Understanding

Lesson for February 3, 1952

PEOPLE are like books. Some can read them, some can't. You can put a thing down in black and white and still some people will not understand, simply because they can't read. If a person is illiterate it makes no difference how plainly a book is printed or how big the type is or how clear the author's sentences. So a person can be read by some of his neigh- Dr. Foreman bors, like a book in plain English; to others who are just as close to him (close, that is, measured by a foot-rule) he might as well be written in Egyptian hieroglyphics for anything they can make out of him.

Strange Dinner Party

TRUE of all men, this was and is true of Jesus. Luke tells of a dinner party where he was a guest, and puts the spotlight on three persons there: Jesus, the host Simon, and an un-named woman.

The woman was not supposed to be there; she just wandered in off the street. Not that she was a stranger, exactly; she was well enough known in the village so that the host knew what sort of woman she was, even if (being a respectable man) he did not know her name.

Like all guests in those days. Jesus had taken off his sandals and was reclining on the couch beside the dinner table. This woman stood behind him and wept. Her tears fell on his bare feet and she wiped them dry with her long hair.

Jesus at first paid no attention, but the host was scandalized. How could Jesus take it so calmly? How could he let such a woman touch

The conversation that went on, as Luke reports it, between Jesus and Simon, shows that the poor woman of the street understood Jesus' heart, while the leading citizen, whose house it was, did not understand Jesus at all. One could read Jesus, the other found him a closed book. Why?

A Door Barred

THE MAN could not read Jesus' mind and heart because, for one thing, his own mind was made up as to the kind of person Jesus ought to be. He supposed Jesus was the same sort of person as himself-proud, sensitive, careful of his social standing, unwilling to asso-ciate with the "lower classes," wanting to be respectable much more than he wanted to be helpful. In his mind he carried a readymade pattern of what a "Prophet" ought to be, and so when one who was greater than all the prophets sat at his own dinner table, he could not see him for what he was. His eyes were blinded, he could not read Jesus, the door to understanding him was closed. He had never learned to read the kind of language which Jesus' life wrote large.

Then there was another reason why this man could not "see" Jesus. It was his own pride, Simon looked down on Jesus so much that he could not even treat him with ordinary politeness.

A Door Open

BUT the woman understood. She did not know all there was to know about Jesus. And still she understood the depth of his heart.

The door of his heart opened to her-she could read the clear writing of his spirit. She understood him because she was humble. She did not try to fit him into her pattern; in his presence she knew, as the host Simon did not, that his was the true pattern of life and hers the false. She understood him too because of her love. And so in spite of the immense difference between them, there flowed the light of understanding, even before a word had been spoken. She could read the bright word FORGIVENESS which to Simon was only a blank.

And So Today

TO this very day, some people can read Jesus while others cannot. And in between are uncounted people who can read him only more or less dimly as through glasses that are not clean, or through the smoke of a city twilight. But it is still true that pride and prejudice not only keep us from reading the lives of those around us, they keep us from reading the mind of Jesus.

And it is still true that humility and love are the great teachers; they show us how to read the lives of those around us every day, and best of all they teach us how to read the word "Forgiveness" in the mind and heart of Jesus . . . which is the heart of God.

Tracy said nothing, merely looked at him in bitterness.

"Don't go on being foolish, Tracy," he told her, "Don't let yourself be in love with a man you have never met. You'll meet him some day, and then you'll be hurt. And hurt badly."

Jim Conroy woke early at the Hacienda. After a sound sleep, the strange fight with the Mexican, Jose, and his still stranger hint of a treacherous trap, seemed as jumbled as a nightmare. In his scant wardrobe he had khaki breeches and a pair of boots, and he determined to ride before break-

He was finished dressing when a servant rapped at his door and "Buenos dias, Senor. The Senora wishes you to come to her room as soon as you can."

"Right away," said Jim. Instant-ly a sense of uneasiness took hold of him. He had made the Senora Maria think him Phil Garrison last night. Could he fool her in the clear light of day?"

Jim was surprised to find the mistress of Garrison Ranch resting against many pillows in a halfsitting position.

"Sorry my dear, I don't understand Spanish."

"Why did you never learn my language Philip?" she asked, in

The Senora Explains Cause of Her Plight

"I am not a scholar, Senora," he said. "I do what I can with my own tongue, and in China I learned a little pidgin English. But we need no fine words to understand one another, you and I."

"No, we understand each other without talk," she told him. And her eyes were actually shining. have heard about last night, Philip. My maid heard of it in the kitchen this morning, and the cook heard it from one of the stable hands. You weren't afraid, Philip. Not even a wild buck like Jose could make you afraid." "I was afraid, Senora. My heart was in my mouth." "He had a gun, and you walked right up to him. It was a foolish thing to do, but a thing such as your grandfather would have done. He was a man too, Philip, and you are the loser for not having known him." "I know you, Senora," he told her, "and that is enough."

"Ah, you are a flatterer!" The levity in her voice surprised him.

"I want to talk to you about many things, Philip," the Senora Maria said. "About your life, and in his head from the very first. I about your father, my son Miguel. helped him into the cockpit, then And about your mother, whom I went to get the leather jacket I'd never knew. But there are more left on the ground. He got me from pressing things-" She broke off, the masquerade he played as he spoke. She would worry far more than her frail health could stand should she know the truth. "I am here to see that nothing troubles you.'

"That is what I wanted you to say, my grandson. I am going to lean heavily on you. I have carried the burden a long time, and lately it has become too much."

"And that is why you became

"You do understand me, don't you? Yes, it was my burden that made me ill. The others think I am a selfish old woman, Philip, but in my heart I only want to do what is good for them."

"Ramon is your son. Doesn't he understand?"

"No-not Ramon. Not Ruth, nor Juan. They fight against me, against what is best for them. They see that the ranch is not making a great fortune as it did in the past, and so they want me to sell it. The money, they think, would permit them to live the life of idleness they love. They cannot see that once the mountain springs dry up, there can be no rivers or lakes. There must always be a source for everything -and certainly for money. And the roots of the Garrisons are here, in this desert soil. Can you understand, Philip?" "I understand, Senora. But tell me, why doesn't the ranch make money as it once did?"

"For two years there was a drought, the Great Die, the Mexicans called it. Our herds were decimated, and it is taking much money to restock. A cattleman could explain to you better, so perhaps you'd better talk with the ranch manager, Clint Hanlon."

Jim nodded, "I'll talk with Hanlon, Senora Maria. Is there more you would say to me?"

"Much more, but not at the mo-ment. I would talk to you of the others, of Ramon and Juan and Ruth. And of Tracy, too." The dark eyes searched his face. "Tell me Philip, could you love Tracy? She what I owe. I tried to repay you is beautiful and good, and she defor tricking you back East. I'm serves all that is good in life. It serves all that is good in life. It would make me happy if she would become the wife of a Garrison." (TO BE CONTINUED)

Ocean Ships Go Up-River To Get Iron

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Engineers in Venezuela are ready to bring a mountain through a jungle and across a sea to the United States.

Early in 1952, two of the largest dredges in the Western Hemisphere will begin gnawing their way up the Orinoco River. Ocean-going ore ships as big as the battleship Missouri eventually will follow, churning 170 miles upriver through jungle-walled wilderness to bring out the brick-red treasure of Cerro Bolivar, Venezuela's mountain of

For hungry U.S. blast furnaces, dredging of an Orinoco ship channel will bring closer a tremendous iron ore reserve. One of the world's richest deposits, it lies in a wild, lonely region across the Caribbean that until four years ago was virtually unmapped and uninhabited.

Hills of Iron Ore

Between the Andes and the Atlantic, sweeping nearly the entire breadth of Venezuela, are the flat featureless Orinoco Llanos (plains) covered with wiry grass and dotted by scrubby trees. On their southeastern flank, the savanna rises in broken mesas and low hills to the 'Gran Sabana," great jungle of the Guiana highlands; to the northeast, it merges into the mangrove-choked swamps of the Orinoco delta.

Venezuela's iron district lies on the fringe between savanna and jungle. Just east of the Caroni River, tributary of the Orinoco, is one open mine, El Pao, which has already begun sending iron ore to Baltimore, shipping it down the river in shallow-draft barges.

Cerro Bolivar, west of the Caroni, is a prominent hill about six miles long, rising 1,800 feet above the plain. Until recent years, it was known as La Parida. In April, 1947, geologists discovered that the entire top of the mountain is highgrade iron ore. With better than half a billion tons of ore already proved, the Orinoco Mining Company plans to slice off Cerro Bolivar's crest in 35 to 50-foot horizontal cuts. This open pit mine will one day be as large as the yawning Hull-Rust-Mahoning pit, champion of America's Mesabi Range. It will send some ten million tons of ore a year to U.S. steel mills before 1960.

El Dorado

Ore will move from the mine to the junction of the Caroni and Orinoco by standard-gauge railroad, traveling about 90 miles to a riverside loading port named Puerto Ordaz. From there it will follow the ship channel down the Orinoco and its Cano Macareo delta branch to the Gulf of Paria west of Trini-

Below San Felix on the Orinoco, port for Venezuela's centuries-old gold fields, the ore ships will pass two ancient Spanish forts atop rocky heights. These are Los Castillos, which Sir Walter Raleigh, seeking the legendary El Dorado, captured in 1618. The fracas cost the English adventurer his head.

Hemming in the delta's twisting waterways, from this point to the sea, is one of the most impenetrable jungles on earth. It is inhabited only by Guarauno (Warrau) Indians, who build their rude, palmthatched huts on piles along the water's edge.

French Announce Nylon Stocking-Sheerest Yet

PARIS-A French manufacturer has announced what he describes as the sheerest nylon stockings in the world. The French lingerie industry has hailed the new stocking as capital victory for France, claiming, "there is nothing like this in America."

The 10 denier stockings, weighing five grams and made of a nylon thread 100 miles long, bears the name "exciting" and will cost about $4.25 a pair.

The stockings are not yet on the commercial market, but manufacturers say they are producing them at the rate of 24 dozen pairs daily. A courtesy pair was presented to all Paris fashion writers.

"Exciting" stockings, according to the makers, are almost invisible. and, despite thinness, are supposed to be strong and long wearing.

Too Fat, Too Clean, Story Of Commie Demolition Agent

WITH THE FIRST MARINE DI-VISION IN KOREA-A young North Korean girl, who admitted mining several roads behind the Marine lines on the east-central front, was captured by Korean Marines in a hut containing several cases of dynamite.

The patrol was checking a village behind the front to make sure all enemy civilians had been cleared from the area when they encountered the girl.

Standing in a door frame, the girl smiled and readily assented when told that civilians must evacuate the area. But the South Korean captain became suspicious of her well-fed appearance and clean clothing in a land where rags and starvation are the rule.

A search of the hut revealed the dynamite and she confessed being a trained Communist demolition

Good Tackle Pays

A "believe-it-or-not" story about the Ocean City reel and Montague red (pictured), inseparable com-panions for nearly 30 years, is told by a famous Hollywood cameraman who fishes along the lower coast of California.

One day the cameraman and a friend were fishing side by side, using anchovies for bait. The cameraman's friend put his rod and reel down on a piling, headed for the bait shack to get hot coffee. The rest of this exciting tale follows in the cameraman's own words:

Red Goes Overboard

"Suddenly something hit his line, and before I could grab his rod, the darned think went overboard and started for China.

"We dragged the bottom for hours, but couldn't find it. My friend was furious and blamed me for not saving his gear. About three months later a terrific storm hit Redondo Beach . . . broke up homes, tore up streets and demolished many piers.
After the storm it was hard to do any surf fishing because of the huge quantities of kelp. However, I decided to give it a try. I made a cast way out and started to reel in. I had snagged on to something. and in came the rod and reel we had lost.

"Of course the reel was full of sand, verdigris and marine encrustations. My friend took one look at the reel and said I could keep it. Reel Performance Excellent

I later soaked it in a full can of kerosene for a week. Then I took the whole thing apart and scrubbed every piece. I reassembled the reel and it has worked normally through all the years. Only adjustment was made 15 years ago when I sent it back for new washers. You'd never guess how much use and abuse that reel has taken and how many fish it has pulled in. "The rod has been rewrapped, but even after all these years it still will match anything of its kind. Last job of this combination was in August, when it brought in a 27 and 33 pound chinook salmon off the Farallones."

Nymph? No Sinker

Don't use a sinker fishing a natural nymph unless you have to. The sinker interferes with the action imparted by the current and makes it harder to feel a strike. Don't let your nymph sink to the bottom and lie there. Keep it moving, fairly close to the bottom, and if it settles down, lift it up and start it again. All lies in riffles are good spots to fish a nymph. The spots behind bars, rocks, in breaks and in the current eddies are good.

Truman's State of Union Speech Termed Friendly, Conciliatory

STATE OF THE UNION-Was it a wiser or politically minded President who delivered the state of the union message to the second session of the 82nd congress? Was his conciliatory and friendly mood dictated by the fact that 1952 is an election year, or was it an effort to consolidate the majority behind the defense program and the nation's foreign policy? These questions have been in the minds of every American since the President's speech.

For the first time in five years, President Truman, who is beginning to show the strain of his years as chief executive, did not go all-out for welfare-state legislation. He made it clear, however, that he was not abandoning any of the things hehas advocated since 1946. Rather, he would have the country concentrate its full efforts to defense and keeping economically sound. In this respect he said the stabilization law was shot full of holes at the last session and "it will be one of the main tasks before congress to repair the damage and enact a strong anti-inflation law".

As for defense, he warned that the situation in Korea remains dangerous and that "the Soviet Union is increasing its armed might." The world still walks in the shadow of another world war, he said.

But his approach to taxation, compulsory health insurance, civil rights, and other controversial issues was so amiable that it left many Republican critics speechless. In fact, Republicans, who obviously were all set for a field day of criticism, found little about which to demonstrate. The main criticism, when it was all over, was the charge that the speech was just a rehash of past messages. Generally, Democrats praised the message. But from the opposition came such statements as: The same broken record . . ." "The President's speech could be characterized as follows: spend more, waste more, socialize more, give more away, control more, talk more, and blame the other fellow for all the ills of the United States and the world."

The fire and stubborn fight of the Truman of old was so obviously lacking that it seemed almost apathetic to many home towners who heard the address.

PRODUCTION-Production of civilian goods for the second quarter of 1952 has been cut back sharply. Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson announced the government has ordered home building slashed by 23 per cent for the months of April, May and June. Automobile output was slashed by 7 per cent and other consumer goods using scarce materials were trimmed 10 per cent. This is the general picture for the second quarter:

Construction—Home building, now at a rate of 850,000 a year, will be slashed to a rate of 660,000. Only factories vitally needed for defense production will be built, and little material will be available for office buildings, stores, and other commercial construction.

Autos-The industry will get enough copper and aluminum to make 800,000 cars and enough steel to make 900,000.

Civilian Goods-Most consumer goods, including refrigerators, stoves, washing machines, television sets, and radios, will be cut by about 10 per cent from the first quarter.

Railroad Equipment-Freight car production will be redused about 14 per cent below the 20,000-car output for the first quarter.

Roads-Only the most urgent road building will be permitted. Ships-Allotments to the Maritime Administration will be increased.

TAX EVADERS-The Treasury department has launched a new policy that should receive wide approval of the average home town tax payer. The Treasury will no longer let tax evaders escape criminal prosecution if they voluntarily confess their fraud and pay up.

The department also took steps to speed up its prosecution of tax evaders, including: (1) Reducing the number of conferences with taxpayers about their cases, although taxpayers still will be heard when necessary to develop actual facts; (2) The only persons who can represent taxpayers in these conferences must have duly certified powers of attorney to speak for the taxpayer.

The new policies are expected to reduce the lag in prosecution from an average of 292 days to about 100, it was estimated by the Treasury

PEACE TALKS-The Korean peace talks remain deadlocked over the question of whether or not the Communists be allowed to build air-North Korea during an armistice. On the other hand, the United Nations says it will not make a peace that gives the Communists the right to build up military forces and installations for further aggres-

CLEANUP-President Truman's long awaited plan to clean up graft in government is under way, although it drew considerable fire from Re-

The President dropped his plan for a special commission and handed the job to Attorney General McGrath, Republicans immediately began their criticism. The general charge was that "a whitewash is coming".

The President did not indicate how extensive the clean-up measures will go. A number of administration leaders are known to want action which would remove the corruption in government issue as far as possible from the approaching presidential election campaign.

Truman first asked Federal Judge Thomas F. Murphy of New York to head a cleanup commission. Murphy withdrew before his appointment could be announced officially. What caused him to change his mind has not been made public.

THE READER'S DATE BOOK-Spring Planting Time Not Far Away for Parts of the Country

It hardly seems possible but planting time—that time for planning the garden, spading and seeding—is almost here. In fact, it has already arrived for some of the extreme southern states.

But even in some of the states a little farther north it is not too early for the home gardener to start making plans and for the home merchant to begin his seed displays and getting out garden equipment. A well planned display a few weeks in advance of the local planting time can mean increased sales.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture divides the country into five zones and lists the time for the bit and cavy breeder associations. average late frost. The reader will notice the word "average"—it doesn't always hold true.

Roughly, however, the start of planting time can be placed between January 15 and February 15 for the states of Florida Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Texas part of California, Texas Mississippi and FEATURE South Carolina. The time advances a month-February 15 to March 15-for the states slightly to the north like Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, etc.

MAIN

It all depends, of course, on local conditions, but during these dates there is generally a great deal of planning, garden cleaning, and spading in the states named.

Spading is, of course, the biggest job in getting the garden ready for planting. But if you want your gar-den plot to be well prepared, spading it yourself is a good idea.

The secret is to take it easy. Spading is not hard work if done a little at a time. A space 30x50 feet can be spaded in a leisurely way in eight hours. One hour a day for eight days, and the job is done.

But first, be sure the soil is in condition to spade. Never work soil which is too wet; and if the soil is heavy don't wait until it becomes too dry. There is a point between extremes when even heavy clay can easily be lifted, and will crumble under a blow from the spade.

But getting back to the planning, the carefully planned and executed garden can be a thing of The beauty of vegetable planting lies in its order, with crops growing in straight parallel rows, squared with plot boundaries and not a weed to be seen.

Not only beauty, but efficiency is gained by such a layout. One quick trip with a wheel hoe down the straight aisle between two rows will destroy hundreds of weed sprouts, in a fraction of the time required to cultivate a disorderly garden.

Rows should be spaced with varying distances between them, depending on two factors: The needs of the crop, and the convenience of cultivation. In rich soil vegetables may be spaced more closely than in poor; but when spaced too close together, it is difficult to cultivate between the rows.

All this is a part of the planning the home town gardener should undertake during the next few weeks. A great deal of pleasure can be had by those who really like to see things grow. It's fun, too, to sketch your garden plot, planning what you'll plant row to row and how it will look in late spring. It is a practical idea because you'll know exactly how much seed and fertilizer you will need and the varieties of vegetables you can grow without crowding.

National Rabbit Week Offers New Menu Ideas

National Rabbit Week, February 17 to 23, is being promoted by na-

Many may recall World War II meat shortages. It was then that many learned domestic rabbit is a delightful and tasty dish. Since then the American public has kept the domestic rabbit high on its list of favorite meat courses.

The housewife may recall that only 8 per cent of a dressed domestic rabbit is bone, and there is very little other waste. Actually, about 82 per cent of a domestic rabbit is edible. This high per cent makes it an economical meat to serve. The meat is high in calories, an average of 855 per pound. For the housewife who is looking for a change in the menu, here is

Valentine's Day Is February 14

For those merchants in the home town who specialize in items for Valentine's Day, it is time to start advertising. February 14 isn't very far away.

By FARMHAM DUDGEON

(Editor's note: This is one of a series of articles prepared by the Editor of Western newspaper Union while on a reporting trip through Europe and the Near East.)

In the current build-up of strength against Russia, two major considerations project themselves into the thinking of the NATO leaders who are charged with the awful responsibility of meeting this threat to the peace of the free world. They are:

(1) Are supplies from the arsenal which is the United States reaching the "front" fast enough?

(2) Are the free Europeans functioning to the full extent of their abilities in terms of "selfbelp" in building up their defenses?

Finding the answers to these vital questions is not an easy job. In the limited time our group of observers had been granted for our survey, we had to rely for the answers on briefings by U. S. military and diplomatic personnel stationed in the countries through which we traveled, and on the official government viewpoint of the nations we We got the latter viewpoint from their top-flight officials. Progress Being Made

Sifting through the evidence presented by these sources, and supplementing it with our many off-the-record conversations with foreign newspapermen and just plain Mr. Foreign Citizen, we came up with the general feeling that, "all things considered," there is much positive progress being made toward the over-all objectives.

Without attempting to evaluate the current U. S. domestic controversy on the adequateness of milftary supply schedules, there is no secret about the fact that our leaders in Europe and the Near East would like to get materials at a faster clip.

However, on this point our military leaders are realistic. They are doing the best they can with what they have and can get. A year ago there were probably six fully and properly equipped "free-coundivisions in Europe. Today there are between three and four times that many.

Considering the situation in Korea, the long period of time required to switch production lines from tractors and plows to tanks and planes, and balancing these factors against the ability of certain of our allies to absorb mechanized warfare equipment, these leaders are inclined to describe the rate of incoming supplies as being "adequate in

There seems to be no single item which is needed more desperately than the others. Everything needed to fight a modern war is in demand: tanks, planes, communication equipment, etc. But the record of deliveries already made by United States under the Mutual Defense Assistance Program is impressive.

To attempt a generalization on the strength and vigor of effort of the unified armed force were not met, countries which we visited would be they agree with our SHAPE leadthe continent with the net impression that the effort being put forth is far better than might be expected.

Production Is Up Industrial production is considerably better than it was in the period immediately before World War II. Best figures indicate that production is about 130 per cent of 1938. Military forces are growing in those countries not restricted by treaty regulations.

Herbert Brownell of New York,

If the fighting broke out tomorrow all of the countries we visited, France, Italy, Turkey, Greece, West ern Germany, Yugoslavia and The Netherlands, would give good accounts of themselves with their limited military establishments. Not necessarily because of NATO ideals, but surely to defend their own coun-

Unstable governments have hindered arms production and held down military training in some of these countries, of that there can be no doubt. France is usually offered as Horrible Example No. 1 in the non-cooperative sweepstakes. Europeans like to say that the Frenchmen are "dragging their feet." SHAPE leaders recognize France as a special problem but they do not share the dismal viewpoint of the French military effort often attributed to that country by other Europeans.

France is fighting a man-sized war in Indo China. Much of her military strength is being diverted to that sector and while some critics will characterize this as a "Colonial" war rather than a struggle for the freedom of suppressed peoples, the hard fact is that 48,000 of her commissioned and non-commissioned officers are engaged on that battle front.

Our military leaders think the Frenchman will, and has the ability to put up a good fight if called upon. The French economy is rocky and the government is shaky, but when the chips fall, France is expected to do its part.

Italy can't do much about building up her forces until she is released from the restrictions of the World War II peace treaty.

Greece has just finished a horrible and bloody civil war against Communists and is ready to fight Communists again, if necessary. But the Greeks too want peace.

Yugoslavia Will Fight

Yugoslavia will fight Russia if necessary, but she won't fight communism. This country is itself communistic to the core. In fact, the "Jugs" claim a rather superior kind of communism. A good tough partner to have on your side but certainly not a partner to get enthusiastic about when you come to consider idealism and an appeal "to the hearts of men." It is still a police state despite Tito's assurances that he is opening the gates to all types of inquiry and investigation of his country's affairs.

Looking beyond the possibility of immediate war, the people we visited sense that their fate is closely tied to ours. They believe that the only language Russia understands is power. They know that the power Europe has to offset Russia without American help is not enough to deter the aggressor.

From this fact they conclude that there can be no turning back in present efforts to build up Western forces. While the 1951 goals for a foolhardy, yet you come away from ers, who contend that 1952 will be a crucial year.

BRUCE WHEELER looked across the restaurant table at his daughter Avis. He hadn't realized how much he missed her since he had sent her to Grand River to school. "Are you really glad you're going to Grand chicken placed before her. "We don't seem to talk the same language," Bruce said slowly.

"Please interpret. What's a 'big wheel' and a 'main spoke'? That scrim-something word, is it good?"
Avis smiled. "Dad, I forgot you're of the vintage of the terrific twenties! 'Big wheel' is someone important around High. And I'm important-a 'main spoke'! 'Scrimgrangorgeous' is swooning good." Avis turned to the chicken.

Bruce decided he wasn't hungry. For the thousandth time he wished Avis' mother could have lived . . To avoid bringing up Avis in a woman-less household he had sent her to Grand River.

Avis finished the chicken and whispered, "Can I have a float?" Bruce answered, "but "Sure," what is it?"

"This is the $64 business! A float is ice cream and coke mixed. Yummy!" Avis continued, "What are we doing after dinner? Frankie Martin's in town . . . Frankie's a sax man! Can we go, Dad? I mean, can we?"

Bruce nodded and felt dizzy. Maybe a show with Avis listening would give him time to impress the new language onto his mind.

A VIS openly applied lipstick (her mother would never have done that!) as Bruce saw a familiar face across the restaurant. It was Jim McKinnon, son of an old friend. Jim returned Bruce's nod casually then Jim's eyes widened. Jim was 20. Bruce was glad when he came to their table.

Bruce pulled out a chair and began pelting the boy with questions about his father and about business. Jim responded that his father was well, business was fine, the football games had been won, but all the time his eyes were on Avis.

It hit Bruce like a wallop, Jim hadn't come for man-talk . . . it was Avis!

And Avis!-Bruce squirmed. Her eyes were downcast. The sparkle was gone. Bruce knew that bashful ten year old's had more personality. Plainly Avis was mentally swooning over Jim.

Jim asked her, "How do you like Grand River High?" "Nice," Avis said softly.

"Do they have a good football

"It's-it's nice," Avis answered. She raised her eyes as far as Jim's hands like it was a terrific effort.

Bruce clenched his teeth. Didn't she know anything! If she put one tenth of the gayness of her conversation five minutes ago into talking with Jim, he would be interested "Do you like having dinner here," Jim asked, already searching the room for an escape. Avis took a long time to answer, and managed to raise her eyes to the level of Jim's. "It's so-so nice here," she said.

Bruce knotted his hands. Jim sighed with disappointment and politely asked Avis to dance. He probably expected her to say she couldn't push one foot ahead of the other. As they walked away Bruce closed his eyes-probably she would fall! If only her mother had lived. Maybe she could have taught Avis how to talk!

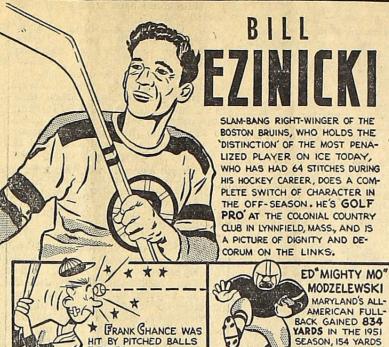

Then they were back and Avis was drawing on her coat and Jim was walking away.

"He's peachy!" Avis breathed. Bruce began, "There's something I should tell you. If you want a man to be interested you have to be Avis interrupted, "Jim? Oh, we've a date for tomorrow night, another for the fraternity party and he asked me to go to the Fall Prom too! Not bad?" she asked with lifted

"You'll do," Bruce whispered.

Durocher didn't care to comment on how Branca, King, Labine, Erskine, Podbielan and the others would make out.

Certainly Newcombe's absence gives the Giants a much better chance to win. Newcombe has never quite worked to his potential ability as his career down the hot stretch proved late last summer. But he could be good and might have found himself this year.

"What about Willie Mays?"

asked Leo. "Not a word about him," the Giant manager said. "But we'll have a good ball club," he said. "You were right in saying our ball club was in fine condition when we left St. Pete. I never had a ball club in better shape. We were rearing to go on the side. Our pitchers were all set. I was dead live better than you do." sure we'd get away flying. And then we drop 11 straight and almost fall | Who said 'Over'? out of the league. I asked Leo which of the Giants he expected to have a big year.

"Just about all of them," Durocher said. "I mean by that they'll play up to their ability. We have a real hustling club. You don't have to needle them. I know Maglie, Jansen and Hearn will have good years. I expect to have two more good working pitchers to help out. We'll miss Eddie Stanky, but we'll have a good man in his place. The rest of my infield is pennant material. So is our outfield. Watch Monte Irvin. There's one of the best."

e Here's the secret millions of folks have ern chewing-gum laxative. Yes, here why FERN-A-MINT'S action is so wonderfully different!

Doctors say that many other laxatives start their "flushing" action too soon . . . right in the stomach where food is being digested. Large doses of such laxatives upset digestion, flush away nourishing food you need for health and energy. You feel weak, worn out.

But gentle FEEN-A-MINT, taken as recommended, works chiefly in the lower bowel where it removes mostly waste, not good food! You avoid that typical weak, tired, run-down feeling. Use FEEN-A-MINT and feel your "peppy," energetic self—full of life! Get FEEN-A-MINT! No increase in price—Still 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢.
