Sherman News Report Given on Erosion Problem

By Jim Barstow

After a very lengthy study of beach erosion in the Great Lakes area by the local, state and fed-eral government agencies and by an extensive study made Professor Ernest F. Brater of the Hydraulic Engineering Department of the University of Michigan, it has been found, and he has very clearly stressed the value of small groins or jetties as a remedy for storm beaches because they effectively trap sand and rebuild these beaches. The designs of groins at the present time are generally too expensive for the individual, since the cost is estimated to run approximately $20.00 to $30.00 per front foot of property.
Groins, to be really effective should be constructed in groups and where the wave action is really severe, they may be connected by means of a bulkhead at the shoreward end. The plans or designs of a type of groin are on file with your local County to be only a mushroom hunter.

Along with this parents Mr and Mrs.

Along with this the County Drain Commissioner wishes to advise that federal aid has now been mobilized and this aid has been thoroughly analyzed and already much assistance for the future has been taken care of. The Secretary of the Army has authorization under the federal law, Section 212 of Public Law 516 of the 81st Congress to allot for emergency flood contro without congressional authoristition sums up to the amount of $150,000.00 for a single locality, however such emergency protection works must be advisable in the opinion of the Chief of Engineers and are made subject. Engineers and are made subject to the provisions of local cooperation specified in Section 3 of the Flood Control Act of June 26th, 1936. It is also provided in this law that the work shall be complete in itself and not commit the United States to any additional improvement to insure its successful operation. The provisions of Section 3 of the 1936 Flood Control Act are that no money shall be appropriated under the above authorization until the ctate's political subdivi til the state's political subdivision or respective local organizations have given assurances sat-isfactory to the Secretary of the Army that they will:

(a) Provide without cost to the United States all lands, easements and rights of way necessary to the construction of the project, except as otherwise pro-

(b) Hold and save the United States free from damages due to the construction works.

(c) Maintain and operate all the works after completion in accordance with the regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Army In conjunction with this Congress has approprieted. this, Congress has appropriated the amount of Three Million Dollars to the Secretary of the Army to be used for these purposes.

In conclusion, the County Drain Commissioner would like to advise property owners affected either by flooding conditions or by erosion that the chief job of the property owner is to determine the elevation of the property in question so as to except perty in question so as to ascer-tain if it comes within the scope of a flood control area so as to find out whether or not he is in an area where there would be danger of basement or residence flooding. Preventive and corrective data is on file with the County Drain Commissioner and can be obtained upon request.

Prodigal Nation

Lesson for July 6, 1952

YOU'RE going a long way back for a sermon," said a neighbor who reads this column, once when the topic was Jeremiah. Well, this column isn't intended to be a sermon. It is intended to be an offering of some thoughts on the Bible passages which are used as the Sunday school lesson in more than eighty different denominations of the Christian church. The writer, whether the writer of this column or those who write the books such as Tarbell's and Peloubet's that contain lessons for a whole year, does not pick out the topics. They were selected by a large interdenominational committee some years be-

When They Did as They Pleased HOWEVER, let's have no apologies for going anywhere in the Bible, back or front. The voice of God speaks to us through it, and we can learn something from all parts

For the next three months the lessons are to be about the rise of the Kingdom, from just after Joshua's time to the reign of Solomon. This week we have before us the first and last parts of a book (Judges) that covers many generations. This book contains some inspiring stories, and some so harsh or revolting that they never are studied in Sunday school.

The inspired prophet who first put these stories together and commented on them makes a significant postscript at the end, as if to explain some of the more shocking tales: T ose were the days when there was no king, and every man did that which was right in his own eyes.

There you have one of the keys for understanding this strange Book of Judges. It is the story of anarchy, of men doing as they pleased. Do laws annoy you? Do you sometimes feel that this would be a better world if we could do away with government entirely and let every man do as he likes? The Book of Judges shows what sort of world that would be-and you wouldn't like #.

BANKING experts talk about business cycles, and show diagrams to illustrate them. The stories in Judges also make a kind of pattern, a wavy line that climbs up and dips down, over and over again. The curve is freedom, the low dip is slavery. The little nation of Israel, or rather the little gatheration of tribes not yet a nation, that went by that name, was struggling for a place in the sun. Sometimes they had no better than a place in the shade, in the shadows of national weakness. disgrace, defeat, slavery of one sort or another.

Other nations would "oppress" them in the various ways by which one nation can oppress another: by armed invasion, by military occupation, by making slave laborers, by exacting huge sums of money, by depriving them of trade or territory. And then after a long time of this, a hero would arise and lead the people back to freedom.

The Moral Cycle

IF that were all, the Book of Judges would not help us very much. But the question is: Why does a nation lose its freedom?

The answer given in this ancient book has been confirmed in history many a time since. A nation is free when it deserves to be free; it loses its freedom when it no longer deserves it. The careful reader can see in the Book of Judges another line rising and falling, the curving line of the nation's faith and moral life. When they "went after other gods,"—that is, when they sank to the sins and crimes which went with the worship of these "other gods," they lost their morals and at the same time lost their morale and their character. And a nation that loses its character is one that easily loses its freedom.

It is the way mighty Rome fell, and Spain, and many another. It is the way our own natio: can fall. But the way out is also shown in the Bible.

The Bock of Judges has been called the Book of the Prodigal Nation. It is the story of man's sin, but also of God's mercy. It sometimes takes long to learn the lesson, and sometimes it is never learned; but God holds out hope for the repentant nation, as he holds out hope for the soul that turns from its wickedness. Is it ever too late to repent?
