

Break Ground for New Courthouse

Vollmer Co. Starts Work Yesterday

Ground was broken yesterday afternoon (Thursday) for Isosco county's new $320,000.00 courthouse. Work began Wednesday when grade stakes were set for foundation excavations.

Material for toolhouse and superintendent's office is now on the grounds, together with drain and sewer tile and other material used in the early part of construction.

If cold weather does not intervene too early, construction will have progressed to where it will not interfere with the building progress according to a statement made by a representative of Arthur Vollmer Construction Company, general contractors.

As the new courthouse lies across the present driveway and parking space, arrangements are being made for suitable access to the building and grounds. Tawas City has given permission for the use of the city park for parking the cars of county officers, county employees and those having business at the courthouse.

The work yesterday afternoon consisted in a preliminary preparation of the grounds. Trees and driveway curbing were removed with a bulldozer. Included in the clean-up of the grounds was the removal of the flagpole and service men's memorial. This work is being performed by John Konenski's Tawas Sand and Gravel Company.

Erosion Meet Scheduled for October 3

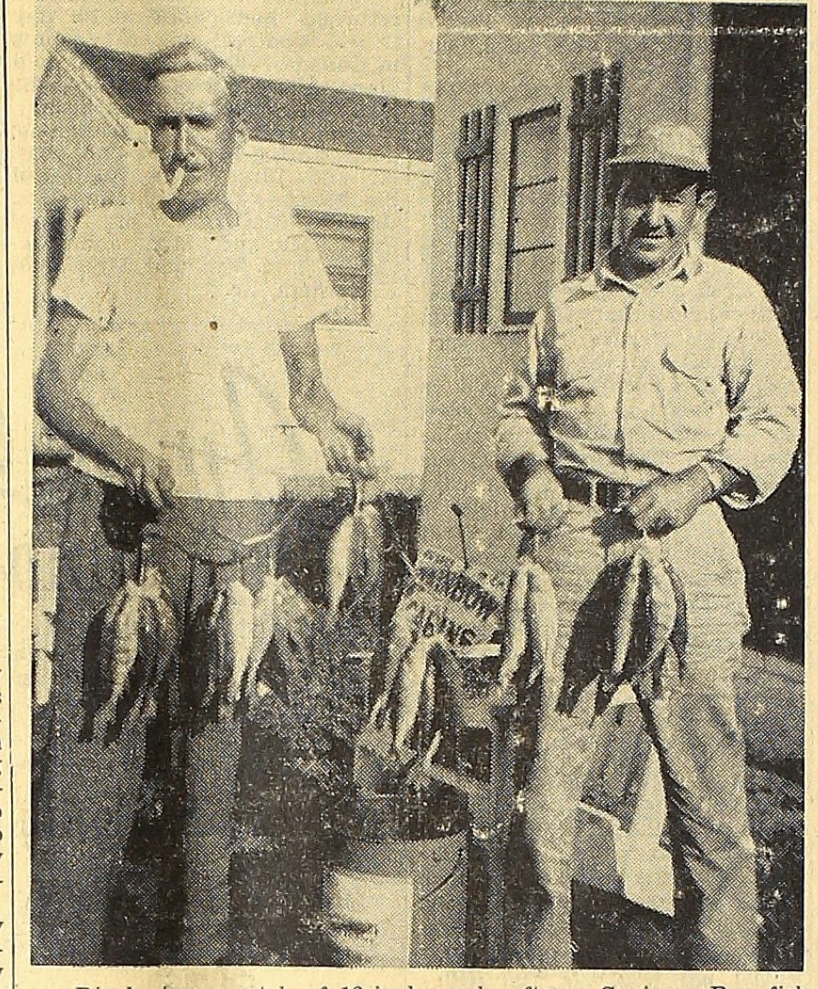

Interested Residents Invited to Present Views

Lake Huron and Saginaw Bay property owners in the Tawas area have been invited to present their views on the erosion of the shoreline at a meeting which will be held Friday evening, October 3, at the Isosco county courthouse, according to an announcement made today by County Clerk George A. Prescott.

The meeting will be held by the United States District Engineer of Detroit, and property owners in the affected districts are urged to attend and submit information and their views on the subject of shore erosion.

In his August report, Lt. Colonel William N. Harris of the U. S. Lake Survey stated that Lakes Michigan and Huron hit their peak in July, and that a slight drop had been indicated in August. Huron levels may remain near the seasonal peak longer than customary this year, he said, and this was shown when Sunday's high winds continued the devastation of shore property.

Plainfield School Receives Praise

Improvements Made For New School Year

The Plainfield Township Rural Agricultural School opens this week with the anticipated number of students. For the first time, the school at Hale has several students coming from Glenie, who are serviced by a bus from the school. Under Superintendent Gordon Helmbold's suggestions and the interested guidance and support of the local school board, several improvements have been made to the advantage of the school and its students.

At a recent meeting, the University Inspector from Ann Arbor heartily complimented the citizens of the Plainfield School District for the interest and foresight which they have used in providing for increased participation of students in this area. The Inspector expressed enthusiastic satisfaction with the school plant and made several suggestions for a further achievement and improvement.

The school at Hale is accredited by the University of Michigan and approved by the Department of Public Instruction. Its students may secure admission to the several colleges in the State. Several recent graduates are already attending three or four colleges in Michigan.

Courses are offered to meet the desires of the students in the school. The standard subjects in the College Preparatory Course are offered by instructors who have majors in their respective fields. More liberalized programs also are offered to students who plan to enter college.

A wide range of subjects is offered in the General Course, with emphasis upon Agriculture, Home Economics, and Commercial. An excellent program is being offered this year in music through the acquisition on the staff of a recent graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, one of the foremost institutions of its kind in the country.

The programs in Agriculture and Home Economics are under the federal Smith-Hughes Act, which makes possible a wider distribution of opportunity to students in those schools which operate under this Act.

Because of student requests, a driver training program will be set up shortly. This should be enthusiastically supported by adults as well as by students, since such a program insures the greater safety, not alone of us all, but especially of small children who must travel the highway to school, store and church. This program fits in with the repeated admonitions and suggestions of the National Council on Safety.

Oliver Champagne, who had been residing near Sterling, has moved to the Townline in Tawas township. He says he got homesick and had to return to the old town.

Kiwanis Club to Support School Reorganization

The Tawas Kiwanis at its regular meeting held at the Holland Hotel Tuesday noon took cognizance of the fact that the school voters of the 13 districts in the Tawas area will decide on September 30 whether one district will be formed.

This was followed by a motion that the president appoint a committee to aid the general reorganization committee in its work. President E. D. Jacques appointed Harold Gould, W. D. It is expected that this committee will meet soon with the original reorganization committee of the area to decide what particular aid the Kiwanis can give in this regard.

Growth of a Soul

Lesson for September 7, 1952

AFTER A MAN IS DEAD, and indeed while he is still alive, we ought to remember the best about him and forget the worst. That is how we want to be treated, ourselves. But human beings are so perverse that we often do just the opposite. We remember the worst, forget the best. This is so in the case of the great King David.

Dr. Foreman

A novel was once written about him in which his lie was pictured as a curve high in the middle, bending down sharply at both ends. After his great sins of adultery and murder, so the story went, he went on down and down hill to the end. This is not the picture we get from the Bible. In many ways his later days were sad; his fortunes declined, as we say, but his soul did not decline. The latter days of David show us how even a man who has sinned can rise again; how even an ageing man can grow in soul.

Signs of Growth

NOT THAT a man has to sin as David did in order to grow. In order to be healthy it is not necessary to be half-dead with ever first; yet even after a long stay in the sanitarium it is possible for a man to make his way to full health and strength.

Now David, though he fell, "did not blind his soul with clay." The experience struck down his pride; he realized with shame what he had done. Some men must wake bitterly to the fact of their own weakness before they can begin to take hold of God's strength. At any rate, we can see signs of growth in David's soul.

One of these signs is humility before God. Take the story of his flight from his capital, for example. He could have hardly been in a worse state. His loved son Absalom had become a rebel, his throne was in danger, his friends were turning against him, even his life was not safe. Another man might have committed suicide, or sat in his deserted palace bitterly awaiting the end. Another man might have returned Shimei's foul language, curse for curse.

But David moves through all this as a man who realizes he deserves his troubles, knows it is God who is bringing these hard things to pass, and bows humbly under whatever God sends. His kingdom was shrinking, but his soul was growing again.

Is the Young Man Safe?

ANOTHER plain sign of inward growth was David's attitude to his bad son Absalom. That young man had ceased to be a son, but the old man did not cease to be a father. The young man would have stopped at nothing, he would have killed his father without hesitating, in order to gain the kingdom for himself. But David was willing to lose the kingdom, if by so doing he could keep from losing his son.

General Joab, a professional killer, could see no point in David's generosity. He believed David should be a king first and a father afterwards. It was Joab who against David's strict orders finally killed Absalom. But in death as in life, David loved that wild young man. No more tragic scene is found in history than David's lament, "Would God I had died for thee, A Absalom, my son, my son." It does not sound like a lament for a dead enemy, and it was not; it was a father's grief for his son. The grief came late; David should long before those days have remembered his duty as a father to Absalom. But late though it was, David's tears show that in him his soul still grew.

No Cheap Sacrifice

ONE OTHER sign of soul-growth comes to the surface: a single sentence from David on the day when he bought the land where the temple was to be built. The owner Ornan (Araunsh) would have given the land free; but David insisted on paying the full value. "I will not offer burnt offerings unto the Lord my God which cost me nothing," he said.

No one would have blamed him for taking advantage of the owner, cutting the price a little. When David was a younger man he might have done it; but not now. No one else would know it, perhaps; but God would know it. It was a sign that David was no longer the half-grown soul he had once been. For a man never really grows up till he does what he does, not because of fear, or ambition, or reputation, nor for any reason but because he knows how God is going to look at it.

LIVESTOCK LOSSES BY POOR HAULING CAN BE REDUCED

Bruising, crippling and killing livestock by careless loading and hauling is costly and can be avoided says Charles J. Little, Michigan State College extension livestock specialist.

Marketing time and show time are two dangerous periods. Even though some animals are insured, the loss is still great. Here are some suggestions that Little says will help reduce livestock handling losses.

Remove nails, wire, splinters and broken boards from hauling racks. Use smooth loading chute that is not too steep. Bed trucks with sand or other material that will keep the animals from slipping.

Partition loads of animals of different sizes to prevent injury to the smaller ones. Load slowly to prevent crowding against sharp corners and to avoid excitement. Little warns against beating animals into the truck, since this will bruise animals.

The MSC livestock specialist also advises covering the truck to protect the animals during bad weather. Drive carefully, inspect the load enroute and unload slowly. These suggestions will help cut losses and increase pounds of meat that reach the market.

Iosco Farmers Must be Sure of Tile Quality

Iosco County farmers who are signed up for the installation of tile under the 1952 Agricultural Conservation Program are again reminded that certain standards with respect to quality of tile must be met before they are eligible for program assistance, according to Earl M. Partlo, Iosco County PMA chairman.

The standards with respect to quality of tile that are being required are those that are known as the American Society of Testing Materials specifications numbered C4-50T. These standards have to do with the crushing strength and denseness of the tile, and are the farmers assurance of getting a tile that is worth buying.

Farmers who expect to receive assistance under the 1952 Agricultural Conservation Program for the installation of tile must furnish evidence that the tile installed do meet these specifications.

Mr. Partlo, Iosco County PMA chairman, suggests that farmers, when purchasing their tile, demand to know whether this tile meet ASTM Specifications C450T. If they do, a statement to this effect should be requested by the farmer as evidence that tile with the proper specification have been installed.

Under the ASTM C4-50T Specifications, two acceptable grades of tile are recognized "standard" and "extra quality." Either of these grades meet the requirements for assistance under the 1952 Agricultural Conservation Program.

Earlier standards (1924) of the American Society of Testing Materials included a third grade of tile known as "field quality." This grade is no longer recognized and cannot be accepted for program assistance, Mr. Partlo added.

FALL FISHING NEGLECTED

Fall fishing in Michigan is a woefully neglected sport! Just when the fish really begin to cooperate the fishermen lose interest. How come? Brook and brown trout are really the only fish that enjoy the protection of a closed season come September, but all the rest face little danger from better than a half million fishermen who may go afield but leave their tackle home.

By the middle of September, and often a couple of weeks earlier, black bass are aroused by lower water temperatures to a point where their appetites take them close to shore in search of crawfish and minnows. They're easy prey for a well-cast plug or popper at such times, but few anglers are round to tempt them.

Pike get big appetites with the first frost, and certainly offer more scrap per second than at any other time of the year. But there's nobody around that wants to scrap.

And best of all, the wily steelhead trout journeys from the deep waters of the Great Lakes into such streams as the Manistee, AuSable, Au Gres, Muskegon and many upper peninsula streams where fishing is legal for this mighty warrior all thru November. Do fishermen flock to do battle with this worthy foe? They do not, strangely enough.

Too Much Diversion

Maybe there's just too much Michigan Outdoors. Brisk fall weather in our State apparently calls for gun and dog. Fishing's for hot weather. Our plentiful supply of upland game—partridge and bunnies up north, pheasants in the south—win more attention than fish, and rightfully so. But why not take along your tackle? The early days of a warm spell that once again turns your thoughts to rod and reel. It'll be too hot to run the reel... too muggy to tramp thru the woods. Chances are there's a small lake nearby—maybe one you've never fished before. Break out the tackle box and enjoy fall fishing in Michigan. And don't neglect those steelheads.

Steelhead Streams

Stop in at Oscoda and meet Johnny Mead. He'll show you where those big, battling rainbow trout congregate in the AuSable, and you'll find Johnny fishing far into the deer season—and catching plenty, too.

Meet Teddy Kotowich at East Jordan, and fish those deep, clear Jordan river pools where Lake Michigan Steelhead wait for a wiggling flatfish or enticing cluster of night crawlers.

Stand in the shadow of the Tippee Dam on the Manistee and watch the big "bows jump four feet high just below the spillway while you fish.

You'll come home a firm believer in fall fishing, and you'll find another thrill in Michigan Outdoors!

Here's a tip for dairymen who complain that their dairy cows won't eat grass silage. George Parsons, Michigan State College extension dairyman, says that this is not unusual—in fact, the college has the same problem with its dairy herd.

He advises farmers to feed about five pound of dry hay along with the grass silage. This will help sharpen their appetite for it.

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Drew Pearson is on a brief vacation. The Washington Merry-Go-Round is written this week by a guest columnist, the Hon. V. E. Baughman, chief of the United States secret service.

U. S. Secret Service

THE DUTIES of a special agent of the United States secret service, an agency of the treasury department, may require that one day he will be engaged in undercover work posing as a delirious or shady character in skid row; a week later he may be just as inconspicuous, dressed in white tie and tails at a social function at the White House. A secret service agent has to know the vernacular of the crook and have the diplomacy of the statesman.

Secret service agents are specialists in detecting counterfeit and forged government obligations and in protecting the chief executive of the United States.

Even in an average check case unusual circumstances may arise, as in a case in South Dakota. The suspected forger was an Indian woman, living at Cherry Creek, near the Cheyenne river. The agent started for the Indian village. At Plum Creek, he found a bridge had been washed away; no boat was available. The agent removed his outer clothing and rolled it up with his case file and gun inside, then held the roll over his head while swimming across the river to the Indian village. There he learned the Indian woman had married and now lived 15 miles down stream. He went there and found the family had moved several miles into country so rough that it could only be reached on foot or horseback. With a borrowed horse he traveled to the new location and obtained a confession from the woman.

Perfectionist Counterfeiters

After World War II, the flow of counterfeit money increased not only in the United States but also in Europe and other parts of the world. Protection of our currency became a world-wide necessity for the first time. Special agents were sent to these countries. Working with police of various nations, the agents seized the counterfeiters and their plants.

The last group arrested was in Hong Kong when five Chinese were seized with their plates and over $600,000 in counterfeit United States $50 and $100 bills. These notes were so carefully reproduced they easily could have deceived the average bank teller.

Counterfeiters are the cleverest of criminals. They are cunning and cautious in their dealings. They weigh all risks and guard against them. Now and then one with a conscience is caught. One such was seized in Chicago recently. He was caught by a secret service agent who had posed as a criminal and purchased $100,000 in counterfeit notes to break up one of the biggest rings in the United States. The leader of the ring told agents he had considered quitting many times and had made up his mind that this was to have been the last deal. He said too many people got hurt from his operations—not only those who tried to pass phony bills, but also the innocent victims who got stuck with counterfeits.

Counterfeiters, too, take pride in their work. After one was arrested on the west coast for the fifth time, he remarked to the agents who had raided his plant that he did not expect to see the secret service for a couple of years because he thought his latest product was so good as to be beyond detection.

A counterfeit of coins made the "ceding" (indentation on the edges) too deep. When asked why, he replied, "It is my mint and I like 'hem' that way."

One of the most serious problems confronting the secret service is the forgery of government checks. While the secret service is trying constantly to educate the merchant against this type of crime, the loss of which in government checks alone to merchants in 1951 was over $2,250,000, invariably business people will carelessly accept government checks from total strangers without question. For example:

1. The grocer who cashed a government check plainly marked "old age and survivor's insurance" for a 12-year-old boy.

2. The druggist who gave a strange man cash for a government check payable to a woman and which the man endorsed in the woman's name in the druggist's presence.

Protect President

Since 1901, after the assassination of President McKinley at Buffalo, the secret service has protected the presidents of the United States. Today the law also calls for the protection of his family, the president-elect, and the vice president at his request. Comparatively few people are aware of the degree of careful planning in the protective measures. The entire force of secret service agents participates to some extent in the protective functions.

Plan Nourishing School Lunches

School days are with us again, and mothers are planning the kind of well balanced lunches to keep youngster's energy high, minds alert, bodies in tip-top shape.

Mighty important is a good balance of the daily food essentials and so is appetite appeal, and with today's high food costs, so is economy.

Milk is an essential always, for calcium, phosphorus and Vitamin A. A juicy apple or an orange, or both, is a happy dessert, while a sandwich of egg, meat or fish on fortified or wholewheat bread makes a nutritious well-rounded mid-day meal whether at school or at home.

Appetizing extra that children love is a jar or container of hearty baked beans, either canned or home cooked. This provides a big bonus of calcium for strong teeth and bones, protein for muscle, iron for rich red blood, vitamin B-1 for growth.

Baked bean sandwiches are popular too, with youngsters and grownups alike and here are two prize winning recipes you'll get repeat calls on time and again.

Bean Sandwich Spread:

- 1 c cooked Mich. Navy Beans.
- 3 T Horseradish
- 1/2 c minced onion.
- 1/2 c chopped ripe olives
- 2 T mayonnaise

5 drops Tabasco sauce
Drain and mash beans. Blend thoroughly with all ingredients.
Sandwich Winner:
2 c Mich. Navy bean pulp.
1 c sharp grated yellow cheese
2 T minced onion
1 T lemon juice (or vinegar)
salt and pepper
Thoroughly mix the bean pulp with the cheese, then add the remainder of the ingredients. Spread this mixture between thin slices of graham or whole-wheat bread.

Fotball fields are called gridirons because the white lines crossing the field resemble a gridiron.

Korean Veterans Entitled to Jobs

While news articles dealing with recently-enacted benefits for Korean veterans did not make mention of reemployment rights, persons returning from military service are protected as to job rights, Frederick G. Beattie, Field Representative of the Bureau of Veterans Reemployment Rights, U. S. Department of Labor, stated today.

Beattie, in citing the increasing number of inquiries resulting from the misunderstanding, advised that the Universal Military Training and Service Act of 1951 (formerly the Selective Service Act of 1948) provides reemployment guarantees, and that omission of references to these rights in recent G. I. Bill articles should not be taken to mean expiration of job rights benefits.

Reemployment rights have been granted without interruption since World War II so that persons entering service during periods when other veterans benefits had been repealed, are still entitled to re-employment protection, Mr. Beattie said.

Interested persons can secure further information and assistance regarding reemployment rights of returning servicemen by contacting the Bureau's field office, 675 Federal Building, Detroit 26, Michigan.
