Hopeful Solution to Water Conflict

For lack of adequate controls, Michigan's boating boom has churned more and more friction between water-use groups, weakened public safety, and generally left recreationists puzzled about their rights on the state's waterways in recent years. Promising to turn the tide on this uneasy situation is a new law going into effect August 1. It sets up a Boating Control Committee composed of one member each from the Secretary of State's office, the Michigan Waterways Commission, and the Conservation Department; with the Michigan Sheriffs Association serving in advisory capacity. At the request of local governing boards, this three-man committee will hold public hearings and be authorized to establish boat speed limits, regulate the size and horsepower of boat motors, restrict use of motorboats, and adopt whatever other regulations seem necessary to protect public safety on any particular body of water. Such regulations will require final approval by local governing units. Under the new law, the state will provide, on a 2-1 matching basis, up to $20,000 per county each year for enforcement work and equipment. will provide, on a 2-1 matching basis, and equipment.

Certificate Awarded To Local Member By Selective Service

A certificate of appreciation was awarded recently to John R. Morrison of Hale, local selective service board member for five years. The award was presented by Edward I. Dickey, chairman of Michigan Local Board No. 36, Selective Service System, in recognition of his outstanding public service to the nation.

In transmitting the award issued in the name of the president and national director of the lective Service System, Col. Arthur A. Holmes, state director, declared "with this certificate goes my sincere appreciation for your devotion to duty, your integrity and leadership and your demonstrated spirit of volunteer public service.

"These are the qualities which have made it possible for Selective Service to accomplish every mission assigned in peace or war. They are the qualities for which you have earned the respect of our fellow citizens. In no small measure, they have contributed to the security of our nation."
