Iosco Red Cross

Quota Increased

Due to the extra call on the Red Cross because of the tornado disaster, the quota for Iosco county has been raised $180.00. If you have not been contacted by a Red Cross worker, please send your donation to Mrs. J. F. Mark, chairman. "We depend on the generosity of the citizens to help us meet our quota."

Await Sentence on

Larceny Charge

Donald Brink and Charles Morrison of Flint were released yesterday (Thursday) afternoon from the county jail to await sentence by Judge Herman Dehnke at the June term of circuit court.

Both men had pleaded guilty to felony. The charge was larceny from an automobile. The theft occurred near Whittemore. Probation Officer Thomas Anderson will make an investigation of the two men before sentence is given.

4-H Clubs Hold Successful Show Here

Leaders will be Feted At Honorary Banquet Next Month

With 98 members exhibiting and completing their clothing projects, the job of selecting seven for the dress revue group was assumed by Miss Grace Mitchell, Midland County Home Demonstration Agent. Leaberta Townsend, Patricia Williams, Carol Strauer, Aileen Ward, Ginger Wilson, Charlotte Webb, and Lorene Bielby made up the dress revue group finally selected by Miss Mitchell. Patricia Williams was named dress revue delegate and will attend the State Dress Revue at East Lansing this June. If she cannot attend, her alternate Aileen Ward, will go. Leaberta Townsend was named second alternate.

Three possible State Show and State Fair exhibits (by written invitation from the State office) may be provided by Donna McCormick, Carolyn Rose and Leaberta Townsend.

This year we were pleased to find two Achievement Booths exhibited—one by Vida Burt and the second by Pavo Bloomquist. Each will receive a trip to Gaylord in July to compete for a place at the State Show in August.

Our tractor maintenance project was well represented by four medal winners in Richard Aulerich, James Curry, Pavo Bloomquist and William Wendi.

Robert Douglass of Hale had a coffee table that may find its way to the State 4-H Club show according to Bill Kirkpatrick, 4-H Club agent from Midland. Jack Burt's electrical sandpaperer not only useful to the 4-Hers in their Club but earned a chance to enter State competition at East Lansing. James Hankinson, Consumers Power Co. Farm Advisor named Jack Burt, Leslie Pfahl, Alvin Long, James Curry, DeWayne Durant, Francis Copper and Art Abbott for the electrical pin award group. Ralph Burt's club received first place money for their accomplishments while the Sherman electrical project group took third place money.

All the 4-H Club leaders in Iosco County will be featured at a banquet in their honor next month. They are most deserving of this and other recognition for the community service they have rendered Iosco County parents and children.

Pageant Presented At Club Meeting

Event Held Wednesday Evening at Legion Hall

The pageant "Parade of Dinnerware" was presented Wednesday evening by the Twentieth Century Club. The program was under the direction of the music committee, Mrs. Nyda Campbell Leslie and Mrs. Lulu Schaaf. The East Tawas Literary Club were guests.

This pageant was obtained through the courtesy of the Country Gentlemen League, which is sponsored by the Country Gentlemen, America's foremost rural magazine.

The committee is grateful to Miss Ruth for the dances and the lovely stage decorations.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. Wm. Ulman, Mrs. Maude Van Horn, Mrs. Nelson Ulman, Mrs. Don Huey, Mrs. Donald MacDonald and Mrs. A. G. Mallon.

The Sunday evening Lenten supper was well attended at the Tawas City Methodist church this week.

Two Orphan Robins Winter in Tawas

"Sissy" and "Dickie" are two pet robins, who have enjoyed the freedom of the Guy Lickfelt home during the past fall and winter. Orphaned in late August by a rain and wind storm which destroyed their nest, Mrs. Lickfelt raised them to maturity on bread, water and hamburger.

When first rescued by the Lickfelts, they were fed with an eyedropper and were kept in a heated box. Now they are saucy little pets that answer to their names. Mrs. Lickfelt stated that they planned to release them when weather permits.

Adult Education Group Hold First Class

The first General Adult Education Program at Plainfield Township Rural Agricultural School got under way at 8:00 p. m. Monday evening, March 17 when a committee of 17 people interested in a course in Commercial skills met with Philip Runkel Instructor and Gordon Helmbold, Superintendent to plan the arrangements for the class. All people over 16 years of age and out of school are eligible to attend the classes. The classes are open to both residents and non-residents of the school district. The residents of the school district. The classes will be held from 7:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. on the following Monday, March 24, 31, April 7, 14, 21, 28, and May 5, 12 and 19 and on Thursdays April 3, 10, 17 and May 1, 8 and 15.

Major emphasis will be given to typing and bookkeeping. It will be possible for adults to sign up for either one or both of these classes. Fees will be 50 cents for the typing course and the cost of a work book and possibly other supplies for the bookkeeping course. Typing students will need to supply their own paper which can be purchased at the school.

Classes will be held at the High School under Mr. Runkel's direction. The people signing up for both classes will spend an hour each evening in each class while the people signing up for only one class will spend both hours on the chosen subject.

It will be possible for other people interested to enter the class on March 24 and 31. Most of the expenses of the class will be reimbursed by state funds allocated for general adult education programs. So far, about 30 people have expressed interest in this class and it is expected others will enter the class during it's next two meetings.

Rites for W. J. Robinson Held Thursday

Willard J. Robinson, prominent former businessman here and at one time sheriff, died Monday in Detroit. He had been a resident of Detroit for the past 25 years.

Funeral services were held Wednesday at the Armstrong Funeral Home in Detroit. Interment was Thursday afternoon in the Veterans Cemetery at East Tawas. Last rites were under the auspices of Tawas City Lodge, F. & A. M. Masons, and Sheriff O'Farrell and his deputies acted as pall bearers and honorary pall bearers.

Mr. Robinson was born 78 years ago in Baldwin township. Mrs. Robinson was the former Nellie Brabon of this city. Before going to Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson had owned and operated the Iosco Hotel here.

In his earlier years Mr. Robinson, in partnership with the late Frank Stickney, operated a store at the site now occupied by the William Groff Market. Following this he was salesman for Gustin, Cook & Buckley, wholesale grocers, Bay City. After a number of years he re-entered business here, operating a grocery store, until his election as sheriff of Iosco county in 1920. In 1925 Mr. and Mrs. Robinson purchased the Hotel Iosco. In 1927 they moved to Detroit. During his life here Mr. Robinson took an active part in the civic affairs of the city and was highly esteemed by the people of the community. He was Past Master of Tawas City Lodge, No. 302, F. & A. M.

Surviving are the widow; two sons, George Robinson of Mio and William J. Robinson of Detroit; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Westfall of Hazel Park and six grandchildren.

'Yes' Vote Will Not Increase Tax Rate

Courthouse Tax Levy Would Remain 2 Mills

"The tax rate for the courthouse will be two mills," states Elmer Werth of East Tawas, chairman of the social courthouse committee, "not four mills as some people were of the opinion."

"If these two proposals do not pass at the April 7 election it is my opinion that our only means of building a courthouse with the present two-mill levy will be to increase the equalized valuation of the county for the balance of the period of the levy which is seven years."

A vote of "yes" on the two proposals at the election April 7 will enable construction of the courthouse now. Nearly every citizen of the county visits the courthouse during the year and knows its condition and recognizes the hazard to Iosco county's records. This was recognized three years ago when the courthouse building fund tax levy was adopted. The adoption of the present bond proposals will shorten the period that records vital to you are in danger.

Will Lecture Here on World Economics

ARTHUR MAUCH

DURWARD VARNIER

A lecture series on "World Economics and Resources," sponsored by the Iosco County Farm Bureau and the Tawas Kiwanis Club will be held in April at the Tawas City School Auditorium.

The program will be held Wednesday evening, April 2, and Wednesday evening, April 16, starting at 8:00 o'clock. No admission charge.

Durward B. Varnier, extension specialist, Michigan State College, and Dr. Arthur Mauch, professor of agriculture economics, Michigan State College, will discuss "Capitalism, Socialism, Communism—A comparison of the Economic Systems." These two men have presented this program to over 30,000 people in Michigan during the past year.

Varnier is a native of Texas and served in World War II. Dr. Mauch is a native of Nebraska and has served with the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the U. S. D. A.

"Our Land Resources, Russia's and the Rest of the World," is the subject of an illustrated lecture which will be given by Dr. Louis Wolfanger. He is an authority on world geography, soils and rural planning, and is research professor at Michigan State College.

Dr. Mauch and Varnier will be here April 2, and Dr. Wolfanger, April 16.

Celebrate Golden Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Long will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday at their home in this city.

Well known Iosco county residents, they were born in Iosco county and have resided on their farm in Tawas township and at their home in this city during most of their married life. Mr. Long is a son of the late B. M. Long and Mary Fries Long. Mrs. Long was the former Miss Emily Low, daughter of the late Daniel and Sarah McArdle Low. Both families were pioneers of Iosco county.

Mr. and Mrs. Long have three children, Glen of Tawas township, Alton and Donald of Tawas City and nine grandchildren. Their many friends congratulate them and wish them continued health and happiness.

Tawas City, Whittemore Win Band Honors

Bands Eligible for State Finals in East Lansing April 26

Tawas City and Whittemore High school bands received top awards in Class D division at the District Band and Orchestra Festival held last Friday at Standish.

Five schools were awarded I ratings at the festival. They included Standish, Oscoda, Roscommon in Class C, and Whittemore and Tawas City in Class D. Fourteen schools were represented with 500 musicians. Although bands entering for classification, work extremely hard to get a top rating, the chief purpose of the festival is to give the bands constructive criticism from expert musicians. Roy M. Miller, Wayne University, judged the concert work and Norman Dietz, Central Michigan College of Education judged the sight reading.

Because of the I Division rating the Tawas City and Whittemore bands are eligible to compete in the state finals to be held Saturday, April 26, at East Lansing.

Bruce Orr, band instructor, at Tawas City High, stated today that he was pleased with the fine showing made by his band. The band was commended for its appearance, selections played, spirit and musicianship in general.

Whittemore's smart appearing band received its share of fine compliments. This band has several sixth graders playing important roles in the organization.

Mrs. Bucholz Dies At Harrison

Services Held Here Sunday Afternoon

Mrs. Augusta B. Bucholz, pioneer resident of this city, passed away Friday, March 21, at the home of her son, Emil Bucholz, at Harrison. She was the wife of the late Julius Bucholz.

Mrs. Bucholz was stricken six years ago at her home here. It was at that time that she was taken to the home of her son at Harrison. She remained bedfast for six months after which she regained sufficient health to be about the home for another year, when she was again stricken and remained bedfast almost continuously, especially for the past three years. Old age was pronounced as the cause of death.

Augusta B. Bucholz was born in Germany, July 24, 1865, and came to this country with her parents, when she had attained the age of ten years, taking up residence here. She was married to the late Julius J. Bucholz and to this union eleven children were born, eight of whom survive. Daniel, who died in 1913 from injuries received when hit by a railroad train and two who died in infancy, preceded her in death.

She was a member of the Emanuel Lutheran Church and attended services regularly until illness forced her to leave this city. She gave unsparringly of her time to further the progress of her church of which she was proud.

She leaves to mourn her departure two daughters, Mrs. Martin J. Smith of Lansing, Mrs. Arthur G. Dettmer of Saginaw, six sons, Henry of Saginaw, Ernest of Kenosha, Wisconsin, John of Detroit, Emil of Harrison, Julius of Englewood, Colorado and Waldy of New Mexico; a host of grandchildren and great grandchildren, besides nieces, nephews and close friends.

Funeral services were held from the Emanuel Lutheran Church here with the Rev. Paul Heyn officiating and burial made in the Lutheran Cemetery.

Tawas City Baseball Club Elects Officers for 1952

Rollie Gackstetter was re-elected as manager of the Tawas City Baseball Club at a meeting held last Friday night at the City Hall. Eighteen potential ball players were on hand to organize for the coming season.

Other officers elected were: Fred Bublitz, treasurer; George Tuttle, secretary; and Harold Wegner, director. William Groff, Jr., was named as chairman on the scorecard committee.

At a league meeting Thursday night, John "Speed" Thompson of West Branch was elected President of the N. E. M. League. Other officers were Elmer Lambert, Finconing, vice president, Rolland Roe, Turner, treasurer and Floyd Pearlberg, secretary.

Twelve teams were represented and principal topic was a higher forfeit fee. Another league meeting was called for last night, Thursday, March 27 at Standish.

Gen. Eisenhower, Sen. Kefauver Win in New Hampshire Election

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Political dopesters, both Republican and Democrat, have spent days trying to read a national trend into the results of the New Hampshire preferential primary. No one can be sure how the results can be applied to the nation as a whole, but there are several noteworthy facts as a result of the election which the average home town voter can apply to his own area.

General Eisenhower's victory is an indication of the respect and popularity he commands from the average voter. This is important when it is remembered that Eisenhower backers made no all-out effort in the contest. On the other hand, Senator Taft stumped the state as if campaigning in the presidential race itself.

There is one obvious conclusion. Except for Ohio, and perhaps, a few other strongholds, Eisenhower appears to be the GOP's best vote getter. Whether or not he can get the nomination, of course, still remains in serious doubt. On the Democratic side of the picture, Senator Kefauver pulled something of an upset by defeating President Truman, who had the state's Democratic machine behind him. As a result, it is reasonable to assume that the Tennessee senator has a far greater vote getting potential than political forecasters realized, or President Truman is so unpopular the votes went to Kefauver as a protest of the Truman administration and policies.

It should be remembered, however, that results of the preferential contest are not binding on the state's convention delegates, either Republican or Democrat. Taft still retains a majority of the Republican convention delegates. Encouraged by the New Hampshire result, Eisenhower backers may now begin their all-out drive to corral delegates and thus the nomination.

Kefauver's victory in New Hampshire does not mean he is as popular in other sections of the country. Truman still has the nomination tied up if he wants it. Some observers believe, however, Truman will now hasten his decision about running, if he has not already made up his mind. By a quick announcement he might check growing Kefauver popularity.

DEADLOCK—With peace talks deadlocked over prisoner exchange and what nations will supervise the armistice, if one is ever negotiated, the big question on the battlefield is what effect spring will have on the two armies which have faced each other for nearly two years.

In this connection, Gen. James A. Van Fleet, U.S. Eighth Army commander, indulged in a little speculation. The commander reported the Chinese and Korean Reds have built up a force of 900,000 men in Korea. He added that the Reds have more men, weapons, and planes than the Allies.

But he does not believe the Reds will launch a spring offensive, but if they did he would welcome it and stop it cold.

"I am confident we could stop any attack the Communists might throw at us," he said. "It would be a good thing if we could get those people out of their foxholes and dugouts to mow them down the way we did last April and May."

As for possible Allied plans, the general said: "The future operations of the Eighth Army are still on the conference table at Panmunjom."

That was not saying very much, but it is generally believed there will be no all-out Allied offensive unless the truce talks collapse completely. If they should, then the people of the home towns of America must steel themselves for the explosion that of necessity must follow. It could mean an all-out war in Asia.

Meanwhile, the Department of Defense reported the latest American casualty total in Korea at 106,458. Of the total, 18,505 are known to have been killed.

TAXES—The all-powerful house-senate economic committee reportedly has agreed that there should be no general increase in tax rates this year. It was not exactly surprising news to the nation's taxpayers, since congressional opposition has been expressed from the moment President Truman announced his record $85,000,000,000 spending budget.

The committee went on record as favoring a $10,000,000,000 cut in the budget. By closing existing tax loopholes, the $10 billion budget cut, and with surpluses which go into government trust funds, the committee said it believed the budget could be balanced.

The President had asked congress to close the tax loopholes in his annual economic report, but had also asked an increase in taxation by whatever additional was necessary to boost government income by $5,000,000,000 a year.

AVERAGE FAMILY—A recent economic survey reveals there has been such a vast shift in income distribution in the United States in the past 20 years it can be classed as a social revolution.

The survey reveals the very poor have become fewer by two-thirds of their 1939 number. And the poor have become better off. Where three out of four families had incomes of less than $2,000 a year in 1939, only one out of three fell into that class ten years later.

The well-to-do and the rich have become more numerous. In the late thirties, one family in about 50 was in the $5,000 and over income class, and one out of 100 was in the $10,000 and over class. Ten years later, one family out of six was in the $5,000 and over class, and one out of twenty in the $10,000 and over class.

Over the years the very rich have become poorer because the rise in labor incomes has been accompanied by a decline in property incomes. The share of the upper 1 per cent of income receivers in total incomes has declined in 35 years from 16 per cent to 9 per cent.

NEW WATCH—A fantastic achievement in the science of time-keeping was revealed when Elgin researchers took the wraps off their latest development—a conventional sized wrist watch that stores its own source of electrical power and will operate more than a year before its tiny "energy capsule" expires.

The electronic watch of tomorrow is still in the laboratory but its sponsors claim it will eventually revolutionize personal timekeeping. Its motor, the smallest practical unit ever built, replaces the mainspring which has been used in all watches made the past 450 years. Also eliminated is the winding mechanism, since the energy capsule does that job.

The capsule itself, smaller in volume than a penny, discharges power at such a constant rate that the new watch will keep perfect time. And when it expires, a watchmaker will be able to insert a new one in a few minutes at nominal cost.

Some estimate of the infinitesimal size of Elgin's "power plant" was given in the description that 10,000,000 electronic watches could be operated from the power consumed by a single 100-watt light bulb. And eventually they hope to make it smaller still, applying the same principle to a woman's watch.

GAMBLING TAX

Yield Far Less Than Congress Expected

The internal revenue bureau reports the government's new gambling license and tax has yielded far less than expected when it was enacted. The total yield from November through January was a mere $1,455,393. When congress passed the license law, it was estimated that the annual yield would be 400 million dollars. Sales of the $50 a year occupation stamp in November, December, and January netted $484,429 from 16,029 professional gamblers. The 10 per cent tax on gross receipts amounted to $970,964. For December, the first full month to which the tax was applied, the return was $759,182. The 10 per cent tax on gross business for January has not been tabulated and is not included in the total gross receipts.

SETTING A NEW RECORD IN SUBMARINE HISTORY . . . The submarine U.S.S. Flying Fish, with Navy Secretary Dan A. Kimball at the controls, completed its 5,000th dive recently, setting a new record for American submarine dives. Leaving the submarine on the completion of the trip in New London, Conn., Kimball (center) congratulates Lieutenant Commander R. W. Phipps (right), commanding officer of the sub. Rear Admiral Stuart S. Murray, commander of the submarine force of the Atlantic, looks on. The United States navy has estimated that the submarine has spent the equivalent of nine months under water since being commissioned three days after Pearl Harbor day.

DOG SLED REPLACES CAR . . . Having grown tired of being forced to detour every time Outer Drive in Chicago, Ill., is turned into a slick skating rink by old man winter time, Trudy Dyer has decided to be one motorist to do something about the situation. So recently when it snowed and sleeted this was the picture: Trudy was Loopward bound behind a pack of huskies driven by an Alaskan, Dave Irwin. The desolate scene, which was made impassable by a recent storm, is generally packed with thousands of cars every morning. However, we don't look for Trudy's solution to enjoy wide popularity—enough to jam the street with sleds, anyway.

REVEAL SECRET MARRIAGE . . . This picture of Katy Rodolph, beauty of the U.S. Olympic ski squad, and husband Paul Wegeman was made in Oslo shortly after they disclosed their secret marriage. They married in February, 1951, in Raton, N.M., to culminate a high school romance. The marriage was kept secret because Wegeman is a naval cadet at Pensacola, Fla. At the same time the couple denied any romance between Miss Rodolph and Stein Eriksen, Norwegian skiing ace.

DODGERS SEE A TIRELESS PITCHER . . . In Vero Beach, Fla., Paul Waner (kneeling) is demonstrating his new pitching machine to Walter F. O'Malley, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers National League baseball team, and Manager Chuck Dressen, while other Dodgers look on. The scene is the Dodgers' spring training camp.

RATIFICATION . . . Dr. Antonio Fernos-Isern, Puerto Rico's commissioner in Washington, leaves a San Juan voting booth after voting for a new constitution for Puerto Rico. Constitution, enables people to govern selves, was ratified.

HIGH PROFIT DEAL . . . New York ship operator Mrs. Olga Konow tells Hoey committee how she set up a high profit deal by which U.S. war surplus tankers passed to Chinese-controlled interests. She made $100,000 commission.

National Sunday School Week Will Be Observed April 14-20

The director of the Chicago Crime Commission, Nathaniel Leverone, has been named national chairman of Sunday School Week, April 14-20. This all-faith activity seeks to give recognition to the continuing constructive work of America's Sunday schools and to urge greater attendance on the part of both parents and their children.

In accepting the chairmanship of Sunday School Week, Mr. Leverone, also director of the Chicago Better Business Bureau, said, "We must have men who will call attention to the fact that the truths expressed in the Declaration of Independence are just as true today as then. We must not take these truths for granted, we must work to preserve them, recognizing the great danger in the rapid spread of communistic atheism among our people. A truly great influence in making better Americans is the contribution of Sunday School Week."

It is significant that the Laymen's National Committee, a non-profit group of religiously concerned business men and women, selected the Director of the Chicago Crime Commission to lead the national observance of America's eighth annual Sunday School Week. The past year has seen a revelation of the moral decline of our youth through the fixing of athletic contests, the misuse of public confidence, and the increasing use of drugs and dope.

Mr. Leverone is the founder and chairman of the board of the Automatic Canteen Company of America. He is the father of the modern vending machine which idea he conceived after noting the robbery of poorly serviced machines which took coins and gave nothing in return. During World War II he was Director of Salvage for the WPB for the state of Illinois, and served on the Army Council as chairman of the Air Force Committee.

One hundred and sixty-seven years ago America's first Sunday school was founded in Virginia, the first such school anywhere in the New World. This was just five years after Robert Raikes established the world's first such school in Gloucester, England in 1780. Today there are better than 215,000 such schools across America which weekly bring a knowledge of God into the maturing minds of children, and of their parents.

Few organizations have become so much a part of the American landscape as has the local Sunday school. Frequently it was the first religious organization of any type to reach a new community and its service to the church during the past eight generations is unmeasurable.

During Sunday School Week this year men and women of all faiths and positions will be renewing their allegiance to the Sunday school of their choice. On April 20, parents will accompany their children to the local Sunday school and during this 7 day observance recognition will be paid to past accomplishments of the Sunday school movement in America.

Kiwanis International will sponsor a great, nation-wide register and vote campaign for the next nine months. The plan was adopted by the board of trustees during a three-day meeting. The campaign has been named the "Ballot Battalion" and was presented to Kiwanis clubs throughout the nation during the month of March.

In announcing the plan, Kiwanis president Claude B. Hellmann, a Baltimore, Maryland utilities executive said, "We are a service organization and we think it is high time for service club members to get into politics. Service clubs in general have been shy of the word 'politics' for much too long. Americans are kidding themselves if they think they are living under a representative government, when less than 50 per cent of the eligible voters go to the polls. Bad officials are elected by good citizens who do not vote and the breakdown of morals in government is largely due to our own neglect. We can and will do something about it!"

Although the "Ballot Battalion" plan is comprehensive, it is a simple one. More than 3,400 Kiwanis clubs will be urged to spearhead the formation of a "Ballot Battalion" in their local communities. All patriotic community organizations, both men's and women's groups, will be asked to join the movement. A general chairman and an executive committee will be elected during the initial meeting of the "Ballot Battalion." Action committees will be comprised of members of all participating groups.

The Objectives of the "Ballot Battalion" are three-fold. They are: To conduct community-wide campaigns to register every eligible voter; to assist the general public in obtaining the views of all candidates, and the principles for which they stand; and finally, to sponsor non-partisan Get Out The Vote campaigns on a community-wide basis, utilizing all available media and community leadership in promoting such campaigns.

Discussing the organization plan, President Hellmann said, "The 'Ballot Battalion' is much, much bigger than any one man or one organization. To be successful, it must be comprised of every civic-minded group within the community. Obviously, someone must spearhead the program and enlist the cooperation of other groups within the community. Kiwanis clubs are non-partisan and will provide the initial leadership. Once the 'Ballot Battalion' is formed, it must not be used to identify or glorify any one particular group. It will be an opportunity for every loyal, worthwhile community organization to join hands with others in a successful campaign to develop an informed and active citizenry."

Officers of Kiwanis International also announced that they will cooperate with other national organizations in the preparation and use of display and publicity materials to implement the register and vote campaign. This will avoid duplication of efforts and will make it possible to utilize existing funds for the organizing program, it is said. They further stated that the "Ballot Battalion" organization handbooks will be available for use by any local or national group.

Fathers' Day Is Third Sunday in June

The third Sunday in June—June 15 this year—is Father's Day. On that day father can settle back for an overwhelming show of family affection and bask in the glowing tributes which will be paid him.

It will be the nation's 42nd annual observance of the day which was founded by a woman and has been perpetuated mostly through women's efforts.

The founder was Mrs. John B. Dodd of Spokane, Wash., who is credited with originating the day as a tribute to her Civil War veteran father who successfully reared six motherless children.

In succeeding years, Pop may have been taken for granted on most days, but on Father's Day the house, the car, and the family have been his to command. It is a good day for any home town to look forward to and observe.

Besides being a day for paying respect to father, Fathers' Day is now classed with Mothers' Day, Children's Day and Christmas as an occasion for giving gifts.

It is, therefore, a perfect occasion for the home town merchant who deals in men's clothing, sporting equipment and the like for special promotion and extra advertising in the home town newspaper. Such promotion will pay off in larger sales.

Although business is good throughout the nation, there is a general trend of a slight letdown in volume. Here is an opportunity for the home town merchant to increase his sales.

Beware Poor Land

Experience has taught the veteran quail hunter, regardless of the lack of thought he may have given the matter, to go along with Louis Bromfield's observation, "Poor land produces poor crops, poor stock, and poor people," might well be amended to include "poor game." Given the opportunity he will, almost instinctively, select as his hunting territory a fertile farm, offering ample food and a diversity of game habitat.

We believe it was Dr. R. W. Eschmeyer, the noted fish biologist, who jokingly said the way to spot a farm pond that is full of fish is to notice how well the farm-houses and barns are painted. The better the paint job, the better the fishing. His reasoning was that if the buildings are well maintained, it is because the farmer is prosperous. If the farmer is prosperous, it is because his land is fertile. If the land is fertile, the pond also will be fertile, and the fertile pond will support the most fish. We can't report on how his theory works out in practice, but it sounds logical.

Weeds Not Enough

It is self-evident that non-fertile land cannot produce the luxuriant growths and abundant food supply requisite for carrying a large quantity of game through the critical winter and breeding seasons. Poor land, especially if it has been overgrazed, is highly productive of weeds, but weeds alone are not enough to satisfy fully the needs of game birds and animals. They are fine for mice, but who wants to go mouse hunting?

Less self-evident is the fact that foods grown on neglected worn-out land are deficient in minerals and vitamins that are as important to animals as they are to man. Their degree of importance is indicated by the fact that some animals can detect their presence, or note their absence, in the food they eat. For instance, a hog given free choice will eat from a pile of corn raised from good soil in preference to an equally sized pile raised on a poor farm. Of further importance is the possibility that living in poor habitat and under general adverse conditions alters breeding habits and reduces the reproductive capacity of animals. Leopold suspected this; later observations lend credence to his suspicions. Quite possibly the two phenomena are related.

About Predators

Predator control may help to protect our small game but if we concentrate our attention on killing the predators we should not overlook the fact that our quail or grouse may be suffering most from lack of proper food or cover—the biologist might say that the habitat is inadequate.

Such measures as bounties, artificial propagation, closed seasons, game sanctuaries have not provided the answers to proper management of our game and fish, though they may continue to be useful tools of the wildlife manager for special situations. Any useful tool for land or wildlife management should not be overlooked, nor should the hunting and trapping of foxes and other predators by farmers and others be discouraged where overpopulations exist. The problem is a big one and all interested people can do their part.

Nearly everyone who enjoys getting out-of-doors has the urge to do something for the wildlife. Some feed songbirds, some attend conservation classes or help with projects, others belong to sportsmen's clubs, while many find their biggest thrills in listening to barbershop stories. Nevertheless, the interest is there. When we are interested and enthused we want action and it is human nature to act upon the obvious first. Too often, we tackle the symptoms rather than the disease, and in our haste, we are too human to realize, or admit, that man himself is often responsible for his own misfortune on this earth.

Spoon Hooks

When using a spoon hook as a casting lure it is well to select one not too large as the air and water resistance hampers accurate and easy casting, and retrieving is difficult. Spoon size 3 to 5 are generally fine for pickerel and northern pike, or large wall-eyed pike. The spoon for muskellunge should be 7 or 8. Larger sizes are better adapted for trolling. A line that is too light will cause additional twisting, so it is well to employ a line of from 18 pound to 20 pound test when casting.

Changing Plugs

This tip is particularly for bass fishermen who like to angle for these wary fellows after dark. Make a double loop in the end of your line about six inches long and then tie another knot in the end of the loop so as to leave a small loop about a quarter inch long. To attach the plug, pass the small loop through the eye of the plug, then lift the large loop over the plug and pull tight. To remove the plug merely pull the small loop.

TELEVISION DISCOVERS MAIN STREET

New Electronic Science Born in Cottage

(This is the last of a series of three articles on the coming of a nationwide television service.)

To the people who will receive this new ultra high frequency television service, various considerations will govern their selection of home equipment.

In some areas, under the FCC plan, only UHF channel will be received. Present set owners, who have perhaps been picking up a distant VHF signal, will be able to purchase a simple and inexpensive fixed channel tuner to go with their present sets.

For residents of areas where several UHF channels can be received, full range tuners have been designed.

In many new television areas, the projected coverage will include both types of service. And combination UHF-VHF sets are likely to be the industry's answer. These sets will probably gravitate toward the major population centers since the allocation plan envisages both services in all but three of the country's 50 major market areas.

In addition to tuners and combination sets, the public will probably have an opportunity to purchase various types of antenna for UHF reception. In the course of their long experimentation, RFC engineers designed numerous effective receiving antenna of remarkable varied shape. One of the simplest is known as a "bow-tie" and looks just like an enlarged version of this male neckwear. Another is known as a "Double V", and consists of two sets of dipoles (metal rods cut to a critical length) attached to a pole in the form of two V's. There is a parabolic antenna, with metal bars attached to a curving semi-circular shaft, and there is an antenna with the colorful name of "Yagi."

These are the antenna which in a few years might dot the rooftops of farms and ranches and city residences. When new stations begin to go up, the industry will undoubtedly standardize on a few of many experimental antenna models, giving full consideration to both performance and sightliness.

The industry has already made formidable gains in overcoming the problem of designing UHF station transmitters with sufficient power to provide required area coverage. The first test models were one kilowatt, but units of from 10-12 kilowatts are now being tested.

Ample Power

New gain antenna have also been developed, and the industry is looking toward UHF antenna that can radiate 200 kilowatts—more than ample power to meet nearly all conditions.

Of course, the UHF service has its limitations like every other service. UHF transmissions, like VHF, are dependent on line of sight between transmitting and receiving antennas. In addition, they are more directional and the location of transmitter sites is of prime importance. Mountains, hills and other physical impediments can block effective transmission.

In addition to promising television to presently vacant areas, UHF offers new hopes for thousands of set owners who live in "fringe" areas. These areas are on the outskirts of the effective telecast coverage from present VHF stations.

To obtain a home picture in these fringe areas, towering antennae are frequently required, and often the pictures are too faint and "noisy," and lack the contrast required for enjoyable home viewing.

SUCCESS HILL—The lofty antenna of the Bridgeport UHF station towers over the white frame station house at the left. In the foreground is a station wagon equipped with UHF receiver and portable antenna. It has been used to test signal strength throughout the Bridgeport area. Station KC2XAK is the first and only UHF station in the country to operate on a regular daily basis. It is located on the crest of Success Hill on Bridgeport's outskirts.

New stations are the obvious answer to fringe viewing, but if they are VHF stations they might conflict with the signal, however faint, from the more distant VHF transmitters.

With UHF, however, new stations with new channels can go in the very shadow of existing transmitters and a clear, bright picture can be enjoyed by everyone.

A small Cape Cod cottage which sits atop a wooded hill on the outskirts of Bridgeport, Conn., is the cradle of a new electronic science. For two years, field tests on the transmission of television signals in the upper regions of the air waves have centered around the cottage. Out of these tests has come a new system of video transmission that will soon have a very real impact on the life of residents of Tazoo City, Miss., and Thief River Falls, Minn., and Wolf Point, Mont.

Center of Interest

Despite its lack of pretension, the cottage has been a prime attraction in recent months for government leaders, for scores of executives in the radio and television industry, for some of the nation's outstanding electronic scientists, engineers and technicians. Even the Connecticut State Police have been lured there for extra-curricular duties.

Since December 30, 1949, the little cottage on Success Hill has housed the first and only Ultra-High Frequency television station in the nation which operates on a regular daily basis. It has been the field headquarters for the television industry's march into the untapped UHF band.

The station was built by the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Company as the culminating move in a long campaign to find sufficient space in the air waves for a national television service. A lofty 250-foot UHF transmitting tower was erected outside the cottage. The interior was stocked with television transmitting equipment. Inside, it looked much like any other station, but its special tubes and circuits were designed for UHF rather than VHF channels now standard for video transmissions.

Bridgeport was picked for the field tests because the undulations of its terrain make line-of-sight television transmission difficult. In addition, it lies in a "fringe" television area, picking up remote signals from New York and New Haven.

Under these extreme test conditions, the Bridgeport station, which was given the experimental designation of KC2XAK by the Federal Communications Commission, began picking up the video signals of Station WNBT, the National Broadcasting Company's New York outlet which beams off the Empire State antenna. These signals, in turn, were rebroadcast via UHF to Bridgeport area.

To pick up this broadcast, engineers of the RFC Victor Division designed and built 50 UHF experimental sets, and 50 tuners to permit present set owners to receive both UHF and VHF telecasts.

The test equipment, together with various experimental receiving antennas, was installed in local homes within a 25 mile radius of Success Hill. In about half the homes, there were no receivers and service men installed both UHF and VHF antennas. This permitted comparison of the pictures picked up direct from New York and New Haven with those beamed over the Bridgeport experimental unit.

There were hundreds of offers of voluntary cooperation from residents of Bridgeport and its suburbs. The homes selected for the tests were carefully spotted to obtain a full area study. Engineers made regular rounds of the test homes over a period of months to analyze the pictures and to compile reception ratings.

But even this was not enough for a full picture. A station wagon was equipped with precise measuring equipment and receivers, and a truck was fitted out with a collapsible antenna that could be quickly elevated.

Making Signal Patterns

Up and down parkways, highways, country roads and lanes, the unique electronic caravan rolled along with police cars fore and aft.

Nearly all of the television industry moved into Bridgeport on the invitation of RCA. Sixty-four manufacturers, in fact, descended on the industrial town to use the UHF signals. In hotel rooms, homes, stores and display rooms the technicians of the industry designed and set up equipment that would pick up the unwavering signal from Success Hill. They developed tuners to be attached to present sets; they perfected new antennas; they devised effective equipment for combined UHF-VHF reception.

Members of the Federal Communications Commission, headed by Wayne Coy, then chairman of the FCC, visited the workshop. RCA engineers and technicians maintained a steady flow of information into the Commission headquarters, and on the basis of this technical data the plan for a national service began to take shape. In August and September of 1951, Mr. Coy and more than a hundred engineers from TV stations throughout America attended demonstrations of the latest UHF equipment. They saw a clear, flickerless picture brought in by a variety of tuners.

At last UHF was ready. Mr. Coy spoke of 3,000 television stations in America "soon," with two-thirds to three-quarters in the UHF band. "I am sold on UHF," the FCC chairman declared, and the industry echoed his words.

Service to Mankind

Today, there are 2,400 AM and 680 FM radio stations in America. Daily broadcasts reach 95 per cent of the country. More than 105,000,000 radio sets have been sold. There are more than 53,000,000 radio equipped homes. It can be claimed, without exaggeration, that in a quarter-century radio has become as much a household utility as the electric light or the telephone.

All signs indicate that television will acquire a comparable status in the next decade. The industry, in typical private enterprise fashion, has gambled millions on the perfection of VHF and the development of UHF. It has paved the way for small-town television, and the speed with which the small towns capitalize on this opportunity is in part a local question.

Under FCC procedure, television station license applications will be accepted for a fixed period. It is then the responsibility of local people—businessmen, educators, newspaper publishers, bankers, labor and religious leaders—to see that local license applications are filed and that the opportunity does not go by default.

The government won't build the stations. The broadcast industry operates under the old American tradition of free enterprise. Industry can provide the equipment, the government can provide the license, but the people of America—must make the final decision on whether their towns will be linked to the world via television.

SHORT STORY With All The Fixings By Michael Tiff

AS USUAL, stepping out of the exclusive Bankers and Manufacturers Club building, I felt that I had a lot to say to the world in general and to my favorite shoe-shine boy, Mickey McKenzie, in particular. In fact, I was overjoyed to see him coming toward me through the crowded sidewalk, with his business stock and equipment housed in a crudely constructed box with a shoe rest. The feeling of satisfaction within me, born of recent pyramidal successes in the stock market, glowed with pleasant warmth; and I wanted presently to transmit that glow to Mickey himself.

3-Minute Fiction

"Hi, Mr. Crowley. Shine?" "You bet, Mickey. How's your business?" "Okay, Mr. Crowley. How's your business?" "Okay, Mickey."

I watched him again with satisfaction. I approved of the way he worked, with his long sandy hair falling from one side to the other as his slight body swayed to his task. Noticing Mickey's curious glances at the other members of the club walking into or out of the building in greater numbers than usual, I informed him, "Today is the anniversary—the hundredth—of the Bankers & Manufacturers' Club. Nice sunny day for it, too."

"Sure's an old club. I once belonged to a club, too. It was a hiking club. But I got plenty of walking all day looking for customers, so I lit out of it."

I was suddenly interested in his personal life—and I was positive Mickey had one. "I suppose, after your day's work is done, you can't wait until you're in a movie theatre watching your favorite Western hero? Eh, Mickey?"

I expected, when he raised his rather large blue eyes, to see them aglow with sudden fire. Instead they were quite calm, perhaps skeptical. "The movies are oke, Mr. Crowley, but they're mostly for kids."

"TELL ME, Mickey, what do you like to do besides shining shoes?"

"Eat, Mr. Crowley. Just eat. My specialty's hot dogs and—fishcakes. But gimme hot dogs any time—with lots of mustard and onions and saurkraut. 'Course I go for fishcakes too. But hot dogs is my specialty. When I get home mom's got potatoes and beef stew and that's okay with me. But I always sneak down to the hot dog stand on the corner with two or three nickels—sometimes as many as six—and get my self hot dogs with all the fixings."

"Guess I'm just about the hot-dog-eatenest guy in the city. Gosh! Guess I'm always hungry for 'em. Mom says I got a barrel for a stomach, always going after eats the way I do. But mom's a pretty good sport anyway for letting me have some of the nickels I take in over the day."

I could tell, by the rap expression on Mickey's gold-flecked face, that he was mentally immersed in those delicious frankfurters, with "all the fixings"—concocted by this genius Mike. That small tongue of his seemed to move faster as if it were curling about a portion of his favorite delight. I could almost taste with him that incomparable flavor, laden with the essence of onions, mustard and saurkraut. But Mickey was straightening up and packing his brush, his rags, his cans of polish back into the crude little box. His small grimy palm hovered toward me and with a burst of generosity, I placed on the little hardened palm not one nickel but three. I watched the freckles for the sign of joy. But a man happened to pass close by me at the moment, one of my fellow club members, and he placed a brotherly hand on my shoulder.

"Fred," he called me by my first name, of course, "don't you forget the dinner tonight. Hundredth anniversary of the club, you know. And it's going to cost you just one hundred dollars for your plate, whether you come or not. Cheap at that."

One hundred dollars a plate! I saw Mickey pocket the three nickels I had given him and when I looked into his eyes, they stared back at me, very wide and very blue, and I had nothing to say.

American Farmer Big User of Electricity

A startling ten-year rise in farm electrification has made the American farmer one of the nation's biggest users of electric power. The farmer is now receiving more than twice as much farm high-line service as in 1940. Moreover, the amount of electricity used by farmers has increased nearly five times, and the average use per farmer has more than doubled.

American farms are now using in excess of 15 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year, while in 1940 they consumed only 3 1/2 billion. In addition, the number of farms serviced by electric power—about two million in 1940—has leaped to approximately five million. The average kilowatt hours of power used per farm, exclusive of irrigation projects in the West, has increased from about 1000 ten years ago to 2300 today.

The farmer is just beginning on the road toward complete rural electrification. Many new electric devices will be aiding the farmer in his struggle for higher output. Things like automatic poultry feeders, crop-drying equipment, automatic barn cleaners, silo unloaders, wagon unloaders, and feed handling equipment are all a part of the American farmer's future.

I can't eat this ox-tail soup. The tail is still wagging. Of course, our tails come from contented oxen.

200 Honored at 4-H Achievement Day Last Thursday and Friday

Achievement Day for 1952 is history, but with it went a new chapter for Isosco County's 4-H Club members and leaders.

Not only were 200 4-Hers honored for their Achievements but a first class job of leader planning and conducting a program was carried on by our 4-H Club leaders. It was planned and conducted by them from start to finish.

With parent cooperation, the club members finished their projects. That was necessary to give rise to such a large Achievement Day program. At the January 4-H Club Council meeting, President, Fred Pfahl appointed a committee chairman to head the planning of the Achievement Day program.

Mrs. Marvin Davenport so appointed, was given the privilege of selecting those leaders to work with her. That committee made Achievement Day run so smoothly. It consisted of 4-H Club leaders Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Burt, Mrs. O. J. Westcott, Mrs. Fred Pfahl, Mrs. DeWayne Hall, Mrs. Carl Libka, George Strauer, Pavo Bloomquist, Mrs. Herbert Wendt, Franklin Bischoff and Waldo Curry, Jr. After this committee met in February, each member assumed their part of the program. Mrs. O. J. Westcott acted as Mistress of Ceremonies while the script for the Dress Revue was written and re-written by Mrs. DeWayne Hall. Mrs. Herbert Wendt acted as narrator.

Many thanks go to Mrs. Delbert Albertson for her assisting. Mrs. Wendt on entries while Mesdames James Blust, Ted Kyser, Fred Woischeske assisted with exhibits. Need we tell you more when we say each did their part to make this Achievement Day one to be remembered? We should extend a special thanks to Mrs. Reuben Edie and Harold Clark for their contribution as "Ma and Pa."

How did you like the program? I'm sure our leaders would like to know. The demonstration teams performed admirably. Pavo Bloomquist, Jim Laidlaw, Joan Wendt, Neil Abbott, Melvin Timreck, Jack Burt, Herb Wendt and Charles Wilson presented their demonstrations Thursday night before a group of 117 persons. Thursday evening the Talent Acts included Friendship Community Club act and Art Abbott and Ruth Meyer of the Tawas Community Club.

Friday's program included the dress revue (Television style), demonstration by Charles Wilson and Herb Wendt, Carol Runyan and Bernice Siegrist, Grant Wood and Leslie Pfahl.

Our talent acts on Friday evening found the Friendship 4-H Club, Joan Bielby and Mary Jane Douglass, Carol Runyan and Judy Grabow, Gloria and Bernice Siegrist, Aileen Ward and David Fortune providing the entertainment.

Mayor George Myles of Tawas City presented the 4-H Club leaders to the audience at the end of the program.

Now 4-Hers don't give up. Continue on with your community club meetings and summer project activities. The best is yet to come with 4-H Club camp, Gaylord, our County Fair and State 4-H Club Show all scheduled between now and September. Any of our readers interested in establishing a 4-H Club program in their community drop me a line in the Federal Building, East Tawas.

—Marvin Davenport, 4-H Club Agent.

New Books

Among the new books in the Isosco County Library this month, there are four new books for Lenten reading.

"God So Loved the World," by Elizabeth Goudge is the life of our Lord from the time of the angels appearing to Mary, until the Resurrection.

"The Ascent to Truth," by Thomas Merton describes the journey towards the highest summit of knowledge or the ultimate truth; God. In this sense the book begins where the "Seven Story Mountain" left off.

"Greatest Story Ever Written," by Fulton Oursler retells the beloved stories of the Old Testament as a single narrative.

"Cookbook for Fridays and Lent," by Irma Rhode gives a wide variety of nutritious and interesting menus for meatless days, planned to fit the budget of the average American housewife.

Many good books are to be found on the library shelves for Lenten reading. Some of the titles are: "Here I Stand," lift of Martin Luther, by Bainton. "How to Read the Bible," by Goodspeed. "In Search of God," and "One God," by Fitch. "Abundant Living," by Jones. "Theresa, Saint of the Little Way," by Keyes. "Seven Story Mountain" and "The Waters of Siloe," by Thomas Merton. "Greatest Story Ever Told" and "Modern Parables," by Fulton Oursler. "New Guide Posts," by Vincent Peale. "Return to Religion," by Link. "Peace of Mind," by Liebman. "Quest of the Historical Jesus," by Schweitzer. "Lift Up Your Heart," and "Peace of Soul," by Fulton Sheen.

When no dew follows a hot day rain may be expected.

E. Thompson, deceased, and Robert W. Rumford and Walter W. Smith, or their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, Defendants.

At a session of said court held at the courthouse in the City of Tawas City in said county on the 20th day of March, 1952.

Present: Honorable Herman Dehnke, Circuit Judge.

On reading and filing the bill of complaint in said cause and the affidavit of Herbert Hertzler attached thereto, from which it satisfactorily appears to the court that defendants, The Banking Commission of the State of Iowa, First Iowa State Trust and Savings Bank of Burlington, Iowa, and Iowa State Savings Bank of Burlington, Iowa are not residents of the State of Michigan but are residents of the State of Iowa and that the other defendants above named or their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, are proper and necessary parties defendant in the above entitled cause, and

It further appearing that after diligent search and inquiry it cannot be ascertained, and it is not known whether or not said other defendants are living or dead, or where any of them may reside if living, and, if dead, whether they have personal representatives or heirs living or where they or some of them may reside, and further that the present whereabouts of said other defendants are unknown, and that the names of the persons who are included therein without being named, but who are embraced therein under the title of unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, cannot be ascertained after diligent search and inquiry.

On motion of Herbert Hertzler, attorney for plaintiffs, it is ordered that all said defendants and their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns, cause their appearance to be entered in this cause within three months from the date of this order, and in default thereof that said bill of complaint be taken as confessed by the said defendants, their unknown heirs, devisees, legatees and assigns.

It is further ordered that within forty days plaintiffs cause a copy of this order to be published in the Tawas Herald, a newspaper printed, published and circulated in said county, such publication to be continued therein once in each week for six weeks in succession.

HOW'S YOUR INSURANCE?

WHAT ARE TODAY'S FACTS ABOUT NEW CAR ENGINES AND POWER STEERING?

LAST YEAR Chrysler introduced its new FirePower V-8 engine, and America's first passenger-car full-time power steering. Both new ideas "took hold" in a big way.

Today, others are announcing "new engines" and "power steering" . . . but with some basic differences worth keeping in mind if you're buying a new car.

First: about "new engines." The fact is, a really new engine design happens only once in a great while. It did happen in the FirePower V-8. Its 180 h.p. was only incidental to its basic new design. Its key idea is a hemispherical combustion chamber, which makes even non-premium gasoline develop more usable power than other designs can get from premium fuel.

Only Chrysler engineering has so far mastered this design. Several cars do have some power increase, in terms of previous designs. The important fact is that FirePower is not a "warmed-over" engine, but brand new in performance, construction, and efficiency.

In power steering, too, there are basic differences.

Chrysler uses hydraulic power, always in effect, to do two things. First, it does 4/5 the steering work as you turn the wheel. Second, we've cut the amount of wheel turn needed by over 1/3.

Parking or cruising, you get more and easier control than ever before. In sand, snow, or ruts, the hydraulic power is always there to keep the front wheels from "steering back" at you. You get the same amount and feel of control all the time . . . full-time ease and full-time safety.

Actually, the differences, both in engine performance and in steering safety and ease are impossible to put in words . . . but just as impossible not to feel the moment you get into a Chrysler and drive it! Why not see your Chrysler dealer and do that, soon?

State Traffic Toll Last Year Hits New Peak

The record number of 176,587 accidents that occurred on Michigan streets and highways last year resulted in more than 50,000 casualties—1,640 deaths and 48,418 injuries. It was the worst toll in the history of the state, according to the 1951 traffic experience report released by State Police Commissioner Donald S. Leonard.

The death total was the highest since 1941 and the sixth highest recorded. Injuries and accidents climbed to new peaks, accompanying the sharp upward trend in the number of licensed drivers, motor vehicle registrations and miles of travel which began at the close of World War II.

Deaths increased 35, or two percent, over the 1,605 fatalities in 1950. Injuries increased 2,684, or six percent, over 45,734 and accidents went up 14,837, or nine percent, over 161,750.

There were 3,065,447 licensed drivers, 2,560,652 motor vehicle registrations and an estimated 23 and one-half billion miles of travel in 1951. These totals represented increases of 198,000 drivers, 121,059 registrations and nearly one and one-half billion miles of travel over the previous year.

Although the death toll was one of the highest on record, the death rate was at an all-time low, or 6.98 per million miles of travel. The previous low was 7.17 in 1949. In 1950 the rate was 7.29.

The average daily traffic toll for 1951 was 4.5 persons killed and 133 injured in 484 accidents. Daily travel exceeded 64,000,000 miles.

The number of fatal accidents, 1,405, was exactly the same in both 1951 and 1950, but three or more persons were killed in each of 40 accidents last year.

Rural areas accounted for 68 per cent of all deaths, but only 39 per cent of the injuries and 17 per cent of the accidents. Increased accident severity in rural areas is attributed largely to the higher speeds traveled on the open highway.

During the last 10 years, 1942 through 1951, 13,616 persons were killed and 351,476 injured in 1,196,604 accidents throughout the state.

Election Notice Monday, April 7, 1952, Courthouse Bonding Proposition

RESOLUTION

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors, Iosco County, Michigan

Whereas in conformity with the resolution passed by this Honorable Board in the October session 1951, authorizing the courthouse proposition to be submitted to a vote of the people on the 7th day of April, 1952 at the general election in the city of Tawas City and city of East Tawas and the city of Whittemore, and also authorizing a special election to be held at each of the townships of the county;

And whereas this Honorable

Board authorized the Prosecuting Attorney to prepare the ballots and notices in proper form;

Now therefore this committee submits the following forms for ballots and notices for the approval of this board.

1. Bonding Proposition

Shall Iosco County, Michigan, borrow the sum of Two Hundred Fifty Thousand ($250,000.00) Dollars, and issue its bonds therefore for the purpose of constructing and equipping a new Courthouse building?

2. Millage Increase Proposition

Shall the limitation on the total amount of taxes which may be assessed against all property in Iosco County, Michigan, for all purposes except payment of obligations incurred before December 8, 1932, be increased as provided by Section 21, Article X of the Constitution of Michigan by two tenths (.2%) percent (2 mills) of the assessed valuation, as equalized, of all property in the County for a period of twenty (20) years, from 1952 to 1971, inclusive, for the sole purpose of paying the principal and interest of bonds of said County in the aggregate principal sum of Two Hundred Fifty Thousand ($250,000.00) Dollars to be issued, if authorized by the qualified electors of said County, for the purpose of constructing and equipping a new Courthouse building in said County; this increase to supersede and rescind all increases in the tax rate limitation heretofore authorized by the electors?

3. Election Notice

To the Electors of Iosco County, Take Notice That at a general election to be held on the 7th day of April, 1952 at the city of Tawas City, the city of East Tawas, and the city of Whittemore, and at a special election to be held at each of the townships of Iosco County the proposition as to whether or not the County of Iosco shall vote the necessary millage and borrow the necessary funds for the construction of a new Courthouse building shall be submitted to the electors.

VOTE 'YES' ON BOTH Court House Proposals

This WILL NOT CHANGE your tax rate. It is only an extension of the present two-mill building fund.

Your Supervisors have endorsed the new Court House. THEY KNOW IT IS GREATLY NEEDED.

To the Voters of Iosco County:

I hereby submit my reasons for voting "Yes" on both Court House Proposals April 7, 1952, with due apologies for my murderous slaughter of "The Deacon's Masterpiece," by Oliver Wendell Holmes,

Victor J. Anderson, Supervisor, Alabaster Township

IOSCO COUNTY'S MASTERPIECE

Have you heard of the wonderful one-hoss shay. That was built in such a logical way that it ran a hundred years to a day? And then—of a sudden it—ah, but stay. I want to compare this shay with our Court House today.

Now in building of wooden Court Houses, I tell you what. There is always somewhere a weakest spot—

In foundation, roof, in vault or till, in panel, or crossbrace, or floor, or sill, in staircase or air space—lurking still, find it somewhere you must and will—Above or below or within or without—And that's the reason, beyond a doubt, that our Court House breaks down, but doesn't wear out.

Do I tell you, I rather guess She has been a wonder, and nothing less! Coils grew horses, beards turned gray, Whittemore and Sutherland dropped away; Children and grandchildren—where are they?

But there stands the old Court House still Fresh as a daisy, on seven-mile hill. Nineteen hundred—it came and found The old Iosco Court House still strong and sound.

Nineteen hundred, increased by ten "Handsome Building" they called it then.

Nineteen hundred and twenty came—Running as usual, much the same, Thirty and Forty, at last came thru—And then came Fifty, and Fifty-Two. Little of all we value here, Wakes on the morn of its hundredth year

Without both feeling and looking queer, In fact, there's nothing that keeps its youth So far as I know, but a tree and Truth. (This is a moral that runs at large, Take it—you're welcome—no extra charge.)

Seventh of April—Court House Day, There are traces of age in the one-hoss shay.

A general flavor of mild decay, But nothing local, as one may say. There couldn't be—for the carpenter's art, Had made it so alike, in every part, But yet as a whole, it is past a doubt, In another hour, it will be worn out. Now what do you think the people have found,

When they got on their feet, and stared around? That poor old Court House, in a heap or mound

As if it had been to the mill and ground: You see, of course, if you're not a dunce, It could go to pieces—all at once—All at once, and nothing first— Just as bubbles when they burst, End of a wonderful one-hoss shay, Logic is logic—that's all I say.

$100.00 for clearing the Title on each parcel of land he owned. And in addition to this expense must be added the cost of a new Court House and its necessary contents.

I trust your good judgement in the coming April Election will result in making it possible for Iosco County to build a much needed, new fireproof Court House.

Sincerely,
F. L. Brabant, Supervisor, Second Ward, Tawas City

of waiting for the complete ten years to pass.

Your YES vote on these proposals will not only help you but will help your neighbors and friends of the county.

Clarence L. McKenzie, Supervisor 1st Ward City of East Tawas

East Tawas, Mich. March 24, 1952

Voters of Iosco County:

About a year ago the question of the condition of our County Court House was brought up during the Board of Supervisors meeting. The committee was again appointed to contact someone to learn of the possibilities of changing the original drawings so that a smaller building could be erected and also give us satisfactory protection for our county records. After several meetings a satisfactory drawing was agreed on.

I felt the proposal should be published and also given to the people for final approval, your vote "YES" on both proposals will not increase your tax rate but will allow us to have the building started at once, instead of waiting for the complete ten years to pass.

Your YES vote on these proposals will not only help you but will help your neighbors and friends of the county.

Clarence L. McKenzie, Supervisor 1st Ward City of East Tawas

To the Voters of Iosco County

I voted for the proposition of Court House at the January Session of Board of Supervisors to be placed before the voters of Iosco County on April 7, 1952.

Whittemore, Mich. March 24, 1952

To the Voters of Iosco County

I voted for the proposition of Court House at the January Session of Board of Supervisors to be placed before the voters of Iosco County on April 7, 1952.

The old building is a fire trap and many valuable records would be lost through fire which can not be replaced.

The vote asked for is just to extend the present 2 Mills for a longer time. If approved the County Board can go ahead and make plans to build. One thing I would like to see is all voters get out and give a good vote, say 90 per cent of all voters Vote. At previous elections only about 60 percent of voters turned out and vote. This was a poor turn out. I hope to see a good turn out and all vote.

Signed,
Theo. Bellville, Supervisor Burleigh Twp., Whittemore

Tawas City, Mich. March 15, 1952

Voters of Iosco County

If you will make the least observation of the present building, and observe the present condition. You will recognize it has deteriorated to a large extent. Only the most urgent repairs have been made for the past years.

To put it in good condition will require a large expenditure and what will you have when done.

Vote yes for the extension of the 2 mill tax and for the bond issue.

You will save money in the final issue.

J. B. King, Comm. on Building and Grounds

Oscoda, Mich. March 16, 1952

Why YOU should vote YES on Monday, April 7th on BOTH the Court House Propositions.

A disreputable old wreck of a building adorns half a block of Tawas City's otherwise attractive Lake Street. It has been there as long as anyone in Iosco County can remember. It was there when 'blanket' Indians were still whooping it up around their camp fires nearby. It saw the beginning and all the roaring years of the Lumber Era. It saw the decline and final ending of that colorful period. Cities grew up around it. Five wars were fought. Generations were born, lived full lives and passed on to their rewards, but the old building stayed on, growing more unsightly, more infirm, and more unsafe decade after decade.

It is still there. Right now it represents the most hazardous risk on which an insurance company can gamble, and the insurance rates certainly reflect that hazard.

And this is our Iosco County Court House. Of necessity it is the repository of the irreplaceable records of every legal transaction in Iosco County history; our deeds, plats, birth and death statistics, court records—every thing of record that we should preserve safely—and yet a ten minute fire would destroy them all. Doesn't it sound logical, sensible, and Right to vote YES on the New Court House Propositions.

Take another look at the old relic next time you're down that way. Tread it's ancient, creaking corridors. Note the decrepit sag in it's walls and ceilings, and then, on April 7th, 1952, let Conscience guide your hand on those Ballots.

An Oscoda Taxpayer.

Trout Season Has Early April Opening Date

Trout enthusiasts are going to have a lot more fishing time this year, beginning April 12 with a 14-day special rainbow season on 55 lakes and streams in 22 counties. Great Lakes and connecting waters are included, according to the conservation department.

Regular brook, brown and rainbow season will start April 26, two days earlier than 1951, and end September 14, five days later than before. The extra fall rainbow season will have a longer list of legal waters this year too.

With one exception, the 55 lakes and streams and Great Lakes waters will be open for early spring rainbow fishing for the first time. Black river, Mackinac county had a special early April opening in 1951. Purpose is to permit harvesting of a greater share of the annual spawning migrants previously returning to Great Lakes waters before the regular trout season started.

Designated open to fishing, with regular bag limits, starting April 12 and continuing through the regular trout season are the following Iosco waters:

East branch Au Gres down from Midlor-National City road bridge and AuSable river down from Foote dam.

CALENDAR

Tuesday, April 1—Whittemore Group meets with Mrs. Dornace Bellville.

Wednesday, April 2—Open Policy (Capitalism, Socialism, Communism), Tawas City Gym, 8:00 p. m.

D. B. Varner and Dr. Arthur Mauch have presented this program to more than 30,00 Michigan people, and to groups in neighboring states as well, receiving recognition as outstanding economists and public speakers.

Previous engagement for that evening will be most unfortunate, because all your friends will say you missed something really good.

White nylon that has yellowed may be bleached with color remover.

The average number in a family is ten. Most families live in shacks of two rooms, they are not sanitary. The water supply is contaminated and only a few families have oil-lamps. Crops include corn, coffee and edible seeds. The place is Viani, Columbia, South America.

An experimental program of five months duration, sponsored by UNESCO, to see what could be done to raise the standard of living and establish new interests among this and other settlements has proved so successful that work is being started in other backward regions.

The program provides information about sewage and water supply, furniture from crates, vegetable gardening, rabbit raising, sewing, child care, hygiene, improved schoolrooms and ventilation.

A handy tray for serving a sick person is the ordinary muffin tin. Small portions may be served in colorful paper muffin cups set inside. A small glass fits the tin, too.

Mesdames David Runyan and Rod Heilman brought their textile painting kit. The latter also brought some towels on which we might practice. We were all surprised in how easy it was to do. Both women offered to bring them again and help anyone that is interested.

We discussed a lighting problem in Mrs. Charles Attwell's home. It dealt with overloading a wall plug. Mrs. Rod Heilman was elected chairman of our "Sunshine Committee." Now when anyone in the group is ill they may be cheered by a card from the group.

Our lesson on "Lamp Base Modernizing" was very interesting. It was given by Mesdames Frank Abbinante, George Dodge and Rod Heilman. Mrs. Abbinante gave us a short quiz after the lesson, and we were all surprised in the things we have learned. Mrs. Rod Heilman had a lamp that had been made from a sparkler bottle.

Others present were, Mesdames Earl Bielby, Gordon Hemboldt, Lu Hatfield, Ira Scofield, Stan Sheltenbarger and our visitor Mrs. Lloyd Murry.

A very delicious lunch was served by Mrs. George Dodge and Mrs. Frank Abbinante. Our next lesson is Wednesday, April 9. The topic is "Fabrics." Mrs. Lu Hatfield

Directors Form Trial Group in Farm Planning

The five directors of the Iosco County Soil Conservation District have formed a trial group in soil conservation farm planning and are receiving their initial instructions under Gordon Hatch, Farm Planner. These directors are receiving this intensive initial training so that they may have a more thorough conception of the overall program.

Each director will form other groups in their respective neighborhoods. Hatch will start these groups on their initial planning and later each farmer, armed with their newly acquired knowledge will apply conservation practices to their own farms. The initial meetings are rotated in the homes and by meeting together they have an opportunity to study and discuss their own soil management problems.

Mr. Hatch has been assigned to Ogemaw and Iosco counties. Two-fifths of his time will be spent in this county with about 100 man days available from January 1 to December 31. He works in this area Thursdays and Fridays. He meets with the board of directors every third Monday of each month in the Federal Building.

The following policies have been developed by the Soil Conservation District directors:

1. The directors will hold group meetings among themselves to be sure of the overall program.
2. Each director will establish a group in their respective neighborhoods.
3. 73 farms will be in some stage of planning during 1952. Future requests will be given assistance in the order in which they are received.

Applications for group planning can be secured from Mr. Hatch or Harold R. Clark, County Agricultural Agent.

Notice To DOG OWNERS

The winter of 1951 and 52 were the worst known for dogs to be at large in Iosco County.

Scores of deer and other game were killed by these predatory animals. There were 14 deer killed on one 80 acre plot on Weber's ranch in Reno Township, alone, by three dogs. The dogs were shot and killed after they did untold damage.

The Sheriff's Department has numerous complaints of dogs ruining shrubbery, messing up lawns and other nuisances.

The garden clubs through out the county already have made requests of this department to get the dog situation under control before planting time.

Firm measures will have to be taken with owners of dogs, unless the law is obeyed.

DESERT DESTINY A SERIAL STORY OF THE MODERN-DAY WEST WRITER BY JOSEPH CHADWICK

THE STORY SO FAR: Senora Garrison sends Tracy Hayden to find Phil Garrison, whom she has never seen. The other Garrisons fear Phil will take the ranch. Tracy mistakes Phil's enemy, Jim Conroy, for Phil. Jim, masquerading as Phil, accuses the Garrisons and Foreman Clint Hanlon, Tracy's suitor, of attempts on his life. Tracy, embittered by Jim's imposture although loving him, meets the real Phil in town, is attracted to him. Phil appears at the ranch and is shot. Jim is accused, but Senora won't let the sheriff arrest him without warrant. Jim is captured by two Mexicans and forced to ride away over a narrow and secret trail.

CHAPTER XV

Tracy turned cold, sensing that this was the end... Jim Conroy's captors kept him on the move on horseback all that night. They had struck out for the southeast, toward the desolate range of rock-hills. Once in the hills, the Mexicans found a trail. Wherever possible, they rode abreast of Jim, flanking him, but at times they were forced to travel single file.

Dawn found them deep in the hills, as wild and awesome a country as Jim had ever seen. There were sheer rock cliffs walling them in as they followed a seemingly endless arroyo. The rising sun painted the cliffs with roseate colors. The sky turned brassy, and heat danced across the rocks.

In mid-morning, the Mexicans reined in under a shelf of rock which afforded scant shade. 'We camp here until dark, Senor,' Jim was told.

They dismounted, unsaddled the horses, and gave them water poured from a canteen into a sombrero. The saddle bags were well stocked with food, so the three men squatted in the shade and ate with varying degrees of appetite. Jim didn't feel hungry, for he wondered whether this fare might be his last meal.

Conroy Meets Jose Who Confesses Truth

Afterward, the Mexicans spread their serapes on the ground and stretched out, covering their faces with their sombreros. As Jim had no blanket on which to lie, he sat with his back to the wall, smoking and thinking. In a short time, he dozed off...

At sundown, they again took to the saddle. They left the canyon and climbed a jagged slope. The trail led several miles along a ridge, then dropped gradually into a gully.

The gully was studded with stone formations having fantastic shapes. They rode behind one of these formations, and there, in a cliff, was the concealed entrance to a natural tunnel. The opening was low and narrow. They had to dismount and lead their horses through.

When they emerged from the tunnel, Jim saw merely another high-walled canyon and the starry sky above. The English-speaking vaquero said, 'Now we are safe, Senor. No one can find us here.'

'So what?' said Jim. 'So we ride on with no worry about the sheriff.'

'Is that the idea? You two were ordered to get me away from the sheriff?' Jim asked.

'Even so,' the Mexican told him. Jim thought about that as he rode on through the darkness. The motive behind the order was what puzzled him. It seemed possible that he had been taken away so that it would look as though he had deliberately escaped from Sheriff Hardin. His escape would look like an admission of guilt. Certainly, by now, the sheriff must be doubly convinced that he had shot Phil Garrison.

Yes, he thought that was the motive behind his being kidnapped. The same person who had stolen his gun to shoot Phil Garrison, then planted it near the scene of the shooting, now had got him out of the way so that he could not prove himself innocent. Then that person would never permit him to turn up alive...

Jim glanced apprehensively at the two Mexicans. It was just after sun-up when they rode into a hidden valley. Jim saw a tumble-down adobe hut across the valley, a horse in a corral beside it. His captors began talking excitedly in Spanish. Then, as they neared the hut, they called out.

A man appeared in the doorway of the hut. He held a rifle in his hand. Jim had a shock of recognizing him. It was Jose. The Mexican's eyes fixed on Jim, and he half raised the rifle. Jim held his breath, waiting for the sharp crack of the gun...

Tracy could not rid herself of the lost feeling that had gripped her since the night of Senora Maria's death. The memory was still sharp and clear. The Senora crumpling, Ramon gathering her up in his arms...

Nearly a week had passed since that night, but Tracy still felt stunned. Life without the Senora never would be the same. The big house was like an empty shell without the magnificent woman who had been its mistress.

Ruth had gone away with Pete Donohue immediately after the funeral. Juan, too, had gone, after a violent quarrel with Ramon. He blamed his uncle for the Senora's illness and death.

During that week, Philip Garrison had mended rapidly. Tracy had helped the nurse in caring for him and, as he grew stronger, she often sat and talked with him or read aloud to him. He had a comforting effect on her, yet a disturbing effect, too.

'You're swell, Tracy—swell,' he had told her one day, taking her hand in his. 'You make being shot almost worth while. You do like me, don't you?'

'Yes, Philip... I like you a great deal.'

She thought of the Senora. It seemed that this was what the Senora would want—for her to like Philip, to fall in love with him. And Philip seemed to show her, in many little ways, that he was falling in love with her.

He grappled with Phil, knocked the gun from his hand, and forced him against the bar.

On the evening of his first day up, they walked together in the patio, then sat on a bench there in the velvety darkness.

Philip said, 'Juan told me, before he left, about the Senora's will—that the ranch is to be held in trust until you marry, and that, then, you are to decide whether it should be sold or remain in trust. If you do not want it sold, you are to live here with your husband...'

'Yes,' Tracy said. 'All you Garrisons share the ranch alike with me, but the choice of holding or selling it is mine. The Senora's wish was that I decide before I am twenty-five.'

Philip's arm went about her. 'That means she wished you to marry before you are twenty-five. Darling I'm not going to permit you to marry any other man... Tracy, this is a proposal. We could make the ranch a grand place...'

Jim Returns to Ranch With Mystery Solved

She whispered, 'Yes, Philip, we could.'

When he kissed her, she thought, 'This is how it should be—the way the Senora wanted it to be.'

She had hardened her heart against him that night when it was revealed that Phil had been shot with Jim's gun. She had been convinced then that Jim's sole aim in coming to the ranch had been a desire for revenge on Phil—that he had known Phil would eventually come there. Hence, she barred him from her thoughts, hoped she would never see him again.

Then, one night, he reappeared at the hacienda. It was a bleak, rainy night. Tracy had played bridge until midnight with Ramon, Helene and Philip. The game had broken up when Clint Hanlon dropped in to talk to Ramon. Tracy and Helene had left the men having nightcaps in the rumpus room.

Now, Tracy lay in bed. It was nearly one o'clock when a footfall sounded in the hall. Then, there was a faint knock on her door.

'Yes? Who is it?'

With a shock, she heard Jim's voice answer. 'Tracy, I've got to talk to you.'

Jim stood revealed in rain-soaked clothes. His face was unshaven, his eyes feverishly bright.

He stepped into the room and closed the door. 'I've had the devil's own time,' he said. 'The Senora had two vaqueros kidnap me so the sheriff couldn't arrest me. And I found Jose... Tracy, you've got to believe this. I didn't try to kill Phil Garrison, but I think I know who did. Clint Hanlon.'

'Jim, you're mad!'

wagon a short time after my horse was shot from under me. I'm going to confront him and somehow get the truth out of him. I've got to! And before the sheriff catches up with me!'

'Wait, Jim! Don't do anything tonight,' she begged. 'In the morning, I'll see the sheriff and tell him your story. He'll not arrest you before investigating. Let him handle Clint.'

Jim protested, but finally agreed to take no steps that night. Promising to go to his room, he left.

When Tracy had closed the door on him, she stood thinking, then reached a quick decision. She herself would go and question Clint—would go now. He wouldn't dare to harm her...

After dressing hastily, she hurried from her room and went to the other wing of the house.

Outside the rumpus room, she halted, arrested by the words she heard. Clint was speaking, his voice savage. 'You can't blackmail me, Garrison! I promised you a bonus of ten thousand dollars, and you'll get it at the proper time. But you'll not get one cent before the ranch is sold to Longstreet and Blaire!'

'Don't be a fool, Hanlon,' Philip's voice answered. 'Suppose I tell Tracy you've been in the employ of Longstreet and Blaire all the years you've been here—working to bring the ranch close to ruin, so it would have to be sold? Suppose I tell Ramon?'

'You daren't tell them,' Hanlon retorted, 'because you know I'll reveal that you made a deal with me—to marry Tracy, then get her to sell the ranch. What will she say—and do—if she learns you're marrying her for a bonus of ten thousand dollars?'

'I'm All Confused, But—Oh, Kiss Me!'

At that, Tracy walked into the room. 'Neither of you need play informer,' she said coldly.

The two men whirled. Consternation was on Phil's face, fear on Hanlon's.

Tracy continued. 'It may interest you to know, Philip, that it was your fellow conspirator who tried to kill you.' This was a shot in the dark, but it hit home. She saw panic in Hanlon's eyes. 'He first tried to kill Jim Conroy when he thought Jim was you. Then, after he discovered you in Lanassa, he lured you to Ruth's party, stole Jim's gun from his room and used it to shoot you. He feared that, if the Senora put you in charge of the ranch or bequeathed it to you, you would want to hold onto it—and he would never achieve his purpose of getting it for Longstreet and Blaire.'

She turned and gave Hanlon a bitter look. 'They must have paid you well and must have promised you quite a reward if the deal went through. To gain your end, you would stop at nothing. I see now why you wanted to marry me. You knew that I would probably become part owner of the ranch when the Senora died and, if all else failed, you hoped to influence me as your wife to use my influence toward having the ranch sold.'

It was at that moment that Jim appeared. After going to his room, he had heard the voices downstairs and had come down to investigate.

Apparently, Phil was still terrified of Jim, for he reached under his coat and drew a gun from a shoulder holster. Jim flung himself forward. He grappled with Phil, knocked the gun from his hand, and forced him against the bar.

Then, he picked up the gun and leveled it at both Phil and Hanlon. 'Tracy,' he said over his shoulder, 'you'd better phone for the sheriff.'

The next day was brilliantly sunny after the night's rain. Tracy and Jim sat together in the patio, thinking of all that had happened.

Clint Hanlon was now in the Lanassa jail. The sheriff, after hearing Tracy's testimony, together with Jose's story, had been quickly convinced that Clint was guilty of the attacks that had been made on both Phil and Jim.

Phil, however, had not stayed around to press any charges. When Jim, for Tracy's sake, had decided to forget the score he had to settle with Phil, the latter had hastily departed.

Tracy said, 'I feel so ashamed, Jim, of the way I've treated you. I believed the worst of you.'

'You had every reason to distrust me after the way I tricked you at the outset.' His eyes probed her face. 'I'm sorry, though, that your illusions about Phil Garrison had to be smashed.'

'It was a shock at first but—well, then, Tracy said hesitatingly, 'I suppose that you, too, will be leaving here soon.'

'Do you want me to leave?'

She couldn't answer, for she felt suddenly choked up.

Jim took her hand. 'Tracy, you never answered the question I asked you on the night of the party. Darling, I love you. Is there any hope for me?'

She looked into his eyes. 'I—I'm all confused, Jim, But—oh, kiss me!'

Battle of Baboons Thwarts Progress Near Airport Site

Near the high cataracts of Victoria Falls in the darkest part of Africa, modern civilization was fighting a battle with the inhabitants of the jungles. The lions, leopards, crocodiles and elephants had surrendered without much of a battle. The soldiers of darkness fighting our way of life were baboons.

The baboons have been thwarting progress ever since the government cleared away 430 acres of savanna last year and laid out Livingstone airport, designed for jet transports. To begin with, the big gray baboons streamed out of the forests on to the runway, swinging big sticks to squash up a midday lunch of scorpions. 'They got in the path of oncoming planes and left sticks and rubbish on the runways,' complained Airport Manager E. G. F. Salmon. 'We drove out in jeeps to drive them off and fired shots over their heads. Somehow we couldn't shoot to kill; they were too human.'

The baboons retreated, took to coming out at night to get revenge. Salmon and his men installed electric flare lamps along the runway to scare them off, but the baboons thought they were forest fires. One night a ghostly army of the creatures, led by an aged and skilled tactician, sneaked out of the forest and raced across the open to the flare lamps. They smashed at the fires with sticks and stones, swung at them with hairy fists, howling in warlike fury all the while. 'It was some night,' reported Manager Salmon dolefully. 'And it was enough. Manager Salmon decided to ring the field with a $12,000 electrified fence. But still the jungle would not be won: There remained the rainbirds—huge, storklike migrants who flock to Rhodesia each year in the rainy season. They were strutting by the hundreds on Livingstone's runways, as arrogant as any baboon. 'The fence,' sighed harassed Manager Salmon, 'probably won't keep out the rainbirds.'

Collaboration Found Between Taft-McCarthy

WASHINGTON—How mutually Senators Taft (Rep., Ohio) and McCarthy (Rep., Wis.) have been working together was uncovered by accident recently.

To collect money for the March of Dimes antipoliio fight, Washington staged a 'March of Mothers.'

People were supposed to leave their porch lights on at 7 p.m. Mothers were to come around and solicit funds.

At Taft's house in old Georgetown, a collector found the Ohio presidential candidate at home, and collected $5.

Then Taft introduced his dinner guest, and the collector took $5 from him. It was McCarthy.

Young Combat Veteran Can't Resist; Returns

WASHINGTON—Here's proof of the esprit de corps developed among the Army's crack combat troops:

A 21-year-old veteran of nearly 10 months fighting in Korea, Sergeant Fred G. Smith, of Sayre, Pa., walked into a company orderly room at Ford Meade, Md., recently to announce his readiness to return to the Second Infantry Division.

His reason: 'I miss my buddies over there and want to get back to them and the old outfit.'

The sergeant's request was unique because he had received assignment in this country as a result of the Army rotation plan for combat personnel in Korea. He reported to Fort Meade from a 30-day rotation leave.

Although he has been in the Army more than two years, Smith joined the Second Division as a replacement just prior to its movement overseas last year. He won his combat infantryman badge and became a squad leader in F Company of the division's Ninth Infantry Regiment in battle.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Rox H. Smith, 263 Spring Street, Pa., the young soldier was presented the Bronze Star Medal for his meritorious service. The commendation cited his great tactical skill in deploying men and selecting defensive positions and emplacements.

The Army's answer to the sergeant's voluntary request: a 18-day leave prior to reporting to the West Coast for shipment back to the Far East Command.

D.A.'s Good Memory Excuses Ex-Co-Worker From Jury

NEW YORK, N.Y.—The memory of Leo Slutsky, assistant district attorney is better than average. The result was that a prospective juror was excused from serving on a jury trying two men for receiving stolen property.

Slutsky was looking over a panel before making final selection. 'Don't you know me?' he asked one of the men.

'No,' was the reply. 'Were you a motorman on Brooklyn trolleys 27 years ago?' Slutsky countered.

When the man replied that he had been, Slutsky said, 'I was your conductor.'

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

Doctor's Hobby

Lesson for March 30, 1952

DOCTOR Luke is a man to whom we are all indebted. Without him, we in the church would have lost some of our finest hymns, the 'Magnificat' and the 'Nunc Dimittis,' without him we might never have heard of the first Christmas night when the shepherds watched and the angels sang. He was the only Gospel writer who remembered to tell us those matchless parables, the Lost Sheep and the Prodigal Son, and many another.

It is only from him that we know of Jesus' prayer at Calvary.—'Father, forgive them; they know not what they do.' Furthermore, it is only Luke who conceived and wrote the book of Acts.

THE interesting thing is that Dr. Luke was not a professional writer. He was a professional physician. All the writing he did was what we today might even call a hobby; that is, he got no money for it so far as we know, he just wrote because he loved to write.

Very likely he was a good doctor; he is called the 'beloved physician,' and we hope that enough people who loved him also paid their bills promptly so that he could make his living. But it was not the doctoring that endeared him to the church of Christ.

It was what he did in his spare time, it was his missionary work and his writing, it is the Gospel of Luke and the book of Acts that are his main claim to fame.

Luke is not the first man nor the last to accomplish more by a 'side-line' than by his main job. We remember David in the Old Testament, whose rise to power began not with his sheep-herding, which no doubt he did to perfection, but with his music, which his father may well have thought a waste of time. We remember Marcus Aurelius the emperor not for his military campaigns, which were masterly, but for the 'meditations' he wrote in snatches of spare time on those campaigns. We remember the Apostle Paul not for the churches he founded (most of which folded) but for the dozen or so letters he managed to squeeze into his busy evenings.

Other Doctors LUKE was not the last Christian doctor who has found in what, for some, might be a 'side-line' his finest means of service and best source of happiness. Dr. Howard Kelly of Baltimore was a cancer specialist of no small fame; but he was even better known as a scientist who not only saw no conflict between science and religion, but who brought his skill and his science to the service of Christ.

There was another doctor, a surgeon in a midwestern city, not many years ago, who was ready to retire. He had enough to live on in comfort, and the life of a successful surgeon in a great city is a wearing one. But instead of retiring, he went out to China, and in a remote province he spent his 'retiring' years at his own expense, hardly knowing a word of Chinese, but having the time of his life and rendering himself if possible more nearly indispensable out there than he had ever been back in the states.

Again there was the surgeon Alexis Carrel, who with another scientist first succeeded in keeping living tissue (a chicken's heart) alive for years beyond the time when it 'should have' died,—a surgeon who also believed in the power of prayer and whose book 'Man the Unknown' is valuable as combining the scientific and the Christian view of man.

Or there was Dr. I. J. Archer of Chicago and North Carolina, who operated two sanitariums more easily than some doctors can run one office, and yet who found his life's deepest satisfactions in the Sunday school class he taught for years.

Life Is More Than Making a Living MANY others besides doctors have made the same discovery. What is a 'hobby,' after all? It can be only an elaborate twiddling of the thumbs, something to 'kill time'—horrible thought! It can be something done merely to relieve nervous pressure. It can be something not really worth doing.

But what Dr. Luke found, countless others, including some readers of these lines, have also found: that even when we have to spend most of our time making a living, we can dedicate our 'spare' time, under God, to making life.

Struggle for Peace

In a dramatic international broadcast from the deck of the Coast Guard cutter Courier, President Harry S. Truman told the people of the world, and particularly those behind the iron curtain, of this nation's work to bring lasting peace to the world. It was a message over the heads of governments, beamed directly to the peoples of all nations.

The President's message recalls to mind his enunciation of the "Truman Doctrine" and a column this reporter wrote in April, 1947, just about five years ago. The same column is good today. Here it is:

"The impact of President Truman's new doctrine of American destiny—his new policy of embracing the principle of freedom as opposed to forces of disruption in the world—continues to have a sobering effect upon this nation's capital as the magnitude, the awesome aspects, and the grave import and implications of his words are studied and digested.

"As a matter of fact, President Truman's message did not contain or advance any new American doctrine, because such statements as America's interest in freedom-loving peoples of the world, our support of the world democracies, has been advocated and applauded for years. What the President's message did do, however, was to accompany these laudable words with a policy to be translated into action.

"Some high in government circles are aware of exactly what is entailed by support of the action. They accept it—Senator Vandenberg (since deceased), Senator Lodge, Senator Morse, Senator Aiken—all agreed that the President's action and his policy must be supported and carried out... a policy which places this nation in the breathtaking position of assuming its rightful place as a world power and the champion of all the down-trodden peoples of the earth, starting with a 400 million dollar loan to Greece and Turkey.

"This tremendous respite to the aftermath of war, strike, and very security of every man, woman and child in America. It is a new call to arms, for as a result of this definite American policy these developments are like happen:

"The people of the nation in the home town in the land must be united, as single of purpose, as were in fighting a victorious war, the people must be ready to back up and accept compulsory military training; they must be willing to spend, not only the $400 million, but in all likelihood many more billions of dollars in the next few years; they must be willing to forego some of the luxuries of a hard-earned peace, for sharing dollars means sharing goods. It may mean a return to some government controls; it means there will be no tax reduction this year or probably next; it means that American ships and American men may be sent to seats of trouble throughout the world; it means a risk of war; it means that we oppose the spread of communism, and also of fascism or other isms which threaten 'attempts at subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressures'; it means unqualified support of the four freedoms and the principles of the charter of the United Nations; it means continued full production of agriculture and industry; it means a strike in any large industry would be against the national interest; it is a must for management and labor to settle their differences; it means that government will remain in the market as a large buyer of food and commodities for defense and export; it means that prices likely will remain high; it means a continued bipartisan foreign policy is a must; it means this new Truman Doctrine will go down in history—much like the Monroe Doctrine, but expanded to world-wide proportions. It surely will mean more sweat and tears, but it very well may mean blood too.

No Halfway Mark

"So this tremendous new concept of the responsibility of this nation as a result of the last war must be either accepted wholly or rejected wholly by the American people; there can be no halfway mark. We must either take on the responsibility fully and with all our power and resources, or we must shut up shop in Europe, in China and elsewhere, close our doors and let Russia do what she will with the rest of the world. Those are the alternatives."

The Record

How have we as a nation met the tests during the past five years? Are we united and full of purpose to meet our responsibilities, or are we shattered by distrusts, by suspicions and lack of faith in our government? We have just turned down U.M.T. and we are chafing at controls. Have we permitted political mountebanks to divide us in order to conquer, or are we marching with closed ranks to obtain the high purpose of a dedicated nation?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Fritter Batter: Use fritter batter for dripping slices of tomato, then fry them golden brown. Serve with crisp bacon or grilled ham.

Butter: When a recipe calls for creaming butter, and you don't have time to let it soften for easier creaming, break it into small pieces by cutting, then work it with a wooden potato smasher. Always cream butter before adding sugar to shorten the time required for working.

Easy Dessert: One of the easiest and nicest of desserts uses apricots poached in their syrup. Cool and fill with vanilla ice cream. Dust with macaroon crumbs and top with pistachio nuts.

"Miracle" say SURIN

Wilford (Bill Presler)
Candidate for Congress
Wilford (Bill) Presler, of AuGres, writes regarding his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congress, 10th District, Michigan. Bill says, "I was born 64 years ago at Forest, Ohio. Got the usual Grade School education. Then took a complete selective course in English at College. Taught school 23 years, part of the time also as Principal. Taught up to and including the 10th Grade. Farmed for some years but not very well while I was teaching. For many years have been buying and shipping carlot and trucklot broker of farm produce. Finished early in March having shipped over sixty loads, mostly onions this season. Have served as Mayor of AuGres, was J. P. for four years, and ended service on the AuGres County committee of the F. H. S. Federal Farm Loan; now am City Supervisor, AuGres; and am President of the Arenac County Farm Bureau. I have a farm, also modest town property. I know the problems of the town residents, also of farmers. If elected I shall not represent but one or two classes, rather I want to represent all classes. All classes have equal need for full and active representation. We cannot prosper unless every class prospers. For fifteen years I have been writing in the Michigan press defending our humanized capitalism against Socialism and especially Communism. Occasionally I receive derogatory and warning anonymous Communist letters. These I think are compliments. If elected to Congress, I will serve the people of this 10th District actively and fully to the very limit of my ability.

Wilford Presler.

National Gypsum Co. Directors Approve Raise in Stock

Stockholder of the National Gypsum Company approved an increase in the company's capitalization from 2 1/2 to five million shares of common stock at their annual meeting.

"This," said Melvin H. Baker, National Gypsum chairman of the board, "puts the company in a much more flexible position from expansion through acquiring other companies by means of an exchange of stock. Too, if cash is required for expansion, we will be in a position to sell shares in a favorable market."

Baker reported that sales for 1952 are equaling 1951's record setting amount for the same period and are expected to top the 95 1/2 million level reported for 1951.

A restricted stock option plan for executives (involving 50,000 shares) was also approved.

All National Gypsum directors were re-elected at the meeting.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our sincerest thanks to each and everyone for the many thoughts of kindnesses shown in our behalf during our recent sorrow. For the floral tributes, for the kind and sympathetic words, and for all other deeds we are grateful. Especially do we want to thank Rev. Heyn for his consoling words and the ladies aid for the delicious lunch served. All these kindnesses have meant much to us and we are deeply grateful to each and everyone, and will always cherish in our memory your kind considerations. Thanks many, many times. The family of the late Mrs. Augusta Bucholz.
