Americans Disappointed by Red's List of 3,198 Prisoners-of-War

LAUGHTER AND TEARS—Tears and laughter echoed in the home towns of America. The Communists handed over their list of American prisoners, containing 3,198 names.

For mothers and fathers, sweethearts and wives, of these 3,198 there was laughter and one of the happiest holiday seasons on record. But for other thousands there were tears and despair.

The nation as a whole, however, was shocked and disappointed by the list. What had happened to the remaining 11,559 American soldiers known missing in Korea?

A civilian employee of the Detense department's public information office bands reporters the first list of names of 3,198 American prisoners-of-war as reported by the become of them, the UN wants to know?

There was no answer to this question. But all too well the people of America remember the stories of atrocities made public recently in Korea.

And even as thousands were rejoicing at word that their fighting men are still alive, the Department of Defense and President Truman warned that the Communist prisoner-of-war reports are completely unverified. The enemy has refused to permit Red Cross inspection of its camps.

White House Secretary Joseph Short told newsmen: "The President has asked me to urge every news medium to stress as often as possible that the prisoner-ofwar list is entirely unverified.

"He appreciates the efforts already made along this line but believes it important to continue them-to do even more than already has been done.

"This country has no way of verifying whether the list is accurate or inaccurate, true or false, complete or incomplete.

'For the sake of the families whose sons are missing in action, everyone should treat this list with skepticism."

But for the mothers of America there was one reaction: "Thank God for such wonderful news. It answers tens of thousands of prayers.' Shortly after the names of Americans on the Communist list was made public, the UN handed the Reds a stiffly-worded note demanding that the enemy account for more than 1,000 prisoners not named. The UN contends these prisoners had been named in earlier Communist propaganda broadcasts, but were not on the prisoner-of-war list. What has EUROPE'S UNITY-There has been a growing feeling in the rural sections of America that the countries of western Europe are making little progress toward unity in spirit or force. Secretary of State Acheson, however, believes otherwise.

Acheson said recently that Europeans have made more progress in the last four years toward bringing about this unity than they did in the previous five centuries. As examples, he pointed out the six-nation Europe-army program and the Schuman plan for pooling coal and steel

One of the main blocks in the formation of the Europe-army is the British unwillingness to contribute troops to such an organization. Before the plan can succeed as planned by General Eisenhower, the British will have to change their policy which dates from the time of Queen Elizabeth.

COST-OF-LIVING-As 1951 came to a close, the Bureau of Labor Statistics released figures on the cost-of-living for the American family. The bureau's index hit a new peak of 10.8 per cent above the level of June, 1950, when the Korean war broke out.

The bureau said the rising costs of miscellaneous goods and services, and higher prices for fresh fruits and vegetables, were largely responsible

NEW BLACKMAIL—Hungary, with a record of holding American citizens to gain concessions from the United States, has embarked again upon the blackmail trail. This time she is holding four U.S. airmen whose plane was forced down by Soviet fighter planes after it strayed across the Hungarian border.

The Soviet puppet says she will bring to trial the four airmen who violated the Hungarian border "with the criminal intentions of dropping spies and diversionists in the territory of the Hungarian Republic.

Last year Hungary jailed American businessman Robert A. Vogeler on charges of espionage and later released him after the U.S. agreed to a number of concessions.

It is now but a matter of time before the Hungarians ask for more concessions. And if the blackmail works as before, the airmen will be released after much propaganda and the concessions granted.

THE BIG TRAGEDY-Among other things, the year 1951 will be remembered for the big tragedy—the millionth traffic fatality. The nation's tragic parade of motor vehicle accident deaths began September 13, 1899. H. H. Bliss, victim No. 1, was killed by a horseless carriage in New York City. Heavy snow and ice-crusted highways and the fact that thousands of Americans made holiday trips, contributed to the traffic death rate

U.S. BALKS-For the first time in the history of the United Nations. the United States balked at the levy it must pay to help maintain that organization. The U.S. cited its huge expenditures in the Korean war and the billions spent to uphold the charter principles which the United Nations was not in a position to implement.

The assembly, however, approved a 1952 budget of $48,096,780, of which the U.S. will pay 36.9 per cent. Although less than last year's levy, the U.S. objected that no state should pay more than one third of

The British are to pay 10.56 per cent of the fiscal year 1952 and the Soviet Union, the Ukraine, and White Russia 11.49 per cent.

Meeting for the first time since World War II, two old friends, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower (left) and Prime Minister Winston Churchill (right) met in Paris recently for a series of conferences on the European army plan. Eisenhower was understood to have made a fervent appeal to Churchill to give more encouragement to the plan. There were also reports circulated after Churchill returned to England that Eisenhower expressed bis willingness to "stay on the job" for a longer period if Britain would give greater support to the plan.

In recent years, however, more and more home towners have started taking the have started taking the annual two-weeks rest in winter, heading for the sunny south. And home towns in the sun-belt, too, have become aware of this trend and have taken advantage of it to attract tourists.

Motels in or near small towns along the southern routes in the sun-belt have done much to attract business. Today the respectability of most roadside roominformality of arrival, stay, and departure. At the end of a long day's drive a tired and wrinkled family doesn't particularly care to buck traffic in a city to search out a hotel, find a parking place, parade through a critical lobby, and tip bell boys in and out. Many people now prefer to pull up at their "sleeping door", where everything in the loaded car, down to the baby's bottle, is handy.

A clean restaurant is usually in the same building or just across or down the road. There are no city noises to keep the traveler awake.
no hands out for tips, no necessity to dress up. Departure at any hour in the morning is at the convenience of the motorist.

Along Florida's Gold Coast the luxury of some of these motels is unbelievable. Comfort is represented by spick-and-span new room. Some are wholly air-conditioned. Quite a number have their own private swimming pools and sundecks. Many have their private beaches as well. Restaurants and bars are present in the big new ones.

In the service department the motel is beginning to outshine hotels. At many places the guests are practically wrapped up in cotton and put to bed at night. If you are staying at least a week the icebox in your complete kitchenette will be stocked, free, with bacon, butter, cream, milk, eggs, bread, break fast food, sugar, salt and pepper. Maid service is included in your rent. Your car is washed, on the house, every few days. Flowers from the grounds are kept in your vases. Ice is always available.

Of increasing popularity to winter vacationists is Key West, favorite retreat of President Truman. Last year all records were broken on the Overseas Highway which connects Florida and the Keys when 406,-347 passenger automobiles were checked through the toll gates. Of these 174,729, or 43 per cent, were out-of-state cars. This was a big jump from the previous year, when tolls were collected from 282,600 of which about 45 per cent were from out of state. In 1946 the number of passenger cars was the much smaller total of 154,555.

Unity Must Be Top Consideration In Alliance of Western Nations

By Farnham F. Dudgeon

articles prepared by the Editor of Western Newspaper Union while on a 13,000 mile flight through Europe and the Near East. Purpose of the trip was for the writer and thirteen other American journalists to observe progress made in buildup of strength and integration of North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces and the efforts being made by the Europeans themselves in self-help.)

"The program on which the Unit-ed States is embarked in Europe must succeed, for there is no acceptable alternative for our country. If you are in a boat in a strong sea, you do not stop pulling your oar if the boat starts leaking; you keep on pulling, even harder."

It was with these, and other equally inspiring words from General Dwight D. Eisenhower in his Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe, near Paris, France, that we began our eight-country, 24-day inspection trip of the major with the United States against Soviet

In this same initial briefing, the supreme allied commander authorized another direct quotation, which was to register with us again and again as we talked with United States officials, and with the military and political leaders of France, Italy, Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia, Western Germany, and the Nether-

General Eisenhower said:

"The free world vastly outnumbers the Iron Curtain countries in total resources. The essential, however, is unity. Dictatorships achieve unity by a dagger in the back; the only way in which we shall obtain unity in NATO is for each of our countries to realize that its enlightened self-interest is best served by clinging together in this association."

Can this "enlightened" unity be achieved?

In an attempt to get some kind of answer to this vital international question our group of newspapermen had a pretty good look at much of what is happening in these countries ringed tightly around the western footlights of the Iron Curtain. Here are some of the essential impressions created as a result of our

Deployed Around U.S.S.R.

The United States and its Western allies are very definitely deployed in a political and economic organization and in a limited military aggregation around the Russian perimeter from Norway on one flank through Turkey on the other

The battle lines for defensive military tactics are drawn. Our strategy to defend the free world from Russian aggression has been charted. Maps showing the deployment of the enemy forces have been compiled from a hard-working intelligence organization. What forces we have in readiness are placed where it is believed they would do the most good, should "the gong ring to-

There is no feeling of false optiif the Soviet forces were to move tomorrow. But we are in better shape today than we were six months or a year ago.

If we aren't strong enough to hold the Russians back, why haven't they struck to date?

One military leader put it this way:
"We think Russia knows that if round fight. Russia might win the gencies.

first round, but we think they know that there would be fourteen more rounds to fight."

War is going to be up to the Russians. The Allied forces have no thought of a preventive war. General Eisenhower told us that there is absolutely no talk of such tactics, and that it was completely out of the Western concept of civilization.

Strength Growing

Our military strength is growing every day, and our leaders are opimistic about achieving military goals set for next year and the year after, and reaching their culmination in 1954. Great progress has been made in the year just passed in building up the allied political organization through NATO, and the military side through SHAPE.

It has been through the shear willpower and inspiration of General Eisenhower, and other mili tary leaders, like his brilliant chief of staff, Gen. Albert M. Gruenther, Western European countries allied that so much progress in planning the military organization at SHAPE has been made in such a short period.

And, of course, on the political side, General Eisenhower, again must be given much credit for the success of NATO to date. Everywhere we went, his name was magic. Everywhere, also, people speculated on his candidacy for the 1952 United States presidential election. (Net impression of our group of observers was that General Eisenhower will be a Republican candidate, and that his place in the Allied military picture will be taken by another American general.)

European Army

One of the biggest problems facing SHAPE is the building of an ntegrated European army, in which century-old nationalistic enemies will be fighting side by side under a common command. This problem, ike others, is being met head on, and is being solved because of the great "religious" fervor which grips the allied leaders from General Eisenhower down through all echelons of command.

This "religion" takes on a very definite form as you visit and listen to the military and political leaders, who are faced with the job of building an organization to offset the Soviet power. This code is built on optimism that the job eventually can be done, and on an unyielding faith that it must be done.

The problems of the Allies certainly are not confined to military matters. The national economies of Great Britain and France, particularly, are in another critical phase. The economies of all of the other countries which we visited need sup-

In many of the countries, the facts presented to us indicated that had not the present military crisis evolved, these governments today would be self-sufficient. But certainly the military crisis is at hand, and without the flow of money and materials from the United States, there would be little hope in Europe today. There is no particular secret mism or of bluff. Our leaders admit about the fact that should the Russian choose to launch his offensive tomorrow, our military forces, and those of our allies, would be sorely pressed to do anything but give a creditable showing in strictly defensive tactics.

Nostalgic Recollections of Old Rural General Stores

By Wright A. Patterson

I do whenever opportunity offers, that carried me back to boyhood days in an Iowa village. In every detail it was the old type general store in which I spent my pennies in those long ago boyhood days. And the store keepers-they were storekeepers, not merchants, were prepared to supply every human need from the cradle to the

Somewhere in their stock. they did not always know just where, were diapers, soothing syrup, paregoric, colic "cure". There were high chairs and trundle beds. On one shelf were "patent medicines," guaran-teed to cure every ill of man or animal to which flesh is heir. In a shed at the back was kerosene, axle grease and paints for home or barn. Included in that stock were coffins in which the people of the community would be buried. Veritably every human need from the cradle to the grave.

The stock of that Iowa general store in which I, as a small boy, was specially interested was its stock of penny candies. I still recall how patiently that store keeper served me when I went to spend my one or two pennies. How many I would get of this for one cent, and how many of that. I listened to it all, carefully and lengthfully considered each item, and in the end went back to the stick of striped perpendict candy, from that I could | owner of a big restaurant located a

The general store was the only business still operating in that ghost town, but it was included in the purchase, and the storekeeper was transplanted to the new location. Without him that store would lose much of its interest. You can get a real thrill out of having him sell you things, especially if you are of the older generation that knew general stores in your home town.

Just what source they have from which to maintain the stock it offers I do not know. The storekeeper told me he had been able to find replacements for all items, though there was no one source from which they came. He had hopes of keeping his stock going indefinitely. Slowly, then more rapidly a fierce anger mounted in Sam. Sane reasoning fled from his brain.

He whirled. His eyes fell on the triumphant, pompous countenance of Mrs. Gardener. He raised a trembling forefinger and pointed it at her nose.

"Get out!" he said, his voice like a threatening wind sweeping down from the mountains and growing ever louder. "Get out before I break your domineering neck!"

Mrs. Gardener gasped. She started to speak. "Get out!" roared Sam. "Get out! Do you hear?"

Apparently Mrs. Gardener heard She gasped again, but made no effort to speak. Instead, her eyes wide with apprehension, she backed toward the door and disappeared, forgetting her hat, parasol and handbag. These items, however, overtook her as she was sprinting down the walk.

Sam banged shut the door and leaned against it, breathing heavily. Slowly, very slowly the significance of what he had done struck home. He had lost Audrey (and he loved her) but there was a warm glow of satisfaction inside of him. Audrey stood in front of him. Au-

Marines Are Busy Seeking Candidates For 1953 Olympics

WASHINGTON—Special Services officers at Marine Corps installations across the country will soon initiate programs on their respective stations to select Leatherneck candidates for the United States' 1952 Olympics team, it was announced by Marine Corps head-The program, in keeping with the Marine Corps' standing emphasis on athletics, will begin when Olympic team hopefuls within the Marine Corps are screened first in station competition and then in All-Marine contests. Winners of the latter contest will then be entered in an Armed Forces Inter-Service Track and Field Meet to be held probably in California in June. The winner of each event will qualify directly for the final Olympic tryouts to be held at the Los Angeles Coliseum later that month. The Armed Forces athletes will be competing for Olympic billets with N.C.A.A. and A.A.U. winners, to whom qualifying positions have been limited in past years.

One person likely to retain his position on the United States team is Marine Reserve Corporal Bob Mathias, Stanford University's great athlete who won the World decathlon championship in the 1948 Olympics. Although still a student at Stanford, Corporal Mathias recently completed his first summer of training in the Marine Corps Platoon Leaders' Class at the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego, California. He is working toward a Marine Corps commission to be received when he finishes college in 1953. He is a member of the Marine Corps Inactive Reserve.

Researchers Offer Hints On Proper Male Hair Care

NEW YORK-Here's some advice to the wife who wants her husband's hair to remain as attractive and plentiful as her own.

First, don't let him wet his hair every day in the shower or douse water on it every time he combs it. Too frequent moistening of the hair removes healthful natural oils, dries the scalp and causes the hair to become lanky and lack luster.

Research scientists of Tintair recommend a thorough shampoo once or twice a week for the average man do over the small room off the liv- to keep it free from scales, plus ing room Sam used for an office vigorous massage to loosen the scalp and promote better blood circulation.

The usual husband will not pay much attention to the brushing routine that promotes hair hygiene, the scientists point out But the vigilant little woman can remind her mate that he can stimulate his hair by repeated combing which should be gentle enough not to bruise the Close attention should be paid to falling hair. The average rate is from 40 to 50 hairs per day for a healthy person. When hairs begin to come out in greater amounts-particularly longer hairs from the top of the scalp—a physician should be consulted to determine whether one of several simple diseases of the scalp is present, or whether some more serious organic disorder of the body is affecting the hair and

Mr. Theodore I. Cooper, of the Marsh Engineering Company, Detroit: "I wish to take the liberty of complimenting the Michigan Bell Telephone Company on the courteous, efficient and co-operative people they have in their employ. I desire to bring particular attention to Bill Lassman, who today was installing telephone service in our building. He has made several suggestions to us regarding our service, arranging of telephones and efficiency, and I know he has gone beyond his expected duties in being most helpful to us. One thing that pleased me greatly was that he carried a little brush and immediately swept up any dirt due to his work when drilling through our cement blocks and wood. He was most cautious about not causing any damage to anything. It gives me great pleasure to write a letter such as this for any man who has the interest in his work above and beyond his ordinary duties." It's people who make telephone service good!

A SERIAL STORY OF THE MODERN-DAY WEST

THE STORY SO WAR: Tracy Hayden lives at the Hacienda, founded by Jeff Garrison. Her grandfather had befriended Garrison. Tracy is leved by Jeff's widow, Senera Maria, but is hated by the other Garrisons. Senera Maria sends Tracy to Baltimere to bring home Phil Garrison, a grandsen she has never seen, to put the ranch back on its feet. Tracy surprises Jim Cenrey ransacking Phil's room, and, supposing him to be Phil, begs him to accompany her. Conroy later discovers the real Phil has fled. Conroy sees Tracy daily until she begins to love him, then he tries to tell her the truth. He agrees to go with her with uneasiness la his heart.

CHAPTER IV

Aloud, he said, "I'll have to do something about you, Tracy." And paw the surprise, the bewilderment in her eves.

The road stretched farther and farther.

"It's all a part of the ranch," she

The station wagon swept past a square bulk of rock, and the Hacienda lay before thera. Jim Conroy's first glimpse of the big white ranchhouse made him think of a picture-

"It's beautiful, Tracy," he said. "It's out of this world, and no wonder you love it. Old Jeff Garrison must have wanted to live like a

"He swore to give his bride a pal-ace," Tracy said. "You see, the father of the girl he married thought Jeff Garrison would have his wife live in a 'dobe hut. Jeff promised he would give Maria all and more than he took her away

Conroy Meets Rest Of the Garrisons

The station wagon came to a half by an arched gateway in a high adobe wall, and they passed through the gateway to enter a wide patio. Flowers bloomed there in the watered desert dust, and their fragrance was sweet. Tracy halted Jim halfway across the patio by shyly touching his arm. "You like it?" she asked anxious-

"You're glad you came?" And he replied, "If this ground could talk, it would cry out against my walking here."

"You mustn't talk that way. This home."

"Don't let my talk alarm you," he told her. "I shan't be here long." He saw she didn't like that. She bit down on her lip, moved her head in a sign of disapproval. They entered a cool hallway of great width, then an enormous room opening from the hall. The room was low in contrast to its width, with a ceiling of bare hand-hewn rafters, and a huge fireplace for cottonwood logs. There was a wide-topped desk at the far end of the room, and a man sat at it writing under the soft glow of an oil lamp.

Tracy said, "Ramon!" The man glanced up, and Jim Conroy saw that this, indeed, was a Garrison. There was much about him that reminded him of Phil Garrison. Rawas of medium height and perhaps forty-five years old. His hair was black except for a brush of gray at each temple. Ramon Garrison was a handsome man, yet Jim Conroy detected signs of a weak character; the slackness of the man's mouth, the restlessness of his eyes, and, later, the lack of firmness in his handshake. And, at the moment of coming forward, the lack of warmth in his smile. Ramon said, "I'm glad you're back, Tracy. The senora is very ill and you know how much she depends on you. She'll not let any of us do anything for her, but keeps asking for you."

Tracy asked, a break in her voice, "How-how badly is she, Ramon?" "Dr. Jessup has been here every day. Juan flies him to and fro from town in his plane. At first he did not expect her to live through the night. But she rallied. It's her heart."

Tracy said, "I'll go right up to Ramon's eyes-Jim Conroy suddenly realized they were a very light blue — turned to Jim. He smiled again in his rather cold fashion. "You're Phil Garrison, of course?" And he held out his hand. As Jim faced Ramon Garrison, he was again struck by his resemblance to Phil Garrison, the nephew. He found Ramon studying him with

Jim Conroy had passed through his disgust for the masquerade he man? was playing; now he felt a mild arousement in misleading Ramon

He said, "I'm sure there's no reason for my not liking everything about Garrison Ranch." And he detected shrewdness in the man's

Tracy came from the Senora's bedroom and, once the door was closed, permitted to flow unchecked the tears she had held back by sheer force of will:

Her voice seemed to come from far away. "Bring him close, Tracy, so that I may really see him." The Senora's eyes searched Jim Conroy's face for a long moment

Then she said in Spanish: "You are big and handsome, but your hair is a little blonde, and your eyes are neither blue nor black, but gray. I thought you would look like your father and your grandfather."

Tracy saw he looked puzzled 'You do not speak Spanish, Philip?" "I'm afraid not."

"Shall I translate for him?" she asked the Senora.

There was a strange, bright look in the Senora Maria's eyes. In a stronger voice, she said. "No, I will talk so that he was a strange with the work of the senoral markets."

"So you think I'm different," he mused. "Why does that make it easier for you to like me?" will talk so that he understands. Leave us alone, Tracy, and take the nurse with you."

There was a lengthy silence after the door had closed behind Tracy and the protesting nurse. The quiet twisted Jim Conroy's nerves. He could feel the intensity of the old lady's eyes, probing at him; he knew they were shrewd eyes that would not long be fooled.

"Young man, come here to me," she finally said. "Sit here on the edge of my bed so that I can touch you.

Ruth Garrison Flirts With Her New Cousin

His discovery that the Senora Maria had a secret locked in her heart filled Jim Conroy with a vague uneasiness. He came from the sickroom looking darkly intent, but he merely said to Tracy, "She is sleeping now." He wasn't sure that he should take even her into his uneasy confidence.

"I'll sit by her for a little while," Tracy told him. She smiled faint-"Don't think I'm neglecting you the moment you become my guest. It's just that I've been away from her for so long."
He said, "Don't worry about me.

I'll go sightseeing about the Hacienda." He looked after her as she entered the room. He was beginplied, and followed her from the ning to like Tracy, a lot, bigbrother style.

Ruth led the way into a lowceilinged rumpus room, equipped with all sorts of devices to while away the hours of bored people. Jim sat on a stool by a well-stocked bar while she mixed cocktails.

"You don't seem at all like a cousin," Ruth told him. "I'm glad."

"You mean my appearance?"
"Not entirely. You aren't like us in looks. But I meant something else. There's something about you that's different from Ramon and Juan-and from me, too. Maybe it's your manner. You're sharplooking, as if you are nobody's fool.
And I think you can be tough." "Well, aren't the Garrisons tough?"

Jim Conroy had to wince when she called him Phil. He had tricked Tracy into believing him to be Phil, in the hope that through her he could find the real Phil Garrison. Then he had duped the Senora in the hope of secretly righting matters with Tracy. Now he could not unmask himself without bringing down more trouble than he would be able to handle.

He questioned, "And Tracy? How does she fit into the feud?"

"Oh, Tracy is on the Senora's side. But we all like Tracy," Ruth's lips curled in an unamused smile. "As who doesn't," she added.

A 'Yes' to Christ

Lesson for January 13, 1952

FESUS knew some distinguished people. But his first and most intimate friends were not of that kind. Christianity started at the grassroots of humanity. It did not start in the top branches. It is a good thing, too. It is quite true hat Christianity has depths and heights to which most Christians do not attain. A St. Paul has not only mystic raptures but intellectual penetra- Dr. Foremon ion which comparatively few Christians have shared or can share; he was a genius, and most of us are not geniuses.

But in Jesus' first group of companions there was no St. Paul. They were the plainest of plain people. The first of them were fishermen. They were not used to lectures; it is extremely doubtful whether any one of them would have understood the Epistle to the Ephesians if it had been read to them. But they anderstood Jesus . . . at least they understood what he said. He said 'Follow me," and they followed him. It was as simple as that.

Surrender

THAT is what Christianity is, a its heart; saying Yes to Jesus When those fishermen said their 'Yes' it meant three things, and those three are always involved whenever any one sincerely begins the Christian life. For this was only the beginning, of course. There was a long road ahead, much they would have to learn and do and suffer but even the longest road has its beginning. And the Christian's road begins with this first "Yes".

First of all, it means surrender. They took him for their leader, they absorbed his teaching, they obeyed his orders. There is a Christian hymn, "My Jesus, as Thou Wilt"; one hears it most often at funerals, but it is not intended as a funeral hymn. It could well be the hymn sung when young people are confirmed or join the church; it could well be the every-morning song of every real Christian.

What do I want most? is not a Christian question. Rather it should be, What does Christ want most?

A GAIN, those fishermen's "Yes" meant separation. They left their nets, their old occupation.

We must not read too much into this, as if in order to be a Christian one must leave his wage-earning business, whatever it is. On the trary, the best place to be a Chris tian may be right where we are

However, no matter what we may do for a living, it is still true that saying "Yes" to Jesus means saying "No" and "Goodbye" to many other things. It means separation from all that is out of tune with him; separation from selfishness, from sin, from trash and trifles. It means separation from habits that enslave us, from "recreations" that do not re-create but tear down, from places and opportunities of temptation, from hatred and prejudice and pride.

If a man really means "Yes" to Jesus, he cannot mean "Yes" to what is opposite to Jesus. The Chris. I OFTEN THINK of the unselfish- sugar in any form, left on the teeth tian life is a separted life. It is not that he is separated from peo. school boards who give their valple. Isn't it likely that the fisher. uable time freely in their endeavor men who followed Christ had a far to help our boys and girls become wider circle of friends as they went with him than they had ever had before? But they were being shaken loose from what had before seemed to them most important,—yes, even from themselves.

BUT that is the negative side of it. The Christian life is not only reachers, has recently received "from" but it is "for." That is, great praise in The Journal of the just as these first fishermen followed Jesus in order to become fishers of men, so the Christian's yes-saying candy and carbonated beverages in always means enlistment for serv-

A Christian's sincerity cannot be measured in what he says, nor even in what he does not do: it is to be measured in what he does.

It is a serious and solemn question: Suppose this is your last day in life, and all the accounts are in. Looking back on what you have been and what you have done, has your life actually helped what Jesus Christ is undertaking in this world, or have you hindered him?

The Christian life is a surrendered, a separated life, but also a life of service. "Yes" can be said with the lips alone—that was Judas; pounds of fat in excess of its needs, the individual may be called obese. a "Yes" to Christ can truly be said only with life itself.

house again if you paid me." That's how one New England trailer housewife summed up her feelings about life in a mobile home.

Her reasons coincided with those cited by many of her sister homemakers in a recently completed survey of typical East Coast trailer park dwellers. Somewhat surprisingly, nearly 50% of the women interviewed went on record with statements expressing a firm intention to live in mobile homes permanent-

The women were pretty much in agreement concerning the things they liked about their houses on

Less Expensive

"Trailer life is much less expensive, especially after your coach is paid for," said one housewife.
"It's an easier life, with very little housework and extremely little upkeep," said another ("and no storm windows to bother about," added her husband.)

"Trailer people are more friendly and sociable," a third woman pointed out, while a fourth contended that "A mobile home gives you freedom to move if it becomes necessary or desirable—if you want, you can spend your winters in the south and your summers in the north."

Many of the women polled simply summed up their mobile home likes in the phrase: "We just like trailer

Housework in a house on wheels, say trailer wives, ceases to be a chore-because it can be done so quickly. In one national survey, for example, more than 40% of the mobile home-makers reported that their daily clean-up and pick-up routine took only 25% as much time as was required to keep the average apartment or house in spic and span

Similar findings were gleaned in the East Coast survey, in which the ladies claimed they could do their housework in one to two hours, as compared with two to four in a flat or apartment with the same number of rooms.

Compact Virtues

The difference, according to trailer designers, is in the compactness and space-conserving virtues with which the modern home on wheels is built. Thus 79% of trailer wives interviewed in the national poll reported that their kitchens were more efficiently laid out than are those in a typical house or apartment. The designers have referred to this ingenious trailer space trick as "making feet out of inches."

"Dimensions," they say, "do not determine livability, it's how the space is used that counts."

In a trailer home, every inch of space is used to the best possible advantage. Unlike most houses and apartments, the space in a wheeled home is not wasted. Ordinarily unused wall areas, for instance, become built-in cabinets or closets. A ressing table bench does doubleduty as a clothes hamper. One chair may convert into a table capable of seating six people; another may open up into a spare bed.

Trailer wives' fondness for their rolling homes is not born of necessity, from any inability to afford standard housing. According to the surveys, annual income for a typical mobile home owner is over $4,-DOO. That's well above the national average of $3313.

How big is a trailer home? Well, the average East Coast trailerite polled owns a three-room, 30-foot coach. Approximately 43% of those interviewed own television sets. Many have phones, and virtually all have radios

Typical family size is three or less; children tend to be of preschool age; and the average family food bill runs to about $25 a week.

GARDEN CLUB

The weather was rough but Tawas City garden club members held their meeting Tuesday after-noon at the Case Building as scheduled. Plans were made for a special guest night. February 5.

Mrs. Leo Burch was roll call and program chairman for the day. Each member responded with something new she planned to plant or do in the yard or garden this year. Mrs. Orlive Westcott, substitut-ing for Mrs. Glenn Schlaact, gave ver concisely the process followed in forcing of winter bouquets. Mrs. Walter Laidlaw discussed the subject flowering trees, stimulating the desire to plant the hardy ornamental as well as the facility of the desire to plant the hardy ornamental as well as the facility of the state of the s mental as well as fruit producing. An interesting letter from Mrs. Helen Schuchmacher, wintering in California, was read by Mrs. Walter Moeller. Watch for the next meeting announcement.

AA HOLD NEW YEARS CELEBRATION

Among the many New Year's Eve celebrations hereabouts one of the most unusual was that held by Alcoholics Anonymous. More than 25 members in this area, men and women who have found in AA a way to defeat the drinking prob-lem through the mutual help, gathered together with their families in the American Legion Hall in Tawas City where they consumed great quantities of food and drink. The drink was coffee.

Many enjoyed their first sober New Year's Eve in many years while others looked back on periods of continuous sobriety and useful-ness ranging from up to 11 years. But for even the newest member there was genuine happiness and gaieiy in the occasion, in being able to look forward to a clear-eyed morning-after, and to contribute a full, fair share to the work and progress of their communitie in the New Yeor.
