Immortal Twelve

Lesson for November 16, 1952

If the twelve Apostles wanted to join your church, would you let them in? Peter Marshall thought not. Books of sermons are often dull reading, but Dr. Marshall's book called Mr. Jones, Meet the Master is as fascinating a book as you are likely to find anywhere. One of his famous sermons goes over an imagined application of the twelve Apostles for membership in a typical American church. One by one each man is rejected—all but Judas! As a man of money the church wants his services.

Dr. Foreman

Unpromising Material

Not to steal Peter Marshall's sermon, nor to spoil your appetite for it in case you do read it, but just to explore the possibilities, let's imagine yourself passing on the application of these men for church membership. There is Simon Peter. Well! He is a fisherman and a sailor, and you know what sailor's language is, sometimes. A man noted for talking before he thinks. Not among our best people (they would say in Capernaum); lives down by the docks somewhere, smells of fish. No education, very limited background. Better wait. Maybe he could find a little chapel down nearer his work he'd be happier there. And then there's James and his brother John. Hot-tempered and ambitious, in fact so conceited they're hard to live with. They would certainly want to be at the top—if thrones are passed out they will want one apiece in the front row. If they are crossed they are likely to call down fire from heaven—not that they'll get it, but that's the kind of young men they are. No, they will be too hot to handle. Let them go join some sect that will give their emotions a chance. We'll be too slow and too cold for them.

Nobodies

Then there is Thomas, for instance. Just the opposite of Peter. A cold, gloomy man. Takes the dark view of everything. What you want in the church is men of faith, and this is a man who is sure to be called the Doubter. Skepticism is contagious, we have enough doubters now without electing another one. Let's leave him out. Then there is Philip, a stupid man if ever you saw one. You can say a thing to him over and over and he still won't get it. And Bartholomew and Thaddeus or Lebbaeus or whatever his name is, and another James and another Simon—their names are common and so are they. Just who are they, the whole lot of them? Nobodies, that's all you can say. Can you name one that has made a name for himself outside his native village—or in it, for that matter? What have they got to contribute? Haven't we got enough dead wood in the church as it is without adding some more people who will be nothing but names? Seems to me the pastor must have been scraping the bottom of the barrel—these men certainly didn't come from the top.

Jesus Made Difference

Even worse than all that could have been said of some of the Twelve. There was one very doubtful character among them the man Matthew the Publican. Publicans were tax-collectors for the Roman government. No one respected them; Jesus himself used the name Publican as meaning the lowest class of men. Who knew how sincere Matthew was when he joined the Twelve? There was also Judas, immortal for another reason; who was and who remained a devil. Jesus called two of these men devils at different times; Judas stayed one, but Peter changed. That lets us in to the secret of why Jesus chose these particular men. It was not for what they were at the time, nor for anything they had accomplished, but for what he could do with them. That Jesus chose these men He selected them for a particular reason: that they should go out and tell other men about him. To be ready to do this, they were to spend some time in close contact with him. When these men went out to speak for Jesus and the Kingdom of God they knew what they were talking about and they were different men. All but Judas, who missed his life's great chance. For these other men had let Christ have his way with them. That is what the Church is and ought to be: the community of men and women who are being transformed, by Christ, for service in his name.

Good Gardeners Do Not Burn Leaves in Fall

By Harold Clark, County Agent
It is unfortunate that leaves falling on our lawns and gardens lack "billfold appeal". If we gardeners looked on leaves as dollar bills we would not watch them go up in smoke.

It is nature's intention that leaves would fall back to the earth and maintain the fertility of the land. If the leaves are lost where will man go to replace this lost plant food?

Leaves make a marvelous mulch for shrubs and flower beds. They can easily be preserved in a compost heap.

I know most people burn leaves to clean up the yard, but a sincere gardener wants to save leaves to promote beauty next spring and summer. You can tell the successful gardener by the compost pile he is constantly building in his garden lot.

An inch depth of sawdust mulch around evergreen seedlings is advised by W. Ira Bull, in charge of the Conservation Nursery at Michigan State College. This will protect trees against post heaving in the spring.

Pole Barns are Better

Many new barns going up in Michigan are being built of poles. They make an economical and efficient type building for beef cattle, dairy cows or sheep. An important advantage is that the farmer can shift easily from one type of livestock to another with a minimum of expense.

How to Beat the Winter Months Battery Bogey

How to beat the battery bogey during winter months is a serious locker room subject for automobile drivers who phone in on cold mornings, "I'll be a little late. My car won't start."

Roy B. Bender, general service manager for Studebaker, has come up with a 90-second test plan that warns in advance when battery failure may happen.

Bender points out that a fully-charged battery gives peak performance when the internal temperature is 80 degrees. When internal temperature drops to zero battery efficiency drops to half its maximum. So when there is a combination of zero temperature and a half-charged battery, efficiency cannot be more than one-fourth maximum.

That's when car owners get cold morning blues.

The 90-second test plan will reveal when batteries are losing efficiency, Bender says. A service man should turn on car lights for 60 seconds to drain off the battery surface charge that has accumulated. While the surface charge is being drained off, he should check the battery case and cradle for damage or corrosion deposits and the cables for loose connections.

After 60 seconds turn off all electric contacts and test the battery in the usual manner. Batteries that test 50 per cent or less in all three cells should be recharged by the slow charge method and refilled with triple distilled water. Damage to the case calls for a replacement.

Ninety seconds of test time every thirty days, or more frequently in severe cold weather, will beat the battery bogey, Bender says.

McKenzie Writes Message to Tawas District Voters

To the electors of the newly re-organized school district:

First, I would like to say a sincere "Thank You" to all those electors who indicated by their ballot that they desired to have me serve them as a trustee on the new Board of Education. It was my conviction that there should be no campaign waged for such an office but that the people should be given the right to pick a Board uninfluenced by the usual and ordinary campaign made for public office. For that reason, I made no campaign and the vote you extended to me was a compliment I will not soon forget.

However, I do feel that the important thing at this time is not whether or not one person or another was elected, but rather that we should bend every effort to the end that our newly organized district shall have the kind of school system of which we can all feel proud and that the organization of such a system shall be accomplished at the very lowest cost to the district. I feel sincerely, that the people of the district have chosen their Board wisely and well. It was a difficult task, at best, and the people of the district are to be congratulated on their choice of the men who will have in their hands the formation of the new school system. It will be a difficult job and one for which, many times, there is little appreciation.

Let us all get behind the new Board of Education in a united effort to build our new school system solidly and well. These men will need our full support. Let us give it to them unately and wholeheartedly.

Again, may I say "Thank You."

Sincerely,
Russell H. McKenzie

This is for parents and older children only.

Small children! Please regard! Anyway, parents, here is your chance to see that your small children get their own personal letter from Santa Claus—all the way from the North Pole.

The Old Gent with Whiskers is being given a helping hand again by Pan American World Airways. Its nearest office is at Detroit.

For the last four years, Pan American has been doing quite an airmail business at Christmas time with Santa Claus, and carried more than 500,000 letters from him to believing children in the United States.

Here's all you have to do.

1. Write to the nearest Pan American office and get a sheet of Santa Claus stationery.
2. Write a letter to your youngster and sign it Santa Claus.
3. Place the letter in an air mail envelope addressed to your boy or girl. Don't forget to put six cents postage on the envelope.
4. Mail it in another envelope to your nearest Pan American office.
5. Your letters must reach the airline office not later than December 16.

If Pan American gets the letters before December 16, the airline will fly them to Fairbanks, the nearest post office to the North Pole and after a three-minute lag for a mythical jet-propelled dog-sled trip to the Pole and back, will mail them back to children in the United States bearing proof positive that there indeed is a Santa Claus.

Williams Still in Lead by 6,510—With the official canvass of votes for governor narrowing down to the five big counties Wednesday, G. Mennen Williams still held his lead.

Governor Williams' lead over Alger stands at 6,510. Without a great change in the results of the canvass which ends Friday, Republicans may ask for a recount.

Needlecraft News

by Nancy Baxter

WHENEVER you knit a woolen item, you are utilizing an inherited knowledge gathered over the centuries of needlework art development. As far as we know, knitting was first done by the Egyptians in the 4th century, A.D. Evidence of this has been discovered by archeologists in the form of a pair of women's red wool socks, made with a big toe division for wear with sandals. Arabians, too, developed the art and from them, traders and sailors passed the knitting word to other parts of the world. Up to the end of the 19th century, these travelers were the knitting instructors and their friends, the students. In the fields, shepherds were known to knit scarves, caps and socks while they watched their flocks. They spun and wove their own yarns from sheep's wool which accumulated on thickets, twigs and bushes after the animals had brushed against them.

RENAISSANCE AND POST-RENAISSANCE KNITTING

Hand knitting became an industry during the Renaissance era in Europe. Before a knitter became a full-fledged member of the knitting guild, he was to devote a six year period to learning and traveling. After that time, it was felt that he was capable of making his masterpieces, one of which was usually a magnificent knitted carpet of original design. After the beginning of the machine age, hand knitting became almost exclusively a domestic art, one that was primarily important to women. For many years, a young girl was required to know how to knit to be considered worthy for marriage. Today, although most hand knitting is done in the home, it still remains an industry on the Shetland Islands, located to the northeast of Scotland. Shetlanders have developed the skill so thoroughly, that they knit at the rate of 200 odd stitches per minute.

A KNITTED MASTERPIECE

The modern day homemaker is master of the knitting needles, too, whether she's making argyles or afghans. A real masterpiece of which any knitter would be proud, is the afghan pictured above—soft, woolly, fringed, in light grey adorned with rose petals and green leaves. You'll derive pleasure from watching it grow with each stitch to its finished size of 45 x 70 inches, and be comforted by its warmth on a chilly evening. Directions for making the afghan, PETAL DROPS, can be had when you send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Needlework Department of this paper and request Leaflet No. 6141.

Merry Neighbors Enjoy Costume Halloween Party at Bloomquist Home

Although it was a weird looking group that met at the home of Mrs. Ruth Bloomquist on October 30, a very hilarious time was enjoyed by every one present.

Adella Strauer, who came as a blue-faced ghost, won first prize. Ardith Parent, who was dressed in her husband's underwear, a couple of pillows and a paper sack, won second. Carl Norris, a well-dressed Japanese won third.

A cake game was played with Phyllis Jordan taking high prize and Ardith Parent, low prize. Adella Strauer won first prize playing bug and Josephine Brigham, won second. Della Winchell received the booby prize.

Winners of the marble guessing game were Theresa Johnson and Orville Strauer. The blue-faced ghost went home with the door prize.

It Takes A HEAP OF HAULING
...to make a Home!

IF YOU'VE BUILT a new home recently—or are in the midst of doing so now—you know how dependent building is on motor transport.

From the moment the big excavating shovel arrives at the vacant lot astride a low-bed truck-trailer to dig the hole for your basement, it's a steady procession of trucks of one kind or another until the house is ready for occupancy.

Cement blocks, sand, steel, lumber, roofing, brick, plumbing, hardware, paint—everything that goes into the building of your home has to get to the site in motor trucks.

Then, when you arrive at the point where you're ready to move in, you call on motor transport again to transport your household furnishings for you.

If you've got it, a truck brought it!

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

The other day in St. Paul, I was sitting in the Minnesota club waiting for some friends when I noticed a portrait of Frank B. Kellogg on the wall.

Sitting there under that portrait set me thinking—about Kellogg's great ambition to outlaw war and about the desire uppermost in the minds of most Americans to avoid another war.

It makes me feel a bit old to look back on it, but I was a young newspaper reporter covering the state department when Kellogg was secretary of state under Calvin Coolidge. I thought he did rather a bad job in Nicaragua and Mexico, but he warmed my heart and that of millions when he negotiated the treaty to outlaw war.

And when he went to Paris to sign his treaty, I persuaded the New York Times to send me with him. En route home, Kellogg's aides cooked up a scheme to keep the treaty out of partisan politics. In this I played a small part.

I sent a radiogram from the S. S. Leviathan to the editor of the Times asking him to query me as to whether the anti-war treaty would be claimed as a triumph for the Republican party or would be considered the bipartisan product of both parties. The Times complied, I showed the query to Kellogg, and he growled that he certainly was not going to let his newly signed treaty become a football of politics.

HOOVER PROTESTS
The statement was important, because Herbert Hoover, then warming up for his election campaign against Al Smith in the late summer of 1928, was looking around for political ammunition.

In fact, it was more important than even I realized, for two days after we landed Kellogg sent for me.

At first he seemed sore. "Just what did you say in that story you radioed from the ship?" he asked.

I had a copy in my pocket and showed it to him. He read it and grunted.

"The secretary of commerce," he explained, referring to Herbert Hoover, "raised hell with me at a cabinet meeting. 'However,' he added, with a wink, 'I'm glad you did it.'"

What he had in mind, of course, was the fact that he needed Democratic support to obtain Senate ratification of his treaty. That support was given. Democratic senators supported him 100 per cent; a few republicans opposed; the treaty was ratified.

DIED BROKEN-HEARTED
Kellogg died a few years later, a broken-hearted man — broken-hearted because he knew the great goal he set for mankind, peace, was about to smash on the rocks of Axis greed.

But before he died, he came to Washington many times to help and encourage his successor, another great secretary of state, Henry L. Stimson. Both Kellogg and Stimson, of course, were Republicans, both believed in a bipartisan foreign policy, both were men of principle, and I was lucky in knowing them both.

Later I traveled with Stimson to London where he did his best not only to limit dangerous rivalry of armament, but to persuade Europe to sign a consultative pact.

This pact merely pledged that the United States would "consult" with other nations in case war threatened. There was no other obligation. Nevertheless, a "scoop" which I cabled the Baltimore Sun that such a pact was to be signed, caused President Hoover to issue a special denial.

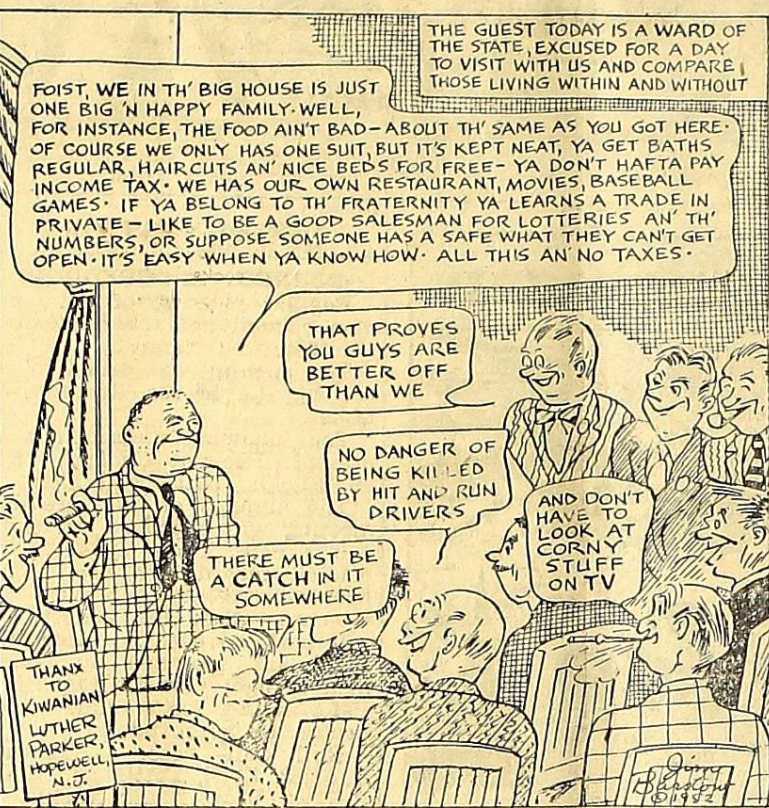

Simultaneously, his secretary of state in London was holding a press conference stating that such a treaty would be signed.

These two conflicting press conferences illustrate the basic foreign-policy cleavage within the Republican party—a cleavage that still continues.

DIPLOMATIC POUCH
Russian reconnaissance planes have been spotted over the Japanese coast. This has the Pentagon more worried than any military report in months. . . . Thousands of Russian workmen are building a giant soviet airbase on Ostrov Rudolph Island — only six hours flying time from our own airbase at Thule, Greenland. . . . The British now think they have found a surefire way to earn American dollars. A British textile designer has invented an unsinkable cloth, and the British are going to use it for unsinkable bathing suits to be exported to U.S. . . . Secretary of Defense Lovett has turned thumbs down on a fancy, snorkel-type jeep (costs too much—over $4,500 each).

Educator Tells . . .

'What's Right With American Education'

Much has been said about "What's Wrong With American Education," Dr. E. C. Beck, Professor of English, Central Michigan College, in a recent address before the Michigan Educational Association pointed out "What's Right With American Education."

Below is the text of his address:

What's Right with American Education

"Like Henry David Thoreau I do not propose to write an ode to dejection, but to brag as lustily as chanticleer in the morning standing on his roost, if only to wake my neighbors up."

"Too much has been said about what is wrong with American education. I would turn your attention for a few minutes to what is right with American education."

"Nobody is in better position than I to praise what is right with American free education. I come from pioneer stock. I am proud of my pioneer stock. It provided me a healthy mind in a healthy body. So I repeat: I come from pioneer stock. One grandfather was a Nebraska homesteader; the other grandfather was a Montana homesteader. On the broad prairies where they were reared, my parents had no adequate schools to attend. So it is not surprising that Father completed only the second grade and Mother only the third. In truth, Grandmother Theade could neither read nor write. Yet two generations later without financial aid of consequence from anybody, I have a doctor's degree. Where but in America, I ask you, could that happen? I am everlastingly grateful to the American system of free education. It provides opportunities for everybody, opportunities that cannot be duplicated anywhere else on earth. There is something right about American education."

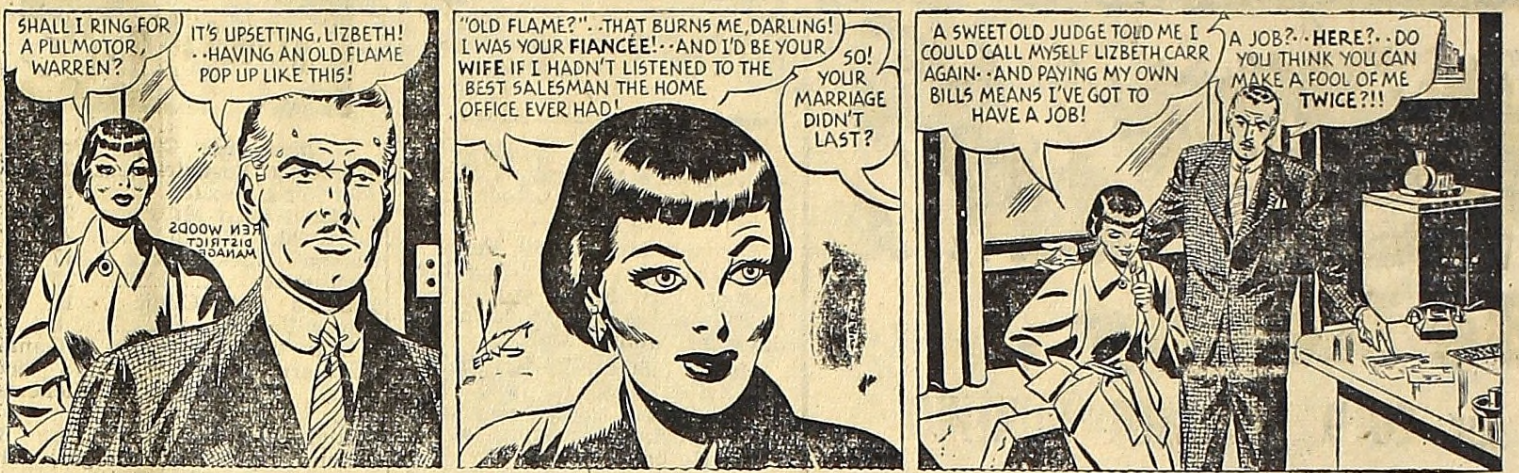

"Each year from now until 1957 we shall enroll 1½ million beginners in the American schools. After 1957 you can make your own estimates. The hope of a democracy is an educated electorate. We shall enter 1½ million little Americans each autumn. We shall strive to keep them until they finish secondary school. Then we shall encourage many of them to enter higher education. No other country on earth has the percentage of school attendance as U. S. A. That schooling, the American system of free education, has built in a comparative short time out of Indian and buffalo land the greatest nation in the world. I am not boasting. I am waving a big striped flag. I am stating a plain, undecorated fact when I say 'the greatest nation in the world.' How much greater we are than any other I do not say because I do not know. But plain horse sense dictates that you are now living in the No. 1 nation. The American system of free education had much to do with that development. There is something right about American education."

"In 1880 there were 100,000 high school students. In 1950 we had added to the curriculum. We still teach the three R's. I repeat, we still teach the three R's, and better than I was taught them. But we have added what a new century must have. The boys and girls now have more art, more music, more government, more health education. They do not have less fundamentals, as some critics insist. We make changes in America. The boys and girls will need some training in 2000 that they are not now getting. The American system has a way of making changes to meet the demands of the times. Today in America the youth get 3 to 4 years more training than in any other country. There is every reason to believe that such conditions will continue. There is something right about American education."

"Teacher status needs no apologists either. Generally speaking, a teacher is a citizen as free as any other citizen. I have taught forty-odd years in all areas of this country except the Pacific Slope; and I never have been bothered more than any other citizen about conduct, religion or politics. And you know very well that I am not and never have been the quiet type. A teacher is respected as he wins and deserves respect. That is as much as anybody has a right to expect. And above all else the teacher is in the most strategic position to influence America tomorrow. For every man and woman, no matter what his future occupation or profession, must pass by the teacher. Only the doctor and mortician can make like statements; and they get the individuals before and after these individuals can be influenced. Teaching is a good profession. Teaching is a strategic profession. I am proud that I am a teacher. There is something right about American education."

"True, the system can be made better. The results can be improved. But we need not make apologies for American education. It has helped produce the greatest nation on earth. Our position in the family of nations

Wild Game Can be Tasty!
One reason for the waste of meat taken by hunters is lack of care after the game is shot. Wild meat can be given to the home-maker for cooking in an attractive and edible condition. Temperature is most important. Game should be dressed and allowed to cool soon after killing.

Game meat is likely to be less tender and more dry than domestic meat, but young game, less than a year old, will be tender. The young game will require less cooking but all game is usually better when cooked well done.
