in the fields of spot news, features and sports. It also has cartoons and comics, a full page of the favorites. Published in some 30 editions at the height of World War II, the "S & S" now makes a daily appearance as the European Command Stars and Stripes or the Pacific Stars and Stripes, depending on which theater a soldier is in. The Pacific version, separate from its European counterpart, comes in three editions, including one in Korea.

Total circulation of the newspaper in the Far East Command is 186,000 with 72,000 Korean editions being distributed free of charge through the units in the combat zone. Some 55,000 papers are sold each day in the European Command.

The European Command Stars and Stripes also operates book stores which sell 150 magazines, two other daily newspapers, the European editions of the New York Times and New York Herald Tribune, and three weekly publications, Army Times, Air Force Times, and Overseas Weekly.

A third theater newspaper, the Caribbean Army News, is published for the benefit of troops stationed in the Panama Canal Zone Area.

Unlike the press-produced productions of The Stars and Stripes, newspapers within each area often are made possible through duplicating or mimeographing processes. These papers come in almost any size, shape, color and type imaginable.

How Movie Studios Induce Horses to Make like Dead

HOLLYWOOD—The mystery as to how Hollywood studios make horses play dead for battlefield scenes has been solved.

Quoting from professional reports, the American Veterinary Medical Association said that movie horses do get "shot" for such scenes, but veterinarians do the shooting—and with an anesthetic, not bullets.

In such instances, the veterinarian administers drugs to put the animals to sleep for the time it takes to do the filming. The drugs, often used in animal surgery, have no ill effects on the horses.

The same technique is also used for movie cattle which are shown in disaster pictures, or are supposed to be victims of anthrax or deadly diseases.

The AVMA also explained that when wild horses fight, it's really not dangerous at all. That's because their mouths are taped and their hooves are fitted with sponge-rubber.

Scented Before Seen No Longer True in this Case

AKRON, O.—The nation's communities—large and small—can look forward to conquering the age-old problem of garbage trucks which usually can be scented before they are seen.

At the request of Akron officials, B. F. Goodrich engineers have developed a special air- and water-tight rubber gasket for the rear door of covered trucks in the rubber capital of the world. Now in use on the city's garbage collection trucks, they resemble the rubber seal on a refrigerator door and prevent both the content and the unpleasant odor from escaping.
